Verse 15. Those that remain of him, shall be buried in death] That is, Shall be miserably and unwarily buried (as sometimes it is) while they are alive. Or, they shall be so hated, that no man shall speak well of them when they are dead; but their name shall be buried, and shall rot with them, so some understand it. Or, they shall be buried alive, as Tarquin the Proud put some of his Subjects. And indeed as he recovered of death in his Sepulcher, and cried for help, he was answered with so kind a no-body-at-home. The Historie recorded of Scotus the great Schoolman. Others said both, that he was buried alive, because that the wicked damned are plunged into everlasting death, which only is the true death. A great deal whereunto is that phrase, Rev. 2. 23. I will kill her children with death. Hereof also to die, and another thing to be killed with death: this last is when death carries us perforce to Hell, as when it is said that death and Hell cast their dead into the lake of fire. Sepelientur adhuc vivi morbundi. Vatab. In sepulcro relinquentur. Sept.

Their widows shall not weep] i. e. Their wives shall be so far from lamenting their deaths, that they shall be glad of them, as being rid of a cruel husband, and a bad yoke-fellow. Or, they shall be so far from bewailing their husbands, that they shall be ready to insult over their graves, and to say, as Ovid of Niobe, when she had lost seven sons and seven daughters, Flevit & ex tanto restat sibi perdere nemo, she wept and there remained no more for her to lose. Or, they shall be so far from lamenting their husbands, that they shall be ready to bewail themselves, as being left in a sad condition, and to say, as Dido in Virgil, Quo prius hoc fratre interfecto non cecidisti mecum? Why did not I die with my husband?

they die unlamented by their own widows (for in those dayes men took many wives, as now the Turks do so many as they are able to maintain, and very courtely they use them) who are glad that they are thus rid of them, who were wont to lay upon them with their unmanly fists, or otherwise to abuse them. Of King Edwin it is said, that he lived wickedly, died wisedly. And of Henry the second, that hearing that his son and successor John had conspired against him, he fell into a grievous Passion, both cursing his sons, and the day wherein himself was born, and in that distemperature departed the world which so often himself had distempered, and had now every mans good word to be gone hence. See Jer. 22. 18.

Cùm mors crudelem rapuisset sæva Neronem,
Credibile est multos Romam egisse jubo.

Verse 16. Though he heap up silver as the dust] Silver and Gold, what are they else but white and red Earth, the guts and garbage of the Earth, as one saith? Yet how greedy of them and gripple after them are many muck-worms heaping up riches, and not knowing who shall gather them, Psal. 39. 6? laying up, as if their lives were riveted upon eternity: or were sure to leave it to their Children, who yet shall never enjoy it. This is a great vanity, saith Solomon, and yet such dust-heapers as these, are to be found in every corner.

And prepare raiment as the clay] Tantum vestium quantum est luti, saith Vatablus, that he have as great store of suits in his wardrobe, as he hath dirt in his ditches.

Verse 17. He may prepare it, but the just shall put it on.] Well may he prepare it, so Broughton. Let the wicked then toyle and take pains for it; God hath prepared for him an executour never mentioned in his Will. God gave the Egyptians and Canaanites Goods to Israel, Nabal's to David, Hamans to Mardocæus, See Prov. 28. 8. Eccles. 2. 26. This plague among the rest God threateneth the disobedient with, Deut. 28. 30. Sed hoc non semper, saith Mercer, although we see not this alwayes so to fall out, but the contrary; yet it is easie to observe that many spend their strength, and waste their wits in congerendo & convertendo, in getting and garbering these outward things: and then, when to possess them might seem a happiness, they die and leave them to uncertain heirs, as did Absolom and Alexander the Great, who left his Ring to Perdiccas, but his Dominions quotquot essent, to him that should best serve them.

Plut.

And the innocent shall divide the silver] Shall share it among them as their Childs-Portions. Solet enim Deus dividere aliis dona, aliis damnum ipsum & luctum, saith Brentius here. God gives gifts unto men, even to the rebellious, but the use and enjoyment of those gifts he bestoweth upon the righteous. The former have great store and trouble therewith, Prov. 21. 26. Auctior est magnis substantia census. The latter have, howsoever, contented godliness; and though they gather but of this Manna here below, yet they have no want.

Juvenal.

Verse 18. He buildeth his house as a moth] Which lodgeth it self in some stately garment, and thinks there to worm it safe, which he hath feathered (as the silk-worm cradleth for her self in her own thread) there is food for her and her brood: but so shall the oppressor be cast out of his dwelling-place, which he hath with much cost and care erected, rather for others than himself, but is not unlawful to build houses: Vanity it is not, but folly, with loss and hurt to others. Vivendi recte qui prorogat horam, rusticus exspectat dum defluat amnis. To this world's cradle we are (by the Law of Nature) exactly bound, and as were a second punishment, God threatens many to those that build him another. Sua cuique domus plerumque fatalis fuit, saith Tacitus of Nero's House of Pleasure, which he had built him at Rome, which was very magnificent and sumptuous. The Turks private houses in Constantinople are for the most part low and base. They, after their homely manner (by long custome received) never build any thing sumptuously for their own private habitation, contenting themselves with their simple Lodgings, how much soever (notwithstanding their great wealth) they abound in the rest of their Estates. No one is of ability to build a house for his heir, but rather for the use of the present time. The Janizaries dwell [illegible]

Ut præter nomen ſolum, nihil amplius extet?

Verſe 19. The rich man ſhall lye down] That is, the wicked rich man, as Jam. 5. 1. Magna cognatio ut rei ſic nominis, divitiis, & vitiis. He ſhall lye down, viz. in the ſtreets, as being left houſe-leſs.

But he ſhall not be gathered] i. e. Taken into houſe or harbour by any man; but abhorred by all for his former cruelty.

He openeth his eyes, and he is not] He looketh about him on every ſide, but findeth no ſuccour. There are that underſtand it of death; The rich man ſhall lye down, ſc. in the duſt of death; but ſhall not be gathered, that is, nec honorificè funerabitur, he ſhall not have the honour of a comely burial. Beſides, he openeth his eyes, and he is not; upon his death-bed he looks about for comfort (the Mole, they ſay, never openeth her eyes till the pangs of death are upon her:) but inſtead thereof ſhall ſee that three-fold terrible ſpectacle, Death, Judgement, Hell, and all to be paſſed through by his poor Soul: Hence (and no wonder) Tigur.

Verſe 20. Terrours take hold on him as waters] Abundantly, ſuddenly, irreſiſtibly; he is even ſwallowed up by them and over-whelmed: as he that is plunged into a deep pit full of water, or that hath the proud ſurges going over his ſoul, Pſal. 124. The miſery of it is, That theſe waters are fiery, and Hell is a lake; but a burning lake, and ſuch alſo as hath eternity to the bottom.

A tempeſt ſtealeth him away in the night] i. e. Furtim, & repentè & horribiliter; Night is it ſelf full of terrour: but much more when a tempeſt is up, and theeves are abroad, &c. Oh! it muſt needs be a terrible time indeed, when death ſhall come with a Writ of Habeas Corpus, and the Devil with another of Habeas animam upon a man at once. Petrus Sutorius ſpeaketh of one that preaching a funeral Sermon on a certain Canon at Paris, and giving him large commendations, heard at the ſame time a voice in the Church, Mortuus ſum, judicatus ſum, damnatus ſum; I am dead, judged, and damned. Oh! let us but think with our ſelves, though it paſs all thought, what a ſcreech the poor ſoul giveth when hurled into Hell, there to ſuffer ſuch tortures and torments as it ſhall never be able to avoid or abide! Pet. Sutor. de vit. Carth.

Verſe 21. The Eaſt-wind carrieth him away] Deus ſubito & ſevero ſuo judicio: God, by his ſudden and ſevere Judgement, hurrieth him hence to the place of torment, without the leaſt hope of ever either mending, or ending. Lavat.

And he departeth] But with as ill a will as ever did Lot out of Sodom; Adam out of Paradiſe; the Jebuſites out of Jeruſalem; the unjuſt Steward out of his Office, the Devil out of the Demoniack.

And as a ſtorm hurleth him] Turbinat eum; Toſſeth him as a Ball into a far Countrey, as if he were wherried away by a fierce whirlewind, or ſerved as paſtime for tempeſts.

Verſe 22. For God ſhall caſt upon him, and not ſpare] But ſet himſelf to inflict upon this curſed caytiff all the plagues written (and unwritten) in his book, full vials of vengeance; an evil, an only evil, even puniſhment without pity, miſery without mercy, ſorrow without ſuccour, crying without comfort, miſchief without meaſure, torments without end, and paſt imagination.

He would fain flee out of his hand] But that will not be; like a wretched caytiff he runs without reſting: but Gods hand purſueth him till he periſheth. He may ſhuffle from ſide to ſide as Balaams Aſs did, he may skip up and down as the wounded Deer: Sed hæret lateri lethalis arundo; the deadly Dart ſticks in his ſide, &c.

Verſe 23. Men ſhall clap their hand at him, &c.] Heb. He ſhall clap, &c. Every He ſhall, or God ſhall, as ſome read it. God ſhall kick him off this Stage of the the world, and then men ſhall clap, and hiſs at him in ſigne of deteſtation; as they did once at Sejanus, Phocas, Rich. 3. whoſe miſeries were a part of other mens happineſs, who looked upon them as Wolves and publick Peſts.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Verſe 1. Surely there is a vein for the ſilver.]

FOr there is a vein, &c. ſo Tremellius readeth it. But here is no reaſon rendered of Gods heavy judgements on the wicked, laſt diſcourſed of: but the unſearchableneſs of Gods wiſdom, and the righteouſneſs of his proceedings aſſerted, whileſt ſome bad men proſper, and ſome good men ſuffer. The reaſon whereof lieth hid (as a River that runneth under ground) from the natural man (and in part, from the ſpiritual alſo) be he never ſo perſpicacious or induſtrious in prying into Natures ſecrets. The ſilver vein lyeth very low, and far out of ſight; yet is found out and known: as alſo is the art of fining it. This art was ſoon learned in the world: and mortals were quickly become metallaries. Ovid, Effodiuntur opes, &c. A great part of this their skill they might have from Adam, according to that of the Divine Chronologer, Ex Adami ſapientiſſimi Doctoris ore promanavit, tanquam ex fonte, quicquid in mundo eſt utilium doctrinarum, diſciplinarum, ſcientia & ſapientia. He that knew ſo much before his Fall (far more than ever Solomon did) of Natures hiddeneſt Myſteries, who can doubt but that afterwards alſo he reteined and imparted to his Nephews a great deal of abſtruſe and rich skill? ſuch as was this here inſtanced, and afterwards by Cicero (amongſt others) celebrated in his ſecond Book, De nat. deor. where diſcourſing of mens witty inventions, he ſaith among other things, Nos æris, argenti, auri venas penitus abditas invenimus, &c. We have found out the veins of Braſs, Silver, Gold, and other Metals, though deep hid in the bowels of the Earth. Some of the Ancients have wiſhed that we had never found out theſe Metals, becauſe of the great abuſe of them. Joſephus ſaith, that Cain heaped up great ſtore of them. Strabo ſaith, Geog. l. 5. that Phalerius feared, leſt in digging for Gold and Silver, men would dig themſelves a new way to Hell; Et Plutonem brevi ad ſuperos adducturos, and bring up the Devil amongſt them. Some ſay that he haunteth the richeſt Mines, and will not ſuffer them to be ſearched. Sure it is, that by the inordinate love of theſe metals, he Auri ſacra fames, &c. drowneth many a ſoul in perdition and deſtruction, 1 Tim. 6. So ſubject they are to ſin, as that God made a Law to have them purified before he would have them uſed by his people, Numb. 31. 22, 23, &c. who ſhould herein have the minde of thoſe Perſians, Iſa. 13. 12. 17. which regarded not ſilver, nor were deſirous of gold. If Satan offer them theſe outward things in a temptation, they ſhould anſwer him as Abraham did the King of Sodom, with a God forbid that I ſhould, &c. Gen. 14. 23. and ſend them away from whence they came; as Pellican ſent back the ſilver Boul ſent Melch. Adam. him by the Biſhop for a token, with this anſwer, Aſtricti ſunt quotquot Tiguri cives, &c. All the inhabitants of our City are ſworn not to take any Gift from a forreine Prince. Or, as that noble Marquels (Caracciolus anſwered the Jeſuit, who tempted him with money to revolt from the reformed Religion, and to return to Italy. Let their money periſh with them, who eſteem all the gold in the world worth one dayes ſociety with Jeſus Chriſt, &c. Let it be remembred, that gold is that which the baſeſt element yields, the moſt ſavage Indians get, ſervile apprentices work, Midianitiſh Camels carry, miſerable muck-worms admire, covetous Jews ſwallow, unthrifty Ruffians ſpend. Gold makes many men run quick to the Devil on an errand; yea, ſell their ſouls to him, as Pope Sixtus the fifth did, for ſeven years enjoyment of the Popedom. But thou, O man of God, flie theſe things, &c. 1 Tim. 6. 11. and while others lay faſt hold on theſe baſe and boot-leſs buſineſſes, lay thou hold on eternal life, verſ. 12. But this obiter only.

And

And a place for the Gold where they fine it] Or, From whence they fine it; Or, Which they fine. The Spaniards are ſaid to have found in the Mines of America more Gold then earth. It is accounted of Metals the moſt precious: but it is Opinion that ſets the price upon it. The only material of money amongſt us, is Gold and Silver; but among the Roman Provinces, it was moſt times braſſe, ſometimes leather. The like is ſaid to have been uſed here in England in the time of the Barons wars: And why not? ſince Anno 1574. the Hollanders then being in their extremities, made money of Paſte-board. Who the firſt man was that made money of Gold, Pliny ſaith is uncertain. But Herodotus writeth, that the Lydians were the firſt Coyners of Gold and Silver for that uſe. And Pliny, that Cadmus the Phœnician was the firſt that found Gold; viz. at the Hill Pangæus in Thracia; a place that aboundeth with Gold and Silver, as Herodotus teſtifieth. But ſo did Havilah (afterwards called Suſiana, in Eaſt-India) long before Cadmus was born, Gen. 2.11 Near unto this Land of Havilah, Solinus ſaith, were two Ilands called, Chryſe and Argyre, that is, the golden and ſilver Ilands, becauſe they were ſo full of thoſe richeſt Metals, Ut plerique eas auria ſola prodiderint & argentea habere; that many have affirmed the ſoile thereof to be of gold, and ſilver. Junius thinketh that Solinus and Pliny called this Land of Havilah, (by miſtake of Letters) Babyrace, the Inhabitants whereof, ſaith Solinus (through hatred of gold, for the hurt it doth mankind) buy up and bury very deep in the earth all the gold they can get. Like as Crates the Theban Philoſopher, is ſaid to have caſt his gold into the ſea for like reaſon (as he pretended when he ſaid, at the ſame time, Abite malæ cupiditates: ego vos mergam, ne ipſe mergar à vobis) but indeed, for a name, as Hierome rightly judgeth: calling him therefore, Gloriæ animal, populariſ auræ vile mancipium, a vain glorious fool. There is no hurt in having theſe Metals, ſo we love them not; ſo they do not get within us, as Luke 11.41. ſo we make not our gold our God, nor ſay to the fine gold, Thou art my confidence, Job 31.24.

Verſe 2. Iron is taken out of the earth;] that is, out of the Irony vein, which is ſaid to be a droſſie kind of earth, not ſufficiently diſgeſted and hardned to make a ſtone. Of the generation of theſe inferiour Metals, ſee Pliny and the Chymicks; who yet are not to be hearkned unto, when they tell us, that by their Art they can turn theſe meaner Metals into gold, ſith they are here diſtinguiſhed by their place, matter, form, &c. Neither is gold the end of other Metals (every of which is perfect in its kind;) and beſides, the eſſence of every thing is indiviſible, and the uſe diverſe. Iron can do that which gold and ſilver cannot. Hiſtorians tell us, that Alexanders old ſouldiers, armed with Shields of Iron, conquered a great part of the world: But when as growing rich, they made them ſhields of Silver, and were therehence called Argyraſpides, they were baſely beaten by thoſe whom they had formerly ſubdued. The firſt Inventers of iron and braſſe, Pliny will have to be the Chalybes or Cyclopes. Diodorus, the Idæi, Dactyli, or Vulcan. Vulcanum, inquit, ferri, æris, argenti, auri, omniumque quæ igne fabricantur, artem inveniſſe, ferunt. And ſurely if Vulcan were the ſame with Tubal-Cain (as ſundry Commentators will have it) Diodorus was not far from the Truth: for he taught men to work in braſſe and iron, Gen. 4 22. Iron they had before, and the Art of uſing it, how elſe could they have plowed the accurſed earth? But this man added to their skil by his invention, he ſharply and wittily taught Smiths-craft, and is therefore by the heathens fained to be the God of Smiths.

Diod. Sic. l. 5.

And braſſe is molten out of the ſtone.] That is, out of the oare, which is like a ſtone, and is called Cadmia, (as Junius here noteth) perhaps from Cadmus, whom Pliny maketh the firſt that invented the uſe of theſe Metals, which Ariſtotle aſcribeth to Lydus the Scythian, Theophraſtus to Delas the Phrygian. It is probable that theſe were the firſt that ſhewed their Country-men the uſe of theſe Metals, and ſo were by them accounted the firſt Authours of what was elſewhere found out long before. Some render the Text thus, And the ſtone is melted into braſſe; that is, by melting is turned into braſſe. Many are of opinion that there was anciently an Art of melting ſtones, which is now loſt. Braſſe is as it were incorporated into ſtone or harder matter; but forced forth by the heat of fire. Hence the Vulgar Latine thus rendreth this Hemiſtich, Lapis ſolutus calore, in æs vertitur, The ſtone diſſolved by heat, is turned into

Æs in medii lapidibus latet ſed ignis vehementia lapides æris uſque adeo torquentur ut veluti flumen effundant. Bren into braſſe. So excellently doth Job here ſet forth the nature of theſe chief metals, as Mercer would have us to take notice.

Verſe 3. He ſetteth an end to darkneſſe] i.e. He (viz. the Miner) brings light down into the dark entrailes of the earth, and fetches out thoſe metals that had long lain hid there, and that elſe would never have been beheld. Though Nature hath taken pleaſure (as One ſpeaketh) to hide all theſe Metals, yet induſtry provideth man of certain marks for to diſcover them, and infallible conjectures to know the time when they muſt be drawn out of their darkneſſe. Habent Metallici ſuas virgas metallicas, Metallaries have their Metal-rods, whereby they ſearch into and diſtinguiſh of metals and minerals.

The ſtones of darkneſs, &c.] That is, the darkeſt ſtones that lye loweſt of all in the earths bowels, whither one would wonder how any man ſhould ever come; and eſpecially how the Sun and Stars ſhould come by their influences to make thoſe Metals, and the precious Stones, that are ingendred and bred in the darkſom and deadly vaults of the earth.

Verſe 4. The flood breaketh out from the Inhabitant] Broughton rendreth it, from the ſpring. Others, Erumpit fluvius juxta accolam; A River breaketh out neer to the Inhabitant; that is, to the Miner, who is forced to leave the place, till by buckets, wheels, and other fit devices the pits be cleared, ſo that they may fall to work again.

Theſe fruits lye hid in the ſeed for a ſeaſon; and ſo doth likewiſe fire in the flint (whereof ſome underſtand the following words) yet are they brought at length into the light.

And under it is turned up, as it were fire] That is, materials of fire, as coales of &c. or brimſtone which hath fire in it, and doth ſometimes take fire in the Mines. Or gold, which is to be tryed in the furnace, and diverſe ſparkling ſtones created of a ſulphureous matter, ſuch as is that which Pliny and Iſidore call Pyrites Perſicus, and tell us, that if it be held hard in a mans hand, it burneth. As alſo that which Hierchas in Philoſtratus calleth Pantarbe, which burneth with a kind of ſweet brightneſſe (ſaith that Authour) that dazleth the eyes of the Beholder, and hath a ſtrange attractive vertue. Thus it ſometimes falleth out, that the upper part of a ground is fruitful, and brings forth graine and graſſe, and underneath are precious ſtones and metals. But commonly where there is gold below, there is the barreneſt ſoyl above.

Plin. Vide Boet. Hiſt. lapid. lib. 2. c. 42.

And it hath duſt of Gold] Or, Oar of gold; better then that which our Forbiſher in his Voyage to diſcover the Strait, brought back with him, from which, when there could be drawn neither Gold nor Silver, nor any other Metal, we have ſeen it caſt forth to mend the high-wayes, ſaith Mr. Cambden.

Verſe 7. There is a path which no fowle knoweth] That is, ſay ſome, thoſe places where this Gold lyeth are ſo barren, as they bring forth nothing elſe but gold, nothing for fowles to feed upon, no not diſcernable by the eye of the Vulture, which excelleth in ſeeing afar off, and ſmelleth out his prey at a very great diſtance. But men make their wayes even here, to dig and find out gold, being herein more perſpicacious and ſagacious, then the very Vultures. The covetous would do well to conſider (ſaith a good Authour) that for the moſt part thoſe Countries that are furniſhed with gold, are deſtitute of better proviſion, both temporal and ſpiritual; that it lyeth furtheſt from heaven, and the beſt of it in India, furtheſt from the Church; that though Adam had it in the firſt Paradiſe, Gen. 2. yet in the ſecond we ſhall not need it; but God ſhall be our Gold, and we ſhall have plenty of that which is better then ſilver, Job 22.25. That wiſe men have eſteemed it as the ſtones of the ſtreets, 1 Chron. 5. 15. And that the children of wiſdome might not poſſeſs it in their girdles, Matth. 10. 19. And which the Vultures eye hath not ſeen] Or, the Kites eye, or the Pies, or the Choughs, which yet is ſaid to be ſitiens auri, deſirous of gold, and to hide it when ſhe hath gotten it, though ſhe can make no uſe of it. Some good Interpreters by this path in the Text, underſtand the Mines themſelves, thoſe under-ground places, as far under ground as the fowles flye above ground, and that are by them and the moſt prey-ſeeking beaſts unkend and untrod; yet thither goeth the Metallary by his Skil and induſtry, letting in both light and vital Aire, Quem ſollibus arte mirificâ è ſublimi deducit, ut reſpirent artifices, & alantur lucernæ, which with wonderful Art he by bellows bringeth from above into thoſe low holes, that the workmen may breath, and the lights may be kept burning.

Verſe 8. The Lions Whelps have not trodden it] Heb. The children of pride (ſee chap 41.34) that is, ſaith Vatablus, bellua truces & immanes; fierce and cruel creatures, which yet paſſe through Mountaines and Vallies and vaſt forreſts, but come not under ground where theſe Metals are, that's no part of their walk. Where the Vulgar had his filii inſſitorum here, Sons of the huckſters, Mercer cannot imagine, and his beſt patrons are hard put to it to defend him.

Nor the fierce Lion paſſed by it] Heb. The huge Lion. There are ſeven names of Lions obſerved in Scripture, whereof here are two in this verſe, of like ſound the one to the other. The Tigurines render it here, the Leopard, the Vulgar Latine, the Lioneſſe: And his Paraphraſt hath the whole verſe thus, Thoſe wild beaſts, whoſe ſavage humour ſearcheth out the moſt ſolitary places, could never yet find them, and the Lioneſſes, which run every where when they have loſt their little ones, have never approached them.

Verſe 9. He putteth forth his hand upon the Rock] He, that is, Mortal man, the the Miner, ver. 4. (not God, as Mercer would have it) putteth forth his hand: ſcil. to dig down theſe rocks, that he may come at that Treaſure, and make himſelf Maſter of that ſpoil, that is hidden in their entrailes.

Nil tam difficile eſt, quod non ſollertia vincit.

Alexander the Great being asked, How he ſo ſoon over-ran the Univerſe? Anſwered, I never held any thing impoſſible to be atchieved. When he had heard of any thing dangerous to be done, or unlikely, he would the rather ſet upon it, and ſay, Jam periculum par animo Alexandri, This is an Enterpriſe fit for an Alexander. So of Julius Cæſar, (who had in his time taken a thouſand Townes, conquered three hundred Nations, taken priſoner a million of men, and ſlaine as many) ſings the Poet

Lucan.

Difficulty doth but whet on Heroick ſpirits; it waketh, but not any way weakneth the couragious and induſtrious. Hannibal made his way through the Alps, by breaking down a huge Rock putrified with fire, and vinegar powred thereon. Hence Juvenal,

He overturneth the Mountains by the roots] Or, He turneth it up at the roots of the mountains; ſcil. which he mineth, by the obſtinacy of his labour.

Iſid. Peluſ. lib. 3 epiſt. 24

——Labor improbus omnia vincit.

Δεινὸς γὰρ πάντολμος τῆς φιλοχρηματίας ἔρως, ſaith Iſidore; the love of mony is daring and deſperate.

Verſe 10. He cutteth out Rivers among the Rocks] i.e. By cleaving hardeſt Rocks he drawes in ſtore of water to waſh the inward parts of the earth, that he may ſee what Gold lyeth hid there: as alſo, to waſh and purge his metals, which require much waſhing. This is the work of his hands. And then for his eye, and as a reward of his labour (for the diligent hand maketh rich, Prov. 10.4. and in all labour there is profit, Prov. 14.23.)

His eye ſeeth every precious thing] Heb. Every price; or, All preciouſneſs: Whatſoever is rare. ſo Tremellius rendreth it. His houſe is filled with all precious and pleaſant riches, Prov. 24.4. Dii laboribus omnia vendunt, ſaid the Heathens. God ſells all good things to men for their pains taking.

Verſe 11. He bindeth the floods from overflowing] Heb. From weeping; that is, (by an elegant Metaphor) from diſtilling and dropping, as thoſe under-ground waters uſe to do: but the Miner bindeth them, that is, he dammeth them up, and diverteth them, that they may not fall into his pit and mar his work. Thus he removes all lets, and devoures all difficulties, and all for a little pelfe which periſheth in the uſe, and will rather hinder from, then help men to heaven. How much more ſhould we labour for the true Treaſure, the Pearl of price, the one thing neceſſary, &c? Si tanti vitreum, quanti verum margaritum? All thoſe outward things are nec vera, nec veſtra, as Auſtin elegantly: They are neither true riches, nor ours, but anothers, as our Saviour telleth us, Luke 16.12. Ariſtotle alſo teacheth us, That wiſe men may get riches, but not make it their buſineſſe. Tertul.

Ἀλλ' ὁ τὸν πλοῦτον ἐπιζητῶν οὐ σπουδάζων. Polit. lib. 1.

Brentius reads this Text, Perplexa fluminum gyrat, He turneth about the crooked Rivers, putting them into a new channel, that he may get the gold and precious Stones that lye in the bottom; for there are ſome gold-flowing Rivers: ſuch as are Ganges in India, Paſtolus in Aſia, Tagus in Spain, the Rhine in Germany, &c.

And the thing that is hid he bringeth to light] Contrary to the Deſign of Nature, he he revealeth her ſecrets, and diſcovereth all that ſhe hideth by this raking out of her riches, and making thoſe things that lye couchant in her bowels as common as if they grew above-ground.

Verſe 12. But where ſhall wiſdom be found?] Here is now the other part of the Antitheſis, and the ſecond part of the Chapter; which is nothing ſo hard as the former was. Wiſdom is either natural or ſpiritual, 1 Cor. 2. earthly, or heavenly; Jam. 3 the wiſdom here enquired after is ſupernal and ſupernatural: ſuch as can neither be found upon the earth, or digg'd out of it: ſuch as cannot be fathomed or found out by humane abilities, or by natural reaſon. But God revealeth it unto his by his Spirit: for the Spirit ſearcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God, 1 Cor. 2. 10. And with this Heifer muſt all thoſe plow, that will finde out his riddles. Lucioſi & qui hebeti ſunt viſu, ſaith Vives, Thoſe that are weak-ſighted and ſand-blind, if at any time they look wiſhly upon any thing with deſire to ſee it the better, they ſee it ſo much the worſe, and nothing ſo well as they did before. Think the ſame of the moſt accute and perſpicacious Naturaliſt: when he comes to look into the things of God, he is not only ſand-blind, but ſtark-blind, 1 Cor. 2. 14. he will not ſee (and therefore who ſo blind?) he hath an Antipathy to divine truths: he loveth the Law better than the Goſpel, and any Truth better than the Law. And as for this high point of heavenly wiſdom (called here Illa ſapientia, with an emphaſis) whereby is underſtood, that Gods judgements are all juſt, even then when he afflicteth the godly, and proſpereth the wicked, he cannot comprehend it, or yield to it; but is ready to turn flat Atheiſt upon it, as Averroes did: denying the divine Providence, and conceiting that all things were carried on by Fate and Fortune. Jobs enemy-freinds herein were no wiſer than they ſhould be, when they thus raſhly cenſured him for wicked, becauſe afflicted: and preſumptuouſly took upon them to give a reaſon of Gods proceedings in his various diſpenſations with as much confidence, as if they had been of Gods privy counſel; whereas they ſhould have conſidered, that Gods judgements are unſearchable, and his wayes paſt finding out: and that he who herein is ſcholar to his own reaſon, is ſure to have a Fool to his Maſter. Lud. viv. in Aug. de C. D. l. 22. c. 6.

And where is the place of underſtanding?] As there is no vein to be found of the divine wiſdom, ſo neither any known place (as there is for gold, ſilver, precious ſtones) where it ought to be ſought, ſave only of God by Prayer, Jam. 1. 5. Man, whatſoever good ſucceſs he hath in the forementioned ſearches, he is nothing ſo happy nor dextrous in that of divine underſtanding. Epiphanius reſembleth him to the Mole, which doth all his work under ground: but if once he be brought above ground, as he is ſtark-blind, ſo is he every way a weak and contemptible creature. The beſt that are, ſee but in part, and are ſometimes at a loſs, about the reaſon of Gods moſt righteous proceedings, which men muſt mirari, & non rimari, ſilently adore, and not over-curiouſly ſearch into: There is a learned ignorance, ſaith Calvin, of thoſe things, quæ ſcire nec datur, nec fas eſt, which it is neither granted us, nor fit for us to know: and in this, the very deſire of knowledge is a kind of madneſs. Let that ſaying of Xenophanes be remembred; There is no great difference whether a man ſet his feet or his eyes in another mans houſe without his leave. Arcana Dei ſunt ſitas. arca Dei, Gods ſecrets are Gods Ark; pry not, leſt ye come halting home, for ſo doing. Plut. de curioſ.

Verſe 13. Man knoweth not the price thereof] Or, the order thereof, in what manner and method God proceedeth: no, though in other things he knew as much as Homer did, of whom one ſaith that he was πανσοφος, και οιδεν τα ανθρωπεια πανθ' ὁσα δυνατος, a man that knew all humane affaires: Or, as Ariſtotle did, whom ſome have called an Eagle faln from the clouds: or as Hieron, quem nullum ſcibile latuit, who knew all that was knowable: or as Biſhop Andrew, whom one calleth (but how truly I enquire not) a gulf of learning. Sure it is, that man (every man) knoweth neither the price of divine wiſdom, for it is invaluable: nor the place of it, for it is inveſtigable: nor the order of it, for that is unattainable till we come to heaven: there being a wheel within a wheel, Ezek. 1. and Providence ſhall one day be unriddled.

Neither is it found in the land of the living] That is, here upon earth, by any humane wit or induſtry: In other texts of Scripture, the time while we live in this world, world, is called, the day, Joh. 9. 4. and the light of the living, Pſal. 56. 13. in oppoſition to death, which is called, a land of darkneſs, as darkneſs it ſelf, Job 10. 22. where they that inhabite are ſaid to be free among the dead, Pſal. 88. 5. free of that company, ſee Eſay 38. 11. None but thoſe that live ſpiritually, and have ſenſes habitually exerciſed to diſcern good and evil, Heb. 5. ult. can ſee any thing of the worth of this wiſdom, ſo as to ſeek after it as ſilver, and prize it above gold: for ignoti nulla cupido, men covet not what they value not. Now the Cock on the dunghil knows not the price or place of this ineſtimable jewel, and therefore ſlights it. Thoſe Epicures eſpecially, qui ſuaviter vivunt, (as the vulgar here tranſlateth) who live in pleaſure upon earth, and are wanton, Jam. 5. 5.

Verſe 14. The depth ſaith, It is not in me] It is not to be had above ground, may ſome ſay; but what, under-ground? Not there neither, ſaith Job: for the Abyſſe ſaith, that is, if it could ſpeak it would ſurely ſay, It is not in me; and the Sea gives us in the ſame verdict: dig to the centre of the earth, dive to the bottom of the ſea, you ſhall hear no tale or tydings of her: ſhe neither groweth with gold and precious ſtones in the earth, nor with Pearls and Coral in the ſea: we muſt be taught of God; and the holy Spirit muſt joyn himſelf to our chariot (as Philip did to the Eunuches, Act. 8. 29.) he muſt teach us this wiſdom from above, or we can never learn it, Iſa. 54. 13. A man may read the figure on the Dial, but he cannot tell how the day goes, unleſs the Sun ſhine upon the Dial: We may read over the book of the Creature, and the book of the Scripture, but we cannot learn to purpoſe, till the Spirit of God ſhine into our hearts, 2 Cor. 4. 6. The Goſpel is full of jewels, but they are lockt up from ſenſe and reaſon, 1 Cor. 2. 10. The Angels in heaven are ſearching into theſe ſacred depths, 1 Pet. 1. 12. and know not ſo much, but they would fain know more of this manifold wiſdom of God, that hath ſuch an abundance of curious variety in it, (as the word there ſignifieth) even ſuch as is ſeen in the beſt pictures or textures.

πολυποίκιλος Eph. 3, 10.

Verſe 15. It cannot be gotten for gold] Non emitur, nec æſtimatur, it is not purchaſed or procured with money, as other learning may, (ob precium & præſtantiam ſapientiæ) with a great ſum obtained I this freedom, ſaid that Colonel, Act. 22. 28. So may many ſay of their learning, they have ſufficiently paid for it. Cleanthes parted with all he had for learning. Plato gave thirty thouſand Florens for three Books. Reuchlin gave the Jew that taught him Hebrew, a Crown for every hours pains. Hierome got his skill in that language with the hazard of his life, and held it a good bargain. But here's no ſuch trading; ſee Act. 8. 18, 19, 20. Fie (quoth that rich and wretched Cardinal, when he ſaw he muſt die) will money do nothing? will not death be hired? may not heaven be purchaſed? No, no, God is no Money-merchant: his Kingdom is not partum, but paratum, Mat. 25. 34. his grace is gratuitous, Mat. 13. 11. To you it is given (and what more free than gift?) to know the myſteries of the kingdom of God. And to you it is given (freely given) on the behalf of Chriſt, not only to believe on him, &c. Phil. 1. 29. That proud merit-monger, that ſaid, Gratis non accipiam; I will not have Grace or Glory of free-coſt, could not but go without both.

Verſe 16. It cannot be valued] Heb. Thrown on the ground, as Wares were wont to be, and are yet, when they are ſet to ſale, and to be prized or valued.

With the gold of Ophir] The word here rendred gold, is not the ſame with that in the former, or thoſe in the following verſes. Five ſeveral times gold is here mentioned (becauſe ſo highly prized among men) and in four ſeveral words. Jerom on Jer. 10. obſerveth, that the Hebrew have ſeven ſeveral words for gold, and five ſeveral ſorts are here inſtanced. That here mentioned, is a ſpecial name for the moſt ſplendent and gliſtering gold, Pſal. 45. 10. Dan. 10. 5. Cant. 5. 11. Of it comes Michtam of David, or Davids golden Pſalm, Pſal. 16. 1. his ingot of gold; Broughton thinks it to be no Hebrew word, but the name of gold in Ophir; Obrizum dictum volunt, quaſi Ophirizum: Ophir is Peru, ſay ſome: Others, an Iland in the Indies, where the moſt precious gold was to be had, called alſo gold of Parvaim, 2 Chron. 3. 6. This is ſuppoſed to be in Havilah, Gen. 2. 11. It is called perfections of gold, 2 Chron. 4. 21.

With the precious Onyx, or the Saphir] The Onyx is a ſtone ſaid to be found in the the River Ganges, and to be of a white colour, like the white of a mans nail, whence it hath its name. See of it, Plin. lib. 37. cap. 6. Boet. Hiſt. Gem. lib. 2. cap. 90. The Saphir is a ſtone of a sky-coloured blue, or of a light-coloured purple.

Verſe 17. The gold, and the chryſtal cannot equal it] For Chryſtal ſome reade Diamond; others, Adamant. It hath its name from its purity and tranſparency. Junius rendreth it therefore nitidiſſima gemma. It ſeems to be, ſaith One, the laſt attempt of nature, and makes us finde heaven on earth.

And the exchange of it ſhall not be for jewels (or veſſels) of fine gold] Of Phez-gold, ſo Broughton renders it; and would have it come from Feſſe in Barbary. The Arabians now call gold Phes. Of this ſolid faſt gold were made many precious Jewels or Veſſels, like that French coyn in the Hiſtorian, in qua plus forma quam ponderis, in which was not ſo much weight as workmanſhip; Prov. 25. 11. Apples of Gold, in Lattices of Silver; or put in a Caſe of Silver cut-work. Vas auri puri puti.

Verſe 18. No mention ſhall be made of Coral] No talk of Coral or Carbuncle, of Pearl, or any other the rareſt and richeſt Jewels in all the world. We read of Cleopatra, that vying with Antony in luxury, ſhe drunk up a Pearl of incredible price diſſolved in vineger; and of Charles Duke of Burgundy, that in the Fight at Nanſey, he loſt a Diamond of that worth, ut eo tota aliqua regia emi poſſet, that therewith a man might have bought a whole country. It was afterwards ſet in the Popes triple-Crown; but no way worthy to be mentioned in the ſame day with wiſedom. Macrob. Satlib 3. cap. 17 Alſted. Chronol.

For the price of Wiſdom is above Rubies] Which are ſo called from their lovely redneſs; ſee Lam. 4. 7. Pearls ſome render it: of which Pliny ſaith, Principium culmenque rerum omnium pretii margarita tenent; Pearls are the principal of all precious things. They were ſo of old; but they are not ſo now-adayes. What huge ſums were once given for Saints Reliques (as they called them) and Popes-Pardons? but now the world is grown wiſer. England is no more a babe: there is no man here, but now he knows that they do fooliſhly, that give gold for lead, more weight of that, then they receive of this. This and much more to the ſame purpoſe, ſpeaketh Henry 8. (in his proteſtation againſt the Pope) who yet, as a faint Chapman, went not to the price of this true wiſdome; as appeareth by that publick ſpeech of his in Parliament. There are many that are too buſie with their new Sumpſimus, and others that dote too much upon their old Mumpſimus, the new Religion, though true, he envied: the old, though his own, he deſpiſed, being as a ſpeckled bird, or a cake half baked, &c. Plin. lib. 9. c. 35. Acts & Mon. 990

Verſe 19 The Topaz of Ethiopia ſhall not equal it] Of the Topaz, ſee Plin. lib. 36. cap. 8. It ſeemeth to have the luſtre of Gold, and purity of Chryſtal, and thoſe agreeable mixtures of colours, which make the purple of Kings. The operations of this Stone are many and rare, as Rueus ſets them forth. Lib. 2. cap. 9

Neither ſhall it be valued with pure gold] Plato ſaith as much of moral wiſdome, Οὐκ χρυσὸς, οὐκ ἄδαμας, οὐκ ἄνθρακες, No Gold or Gem ſo gliſtereth. And elſewhere he ſaith, that if moral vertue could be beheld with mortal eyes, mirificos ſui amores excitaret, it would wonderfully enamour men. Aurelius the Emperour would ſay, That he would not leave the knowledg he might learn in one houre, for all the gold that he poſſeſſed. Alphonſus King of Arragon profeſſed, That he would rather chuſe to loſe his Jewels then his Books, his Kingdomes (whereof he had many,) quam literas, quas permodicas ſcire dicebat, then that little Learning he had attained unto. Many have been ſo taken with the ſtudy of the Mathematicks, that they could have lived and dyed in it. Va igitur ſtupori noſtro, Wo then to the world becauſe of wiſdome: This incomparable Wiſdome of God in a myſtery, as the Apoſtle calleth it. Val. Max. Chriſtian. 118, 337. Leo Digges.

Money is moſt mens ſtudy, not without an horrible neglect of pietie, which yet is the principal thing, Prov. 3. and profitable to all things, 1 Tim. 4. 8. as that which hath the promiſe of both lives, ibid. Now the Promiſes are exceeding great and precious things, 2 Pet. 1.4. even the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, Epheſ. 3.8. Such gold as cannot be too deer bought, Matth. 13.44.46. nor too far fet, no, though ſo far as the Queen of Sheba came to hear the wiſdome of Solomon; and could have been content to have changed her throne for his footſtool. Sure it is, ſhe was no niggard, but parted with abundance of precious things, and ſweet odours for that wiſdome which ſhe held (and worthily) far more ſweet and precious then all her annual entradoes. Sure it is, that if the mountaines were Pearle, the huge Rocks Rubies, and the whole Globe a ſhining Chryſolite, yet all this were nothing to the worth of the wiſdome here commended. How greatly bound then are Gods people to bleſſe his Name for communicating unto us this unvaluable treaſure by his Word and Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. Hath he not written for us excellent things in counſels and knowledge, Prov. 22.20? hath he not made his Son, that eſſential wiſdome of his, to become unto us, Wiſdome, Righteouſneſſe, Sanctification and Redemption, 1 Cor. 1.30? Should ſome earthly Prince give us a rich Ring off his finger, wherein there were a Chryſolite, a Saphire, a Topaz, or ſome other precious Stone, how highly would we honour him, and what would we not be ready to do or ſuffer for him? And ſhall we not much more do ſo for God, rich in mercy plenteous in goodneſſe, abundant in kindneſſe and in truth, who giveth us all things richly to enjoy? O pray for that bleſſed ſight, Epheſ. 1.18. and 3.18. and reckon one grain of grace more worth then all the gold of Ophir; one remnant of faith beyond all the gorgeous and gay attire in the world.

Verſe 20. Whence then cometh wiſdome, &c?] See the Note on verſe 12. q. d. No where ſurely is ſhe to be found but with God the fountain of wiſdome, verſ. 23. To ſeek her elſewhere is but laborious loſſe of time; witneſſe the Philoſophers anxious, but bootleſſe diſquiſitions after the Summum Bonum, the true bleſſedneſs or chief good; about which there were eight ſeveral opinions, and yet all out.

Maxima pars eorum quæ ſcimus eſt minima pars eorum quæ neſcimus.

Verſe 21. Seeing it is hid from the eyes of all living] As hath beene before ſet forth verſe 13. They that ſee moſt into it, ſee but in part, and muſt needs ſay, that the greateſt part of their knowledg, is the leaſt part of their ignorance. Something they know of his revealed will; but nothing at all of his ſecret. Whereunto we may add, that there are many occult qualities in nature, the reaſon whereof the wiſeſt men underſtand not.

And kept cloſe from the fowles of the Aire] Which yet fly very high, and ſeem to touch the clouds of heaven; as the Eagle which delighteth in high-flying. Some will have the Angels (elſewhere ſet forth as winged creatures) to be here meant: who although they ſtand alwayes in Gods preſence, and ſee much of his Majeſty, yet not at all, nothing neer, Iſai. 6. they cover their faces with their wings, as with a double ſcarf, (as not not able to behold his glory) and make their addreſſes unto him with greateſt ſelf-abaſements.

Junius.

Verſe 22. Deſtruction and death ſay, &c.] That is, the dead in the grave, and damned in hell, as ſome gloſſe it. Others, man in his corrupt eſtate, though a child of death, yet capable of ſalvation; and the wiſedome of God hath found out a way to ſave him by his Son, letting in life by the ear, according to that, Hear and your ſoule ſhall live. The dead (in ſins and treſpaſſes) ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God (in the preaching of the Word) and ſhall live, the life of grace here, and of glory hereafter, John 5.25. Theſe have heard of Gods wiſdome in his various dealings with the ſons of men, and that with their ears: both with the griſtles that grow on their heads, and with the inward ears of their minds, ſo that one ſound hath pierced both; but yet the one half hath not been told them; they can truly ſay, as the Queen of Sheba ſaid to Solomon, Thou haſt added Wiſdome and goodneſſe to the fame, 1 Kings 10.7. And as David in the perſon of Chriſt, Pſal. 16.11. Thou wilt ſhew me the path of life: whereby is hinted, that Chriſt himſelf as man did not ſo fully underſtand in the daies of his fleſh, the unconceivable joies of heaven, as he did afterwards, when his whole perſon was glorified with the glory which (as God) he had with the Father before the world was, John 17.5.

Vatabl. Iſaiah 55.3.

Verſe 23. God underſtandeth the way thereof] The only wiſe God, who alone knowes knowes her price, knowes her retreat. Haec ſunt inferni & mortis verba, ſaith Brentius; Theſe are the words of hell and of death. But we may better take them, as ſpoken by Job himſelf; which yet are to be underſtood, not as if Job thought that there was any place, out of God, where his wiſdome might be ſought; or any way, out of himſelf to go to it. But theſe things are ſpoken after the manner of men, ſaith Merlin: for wiſedome is in God, yea God is wiſdome it ſelf. For the wiſdome of God is nothing elſe, but the moſt wiſe God: ſith whatſoever is in God, is God. Therefore ſeeing he is well known to himſelf, how can his wiſdom be but as well known unto him? His infinite knowledg and underſtanding is in ſome ſort ſhadowed out unto us in the words following.

Verſe 24. For he looketh to the ends of the earth] He is πολύφθαλμος, all eye: ſo that together and at once he beholdeth all things in the whole courſe of Nature, and under the whole cope of heaven. His eyes behold, his eye-lids try the children of men, Pſal. 11 4. Where the former pointeth out Gods knowledg, the latter his judgment, his critical deſcant, ſaith One. And ſurely this All-ſeeing eye of God, ſaith another Interpreter) ſhould keep us within the compaſſe of obedience, as much as any thing; ſith he who is our Judge, is a conſtant eye-witneſſe of our cogitations, communication and whole converſation. Cave, ſpectat Cato: Take heed, Cato ſeeth you, was an old watch-word among the Romans, and a retentive from vice. How much more ſhould this be among Chriſtians? Ne pecces, Deus ipſe videt; Be adviſed, God beholdeth you. Think not that he who is inviſible cannot ſee, or that becauſe he is the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, therefore he cannot ſee ſo far as earth; for he looketh to the ends and extremities of the earth, his eyes run to and fro, they are in every place beholding the evil and the good, Pro. 15. 3. The world is to him as a ſea of glaſſe, Rev. 4. 6. He ſeeth through it, and every man before him is all window: he ſeeth the very entrals of the ſoule, the heart of the heart, All things are naked and open before him, ſaith the Apoſtle, Heb. 4. 13. Naked for the outſide, and open for the inſide of them: the word ſignifieth, diſſected, quartered, and as it were, cleft through the back-bone: He ſearcheth the Raines, thoſe ſeats of Luſt and moſt abſtruſe parts of the body, ſo wrapt up in fat and fleſh, as if no eye ſhould come at them. Baſil.

And ſeeth under the whole heaven] His providence like a well drawn picture, looketh every way, and extendeth to every the leaſt and lighteſt occurrence; governing all things wiſely and powerfully, and ordering the diſorders of the world to his own glory. Epicures and Atheiſts would ſhut him up in heaven, as hath been before noted, as if he did neither know nor do any thing here below; but they will find it otherwiſe.

Verſe 25 To make the weights for the wind.] He ordereth wind and water, raine and thunder, Pondere, menſura, numero, facit omnia, —— therefore wiſdom is with him. The winds he weigheth in a balance, then when they ſeem to blow where they liſt, piercing through the aire with their violent blaſts, God ſets them their bounds, and appoints them their proportion: He ſends them out as his Poſtes, and makes them pace orderly.

And he weigheth the waters by meaſure] Both the raine, (not a drop falls in vain in a wrong place, or at randome, but by a divine Decree, as a witneſſe of his Wiſdome and Goodneſſe, Acts 17. 14.) and the ſea and Rivers: neither doe the winds blow, nor the waters flow without the Lord, who is the great Moderatour, that meaſureth the waters in the hollow of his hand, &c. Iſai. 40. 12.

Verſe 26. When he made a Decree for the rain] And hence it is, that it raineth upon one City, and not upon another, Am. 4. 7. See the Note there. The riſe of raine out of vapours drawn up from the earth by the heat of the Sun, and the generation of it in the clouds, is no leſſe wonderful, then the uſe of it is neceſſary for the refreſhing and fatning of the earth; allaying the heat, and nouriſhing the herb and tree, &c. Theſe ſhowres may ſeeme to ariſe, and be carried up and downe at randome, and without a Law; but Job aſſureth us, that God maketh a decree, a Statute, or a bound for them, and that he gives, or with-holds rain at his pleaſure.

And a way for the lightning of the thunder] Or, for the lightning and the thunder: In both which there is much of God to be ſeen and heard; theſe being the Harbingers, as it were, and Officers to make roome for him, and to manifeſt his power, which the greateſt muſt acknowledg, Pſal. 29. 1,2. and the Saints muſt take comfort in verſe 11. As for thoſe impious wretches, that ſlight theſe wonderful works of Almighty God, & ſpeak baſely of them (as he of whom Mr. Perkins ſomewhere writeth, that hearing it thunder, ſaid it was nothing but Tom Tumbrel a hooping his tubs, & was thereupon killed with a thunder-bolt: and thoſe old Italians that uſed in time of thunder, to ring their greateſt bells, and ſhoot off their greateſt Ordnance, &c. on purpoſe to drown the noiſe of the heavens:) As they are worſe then Pharaoh and Caligula, and other heathens, who ſtiled their chief god, Altitonans, the high-Thunderer: ſo they ſhall one day ſee the Lord Chriſt ſuddenly coming upon them as lightning, and dreadfully thundering out that diſmal Diſcedite, Go ye curſed.

CHAP. XXIX.

Verſe 1. Moreover Job continued his Parable.]

OR, his ſentence, as Tremellius rendreth it, his ſententious and elegant oration, his aureum flumen orationis, golden flood of grave diſcourſe, as we may better call it, then Tully did Ariſtotles Politicks. Here Job deſcribeth graphically his former felicity; as in the next Chapter his preſent miſery. The promiſe of Proſperity to Gods people is to be underſtood with exception of the croſs, wherewith, if need be, (1 Pet. 1.6.) they are ſure to be exerciſed (and they ſhall take it for a favour too, Heb. 12.6.) by the armour of righteouſneſs on the right hand, and on the left; By honour and diſhonour, by evil report and good report, &c. 2 Cor. 6.7,8. they muſt learn to be abaſed, and to abound, to be full and to be hungry, &c. Phil. 4.12. though this be an hard leſſon, Perquam durum eſt? ſed ita lex ſcripta eſt. ſaith the Civilian: Hard or not hard, we muſt frame to it, and hope for better. The Epicures held, that a man might be cheerful amidſt the moſt exquiſite torments: 1. In conſideration of his honeſty and integrity: this indeed was Jobs great comfort, as we ſee chap. 31. And, 2. In conſideration of thoſe pleaſures and delights that formerly he had enjoyed, and now cheared up himſelf with the remembrance of. But how ſlight and ſlender a comfort this was, Job ſetteth forth in this Chapter. And who knoweth not that as it is a ſweet thing in proſperity to relate what hazards and hardſhip we have paſſed through: ſo in adverſity it is grievous to call to minde what better dayes we have had? And yet it is but reaſon, that we ſhould eate the cruſt and crum together; receive, I mean, evil at the hand of God as well as good, Job 2.10. See the Note on chap. 27. 1.

Verſe 2. Oh that I were as in months paſt] O mihi præteritos, &c. Though Job deſireth not ſo much to be young again, (which to be, Chiron and Cato are ſaid ſeriouſly ouſly to have refuſed) as to proſper again; for this is that we all covet: but we ſhrink in the ſhoulder, when called to carry the croſs. To ſhew his earneſt deſire, he redoubleth his wiſh, as in the dayes, &c. and God anſwered him to the full, by redoubling upon him his former proſperity; not for dayes and months, but for divers years together: and by giving him again all things richly to enjoy: So liberal is the Lord to his, that he many times giveth them more then heart can wiſh.

When God preſerved me] That he acknowledged God to be the author of his earthly felicity, was well done: but not ſo well to think that God preſerved him not, becauſe he proſpered him not: ſee the like verſe 5. God oft wraps himſelf up in a cloud, and will not be ſeen till afterwards; but his hand is ever upon all them for good, that ſeek him, Ezek. 8. 22. he knoweth their ſouls in adverſity, Pſal 31.7.

Verſe 3. When his candle ſhined upon my head] When I was apparently bleſſed by him, and all went haile well with me. The Sun ſmot me not by day, nor the Moon by night, Pſal. 121. 6. but both ſeemed to be made, and to make for me. Nay, more, the ſweet ſunſhine of Gods loving countenance was diſplayed upon me, which is not like the winter-ſun, that caſts a goodly countenance when it ſhines, but gives little comfort and heat. Job had both counſel and comfort from God; and that when other men were to ſeek of both: For,

By his light I walked through darkneſs] Without the leaſt fear of thoſe evils and miſeries, that put others into very great diſtemper. So Noah was ——Mediis tranquillus in undis. Abraham ſtands upon the Hill, and ſeeth the Cities of the Plain burning. David can walk (not ſtep,) through (not croſs,) the valley (not a dark entry,) of the ſhadow of death (the darkeſt ſide of death,) and not fear (though he ſhould go back again the ſame way.) And why? for thou art with me, ſaith he, thy rod and thy ſtaffe they comfort me, Pſal. 23. 4.

Verſe 4. As I was in the dayes of my youth] Hyberyorum meorum, ſo Junius; As I was in the dayes of my winter-quarters, when I lay and did little more then gather up mine aſſignations. Others render it, As I was in the dayes of mine Autumne: that is, when, being a great man, I refreſhed the poor as Autumne doth the paſſenger and others with its fruits. But they do beſt that render it dayes of my youth, which hath the ſame name in Hebrew with winter, and with reproach; becauſe (ſay ſome) young people are prone to reproachful practiſes, and that age is commonly frozen in vice, no vertue then ſpringing or ſhewing it ſelf. So Eccleſ. 11. 10. the word uſed to ſignifie youth, ſignifieth darkneſs or blackneſs: to note that youth is the dark age, many times ſooted with ſin: and therefore young men ſhould cleanſe their wayes by cleaving to the word, Pſal. 119. 9. נערים

When the ſecret of God was upon my tabernacle] i. e. When God did ſo friendly and familiarly intermedle with mine affairs: making them to proſper. When his moſt wiſe conduct did govern my houſe, and did provide for it; ſtopping thoſe ſecret leaks, and that hole in the bottom of the Bag, by which other mens Eſtates do uſually run out: and ſupplying me and mine, tanquam virgulâ divinâ, with all things neceſſary for life and godlineſs. The Greek hath it, When God gave my houſe a viſit. And ſome taking the ſecret of God here, for his law and covenant, ſay, that Job was good betime: and when but a young houſe-keeper, had a Church in his houſe, and much reſort thither of godly people. Annotat. Diod.

Verſe 5. When the Almighty was yet with me] To proſper me, and give me all that heart could wiſh, or need require. But if that be not done, Gods people are apt to think him abſent. Is the Lord amongſt us? ſay they in the wilderneſs: as if that could not be, and they athirſt. So Gideon in the invaſion of the Midianites; The Lord, ſaith the Angel, is with thee, thou valiant man. But Gideon ſaid unto him, Oh my Lord, if the Lord be with us, why then is all this befaln us? If it be ſo, why am I thus? as ſhe ſaid, Gen. 25. 22. Si amatur, quomodo infirmatur? If Lazarus be Chriſts friend, why is he ſick? But theſe two may very well ſtand together: and God is never nearer to his Children then when they for crying cannot ſee him. Moſes ſpeaks of the goodwil of him that dwelt in the buſh, the burning buſh, Deut. 33. but not conſumed. God is with his in the fiery tryal, Iſa. 43. 2. as he was with the three Children, and with the Martyrs. Exod. 17. 7. Judg. 6. 12, 13. Aug.

When

When my children were about me] Round about my table, Pſalm 128.3. Morigerous and obſequious unto me: When my children and ſervants (for the word ſignifieth both) were about me; as Circles about a Point or Center, all looking at, and obſerving me, to do as I directed them.

Verſe 6 When I waſhed my ſteps with butter] When I had of every thing Gods plenty, as they call it. Butter enough to have waſhed my feet in, had I been ſo proud and profuſe. And Oyle great ſtore, inſomuch as that Rivers thereof ſeemed to flow for me from thoſe Rocks and craggy Mountaines in Arabia Petræa, where ſome ſay Job dwelt. Lavater upon the Text, tells us of Rocks that yeeld Oyle, and of Petrolium or Petrelæum, a Soveraign Oyntment (very good againſt diverſe Diſeaſes) that iſſueth out of Rocks, whence alſo it hath its name (not unlike that berry which the French call, Uva de Spine, the Grape of a thorn:) But this whole verſe ſeemeth to be an Hyperbole, (not unlike that of Zophar, *chap.*20.17. and that of Moſes, *Deut.*32.13. Confer *Gen.*49.11. and *Pſal.*80.16.) importing the very great abundance of all outward comforts and contentments, that Job once enjoyed. He had the reward of humility, and the fear of the Lord, even Riches, and Honour, and Life, *Prov.*22.4. Riches he had quantas optare nullus auderet, (as Auſtin ſaith of Conſtantine the Great) more then heart could wiſh. What Honour he had with his Wealth, (and that is to be choſen before Riches, Proverbs 22.1.) he ſetteth forth at large in the following verſes. And what long life he promiſed himſelfe, not without the continuance of both the former, ſee verſe 18,19,20, with chap. 42.12,16,17.

The Ethiopian Judges were wont to keep the chief Seat empty for him. It appeareth by this Text, that Job was a Judge or chief Magiſtrate, not like thoſe whom Eſay calleth Scabs or Wounds; but thoſe whom the ſame Prophet calleth Healers, or Binders up of Wounds; and Hoſea, Shields, as Junius tranſlateth, *Hoſ.*4.8. and another Prophet, Heires or Poſſeſſours of reſtraint, Judg.18.7. It appeareth alſo that he did Juſtice in his own perſon: ſo did David, Solomon, Jehoſaphat Auguſtus, Cæſar, more vigorouſly then any young man, and more prudent then any old man, as the Hiſtorian ſaith of him: Which whileſt Aurelian the Emperor neglected to do, he was even bought and ſold by his Deputies.

Verſe 8. The young men ſaw me, and hid themſelves] As awed with my preſence, and fearing the cenſure of my gravity. Valer. Maximus reporteth the like of Marcus Cato among the Romans; as being Vir irigida innocentiæ, ſaith Livy; Et virtuti quam ſimilimus, as Velleius hath it; that is, a moſt ſtrict and very vertuous Magiſtrate. Hence at their Floralia, thoſe wanton ſports, the youth could not play their pranks till he departed; they all crying unto him, Aut vultum depona, aut diſcedas, either lay down your grave looks, or leave the place.

And the aged aroſe and ſtood up] Performing that reſpect to me which was due to them, *Lev.*19.32, and ſaluting me as the Athenians did their Phocion, by the Title of Bonus; Or as the Romans did their Trajan, by the ſtile of Optimus, the beſt Ruler that ever they had: and all both young and old crying out, as once they did at Rome to Severus the Emperour, All men do the better in all reſpects for thy good Government. Theſe Acclamations and publick honours, though Job ſought not, yet it could not but be a comfort to him, as it was to David, that whatſoever he did pleaſed the people.

babe doth upon the breſt, the Bee upon the flower, or the little bird upon her Dams bill.

And laid their hand on their mouth] Kiſſing their hands and adoring me (adorare eſt applicare manum ad os) Or rather, as ſtopping their mouths, being aſhamed to ſpeak in his preſence, whom they knew to be far beyond them in wiſdome and elocution. Now of this honour done Job by all ſorts of people, Brentius hath this Note, Parùm eſt ingentes camelos poſſidere, &c. It is a ſmall matter, that Job had many Camels and Flocks of ſheep: this was a greater bleſſing of God upon him, that he was honoured and obſerved by all ſorts. This followeth vertue (as the ſhadow doth the body) at the heeles. To do worthily in Ephrata, is the way to be famous in Bethlehem, Ruth 4.11.

Verſe 10. The Nobles held their peace] The Hebrew word for Nobles, ſignifieth ſuch as ſtand in the preſence of great Princes; or, ſuch as the people eyeth and referreth all things to them. Theſe (after the example of thoſe forementioned Princes, verſe 9) Held their peace] Heb. Hid their voice, as aſhamed to hear themſelves ſpeak before ſuch a Maſter of ſpeech, as Job was; of whom it might well be ſaid, as once of Dr. Whitaker, That never any man ſaw him without reverence, nor heard him without wonder.

An awful reſpect to Jobs dignity and worth, cauſed this extreme ſilence in theſe Grandees. And beſides, it may be they were of Plinyes mind, who ſaid, Non minus interdum Oratoris eſt tacere quam dicere. There is a time to keep ſilence, and a time to ſpeak, Eccleſ. 3.7.

Verſe 11. When the ear heard me, then it bleſſed me.] That is, it praiſed me, and praiſed God for me, as for a common bleſſing: ſo weighty were my words, and ſo juſt my ſentence, not unlike that of the Areopagites in Athens, which was ſo upright, that none could ever ſay, That he was unjuſtly condemned by them; but both parties, as well thoſe that were caſt, as they that caſt them, were alike contented.

Verſe 12. Becauſe I delivered the poor that cryed] Here are ſet forth the true cauſes of that great reſpect that was generally given Job: he was a good Juſticer, ſuch as Jethro deſcribeth, Exod. 18.21. He hated much more then did Mithridates, ſuch as maliciouſly perſecuted Vertue forſaken of fortune. And as James 5 of Scotland was called, The poor mans King, ſo might Job well have been: for no ſooner could a poor body cry to him for help, but he relieved him, and reſcued him out of the hands of his oppreſſor. Theoderick of old, and Guſtavus King of Swedes of late, are famous for ſo doing.

He was not of thoſe who follow the adminiſtration of Juſtice as a trade only, with an unquenchable and unconſcionable deſire of gain, but held out a conſtant courſe of integrity, and righted thoſe whom others would have ſlighted.

Verſe 13 The bleſſing of him that was ready to periſh came upon me] Such poor creatures as were deſtined to deſtruction, and ſeaſonably delivered by my meanes, gave me their good words and wiſhes; yea, they cryed me up for their gracious Deliverer, with a Courage, as the Grecians did Flaminius the Roman General, as the Chriſtian Captives did Huniades, who had ſet them at liberty from Turkiſh ſlavery: as the drowning man pulled out of the water by King Alphonſus, cryed, Arragon, Arragon: and as the Italian priſoners in 88, releaſed and ſent home by Queen Elizabeth, ſainted her, and ſaid, That although they were Papiſts, yet they would worſhip no Saint but her.

Whereupon he turned again, and did her right, and sent her away a joyful woman.

Verse 14 I put on righteousnesse, and it clothed me] It was not ambition, popularity or self-interest, that put Job upon these and the following good practices and proceedings, but the care he had of discharging his trust, and the pure love he bare to Justice and upright dealing. For although he desired more to be loved then honoured (as it is said of Trajan the Emperour,) yet he would not do any thing of popularity or partiality, by writhing or warping, but retained the gravity of the Law; which is a heart without affection, an eye without Lust, a mind without passion, a Treasurer which keepeth for every man what he hath, and distributeth to every man what he ought to have. Job did put on righteousnesse, and it put on him; so the Hebrew hath it. By which similitude he declareth, that he could as little be drawn from doing Justice, as he could go abroad without his cloathes, or suffer them to be puld off him.

My judgment was as a robe and a Diadem] Righteousnesse is that whereby the innocent is delivered, Judgment is that whereby the guilty person is punished, saith Brentius. With these was Job arrayed and adorned, far better then was Alcistbenes the Sybarite with his cloak, sold by Dionysius to the Carthaginians for an hundred and twenty talents; or Hanun with his massie Diadem, the weight whereof was a talent of gold with the precious stones, 2 Sam. 12.30. Some Judges have nothing more to commend them then their Robes, which are oft lined with rapine and robbery: So were not Jobs: He made the like use of them that old Eleazer did of his hoarinesse, he would not do any thing that might seem to be evil, because he would not spot his white head: No more would Job, lest he should stain his purple, disgrace his Diadem. He knew that dignitas in indigno est ornamentum in luto, Ruledom without righteousnes is but eminent dishonour.

Verse 15 I was eyes to the blind] Here he saith the same in effect as before, vers. 12,13. only he setteth it forth Pulcherrimis allegoriis per Synathroismum velut conglobatis, by a heap of most elegant allegories. He meaneth here, I gave advice to the simple, and support to the weak and impotent. But how many great men are there, qui etiam videntes, circumveniunt & fallunt, who put out the eyes of men, as Korah falsely accused Moses, Numb. 16.14. And cut off their legs (as that Tyrant in the Story served his Guests that were too long for his bed) by disabling or discouraging them to follow their just causes, so that they are ready to say with Themistocles, that if two wayes were shewed him, whereof the one led to hell, and the other to those corrupt courses of Justice, he would seriously chuse the former rather then the latter.

Verse 16. I was a father to the poor] Ab laebionim, an elegant agnomination, as Mercer here noteth. Job was not only a friend to the poor as aforesaid, but a father providing for their necessities, and protecting them from injuries. So Augustus Cæsar delighted to be called, Pater Patriæ, the Father of his Country. And our Queen Elizabeth would many times say that she could believe nothing of her people, that parents would not believe of their children.

Verſe 17. And I brake the jawes of the wicked] It is a mercy to have Judges, ſaith One, Modò audeant quæ ſentiunt, as the Oratour hath it: ſo they dare do as their conſciences tell them they ſhould do. Job was ſuch a Judge, he feared not to encounter and keep under thoſe unruly Beaſts and Belialiſts, who oppreſſed the poor, and then doubted not to oppoſe with creſt and breſt whatſoever ſtood in the way of their humours and luſts, Hic forti magnoque animo opus fuit, ſaith One: Here Jobs courage was put to the proof, if ever. Is it nothing to break the Jaw-bones of the wicked, to take the prey out of the Lions mouth, and to reſcue the oppreſſed from the man that is too mighty for him? Is it nothing to encounter the Hydra of ſin, to oppoſe the current of times and torrent of vice, to turn the wheel over the wicked, and to leave them as powerleſſe as old Entellus in Virgil did Dares; whom his fellowes led away well beaten, and well nigh broken, Cic. pro Milon.

This ſome make to be a fault in Job, as it was likewiſe in David, when in his proſperity he ſaid, I ſhall never be moved, Pſal. 30. 6. And indeed the holieſt hearts are apt in ſuch a ſtrait to grow proud and ſecure: like as wormes and waſps eat the ſweeteſt apples and fruits. But others are of judgement, That this was a commendable confidence in Job, grounded upon Gods Promiſes, and the conſcience of his own uprightneſs: an εὐθυμία, a ſpiritual ſecurity, a bleſſed calme and compoſedneſſe, a Sabbath of Spirit, flowing from faith, and cauſing joy. This was all well, only that of Bernard muſt be carefully heeded and held to, Læti ſimus non ſecuri, gaudentes in Spiritu ſancto, ſed tamen cavetes à recidivo. Be merry we may, but not carnally ſecure; rejoycing in the Holy Ghoſt, but yet beware that we backſlide not. David by miſreckoning of a point miſſed the Haven, and ran upon the Rocks, Pſal. 30. And Job here ſeemeth to have been miſtaken, by taking the promiſes of outward happineſs without exception of the croſs, for the which he is afterwards reproved by Elihu, and alſo by God himſelf. Bronk.

And ſhall multiply my dayes as the ſand] i.e. Very long, by a Scripture hyperbole, Gen. 22. 17. and 32. 12. and 41. 49. The Septuagint read, As the Phœnix: The Vulgar Latine, as the Palm-tree, which is reckoned among the long lived trees, as is likewiſe the Phœnix among the longeſt lived creatures. R. Solomon ſaith he liveth a thouſand yeers, others five hundred, and then dyeth in his neſt, made of Frankinſense and Myrrhe, and other ſweet Odours, which being kindled by the heat heat of the Sun, he is burnt to aſhes, they ſay: out of which aſhes, a long time after, cometh another Phœnix. How true all this of the Phœnix is, I have not to ſay. Let them that will, reade more in Geſners Hiſtory of Birds: or let them look upon Lactantius his Poem called the Phœnix, with Beſuleius his Comment.

Verſe 19. My root was ſpread out by the waters] Heb. Opened to the waters; which therefore had free recourſe to it, and much refreſhed it. Hereby he deſcribeth his flouriſhing condition when time was, through the perpetual inflowings of Gods free Grace and favour.

And the dew lay all night upon my branch] Pernoctabat; becauſe in the night the dew falleth. Beza thus Paraphraſeth this whole verſe: For, downward the root of my good and upright conſcience was ſpred out by the everflowing waters of Gods bountifulneſs, with which it was daily watered: and upward, the boughs growing out of this root, to wit, my children, my ſervants, my flocks of ſheep, and in a word, my ſubſtance, were waſhed with the cœleſtial dew which from heaven fell down upon them: ſo that by this bleſſing of God they were marvellouſly increaſed.

Verſe 20. My glory was freſh in me] i. e. I had daily new acceſſions to mine honours: and I was herein like a Bay-tree that is alwayes green. This was alſo Joſephs happineſs in Egypt; David in the Court of Saul; Mordecai's and Daniels in the Court of Perſia; and Queen Elizabeths; concerning whom (beſides that famous Epitaph ſet upon her Tomb by command of King James) Thuanus a French Hiſtorian teſtifieth, that the Lady Anna Ateſtina (Mother to the Guiſes and Nemours) pronounced her to be Gloriosiſſimam & omnium quæ unquam ſceptrum geſtarunt feliciſſimam fœminam, The moſt glorious and happieſt Woman that ever ſwayed Scepter. Among her Subjects ſhe got a continual increaſe of honour and reſpects, by coupling mildneſs with Majeſty, and ſtooping yet in a ſtately manner, to the meaneſt ſort: but eſpecially by ſetting up God and his ſincere Service, wherever ſhe had to do, truſting God with her precious life, (ſo much ſought for by Popiſh Aſſaſſinates,) which whiles her Contemporary Henry 4. of France durſt not do, he loſt his life, and much of his honour: witneſs that known Anagram, Borbonius, once Bonus orbi, now Urus boni.

Robur meum inſtaurabitur magisque reddetur. Vatab.

And my bow was renewed in my hand] That is, I had freſh and new ſupplies of ſtrength, by friends and otherwiſe outwardly and inwardly, according to that above, chap. 17. 9. The righteous alſo ſhall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands ſhall be ſtronger and ſtronger. See Gen. 49. 24. 1 Sam. 2. 4.

Verſe 21. Unto me men gave eare, and waited] i. e. Such a gift I had in ſtexanimous Oratory, that my Auditours were held as it were by the ears in great attention to my ſpeeches: as Lucian ſaith of Alcibiades, and Cicero of Craſſus: and as the Poets fable of their Hercules, that he had the ears of his hearers chained to his tongue, as being, πλεῖστον ἐν ὀλιγίστῃ λέξει νοῦν ἔχει. Plut.

Hom. Ἀμφότερον βίης τ' ἀγαθὸς, κρατερός τ' ἀίχμητης.

Tanquam ex tripode dictum. Erant κυρίαι καὶ δημώδεις λέξεις. Laval.

And kept ſilence at my counſel] Received it as an Oracle from Heaven with all humble ſubmiſſion, and plenary ſatisfaction: ſo great was the force of his wiſdom, the weight of his counſel, and the authority of his perſon. In ſome mens diſcourſes a man ſhall have ſatis eloquentiæ, ſapientiæ parùm, much eloquence little enough wiſdom. But where there is a concurrence of theſe two, as was in Job, much may be done. This great men are not ignorant of, and do therefore greatly covet eloquence, Non pleberiam illam ſed fortem, non effœminatam ſed virilem, not a Pedantike ſtile or phraſe, but majeſtick: ſuch as was that of Phocion a great Orator, but one that could ſpeak much in few, as Plutarch reporteth: or that of Julius Cæſar, who wrote as he fought, and whom a man might know to be a Souldier by his words, had he never heard of his noble atchievements.

Verſe 22. After my words they ſpake not again] They replyed not, but reſted in my words, as if I had been ſome Doctor Reſolutus, or rather Irrefragabilis. The vulgar rendreth it, Verba mea addere nihil audebant, they durſt not adde any thing to my words, as holding them currant and ſufficient.

And my ſpeech dropped upon them] Vid. As dew-drops, Deut. 32. 2. or as ſome Propheſie, ſaith R. Levi here. Confer, Mica. 2. 6. Am. 6. 17. Surely as the dew refreſheth refresheth and cherisheth the dry and fady fields; so do fit words the hearers. And as the dew allayeth great heats, and moisteneth the earth, that it may fructifie; so it is here. Ille regit dictis animos, & pectora mulcet. And lastly, as the dew lies in a little compass; so in fewness of words there is oft a fulness of matter, &c. Virg.

Verse 23. And they waited for me as for the rain] Which in those hot Countries was highly prized, and dearly longed for.

And they opened their mouth wide] Stupebant, me loquente, & ore hiabant; They gaped, as if they would have eaten my words: they listened as for life.

As for the latter rain] A rain which came very seldom in that Countrey, saith Diodate; but was much desired for the refreshing and nourishing of the corn and other fruits and benefits of the earth, Prov. 26. 1. Zach. 10. 1. Merlin collecteth from this text, that Job came not into the publick Assemblies there to speak, and gave counsel, but upon deliberate premeditation. Demosthenes would not be drawn to speak extempore to an Audience. Aristides being by the Emperour put upon such a task, answered, Propound to day, and I will answer to morrow: for I am not of those that spet or vomit out my conceptions; but of those that weigh things before I utter them, and polish before I publish them. Mr. Bradshaw was called the weighing Divine: and Melanchthon took time to Answer Eckius his cavils; though by him, and his Popish-party, he was jeared for so doing. It must be an elaborate speech that shall perswade or prevaile much. Among the Romans, the Prince was not to be treated with, otherwise than by writing. Cæsar brought in this custome, that he might have time to consider of that which was demanded, and what Answer to return. Augustus sermones libello habuit; nè plus minusve loqueretur; Augustus had his Speeches set down in a book, lest he should say more or less than that he thought of. ὁ δὲ ἐσιώπα ἀντὶ ἐμούντων ἀλλὰ ἀντὶ ἀκουόντων. See his life by Mr Clark. Suetón.

Verse 24. If I laughed on them, they believed it not] They took it for a great favour, and could hardly think that I would grace them so far as to smile upon them, or jest with them: which if I did at any time, they were over-joyed. Ingeni tractus tenuissimus est risus, saith Tully. To break a jest is no such witty thing, as men conceit it. Howbeit, an harmless jest (that hath nothing in it which may justly grieve or offend another) may very well consist with Piety and Christian gravity; whatever some sowre Anabaptists have held to the contrary. Jocularity indeed and scurrility are flatly forbidden; and reckoned among those τὰ ἀνήκοντα things that conduce not to the main end of our lives, Ephes. 5. 4 But Socrates would be very merry when he liked his company; yet so, as that his mirth should be some way profitable, saith Xenophon. And Erasmus did the Papists more prejudice by his jesting, saith a grave Author, than Luther did by his stomaching and storming. Good mens jests should have something in them of seriousness and usefulness. All their speeches should be seasoned with salt of grace: and in the midst of their recreations they should shew, that their best affections are upon better things. Great care must be taken, that too much familiarity with those below us, breed not contempt, which some think is meant by the next clause, And the light of my countenance they cast not down. Or, Yet the light, &c. that is, they did not slight me because of this familiar carriage, they did not therefore count me ridiculous and vain: as men did that Rodulphus the 35. Archbishop of Canterbury that succeeded Anselm; whom, for his jesting and merry toyes, unbeseeming the gravity of his age and place, they sirnamed, or rather nick-named, Nugax, the Trifler: Sed authoritatem meam non spernebant, nihilominùs me reverebantur; They despised not mine authority, they reverenced me no whit the less: but rather they took care that nothing might be done whereby of merry I might be made sad: they cherished this signe of complacency in me as a rare thing, and so much the more accepted, as less expected and unusual: neither would they be so bold and so bob with me, as to return me jest for jest, as if I had been their compeer, and hail fellow well met. One Paraphrast senseth the whole verse thus; If I by my smiles gave any intimation of my suspicion of any report or business, it was presently distrusted and dissented from of all the rest. And on the other hand; my least countenance or shew of approbation to any cause was observed of others, as a rule to go by. He goes on to give the meaning of the next words thus: Lib 4. de dic. & fact. Socr. Godw. Catalog. p. 82. Vatab. Mr. Abbot.

Verſe 25. I choſe out their way, and ſate chief.] In thoſe dayes I was the onely man in all matters, choſen by conſent of all to be the Prolocutour, and advanced to the firſt place in all Aſſemblies and places of Judicature &c. Tremellius, and others, read it thus, If I choſe their way, (that is, If of mine own accord, I came unto them at any time) I ſate chief, and was Chair-man: in a word, I dwelt as a King amidſt his Troopers, when he comforteth them being caſt down; that is, when after ſome defeat or diſappointment, he cheereth up their ſpirits by his ſpeeches, and cryes, Courage my hearts:

Flebile principium, melior fortuna ſequatur:
Victorem à victo ſuperari ſæpè videmus.

The Tigurines render the former part of the verſe thus, Accommodam me illorum moribus cum judicio, I fitted my ſelf to their faſhions, yet with diſcretion. R. Solomon and others thus, They asked me, What way ſhall we go? What courſe take? And I choſe out their way, and ſet them down a courſe; as a Counſellour doth to his Clyents, a King to his Souldiers, or a Caſuiſt thoſe that reſort to him for comfort.

And dwelt as a King in the army] Where he is continually ſurrounded by his ſouldiers, and highly honoured. The Bees, in their Common-wealth, have a King, whoſe Palace they frame as fair in ſhew, as ſtrong in ſubſtance: if they find him fall, they ſtabliſh him again in his Throne with all duty, with all devotion: they guard him continually for fear he ſhould miſcarry, for love he ſhould not. Job had ſo tempered and mixed gravity and lenity, he had ſo fourbiſhed the ſword of Juſtice with the Oyle of Mercy, that he was at once both feared as a King, and loved as a Comforter.

As one that comforteth the mourners] That mourn for the loſs of ſome dear thing or perſon, as the word ſignifieth: and eſpecially, for the loſs of Gods favour, as Zach. 12. 10. groaning under the ſenſe of ſin, and fear of wrath. Now to comfort ſuch mourners in Sion, is as difficult a work as to raiſe the dead, ſaith Luther; and ſcarce one of a thouſand can skill of it, Job 33. 23. Every Chriſtian ſhould have feeding lips, and an healing tongue, to comfort the feeble-minded, to drink to them in a cup of Nepenthes, that cup of conſolation, Jer. 16. 7. taking them down into Chriſts Wine-cellar, Cant. 2. 4. and there ſtay them with Flagons, and comfort them with Apples, verſe 5. thoſe Apples of the garden of Eden, (as the Chaldee there hath it) the ſweet and precious Promiſes, which are pabulum fidei, the food of Faith, and do give the joy of faith; even that peaceable fruit of righteouſneſs unto them that have been in a low and loſt condition. But this, few can do to purpoſe; becauſe they are either unskilful in the word of truth, or unexperienced; they dig not their diſcourſes out of their own breſts, they utter them more from their brains, than from their bowels, from their own experience I mean; which made even Chriſt himſelf a more compaſſionate high-Prieſt, Heb. 5. And that eminent ſervant of his, St. Paul, had by this means got an excellent faculty in comforting the diſconſolate, 2 Cor. 1. 4. So had Luther, as having himſelf from his tender years been much beaten and exerciſed with ſpirittual conflicts. Conceive we may the like of Job, who was therefore flocked unto from far and near, as known to be able to ſpeak a word, and to ſpeak to the hearts of drooping and dejected perſons. But now, &c.

CHAP. XXX.

Verſe 1 But now they that are younger than I, have me in deriſion]

ID quod ei morbo ſuo longè gravius fuerit, ſicut & Hebræi teſtantur, ſaith Mercer. This troubled him much more than all his ſores and ſickneſſes; that every young ſhackrag ſlighted him, and laughed him to ſcorn. In this caſe eſpecially, ——Facilis motus mens generoſa capit. Ovid.

You ſhall finde ſome, ſaith Eraſmus, that if death be threatned, can deſpiſe it: but to be deſpiſed or belyed, they cannot brook; but leaſt of all by baſe perſons: Quilibet ab aquila quam corvo diſcerpi mavult. Job was now grown ancient, and had been honorable, as he had ſet forth chap. 29. Old-age and Honour, in the Greek tongue, are near a kin: and, Cognata ſunt γῆρας & γέρας, ut ἦθος & ἔθος.

Summa fuit quondam capitis reverentia cani:
Inque ſuo precio ruga ſenilis erat.

But it is a ſigne of gaſping devotion, and that things are far out of order, when the Child behaveth himſelf proudly againſt the ancient, and the baſe againſt the honourable, Eſa. 3. 5. as at Bethel, where thoſe ill-bred Children derided the old Prophet, and petulantly cryed after him, Go up thou baldhead, go up thou baldhead, 2 King. 2. 23. If the like unworthy uſuage befal us, let it ſuffice us that our betters, Job, David, Chriſt himſelf have ſped no better. Art not thou glad to fare as Phocion? ſaid he to a meaner man, that was to die with him.

Whoſe fathers I would have diſdained to have ſet with the dogs of my flock] i. e. To have made my dog-keepers, that they might feed with them as the prodigal ſon did with the ſwine. Dogs are commonly looked upon as paltery carrion Creatures: only ſome, for their minds ſake, and others for certain neceſſary uſes, as ſhepherds, and hunters, make ſome reckoning of them: It was not permitted to a dog to enter into the Acropolis, or tower of Athens, for his libidinouſneſs and ill-ſavour. At Rome they crucified a dog yearly, in deteſtation of thoſe dogs in the Capitol that gave not warning of the approach of an Enemy. Job, it ſeems, had his dog-feeders, men of meaneſt account. Now theſe mens ſons, a beggarly breed, and very raſcals, inſulted and trampled upon this precious man, dealt as baſely and courſely with him, haply, as thoſe factious fellows in Geneva did with reverend Calvin, whom they not only in contempt called Cain (as Athanaſius was ſomtimes by his enemies called Sathanaſius: and Cyprian, Copriam; that is, a dunghil-fellow) but alſo named their Dogs Calvin, as Beza in his life reporteth. διὰ τὸ ἀκολάτε ἢ δυσώδες. Plut. ἀλλυτικ. p. 175.

Verſe 2. Yea, whereto might the ſtrength of their hands profit me?] For, to ſay the truth, (thus Beza here paraphraſeth) the ſtrength of thoſe young ſtriplings could not have ſtood me in any ſtead at all: and as for the old-age of their fathers, it were ſuch, that having ſpent the greateſt and beſt part of their life partly in idleneſs, and partly in divers wicked & lewd pranks, they might worthily ſeem to have lived in vain, all that while: Thus he. The Greeks ſay, Ἔργα νέων, and the Latines Juniores ad labores, young men are fit for hard labour, becauſe ſtrong and luſty. But theſe Samſones in the text were, through idleneſs, mear nullities in the world, ſuperfluities in the earth, Jovemies rotten girdle, good for nothing but to devour victuals: vermine, apes, monkeys, their whole life was to eat and drink (when they could come by it) and ſleep, and ſport, and ſear, and jear at Gods afflicted, with words as full of ſcorn as profane wit or rancour'd malice can make them. Theſe are excrements in humane ſociety: Peſts, the ſcripture ſtileth them, Pſal. 1. 1. λοιμοὶ ſeptuag.

In whom old age was periſhed] Their fathers alſo were old dottrels, in ipſa ſenectute ſenectute carentes, old, but not wiſe, like the Brabanti, who are ſaid to be the elder the fooliſher. Some men live long but are good for little. Non ille diu vixit, ſed diu fuit, ſaith Seneca of ſomebody; He hath not lived long, but only been long: Moria Encom.

as a ſhip in a ſtorm, he hath been toſſed much, but ſailed nothing. Thoſe old men who have not gotten wiſdom by long experience, are not worthy of their years, their old age is periſhed, and their honour forfeited: The vulgar rendreth it, they were reckoned unworthy of life it ſelf: Depontani.

Verſe 3. For want and famine, they were ſolitary] Miſerably poor they were, and nittily needy: ſcarce having a rag to their backs, and therefore aſhamed to ſhew themſelves in company of others, propter penuriam, & propter eſuriem, they lurked in by-corners, and ſeldom came abroad, unleſs it were when hard hunger drove the Wolf out of the wood. Slow-bellies they had ever been, and evil beaſts, fitter therefore to live in the Wilderneſs, in former time deſolate and waſte, than in a civil ſociety: or if in any place, at Ponteropolis, a City built by Philip King of Macedony, for varlets and vagrants, and with ſuch kind of perſons peopled; that they might not peſter other places. Job would have none ſuch about him: and was therefore, haply, now in his low condition, ſo much hated and affronted by them.

In former time deſolate and waſte] And ſo perhaps haunted by the Devil, as Iſa. 13. 20, 21. Brentius rendreth it, Heſternam preſſuram & conſternationem, yeſterdayes preſſures, and fright; that is, ſaith he, The Creditors eagerneſs to be ſatisfied, which frighteth theſe caytiffs, and putteth them to their ſhifts.

Verſe 4. Who cut up Mallows by the buſhes] Pitiful poor fare they are glad of: not ſo good as that of the Baptiſt, Locuſts and wild Honey, Mat. 3. but Mallows, which, together with Aſphodelus, Heſiod mentioneth as poor folks fare. Tremellius rendreth it, Herbas e ſalſilagine cum ſtirpibus, ſalt, and bitter herbs and ſtalks: Brentius rendreth it, Nettles: Some take it for Samphire, which is a kind of Sea-mallows, or Sea-purſlain. The Hebrew word comes from another, that ſignifieth ſalt; and ſounds like the Latine Malva, and the Engliſh Mallows. Courſe and homely Proviſion the wretches were glad to make uſe of, to appeaſe the cruel hunger that devoured them. And this hath been ſometimes the caſe of better men; as of thoſe Worthies, who wandered in deſarts, and in mountains, in dens and caves of the earth, Heb. 11. 38. The Duke of Lorraine had proſcribed ſome thouſands of his Proteſtant ſubjects, who were thereby forced to feed upon leaves of trees and graſs of the fields, till the Senat of Straſbrough, overcome by the importunity of their Divines, took them in, and relieved them, till they could be otherwiſe provided for. In the late Wars of Germany, people were found dead in the high-wayes with graſs in their mouths, periſhing for want of better food.

Ut famem quoquo modo ſedarent. Merc.

And Juniper roots for their meat] Theſe, though they ſurpaſs all other in bitterneſs, were their ordinary food. Our forefathers, as they coloured their bodies with Woad, (and were therefore called Picts) this was their fine clothes: ſo their food was barks of trees, and roots, ſay our Chroniclers. Is not the matter well amended with us? and ſhould we not ſerve the Lord with joyfulneſs in the abundance of all things, Deut. 28. 47. Lavater thinks, That theſe poor people for a living digged up Juniper-roots, and ſold them to others for the uſe of perfuming.

Verſe 5. They were driven forth from amongſt men] E corpore, ſaith Tremellius, out of the Body; that is, out of the Community, as not fit to live in a Common-wealth. The Jews are, for their inexpiable guilt, baniſhed out of the world, as it were by a common conſent of Nations. Out of England they were exiled for ever by King Edward the Firſt, anno 1290. Out of France, 1307. Out of Spain, 1492. Portugal, 1597. Naples and Sicily, 1539. In Turkey they pay for the very heads they wear: but in Cyprus if a Jew be taken (though driven thither by tempeſt) he is put to death immediately. Countrey they have none, nor reſting-place any where. In Jeruſalem there are not to be found, at this time, an hundred houſhoulds of them: Indeed in Conſtantinople and Theſſalonica, there are eſteemed to be about 160000. Jewes, who yet are exceedingly contemned and hated there: and at every Eaſter in danger of being ſtoned by the Chriſtians, becauſe at that time, they crucified our Saviour, derided, and buffetted him. All this, and more they ſuffer, and yet they continue, by a juſt judgement of God, upon them, wofully hard-hearted, blood-thirſty, theeviſh, treacherous, flagitious. Howbeit there is a remnant according to the Election of Grace, Rom. 11. 5. Anno Dom. 1556. at Weiſſenſten in Germany, a Jew for theft (they had cryed after him with Hue and Cry, as after a thief) was in this cruel manner to be executed: He was hanged by the feet with his head downward, betwixt two dogs, which constantly snatcht and bit at him. The strangeness of the torment moved Jacob Andreas (a grave Divine) to go to behold it: Coming thither, he found the poor wretch, as he hung, repeating verses out of the Hebrew Psalms, wherein he cryed out to God for mercy. Andreas hereupon took occasion to counsel him to trust in Jesus Christ, the true Saviour of mankind. The Jew embracing the Christian Faith, requested but this one thing, That he might be taken down, and be baptized, though presently after he were hang'd again, (but by the neck, as Christian malefactors suffered) which was accordingly granted him. Mekh. Adam in vit.

Breerwoods enquiries.

They cryed after them, as after a thief] Presuming that, by doing nothing, they had learned to do naughtily: and that having nothing of their own, and not willing to work, they lived by rapin and robbery. Such therefore as these they served as Philip of Macedony did a couple of his idle (and therfore evil) subjects; he made the one of them run out of the Countrey, and the other drive him. Solon made a law at Athens, that every man once a year should shew the Magistrates by what Art or Trade he maintained his Family. This if he could not do to their good liking, he was presently expelled the City. At Corinth also, Periander ordained, That if any man spent freely, and could not make it appear that he got it honestly, he should without further process of law, be trussed up for a thief. Melanct.

Verse 6. To dwell in the clifts of the vallies] Like wilde beasts and Serpents: which these idle persons will rather chuse to do, and suffer any hardship, then labour for their livings, and do good in their places; earning it before they eate, and contributing something to the weal-publick, as Bees bring their honey to the common hive: This, those that will not do, are worthily cast out, and made to dwell in the clifts, &c. In the time of Cato Censorius, when any one would be a Citizen of Rome, they took his hand betwixt theirs; and if it felt smooth and soft, they presently as an idle vagabond, gave him his Mittimus: but if hard and knotty, they forthwith admitted him to dwell in their City. And if a malefactor were apprehended whose hands were labouring hands, his punishment should be mitigated, though his Crime were grievous: as if otherwise, a severe punishment was inflicted for a light offence.

Verse 7. Among the bushes they brayed] Through grief and discontent at their low condition and many miseries; which yet they would rather bootlesly bewayle, than take a right course to remedy. They lust and have not, they kill (themselves through idleness,) and desire to have (if it would come without labour) but cannot obtain, Jam. 4. 2. And hence they bray like the wild-Ass when empty, and roar as the Lion when hunger-bit.

Under the Nettles they were gathered together] Or they were pricked, whealed, (as we call it) Urtica ab urendo, they were nettle-stung, whilest they got under those weeds for shelter and warmth. All this Job relateth of those that derided him: not to be even with them, or out of a desire to disparage them, but to aggravate the indignity of his misusage, and to comfort himself, as Seneca in like case did, Male de me loquuntur, sed male; They speak evil of me: but who are they? base persons, and wicked above measure: and, oh how easie a thing it is to wagge a wicked tongue! especially when the devil hath the doing of it, as he hath in this kind of men, qui revera os aperiunt, & diabolum loqui sinunt; whose mouth the Devil borroweth to vent the language of hell by. Lavat.

Verse 8. They were children of fools, yea, children of base men] Homines flagitiosissimi, etiam homines ignominiosissimi afflictissimi evant, exterres, so Tremellius translateth, Naught all over they were, and nought esteemed: what wonder therefore if heavily afflicted, and relegated? Their poverty was self-procured, and therefore unpitied; they had brought themselves into the briars, and also in their fathers iniquities they were pining away with them, Levit. 26. 39. Evil eggs they were of evil birds, vilibi homunciones & ingloria, as the Tigurines translate, fellows of no fashion, and as little account, terræ filii, earth-spring Mushromes, men in whom all true wisdom was faded and decayed, sapless persons, Nabali, Nebulones.

They were viler then the earth] Terrâ quam ferimus, terrâ etiam quam terimus: Or, they were smitten out of the earth, driven out of the land, &c. by me when I was in power:

power: but now these vile varlets shew themselves again, and trample upon me with the feet of pride and petulancy: Leoni mortuo vel mus insultat.

Verse 9. And now I am their song] They compose Comedies out of my Tragedies, and make themselves merry in my misery; they not only make Balads and Sonnets of my sufferings, but also play them upon their Instruments, as the Hebrew word importeth.

De me confabulantur & contemptim loquuntur. Disc.

Yea, I am their by-word] Sermonis argumentum, the matter of their Discourse; I am all their talk, neither have they any thing else whereof to chat and babble, but only of me, yea to make my disgraces to passe into a Proverb, they call all miserable men by my name. The Ale-stakes served David in like sort; the Drunkards upon their Ale-bench tossed his name as Dogs do carrion, making him their ballad and their by-word, *Psal.*69.12. The whole Church complaineth of the like contempt, *Psal.*79.4. *Lam.*3.14,63. *Ezek.*33.32. Thus when the invincible Armada, as they called it, was coming for England, Don Bernardino Mendoza, the Spanish Embassadour in France, solaced himself with a vain and false Poem or Song of Englands miseries: which as a tryumph before the victory, he absurdly printed. The Gunpowder-Traytors also did the like in their sevenfold Psalmodie, as they called it; that divellish ditty, which secretly the Papists passed from hand to hand with Tunes set to be sung or plaid. The matter consisted of railing upon King Edward 6, Q. Elizabeth, K. James, and others; of Petition, Imprecation, Prophesie, and praise.

Verse 10. They abhor me, they flee far from me] As if I were a Leper or a Bugbear, or that my breath were infectious; like that maid spoken of by Avicen, who feeding upon poyson, was her self healthy, yet infected others with her venemous breath. Job was wont to be honoured; now he is as much abhorred. People were used to hang upon his lips for learned counsel, but they stand aloof off, and keep at a distance. They looked upon that face of his as the face of an Angel, which now with utmost despight and detestation, they spit upon and spare not. At virtutes everti non possunt, as Demetrius Phalereus said, when the Athenians threw down the many Statues they had once erected in honour of him, But they cannot throw down my vertues and valiant acts, whereby I deserved those Statues. Job was not without his cordial in this sad and sudden change of his condition. For first, the Bird in his own bosom sung sweetly still, as birds in the Spring tune most melodiously, when it raines most sadly. And secondly, What if these miscreants prate against Job with malicious words, as Diotrephes did against Demetrius, 3 John 10. Yet it is enough for Job or Demetrius that they have a good report of all men; that is, of all good men, who indeed are the only men (as a good name only is a name, *Eccles.*7.1. and a good wife only a wife, *Prov.*18.22.) to be reckoned on; and of the truth it self, that's more, *ver.*12.

And spare not to spit in my face] In signum videlicet maximi contemptus & indignationes; In token of greatest contempt and indignation, as *Numb.*12.14. Isai. 50.6. *Deut.*25.9. The face is the table of beauty or comelinesse: and when it is spit upon, it is made the seat of shame. Their words were, likely, such as the English Barons here said of the Popes that excommunicated them, Fye on such rascal ribaulds &c. Our Lord Christ also was spit upon in like manner, that he might cleanse our faces from the filth of sin, and make them shine with his beames, 1 Joh. 3.2.

Verse 11. Because he hath loosed my cord] i.e. God hath taken away mine Authority, whereby I heretofore kept them in order, and made them more obsequious, so that now like head-strong horses, having gotten the bit between their teeth, they run whithersoever they list, and rise up against their Rider. It is God who casteth contempt upon Princes, as he did upon Solomon in his old age, upon his son Rehoboam, upon Ephraim, *Hos.*13.1. (see the Note there) upon our Edward 2, and Henry 6. Some render it, He hath loosed my Bow string, in reference to chap. 29. 20. So that I cannot now shoot at those that slight me. Job was disarmed and disabled to do as he desired, as Philip King of France, was in the battle between him and *Edw.*3. King of England, at the instant whereof there fell such a piercing shower of rain, as dissolved the strings of his Archers, and made their Bowes unuseful.

Psal.107.40 Job 12.21.

Dan. Hist. f 237

And afflicted me] When a tree is felled, each man pulleth off a branch, saith the the Greek Proverb. When a dog is worried, every Cur will fall upon him, and throw a sling at him. When a Deer is wounded, the whole Herd will set against him, and thrust him out of their company: So when God hath afflicted Job, every base beggerly fellow sate heavy upon his skirts. This was an addition to his affliction.

They have also let loose the Bridle upon me] Those Insolents, having pulled their heads out of the halter, lay the raines in the neck, and run riot, yea, they run at tilt against me, as it were, beyond all reason and measure, without fear, shame or manners. For, Upon me, some read, Before me; q.d. Now they dare do any thing even in my presence, who formerly stood in aw of me. Effrenati in me irruerunt. Jun.

Verse 12. Upon the right hand rise the youth] Broughton readeth, The Spring-gals. The Hebrew hath it, The blossom, or the young buds: the youngsters, the boyes scoffed and abused Job. The lawless rout, riding without raines, took a licentious boldnesse to despise and despite him, because he was ever most severe against their unruly practises. Vix puberes, Such as are scarce out of the shel.

They push away my feet] They trip up my heeles, as we phrase it, and lay me along. Vide admirandam humanæ sortis varietatem, saith Brentius here: i.e. See the strange turnes of humane condition. Job was wont to have the chief Seats in the Temple, and Salutations in the Market-place; now he cannot have a room any where to stand in, but every paltry boy is pushing him down. May it not be said of Job as it was of that Emperour, that he was fortuna pila & lusus? But he saw God in all.

And they raise up against me the waies of their destruction] Allegoria castrensis. Job borroweth this expression from the Camp, as he doth many more from other things, whensoever he speaketh of his great afflictions, and the contempt that was cast upon him. Upon me they tread the paths of their unhappinesse: so Broughton: that is, they make a path in which they may practise that their malapert boldnesse in doing mischiefe. They beat their paths by running up and downe therein, to undo me, so Vatablus: They cast upon me the causes of their ruine, so Broughton.

Verse 13. They marre my path] That is, all my studies and endeavours, they obstruct all passages whereby I might hope for help, as if they were resolved upon my ruine.

They set forward my calamity] See Zach. 1.15. see the Note there. Or they count it profitable to them to vex me: So great is there malice against me. And though it do them no good, yet if they may do me hurt, they have enough.

They have no helper] Neither need they any to animate them, or egg them on to mischief, who of themselves are over forward, though but small and young, as Vajezatha, Hamans youngest son was: See the Note on Esth. 9.9.

Verse 14. They came upon me as a wide breaking in of waters] Quasi irruptione latâ irruerunt in me. As Souldiers when they have made a breach in a wall, come tumbling in upon the Town, and sack and ransack it, yea, raze it, and harrasse it; so have these dealt with me.

They rolled themselves upon me] Labouring wholly to suppresse me, Gen. 49.23. Taking occasion by this my downfall, which they ought rather to have lamented and pitied, they unmercifully fell upon me, as if themselves had lived out of the reach of Gods rod.

Verse 15. Terrors are turned upon me] I am horribly afraid of thy judgements, as David expresseth it; and this was it that pointed and put a sting into all other sufferings. For a wounded conscience who can bear? If the shoulders be galled, the burden will be very tedious and irksom. Be not thou a terror unto me, Lord, saith Jeremy, and then I care not much what else soever befalleth me. But why were these terrors so troublesome?

They pursue my soul as the wind] Brentius rendreth it, They pursue my liberality, or, They take away from me all the cheerfulness and readiness of my mind; whereby heretofore I fulfilled so many commands, and shunned not for the joy of the Lord was my strength, and then nothing could smile to me. Thou hast strengthened me with strength in my soul, Psalm 138.3. and upheld me with thy noble spirit, Psalm Animam meam nobilem & inclytam. Vat.

30.12. The Chaldee hath it, Kingly Spirit, and it is the same word in the Original that is here rendred, My soul: It is, my Princess, or, my Nobility, for so the soul is the more noble part. David calleth it his Glory, Psal. 16.9. and his Darling, Psal. 22.21. Some of the Jew-Doctors make it the same with welfare, in the words following: but that's not likely.

Terrorum vim simili à vento illustrat, & salutem à se abeuntem similitudine nubis. Merl.

And my welfare passeth away as a cloud] i.e. Totally, as before, irresistibly like the wind: Job aboundeth with similitudes, which do notably illustrate. He would say, I am utterly deprived of all means of avoiding this misery.

Verse 16. And now my soul is powred out upon me] Now that I am under these inward terrors, I am become strengthless, even weak as water, my soul doth melt away for grief, as Psal. 42.4. and I am as an hollow tree, wherein there is not any heart of Oak: I am utterly dispirited.

The dayes of affliction have taken hold upon me] And so hard hold, that I despair of ever getting loose whiles alive.

Verse 17. My bones are pierced in me in the night season] Sleep is the Nurse of Nature, and the sweet parenthesis of mens griefs and cares. But Job had so many aches and ailements in his body, (over and above the terrours and troubles of his mind) that rest he could take none at all in the night season, when all creatures are wont to be at quiet. For why? the very marrow of his bones raged through intolerable paine: as if it had been run through with a Tuck. Nay more,

Vatabl.

And my sinewes (or, My Pulses) take no rest.] Heb. Sleep not; My sinewes or arteries are rackt with the Cramp, and my pulses, by the force of a Feaver, beat excessively, and pant without intermission: Qui tamen minus deberent, quia calor retrahitur in partem interiorem; which yet should move more slowly by night, because then the heat is drawne into the internal parts.

Merlin. Totum cruentem & sordidatum. Merc.

Verse 18. By the great force of my Disease is my garment changed] foeda, sudore, cruore, sanie, sanguine; By the matter that my Disease forceth outward in Boils and Botches, is my garment (which once was decorum & Magistratus insigne, the Ensign of my Authority) utterly stained and spoiled, loathsom to my self, and noysom to others. Every one (say some Chymicks) hath his own Balsom within him: his own bane it is sure he hath. Physicians hold, that in every two years there is such store of ill humours and excrements ingendred in the body, that a vessel of one hundred ounces will scarce contain them. Now if these, by Gods appointment (for he is the great Centurion, Matth. 8.9. who hath all diseases at his beck and check) break outward, what an ulcerous Leper and Lazar must that man needs be? This was Jobs case, and Munsters, (who called his sores, Gemmas, & preciosa Dei ornamenta, Gods Gems and Jewels, wherewith he decketh those whom he loveth) and King Philips of Spain, who, besides many other diseases, had ingentem puris ex ulceribus redundantiam, qua binas indies scutellas divitis pudore impleret; Abundance of filthy matter issuing out of his sores, insomuch as that no change of cloathes, or Art of Physicians could keep him from being devoured by Lice and Vermine thereby ingendred.

Carol. Scriban. Instit. Princip. cap. 20

It bindeth me about as the collar of my coat] It is become so stiff and starky, that it straines me and hales me, as an uneasie collar girds and gripes a mans neck: As the edge of my coat it girds me, so Brenthius readeth it. Beza rendreth this latter part of the verse thus: He (God) compasseth me about as the collar of my coat. Pisator the whole, thus: By the greatnesse of his (Gods) strength, (which he putteth forth in wrestling me with diseases) my garment changeth it self, (putteth on, as it were, another garment of scabs and scurfe) as the mouth of my coat he (God) girdeth me, and Mine hose [coupes mouen] he pincheth my body with diseases. But the former reading is better.

Verse 19. He hath cast me into the mire] My Disease hath, so Vatablus senseth it. Others, God hath as it were trampled me to dirt, thrown me into the kennel, and so done me the greatest disgrace that can be.

Vatabl.

I am become like dust and ashes] Like a dust-heap behind the door, vadum sordium & sentinam, saith Munster. Being covered all over (saith Beza) with the scabs and scurfe that fall from my scabs, I am become more unlike unto the supposable dust and ashes, then unto a living man. Dust and ashes are not more like one another, another, then their names are in the Original: ſic nóvis, cinis, See Gen. 3. 19. and 18. 17.

Verſe 20 I cry unto thee, and thou doſt not hear me] This was a ſore trial, that God ſhould caſt him into ſtraits, and there leave him. His enemies indeed he uſually dealeth ſo by, Ezek. 22.20. and 29.5. but not by his ſervants, Heb. 13.5. Or if he do leave them, yet he will not forſake them. The mother leaves her child ſometimes, but when he ſetteth up his note and cryeth luſtily, ſhe haſteneth to help him. So doth God: But now Job cryed unto him, and was not heard or anſwered, to his thinking at leaſt, and that was a great cut to him, as Pſalm 22. 2.

I ſtand up] ſcil. To make ſupplication to my Judg, as Haman ſtood up to make requeſt for his life, Eſth. 7.7. as the Publican ſtood and prayed, Luke 18.13. and as Moſes and Samuel are ſuppoſed to ſtand before God in prayer for their people, Jerem. 15. 1. Hence that Proverb amongſt the Jewes, Abſque ſtationibus, non ſtaret mundus. Did not the Saints ſtand in prayer, the world could not ſtand.

And thou regardeſt me not] This was but a Miſtake in Job, for the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his eares are open to their prayers. Only God anſwereth our prayer, non ſecundum voluntatem, tamen ad utilitatem: Not alwayes or as ſoon as we would, but doth that which is better for us, and takes it ill to be miſconſtrued, as he was by Job, witneſſe the next words, bloody words indeed, and not far from Blaſphemy.

Accuſat ergo Job Dominum mendacii. Brent. Contumelioſus videri poteſt. Merl.

Verſe 21 Thou art become cruel to me] Mutatus es mihi in tyrannum, thou art turned Tyrant towards me, ſo Brentius rendreth it: and the like he had ſaid before, chap. 16.13. and 19.8,9,10. out of the vehemency of his pain, and the ſenſe of his fleſh, which ſhould have been ſilenced, and faith exalted; the property whereof, is to pick one contrary out of another (as life out of death, aſſurance of deliverance out of deepeſt diſtreſſes, Deut. 32.36.) and to perſwade the heart that God concealeth his love, out of increaſement of love, and in very faithfulneſs afflicteth his darlings, that he may be true to their ſouls, Pſal. 119.75.

With thy ſtrong hand thou oppoſeſt thy ſelf againſt me] Heb. Thou hateſt me, Satanically hateſt me; Inteſtinum odium exercet adverſum me; and accordingly thou doſt practiſe all thy might upon me. Thus Job in his heat, and that he may not ſeem to rage without reaſon, he ſubjoyneth Tremell.

Verſe 22. Thou liſteſt me up to the wind] Thou whiffleſt and wherrieſt me about as chaff, or thiſtle-down. Pro libidine tractas me, thou uſeſt me at thy pleaſure. Brent.

Thou cauſeſt me to ride upon it] Upon the wings of the wind, lifting me up aloft that I may fall with the greater poiſe, as the Eagle is ſaid to do the Tortoiſe; Ut lapſu graviore ruam.

Thou diſſolveſt my ſubſtance] Or, Thou melteſt my wiſdome: I have neither fleſh nor reaſon remaining. The iſſue that he expecteth of all theſe his forementioned miſeries, followeth,

Verſe 23. For I know that thou wilt bring me to death] Such hard thoughts had Job of God, and ſuch heavy thoughts of himſelf. Nam experior, mors avocat me. ſo Tremellius: For I feel it, death calleth me away. Sic ludis mecum, ut facilè conjiciam mihi moriendum eſſe, ſaith Brentius: Thou ſo dallieſt with me, that I plainly perceive I muſt ſhortly dye, there's no avoiding of it. Thus good Job was preſſed out of meaſure, above ſtrength, inſomuch as he deſpaired even of life, and had the ſentence (or denunciation) of death in himſelf, &c. But God was better to him then his fears, and delivered him from ſo great a death: this is uſual. 2 Cor. 1.8,9,10

Qui nil ſperare poteſt, deſperat nihil.

And to the houſe appointed for all living] That is, the grave, Pſal 49.14. and 89.48. that Congregation houſe of all living, (as heaven is called, the Congregation houſe of the firſt born, Heb. 12.23.) the pulick or common meeting place, as Iſai. 14.13. the houſe of conſtitution or aſſignation to all living (as the Hebrew here hath it) Marigenus.

it) that is, to all men, who are by an excellency called, every creature, Mark 16.15 as being the beſt living creatures upon earth.

Verſe 24 Howbeit he will not ſtretch not his hand to the grave] He will not dig up the dead (as the Papiſts dealt by Bucer and others) to afflict them any more. Quid facere poterunt? Occident? Nunquid, reſuſcitabunt ut iterum occidant? What can they do? (ſaid Luther concerning his enemies who threatned him) Will they kill me? but what then? Will they raiſe me up to life again, that they may kill me again? No: Charles the Fifth Emperour, when he might have done that, and was moved to do it, would not. Mors requies ærumnarum. Dead men are at reſt, was Chaucers Motto. There, (in the grave) the wicked ceaſe from troubling, and there the weary be at reſt, chap. 3.17. Thus Job ſpeaketh, going no further then the afflictions of the body, as being for his own part fearleſſe of eternal puniſhment. But as for the wicked, when they dye out of bodily miſery, it is but as the mans flying from a Lion, and a more ſavage Bear meeteth him: or going from it into the houſe (this houſe mentioned in verſe 23.) and that more venemous Serpent, (the Divel, who hath the power of death, Heb. 2.14.) there biteth him, Amos 5.19.

Though they cry in his deſtruction] i. e. Whiles God is cruſhing or killing of them. Or, Is there any cry in his deſtruction? It was never yet known that dead men made moane; what ever the Popiſh Legenders tell us of one that cryed out, I am dead, I am judged, I am damned; which gave occaſion to Bruno to found the Carthuſian Order.

Verſe 25. Did I not weep for him that was in trouble?] Rurſum, per pathos, excandeſcit. Here Job wondreth, and is much moved again at his unpitied condition, ſith himſelf was ſo pitiful to the afflicted. He could ſafely ſay with Cyprian, Cum ſingulis pectus meum copulo, mœroris & funeris pondera luctuoſa participo, cum plangentibus plango, cum deſlentibus deſleo. He had teares ready for the afflicted, and wept with thoſe that weep: not for a Complement, as the Braſiliani, who

Mercer.

Nor out of melch-heartedneſſe, as Gordian the Emperour, who would weep for the beating of a boy at School. But out of hearty compaſſion and commiſeration, as good Nehemiah, chap. 2.2. and thoſe Chriſtian Hebrewes, chap. 10.33,34. Now for as much as the merciful have the promiſes of mercy made unto them, Matth. 5.7. James 2.13. And all men ſay, Ab alio expectes, alteri quod feceris, Job marvelleth at others hard heartedneſſe toward him, and expoſtulateth the unkindneſſe.

Was not my ſoul grieved for the poor?] Into whoſe caſe good Job put himſelf, and ſo became mendicorum maximus (as Salvian ſaith of Chriſt, becauſe he ſhareth with his Saints in all their neceſſities) he drew out not only his ſheaf, but his ſoul to the hungry, (Iſai. 58.7,10) and ſatisfied the afflicted ſoul: this was right. Contriſtata eſt anima mea ſuper egenum. Some render it, Reſtagnavit lachrymis anima mea, My ſoul ſtood with tears, like a ſtanding pool. Others uſtulatur, ἀυξάνει, My ſoul burneth; which is agreeable to that of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 11.29. Who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is offended, and I burn not?

Verſe 26. When I looked for good] According to that general rule, and the common courſe of Gods proceedings, With what meaſure ye mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you again, Matth. 7.2. With the merciful thou wilt ſhew thy ſelf merciful, Pſal. 18.16. Middah cenegedh middah, ſay the Hebrewes; Men ſhall have meaſure for meaſure, like for like. Hence Job expected to have all things at will, but it fell out ſomewhat otherwiſe; and this puzled him, he could not unriddle theſe croſs occurrences. He could almoſt find in his heart to think, that he was therefore ſo little pitied by others, becauſe he had been ſo pitiful to others.

When I waited for light, then came darkneſſe] Things grew every day worſe and worſe with me, mending like ſowre Ale in Summer, as we ſay. Thus it fares many times with Gods beſt ſervants, theſe children of light walk in darkneſſe, nevertheleſſe let them truſt in the Name of the Lord, and ſtay upon their God, in the faile of all outward comforts, Iſai. 50.10. Habak. 3.17,18. This is the tryumph of faith, which tells the the ſoul, that things muſt go backward before they can come forward, and when matters are at worſt they will mend.

Verſe 27 My bowels boyled, and reſted not,] Being toſſed and tumbled with continual boyling and bubbling, rumbling and making a rattle (as the word ſignifieth) whether through paſſion or compaſſion. With moſt compaſſionate ſympathy (ſaith one learned Paraphraſt) did my bowels yearn over the afflicted, ſo that I could have no quiet in my ſelf, for grieving and taking thought for them: I was ſeldome or never without ſorrow for ſome one or others affliction. Olla more inſonuerunt. Merc.

The dayes of affliction prevented me] Previſion ſhould have hindred this prevention: Evils foreſeen come no whit the ſooner, but far the eaſier. It is a labour well loſt if they befall us not; well ſpent if they do: whereas coming on the ſudden, they find weak minds ſecure, make them miſerable, leave them deſperate. Expect them therefore and prepare for them: Darts foreſeen are dintleſs.

Verſe 28 I went mourning without the Sun] Ater ambulo, ſed non ob Solem; I am not Sun-burnt, but heart burnt; black and diſcoloured without, becauſe parched and dryed up within by the force of my diſeaſe and my griefe, wherewith I am pained, pined, and even periſhed.

I ſtood up and cryed in the Congregation] Which was not very handſome, but I could not hold. Riſe I did, and roar I muſt amidſt the preaſs of people, whatever they ſhould think of me. So Mordecai went out into the midſt of the City, and cryed with a loud and a bitter cry, and came even before the Kings gate, &c. Eſth. 4.1,2. In extreme heavineſſe men care not to keep decorums.

Verſe 29. I am a brother to Dragons, &c.] i.e. I utter a very lamentable voice, or rather noiſe, like Dragons, which ſucking the Elephants blood till he fall down dead upon them, and quell them with his huge bulk, make an horrible howling; ſo horrible and hideous ſay ſome, that they amaze, yea, kill thoſe that hear it. Plin. Solin.

And a companion to Owles] I give forth rude and confuſed cryes, as if I howled with Owles, or grunted with Oſtriches. We uſe to ſay of ſuch, that they roar like Beares, and bellow like Bulls, filling the air with their Out-cryes. Young Oſtriches caſt off by their Dams, Job 39.14. Lam. 4.3. make pittiful moan; ſo do the young Ravens for like cauſe, Pſal. 147.9. Job cryed out more like a beaſt then a man, in his pain and miſery. This the Stoicks cenſured as effeminate, and would not allow a wiſe or valiant man to ſigh, or cry, or ſhew any token of grief whatever befel him. But this was to deſtroy nature, and to transform men into ſtocks and ſtones void of ſenſe. The Patriarks bewailed their deceaſed friends. David, likely, was not ignorant of the Gentiles proverb, Weeping becometh not a King; yet he wept abundantly, yea, he out-wept Jonathan: As the better any one is, the more inclined to weeping and lamentation, which yet muſt be duly moderated. Eurip. —Ἀγαθοὶ δ' ἐσὶ δακρυοις ἀνδρες.

Verſe 30 My skin is black upon me] Through the violence of the Feaver, and aduſt matter, his skin was as black and mud-coloured as the waters of the River Nilus, which hath its name Sihor in the Hebrew, from this root, Jer. 2.18. The Ethiopians skin is black, but that's natural to them, and they think it beſt ſo, and therefore paint the divel white, &c.

And my bones are burnt with heat] In the Feaver they call Epialis, the heat is all inward, and dryeth up the radical moiſture. Job complaineth of ſuch a diſtemper, and ſo doth David, Pſal. 32.3,4. and Solomon telleth us, that a heavy heart dryeth up the bones. Beza expoundeth it of the Jaw-bone, dryed and pined away for want of moiſture.

Verſe 31. My harp alſo is turned to mourning] All the dayes of the afflicted are evil, Prov. 15.15. his Harps are hanged up, his Lute no longer ſo but for melancholy airs; his Song nothing but Lachryma, doleful ditties: his Organs, and all thoſe inſtruments that were wont to divert him, are condemned either to ſigh or to be ſilent. Gilimer, overcome and beſieged by Beliſarius, ſent to requeſt of him three things, 1. a loaf to eaſe his hunger, 2. a harp to eaſe his grief, 3. a ſponge to dry up his tears. Such mournful Muſick was Jobs, if any at all. Intempeſtiva in luctu Muſica Eccluſ. 22.6. ὡς ᾠδὴ καιρὸς τοῖς λυπουμένοις ὡς λύρα ἐν οἴκῳ πενθοῦντος. Sophocl. Val. Max. Chr. pag. 262

CHAP.

CAAP. XXXI.

Verſe 1. I made a covenant with mine eyes]

THis Chapter, as it is one of the largeſt in all the book, ſo it is elegant, various, and very full of matter: for it ſhewes us, as in a mirrour, both what we ſhould do, and what we ſhould not do. Good Melanchthon, about the beginning of the Reformation, mournfully complained, Quos fugiamus habemus; quos ſequamur non intelligimus: We have whom to flie from, (meaning the Papiſts,) but whom to follow, we yet underſtand not, (by reaſon of the many diviſions among Proteſtants.) But here we may be at a better certainty; by treading in Jobs footſteps, and ſtriving to expreſs him to the world: who againſt all the cavils and calumnies of his foe-friends, makes it out here, that he is no hypocrite or flagitious perſon (as they falſely charged him,) but a man fearing God, and eſchewing evil, chap. 1. 1. Let therefore as many as would be perfect, be thus minded; and thus mannered: propounding to themſelves the higheſt pitch, and the beſt patterns; reſolving to reſemble them as much as may be. Here we have Jobs holy care to flie fornication as a deadly evil; by avoiding the occaſion, by taking bonds of his ſenſes, and by doing all he could to be out of the way, when the temptation came. Auſtin thanks God that the temptation and his heart met not. Job would prevent that miſchief, by laying lawes upon his eyes, thoſe windows of wickedneſs, and loop-holes of luſt, the very door and bait of all evil concupiſcence, Mat. 5. 29. 1 Joh. 2. 16. that fleſh-pleaſing luſt, that neſt-egge of the Devil, (as One wittily calleth it) that eldeſt child of old Adams ſtrength, bearing name of the Mother, which is called in general, Luſt, or Concupiſcence. Now that Job might not luſt, he would not look on a forbidden object: for he knew that wanton glances cauſe contemplative wickedneſs; ſuch as will ſoon break out into foul practiſes: as ill humours in the body, do into ſores and botches.

ἐκ γὰρ ὄψεως γίνεται τὸ ἔρως. Ut vidi, ut perii! — oculi ſunt in amore duces.

Why then ſhould I think upon a Maid?] Contemplarer in virginem; Luſtfully conſider her beauty, till my heart be hot as an oven with lawleſs luſts, and my body be moyled with that abominable filth. For unbrideled luſt, like the wild figge, will ſoon mount over the wall: and thoſe baſe, vain wanton, capering thoughts will break out, if not timely ſuppreſſed: if we handle them not roughly at the door (as Eliſha ſaid) their maſters feet will not be far behind them. Quell them therefore and cruſh them in the egge: it is not ſafe being at Satans meſs, though our ſpoon be never ſo long; remember, that of looking comes thinking; and of thinking, worſe. Look upon the woful chain of Davids luſt, and remember how many have died of the wound in the eye. The Baſilisk ſlayeth with his ſight. Circe will enchant all that behold her. Irregular glancing, or inordinate gazing, is that which metamorphoſeth a man into a beaſt, and makes him a prey to his own brutiſh affections. Hence David prayeth, Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity, Pſal. 119. 37. Job here ſteppeth one degree further, from a prayer to a vow; yea, from a vow to an imprecation, verſe 7. That his eyes ſhould be eyes of Adamant, that will turn only to one point; that he would not look but where he might lawfully like. Saints have a ſingle eye (and contrariwiſe the wicked, Hoſ. 3. 1.) like that Perſian Lady, who being at the marriage of Cyrus, and afterwards asked how ſhe liked the bridegroom? How? ſaid ſhe: I know not: I ſaw no body but my husband. Charles 5 uſed to clap to his caſement: and the young Lord Harrington to pull his Hat over his eyes, when fair Ladies paſſed along.

Verſe 2. For what portion of God is there from above?] What? but a portion with the Devil, and hypocrites? The unjuſt are reſerved unto the day of judgement to be puniſhed, ſaith Peter; but chiefly, they that walk after the fleſh, in the luſt of uncleanneſs, 2 Pet. 2. 9, 10. Such ſhall have a ſpecialty of puniſhment, even the hotteſt fire in hell: And hereby Job frighted his Conſcience from this foul ſin; and well he might: did men but conſider what ſin would coſt them, they durſt not but be innocent; but the hope of impunity hardeneth them, and ſo haſteneth their deſtruction.

on. Hac, quamquam fœnâ, semper usus est antiquus ille serpens, this hope, as a Bawd, that old man-slayer, hath ever made use of, to allure men into wickedness. But set the threats of Gods Word (such as are 1 Cor. 6. 9. Heb. 13. 3. Ephes. 5. 3.) against this sin, and the sin is laid. Satan can no more abide by it, than an Owle by the shining of the Sun. A man will be loth to fetch Gold out of a fiery crucible. Merlin.

Or, What inheritance of the Almighty from on high?] God, and Almighty, and from above, and from on high. By all these expressions, Job affecteth himself with the due apprehension of the divine Majesty, that he may be wise, and beware how he fall into the punishing hands of this living God. The Lord your God, saith Moses to the people, is God of gods, and Lord of lords; a great God, a mighty and a terrible, &c. Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your hearts; cut off and cast away that filthy foreskin, shave your eye-brows, (as the Leper was to do,) pull out your right eyes, &c. So Joshua, God, saith he, is an holy God, he is a jealous God, he will not forgive your transgressions, nor your sins; sc. unless you will part with them, though never so dear or delicious, chap. 24. 19. Deut. 10. 16, 17.

Verse 3. Is not destruction to the wicked?) Yes; that's their portion, their inheritance; and so Job makes answer to his own question proposed in the verse aforegoing. The ruine of impure souls is infallible, unsupportable, unavoidable: if God hath aversion from all other sinners, he hath hatred and horrour for the unchast: such stinking goates shall be set on the left hand, and sent to hell, where they shall have so much the more of punishment, as they had here of sensual and sinful pleasure, as sowre sawce to their sweet meats, Rev. 18. 7. Not to speak of the miseries they meet with here, which are not a few: in their souls, hardness of heart, or horrour of conscience: in their bodies, foul and lothsome diseases; such as will stick to them, when their best friends forsake them: in their names, indeleble reproach and infamy; like an iron-mole which nothing can fetch out; like the Leprosie which could never be scraped out of the walls: in their estates, poverty, even to a piece of bread, Prov. 6. 26. Harlots are Pecuniummia, Crumenimulgæ; fuck-purses, Luk. 15. 14. In their posterity; as Jericho was built, so is uncleanness plagued, both in the child and gonorsey. It goes through the race, till it have wasted all.

Carpat, apes, anorem, famem, vim, lumina, scortum
Debilitat, perdit, necat, aufert, stupris, urbat.

And a strange punishment to the workers of iniquity?] Even such as is unusual and extraordinary, as upon the Sodomites, who going after strange flesh, were thrown forth for an example, as Jude hath it, verse 7. So those Benjamites, Judg. 20. the Trojans, the Lacedemonians at Lenctra, Timur and Cushi: Zedekiah and Ahab, Jer. 29. 22. Elies two sons; Heraclius the Emperour, Muleasses King of Tunis in Barbary, bereft by his own son Amida (another Absalom) not of his Kingdom only, but of his eyes too, put out with a burning basason: those eyes of his, that had been full of adultery, and could not cease from sin. In Hebrew, the same word signifieth both an eye and a fountain, to shew, saith One, that from the eye, as a fountain, floweth both sin and misery.

Verse 4. Doth he not see my ways, and count, &c?] Yes, sure he doth so; and the conscience of Gods Omniscience, who would soon take him tripping, kept him from this great wickedness. So it did Joseph, but so it did not David, who is therefore said to despise God and his commandment (2 Sam. 12. 9, 10.), to do evil in his sight; and this was no small aggravation of his offence. Ne peccet, Deum ipse videns. I have seen the lewdness of thy whoredoms, Jer. 13. 27. Even I know, and am a witness, saith the Lord, Jer. 29. 23. That should be a powerful restraint from vice, Prov. 5. 21.

And count all my steps?] Doth not he cipher them up? Hebens omnia in numerato; not my ways only, my counsels and cogitations, but my steps also, that is, all mine outward attempts and actions. A most needful, and yet little considered truth, to keep men within the compass of obedience. See this doctrine of Gods foreseeing providence plainly and plentifully set forth, Psal. 139. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Verse 5. If I have walked with vanity] As they do who disquiet themselves in vain; vain, in heaping up riches by evil arts, by deceits and covin in bargaining, by getting other mens means fraudulently, &c. The getting of treasures by an evil tongue, (or any the like indirect course) is a vanity tossed to and fro of them that seek death, Prov. 21.6. Eventually such do seek death, though not intentionally; they spin a fair thred to strangle themselves, both temporally and eternally. Such vain and vile wayes therefore Job carefully declined; for he knew them to be both base and bootless. Ephraim fed upon the wind, the balances of deceit were in his hand: if thereby he filled his purse with coyn, yet he had emptiness in his soul: Lucrum in arca, damnum in conscientia: filled he was with aire, and that aire was pestilential too; his breath and death he drew in together: Job would none of that.

Furtum à Virg. vocatur inane. Æneid. 6.

Or if my foot hath hasted to deceit] If I have been nimble and active to go beyond and defraud another in any matter, 1 Thess. 4.6. which, what is it else, but crimen stellionatus, the very sin of cozenage? and this not only acted, but acted after long trading in it, as the words of walking and hasting seem to import?

Verse 6. Let me be weighed in an even balance] Heb. Let him weigh me. Examinet me, saith Tremellius. David with the like confidence, Search me, O God, saith he, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: and see if there be any wicked way in me, any course of sin (that is grievous to God or man) wherein I have walked, or my foot hath hasted. Job would not rest in his own hearts applause; neither would he be borne down by his friends false charges: but puts himself into Gods hands to be weighed, and then makes no question, but his present sufferings will be found heavier than his former miscarriages, in his inter-dealings with men for matter of gain: and that there is some other cause (though what he knoweth not) for which God doth so grievously afflict him. See David doing the like, Psal. 7. 4. & 26. 2.

That God may know mine integrity], i.e. That he may make known mine innocency and upright-heartedness in this particular of commerce with others, that I have not dealt deceitfully. Otherwise, if God should weigh the best that are in a balance, they would be found too light: if he mark iniquities, no man living can be justified, Psal. 130. 3. & 143. 2. If he turn up the bottom of the Bag, all our secret thefts will out, and come to reckoning. It is an idle conceit of some ignorant folk, That God will weigh their good deeds against their bad: and they shall well enough set off with him by the one for the other. This they have drawn (as they have not a few other fopperies) from that practise of Popish Priests, to perswade people, that when men are at point of death, St. Michael the Archangel bringeth a pair of balances, and putteth in one scale their good works, and in the other their sins; and that if those weigh down these, they are saved: as if otherwise, they are damned. But what saith an Ancient, Væ hominum vitæ etiamsi laudabilis, &c. Woe to the best man alive, if God should weigh him in a balance of justice: such his sins would be found heavier than the sands of the Sea, Job 9.15. & 10.15.

Verse 7. If my step hath turned out of the way] &c. Of justice and equity, in trading and trucking to get the Mammon of unrighteousness. No: the Sun might sooner be turned out of his course, (as it was once said of Fabricius) than Job out of the track of truth and honesty. He had laid laws upon his feet, his eyes, and his hands too: binding them all to the good behaviour: Witness the next words.

And mine heart walked after mine eyes] As it doth too often to the coveting of other mens Goods, which St. John calleth, the lust of the eyes, 1 Epist. 2. 16. Alexander the Great called the Persian Maids, Dolores oculorum, the griefs of the eyes. The wedge of Gold and Babylonish Garment proved to be so to covetous Achan, Josh. 7. 21. and Naboth's Vineyard to that Non-such Ahab, 1 King. 21. 2. He was even sick of it, and could not be cured but by a Sallet out of it. Hence the law flatly forbiddeth men to go after the sight of their eyes, and the lust of their hearts: for these are seldom findred, Numb. 15. 39. Eccles. 11. 9. Unruly eyes, like Jacob's sheep, 106 firmly fixed on unlawful objects, make the affections bring forth spotted fruit. Job would therefore set a guard upon them, lest they should prove brokers to make ends to the heart: as that hang-by Hiram the Adullamite was to Judah, Gen. 38. 20. There is an easie passage for evil through the eyes into the heart, saith Aristotle.

Oculus & cur sus pronuncia peccati. Hebr. Proverb.

And

And if any blot hath cleaved to my hands] If I have been fingering that which was not fit for me to meddle with; viz. evil-gotten goods, whether by bribery, usury, deceit, or the like; the very touching whereof will blot and benumb the hands, as Pliny writeth of the fish Torpedo; and as scholers know, that Demosthenes (a great Lawyer) by poizing Harpalus his goblet, was tempted and swayed to favour his Cause, to the great danger of his Countrey, and his own indeleble infamy.

Verse 8. Then let me sow, and another eate] God loves to retaliate: and let him do so to me, according to that he hath threatned, Deut. 28. 30. &c. and as he executed upon Laban, Nabal, Saul, Haman, others. The Greeks have a Proverb, Ἄλλοι μὲν σπείρεσι ἄλλοι δ' ἂν ἀμήσονται.

Some sow that which others reape. This Job wisheth may befal, if he had been oppressive and injurious; as Eliphaz had wrongfully accused him, chap. 22. 6.

Yea, let my Off-spring be rooted out] Or, Let that which I have planted, be pluckt up by the roots. It is commonly seen, that oppressours and unconscionable persons procure their own ruth and ruine: and he that gathereth the fruits of another mans tree, pulleth his own up by the roots.

Οἱ ἀνῳκισμένοι τύχοι ἀνὴρ, ἄλλῳ κατὰ τέρχεν.

They who spoyle houses which they builded not, Job 20. 19. shall, when they cease to spoile, be made a spoile: and when they have made an end of dealing treacherously, be treacherously dealt with themselves, Isaiah, 33. 1.

Verse 9. If my heart hath been deceived by a woman] By a shee-sinner, as they call such, a strange woman, (as the Scripture) whose lips are snares, whose hands are bands, whose words are cords to draw a man in, as an Ox to the slaughter, Prov. 7. 21. whose face is as a glass, wherein whiles larks gaze, they are taken in a day-net. Here Job disavoweth and disclaimeth the sin of Adultery, (purging himself as it were by Oath) as before he had done of fornication, and of wrong-dealing. These sins he reckoneth up, either as they came to minde; or else in such order as men are many times tempted to them. Young people are prone to fornication: Job, when young, had kept himself clear from that iniquity. When men have got some yeares over their heads, and are entred into the world (as they call it) they usually grow greedy and gripple: they are set upon't, and will be rich, however they come by it. Job was none such neither, verse 5. 7. Afterwards, when married, they are sick of a Plurisie: and as the Devil, who sets them a work, they long to be sowing another mans ground, Matth. 13. 25. The temptation to fornication is strong, but to adultery stronger: God doth often punish fornication, unrepented of, with strong and vexing honings and hankerings after strange flesh. But Job either was never troubled in this kinde; or else when the temptation came, he was sure to be ever out of the way. The Devils fire fell upon wet tinder: and if he knockt at Jobs door, there was no body at home to look out at the window and let him in: for he considered the punishment both humane, verse 11. and divine, verse 12. due to this great wickedness.

Or if I have laid wait at my neighbours door] Either as waiting the opportunity of his absence, as Prov. 7. 19. or as insinuating my self into her familiarity, whiles she was standing in her door. Of the Italian Women, one giveth this Character; That though witty in speech, and modest in outward appearance, yet they are Magpies at the door, Goats in the garden, Devils in the house, Angels in the streets, and Syrens in the windows: Jobs heart was not deceived by any such: neither sought he to defraud his brother in any such matter, 1 Thess. 4. 5, 6. See the Note on Job, 8. 4.

Verse 10. Then let my wife grind unto another] i. e. Let her be his slave, as Lam. 5. 13. Exod. 11. 5. Matth. 24. 41. Or rather, let her be his Whore: and may my my ſin, which hath ſerved her for example, ſerve her alſo for excuſe. Not that Job would hereby licenſe his wife to commit filthineſs (as thoſe Lituanians, who have their Connubii adjutores, coadjutors in wedlock, and prize them far above all their acquaintance, as Maginus relateth: and as ſome wittals amongſt us, pandars to their own beds, who either for gain, or for a quiet life, wink at their wives diſloyalty; and, as Wood-culvers, or ſilly Hedg-ſparrows, hatch and bring up that which Cuckow's lay in their neſts) but to ſet forth by this horrible imprecation, how extreamly he abhorred the ſin of Adultery.

And let others bow down upon her] A clean expreſſion of an unclean act. Some Barborologi podicem ex ore faciunt, being like Ducks that ever have their noſes puddling in puddles: ſic hi ſpurcitias Veneris eliminant; delight in ribaldry, and obſcene language; as did Proculus the Emperour, and before him, that beaſt Tiberius. Theſe are to be avoided as Peſts and botches of humane ſociety. So alſo are Stage-playes for that very cauſe, as the Brothels of bawdery, the corrupters of youth, the canker of the Common-wealth, as Plato, an heathen, complained; Filthineſs and fornication ſhould not be once named among Chriſtians, Epheſ. 5. 3. Groves were flatly forbidden by God to be planted near the places of his Worſhip; in deteſtation of that heatheniſh cuſtome of Priapus his worſhippers, promiſcuouſly ſatisfying their luſts in a thicket, after they had ſacrificed; thereby, as they conceived, beſt pleaſing their god.

Verſe 11. For this is an heinous crime] Hoc enim grande flagitium eſt; ſo the Tigurines tranſlate: For this is a wickedneſs with a witneſs, though counted by ſome a light offence, a peccadillo. The Popiſh Prieſts, deeply guilty of it themſelves, ſeldom cryed out againſt it in their Sermons: this the great ones, and others, obſerved; and therefore ran into it, as if it had been a venial ſin, if any ſin at all. But we have not ſo learned Chriſt: and there was once found an Engliſh Biſhop, (Adelm, Elect Biſhop of Sherborn, anno 705.) who boldly and ſharply reproved Pope Sergius to his face for this foul ſin. Joſeph calleth it a great wickedneſs, Gen. 39. 9. becauſe a breach of the bond of loyalty, which cannot but be treachery: as alſo becauſe it deſtroyes ſociety, and the purity of poſterity, ſtealing ſometimes an heir into the eſtate, &c.

Godwin. Catal. pag. 333.

Yea, it is an iniquity to be puniſhed by the Judges] Sith it is a theft of that which is moſt precious and moſt peculiar to the owner; as Joſeph told his Miſtreſs, Gen. 39. the ſuſpicion or jealouſie of it, raiſeth the rage of a man to ſuch an height, that it will not be allayed without revenge, Prov. 6. 34, 35. Some render it, iniquitas judicata, an iniquity already adjudged capital. The Hebrew hath it, an iniquity of the Judges; that is, That which Judges ſhould ſeverely puniſh. Before the Law Tamar was to have been burnt for it, Gen. 38. 24. as under the Law the High-Prieſts daughter, Levit. 21. 9. Ahab and Zedekiah were roſted in the fire for this offence, by Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon, Jer. 29. 22, 23. Some think that theſe two were the Elders that aſſaulted Suſanna. The Egyptians cut off the Harlots noſe, and the Adulterers members. The Locrians pulled out their eyes. The Julian Law among the Romans, adjudged them to dye; and Hierom ſaith, this Law was yet in force in his time; but the Poet complaineth, that for want of due execution, it lay dormant, as many other good Lawes do by the baſeneſſe and partiality of the Judges: Such as were thoſe Athenian Judges, who having before them Phryne that notable Strumpet, were about to paſſe ſentence of death upon her; but when her Advocate Hyperides had opened her boſom, and ſhewed them her beautiful breſts to move them to mercy, they acquitted her, and let her go. In like ſort alſo they dealt with the Dame of Smyrna, whom they appointed to appear ſome hundred years after. How much better the old Saxons, who whilſt they were yet heathens, made a Law (and ſaw it well executed) that the Adultereſs ſhould be firſt ſtrangled, and then burnt in a bonfire, over which the Adulterer was to be hanged in chaines, and burnt to death by degrees? And of another Heathen people we read, that they put the Adulterers and Adultereſſes heads into the paunch of a beaſt, where all the filth lyeth, and ſo ſtifled them to death.

God will judge, Heb. 13.3. ſhutting them out of heaven, Rev. 22.15. (for what ſhould any ſuch dirty dog do trampling on that golden pavement?) and thruſting them into hell, as he did the filthy Sodomites, Jude 7. beſide that hell above-ground which he rained from heaven, upon them, hot fire for their burning luſts, and ſtinking brimſtone for their ſtinking brutiſhneſſe. How God ſignally puniſhed this ſin in Charles 2 King of Navarre, roaſting him to death. See my Note on Gen. 19.24. Joane of Naples alſo, and Mary of Arragon, wife to the Emperour Otho the third, burnt at a ſtake, are ſet upon Record as inſtances of the divine diſpleaſure againſt Adultery, a fire which burns hearts, and conſumes houſes.

And would root out all mine increaſe] Leaving me nothing, as a devouring fire burnes up men, cattle, houſes, corn, trees, &c. So doth this ſin all a mans income, baring him to the very bones, and exhauſting him to the utmoſt: So that like Tiberius at Caprea, he doth indies perire, which is a bitterneſſe beyond that of death, Eccleſ. 7.26. Or like Samſon, befooled and bereft of all by Dalilah, who had not her name for naught, for it comes from Dalal, to exhauſt and impoveriſh. And indeed ſuch kind of creatures do ordinarily drain the ſtrength, exhauſt the purſes, dry up the credit, waſte and conſume the All of the mightieſt Samſons. Beſides, the loſs of their immortal ſouls, and perpetual ſhame at the laſt day, (when all their faults ſhall be written in their foreheads) unleſſe the matter be taken up in the Judges privy Chamber of mercy; and unleſſe, by timely repentance, courſe be taken to ſtop his open judicial proceeding in Court.

Verſe 13. If I did deſpiſe the cauſe of my man ſervant, &c.] Servants of old (among the Heathen eſpecially) were mere ſlaves to their Maſters according to the fleſh, who had power to uſe them at their pleaſure, as they did their cattle. A ſervant (ſaith Ariſtotle) is the Maſters Inſtrument, and wholly his. He might do what he would to them, ſaith Seneca, even to the taking away of their lives, without danger of Law. But Job held with the ſame Seneca, That Poſſe & nolle nobile eſt; and that in ſome caſes, Nimis anguſta innocentia eſt, ad legem bonum eſſe; That utmoſt right is utmoſt wrong; and that there will come an after reckoning, the forethought whereof awed him, and ſwayed him to do his ſervants right, when he might have oppreſſed them, and tyrannized over them; as now the Turks do over their Gally-ſlaves. Of Archbiſhop Cranmer it is recorded, that he never raged ſo far with any of his houſehold-ſervants, as once to call the meaneſt of them Varlet or Knave in anger. Tremellius, who was for a time entertained in his houſe, ſaith of it, That it was, Schola vel Palæſtra pietatis & literarum. A School or Nurſery of Piety and Learning. And therefore what wonder that there was ſo good accord betwixt him and his family, when there was ſo careful a performance of Domeſtical duties, and he was not a better man then a Maſter? Think the ſame of Job, Diſcontents might fall out in his houſe, and complaints might be made, which he heard with patience, and then ſet all to rights again, taking courſe that he might be both loved and feared by all about him.

Verſe 14. What then ſhall I do when God riſeth up, &c.] Job conſidered, That himſelf had a Maſter in heaven, Col. 4.1. That there is One higher then the higheſt, Eccleſ. 5 8. with whom there is no reſpect of perſons, but wherein ſoever any deal proudly, God is above them. Exod. 18.11. Theſe and the like humbling conſiderations, and not any placability or natural courteouſneſſe, made him deale thus fairely and kindly with his ſervants; how much more then with his wife and children, &c?

And when he viſiteth, what ſhall I anſwer?] Job looked to be viſited, and called to an account of his houſhold Government. It is a good ſaying of an Heathen, Ita vivamus, &c. Let us ſo live, as thoſe that muſt render an account of all we do. And that which the Ruffian in Seneca ſcoffeth at in the ſober young man, is true of the godly in a ſenſe more divine, Ita laborat, ita ludit, ita cœnat, ita potat, ita loquitur, ita vivit, ut qui Ephemeridas patris eſt approbaturus: that is, He ſo laboureth, ſo ſporteth, ſo eateth, ſo drinketh, ſo ſpeaketh, ſo liveth, as he that muſt approve his day-books to his father. Job was not to learn, that there is a way of upright walking in our houſes, ſo as God will come to us, if our houſes be rightly ordered, Pſal. 101.2. and we ſhall look him in the face with comfort; for it is called there a perfect way, in oppoſition to hypocriſie. Now uprightneſſe hath boldneſſe.

Cic. 4. in Verr.

Ver. 15. Did not he that made me in the womb, make him?] In which regard, have not we all one Father, and hath not one God created us? Mal. 2. 10. Is it not he who formeth and ſhapeth us, and all by the Book, Pſal. 139. 16. We are all of all ſorts, in this reſpect, (whether Kings or Caitiffs, Lords or Loſels) made of the ſame mould, hewen out of the ſame Rock, digged out of the ſame pit, cut out of the ſame piece, the ſhears only going between, as they ſay. Thus for our bodies, and for our better part; is not the meaneſt made in Gods image, and as capable of heaven, if God pleaſe, as the greateſt? In the Law, the ſervant paid the half ſhekle, as well as the Maſter. And in Chriſt Jeſus, as there is neither Jew nor Greek, ſo neither bond nor free, Gal. 3. 28. Truth it is, God hath made theſe diſtinctions and degrees amongſt men, but himſelf is no reſpecter of perſons. He acknowledgeth no faces (ſo the Hebrew expreſſeth it.) He taketh no notice of any mans outward condition, as Countrey, Sex, Wiſdom, Wealth, Dignity, &c. Theſe neither pleaſe God, nor diſpleaſe him, but as they are in a good or bad man: as a Cypher by it ſelf is nothing without a figure before it. This reaſon wrought with Job, and ſhould do doubtleſſe, with all Superiours, to bring them to a moderation. Why ſhould a poor man be ſlighted or brow-beaten? Is he not Gods handy work alſo? Was he not made in ſecret, and curiouſly wrought in the loweſt parts of the earth, Pſal. 139. 15. that is, in his mothers womb, as it followeth, Aptè & concinnè elaboravit. Vatab. Servus ſuus δοῦλος & οἰκέτης domini ſui eſt.

And did not one (that is God) faſhion (Heb. apt or fit) us in the womb?] Quum fortuna, non natura eos fecerit ſervos, cur, propter fortunam, eos contemptiores habuiſſem? For as much as not nature, but providence hath made them my ſervants, why ſhould I for that cauſe deale hardly with them: and not rather favour them the more, for our common condition of birth and death, and coming to Judgment?

Verſe 16. If I have with-held the poor from their deſire] The poor man ſpeaketh ſupplications, he comes to the rich with his God help me, as Lazarus did, Luke 16. (his very name ſpeaks as much) but the rich anſwereth him roughly, Prov. 18. 23. Either the anſwer cutteth off half the petition, as the eccho doth the voice: or elſe he is commanded ad quercum dicere, to tell his tale to the Statues and Images, as Diogenes uſed to do; for of living men he could get no hearing. But Jobs ſuitors ſped better. Pennyleſſe they were, but not friendleſſe: Drawn dry (as the Hebrew word importeth) and ſuch as whoſe wealth was utterly waſted; but Job ſhored them up and ſupplied them. And this he did readily, and at the firſt asking, they no ſooner deſired relief, but they had it. Job was a cheerful giver, he neither denyed nor delayed thoſe that came to him for relief or refuge. Multi contrà ſtudioſè cauſas inquirunt quibus ſe à benefaciendo cohibeant. Many ſeek occaſion to put off poor people, and to rid their hands of them. Merlin.

Mercer. Or have cauſed the eyes of the widow to fail] Viduæ ſæpe ſunt verecundæ. Widowes many times are modeſt, their eys are weakned with much weeping, whiles they remember their by-paſt comforts, and preſent croſſes. This good Job conſidered, and therefore ſoon condeſcended to their requeſts. He held it enough that their hearts aked, and would not ſuffer their eyes to ake with expecting his help, but ſpeedily ſped them.

Ἡ χήρεις ἡ βεβλάπτας ἄχαρις δὲ χάρις.

Verſe 17 Or have eaten my morſel my ſelf alone] As that churle Nabal did, and therefore merited the title of Pamphagus. Many rich wretches are like little children, who though they have their mouthes full of meat, and both their hands full, yet wil part with none to another, but rather mar it. The richer they are, the harder, as Dives; whom to upbraid, Lazarus was laid in the boſome of liberal Abraham, of whom it is recorded, that he ſat in the door of his Tent in the heat of the day (the uſual time of repoſe and repaſt) purpoſely to invite paſſengers, Gen. 18. 1. He purſued hoſpitality, as the Apoſtles expreſſion is, Rom 12. 13. and a very hearty houſe-holder he was. I think the ſame of Job, whoſe cup overflowed into other mens leſſer veſſels, as Pſ. 23. 5. neither did any thing he eat do him good without ſome good company to take part with him. Charity is no churle. Of a certain Biſhop of Lincoln it is ſtoried, fied, That he never thought he had that thing which he did not give. Hoc habeo quodcunque dedi, saith One: And another,

Quod nondum dederit, nondum se credit habere. Senec.

Quas dederis solas, semper habebis, opes. Martial.

And the fatherlesse hath not eaten thereof] These were his Fellow-Commoners, and the like is reported of Charles the Great, and of Bishop Hooper, who had his Board of Beggars, widowes and Ophans sent for to his Palace in Worcester, and served every day with whole and wholsome meats, ere himself sat down to dinner. Neither were these any losers by their liberality. The flowers hurt not their own fruit, though they yeeld honey to the painful Bee. The Sun loseth not light, though it lend it to the Moon. But as the Moon, the fuller she is of light, the further she gets from the Sun. And as the Sun moveth slowest when he is highest in the Zodiack; so are those farthest off from bounty, for the most part, who abound most in plenty. Your fattest men have the least blood, and your richest men do the least good. Whereas those that are rich in this world, should be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate to widowes and fatherlesse especially, sith those are Gods own Clyents. Act. & Mon. 1369. 1 Tim. 6. 17.

Verse 18. For from my youth he was brought up with me, &c.] i. e. Ever since I could do any thing, it hath been my delight to be doing good to the poor Orphans, whom I have tenderly bred, as a father useth to breed his children. Non est vulgare Dei donum, saith Mercer; This is no ordinary mercy, for men to be of a merciful disposition, and melting hearted toward the poor and necessitous, as some are naturally, and from the womb: Such are said to have been Artaxerxes Longimanus, Titus the Emperour, Otho the third, Steven King of Hungary, Oswald King of England, &c.

And I have guided her from my mothers womb] Ductavi illam, meaning the widow, or the Orphan, to whom I have been a manly guide, and that of a child little. See the Note aforegoing. Suttons Hospitals and many more Monuments of Charity in this kind are worthily alledged by some of our Divines, to prove that for their time and ability, Protestants have equalled and exceeded Papists in this way of good works. Jobs desire of doing good appeared betimes, as if it had been born with him: like as Plutarch writeth of Coriolanus, that he was so natural and expert a Souldier, that he might seem to have been born with his arms upon his back, and his weapons in his hands. ἐγγενῆ καὶ σύμφυτα.

Verse 19. If I have seen any perish for want of cloathing] Job was ad omnem humanitatem effectus atque confectus. This liberal man devised liberal things; and as he dealt his bread to the hungry, so when he saw the naked he covered him: he hid not himself from his own flesh, Isai. 58. 7. Giles of Brussels, and Mr. Wisehart the Scot are famous among the Martyrs for their charity in this kind. And so is Mr. Fox the Martyrologer, of whom it is reported, that as he gave away his horse at one time to a poor man, when he had no mony to give him: So at another, having bestowed his wives money in a petticoat, and meeting by the way home with a poor woman that wanted cloathing, he freely gave it her; telling his wife, that he had sent it to heaven before her. The poor mans belly is surely the best Cubberd, and his back the best Wardrobe; Ubi non pereunt, sed parturiunt, where they rot not, as those moth-eaten ones in Saint James, chap. 5. 2. but remain for ever. Great Alexander believed this far better then most amongst us, for when he had given away all almost, and his friends asked him, where it was? he pointed to the poor and said, In scriniis, in my chests. And when he was further asked, what he kept for himself? he answered, Spem majorum & meliorum, the hope of greater and better things. And another of his name, viz. Pope Alexander the fifth, was so liberal to the poor, that he left nothing to himself; so that he would merrily say, that he was a rich Bishop, a poor Cardinal, and a beggarly Pope. Ὡς ἔφασαν, It was wont to be said,

Pauperibus sua dat gratis, nec munera curat
Curia Papalis, quod modo percipimus. Heidfeld.

But this Distich must be read backwards, saith mine Author, thus, Percipimus modo quod quod Papalis, &c. This Pope Alexander then was a rare bird at Rome.

Or any poor without covering] Whether he craved it of me or not; if I did but see it, the poor creature was sure of it. The liberal man preventeth the poor and needy, Psal. 41. 1. Praeoccupat votum petituri, so Augustine expounds that Text. He stayes not till he is asked a good turn, but ministreth to the vses, not only to the necessities of the Saints, as the Apostles word is in the Original, Rom. 12. 13. So did Dr. Taylor Martyr, when he visited the Alms-house in his Parish once a fortnight to see what they lacked, and to supply them. And so did Mr. Fox, when unasked, he gave the poor woman the petticoat, as abovesaid.

In Psal. 103.

Τῶν χρειῶν.

Verse 20. If his loynes have not blessed me] As being warm-cloathed by me; not with a suit of words, as those great benefactors, Jam. 2. 15, 16. who were much in mouth mercy, which indeed is good cheap. But a little handful of Jobs wool, is much better then a mouthful of such airy courtesies, and would open more mouthes to blesse men: who now adayes (for most part) will be but as friends at a sneeze, the most you can get of them is, God blesse you. These have as many flouts and curses as Job had well wishes, and God thereby had praises; according to that of our Saviour, Matth. 5. 16.

And if he were not warmed with the fleece of my sheep] His sheep were his owne, else his charity had beene unwarrantable. Honour the Lord with thy substance, Prov. 3. 9. but see it be thine, and not anothers. He that hath a bountiful eye shall be blessed; for he giveth of his bread to the poor, Prov. 22. 9. specially if he have spared it out of his own belly to give to the hungry; if it were the bread of his own ementse, or allowance, as some interpret it.

Verse 21. If I have lift up my hand against the fatherlesse] That is, against any that are destitute of humane helps and defences. Such to ill treat and oppresse, is easie for great ones. See Gen. 50. 15, 16. &c. But where the true fear of God is, no such thing will be done. The Tigurines render, Si ministratus sum Orphano, &c. If I have lifted up my hand in threatning first, and then let it fall in striking and punishing the fatherless or friendless.

When I saw my help in the gate.] i.e. When by my greatnesse and grace with the people, I might have born out my worst miscarriages; when I might have had more then enow that would have defended, yea applauded me, as the Senate of Rome did Nero, even for his most malapert misdemeanors, and most horrid outrages.

Verse 22. Then let mine arm fall from the shoulder-blade] That unworthy arm of mine (as Cranmer cryed out of that unworthy right hand of his, which he therefore burnt first,) so injuriously lifted up against the fatherlesse, vers. 21. let it never be useful to me any more, but let me be punished with that wherewith I have sinned. God sometimes takes notice of the offending member: as in Jeroboams withered hand, Abimelechs head, which had stolne the Crown, Samsons eyes, the rich mans tongue, the Adultereresses thigh, Numb. 5. 27. This Job knew, and therefore subjoyneth this imprecation, Dirus se arvovens, thereby to clear himself from Eliphaz his false imputations, chap. 22. 6, 7. The like may be done by us, but sparingly, and not without great necessity, for the helping of the truth in necessity, lest if we do it falsely or rashly, God say, Amen, and set his Fiat to it; as he hath done in sundry instances in several ages: Witnesse Alexander the cruel keeper of New-gate, and his son in Law John Peter, who rotted above ground according to their wish. So Anne Averies, in Queene Elizabeths dayes: Sir Gervaise Elleways in King James his, hang'd on the Tower-hil, which he confest was just upon him, for that in Carding and Dicing he had often wished himself hanged, if it were not so and so.

Acts & Mon.

And mine arme be broken from the bone] Broken to shivers, as the word signifieth, and by the infamous hands of the hang-man, for a terrour to all false Judges, as some do sense it: Rumpar medius, saith Brentius, as Judas burst in the midst with a huge crack, Acts 1. 18. his guts gushing out; as did likewise Foxsords a great Persecutor in Henry the Eighths time. Some mens sinnes go before to judgement, God hanging them up, as it were, in Gibbets, that others may hear and fear, and do no more so.

Acts & Mon. 962.

Verse 23. For destruction from God was a terror to me] Such an eminent and exemplary plary calamity or misery, as is mentioned in the former verse, affrighted me from wrong-dealing. I foresaw the evil event of such practises, and therefore durst not venture. We may not fear the punishment only, and not the offence (for that's a servile fear, and hath torment:) Neither may we fear the punishment more then the offence. But to fear the punishment with the offence, the offence being feared in the first place, and most, this is incident to Saints, and commanded Matth 10.28.

And by reason of his highnesse (or excellency) I could not endure] Non prævalui-ssem, saith Tremellius. The Hebrew is, I could not; scil. Prevail or subsist. If there be no standing before a Lion, or bearing up sail before a tempest, why should any one think to contest with Omnipotency, to strive with his Maker, whom nothing can disarm or pacine, but an humble yeildance to his Justice in hope of mercy, with a resolution to fear before him continually, as the Scripture phraseth it?

Verse 24. If I have made gold my hope] If I have trusted in uncertain riches, and been high minded, as Paul expounds it, 1 Tim. 6 17. Holding my self simply the better or the safer for the wealth I have gotten. This is creature confidence, this is flat Idolatry, worse then that of the belly-god, who sacrificeth to his gut, but trusteth not to it. An Ancient complaineth (and not without cause) Divites facultatibus suis alligatos magis aurum consuevisse suspicere quam cœlum, That rich men mind Gold more then God; and money more then mercy. If wealth be wanting, they sit down in a faithless, sullen discontent and despaire; as if they have it, they rise up in a corky, frothy confidence that all shall go well with them. This Saint Paul calls Idolatry, Col. 3.5. Saint James, Adultery, chap. 4.4. and enmity with God, in a sense both Active and Passive; for it maketh a man both to hate God, and to be hated by God. Now who would buy Gold at so dear a rate?

The LXX read Si posui aurum in conjugium meum; signifying the covetous mans great love. Minut. Oct.

Or have said to the fine gold, Thou art my confidence] This the Mammonist speaketh, as if he were bowing before his golden god, whereunto, though he bow not the knee, yet with his heart he serveth it. (and Obedience is better then Sacrifice) and with his tongue he talketh to it, saying Thou art my confidence; if thou fail me, I must needs sink, and with all his might he makes after it, as if his life lay upon't, which yet our Saviour saith, doth not consist in the abundance of those things a man hath, Luke 12. 15. sith (as a ship) he may have enough to sink him, but not enough to satisfie him.

Verse 25. If I rejoyced because my wealth was great] Those that trust in it cannot but rejoyce in the increase of it; though in truth they do rather revel than rejoyce: for true joy is a severe thing, saith the Philosopher, and must have a better bottom, than these bona fcabelli, than corn, and wine, and outward substance, Psal. 4. 7. Job rejoyced not, though the world came tumbling in upon him, as we say. For he knew, he was but a weather-sheep, upon whom the shepherd had bestowed a Bell more than upon the rest of the flock: and therefore he would not cast his nose into the wind, and carry his crest the higher, for outward prosperity. If God should take what he had so graciously given, he would bear it not only patiently, but thankfully, and fruitfully, as he did chap. 1. 21. suffering with joy the spoiling of his Goods, as having in Heaven a more enduring substance, Hebrews 10. ver. 34.

And because mine hand had gotten much] Heb. Had found very much. This he speaketh in the worldlings language, who ascribe all they have to their own industry and good fortune: God is not in all their thoughts. But Job is of another spirit; and as for this sinful self-ascribing, he utterly detesteth and disavoweth it.

Per nimium verba avarorum imitatur. Lavat.

Verse 26. If I beheld the Sun when it shined] Viz. To adore it as the Persians did, and other heathens. The Egyptians had their Heliopolis, or City of the Sun: and the Canaanites their Timnath Heres, Judg. 2.9. Josh. 24. 30. that is, the figure of the Sun: so called, from the Idolatry there committed, in worshipping the Sun (though I know there is another reason given:) The Persians consecrated a Horse to the Sun; as the swiftest to the swiftest: and the idolatrous Israelites had their horses of the Sun, which Josiah took away. It is not amiss to behold the Sun, Moon, and Stars in their pomp and lustre. It is sweet, saith Solomon. Eccles. 11. 7. Comfortable, saith David, Psal. 97. 11. and useful in many respects, to minde us of our preſent beauty and ſafety, Rev. 12. 1. Pſal. 84. 11. and of our future felicity and glory, Matth 13. 46. Dan. 12. 3. but above all, of Chriſt that Sun of righteouſneſs, Star of Jacob, &c. But this we muſt do: not to worſhip them, as they of old did the Queen of Heaven, (and this is thought to be the ancienteſt idolatry in the world) nor to ſwear by them, as Matth. 5. 34. but to ſee and worſhip the Maker of them: which becauſe the blind Ethnicks did not, they were damned, Rom. 1. 19. Oh the, what will become of us, who ſee much more of God, by ſo clear a light, in that moltenook ing-glaſs, Job 37. 18?

Or the Moon walking in brightneſs] Heb. Bright or precious; that is, illightened with the precious light of the Sun, as when ſhe is at Full, and ſhineth like the fineſt Gold: and was therefore idolized by the Heathens, under the names of Phebe, Diana, &c. Of this Idolatry Job here purgeth himſelf; as he had done before of that other of Covetouſneſs.

Verſe 27. And my heart hath been ſecretly enticed] ſc. By the Devil, who is διαλοχαρδὸς, as ſaith Syneſius, a great promoter of Idolatry: and probably had tempted good Job to this ſin alſo; but was bravely repulſed. If I have done this ſecretly, ſaith he, that is, contrary to my open profeſſion of ſincere Religion: See Deut. 27. 10.

Or, my mouth hath kiſſed my hand] An action of Idolaters, who kiſſed their Idols that were preſent, 1 King. 19. 18. Hoſ. 13. 2. (as the Papiſts now do their Mawmets, even to the wearing of hardeſt marble) and to thoſe which were further from them, they held out their hand, and afterwards did put it to their mouth; as an acknowledgement that they had their life and breath from them, ſaith Diodate, as a ſigne of ſubjection, ſaith Piſcator, from Gen. 41. 40. Pſal. 2. 12. Kiſs the Sun, ſc. with a kiſs of homage, ſuch as wherewith Samuel kiſſed Saul, 1 Sam. 10. 1. And Plutarch ſaith, that not to all, but to ſome ſpecial Commanders in chief, and Captains General it was granted among the Romans, That the hand ſhould be kiſſed before them by way of honour: and this was called, adorare, quaſi applicare manum ad os, That ſaying of Bernard is worthy the inſerting, Qui in ſe, non in Domino gloriatur, manum ſuam oſculatur; He that glories in himſelf, and not in the Lord, kiſſeth his own hand, and is, interpretativè, an Idolater.

Plut. in Caton. Uticenſ.

Verſe 28. This alſo were an iniquity to be puniſhed by the Judge] No leſs than Adultery, but rather more. This alſo is iniquitas judiciaria, a God-provoking, Land-deſolating ſin, a wickedneſs with a witneſs, a capital crime: ſee verſe 11. and take notice how theſe foule ſins ſwell in Jobs eyes as ſo many toads: and how full in the mouth he is in ſpeaking of them.

For I ſhould have denyed the God that is above] Far above any of theſe deaſtri gentium, even the moſt high God, Gen. 14. 18. 22. I ſhould rob the Maſter, to give to the ſervant: aſcribe that to the creature, which is due only to the Creator: this he will by no meanes endure. For, be the gods of the Heathens good-fellows, ſaith One; the true God is a jealous God, and will not ſhare his Glory with another.

Verſe 29. If I rejoyced at the deſtruction of him that hated me] If I rejoyced at his ruine, or fed my thoughts with his fall. Fleſh and blood would have taught him ſo to do; there being nothing more natural to us than revenge: as we ſee in little ones. Heathens commended it for manhood, and held it out as ſweeter than life it ſelf.

Ariſt. Rhet. c. 1. lib. 9.

At vindicta bonum vitâ jucundius ipſâ.

Howbeit ſome Heathens profeſſed againſt it, as Seneca; Immane verbum eſt ultio, ſaith he; Revenge is unmanly, both word and thing. And, Qui ulciſcitur excuſatius peccat; he that avengeth himſelf, ſinneth, though he hath ſome colour for his ſin. Socrates is famous for forgiving of injuries: and Julius Caſar, when he had Pompey's head preſented to him, wept, and ſaid, I ſought not revenge, but victory. Both Law and Goſpel forbids revenge: and Job, who lived before both, obeyed both; as here appeareth. Enemies he had, but he hated them not. That of Solomon was his practiſe, Rejoyce not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he ſtumbleth, &c. Prov. 24. 17, 18. See the Note there.

Non mihi placet vindicta, ſed victoria.

Or

Or lift up my ſelf, when evil found him] Sin will find men out ſooner, or later; Nemeſis ſemper à tergo; and they called her Ἀδράστεια, becauſe unavoidable. Men may ſhuffle from ſide to ſide, as Balaams Aſs did; but there's no eſcaping this puniſhing Angel. God will purſue wicked men to deſtroy them, till ſuch time as they throw the Traytors head over the wall. Now, good Job had put over his enemies to God, that he might order them, (which alſo he did) and therein did himſelf no diſſervice. But how did Job deport himſelf toward them in this caſe? Did he lift up himſelf and inſult? Did he beſtir himſelf, (as Broughton here elegantly tranſlateth) and was he well apaid? Nothing leſs.

Verſe 30. Neither have I ſuffered my mouth to ſin] Heb. My palat; which is one of the nine inſtruments of ſpeech. I have not ſo much as broken out into any paſſionate word againſt him: but when I was raging ripe, I refrained, and forbore boiſterous and bluſtering expreſſions, whereby ſome would have vented their choler in ſuch a caſe. Nothing is more eaſie and ordinary than to curſe an enemy; by prayer at leaſt to turn him over to God to be puniſhed; as David did Nabal, and it was ſoon done. But Job, out of private revenge, durſt not do this, whatever David did out of a zeal of Gods glory, which wicked men ſought to deface.

By wiſhing a Curſe to his Soul] Heb. By asking his life by a Curſe. Job knew that curſing men, are curſed men, Pſal. 109. 18. If the Prophets curſed their enemies at any time, as Eliſha did the Children at Bethel, and David oft in the Pſalmes, it was not livore vindictæ, ſed zelo juſtitiæ; not out of a vindictive ſpirit, but by the inſtinct of Gods holy ſpirit, and out of zeal for Gods glory. Our rule is, Bleſs them that perſecute you; bleſs and curſe not, Rom. 12. 14. Render not evil for evil, or rayling for rayling; but contrariwiſe bleſs, knowing that we are thereunto called, that we ſhould inherit a bleſſing, 1 Pet. 3. 9. Epiphanius and Chryſoſtom falling out about Origens writings, wiſhed a curſe to one another; and it fell out accordingly; the one died ere he came home, and the other was unbiſhoped. Gorran.

Verſe 31. If the men of my tabernacle ſaid not] Contubernales, ſive domeſtici; thoſe of my family and familiarity. A man is to take heed of the iniquity of his heels, that is, of his followers and attendants at the heels, as ſome ſenſe that text, Pſal. 49. 5. for theſe will be apt enough to put a man upon courſes of revenge, as they dealt by David, 1 Sam. 24. 4. and 26. 8. 2 Sam. 16. 9. and by the ſon of David, Luke 9. 54. And thus Iſidor, Cajetan, and others, interprete theſe words, as if they were added to the former verſ. 29, 30. further to commend Jobs love to thoſe that hated him. For although he were put on by his domeſticks, who ſeeing their Maſter deſpitefully uſed, would have torn thoſe his enemies in pieces: yet he was not moved thereby, but contained and kept them in from ſuch violence. Beza thus paraphraſeth this text, And yet I proteſt that I wanted not ſetters on, even amongſt mine own houſhold ſervants, who ſtill perſwaded me to requite thoſe injuries which I received with moſt bitter revenge: nay, their minds were ſo inconſed, that they cryed out, That they ſhould never be ſatisfied on them, no not though they had eaten them up quick.

Oh that we had of his fleſh!] So barbarous and bruitiſh is revenge. Eraſmus telleth of a Frier Auguſtine of Antwerp; that he openly in the Pulpit wiſhed that Luther were there, that he might bite out his throat with his teeth. I can hardly forbear with theſe nailes of mine to be thy death, ſaid Frier Bruſierd to Bilney the Martyr. At the town of Barre in France, the Italians, in hatred of Lutheraniſme, brake forth into ſuch fury, that they ript up a living child, took out his Liver, being as yet red hot, and eat it as meat. Chriſtiern King of Denmark pulled the dead body of his Enemy Steven, the Swediſh General, out of the grave, inſitataque rabie dentibus adpetiit, and like a mad dog, tore it with his teeth. The Jewes, in Trajans time, having one Andrew for their Captain, cut in pieces about Cyrene, many Greeks and Romans, eating their fleſh, beſmearing themſelves with their blood, and clothing themſelves with their skins. The like they did alſo about Cyprus, and in Egypt, to the ſlaughtering of above four hundred thouſand people. Tacitus noteth of the Jewes in general, that they are very kind among themſelves, but contra omnes alios hoſtile odium, againſt all others they bear hoſtile hatred. Homo homini deus. See Pſal. 27. 2. Epiſt. lib. 16. ad obtrectat. Acts & Mon. fol. 914. Ibid. 1951. *Val. We cannot be ſatisfied] But with his heart blood. It is as eaſie to quench the fire of Ætna, as the thoughts fired by revenge. See Pſal. 124. 3. & 14. 4.

Verſe 32. The ſtranger did not lodge in the ſtreet] Job was ſo far from liking and commending thoſe enraged ſtomacks of his ſervants; that he would not ſuffer ſtrangers to lodge abroad in the night ſeaſon. Gregory noteth here, that he ſpeaketh firſt of his pacifick diſpoſition toward his enemies, and then of his hoſpitality: becauſe, ſaith he, the heart muſt firſt be freed from malice and wrath, and then charity is to be exerciſed, that we might be accepted. Abraham neither ſet up an Altar to God, nor ſhewed himſelf forward to entertain ſtrangers, till Lot and he were reconciled. Hoſpitality is commended to our practiſe, both by the Prophet Iſaiah, chap. 58. 7. by St. Paul, Rom. 12. 13. Heb. 13. 2. and by St. Peter, 1 Epiſt. 4. 9. Of Cranmer, Tremellius teſtifieth, that he was homo φιλόξενος nec minùs φιλόλογος, humane and hoſpitable, after the example of Abraham and Lot, whom Syneſius therefore calleth, Primitive Chriſtians, among thoſe three things that cauſed their Religion to be ſo generally embraced. Of the Waldenſes alſo, thoſe ancient Proteſtants in Germany, it is reported that they could travel from Colen to Millain in Italy; and every night lodge with Hoſts of their own profeſſion, who would bid them heartily welcome.

But I opened my doors to the Traveller] I bid the weary wayfaring man welcome to my houſe, and kept a good table for ſuch. Menſa res ſacra eſt, per quam Deus honoratur præſes amicitiæ & hoſpitii. Job was known to be a good houſe-keeper, and was much reſorted to: he ſet open his gate in the high-way; ſo Beza (after Mercer) rendreth this text. It was his will, That that part of his houſe which bounded upon the high-way-ſide, ſhould alwayes lye open to harbour Paſſengers.

Jupiter φίλιος, τὸ ξένιος dicebatur. Ad viam, vel verſus viam.

Verſe 33. If I covered my tranſgreſſion as Adam] A tranſgreſſour then Job yieldeth himſelf: the lives of the beſt alive are fuller of ſins, than the firmament is of ſtars, or the furnace of ſparks. But he did not Adam-like, or after the manner of men, cover or conceale them, extenuate or excuſe them, denying them (as Cain did, Gen. 4. 9. and Gehezi, 2 King. 5. 25. and Ananias, Act. 5. 8.) or at leaſt, dealing with them as the unjuſt Steward did, who for an hundred ſet down fifty. Adam went about to hide his ſin, alledging, non cauſam pro cauſa; that for the cauſe of his flight that was not the true cauſe thereof, viz. the voice of God, his fear thereupon, his nakedneſs, &c. thus ſin and ſhifting came into the world together. Secondly, when that would not do, but that he was driven from that κεφαλαιῶδες, then he ſeeks to excuſe it, by accuſing God, and tranſferring the blame upon him, for giving him a woman to tempt him, Gen. 3. 12. The like hereunto do they that plead Predeſtination, or Conſtellations, or natural inclination, &c. that put God to his proofs as they did, Jer. 2. 35. Job was none ſuch: but made it his daily practiſe to acknowledge his iniquities againſt himſelf, Pſal. 32. 5. and with utmoſt aggravation from all the circumſtances: laying open how many tranſgreſſions were wrapt up in each ſin, as it is Levit. 16. 21. leſt as Samuel once ſaid to Jeſſe, Are here all thy ſons? ſo God ſhould ſay to Job, Are theſe all thy ſins? and, there being but one only covered, that one ſhould prove deſtructive to his ſoul, as that baſtard Abimelech did to all his brethren. But now that he freely and fully confeſſeth his offences, he is ſure to find mercy, Prov. 28. 18. No man was ever kept out of heaven for his confeſſed badneſs: many are, for their ſuppoſed goodneſs.

By hiding mine iniquity in my boſom] As ſilly men think to do, 1 From God, who is all-eye, and every man before God is all-window, ſo that he needs not a window in his boſom (as the Heathen Momus wiſht) for God to look in at, Job. 34. 22. 2 From the world; which yet they cannot alwayes do: for God that deſcryeth will alſo diſcover all, ſooner or later; elſe how ſhould that be fulfilled, The name of the wicked ſhall rot? Broughton rendreth it, By hiding mine iniquity of ſelf-love: So Kimchi alſo readeth it. Tremellius to the ſame ſenſe, Ex dilectione mei. And ſurely it is this ſinful ſelf-love that cloſeth up mens lips, and keepeth them from pouring out their ſouls, as water before the Lord. Some deal with their ſouls as others do with their bodies: when their beauty is decayed, they deſire to hide it from themſelves, by false glasses, and from others by painting; so their sinnes from themselves by false glosses, and from others, by excuses. But this was not Jobs practise; for though hee were a great man, and able enough to have crushed those that should accuse him of any miscarriage, yet he was far from it: as he sets forth in the next verse.

Verse 34. Did I fear a great multitude?] Or, Though I should have terrified a great multitude, yet the most contemptible of the Families frayed me (or humbled me) so that I held my peace, and went not out of door; q. d. I could by my greatnesse have born out my misdemeanors, and who durst have once questioned me, or quackt before me? But this I did not, I durst not, as being rein'd in by the reverential fear of God; yea, rather, if any one, though but of the meanest rank, had come to me, and admonished me friendly of my faults, or else more sharply reproved me, I took it well aworth from him, not once opening my mouth to contend with him for my sins, nor at all stirring out of doores to do him hurt. Let's fight with our faults, and not with our friends that tell us of them, said that German Emperour. And when a poor Hermit came to our Richard the First, Anno 1195. and preaching to him the words of eternal life, bade him be mindful of the subversion of Sodom, and abstain from things unlawful; otherwise (said he) the deserved vengeance of God will come upon thee: the King laid these things to heart, and became more devout and charitable to the poor, &c. Hoveden. f. 428

That I kept silence, and went not out of door] I replied not in defence of what evil I had done; I cryed not, as they use to do in Courts of Justice, Non feci, Not guilty, but, Me, me, ego qui feci, I am verily guilty, and for this cause I went not out of doors, but kept me at home as much as I might, through shame and grief for what I had done amisse. This was right: and this seemes to me to be the right Interpretation of the Text among those many others that are brought by Expositours. I held my tongue, and hid my head.

Verse 35. O that one would hear me] Quis det mihi auscultantem mihi? O that after all this purging and praising of my selfe (wherein I take no pleasure, but that I must do it, unlesse I will betray mine innocency, and lye under heavy imputations) some one would help me to a fair trial! that God, who is best able, would undertake the businesse, and effectually vindicate me from those calumnies and contumelies that are cast upon me.

That the Almighty would answer me] i. e. That he would give a reason why he dealt so harshly with me. This was Jobs desire, or mark he aimed at, with confidence enough: but sure he should have carried the matter with more modesty and lowly-mindednesse, with more reverence and godly fear, sith our God is a consuming fire, sith he is greater then our consciences, neither may we ever forget the infinite distance and disproportion that is betwixt him and our selves. Hac in re petenda nimis importunus est. Merl.

And that mine adversary had written a Book] Heb. The man of my contention; mine Antagonist, that he had made his declaration, and set down his charge. By these and the following expressions, Job denoteth his innocency and plerophory of faith, wherewith he was well acquainted, and whereby he was exceedingly supported. Oh that we could as bravely bear all contumelies and contempts for our consciences; wearing them as Crowns and confirmations of our conformity to Christ.

Verse 36. Surely I would take it on my shoulder] As a father doth his darling, or as a Standard-bearer doth his Ensign, or as a man carrieth his most desirable things out of a common combustion.

And bind it as a Crown to me] Heb. Crownes; I should be very proud of it, as we use to speak, and take it for a great glory, as not doubting with much ease and with a trice to confute it; or at least to slight it. The lash of lewd tongues, it is as impossible to avoid, as necessary to contemne. The best Apology to such, is that of Isaac to his brother Ishmael, patience and silence. If any reply be made, it should be like that of the faithful Steward to his passionate Lord, who called him knave and worse, Your Honour may speak as you please, but I believe not a word that you say, for I know my self an honest man. Do well, and hear ill, is written upon heaven gates, said that holy Martyr. A bad report is the ordinary reward of very well doing, which made Luther wax proud even of his reproach, as he ſaid himſelf, Indies magis mihi placeo, ſuperbus fio, quòd video nomen peſſimum mihi creſcere. I pleaſe my ſelf herein every day more and more; I grow even proud of this, that I hear every day worſe and worſe for well doing: Surely ſhould ſuch curres wag their tailes and not their tongues, I ſhould ſuſpect mine owne innocency; as Phocion did, when the Athenians liked his Oration. And in another place he ſaith, Major eſt mihi timor in laudibus; gaudium vero in maledictis & blaſphemiis; When I am praiſed, I am afraid all is not well; but when I am reproached and railed on, it is a joy to me; for this will be accounted to my reckoning at the laſt day; this will adde weight to my Crown of Glory. Reproaches, as they make graces more ſplendent, ſo they will make glory more radiant: as the more dirty feet tread and rub, the more luſtre they give the Figure graven in gold. Hence Auſtin, Whoſoever (ſaith he) willingly reproacheth me, the ſame doth, though againſt his wil, add to my reward in heaven. And this I take for a great glory (ſaith Jerome) all the Hereticks rail at me.

Verſe 37. I would declare unto him the number of my ſteps] I would tell him all that ever I know by my ſelf, and turn him the inſide outward, deal ingenuouſly with him, and make him my Confeſſour; and ſo help him make up his book. Elice igitur hinc, ſaith Lavater. Hence we may learn ſo to demean our ſelves in all companies and conditions of life, that we may neither be aſhamed to live, nor afraid to dye; and that we need not care though our greateſt enemies knew of our worſt practiſes, though our faults were written in our foreheads, as they ſay. Of Socrates, Pliny ſaith, That his name was not the name of a man, but of integrity it ſelf. Of Cato Major, Paterculus ſaith, that he was free from all humane Vices, and as like to vertue it ſelf, as might be. Tully ſaith, That he was one of thoſe few that lived and dyed with glory. How much more truly and boldly may we affirm the like of Joſeph, Moſes, Samuel, Daniel, Nehemiah, Paul, who knew nothing by himſelfe, Melanchon, George Prince of Anhalt, John Bradford, and many other famous in their generations, whom for their piety and patience, as their enemies could not but admire, ſo their friends could never ſufficiently extoll them. This is no ſmal help to the Cauſe, ſaid Eraſmus concerning Luther, that his enemies can find no fault or flaw in his life.

Verſe 38. If my Land cry againſt me] As unjuſtly gotten: Where we have an elegant Proſopopeia, not unlike that of the Prophet, Hab. 2. 11, 12. where the ſtone out of the wall cryes out againſt the Oppreſſour, and the tignum è ligno, the beame out of the timber anſwereth it by a woful antiphony. It hath been noted before, that Goropius will have the Engliſh to be called, Angli, becauſe they were good Anglers, and had skill to lay divers baits when they fiſhed for other mens livings. May it be our care to diſprove him, and to ſhew our ſelves Angels rather (as Gregory the Great derived us) and our Land to be Regnum Dei, the Kingdome of God, as it was anciently counted and called, by the holineſſe and righteouſneſſe exerciſed amongſt us. Theſe two make up one perfect paire of Compaſſes, which can take the true latitude of an upright heart (ſuch as Jobs was, witneſſe this whole Chapter.) The firſt like the top of Jacobs Ladder, reacheth to heaven: the ſecond, like the foot of the Ladder, reſteth on the earth, or rather walketh about in a perfect circle of all ſuch duties as one man oweth to another. Job was famous for both, whatever his friends ſurmiſed or ſuggeſted to the contrary: He was righteouſly religious, and religiouſly ligiously righteous; exercising the first Table of the Law in the second, and caring to keep alwayes a conscience void of offence toward God and toward men, Act. 24.16.

Or that the furrowes thereof likewise complain] Heb. Weep, scil. As it were, out of a desire after their old right Owner, from whom they are detained, as was Naboths Vineyard. Si plorant porcæ.

Verse 39. If I have eaten the fruits thereof without money] i.e. Not paying the Labourers their wages, which is a boney sin, Am. 5.12,13. A crying cruelty, James 5.4. such as hath a woe hanging on the heeles of it, Jer. 22.17. See what sinns it is set amongst, and what punishment is awarded to it, Malach. 3. 5. Let Laban be guilty of it, Gen. 31. 7. but Job protesteth against it here with an imprecation.

Or have caused the owners thereof to lose their life] That is, the occupiers thereof, the poor Rent-holders (by racking their rents) to misse of a subsistence, so that they could not make a living of it with all their labour. Owners of the Land he calleth them improperly; sith the Land was his, as in the former verse: but if he had the propriety, they had the paines, and therefore should have had a livelihood, as Solomons Vine-dressers had, Cant. 8.12. but so had not Pharaohs Laboureres, the poor oppressed Israelites, who toyled like horses, and yet were held to so hard allowance, that they were weary of their lives, and their soules were ready to expire, as the Hebrew here hath it. Prisoners pitance many poor Tenants have, such as will neither keep them alive, nor suffer them to dye.

Verse 40 Let thistles grow in stead of wheat] This was a piece of that first Curse, Genes. 3. 18. under which the earth hath lain bed-ridden, as it were, ever since, waiting for the coming of the Son of God, that it may bee delivered from the bondage of corruption, Rom. 8.20. and Job wisheth it as due to him, Ex lege Talionis, if he should be guilty of the fore-mentioned cruelty, Jam. 2.13. Apuget et Arvum ab Heb. Arur, accursed,

And cockle in stead of Barley] Lolium & lappa, stinking stuffe the word signifieth, as those were stinking grapes, Isaiah 5.2,4. rotten, corrupted, vitiated; and as that was blasted corn, yeelding nothing better then dust and chaffe, Mat. 13. 25. Whereas Wheat and Barley are the precious fruits of the earth, James 5. 7. whereof when the Metapontines had one yeare a great crop, they dedicated to their god at Delphos, in token of thankfulness, an Harvest graven in gold. ζιζάνιον. Frumentum adustum. Χρυσῆν Δηροῦν Strabo.

The words of Job are ended] i. e. His Conference with his three friends, whom having before silenced, and now for himselfe sufficiently apologized, he putteth a period to that discourse; having (as Octavius once said to Decius) to the understanding spoken sufficient, and to the ignorant or obstinate too much, had he said lesse.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXXII.

Verse 1. So these three men ceased to answer Job] They were as quiet as men are on a Sabbath, so the word importeth; they had tired themselves with talking, and now they were resolved to rest them, and the rather, because they judged there was little good to be done by ought that they should say; for Job was set.

Because he was righteous in his own eyes] And so there was no more hope of a fool then of him. Pertinacious they held him and contentious, self-conceited and opinionate; which indeed was a right character of themselves, if they could have seen it. He was only constant to himself, and to the truth; whereof he shewed himself a stout and resolute Champion. Only, as every Pomgranate hath some rotten kernels in it; so Job had his frailties, his outbursts, caused by extremitie of pain, and excess of passion; for the which these three did him wrong to give him up for deplored and desperate.

Verse 2. Then was kindled the wrath of Elihu] Or, Then burnt the nose of Elihu; a Periphrasis of anger, which appeareth in the nose, eyes, and other parts of the body; — Quis enim celaverit ignem? Who can hide fire? The Rabbins have a saying, that a man shewes what he is becos, bechis, becagnas, by his purse, his cups, and his anger; which if it be rash and unadvised, is a mortal sin, and not venial, (as the Papists falsely infer from Matth 5. 22.) dispossessing a man of his wit and reason, and disfiguring his body with fiercenesse of the face, swelling of the veines, stammering of the tongue, gnashing of the teeth, and many other impotent and unmanly behaviours. Hence angry men were counselled, in the heat of their fit, to look themselves in a glasse, where they may see themselves swolne like a toad, glowing like a divel, &c. But Elihues anger was not of this kind. A fire it was, but the flame of God, as holy Zeal is called, Cant. 8. 6. a most vehement flame, (as it is there rendred) kindled upon the hearth of his heart by the spirit of judgement and of burning, Isai. 4. 4. and such as many waters could not quench, for this zeal is the extreme heat of all the affections, and the coales thereof are coales of fire, Cant. 8. 6. only we must see that it burn clear and quick, without all smoak of sin; wherein, though Elihu somewhat faulted, yet, because he was right for the main, all was well taken. We are apt to mingle sin with our best actions, and so to plow with an Oxe and an Asse. But God considers whereof we are made, and graciously layes the finger of mercy on the scars of our sinnes, as that Limner in the Story.

Of Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite] Descended he was of good parents (Fortes creantur fortibus & bonis) who gave him a good name, signifying, He is my God, or, My God is Jehovah; to inmind him of his duty, whereunto we have need of all helps that may be. His fathers name Barachel, signifyeth, One whom God hath blessed: He had blessed him indeed in so good a son, as could not but make him a glad father, Prov. 10. 1. The Buzite he is called, either from his Progenitor Buz, the son of Nahor, who was the brother of Abraham, and had by Milcah, Huz his first-born (of whom some think Job came) and Buz his brother, Gen. 22. 21. Or else from his country, the City of Buz, a City of Idumea, Jer. 25. 23. Hierom will have this Elihu to be the same with Balaam, who whiles young, was a Prophet of God, and dealt thus divinely with Job, but afterwards being corrupted by Balac, he became the Divels Spelman. This I look upon as a Jewish tradition, not much to be credited. His pedigree is here more fully described, Ut certitudo historiæ ostenderetur, saith Mercer; That we might not doubt of the truth and certainty of the history so circumstanced: as also, because Elihu did better then the rest of Jobs friends, who proved no better then Sarans instruments. How he came to make one amongst them, we know not. It is conceived, that hearing of the going of the other ther three by consent to visit Job, he also went to hear their conferences, not doubting but that he should thereby very much benefit his understanding But failing in some sort of his expectation, and finding both parties out in their discourses, he steps forth, and takes the boldnesse to interpose as an Arbiter, or Moderator, blaming both sides, and beginning, in the six following Chapters, that determination of the difference betwixt them, which God himself will afterwards finish. Mean-while it is well observed by learned Beza, that Elihu in blaming Job (as there was cause) doth for the most part interpret Jobs words far otherwise then he meant them; and moreover, that even in finding fault with those things that were justly to be found fault withal, he kept not alwayes that moderation that was meet; which is evident to godly men, and especially such as are of a more earnest nature and disposition, so hard a thing is it even when we do well, not to offend on the one side or on the other. But if we consider how far Job, being thereto driven by the importunity of his Accusers, and his most intolerable calamity, did range out of the right way, and how we are all given, even to the uttermost, to defend and maintain our credit and estimation, especially when we are therein touched by those men, who ought, least of all others to have done the same: We shall confesse, that it was very requisite and necessary for Job rather to be censured in this sharp manner, as he was, then after any milder sort; to the end he might the better acknowledg and humble himself before God; as alwayes he had done, till through the slanderous speeches of his friends, he was drawn into these altercations. Beza Praef. in this chap.

Of the kindred of Ram] E familia Syra, so Tremellius; as if Ram were put for Aram. The Chaldee saith, it is put for Abraham, who was first called Ram, secondly Abram, thirdly, Abraham. But Elihu was of the family of Nahor, rather then of Abraham; and Ram seemeth to have been some famous man of that family.

Because he justified himself rather then God] This he did not directly, & totidem verbis; but by consequence; and Elihu was kindled at it. It is a blessed thing to have a stomack for God, and to be blown up in his Cause, as was Moses Exod 32. Ehud with his Zelando zelavi, Phinehas, David, Christ, Joh. 3. 17. the Angel of Ephesus, Rev 2. 2. To be all on a light fire, with love to God, and indignation against all that do him any dishonour by word or deed. Job had uttered some discontented speeches against God; which reflected upon his Justice and Goodnesse; he had also despaired of a restauration, and most earnestly wished for death, &c. and thereby seemed to justifie himselfe rather then God, this good Elihu could not brook.

Verse 3. Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled] True zeal is of a most masculine, disingaged couragious nature: like fire it catcheth on every side, and is impartial. Elihu was a man made all of fire, walking among bubble as Chrysostom saith of Peter: And surely, he that is not angry against sin, whether in himself or others, it is because either he knowes it not, or hates it not as he ought. He also kept within the bounds of modesty and moderation, and expressed himselfe without bitternesse. We read of Idacius, that he would needs be doing with Salvianus and Instantius, both Priscillianists. But by his passionate and intemperate language, he not only not converted them, but made them worse. Sulp. Sever. l. 2. p. 171.

Because they had found no answer] They were gravelled and non-pluft, as the Popish Doctors were oft by the Martyrs, Philpot, Ridley, &c. yea by those of the weaker sort, as Anne Askew, Alice Driver &c. The Prolocutor in Convocation, Anno 1553 confessed that those dejected Ministers (afterwards Martyrs) had the Word on their side, but the Prelates in place the possession of the sword, and that was their best answer to the others Arguments. Act. & Mon. Speed. 1145. ex Grafton, Hollinshead, &c.

And yet had condemned Job] Condemned him for a wicked man, as the word signifieth. So the Popish Doctors did innocent Cranmer of Adultery, Heresie and Treason: Philpot of Parricide, Heresie, &c. To accuse was easie, but how shamefully failed they in the proof? These three after they had also interested God himselfe in their rash accusation of Job were forced to give him over.

Verse 4. Now Elihu had waited till Job had spoken] Yea, though his speech was very long, yet he heard him out, though himself were with child to speak. Broughton ton rendreth it, waited to speak with Job; he would not thrust in till they had all done their discourses. This was his modesty, though a man of singular abilities. Raram facit virtus cum scientia mixturam: To blame then surely was Gregory, for thinking so ill, and wrighting so harshly of this good young man, as if he had been proud, and arrogant: descanting to that purpose upon his Name, Countrey, and Kindred.

Because they were elder than he] And therefore ought of right to have the precedency of speech: though it appeareth by all that followeth, that in this controversie he saw further into it, judged righter, and rebuked Job with more gravity, and wisdom then any of them; so that Job was fully convinced, and made no reply at all: no more than Jonah did, when God set him down, chap. 4. 11. so forcible are right words.

Verse 5. When Elihu saw that there was no answer] And therefore Job looked upon himself, as one that had won the day. St. Austin professeth this was it that heartened him, and made him to triumph in his former Manichisme, that he met with feeble opponents, and such as his nimble wit was easily able to over-turn. And when Carolostadius opposed Luthers Consubstantiation but weakly and insufficiently, Zuinglius said he was sorry, that so good a cause, non satis humerorum haberet, wanted shoulders.

Then his wrath was kindled] viz. From their coldness; like as Nehem. 3. 20. Baruc repaired earnestly, (se accendit, he burst out into heat, angry with his own, and others sloth:) So Elihu here, when he saw that Jobs eloquence triumphed over their wisdom; and that their silence was a loud acknowledgement of their defeat, he grew more angry than before; and transported with zeal, he saith to them very briskly;

Verse 6. I am young, and ye are very old] Yet was he nothing inferiour to any of them in wit, piety, and learning: he had lived long in a little time, and was (as One saith of Macarius) μειρακιογέρων, an old-young-man; as if he had been an Alban-born, qui albo crine nascuntur, who come into the world hoar-headed, as did Seneca; and thence had his name, as Cassiodorus thinketh, quòd canus, quasi senior natus sit. Some young men are ripe betime, and more ready-headed than their ancients: as David was, Psal. 119. 100. and as Solomon was, a child-King, but very wise: contrarily, his son and successour Reboboam entered into the Kingdom at a ripe age; yet Solomon was the man, and Reboboam the child. Age is no just measure of wisdom. There are beard-less sages, and gray-headed children. Not the Ancient are wise, but the wise is Ancient; as Elihu will tell us in the next verses.

Niceph.

Wherefore I was afraid, and durst not shew you mine opinion] Heb. My knowledge; that is, the truth, so far as I understand it; siquid ego aut cupio, aut sapio; if I have any judgement. Thus he delivers himself in modest terms; using many prefaces. And if hereafter he seem to boast, and set up himself above the rest, as he doth, it is out of his zeal for God, whose honour he seeketh, and not his own. The words here rendred, I was afraid, and to shew, are both Syriack. Elihu, by his family of Ram or Aram, may seem to be that country-man; and to have a touch of that dialect, as Livy had of his Patavinity.

Verse 7. I said, Dayes should speak] This seems to have been a Proverb in those dayes; and it ran much in Elihu's mind. We use to say, That at meetings young men should be Mutes, and old men Vowels: Of Arsacius, who succeeded Chrysostom in the Sea of Constantinople, it is recorded (but nothing to his commendation) that at eighty years of age, he was as eloquent as a Fish, and as nimble as a Frog.

Antonin. tit. 10. c. 9.

And multitude of years should teach wisdom] Heb. Should make known wisdom: sc. such as consisteth in the knowledge of God and of his will, of our selves and of our duties. This is far beyond all that of the Heathen Sages, of the Seven wise Men of Greece, of Archimedes of Syracuse, who had a name and fame, saith Plutarch, not of humane, but of a kind of divine wisdom: So had Socrates, so had Apollonius, of whom Philostratus saith, that he was non doctus, sed natus sapiens, not taught, but born a wise man. These all were the worlds wizards; and what they came to, see Rom. 1. & 1 Cor. 1. & 2. Lactantius truly telleth us, in the name of the whole community οὐκ ἀνθρωπίνης ἀλλὰ δαιμονίου τινὸς συνέσεως. Plut. Instit. l. 3. c. 30.

nity of Christians, That all the wisdom of a man consisteth in this, to know God and worship him aright. And that these Seniours should have taught and notified such wisdom, Elihu had well hoped: but it proved otherwise.

Verse 8. But there is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty] Or, Surely there is a spirit in man, but the inspiration, &c. Man hath a reasonable soul, and a natural judgement, whereby he differeth from brute beasts: And not only so, but some there are that do animam excolere, as Tully and Aristotle; they improve their natural abilities by art, and so go far beyond others in worth; differing from the unlearned as much almost, as a man doth from a beast. Lo, such a spirit there is in some men: which yet amounteth not to wisdom, without the concurrence of Gods good spirit to sanctifie all, as the altar sanctifieth the gold of the altar. If this be not attained unto, the wiser any man is, the vainer he proveth, Rom. 1. 22. The Lord knoweth the thoughts of those wise (even of the choicest and most pickt men amongst them) that they are vain, 1 Cor. 3. 20. And to such we may say, as Austin once wrote to a man of great parts, Ornari abs te diabolus quærit, the Devil desireth to be tricked up by thee.

And the inspiration of the almighty giveth them understanding] He is the wise man, when all's done, whom (whether old or young) the spirit of God, who worketh most freely, is pleased to imbreath. And although Arts and Age be good helps to knowledge; yet they must be all taught of God that shall be wise unto salvation: and such as these, the elder they grow, the wiser they are, for most part; and if young saints, they become old angels. True it is, that God is debter to none: neither doth a longer life, of it self, deserve any thing at Gods hands: because the longer they live, the more sins they commit. But yet the promise is, that to him that hath shall be given, and he shall abound. The righteous also shall hold on his way; and he that hath clean hands, shall be stronger and stronger, Job 17. 9. Howbeit, some good mens first dayes, have been their best dayes: and they have suffered no small decayes in their spiritual-intellectuals: as did Solomon, Asa, Joash, and perhaps these three friends of Job, to whom this speech is directed. Certain it is, that he is a rare and a happy man, of whom it may be said in a spiritual sense (as it was said of Moses) that after long profession of Religion, his sight is not waxed dim, nor his holy heat abated. The Heathen Sages have cause to admonish us, to take heed of old age; as that which cometh not alone, but is it self a disease, and ever accompanied with many maladies, both of body and mind. Elihu seemeth to take this here for granted (experience sealing to it) that true wisdom dependeth not upon any mans authority, power, learning, experience, or old age: but upon the inspiration of the Almighty. And therefore the holy Scriptures must needs be the store-house of wisdom, the Statute-book of Heaven, as being θεόπνευστοι, imbreathed by God, as Paul speaketh; the very heart and soul of God, as Gregory. 2 Pet. 1. 21. 2 Tim. 3. 16.

Verse 9. Great men are not alwayes wise] Rabbies are not the Grandees of the Earth: they who seem to be somewhat, Gal. 2. 6. and take it ill if they be not so accounted, these are not alwayes wise, or these are none of the wisest. Non sunt sapientes Magistri, so Brentius reads it. Our Masters (ut sunt Magistri nostri Parisienses) have not ingrossed all the wisdom: And why? Spiritus non est alligatus Rabinorum authoritati, & magistrorum nostrorum capitiis, &c. the spirit of knowledge, and of the fear of the Lord, is in no wise bound to such, nor are his gifts held captive by any, but freely distributed according to the good pleasure of his will, who worketh all, and in all. Paphnutius was wiser than the whole Council, John Wicliffe, than the University of Oxford. Daniel, than all the Magicians of Babylon. Patres legendi cum venia. Augustine being oppressed with the authority of the Fathers, saith, he regardeth not Quis, but Quid; who speaketh a thing, but what he speaketh. Brent:

Neither do the aged understand judgement] Prudence is not proper to old age: and though knowledge be the daughter of time, it doth not alwayes fall out, that the most aged, are the most learned. Wisdom doth not ever lean upon a staffe, nor look through spectacles. Experience giveth us to see both old fools and young wise men, some of each sort. When the State of Venice once sent two young men Ambassadours to the Emperour Frederike 4. and he being offended at their age, refused to admit them, they did him to know, That if the Venetians had valued men by their gravity and well-grown beards, as the only wise men, they would, doubtlesse, have sent on their Embassie, a paire of well-bearded Goates: For,

Si prolixa facit sapientem barba, quid obstat
Barbatus possit quin caper esse Plato?

Verse 10. Therefore I said, Hearken to me] This he speaks by way of apostrophe to Job, with whom he would fain ingratiate, that he might the better prevaile to convince him of his course dealing with God, whose cause he wholly pleadeth. Elihu had hoped to have learned much by this conference held by such heads: But finding it otherwise, he grows to a Semper ego auditor tantum? Hearken to me another while, that God may hearken to you. Hearken I say, all of you: but thou, Job dipercially; for with thee lyeth my main business.

Nunquam à te nisi doctior redeo.

Tu nominatim & notanter, Job.

I also will shew mine opinion] He saith not my judgement, (that might savour of arrogancy in so young a man) but mine opinion, or knowledge; I will offer my thoughts, judge you of them as you please. See verse 6. Elihu was far from the spirit of Bacon the Carmelite, who would endure no guessing, or doubtings: and was therefore called Doctor Resolutissimus; as requiring that every one should think as he thought: this was too Magisterial.

Verse 11. Behold, I waited for your words] Whilest you had any thing to say, I was silent, and no way troublesome, or obstreperous. This he speaketh to Jobs friends, who had free liberty to speak whiles they would, without interruption; and should therefore now be content to hear (though perhaps what they would not) if God thereby might be glorified, and Job better convinced.

Ut cum dicitur, Redite usque ad me, Joel. 2.

I gave eare to your reasons] Heb. To your understandings: Usque ad intelligentias vestras, to the utmost of your best arguments, and most elaborated demonstrations; for the which you had eviscerated your brains, and well nigh crackt your sconces, but all to no purpose: sith you hover in generals, and, declining that which was the main matter in question, (like lapwings that cry fartheſt off from the nest) you brought only such reasons as were not cogent, and used such discourses as did nec cœlum, nec terram attingere, never come at the business: which was no better then laborious losse of time.

Verse 12. Yea, I attended unto you] Et usque ad vos perpendebam; I throughly weighed your words, and rightly considered them, (as our Mr. Bradshaw was wont to do at the Ministers meetings, and was there-hence called the Weighing Divine) that you may not think I answer the matter before I understand it, as fools do to their shame, Prov. 18. 13. or that I speak evil of the things I know not, as those in Peter, 2 Epist. 2. 12. daring to reprehend what I do not comprehend, as did that Popish Expositour who calleth Ezekiels description of the Temple, insulsam descriptionem, an absurd description.

Sanctius in cap. 40. Ezek. in argum.

And behold there was none of you that convinced Job, or that answered his words] And yet they thought they had done both effectually: and that it was meerly his stubbornnes, to stand out against them. Ready they were to give him up for uncounselable, and to turn him over to God with a Non-convertetur, he is past our cure, we can do no good on him; none but God can put him out of his good conceit of himself, &c. Out of all this, a good Interpreter maketh these following Conclusions: 1. That we must diligently hear and weigh what things are spoken by others, before we proceed to censure them. 2. That we must not pass a censure upon any one part of a speech, but take it all together, ere we make judgement of it. 3. That when we have weighed every thing well and wisely, we must not countenance any errour; but freely utter what we do truly and rightly think of it. 4. That we may think things sufficiently refuted by the learned, which yet had need to be further inquired into. 5. That one younger man may see further sometimes into a matter, then many others of longer standing and experience. 6. That men may be esteemed obstinate, and opinionative, who are nothing less. 7. That multitude and antiquity are but ciphers in Divinity, &c.

Verse 13. Lest ye should say, We have found out wisdom] Or, See that ye say not, we need not search out words; as verse 11. For, we have found out wisdom, rem acu pertigimus, pertigimus, We have hit the nail on the head, and ſaid ſufficient to convince him, if any reaſon would do it, whilſt we affirm that God thruſteth him down (as it were with a thump on the back,) and not man] Who might do amiſſe, but ſo cannot God; who for as much as he fighteth againſt Job, toſſing him (as a Tennis ball, or as the wind doth a withered leaſe) from one affliction to another, who can doubt but that he holdeth him a wicked man? This ſaith Elihu, is a very weak way of reaſoning; therefore never pleaſe your ſelves in it as convincing. Hoc argumentum tam facilè diluitur quam vulpes comeſt pyrum, as one merrily phraſed it. There is no judgement to be made of a perſon or cauſe by the good or evil ſucceſſe of things, ſith none out of hell, ever ſuffered more then Gods deareſt children: witneſſe that little Book of Martyrs, Hebr. 11. Neither have any ſped better here, then thoſe worſt of men, Turks, Papiſts, Perſecutors, &c.

Verſe 14. Now he hath not directed his ſpeech againſt me] And ſo I have no particular edg or grudge againſt him, he hath no reaſon to think that I come prejudicated or exaſperated. This Elihu ſpeaketh purpoſely, to get within Job; that he might the better perſwade with him. We muſt endeavour to preſerve in the party with whom we would prevaile, an opinion of our love and good affection to him; for elſe we ſhall loſe all our ſweet words, ſith man is a croſs and crabbed creature; duci vult, trahi non vult; lead him you may, drag him you muſt not.

Neither will I anſwer him with your ſpeeches] But with better: He ſhall have from me ſoft words and hard Arguments; I will come over him in a milder manner, and to better purpoſe; whilſt, moved merely by a zeal for Gods glory, I ſhall ſhew him his miſcarriages, not in mine own words, but in Gods. That's a true ſaying of learned Junius, Perſonatæ reprehenſiones frigent; plerumque intereſt ex animo omnia, ut conſcientia fert animuſque, facias; an de induſtria.

Verſe 15. They were amazed] As if they had ſeen Meduſa's head, or ſome ſuch terrible ſpectacle that had rendred them dumb. Talkative enough they have been, when there was no ſuch neceſſity; but now that they might ſpeak to ſome purpoſe, they ſtand like ſtocks, and are mute as fiſhes, whereby they bewray their ignorance and folly. Silence in ſome caſes is ſepes ſapientiæ, as the Rabbins ſpeak, the fruit and fence of wiſdome, Amos 5.13. See the Note there. But withal there is a ſinful ſilence, which Luther wiſhed never to be found guilty of. And it is the divel doubtleſſe that gaggeth people, when being called to ſpeak of, or for God, as theſe friends of Job were at this time, they anſwer no more. Pirke Aboth. Modò impii ſilentii non arguar. Luth.

They leave ſpeaking] They deſert a good Cauſe, or betray it by a cowardly ſilence. It may be feared the ſpirit of faith is no indweller, where the door of the lips move not right, 2 Cor. 4.13. He ſpeaks thus of thoſe three ſeniors in a third perſon, by way of irony and contempt, turning his talk to the by-ſtanders, whereof its likely, there were many: or (as Tremellius thinketh) to Job, with whom he ſeeketh to ingratiate.

Verſe 16 When I had waited, for they ſpake not, but ſtood ſtill] Or, Seeing I have waited, but they have not ſpoken, &c. Nothing appears but a dumb ſhew, a deep ſilence, ſuch as Elihu much marvelled at, and therefore ſetteth it forth in many words, all to one purpoſe. See verſe 15.

Verſe 17. I ſaid, I will anſwer alſo my part] It is a vertue to be forward and forth putting in that which is good; and a vice to be ſhye and ſhame faced. A Chriſtian ſhould catch at opportunities of doing and receiving good, he ſhould be ready to every good work: as the buſie Bee, ſo ſoon as ever the Sun breaks forth, gets abroad to gather honey and wax.

I alſo will ſhew my opinion] Heb. My knowledg, as verſe 6. and ſo the Vulgar readeth it. Hereupon Gregory taking Elihu, (but not well) for an arrogant perſon, ſheweth, that ſuch love to vaunt themſelves, and out of oſtentation to ſet forth their good parts to publick view; and are therein like unto a veſſel without a cover, touching which the Law ſaith, that it ſhall be counted unclean. Thus He. But to utter a mans knowledge for the benefit of others, as good Elihu did, is not pride, but zeal, however the world cenſure it: And they have, doubtleſſe, an heavy account to make, who hide their talents, and having a great treaſure of rare abilities, will not be drawne to impart them; the canker of theſe mens great skill, ſhall be a ſwift witneſs againſt them. Vile latens virtus.——

Verſe 18. For I am full of matter] Heb. Of words; ſuch as are weighty and ſtuffy, ſteep'd in mine underſtanding (as Plutark ſaith Phocions words were) and very well digeſted. I am εὐτόνως διατεθειμένος, in very good caſe to ſpeak; as full of ſolid Arguments as the Moon is of light. Whether Elihu ſpeaketh this arrogantly and from the fleſh, or from the Spirit, I determine not, ſaith Brentius here. But ſure it is, that ſuch words as theſe, howſoever they may ſeem arrogant and carnal, Poſſunt tamen eſſe ſpiritualiſſima, yet they may be very ſpiritual, as Jer. 4. and 20. And as ſure it is, that we ſhould be in company like full clouds or paps, that pain themſelves with fulneſs, till eaſed of their milk.

The Spirit within me conſtraineth me] Heb. The ſpirit of my belly; that is, Gods Holy Spirit inhabiting mine heart, and exciting me to ſo good a work: The love of Chriſt conſtraineth us, 2 Cor. 5. 14. It hath not only an impulſive, but a compulſive faculty. Rumperer medius, ſi non erumperet ſermo intra me conceptus, as Brentius here paraphraſeth; I ſhould even burſt, if I did not vent my conceptions, which (like a child in the womb at full time, or as wind in the bowels) want room, and preſſe to come out, Pſal. 39. 3. Jer. 20. 9.

Sicus flatus in ventre concluſus magno impetu exitum quærit: ſic zelus mentis quærit exitum per ſermonem. Piſc.

Verſe 19. Behold my belly is as wine which hath no vent] By this elegant ſimilitude, Elihu illuſtrateth what he had ſaid before; wherein (as Merlin well obſerveth) he compareth words ſhut up in the mind of him that would faine utter them, to new wine, not yet throughly purged, the ſoul to bottles, ſilence to the ſtopple, which keeps in the wine, grief hereupon to the breaking of thoſe bottles, ſpeech to the opening of them, by taking away the ſtopple of ſilence. And although in this Diſcourſe, Elihu may ſeem to lay on more words then the matter requireth, yet he doth not: for he ſaith no more then the Pſalmiſt doth, Pſal. 45. 1. and Jeremiah, chap. 6. 11. and the Apoſtles. Act. 4. 20. We cannot but ſpeak, &c. And whereas Gregory ſaith, that all this came from pride in Elihu, Chryſoſtom praiſeth him rather (and therein he is in the right) for his zeal, which will have a vent, or the heart will cleave; as the waters undermine, when they cannot overflow. As for that which is urged againſt Elihu, that God ſaith of him, as of a Reprobate and one whom he knew not, Who is this that darkneth counſel by words without knowledg? ch. 38. 2. It is plain that God ſpeaketh there, not of Elihu, but of Job, and ſo Job underſtood and applyed it, chap. 42. 2. And that God ſpeaketh not of Jobs ſacrificing for him, as for the other three, makes more for his praiſe then elſe; and ſhewes, that he had ſpoken of God the thing that was right, which they had not done, chap. 42. 7.

Verſe 20. I will ſpeak that I may be refreſhed] Heb. That I may breath; This many Martyrs did; though to the loſſe of their precious lives: as thoſe that came to the Tribunals, and cryed out; Chriſtiani ſumus, We are Chriſtians, hang us, burn us, ſtone us, &c. Modo Jeſum noſtrum nanciſcamur, ſo that we may get our Jeſus. And when they were told that they were put to death, Non pro fide, ſed pro obſtinatione; not for their Religion, but for their obſtinacy; Tertullian anſwered, Pro hac obſtinatione fidei morimur; For this Religious obſtinacy we gladly dye. As for thoſe that made not a good confeſſion, but either denied or diſſembled their Religion, for politick reſpects, what a deal of unreſt found they in their conſciences, till they had better declared themſelves, or revoked their recantations; as Bilney, Bainham, Benbridg, Abbes, Sharp, beſides Origen, and all thoſe of old? Let a man ſpeak boldly and freely in a good Cauſe when called to it, and he ſhall be refreſhed: for as every flower hath its ſweet ſmell, ſo hath every good word and work its comfort.

I will open my lips and anſwer] Viz. Freely and fully, as Eph. 6. 19. with great alacrity of ſpirit and vehemency of ſpeech. Some kind of anſwer a man may make, though he open not his lips: as he did, who being asked what mans life was? preſently turned his back, and went his way. Theodoret alſo upon Matth. 5. 2. obſerveth that our Saviour taught ſometimes, when yet he opened not his mouth; viz. by holy life, and wondrous works.

Verſe

Verſe 21. Let me not, I pray you, accept any mans perſon] q.d. This leave you muſt give me, or at leaſt wiſe I muſt take it, ſith my life lyeth upon it to be impartial and plain-dealing, laying the blame where it lights, and ſparing the paines of pleaſing and Paraſitical Poems of oratorical, and rhetorical inſinuations. Nihil loquar ad gratiam, &c. I ſhall know no man after the fleſh in this buſineſſe, nor look on any face. If Job found this fault with his other three friends, chap. 13.7. he ſhall have no cauſe ſo to do with me: but as a right Moderatour, I will hear Arguments ſpeak, and not perſons; I will ſhut out my friend, or my ſeniour, and ſpeak the truth in love. Diem hominis non deſideravi, ſaith Jeremy, chap. 17. And if I yet pleaſe men, I am no more the ſervant of Chriſt, Gal. 1. 10. See the Note there.

Neither let me give flattering Titles] Prænomen aut cognomen, thoſe that ſeeme to be ſomewhat, whatſoever they be, it ſhall make no matter to me; God accepteth no mans perſon, Gal. 2.6. I ſhall call a ſpade, a ſpade, tell every one their owne without circumlocution, and not ſooth or ſmooth up any man (though never ſo great) in his ſinful practices. Semper Auguſtus, is a Title ſtill given to the Germane Emperours: But Sigiſmund, once Emperour (when a fellow flattered him above meaſure, and extolled him to the Skies) gave the Flatterer a good box on the eare, and when he asked, Why ſmite you me? He anſwered, Why clawest thou me? In vita Alphon.

Verſe 22. For I know not to give, &c.] I have as little Art in it ('tis out of my road) as heart to it: For,

In ſo doing my Maker ſhould take me away] i.e. Kill me, and ſend me packing to Hell. He would ſoon ſnatch me away: he would burn me, as ſome render it, ſo dangerous is the ſinne of flattery. A Preacher called Conſtantine the Great, Bleſſed to his face, but he went away with a check. What will God ſay to ſuch, think we? Euſeb. de vita Conſt. l. 4. c. 4.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Verſe 1. Wherefore Job, I pray thee, hear my ſpeeches.]

PLain Job, for flattering Titles Elihu would give none, chap. 32.22. only in preſacing to his Diſcourſes he is very large, witneſſe the whole former chapter, which may well ſtand for a common exordium to all the five following; and the ſeven firſt verſes of this; wherein he both calleth upon Job for audience, and uſeth Arguments for that purpoſe. An Orator he ſheweth himſelf all along: for in his Introduction, he hath τὰ ἤθη, milder affections, which ſuit beſt to inſinuate, and toward the concluſion he hath τὰ πάθη, pathetical expreſſions, that may leave an impreſſion in his Hearers.

And hearken to all my words] And not to ſome of them only, picking and chuſing what pleaſeth you, and turning a deaf eare to the reſt, as he in Tacitus did, who ſaid, Tu lingua, ego auremo dominus; You may ſay what you pleaſe, but I will hear no more then I like, and liſt. This is an evil ear, and muſt be healed (as the Orator told his Country-men) ere any good can be done. The good ſoul lyeth low at Gods feet and ſaith, Speak Lord, for thy ſervant heareth. All that the Lord our God ſhall ſpeak unto us, that will we hear and do, Deut. 5.27. Now therefore we are all here preſent before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God, Act. 10.33. It is a ſign of an honeſt heart to take the Precepts, together with the Promiſes, and to tremble at the threatnings, as well as to reach after the comforts of Gods holy Word; which laſt every hypocrite will be catching at, as children do at Sweet-meats, paſſing by the better proviſion.

Verſe 2. Behold now, I have opened my mouth] I have taken upon me to be a Speaker, Speaker, an Arbitratour in this Controverſie, which is uſually a thankleſſe Office; for he who interpoſeth in buſineſſes of this nature, if he had two friends before, is likely enough to loſe one of them. I muſt of neceſſity blame both parties, however I come off with them. Thy three friends have had their ſhare in the former Chapter, and now comes thine. which ſhall be found though ſharp, of matters weighty and important, as *Pſal.*78.2. Habebis ſermonem ſerium, & de re gravi: for ſo much the Hebrewes intend by this expreſſion of opening the mouth. In the Revelation, whereever we read that heaven opened, ſome great matter followed: ſo when ſuch open their mouthes as have the Law of God in their hearts, Pſalm 37.32. Prov. 31. 26. Fools indeed have their mouthes ever open, bluſtring out whatſoever lies uppermoſt, raſhly and without conſideration. But a wiſe man weigheth his words before he uttereth them; and ſpeaketh not, but for ſome good purpoſe.

Κεχηνότες, à Lucian & Ariſtophane dicuntur.

My tongue hath ſpoken in my mouth] Heb. In my palat, or under my palat, which are two chief of thoſe mine Inſtruments of ſpeech, none of which can well be wanting. Let God be glorified for, and with that peculiar facultie; and let our praiſes proceed, not from the palate only, or roof of the mouth, but from the root of the heart. The voice which is made in the mouth is nothing ſo ſweet, as that which cometh from the bottom of the breſt. One Interpreter ſaith, That by theſe words, My tongue hath ſpoken in my mouth, Elihu meaneth, that he would not ſpeak clamorouſly, but as it were, whiſperingly, to his eare, in ſecret.

Verſe 3. My words ſhall be of the uprightneſs of my heart] i.e. Out of the uprightneſſe of my heart; I will deal fairely and faithfully with thee; I will carve thee a piece of my heart, without doubling or diſſembling; and why ſhould not downright truth pleaſe thee, better then a ſmooth ſupparaſitation? Bees paſſe by Roſes and Violets, and ſit upon Time: ſo ſhould men rather heed ſound rebukes, though hot and biting, then flattering diſcourſes, which Solomon fitly calleth, The ſong of fools, Eccleſ. 7.5. a Syrens Song. And another calleth a flatterer, a courteous murderer, that killeth in kindneſſe, kiſſeth and killeth, Cavete vobis ab oſculo hoc Iſcariotico; Beware of this ſweet poyſon, and covet rather thoſe faithful wounds of a friend, Prov. 27.6. as David did *Pſal.*141 5. And as Veſpaſian, who carrieth this commendation, that he was Patientiſſimus veri, and as Alphonſus King of Arragon, who complained of this that whereas of every thing elſe he had enough, of truth he was very much ſcanted, there being few about him that would deal candidly and faithfully without flattery or partiality.

And my lips ſhall utter knowledg clearly.] i.e. Simply and ſincerely, plainly and perſpicouſly I will ſhew my meaning, without either gall or guile; My Diſcourſe ſhall be clear and pure from all droſſe of deceit, as the Original word ſignifieth. This is a praiſe proper to Gods holy Word, *Pſal.*19,9,10 11. *Prov.*30.5 And they that handle it, (Tophſhe Torah, Jer.2.8.) may here learn not to obtrude their own conceits or conjectures for doctrinal truths; but to utter demonſtrative things, not to huſter the Word of God, or corrupt it with their own mixtures, as Vintners do their Wines; but as of ſincerity; but as of God in the ſight of God, &c. 2 Cor. 2.17. Let them not preach one thing, and practiſe another, ſed animentur moribus præcepta; leſt ſome Hillary complain as once, That there were many heavenly Doctrines in the peoples eares, that never yet had beene in the Preachers heart.

Verſe 4. The Spirit of God hath made me] That is, I am Gods Creature no leſſe then thou art, made and maintained by the Word of his power, by the breath of his mouth; why then may not I utter pure and holy Doctrine? ſith I alſo am a rational Creature; and if the Holy Spirit pleaſe to blow upon me, I can turne about like the mill, if to tune and touch me, I can move to make Muſick; if to infuſe good notions, I can utter them? Hear me therefore.

And the breath of the Almighty hath given me life] This ſome will have to be a Metaphor taken from the blowing of glaſſes into this or that ſhape. It hath been before noted, That the Egyptians worſhipped a god whom they knew not, under the ſhape of a man blowing an egg out of his mouth, to ſignifie that he made the round world by his Word. By the Word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the Hoſt of them by the breath of his mouth, Pſal. 33.6. Where ſome well note the myſtery of the Trinity Plut. de Iſid. & Oſirid.

Trinity; as others do, not so well, out of this text: by God, understanding the first person; by Almighty, the second; and by the breath of the Almighty, the third: Sed hoc subtilius, saith Mercer.

Verse 5. If thou canst answer me] Or, If thou canst, do thou answer me. This bold challenge, and the like confident expressions, (not unlike in appearance to that of Campian, with his ten unanswerable Reasons, (as he accounted them,) or that of Sanders, with his forty not probable Reasons, but most solid demonstrations (if men would believe him) to prove, That the Pope is not Antichrist) hath caused one Interpreter, following Gregory, to censure Elihu, for a palpable Bragadochian, full of pride, and vain-glory. This is an hard saying, and at the best, reverenter glossanda, as he said of the Pontifician Lawes. I think this good man is hereby no less mistaken and wronged, than John Baptist was by Tertullian, who falls foule upon him in three several places, for that harmless question of his sent to our Saviour by two of his Disciples (whom he sought to settle) Art thou he that should come, &c. Matt. 11. 3. as if himself had doubted of the person of the Messiah. De visib. Monarch. lib. 8.

Set thy words in order before me, stand up] A metaphor from Military matters; muster up and marshal thine Arguments in good array, and then stand to it: make good thy ground like a valiant souldier, who will rather die for it than stir an inch. An expression, not unlike this, is that of David, Psal 5. 3. In the morning will I direct (or marshal up) my prayers, and then look up; be as a Spy upon a watch-tower, to see what speed, and whether I get the day: Military terms they are both.

Verse 6. Behold, I am according to thy wish] Heb. according to thy mouth. If the Saints do but open their mouths wide, God will fill them: he will give them not only the desires of their hearts, but the request of their lips, Psal 21. 2. fulfil all their counsel, Psal. 20. 4. in that very way, by that very means they wished it: he fitteth his mercy ad cardinem desiderii: and lets it be to his, even as they will. Was it not so with Jo. here?

In Gods stead] Heb For God, to act and plead for him, and to shew how thou hast dealt with him. So Ministers are said to be in Christs stead, 2 Cor. 5. 20. A great mercy, that he will treat with us by men like our selves.

I also am formed out of the clay] Et non ex meliore luto finxit me, of the same make and matter with thy self, cut out of the same lump, dig'd out of the same pit. He alludeth to Gen. 2. 7. the wonderful formation of those Protoplasti, as a Potter moldeth his Pots, cutting them out of the lump. And the like God doth for men still, by that, viz. φλεγμα that is in the seed, making it prolifical, and generative.

Verse 7. Behold, my terrour shall not make thee afraid] This, Job had earnestly desired of God, chap. 9. 34. & 13. 21. and Elihu as a cunning Disputant, presseth him with his own words: I am not, saith he, neither is it fit any mortal man should by his terrour and power ravish another of his right Religion, as some Zamzummims do the meaner sort of people by their belluine greatness: as the Pope and his Janizaries do the Hereticks, as they call those of the reformed Religion, that will not reneague it: not once hearing what they can say for themselves. Either you must turn, or burn, say they: This is monstrous immanity. Giants are called Emim, Formidable, and Nephilim, because men fell before them through fear.

Neither shall my hand be heavy upon thee] Brentius rendreth this verse thus; Ecce frons mea non terreat te, & inclinatio mea super te non gravet: Behold, my forehead cannot fright thee: neither can my bowing down upon thee, surcharge thee. I shall neither brow-beat thee, nor quell thee with my weight, that thou shouldest refuse to reason the case with me. Periculosum est contra eum scribere, qui potest proscribere, & illi contradicere, qui potest aqua & igni interdicere. Its ill meddling with those that are armed with great power, and can as easily undo a man as bid it be done. I must needs acknowledge you the better scholer (said Phavorinus the Philosopher to Adrian the Emperour) qui triginta habet legiones, who hast thirty Legions at command. But here was no such disparity, or cause of fear in Job, from his compere, Elihu. Ælius Spart.

Verse 8. Surely thou hast spoken in my hearing] Here beginneth the Charge, and it is for words, Qua leviter volant, non leviter violant. Nihil tam velociter quàm maledictum, nihil facilius emittitur, saith Cicero; Nothing is so swift as an evil word, Pro Plancio.

word, nothing is more eaſily uttered. But ſhould a man ſet his mouth againſt heaven, and utter errour againſt the Lord, Iſa. 32. 6? Should he toſs that reverend Name of God to and fro, with ſuch impiety and prophaneneſs, as if his ſpeech could have no grace, but in his diſgrace? as if Auguſtus Caſar were dealing with ſome god Neptune, or the three ſons trying their Archery at their fathers heart, to ſee who can ſhoot nigheſt? Surely, as God is the avenger of all ſuch; ſo an Elihu cannot hear it, and not be kindled. Good blood will not bely it ſelf, Pſal. 139. 20, 21. They ſpeak againſt thee wickedly, and thine enemies take thy name in vain: Do not I hate them, O Lord, that hate thee; I hate them with a perfect hatred &c. The very Turks have the Chriſtians blaſpheming of Chriſt in execration: and puniſh it in their Priſoners, when through impatiency or deſperateneſs, they break out in this kind: What a ſhame is it then, that our Kanters (that laſt brood of Beelzebub) ſhould, till a-late, be ſuffered to affirm, That Chriſt is a carnal or fleſhly thing: and to contemne him by the notion of The man dying at Jeruſalem, &c? Can we hear theſe helliſh blaſphemies without ears tingling, hearts trembling, &c? When Servetus condemned Zuinglius for his harſhneſs, he anſwereth, In aliis manſuetus ero, in blaſphemiis in Chriſtum, non ita; In other things I can bear as much as another, but when I hear Chriſt blaſphemed, I am altogether impatient: for why? in this caſe patience would be blockiſhneſs, moderation mopiſhneſs, toleration cowardiſe. Madneſs here is better than meekneſs, &c.

Lonicer. theatr. hiſtoric.

Verſe 9. I am clean without tranſgreſſion] Clear as the picked glaſs, without defection.

Nitidus ego, נקי Syriaca voce נקיא pectore.

I am innocent] Heb. Neat and compt, not a hair out of order: as it was objected to Pompey the great.

Neither is there iniquity in me] Nothing crooked, or obtort. But had Elihu ever heard Job ſaying thus? Or did not he rather miſinterpret his words? Some proud Monk hath been heard to ſay, Non habeo, Domine, quod mihi ignoſcas; I have not done any thing, Lord, that needeth thy pardon. The reporter of Bellarmines life and death, telleth us, that when the Prieſt came to abſolve him, he could not remember any particular ſin he had to confeſs; till he went back in his thoughts as far as his youth. But good Job had no ſuch conceit of himſelf, as may appear by many paſſages of his: as chap. 9. 2. and verſe 20, 21. chap. 14. 4. &c. Only out of the greatneſs of his grief, and the unkind uſuage of his friends, (who ſpared not without all reaſon to revile him as a moſt wicked and ungodly liver) he did eſtſoones caſt out ſome raſh and harſh words againſt God, (ſee chap. 10. 7. & 16. 17. & 23. 10, 11. & 27. 5) and hence this Accuſation here laid againſt him as a Perfectiſt, or ſelf-juſtitiary.

Verſe 10. Behold, he findeth occaſions againſt me] Or, Breaches: he picks quarrels with me, and would fain find out ſomewhat in my carriage, wherefore to break friendſhip with me, and to break me in pieces. But did Job ever ſay in this ſort? Not expreſly ſo; but by conſequence, and to the ſame purpoſe, chap. 9. 17. & 13. 24. & 14. 17. & 16. 9. & 19. 11.

He counteth me for his enemy] This indeed he had ſaid, and ſomewhat more, chap. 13. 24. & 16. 9. & 30. 21. as if God of his meer pleaſure, had made cruel wars upon him, and exerciſed all kind of hoſtility againſt him, as a vanquiſhed enemy. See the Note on chap. 13. 24. & 19. 11.

Verſe 11. He putteth my feet in the ſtocks, &c.] See chap. 13. 27. & 14. 16. with the Notes.

Verſe 12. Behold, in this thou art not juſt] In this thy Expoſtulation with God, as if he had dealt unjuſtly with thee, (think the ſame of thy poſtulation, or unreaſonable requeſt, that God ſhould give thee a reaſon why he ſo grievouſly afflicteth thee, verſe 13.) thou art nothing leſs then what thou holdeſt thy ſelf to be, viz. juſt, pure, innocent. Sorex ſuo perit indicio, the Mole betrayes himſelf by caſting up the mould: and ſo doſt thou, good Job, by throwing forth words without wiſdom, as God himſelf will once tell thee, chap. 38. 2. Canſt thou be juſt, whoſe words are thus unjuſt? Never think it. Thus Elihu is as nimble with Job (but far more ingenuous) as that Jeſuite was with Druſius: whom when he had called Heretick, and Druſius in his own defence alledged that Hereſie muſt be in fundamentis fidei, the Jeſuite replyed, That even that Aſſertion of his was Hereſie.

I will

I will answer thee, that God is greater than men] Longè superat frivolum hominem, say the Tigurines, is far above sorry man; the distance and disproportion is infinite. But how is this an answer to Jobs justifying himself, and complaining of God, as over-rigid? Gods greatness here is not to be understood of his power only, (which yet should over-awe us when ready to rise up against him) but also of his truth, wisdome, justice, goodness, &c. all which Job, by his complaints, seemed to question, and quarrel with, and is therefore fitly minded of this Attribute of Almighty God, who is glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders. Great he is without quantity; good, without quality; everlasting, without time; omnipresent, without place; containing all things, without extent. He is not only great, Psal. 77. 13. but greater, as here; greatest, Psal. 95. 3. greatness it self, Psal. 145. 3. So he is not only good, Psal. 106. 1. but better, Psal. 108. 9. best of all, Phil. 1. 23. goodness it self, Matth. 19. 17. The least glimpse of this knowledge, is worth all the gleames of humane wisdome. And albeit this is a truth commonly known and acknowledged, yet very few are affected with it aright, as appears by their crosse-carriages toward this great God, and malapert misdemeanours, as if he were such a-nother as themselves, Psal. 50. 21. Certainly, if we were throughly perswaded of Gods infinite greatness, so as it is set forth, Deut. 10. 17. and elsewhere, we would much more fear to offend him, and care to please him, then we do. The truth is, all the exorbitances in mens lives proceed from the weakness of this spring: and were they but well assured that God is Almighty, they would walk before him, and be upright, Gen. 17. 1. But to this none can attain, but by the help of supernatural Grace. Exod. 15. 11.

Verse 13. Why dost thou strive against him?] Why dost thou cample and reason it thus unreverently with God, whose will alone is the supreme reason, nec recta folùm, sed & ipsa regula; and not only right, but the very rule of right? He may better say than any Constantine, that Arrian Emperour, Quod ego volo, pro Canone sit, Let my will be your soveraign rule; sith things are therefore right because I will them; I will them not, because they are right. Who then art thou, O man, that replyest against God, saith St. Paul; that chatterest and wordest it with him, that answerest again, and thinkest to hold him to't, and be hard enough for him? Rom. 9. 20. Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker: let the potsherd strive with the potsherds of the earth, Isai. 49. 9. Let men learn to meddle with their match, and not to contend with God, who is much mightier then they, Eccles. 6. 10. and hath assured them that with the froward he will wrestle, Psal. 18. 26. Jeremy, who in his distemper, would needs reason the case with God concerning his judgements (which are sometimes secret, but alwayes just) did well and wisely to preface thus; Righteous art thou, O Lord, when I plead with thee, Jer. 12. 1.

For he giveth not account of any of his matters] Heb. Of all his matters; for he is invariabur, the most Highest; and therefore not to be reckoned with by any for ought he doth. If he so far abase himself, as to give account of any of his proceedings for our satisfaction, it is dignatio stupenda, a wonderful condescension. Vatablus rendreth the text thus, Non tuum omnia verba sua loquitur; for he uttereth not all his words: that is, he revealeth not all his secrets, q. d. he doth all for our good, though we, for present, understand it not. He oft answereth us as the Eccho doth the voice, cutting off the one half of it: but stand a while, and see the salvation of the Lord, he is usually better to his people than their conceits: and delighteth to help those that are forsaken of their hopes.

Verse 14. For God speaketh once, yea twice] He loveth to fore-signifie: and although not bound to it, yet he usually gives warning; as not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance, 2 Pet. 3. 9. For which purpose, God, saith Elihu here, useth two wayes to nurture his Children; the one more milde, to keep them from falling into sin, verse 15. 16, 17, 18. the other more rigorous, when they have committed wickedness, to bring them to amendment of life, verse 19, 20, 21, &c.

Yet man perceiveth it not] Pra crassitie, & supinitate (ut ita dicam) sua; through his forlorn dulness and heedlessness, his singular obstinacy and inadvertency. Though God say as once, O generation, see ye the Word of the Lord, Jer. 2. 31. Hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it, Mic. 6. 9. yet man is not only naturally averse, but adverſe, to liſten, or lay to heart any thing, till it light on his hide, to believe till he ſmarteth; yea, to his natural dulneſs, he ſoon addeth an habitual hardneſs to his ſinewes of iron, browes of braſs, Iſai. 48. 4. this is fearful, Act. 28. 27. and yet common to all, whoſe hard hearts God is not pleaſed to ſoften with the oyle of his Grace, and to ſoak in the blood of his Son, that they may be ſupple and ſoluble.

Verſe 15. In a dream, in a viſion of the night, &c.] At ſundry times, and in divers manners. God delivered his mind to men of old by dreams in the night, by viſions in the day-time, imprinting upon their minds what by them he would have underſtood, or uttered to others. This he did eſpecially before the Law written, whereof therefore here is made no mention: See Numb. 12. 6. Indeed with Moſes, by a ſpecialty of his favour, he ſpake mouth to mouth; even apparantly (as a man doth to his friend) and not in dark ſpeeches: the ſimilitude of the Lord did he behold, ſed non abſque aliquo Majeſtatis ejus involucro; but not without ſome over-ſhadowing of his Majeſty, which none can ſee and live, Exod. 33. 20. he muſt needs be oppreſſed and ſwallowed up of it, as the ſight of the eye is dazled with the Sun, or a cryſtal-glaſs broken with the fire.

When deep ſleep falleth upon men, in ſlumberings upon the bed] When men plunged in ſleep, are neither in the number of the living, nor the dead. Then many times the reaſonable ſoul cometh into the ſhop of Phantaſie, and there doth ſtrange works, which are vented in our dreams. And ſometimes God by an Angel, or otherwiſe, cauſeth men to dream, and thereby admoniſheth them of weighty matters: as he did Abimelech, Gen. 20. Jacob, Gen. 28. Joſeph, Gen. 40. the other Joſeph, Matth. 1. & 2. the Wiſe-men, Matth. 2. Pilates wife, Mat. 27. which though ſome think it came from the Devil to hinder mans Redemption, yet others think it came from God, for the clearing of Chriſts innocency: and, as Theophylact holdeth, for the ſalvation of this womans ſoul. Ἐυέργ. Of the ſeveral ſorts of dreams natural, divine, and diabolical: ſee the Annotations on Gen. 20. 3.

Verſe 16. Then he openeth the eares of men] He maketh the bore bigger as it were, that good counſel may enter, he calleth up the eares of the ſoul to the eares of the body, that one ſound may peirce both: he ſaith, as to him in the Goſpel, Epphata; and together with his word there goeth forth a power, as Luke 4. 32. See chap. 36. 10, 15.

And ſealeth their inſtruction] Or, Their correction, for they go together, Pſal. 94. 12. Prov. 3. 12, 13. & 6. 23. and God ſealeth, or ſetteth on the one by the other: as when a School-maſter would have a leſſon learned indeed, he ſets it on with a whipping. Luther ſaith, that many of St Pauls Epiſtles could not be underſtood, but by the croſſe, Vexatio dat intellectum. Another grave Divine giveth this good advice; To find out the ſin that God afflicteth for, conſider what truths have been preſſed upon your hearts, before the affliction: for afflictions uſe to come as ſeals to inſtruction: before they did not come with power to your hearts, now God ſeals them: Thus he. Bernard ſaith concerning his brother, when he gave him many good inſtructions, and he, being a ſouldier, minded them not: he put his finger to his ſides, and ſaid, One day a ſpear ſhall make way to this heart of thine for inſtructions and admonitions to enter. The Tigurine tranſlation is full and elegant, Tunc aurem hominibus aperit, & diſciplinam eorum velut impreſſo ſigillo confignat. Then he openeth men by the eare, and conſigneth their inſtruction, as with a ſeal ſet unto it.

Verſe 17. That he may withdraw man from his purpoſe] Or, rather, practiſe; Heb. Work; that is, evil work, called a mans own work, Heb 4. 10. for when we do evil, we work de noſtro, & ſecundum hominem, 1 Cor. 3. 3. as when the Devil ſpeaketh a lye, he ſpeaketh of his own, Joh. 8. 44. Now from ſuch bad work God taketh men off, by dreams ſometimes, as he did Abimelech, Gen. 20. 3. and Laban, Gen. 31. 24. but more frequently by corrections of inſtruction, which are the way of life, Prov. 6. 23. Chriſtianorum Theologia, as Luther calleth it; Virtutum officina, as Bradwar; Bonorum omnium theſaurus, as Brentius upon this text.

And hide pride from man] Which elſe, as a Maſter-pock, will break out in his forehead, and teſtifie to his face. By Pride we may underſtand all other ſins, which God both covereth and cureth in his penitent people: but pride is ſtily inſtanced, becauſe it was one of the firſt ſins, and is ſtill the root and ſource of all other ſins. God therefore humbleth all his under his mighty hand, and preſerveth them from the perilous pinacle of ſelf exaltation: as he dealt with Paul, both when he met him on the way to Damaſcus, and unhorſt him; as alſo when by that thorn in the fleſh, he let out the impoſthumated matter of pride out of his heart, which might elſe have broken forth into odious and lothſome practices.

Verſe 18. He keepeth back his ſoul from the pit] Or, That he may keep back his ſoul, that is, his body, as *Pſal.*16.10. *Lev.*21.1. from the pit; i.e. from the grave, or from the pit-fals made for him by his enemies. A penitent perſon redeemeth his own ſorrows, and provideth for his own ſafety, *Pſal.*91. and accordingly ſome read it, He ſhall keep back his own ſoul, &c.

And his life from periſhing by the ſword] Whether by the ſword of God or man, he ſhall be extra jactum, out of the gunſhot or danger of any death, whether corporal or eternal. The univerſal Antidote for all the judgements of God, is, our humble repentance. Aaron eſcaped by it, when Miriam was ſmitten with Leproſie.

Per miſerere mei, tollitur ira Dei.

This is the Rain-bow, which if God ſee ſhining in our hearts, he will never drowne our ſouls. Jehoſaphat by this eſcaped the edge of the ſword. David and his poor ſheep the ſtroak of the puniſhing Angel; all the crowned Saints now in heaven, the damnation of hell, &c.

Verſe 19 He is chaſtened alſo with pain upon his bed] He is chaſtened or chidden; for all diſeaſes are vocal: they are real reprehenſions. As God is ſaid to hold his peace, when he puniſheth not, *Pſal.*50.21. *Iſai.*42.14. ſo to preach and reprove when he doth, *Iſai.*26.9. and 28.19. Thus God by chaſtening David, inſtructed him every morning, *Pſal.*73.14. His reines alſo taught him in the night ſeaſon. Sickneſſe (ſaith one) is the ſhop of vertue. It is morum diſciplina, felicitatis meditatorium, voluntatis Dei Schola; ſaith another. King Alfred found it ſo, and therefore beſought God, to ſend him ever and anon ſome fit of ſickneſſe; for that (ſaith he) I ever find my ſelf beſt when worſt, beſt in ſoul, when worſt in body, the ſickneſs of this is a medicine to that. Corripitur dolore.

And the multitude of his bones with ſtrong pain] Some read it, Et lis eſt oſſium ejus vehemens, his bones rattle in his skin, as we ſay. Confer Pſal. 38.4. He is all over ſo ill at eaſe, that live he would not, dye he cannot; his pain piercing even to his very bones, and drinking up his marrow; as Jobs did: all this Diſcourſe being exemplified in him, ſave that we finde not that he kept his bed.

Verſe 20. So that his life abhorreth bread] Which is the ſtaffe of mans life, and by the Latines called Panis, of the Greek πᾶν, as if it were all in all. This the ſick man velut ſordidum abominatur, abhorreth as ſome filthy thing (ſo the Original word here ſignifieth,) he naſeateth, and cannot away with it, though made of the Kidneyes of wheat, as Moſes phraſeth it; he brooks it no better then if it were made of ſaw duſt, or mixt with gravel, or made with mans dung, as that in Ezekiel.

And his ſoul dainty meats] Heb. Meats of deſire: Thoſe Dainties which he once ſought ſo paſſionately, and fed upon ſo eagerly, he finds no more reliſh in, then in the white of an egge or a dry chip; yea, they are no leſſe horrid to him then rank poiſon. See a like deſcription of a ſick perſon, *Pſal.*107.18. which ſeemeth to be taken from hence.

Verſe 21. His fleſh is conſumed away that it cannot be ſeen] He that was habilior paulo, corpulent and well lined within, as we ſay, is ſo pined with long ſickneſs, that you can hardly know him for the ſame man; and he may well cry out with the Prophet, My leanneſſe, my leanneſſe! Of Chriſt it is ſaid, (though not through ſickneſs) that he had no form nor comlineſſe, (and yet he was the faireſt amongſt men, Pſal. 45.2.) through grief and ſufferances, neither was there any beauty left that we ſhould deſire him, for his outſide, *Iſai.*53.2. And of Mr. Fox the Martyrologue, it is reported, that having with infinite paines finiſhed that elaborate Work of his, the Acts and Monuments of the Church, in eleven years ſpace, never uſing the help of any other man, he grew thereupon ſo leane and withered, that his friends knew him not. Now if ſorrow and hard ſtudy will ſo macerate a man, what marvel if long and ſharp ſickneſſe, and thereby extreme ſtomackleſneſſe cauſe leanneſs and deformity?

And his bones that were not ſeen] But could hardly be felt for fleſh and fat; now they ſtick out as in an Anatomy, ſo that you may count them, as alſo the veines and ſinewes; his body is become a very bag of bones, a skin-bottle in the ſmoak, as David hath it.

Verſe 22 Yea his ſoul draweth neer unto the grave] His ſoul, that is, His body, as ver. 18. for Elihu was no Mortalliſt, neither dreamt he of a Pſychopannychia. He is in the very confines of death, and no wayes likely to recover, he is free among the dead as the Pſalmiſt hath it.

And his life to the deſtroyers] Lethalibus malis, to deadly evils, ſaith Tremellius. Mortiferis; i.e. Morbis, to thoſe meſſengers of death, deadly Diſeaſes, ſaith Vatablus. To thoſe that kill; viz. to the Angels, by whom God ſometimes deſtroyeth men, as 2 Sam. 24. 16, 17. ſaith Piſcator. To enemies, ſay other. Pollinctoribus to the Bier-carryers, ſay the Tigurines, and ſo Beza paraphraſeth: ſo that hee ſtands not in need of any remedy or help of any thing more, then of thoſe who ſhould carry his carcaſs unto the grave.

Gentiles multa de parcis fabulati ſunt.

Verſe 23. If there be a meſſenger with him] An Angel ſay ſome: but one man may be an Angel to another, as Bradford was to Dr. Taylor Martyr, who uſually called him, That Angel of God John Bradford. If ſome Prophet or Teacher ſent of God (See Judg. 2. 1. Mal. 3. 1. Rev. 1. 20) to the ſick man, who ſeeth his face as the face of an Angel, and receiveth him as an Angel, yea as Chriſt himſelf, Gal. 4. in whoſe ſtead he is, 2 Cor. 5. 20. bringing the Embaſſage of reconciliation, ibid. then which what can be more acceptable?

An Interpreter] ſcil Of Gods holy Will, who may aſſure the ſick party that it is God who viſiteth him in very faithfulneſſe, that he may be true to his ſoul; that he doth it in mercy and in meaſure, not to ruine him, but to reduce him by repentance from dead works, and by faith in Chriſt Jeſus, &c. who may alſo ſet him in a courſe, and pray for him, as James 5. 16. Dr. Uſher tells us, that even in the times of Popery, amongſt our forefathers, the ordinary inſtruction appointed to be given to men upon their death-beds was, that they ſhould look to come to glory, not by their own merits, but by the vertue and merit of the Paſſion of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; that they ſhould place their whole confidence in his death only, and in no other thing: and that they ſhould interpoſe his death betwixt God and their ſinnes, betwixt them and Gods anger. This was right, and conſidering the times, admirable. This was better then that blaſphemous direction they give elſewhere to dying men to ſay, Conjunge Domine, &c Conjoyn, O Lord, mine obedience to all thoſe things which Chriſt ſuffered for me, &c.

Serm. on Eph. 4. 13.

One among a thouſand] Unus è millibus, not Unus è ſimilibus; as the Vulgar Latine hath it by a groſs miſtake, ſuch as that Tranſlation hath many. One among a thouſand, he is ſaid to be, for the ſcarcity of ſuch as can time a word, comfort the afflicted conſcience, and ſpeak to the heart of a poor diſtreſſed Creature, who laboureth under the ſenſe of ſin, and fear of wrath. O quam hoc non eſt omnium; This very few can skill of. Luther, who was excellent at it himſelf, telleth us, That it is a work every whit as hard, as to raiſe the dead to life again. Go ye rather to them that ſell (ſaid the wiſe to the fooliſh Virgins) and thoſe are rare; ſcil. ſuch faithful and wiſe diſtributers of Gods grace, as having the tongue of the Learned, and being inſtructed for that purpoſe to the Kingdome of heaven, can comfort the feeble minded, ſhore up and ſupport the weak, &c. ſuch a choice man is worth his weight in gold, and O how beautiful are his feet, Angelicall his face!

Iſaiah 50. 4

To declare unto man his uprightneſſe] Or, His Righteouſneſſe, that is, Either the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, who is his peace; or His, that is, the righteouſneſſe of his own experience, how he hath been raiſed and received to mercy. Or, His, to clear up to him his ſpiritual eſtate, and ſhew his evangelical righteouſneſs, conſiſting more in purpoſe then in practice; in confeſſion of our imperfection, then in any perfection we can attain unto. It is not ſo much our inherent righteouſneſſe, in regard of the worth, dignity and excellency of it, much leſſe purity and perfection in it, but as it is a fruit of Gods love and token of his favour, a ſigne of our Adoption and Juſtification, and a pledge of our glorification, that yeeldeth comfort. And this it will do, when skilfully made out to a poor ſoul by a godly Miniſter, and ſet on by the hand of that holy Spirit, whereby the Saints are ſealed to the day of Redemption, *Eph.*4.30. and 1.13.

Verſe 24. Then is he gracious unto him, and ſaith] If the ſick man, thus counſelled and comforted, repent and believe the Goſpel, delivering himſelf up to God, and to that his Meſſenger by the will of God, Mercy and Truth ſhall be with him, he ſhall be cured on both ſides, as that Palſie man was, *Matth.*9.2. the Lord ſhall raiſe him up, if it may ſtand with his eternal welfare. But howſoever, if he have committed ſinnes, it ſhall be forgiven him, James 5.15. Both the guilt and filth of them ſhall be taken away, ſo that he ſhall be able to look death in the face with everlaſting comfort, as being made to him janua vitæ, porta cœli; a poſtern to let out temporal, but a ſtreet door to let in eternal life.

Deliver him from going down to the pit] Tel him from me, that he ſhall not dye, but live, and declare the works of the Lord. as *Pſal.*118.17. Nay, ſay to this righteous man, tell him ſo from me, that it ſhall be well with him, and very well, *Iſai.*3.10. Redeem him from going down to the infernal pit: that is, declare that Redemption to him wrought for him by Chriſt, and apply it to his conſcience, powre the oyle of grace into his broken veſſel, and aſſure him in mine name, and by mine Authority, that I am his ſalvation. Whoſe ſinnes ſoever ye, my faithful Miniſters remit, they are remitted unto them; and whatſoever ye looſe on earth, ſhall be looſed in heaven, *Matth.*18.18 *Joh.*20.23. But all this miniſterially and declaratively, not abſolutely and out of a full liberty and power, as Popiſh Prieſts arrogate. I have known one (ſaith a very grave Divine) who neither by education or affection was diſpoſed to Popery, who having the ill hap (when his conſcience was perplext) to fall into the hands of a Popiſh Prieſt, upon this reaſon, (becauſe (as the Prieſt ſuggeſted) that Religion afforded more comfort, becauſe it had, and exerciſed, a power to pardon ſin, which our Miniſters neither did, nor durſt aſſume unto themſelves) he became a Papiſt. But it is honour enough to Miniſters (and may be comfort enough to their hearers,) that God gives them commiſſion to deliver a penitent man from hell; not as the Meanes (for that is Chriſt alone) but as Inſtruments, 1. To apply Chriſt crucified, or rather riſen again unto him. 2. To pronounce his ſafety and ſalvation, upon the due uſe of that means. And this is the greateſt honour that ever was done to any mere creature. Angels never had ſuch a Commiſſion. They indeed are Miniſters for the good of thoſe that ſhall be heirs of ſalvation, *Heb.*1.14. But Miniſters are called Saviours, *Obad.*21. 1 *Tim.*4.16. *Jam.*3.20. Mr. Leyhis Pattern of Piety. 145.

I have found a ranſom] Or, An attonement; a cover for his ſin; as a thing is covered with plaiſter, or as under the Law, the Ark covered the Decalogue, the Mercy Seat upon it, and over them two Cherubims covering one another; all which ſhewed Chriſt covering the Curſes of the Law, and expiating the ſins of his people, which things the Angels deſire to pry into, as into the patterns of Gods deep wiſdom, who hath found out ſuch a ranſom, which he now profeſſeth to accept for this penitent man, 1 *Tim.*2.6. *Pſal.*32.1.

Verſe 25 His fleſh ſhall be freſher then a childs] Tender and ſmooth, full of good blood and freſh ſpirits, he ſhall be battle and blith like a ſucking. See a like Hyperbole concerning Naaman the Syrian reſtored to health, 2 Kings 5.14. implying, that his diſeaſe was throughly cured, and his fleſh in better caſe then ever. There is a memorable ſtory in the Acts and Monuments of the Church, which here may not unfitly be inſerted, to ſhew the ſweet fruits of remiſſion of ſins by the free mercy of God. In the dungeon with Petrus Bergerius at Lions in France, was a certain thief and Malefactor, who had lain in the dungeon the ſpace of ſeven or eight months. This thief for pain and torment cryed out of God, and curſt his Parents that begat him, being almoſt eaten up with lice, miſerably handled; and fed with ſuch bread as dogs and horſes had refuſed to eat. So it pleaſed the goodneſs of the Almighty, that through the teaching and prayer of this Bergerius, he was brought to repentance and the knowledge of God, learning much comfort and patience by the word of the Goſpel preached unto him. Touching his converſion, himſelf wrote a ſweet Letter to ſome friends, declaring therein that the next day after he had taken hold of the Goſpel

Act. & Mon. f. 828. ſpel, and framed himſelf to patience according to the ſame, his lice (which he could pluck out before by twenty at once betwixt his fingers) now were ſo gone from him, that he had not one; his rotten fleſh (the Vulgar tranſlateth this Text thus, Conſumpta eſt ejus caro à ſupplicijs) was recruited, and the Almes of good people ſo extended toward him, that he was fed with white bred, and that which was very good. His name was John Chambone.

He ſhall return to the dayes of his youth] Rejuveneſcet, He ſhall grow young again, and renew his youth, like the Eagles, Pſal. 103. 4. He ſhall be vigorous and active, as Iſai. 40. 31.

Verſe 26. He ſhall pray unto God, and he will be favourable unto him] All former unkindneſſes notwithſtanding. God will caſt his ſins into the bottom of the ſea, and be as propitious to the poor ſinner now reconciled, recovered, and making requeſt, as if he had never been offended by him. Amongſt men, Reconciliationes ſunt vulpinæ amicitiæ, Reconciliations are for the moſt part Fox-like friendſhips; and theres little truſt to them. Not ſo betwixt God and men: witneſſe Peter, of whom Chriſt thought no whit the worſe for his threefold denyal of him, when once he wept bitterly, and prayed for pardon. Go tel the Diſciples, and Peter, that I am riſen. If any man want wiſdom, or any other good thing elſe, let him aſk it of God, who giveth unto all men liberally, and hitteth no man in the teeth, either with his preſent weakneſſes, or by-paſt wickedneſſes. Imò plus eſt propemodum à vitiis ſe revocaſſe, quam vitia ipſa neſciviſſe, ſaith a Father. Penitence is (in a manner) as good as Innocence.

Ambroſ. in Pſa.

Oſtendet ei faciem ſuam in jubilo.

He ſhall ſee his face with joy] Or, God ſhall make him to ſee his face with joy, even with joyful acclamation, when he ſhall find himſelf poſſeſt of Gods Kingdome, which conſiſteth in Righteouſneſs and peace, and joy in the holy Ghoſt; which Chryſoſtom rightly calleth οὐρανὸν πρὸ οὐρανοῦ, heaven afore hand.

For he will render unto man his righteouſneſſe] Which he had loſt by falling into ſin, as Ezek. 18. 24. Underſtand it of degrees and meaſures: for true grace cannot wholly be loſt. Or he will render unto him now in Chriſt, that righteouſneſſe he loſt in Adam, he will fully and freely juſtifie him, and ſweetly ſeale him up to the day of Redemption; the former falling out ſhall be but a renewing of love; as it was betwixt Chriſt and his Spouſe, Cant. 5. and 6.

Rurſus eum in album juſtorum & piorum referet. Lav.

Verſe 27. He looketh upon men] He looketh to ſee when any wil repent and return unto him. Now Chriſts looks are often operative, and cauſe that which he looks after. A ſtroke from guilt broke Judas heart into deſpair; but a look from Chriſt, broke Peters heart into tears.

And if any ſay, I have ſinned] So he ſay it penitently, as David and the Prodigal, and not fainedly, as Saul; or forcedly, as Pharaoh; or deſperately, as Judas. In mens Courts, ſaith Quintilian, its beſt to ſay, Non feci, to plead, Not guilty: but in Gods Court its better to ſay, Ego feci, Guilty, Lord; Mercy Lord; and not to put God to his proofs, as they did, Jer. 2. 35. ſith he that hideth his ſins ſhall not proſper, but he that confeſſeth and forſaketh them ſhall find mercy, Prov. 28. 13.

And perverted that which was right] Thus the true penitentiary layeth load upon himſelf, and aggravateth his ſinnes, whereof (ſaith Merlin) we have here a definition anſwerable to that of St. John, 1 Epiſt. 3. 4. Sin is the tranſgreſſion of the Law. I have writhed from the right, ſaith He in the Text. I have turned aſide to crooked wayes, and ſo have deſerved to be led forth with the workers of iniquity, Pſal. 125. 5. As Cattle are to the ſlaughter, or malefactors to execution.

Non æquale fuit

And it profited me not] Sin is an ill Pay-maſter, and ſends home all her ſervants by weeping croſſe. The beſt that can come of it, is ſhame, Rom. 6. 21. and godly ſorrow working repentance, 2 Cor. 7. 10. but uſually the end of thoſe things is death: this is the juſt hire of the leaſt ſin, Rom. 6. 23. It not only profiteth not (what ever it promiſeth) but prejudiceth and proves pernicious. This penitent man thanks his ſin for his late ſickneſſe, and yet thinks he hath eſcaped fair too: for ſo ſome render the Text, Nec pœnas condignas dedi, My puniſhment hath been leſſe then mens offence. See Ezra 9. 13. with the Note there.

Ver. 28. He will deliver his ſoul from going, &c.] God wil heal him, and lengthen out his his life. Or the ſick man will, by his unfained repentance, procure his own reprieve and deliverance from deadly danger. Some make theſe words to be the ſick mans thankful confeſſion, He hath redeemed my ſoul, &c. not unlike that of Davids, Pſal. 116.8. and that of Hezekiah, Iſai. 38.17.

And his life ſhall ſee the light] He ſhall not only live, but live happily and comfortably: a joyleſſe life is no life.

Verſe 29. Lo all theſe things worketh God oftentimes] Heb. Twice, thrice, ſuch is his patience, that he tryeth all concluſions, as it were, and beareth long with mens evil manners: one while caſting them down, and making them believe he will pitch them into hell, and another while raiſing them up again, and reſtoring them, that if nothing will do he may pay them all at once for the new and the old, as he did Baal, and Pharaoh, and Nineveh, becauſe they deſpiſed the riches of his goodneſs, and forbearance, and long-ſuffering, not knowing, or not weighing, that the goodneſs of God ſhould have led them to repentance, Rom. 2.4,5. Wo be to him, that will not be warned at the firſt, ſecond or third time. See Am. 1.3. and 2.1. &c. with the Notes. R. Solomon would thence infer, That God pardoneth a man only thrice, and then if he take not warning, to hell he muſt: and this he thinketh to be Elihu's meaning here. But this is to limit the Holy One of Iſrael, who multiplyeth pardon, as we multiply ſinne, Iſai. 55.7. and further addeth, for our comfort, verſ. 8. That his thoughts are not our thoughts, nor his wayes our wayes; but as the heavens are higher then the earth, &c. We are apt to meaſure God by our models, to caſt him into a diſhonourable mould, and to think him like our ſelves in Mercy, Power, and other of his Attributes. Xenophanes was wont to ſay, that if the creatures were put to paint the Creator, they would ſurely conceit him to be like themſelves, becauſe a creature cannot think of any thing higher then a creature. So deal we for the moſt part with Almighty God. But he is God and not man: he is Jehovah that changeth not, neither is there any God like unto him for pardoning iniquity, not once but often, Micah 7.18,19. See the Note there. He who commandeth us to forgive an offending brother ſeventy times ſeven times in a day, if he ſay, It repenteth me, What will not himſelf do in ſuch a caſe?

Verſe 30 To bring back his ſoul from the pit] i. e. That he may ſave him from temporal and eternal deſtruction, which is the moſt excellent fruit of affliction ſanctified. We are judged of the Lord, that we may not be condemned with the world. So that a Saint may ſay, Periſſem niſi periiſſem, I had been undone, had I not been undone.

Ferre minora volo, ne graviora feram.

To be inlightned with the light of the living] To live comfortably, and to be famous among the Saints; who had they not been reduced by affliction, would have periſhed infamous and obſcure, wrapt up in the ſheet of ſhame, and going out in a ſnuff. Conſpicuum ſit inter homines. Mercer.

Verſe 31. Mark well, O Job, hearken unto me] For I ſpeak from God, and for God. It was a good ſpeech of Auſtin to Manichæus, conteſting with him for audience. Hear me, hear me, ſaid Manichæus. Nay, ſaith Auſtin, Nec ego te, nec tu me, ſed ambo audiamus Apoſtolum, dicentem, Peccatum non cognovi, &c. Neither will I hear thee, nor do thou hear me, but let us both hear the Apoſtle, ſaying, I had not known luſt, &c.

Verſe 32. If thou haſt any thing to ſay, anſwer me] Heb. If thou haſt words, yet not empty words, but ſuch as may bear weight, and make for thy defence. Some mens diſcourſes are nothing elſe but words. Hermodorus of old was ſaid to ſell words for want of better Commodities. Eraſmus was noted for a very wordy man. Turrian for a great Trifler; Cornicatas citius in Africa, quam res rationeſque ſolidas in ejus ſcriptis reperias, ſaith one. Elihu would have no ſuch words, nor any vile man elſe; for they are very irkſome, yea vexatious. Λόγους ἐμοὺς ἐδίετο ἐμπολᾶσθαι. Verba habet ſine rebus Eraſmus.

Speak, for I deſire to juſtifie thee] Not to condemne thee, as theſe three have done: but to hear thee and clear thee as much as may be. This was fair dealing. Some are ſo critical and reaſty, that they will not hear the adverſe party, or bear with any that diſſent: as the Jeſuits, many fierce Lutherans, yea Luther himſelf, as appeareth by his bitter invectives against Carolostadius, Zuinglius, all the Helvetian Churches, that would not receive the Doctrine of Conſubſtantiation. —Tantæne animis cœleſtibus iræ? He would not once hear the contrary party, nor read their Books, but called them Arch Divels, and all that ever was naught, as he doth in his Epiſtle to the Senate of Frankford.

Verſe 33. If not, hearken unto me] Elihu is much in calling for attention: ſo are all the Prophets, and Chriſt the Arch Prophet, as Matth. 13. 9. where, although it might ſeem ſuperfluous to ſtir up ſuch to hear, as had come from all parts for that purpoſe, and now hung upon his holy lips, as the babe doth on the breſt, Luke 12. ult. yet he well knowing our heedleſneſſe and fickleneſſe, doth it once and again, leaving all Miniſters an example to do likewiſe.

Hold thy peace] Viz. Whiles I am ſpeaking, interrupt me not, but have patience. Some men, as they have fel in aure, gall in their eares (as ſome Creatures are ſaid to have) ſo they have fire in their tongues, which they preſently ſpit at all that offend them in the leaſt.

And I ſhall teach thee wiſdom] A good inducement to thee to hear: I will not trouble thee with trifles, nor detain thee with endleſs and needleſs diſcourſes; but ſet before thee Gods wiſe procedings, and bring thee to ſuch a ſight of thine own folly, as ſhall render thee reſtleſs till ſet right for heaven.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Verſe 1. Furthermore Elihu anſwered and ſaid.]

Pronuncians itaque Eliu. Elihu going on ſtill in his anger and ſpeech.

i.e. HE proſecuted his former Diſcourſe, he thus pronounced (as the Vulgar hath it) in anſwer to ſome of Jobs former ſpeeches, which he here reciteth, but not ſo candidly, and refelleth, but not ſo mildly, as was meet. True it is that Job in his heat had let fall very many laviſh and inconſiderate ſpeeches, as is to be ſeen almoſt throughout the tenth Chapter. But yet it was far from him ever to ſay either that himſelf was without ſin, or that God was unjuſt, as Elihu would bear him downe; very odiouſly taking up certain ſayings of his, that way ſounding, and very gravely calling forth the reſt there preſent to give ſentence with him againſt Job. Yet is not Elihu to be cenſured for a proud, arrogant perſon (as ſome make him) but to be eſteemed, Sapiens & egregius vir, as Lavater here ſtileth him, a wiſe and excellent man: though he ſhould have conſidered, That the Spirit of God is neque mendax, neque mordax, a Spirit of truth and of meekneſſe.

Verſe 2. Hear my words, O ye wiſe men] And thoſe are not many, Heſ. 14. 9. He excludeth poor Job, whom yet he had promiſed to teach wiſdome, chap. 33. 33. And that he ſpoke not to the many, it is probable, for they have not thoſe aures purgatas, that he calleth for in the next verſe. Βαρύτεροι ferè ſunt, they are heavy eared for moſt part, and of dull apprehenſion:

Baôtum in patria, craſſoque ſub aere nati.

To the other three then of Jobs friends he applyeth himſelf: whom becauſe he had ſharply reproved before, and that they may not think that he held himſelf the only wiſe man amongſt them, he thus beſpeaketh to get audience, and makes them Judges of his diſcourſe. Men may be wiſe in ſome things, that have carried the matter fooliſhly enough in other.

Δεῦτε ἀνδρες σοφοὶ ἀκούσατε μου τὰ ῥήματα Theog.

And give ear unto me, ye that have knowledg] It is an happineſs to have ſuch hearers. I ſpeak as to wiſe men, judge ye what I ſay, 1 Cor. 10. 15. Jovianus the Emperor was wont to wiſh, That he might govern wiſe men, and that wiſe men might govern him. But as it was once ſaid, That there was never leſſe wiſdom in Greece then in the dayes of the ſeven wiſe men: So may we now well complain, that there is a very great want of ſound and ſaving knowledg in this great abundance of helps thereunto: So that we may cry out with the Prophet Iſaiah, whom ſhall we teach knowledg, and whom ſhall we make to underſtand the hearing? Them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breſts; q.d. We have to do with very babies, children in underſtanding, but not in malice.

Verſe 3. For the ear tryeth words] And for that end we have that excellent ſenſe of hearing given us, that we may hear with judgment, and trying all things, hold faſt that which is good, 1 Theſ. 5.21. taking heed what we hear, Mark 4.24. as by the taſte we may take heed what we let down; for elſe a man may eaſily eat his own bane, drink his poyſon: So here, for the ſoul hath her ſenſes alſo, *Phil.*1.9. and theſe habitually exerciſed to diſcern good and evil, *Hebr.*5.ult. Which whileſt carnal people want, they are carried away as they are led, 1 *Cor.*12.2. Plucked away with the error of the wicked, 2 *Pet.*3.17, wherried about with every wind of Doctrine, *Heb.*13.9. &c. See the Note on *chap.*12.1.

Verſe 4. Let us chuſe to us judgment] Let us ſummon the ſobriety of our ſenſes before our judgments; laying aſide all prejudice: for, Omne judicium à ſe aufert qui præjudicium affert; He can never judg aright, who comes to a Cauſe foreſtalled or prepoſſeſſed.

Let us know amongſt our ſelves what is good] Let us go knowingly to work, according to apparant truth; and not uſe cunningly deviſed Arguments, as many (Mataeologi rather then Theologi) do now adayes in the greateſt Controverſies of Religion: and hereunto let us all contribute our beſt help, for the finding out of truth, and convincing of Job.

Verſe 5. For Job hath ſaid, I am righteous] So he was with a two fold righteouſneſs; imputed, or the righteouſneſſe of Juſtification; and imparted, or the righteouſneſſe of Sanctification. But Elihu underſtood him as if he had ſaid, I am ſinleſs: This Job never ſaid; only he cleared himſelf of foul offences wherewith his friends falſely charged him: and aſſerted his own integrity, whereof he ſeemed to be more ſollicitous, than of giving God the glory of his juſtice: and therein he was to be blamed, as here he is to ſome purpoſe.

And God hath taken away my judgement] ſc. By handling me like a wicked man, and not ſhewing me why: ſee *chap.*27.2. where Job had uſed theſe very words, but not in the ſenſe that Elihu urgeth them againſt him.

Verſe 6. Should I lye againſt my right?] Ut meam cauſam prodam, ſo as to betray my cauſe, and yield my ſelf guilty, when I know my ſelf innocent? This I will never do, ſaid Job: no more would that peerleſs Lady Elizabeth, when as a traytour ſhe was laid up in the Tower, and preſſed to appeach her ſelf. Better die, than lye. R. Levi.

My wound is incurable without tranſgreſſion] Theſe laſt words, without tranſgreſſion, Elihu ſpitefully thruſteth in, ſaith Beza. Others think they may be gathered out of chap. 9.17. & 16.17. Without preſumtuous ſin, (which David calleth the great tranſgreſſion, the wickedneſs with a witneſs) Job might truly ſay, it may be: for all men are ſinners, yet not all alike; though all have a dyſcraſie, yet every man hath not a feaver; and though none are without ill humors, yet ſome have not a leproſie upon them.

Verſe 7. What man is like Job?] This Elihu ſpeaketh by way of angry admiration, as if he would make Job a very Non-ſuch, a match-leſs offendor; and that he much wondred with what face he could ſpeak in that ſort: What, ſuch a man as Job do thus? O ſhameful! what? upbraid and reproach Almighty God? who would ever have expected ſuch words from ſuch a mouth? Is the man in his right minde, wot you, that he thus maketh himſelf a common laughing-ſtock, and by-word, and yet maketh nothing of any thing, but doth with as great facility and readineſs ſwallow up mens ſcoffs and taunts, as if he were drinking cold water, and no more is he troubled at them? Why, but is this Job? and is it poſſible that he ſhould have ſo far loſt all fear of God, and ſhame of the world, that he ſhould ſet his mouth againſt heaven, as if he would ſpet in Gods face, and not care though he drink up ſcorning and affronts like water, quaſi maledictis alereturut venenis caprea, as if he were much taken and tickled with them? True it is, that Nemo pluris æſtimavit virtutem Exclamatio admirativa. Piſc.

tutem, as Seneca ſaith, No man ſetteth a better price upon vertue, than he who will rather part with his good name, than part with his honeſty. But it is alſo as true, that to neglect altogether what others think and ſay of us, non ſolùm arrogantis eſt, ſed & diſſoluti, is the part not of a proud only, but of a forſorn perſon, ſaith the Oratour. Cic.

Verſe 8. Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity] Strange if he ſhould: for the wicked is abomination to the righteous, Prov. 29. ult. Lord gather not my ſoul with ſinners, nor my life with bloody men, ſaith David, Pſal. 26. 9. Lord, ſend me not to hell among the wicked, (ſaid a certain good woman upon her death-bed) for thou knoweſt I never liked their company here on earth. But how proveth Elihu this Charge againſt Job, who was ever a terrour to graceleſs Belialiſts? Forſooth he gathereth it from a certain ſpeech of his, if he could tell what, or when it was uttered.

Verſe 9. For he hath ſaid, It profiteth a man not] Did Job ever ſay ſo, or think ſo? Where? and when? He ſaid indeed (and truly) that in this life it is oft ſeen, that bad men proſper, and good men ſuffer. But muſt it needs follow therefore, that it is a courſe of no profit to walk with God? Knoweth not Elihu, that there is nothing that may not be taken with either hand? and that it is a ſpiritual unmannerlineſs to take it with the left? Indeed it is not amiſs to admoniſh good men, what abſurdities may be gathered out of their words: and 'tis fit that they ſhould prevent it, as much as may be. Elihu alſo was the more to be born with (and that made Job let him go on, likely, without a reply) becauſe he pleaded for God, and the glory of his juſtice, which Job had ſomewhat wronged, as cannot be denied, whiles he gave too much way to his grief and other paſſions, and now beginneth to be ſenſible of his out-burſts: But truly, if he ſhould have ſaid as here he is taxed, (and yet David and Jeremy ſaid little leſs) he would have gone in company with thoſe workers of iniquity, Iſai. 58. 3. Mal. 3. 14, 15. and have lifted at the very foundation of all true Religion, Heb. 11. 6. and thence it was, that Elihu was ſo hot. But men muſt take heed of drawing odious conſequences out of other mens ſpeeches; and of forcing them to go two miles, when they would go but one. Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter, and the wringing of the noſe bringeth forth blood, &c. Prov. 30. 33.

That he ſhould delight himſelf with God] Or, When he runneth with God. Tremellius, When he ſhall be willing to walk with God. as Gen. 5. 22. The Tigurines render the whole verſe thus, Dixit enim, vir non faciet paria, ſi cum Deo curſu contendat. Sure it is nec volentis, nec volantis, (as a Noble man gave it for his Motto) It is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth; no though he could run as faſt as a bird can flye, but in God that ſheweth mercy. See Ezek. 1. 14

Verſe 16. Therefore hearken unto me ye men of underſtanding] Heb. Ye men of heart; Egregiè cordati Viri. Cor eſt ſedes ſapientiæ.

Mentemque habere queis bonam
Et eſſe corculis datum eſt.

Having recited Jobs evil ſpeeches, he turneth away from him as it were in great diſpleaſure, and directeth his ſpeech to others. See the like done by Jacob, Geneſ. 49. 4. We ſhould abhor that which is evil; and ſhew our deteſtation thereof.

Far be it from God that he ſhould do wickedneſſe, &c.] ſcil. By puniſhing any without a cauſe; and this he double-denyeth for better aſſurance. Cauſe enough there may be found in the very beſt, as well by reaſon of their actual abominations (their omiſſions, commiſſions, and failings in the manner) as of their birth-blot, which ever abideth with them while they are here, and is a ſeed-plot of all ſin. How then can God wrong any one? Surely it is inconſiſtent with Gods 1. Nature, here: 2. Actions, v. 11. 3. Will, v. 12. And although he might, to ſhew his Soveraignty, puniſh men for his pleaſure, Rom. 9. 20. yet far be it from us to imagine that he will abuſe his might and power to do any thing unjuſt or unbeſeeming his goodneſſe.

Verſe 11. For the work of a man ſhall he render unto him] This is both his Covenant Covenant and his cuſtome: ſo far is he from doing wrong to any, that every man ſhall be ſure to reap as he ſowes, to drink as he brewes, to receive according to that he hath done in the fleſh, whether good or evil, 2 Cor. 5.10. And albeit this is not done forthwith, yet we may write upon it, and reckon that nondum omnium dierum ſoles occiderunt; as ſure as the night followeth the day, a day of account will come, and God will render unto each man reward or puniſhment according to his works.

And cauſe every man to find according to his wayes] According to the courſe of his life, and not according to this or that particular action. A Dog may ſet his foot as far within the Sanctuary as a David; and a David may in ſome particular out-ſin a fire brand of hell. But the wayes of a man are before the eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings, Prov. 5.21. He conſidereth the bent, frame, and tendency of the heart, and proceeds accordingly.

Verſe 12. Yea ſurely God will not do wickedly] This muſt be laid down for a certain truth, and is therefore ſo reiterated. Job had ſaid as much to this purpoſe as Elihu could do; but then he had ſeemingly daſhed all againe with his inconſiderate complaints and murmurings. This Elihu could not bear, but again and again celebrateth the righteouſneſſe of God; and when he hath ſaid his utmoſt, ſeemeth to ſay as Cicero once did of Craſſus and Antonius the Roman Orators, That if any man think he had ſaid too much in commendation of them, he muſt needs be ſuch an one as either knew them not, or was not able to judge of their worth. As for Job, whom he here confuteth, he ſeemes to ſay of him, as Calvin ſomewhere doth of Luther, That as he excelled with great vertues, ſo he was not without his great failings. Atque minam recognoſcendis ſuis vitiis plus opera dediſſet; and I would, ſaith he, that he had ſpent leſſe time in declaiming againſt others, and more in recognizing his own faults. Cic. de Orat. l. 3 Calv. ep. Bulling

Neither will the Almighty pervert judgment] For ſhall not the Judge of all the earth do right? See the Note on chap. 7.3.

Verſe 13. Who hath given him a charge over all the earth?] ſcil. To govern it; Is not he the Maker and Monarch of all men? Who is his Superiour? and to whom ſhall he give account? and who ſhall expoſtulate with him about injuſtice? Or, for fear of whom ſhould he warp or writh? The Emperor cannot do right, ſaith One, becauſe he hath none to over-awe him, or queſtion him. It is ſaid of Trajan, that he neither feared nor hated any man living. What then ſhall we think of him, who is Moderator & Dominator ſupremus ac ſolus, Theophil. Inſt.] Mercer.

Or who hath diſpoſed the whole world?] The habitable world: and eſpecially that habitable part of Gods earth, as man is called, Prov. 8.31.

Verſe 14. If he ſet his heart upon man] Viz. For evil, and not for good, and have a purpoſe to unmake him again, which he can as eaſily do, as will it to be done.

If he gather unto himſelf his Spirit and his breath] If he take away his life, which what is it elſe, but a puffe of wind, a vapour, &c. who can ſay he is unjuſt? May not the Potter do with his pot as he pleaſeth? We ſubſiſt meerly by his Manutenſion; and if he but pull back his hand only, we are gone immediately. This is to be ſeen in thoſe that ſwoon ſuddenly away. See Pſal. 104.29. and conſider how little this is conſidered by the moſt. Elihu thought, that Job was wanting herein: for he had heard him chap. 12. diſputing concerning the ſoveraigne and abſolute power of God, almoſt in the very ſame words, which himſelf here uſeth, from ver. 13. to 31.

Verſe 15. All fleſh ſhall periſh together] i. e. All men, called here All fleſh, as Mark 16.16. they are called every creature, a little world. If God command it to be ſo, they ſhall all breath out together.

And man ſhall turn to his duſt again] The body to the duſt whence it was taken, but the Spirit to God who gave it, Eccleſ. 12.

Verſe 16. If now thou haſt underſtanding, hear this] Hear it, and know it for thy good, as chap. 4.27. if at leaſt thou haſt any wit for thy ſelfe, or care of thine own well doing. This is a ſtinging Apoſtrophe to Job. Si vel miea eſt in te bona mentis; unleſſe thou haſt buried thy braines, and loſt thy ſenſes, liſten as for life.

Verse 17. Shall even he that hateth right govern?] Heb. Bind; sc. Malefactors, whom Magistrates use to hamper? Others take it of binding up the wounded after the manner of Chirurgeons. An qui odit judicium, Chirurgos imitaretur? so the Tigurines translate: Would he who hateth right, do as Chirurgeons use to do? Would God, if he were unrighteous, bind up the broken hearted, or receive into favour (as he doth) a sinner that repenteth, doing him good again, as if there never had been a breach betwixt them? It hath been noted, That a King hath his name in the Greek tongue from healing; and that Isai. 3.7. a Governor is called a Healer, or Binder up; the same word there as here in the Text. But how unfit for such an Office must he needs be, who not only doth not right, but hateth it, as did Nero, Caligula, Commodus, &c?

And wilt thou condemn him that is most just?] Or, That is strong and just; illúmne impietatis fugillabis? None in his right wits would ever do so: for what else were this, but to exalt a mans self above the divine Majesty? And yet what do they lesse then this, who grudge at Gods proceedings, and are ready to think that if they had the ordering of things in their hands, they could dispose of them a fair deal better? How absurd and unseemely this is in any one, is aptly set forth in the next verse, Is it fit, &c?

Tigur.

Verse 18. Is it fit to say to a King, Thou art wicked?] Heb. Belial; that is, Thou yoakelesse, lawlesse, masterlesse Monster. Kings are not wont to be so accoasted and wised, nor is it lawful, Exod 22.28. It is blasphemy in the second Table, to speak evil of dignities, Jude 8. It was some disadvantage to Saint Paul, that (although provoked and unjustly smitten) he called the High Priest whited wall, Act. 23.3 he was glad to excuse it by his ignorance. And Luther cryed our Henry 8 mercy, for his uncivil language to him, such as was that, Audi, Domine Rex, edocebo te, in a jeer. Henry 6. indeed was coursely handled in a tumult, and wounded, but then he was at an under; and being restored he freely pardoned the Offendor, saying, Alass poor soul, he struck me more to win favour with others, then of any ill will he bare me: But this was a rare example of patience in a King. Alexander the Great dealt more harshly with his friends Clitus and Callisthenes, for their plain-dealing. Tiberius put to death a Poet for uttering some free words against him, though under the person of Agamemnon, quem in tragœdia probris lacessisset. Savanarola suffered deeply for telling the Pope his own. And Bajazet the second took great revenge upon his Janizaries, who, for his casting Achmetes Bassa into prison, they in an uproar insolently cryed out, that they would by and by teach him as a drunkard, a beast, and a Rascal, to use his great Place and Calling with more sobriety and discretion. Kings must be spoken to with soft and silken words, as she said, ὦ ἥνσα, ὦ ἥνσα. If Elias, or Elisha, or Isaiah, or the Baptist do otherwise that is not a copy for every man to write after. Is it safe to take a Lion by the beard, or a Bear by the tooth? Naboth suffered, though falsly accused to curse the King: and Shimei had at length his payment for reviling David. If Ezekiel called the King of Judah, Thou wicked and profane Prince, chap. 21.25. that was by an extraordinary spirit, and by a special command of God.

And to Princes, ye are ungodly?] Ingenuis: These, as they must not be flattered, so neither may they be unmannerly advertized of their duty or danger. It is probable, that Joseph used some kind of preface to Pharaohs chief Baker in reading him that hard destiny, Gen 40.19. such haply as was that of Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar; chap. 4.19. My Lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, &c. Or as Philo brings him in with a Utinam tale somnium non vidisses, I would I had no such dream to interpret unto you. But for the matter he giveth him a sound, though a sharp interpretation.

Verse 19 How much lesse to him that accepteth not the person of Princes?] How much more both dangerous and undecent must it needs be, wrongfully to accuse God of injustice and partiality, which is far below him: sith he neither doth, nor needeth prefer great ones before meaner men in judgement? See on chap. 13.7. and 32.21.

Nor regardeth the rich more then the poor] The word rendred rich, opulent, or potent, comes either from a root that signifieth to save; because it is in the power of such to save others from hurt and damage: or else from another root, that signifi-eth, to cry aloud; becauſe ſuch men uſe to ſpeak their minds more freely and boldly, as having that which can bear them out. But God acknowledgeth them not as ſuch: only of them to whom much is given, much ſhall be required. שוע

For they are all the work of his hands] Both for their perſons, for they are all equally his creatures; and for their conditions, which God alſo hath cut them out, and apportioned. Thus he is ſaid to have made Moſes and Aaron, that is, to have advanced them, 1 Sam. 12. 6. and Chriſt is ſaid to have made the twelve, when he ordained them to the Apoſtleſhip, Mar. 3. 14.

Verſe 20. In a moment ſhall they die] Be they mean or mighty, they are, when God pleaſeth, ſuddenly ſwept away by the hand of death: as Cheſſe-men are into the bag, without diſtinction of Kings, Dukes, Biſhops, or Common people.

And the people ſhall be troubled at midnight] as were the Egyptians, when their firſt-born were ſlain in their dead ſleep, Exod. 12. 29. not without much terrour and tumult: and as were the Army of Sennacherib, 2 King. 19. 35. and Belſhazzar with his Babylon, Dan. 5. 30, 31. The people ſhall be troubled, they ſhall be ſhaken as leaves in a great wind, or be carried away as by a mighty torent; when they were moſt ſecure, and dreamt of no ſuch danger. Neither in all theſe alterations and various occurrences is God unrighteous, ſith he is debtour to none, neither doth he any thing without reaſon and right.

And paſſe away] Præteribunt, id eſt peribunt: they ſhall paſſe into the grave, as Eccleſ. 1. 4. One generation paſſeth, and another cometh: or they ſhall periſh, as when it is ſaid, Heaven and earth ſhall paſs away. The Vulgar hath it, Pertranſibunt. It is not tranſibunt, they ſhall paſſe, ſaith Gregory; but pertranſibunt, they ſhall paſs thorow, becauſe the wicked are alwayes paſſing on to perdition, throughout all their lives.

And the mighty ſhall be taken away without hand] That is, without ſeeing the hand that ſmiteth them; which is, ſaith One, a divine force, inviſibly cutting aſunder the thred of their lives in a moment, Pſal. 76. 12. The Lord cutteth off the ſpirit of Princes. The Hebrew importeth, that he ſlips them off, as one ſhould ſlip off a flower betwixt his finger, or as one ſhould ſlip of a bunch of grapes, &c. The Original here is, They ſhall take away the mighty, that is, the Angels ſhall (as Luk. 12. 20.) hurry them out of the world without hand, that is without mans help, without humane violence.

Verſe 21. For his eyes are upon the Wayes of man] Gods Providence (like a well-drawn picture that eyeth each one in the room) obſerveth all things: he ſeeth cauſe enough thus to proceed in judgement againſt a perſon or people, though we ſee it not. And although one man knoweth not another, nor doth any man well know himſelf; yet God, following, as it were, all men hard at the heels, doth with his eyes narrowly obſerve and mark what way every one walketh in, he ſeeth all his goings: Let not men therefore pleaſe themſelves in their ſinful practiſes, as if God ſaw them not, becauſe for a time they ſcape unpuniſhed; Sæculi lætitia eſt impunita nequitia; but ſin and puniſhment are tyed together with chains of Adamant, and cannot long be aſunder.

Verſe 22. There is no darkneſs, nor ſhadow of death, &c.] Sinners would fain ſhroud and ſecret themſelves from Gods all-ſeeing eye: for which end they ſearch all corners, with Adam, and hope that their evil pranks and practiſes ſhall never come to light: but that cannot be, for not only darkneſs and the ſhadow of death, but Hell alſo is naked before him, and deſtruction hath no covering, Job 26. 6. See the Note there. See alſo Pſal. 139. 12. and Amos 9. 2, 3. Heb. 4. 13. with the Notes.

Where the workers of iniquity may hide themſelves] Either from Gods all-ſeeing eye, or puniſhing hand; Adam is pulled out of the thicket: Manaſſeth from among the thorns: Zedekiah, and his family, from between the two walls: many Jews out of the privies and other lurking-holes where they lay hid, at the laſt deſtruction of Jeruſalem.

Verſe 23. For he will not lay upon man more then right] Plus quàm par eſt. He cannot over-do likely: no, though he ſhould inflict upon him all the torments here, and tortures in hell, ſith death, in the utmoſt extent of it, is the Non nim ſ virum pote trà.

the juſt hire of the leaſt ſin, Romans, 6. 23. See Exr. 9. 13. with the Note.

That he ſhould enter into judgement with God] Commence a ſuit againſt him, or challenge him into the ſchools to argue it out with him, as thou Job haſt offered to do: but unadviſedly; ſith God hath juſtice on his ſide; as the very Heathens alſo ſaw, when they ſet Themis their goddeſſe of Juſtice τὸ δικαίωτατον, next of all to Jupiter, their chief god.

Verſe 24. He ſhall break in pieces mighty men, &c.] Infinitè conterit validos, ſo Tremellius rendreth it. He infinitely mawleth the mighty; and breaketh them in pieces like a potters veſſel, Pſal. 2. 9.

Without number] Or, Without inquiſition: as knowing all things afore-hand, and not needing any evidences or examination of witneſſes: Or, without end, becauſe their ruine is endleſſe. Ruina majorum ſit cautela minorum.

And ſet others in their ſtead] As is to be ſeen in the riſe, reign, and ruine of the four mighty Monarchies, and others not a few, that had their times, and their turns: as the Kingdom of the ten Tribes, which in a few years fell into nine ſeveral Families: and few of thoſe Kings died a natural death: No more did the Emperours of Rome, till Conſtantine. See Dan. 2. 21. Pſal. 113. 7, 8.

Verſe 25. Therefore he knoweth their works] It appeareth by their puniſhment, that God took notice of their wicked works; though they thought otherwiſe: yea, when they know not, or are not aware of it, he overthroweth them therefore. This he doth in the night, i. e. ſuddenly and unexpectedly. Others render it, Aſſoon as he hath changed the night, they are cruſhed; that is, as ſoon as he hath brought forth the light which revealeth all things, Epheſ. 5. 13. and layeth them open to publick view, who before were taken for better men, they are deſtroyed, as publick Peſts.

Verſe 26. He ſtriketh them as wicked men, &c.] Complodit eos, ſaith Junius, ſcilicet ut inflatas vejicas in ſua ipſorum ſede, he ſtriketh upon them, as blown bladders in their own ſeat. This is an elegant ſimilitude, ſetting forth the ſudden overthrow of graceleſs great Ones, as with a kind of noiſe, and not without publick notice; for it followeth,

In the open ſight of others] Heb. In the place of beholders, in proſcenio, as upon a Stage, or Scaffold, Diſcant juſtitiam moniti, & non temnere numen: others may hear and fear, and do no more ſo. God is pleaſed for this purpoſe to hang up ſome notorious offendors as it were in gibbets; as Pharaoh, Sennacherib, Antiochus, Herod, Julian, &c. See thoſe Writs of Execution, 1 Cor. 10. 5, 6, 7, &c. and be wiſe by others woes: enjoy their follies, and gather, with the Bee, ſweet honey out of thoſe bitter weeds. Pœna ad paucos, metus ad omnes.

Verſe 27. Becauſe they have turned back from him] To purſue after lying vanities, broken ciſterns; which whoſoever do, as they fall into two foul ſins at once (ſuch as heaven and earth have cauſe to be aſtoniſhed at, and afraid of) Jeremiah 2. 12, 13. ſo they are miſerable by their own Election, Jonah 2. verſ. 8.

And would not conſider any of his wayes] Wiſely conſider them, as David did Pſal. 119. 168. All Gods lawes were in his ſight: and all his wayes in Gods ſight. This was the general cauſe of their deſtruction. The ſpecial followeth.

Verſe 28. So that they cauſe the cry of the poor, &c.] Theſe they compel, by their oppreſſions, to waſh the earth with their tears, and to importune heaven with their complaints, as One phraſeth it. The wicked do as it were, bring up to God the cryes of the poor oppreſſed, and ſo pull upon themſelves inevitable deſtruction. for he is the poor mans Patron, and heareth the cry of the afflicted. The grand Signior would have the world take notice, that ſuch as lament unto him, ſhall be ſure to have redreſs and ſuccour from him. Wherefore alſo he calleth himſelf Awlem Penawh, The Worlds Refuge, A title far more fit for the God of heaven, than for any earthly Monarch, were he far more gracious than the great Turk, from whoſe courteſie (freely offered him) Luther bleſſed himſelf with a Deus me tueatur à tali beneficâ Domino; God defend me from ſuch a gracious Lord.

Verſe

Verſe 29. When he giveth quietneſſe, who then can make trouble] Ipſe tranquillabit, & quis inquietabit? This is like that of the Apoſtle, ſaith Brentius, Rom. 8. If God be for us, who can be againſt us? Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods Elect, &c? It is he alone who giveth peace, both of countrey and of conſcience; Peace, peace, Iſai. 26. 3. Pacem omnimodam; external, internal, eternal; and then, who can diſturb or unſettle? Surely as Iſaac once ſaid to Eſau, concerning Jacob, He is bleſſed, and he ſhall be bleſſed: ſo may it be ſaid of ſuch as have made their peace with God; Peace ſhall be upon them and Mercy, contra gentes, whoſoever ſaith nay to it; yea, though it be the Devil himſelf, that ὁ πονηρὸς, as he is oft called, the Troubleſome one: who, ever ſince he was caſt out of heaven, keeps ado on earth, and ſeeks to diſquiet all ſuch as by patient continuance in well-doing, ſeek for glory, and honour, and immortality, Rom. 2. 7.

And when he hideth his face, who then can behold him?] Him? Whom? God: who dare look upon him, or toward him for help, when he is throughly diſpleaſed and looketh irefully? Or, the party frowned on by God: who will ſmile upon him, or ſhew him any favour and furtherance? Here Aben-Ezra giveth a good Note, Averſio vultus Dei, &c. The turning away of Gods pleaſed countenance is the cauſe of all Wars and other diſaſters. The Phyſiologer in Epiphanius telleth of the Bird Charadius, that being brought into the room where a man lyeth ſick, if he look with a ſteddy and fixed eye upon the ſick man, he recovereth: but if he turn away from him, and look another way, the diſeaſe is to death. Apply this to God, and it fitteth.

Whether it be done againſt a Nation, or againſt a man only] All's a caſe (as they ſay) to God; he ſtands not upon multitudes, as men uſe to do in caſe of Mutinies or the like, to puniſh the tenth man or ſo, in terrorem, for a terrour to the reſt. This is not Gods way of puniſhing: but as a thouſand years are to him but as a day, and one day as a thouſand years: ſo when he proceeds to execution of Juſtice, whether it be done againſt a Nation, &c. All Nations to him are but as a drop of a bucket, or duſt of a balance, Iſai. 40. And hence he buried a world full of people in one univerſal grave of waters. And the wicked (be they never ſo many) ſhall be turned into hell: With whole nations that forget God, Pſal. 9. 17. God ſeemeth to ſay, Fiat juſtitia, ruat orbis.

Verſe 30. That the hypocrite reign not] That he reign no longer; Almighty God taketh order, by putting theſe mighties from their ſeats, and exalting them of low degree, Luk. 1. 52. And why? 1. Leſt the hypocrite, or the impure and impious man reign: Such as was Jehu, Herod, Julian, our Richard 3. Pope Sixtus Quintus, of whom One ſaith, that he was the moſt crouching humble Cardinal that ever was lodg'd in an oven, and the moſt ſtout proud Pope, that ever wore Crown: What pride equal to his, making Kings kiſſe his Pantofles? What humility (pretended) greater than his, ſhrieving himſelf daily on his knees to an ordinary Prieſt? He calleth himſelf the ſervant of Gods ſervants: and yet ſtamps in his Coyn, That Nation and Countrey that will not ſerve thee, ſhall be rooted out: he alſo ſuffereth his Paraſites to ſtile him, Our Lord God the Pope. Is not this a notorious hypocrite? and when ſuch a one reigneth and taketh upon him to be Lord of all both in ſpirituals and temporals, may not we conclude that God hideth his face (as in the former verſe) from his people? May we not cry out as Baſil once did, Num Eccleſias ſuas dereliquit Dominus? hath the Lord utterly forſaken his Churches? It is, doubtleſs, a very great judgement upon a people, when an hypocrite or a prophane perſon is ſet over them, who pretends the publick good to his own deſignes and ſelf-intereſts, and by his crafty inventions undoes his ſubjects, robbing them of their lawful liberties, and enſlaving them. Some read the words thus, He cauſeth that the hypocrite reigneth for the ſins of the people. It is threatened as an heavy curſe, Levit. 26. 17. If you ſtill treſpaſſe againſt me, I will ſet Princes over you that ſhall hate you; miſchievous, odious Princes, odious to God, malignant to the people: Such as was Phocas that bloody Tyrant, who, when he had ſlain his Maſter Mauricius, and reigned in his ſtead, there was an honeſt poor man, ſaith Cedrenus, who was earneſt with God to know a reaſon, why ſuch a thing was ſuffered? to whom it was anſwered, That a worſe man could not be found: and that the ſins of Chriſtians required it. We read of Attilus King of Swethland, that he made a Dog King of the Danes, in revenge of a great many many injuries received by them. Gunno likewiſe King of the Danes made a Dog King of Norway; and appointed Counſellours to do all things under his Title and Name: That which theſe men did ſpitefully, God ſomtimes doth righteouſly; ſetting up tyrants for a puniſhment to thoſe that were unthankful for better government: and would not have him to reign over them.

Leſt the people be enſnared] Heb. For the ſnares of the people; that is, for the injuries and vexations wherewith that hypocrite oppreſſed the people; to put an end to thoſe, by taking away the Tyrant, who for his cruel craft, and crafty cruelty, is here fitly compared to an hunter or fowler laying ſnares. Sunt autem leges iniquæ & exactiones injuſtæ principum hypocritarum, laquei & decipulæ quibus populum ſibi ſubjectum venantur & capiunt, ſaith Brentius here: i.e. Bad Lawes and unjuſt exactions of hypocritical Princes, are the ſnares and gins wherewith they hunt after, and catch their ſubjects.

Verſe 31. Surely it is meet to be ſaid unto God, I have born chaſtiſement] To convince a man of a fault, and not to adviſe him how to do better, is to ſnuff a Lamp and not pour more Oyle into it. Elihu therefore now ſets himſelf to counſel Job, whom he conceiveth he had ſufficiently convinced of injury done to God. Surely it is meet, &c. Par eſt; this is ſupplied by the Tranſlatours to make ſenſe; for the Original is very conciſe and dark, and therefore diverſely interpreted, as is alſo all this latter part of the Chapter. Some render it thus, But to God who ſaith, I pardon, I will not deſtroy, it ſhould be ſaid, That which I ſee not, teach thou me, &c. Some thus, Therefore we ought thus to ſpeak unto God, I ſuffer patiently, I will not break aſunder; viz. Theſe bonds wherewith thou haſt faſt bound me. Others thus; Hath Job ſaid to God, I have born, &c. q.d. Nothing leſſe, as ye all are witneſſes. Others again thus, Hath he; (that is, the Tyrant dethroned, as in the verſe aforegoing) ſaid to God, I have been, &c, Hath he confeſſed his wickedneſſe, and promiſed amendment? No ſuch matter ſurely, therefore is he juſtly puniſhed. This is a very good ſenſe, ſaith Mercer. But to ſtick to our laſt and beſt Tranſlation, Surely it is meet, &c, for is it fit that God ſhould caſt down the bucklers firſt, and not have the better of us? Should we not rather diſarm his juſt indignation by an humble yeeldance?

I have born chaſtiſement] Heb. I have born and will bear, being active in ſuffering, and taking up my croſs.

I will not offend any more] Heb. I will not corrupt; to wit, my wayes, and ſo undo my ſelf.

Verſe 32. That which I ſee not teach thou me] For I am yet in the dark, and know not the right cauſe wherefore thou afflicteſt me. Herein men are very apt to miſtake themſelves, and when God calls one way, to run another, as young Samuel did, 1 *Sam.*2. The divel alſo dealeth by the afflicted as the Jewes did by Chriſt, blindfolds them, and then bids them prophecy who ſmote them, and for what? Hence in afflictions we many times grope, as blind men, gueſſing at this cauſe, and at that, but ſeldome faſten on the right. Here then God muſt be ſought unto for direction, and beſought that he would graciouſly point us to the ſin he ſtrikes at. This Job had done once and again, *chap.*10.2. and 13.23. But Elihu would have him to do it yet better.

If I have done iniquity, I will do no more] Thus men muſt both vow and perform to the Lord their God, *Pſal.*76. 11. and not promiſe amendment as children do when taken up to be whipt; or as men in danger at ſea, or on their ſick beds, uſe to do largely; But then ſciapato il morbo, frandato il Santo, as the Italian Proverb hath it, When the Diſeaſe is removed, the Saint is defrauded. Pharaoh promiſed fair whiles upon the Rack; but got off once, he hardned his heart, and would do nothing. So thoſe ſlippery Votaries, *Jer.*34.11.

Verſe 33. Should it be according to thy mind] Heb. From with thee: q.d. Muſt things be as thou wilt? And is it fit for thee to preſcribe to the Almighty? (See *Hoſ.*8.4.) to ſet the Sun by thy Dial?

He will recompence it, whether thou refuſe, &c.] He will have his pennyworths of thee, whether thou be pleaſed or diſpleaſed.

And not I] Though I foretell thee this, yet it is God that will effect it: therefore think not the worſe of me, no more then a people ſhould of a Herald or the Trumpet as the cauſe of their war.

There-

Therefore ſpeak what thou knoweſt] Viz. In thine one behalf, but ſpeak the word of truth and ſoberneſſe. He was no fool who ſaid, It hath often repented me to have ſpoken, but ſeldome to have held my peace. There are many other readings, and expoſitions of the words. Let every man (for me) take his choice, and abound in his own ſenſe, ſo it diſſent not from the Analogy of faith.

Verſe 34. Let men of underſtanding tell me] Or, Say with me; ſay as I ſay; viz. That Job hath ſpoken without knowledg, as verſ. 35. and that I have ſpoken the thing that is right in vindicating the divine Juſtice, from thy cauſeleſſe criminations.

And let a wiſe man hearken unto me] I preſume there is not one wiſe man alive but will be of my mind: and for fools, the men of this world, ever beſides themſelves in point of ſalvation, I regard not their cenſures, ——Equitem mihi plaudere curo.

Verſe 35. Job hath ſpoken without knowledge] Inſcienter & inſcite, He hath outlaſhed and overſhot himſelf in ſome words againſt God; yea, amidſt his complaints, he hath let ſlip not a few laviſh and looſe ſpeeches, which thing alſo being reproved by God, he doth ingenuouſly acknowledg, chap. 40. and 42.

And his words were without wiſdome] Heb. Not in wiſdome; and this he here heareth of on both ears, being barely told of it again and again, and not without ſome bitterneſs in the cloſe of this Chapter. Some warmth there muſt be in a reproof (the Phyſick will work the better) but ſcalding hot it muſt not be.

Verſe 36. My deſire is that Job may be tryed unto the end] Or, Unto victory, till he be vanquiſhed and ſet down. It is conceived, that Job by clapping his hands, as verſe 37. or by the ſet of his countenance, or ſome other way had diſcovered his diſlike of, and diſcontent at that which Elihu had ſpoken: He therefore begs of God to continue afflicting him, till he be in a better mind. This he doth by a ſpecial inſtinct for Jobs good, and not out of any deſire for revenge. So Farellus pronounced a curſe upon young Calvins ſtudies, in caſe he ſhould refuſe to joyn with him in the Lords work at Geneva, where a Church had been newly planted: this ſo thunderſtruck him, that he durſt not ſtir therehence to his dying day. Some read it, My Father, let Job be tryed. It is not to be doubted, but thoſe Ancients alſo called God by this ſweet name of Father. See John 8.41. Beza makes Elihu thus beſpeaking Job, for honours ſake, O my Father, Job ſhall be yet ſtill tryed. The Tigurines read, Hac autem in medium affero. Theſe things I produce, that Jobs things may be moſt exactly diſcuſſed, and wicked mens mouthes ſtopped.

Becauſe of his anſwers for wicked men] Who will take liberty by him to excuſe their iniquity, and ſpeak diſhonourably of God, as he hath done.

Verſe 17. For he addeth rebellion unto his ſin] Or, He will adde, viz. unleſſe he be exerciſed and ſubdued by more and longer load of afflictions; there will elſe be no hoe with him, no ground will hold him. The croſſe is of ſingular uſe to tame that rebel Fleſh: and is therefore prayed for by Jeremy for himſelf, chap. 10.24. and here by Elihu for Job, who had before adviſedly choſen affliction rather then ſin, and reckoned it as a mercy to be viſited every morning, and tryed every moment, chap. 7.18.

He clappeth his hands amongſt us] By way of irriſion, and as inſulting over us. This it may ſeem Job had done in a diſdainful way againſt all that had beene ſpoken, which maketh Elihu thus fiercely to charge him.

And multiplyeth his words againſt God] By a ſtrange pertinacy. He delivereth him therefore unto God to be further afflicted; as St. Paul did Hymenæus and Alexander unto Satan to be inwardly buffetted, and bodily tormented (as Act. 13.11. and 19.16) Ut caſtigati diſcerent; that they might learn not to blaſpheme, 1 Tim. 1.20.

CHAP. XXXV.

Verſe 1. Elihu ſpake moreover, and ſaid.]

HIs ſpeech was for God, as before; and therefore he ſpake moreover: For, as Auſtin ſaith of the Feaſt of Penteceſt, Gaudet produci haec ſolennitas; ſo we may ſay of a Diſcourſe of this nature, Gaudet produci haec ſermocinatio; the longer it is, the better; ſith of God and his righteous dealing, Non ſatis unquam dici poteſt, as Lavater here hath it; never can enough be ſpoken. For although we all yeeld that God is juſt, yet if any croſſe befall us, we are apt to queſtion it, and to think our ſelves hardly dealt with.

Verſe 2. Thinkeſt thou this to be right?] Heb. Reckoneſt thou this to be right? q.d. I appeal to thine own conſcience. This is a ſigne of great confidence in the Appealer, yet may it be done by men of corrupt minds, deſtitute of the truth: Witneſſe that bold Anabaptiſt, that in a ſolemn Diſputation at Tigure, appealed to Zuinglius, as if convinced in his own conſcience, he had inwardly favoured Anabaptiſm. And thoſe impudent Papiſts, that report themſelves to our conſciences, to tell them, Whether our condemnation be not ſo expreſly ſet down in our own Bibles, and ſo clear to all the world, that nothing more needs thereto, then that they know to read, and to have their eyes in their heads at the opening of our Bible: To tell them moreover, whether England hath not brought forth within theſe few yeares paſt, to the number of twenty ſeveral ſorts of Bibles, farre different one from another.

That thou ſaidſt, My righteouſneſſe is more then Gods] Heb. My righteouſneſſe is before Gods. Diodate rendreth it, My Righteouſneſſe is from God; that is, I am ſure God will juſtifie me, though men condemn me. But it is better to render it, Præ Deo, more then Gods (ſee a like expreſſion, Heb. 12.24.) underſtanding it of the juſtice of his Cauſe, and not of his Perſon. But taking it ſo too, when and where did Job ever ſay that his righteouſneſs was more then Gods? No where ſurely in ſo many words, for then doubtleſſe Satan, and not Job, would have carryed away the victory in this conflict. Neither ſurely could this be rightly gathered out of Jobs words, but detorted and miſconſtrued. Elihu therefore reproved him with two great auſteriy, neither can any thing be pleaded for him but this, that he pleaded for God, of whoſe glory he was ſo very tender, that he could not brook or bear with any ſyllable of a word that ſeemed to detract from it.

Verſe 3. For thou ſaidſt, What advantage will it be unto thee?] Here he indeavours to prove the charge, grounding upon ſome words of Jobs, as chap. 9.22. and 10.15. which ſeem to hold out thus much, that no good was to be gotten by leaving evil wayes, ſith good men and bad ſuffer and periſh together. But we muſt know, that Job herein reaſoned not of thoſe things that fall out after death, but only of the proſperous or unhappy eſtate of this life preſent; denying, and that rightly, that we are hereby to judge of Gods love or hatred, or of any mans honeſt or diſhoneſt converſation; Neither yet did he ſtand in defence of his own righteouſneſs againſt God, but only appealed to God as a moſt wiſe and juſt Judge, againſt the falſe accuſations of his ſo-friends, who by powring oyle into the fire, as it were, very much vexed and diſquieted him all along.

Or what profit ſhall I have if I be cleanſed from my ſin?] Or, What profit ſhall I have by it more then by my ſin? This, if Elihu could have proved that Job had ſaid, he might very well have juſtified what he had wiſhed to him, and affirmed of him in the two laſt verſes of the precedent Chapter.

Verſe 4. I will anſwer thee and thy companions with thee] Thy three friends, (who have not ſo well quit themſelves in this Controverſie, as having anſwered little or nothing to this unſavoury ſaying of thine) and to the reſt of the by-ſtanders, which approve of thine opinion, as people are apt to favour the weaker ſide (as it is reputed) reputed) and to encourage them. Thus it befel Luther, when he began firſt to reform.

Verſe 5. Look unto the heavens and ſee] Yea, look into them, if thou couldſt, as did Steven the Proto-Martyr, Act.7.56. and as our Saviour Chriſt, as man, could do (ſay ſome) with his bodily eyes; and as a believer by the eye of his faith, through the Perſpective glaſs of the Promiſes, may do doubtleſſe. The further we can look unto heaven (or into it) the better ſhall we conceive of that infinite diſtance that is betwixt God in heaven, and men on earth. God is far above the higheſt heavens, therefore higher then any mortal can attain to him, much leſſe contribute any thing unto him by his righteouſneſſe; or aſſault him by his wickedneſs. Herodotus writeth, That the Thracians once were ſo mad againſt their god Jupiter, for raining downe upon them when ready to joyn battle with the enemy, that they threw up their darts againſt heaven, which ſhortly returned upon their own heads. And of Caligula the Emperour it is ſtoried that he thundred and lightned with certain Engines he had, and if at any time a thunderbolt fell from heaven, ipſe contrà jaciebat lapidem, he on the other ſide threw up a ſtone, and uſed that Hemiſtich in Homer, ἢ μ' ἀνδρὸς ἢ ἔγωγε, Either doſthou kill me, or I'll kill thee, if I can. And what leſſe then this upon the matter do thoſe monſters and miſcreants amongſt us, who ſet their mouthes againſt heaven, when things go croſſe with them eſpecially; and their tongues walk through the earth, Pſal.73.9? As Hacket did, who lifting up his eyes to heaven, and grinning againſt God, blaſphemed him, and threatned him, even when he had the rope about his neck, Anno 1591. Now, as in the water face anſwereth to face, ſo doth the face of a man to a man. And as there were many Marii in one Cæſar, ſo there are many Caligula's and Hackets in the beſt of us all, if God reſtraine us not from ſuch horrid outrages. But Elihu would have us here to know, that God is far above our reach, neither can we throw this high and lofty one out of his throne; utcunque fremamus & ferociamus: for how ſhould any thing that wee ſilly Creatures can do, reach to God, when as we cannot reach up to the viſible heavens?

Cambd. Eliz. fol 403.

And behold the clouds which are higher then thou] Eminent prætè. The clouds are Gods Chariot whereon he rideth, and wherein he manifeſteth much of his Majeſty. Theſe Elihu would have Job to contemplate in their height, even ſuperiores nubes, as Tremellius rendreth it, the upper clouds; or, as others, the Starry Heaven, Heb. The thin of heavens. So Bildad before had called upon him to behold the Moon and the Stars, chap.25.5. And ſurely the very ſight of heaven over us (to the which all that we are or can, can bring no help or hurt at all) ſhould admoniſh us of our meaneſſe, and make us think moſt modeſtly of God, whom we are ſo infinitely below; and not dare either to complain of him, or to boaſt us before him, &c. For this cauſe it is that Elihu ſo preſſeth Job here with this heap of words, that he may henceforth know and keep his diſtance; and not ſo preſumptuouſly call God (as it were) to reckoning, touching expences and receipts.

Verſe 6. If thou ſinneſt, what doſt thou againſt him?] What more then ſhew thy teeth? or ſhoot at a rock, where the Arrow rebounds upon thee? In the ſack of Conſtantinople, the Image of the Crucifix was taken down by the Turks, and a Turks Cap put upon the head thereof, and ſo ſet up, and ſhot at with their arrowes; and afterwards in great deriſion, carried about in the Camp, as it were in Proceſſion, with Drums playing before it, rayling and ſpitting at it, and calling it the God of the Chriſtians; But what was all this to Chriſt? He that ſitteth in the heavens (extra jactum) laughed at them, the Lord had them in deriſion, Pſal.2.4. Do wicked ſinners, when they work hardeſt againſt God (as the word here ſignifieth) and take greateſt paines to go to hell, do they, I ſay, provoke the Lord to anger? Do they not provoke themſelves to the confuſion of their own faces? Jer.7.19 And may we not well ſay to ſuch, as Ulyſſes his companions ſaid to him, when he would needs provoke Polydamas.

God can eaſily get him a name in the utter overthrow of a rabble of rebels conſpiring againſt him, as at the Flood, tower of Babel, Sodom, Egypt, Moab, &c. who were trodden down under him, as straw is trodden down for the dunghil, Isai. 25.10. And in the next verse, The Lord shal spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim, (that is, with greatest facility; for violent stroaks rather sink then support a swimmer) and he shall bring downe their pride, together with the spoiles of their hands: And the fortresse of the high fort of their wals shall he bring down, lay low, and bring to the ground, even to the dust, Isai. 25.11,12.

Verse 7. If thou be righteous, what givest thou him?] Nothing, sith he is self-sufficient, and independent. He needeth us not, neither doth our righteousnesse reach him, Psal. 16.2. The Pharisees dreamt of an over-doing the Law, and making God beholding to them. The Papists also, those modern Pharisees, talk of works of super-erogation, and of merit of congruity, and merit of condignity. But these are mere fictions, Chimera's, absurd Doctrines, such as Elihu never heard of. He that doth righteousnes is righteous, 1 John 3.7. but he addeth nothing thereby to God, let him do his utmost. Indeed whoso offereth praise, glorifieth God, Psal. 50.23. so he is pleased to account it, and call it: but his glory is as himself is, eternal, infinite, immense. The Sun would shine in its own brightnesse, though all the world were blind, and should wilfully wink: so here. God accepts not our persents, but to returne them us back with interest, as the raine ascends in thinne vapours, but comes downe againe in thick showres.

Or what receiveth he of thine hand?] If any thing, it is of his own, as David thankfully acknowledgeth, 1 Chron. 29.14. and besides that, our sweetest Incense smelleth strong of the hand that offereth it.

Verse 8 Thy wickednes may hurt a man as thou art] Wicked men are many wayes mischievous to others; and have much to answer for their other mens sins. How many are undone by their murders, adulteries, robberies, false testimonies, blasphemies and other rotten speeches, to the corrupting of good manners, &c? What hurt is done daily by the Divels factours, to mens souls, bodies, names, estates? Besides that they betray the land wherein they live into the hands of divine Justice, whiles they do wickedly with both hands earnestly, Mic. 7.3. That I speak not of the manifold miseries, they pull upon themselves.

And thy righteousnesse may profit the son of man] Thy self and others: for the Just liveth by his own faith, he maketh a living of it, and a good one too. And as for his Charity, it is the mother of all manner of good works, whereof others have the benefit. Papists, and some as silly, have shrunk up charity to an handsbreadth, to giving of Almes: But besides that, a good man draweth out, not only his sheaf, but his soul to the hungry. He also warneth the unruly, comforteth the feeble minded, supporteth the weak, and tradeth all his talents for the good of others: He is a common blessing to all that are about him. As Plutark said of the neighbour-Villages of Rome, in Numa's time, That sucking in the aire of that City, they breathed Innocency, Righteousnesse; so may it be said of the City of God, and her Citizens. 1 Thess. 5.14.

Verse 9 By reason of the multitude (or magnitude) of oppressions, &c.] Or, Of the oppressed, whom they (that is, whom the Oppressours, not worthy to be named, as neither is that rich glutton, Luke 16.) make to cry. Job had said, chap. 24. 12. Men groan out of the City, and the soul of the wounded cryeth out; yet God layeth not folly to them; He punisheth not the wrong-dealers according to their deserts as Elihu interprets Job; and here refuteth him, as one that accused God of injustice, because he heareth not the cryes of the oppressed. But this is meerly their own fault, saith Elihu; because they cry not to God with truth and devotion: They ask and miss, because they ask amiss. For God never faileth to be with his afflicted, Psal. 91. to preserve the simple, as David found by experience, Psal. 116. to hear those that call upon him in truth, Psal. 145. &c. he requireth nothing of them but lawful petitions, and honest hearts, and then they are sure to have out their prayers, either in money, or moneys worth; either the same thing they ask, or a better.

They cry out by reason of the arm of the mighty] Magnatum. Such as was Pompey, of whom the Romans cryed out, Nostra miseria tu es Magnus. We rue by thy greatnesse, and are ruined. The greater any man is, unlesse gracious also, the the more he thinks he may oppreſs the meaner ſort. They eate up my people, as they eate bread, Pſal. 14. as ſo many Canibals; and as the bigger fiſhes devour the leſſer: they lay load upon them without mercy or meaſure, they beat them with a ſtrong arm, and make them cry aloud, filling the air with their complaints, as nature teacheth even brut beaſts to do when they are hurt. It was not patience but pertinacy, an obſtinate ſtiffeneſs of mind, that made ſome Heathens, as Mithridates, Marius, Epicurus, &c. forbear crying, when grievouſly tormented.

Videri poſſunt magnates non alio loco habe tenuas quam minutos piſcic los, quos conſe tim & pleno pro delicijs eſ tent. Merl.

Verſe 10. But none ſaith, Where is God my maker?] Heb. My makers: to note the Trinity, ſay ſome: others think, that he ſpeaks of God in the plural number only for honours ſake. They call not upon God as their Creator, they praiſe him not as their Preſerver and Benefactor, ſaith Elihu in this and the next verſe: but expreſs a great deal of pride and vanity, verſe 12, 13. and thence it is, that their prayers are unanſwered, and themſelves unrelieved. The oppreſſed ſhould not only make moan and fill the air, vagis clamoribus, with bruitiſh out-cryes (the fruit of the fleſh for eaſe, rather than of the ſpirit for grace) but beg help of God by faithful prayer, and ſay, Where is God my maker? as Eliſha once ſaid, Where is the Lord God of Elijah? Did he not make me, and will he not maintain me? built he not the earthly houſe of this tottering Tabernacle, and is not he bound to repairs? will he caſt off the care of his own handywork? Is he not my Maſter, as well as my Maker? and ſhall other Lords beſides him have Dominion over me, and do with me at their pleaſure? Lord, look upon the wounds of thy hands, (ſaid Q. Eliz. whiles ſhe was a Priſoner at Woodſtock, and had like to have been burnt in her bed, one night) and deſpiſe not the work of thine hands. Thou haſt written me down in thy book of Preſervation with thine own hand: Oh read thine own hand-writing, and ſave me, &c.

Qui nos fecit, idem ille eſt qui nos fovet, cui ſervas ac ſuſten tat, &c. Brent. Englands Elizabeth.

Who giveth ſongs in the night] As the oppreſſed pray not, and therefore are not eaſed, (they are deſervedly miſerable, that might, but will not make themſelves happy by asking) ſo they praiſe not God for former deliverances by day and night conferred upon them. Thou haſt compaſſed me about, ſaith David with ſongs of deliverance, Pſal. 32. 7. that is, Thou haſt given me plentiful matter of praiſing thy name. So here, Qui dat Pſalmorum argumentum de nocte as Tremellius tranſlateth it: who giveth cauſe to praiſe him with Pſalms by night, as David did Pſal. 119. 62. and as Paul, and Silas, Act. 16. 25. and as Mr. Philpot and his fellows did in the Biſhop of London's Coal-houſe. In the night-ſeaſon it is, that God giveth his beloved ſleep, and keepeth them and theirs then in ſafety. Or, if he hold them waking, he filleth them with many ſweet meditations, (their reines at that time eſpecially, inſtructing them, Pſal. 16. 7.) ſhineth upon them by his Moon and Stars (which praiſe God in their courſes, and twinkle as it were at us to do the like) and inuindeth them by the melody made by the Nightingale, which ſingeth for fifteen nights and dayes together without intermiſſion, if Pliny may be believed: putting a thorn to her breſt to keep her waking, for that purpoſe. Hereupon Epictetus hath this favoury ſaying, Si luſcinia eſſem, facerem quod luſcinia; Cum autem homo rationalis ſim, quid faciam? Laudabo Deum, nec ceſſabo unquam; Vos vero ut idem faciatis hortor: that is, if I were a Nightingale, I would do as the Nightingale doth; But ſince I am a man endued with reaſon, (ſith God hath taught me more than the fowles of heaven, as Elihu hath it in the next verſe) what ſhall I do? I will unceſſantly praiſe God; and I exhort you to do the like. But this is not done, ſaith Elihu here, or very ſlenderly: and hence it is that men complain of their many and mighty oppreſſions, without remedy from God, who ſeeth that his favours and benefits would be even loſt and ſpilt upon them; according to that of the Philoſopher, Ingrato quicquid donatur deperditur; All is caſt away, that is conferred upon an ungrateful perſon.

Act. and Mon.

Plin. l. 10. c. 29. Luſcinia dicitur quia ante lucem canit. Nec quantum luſciniæ dormiunt. Proverb. In Euxbir.

Verſe 11. Who teacheth us more than the beaſts of the earth?] This many wretched people never conſider, and are therefore heavily, but worthily, vexed by oppreſſours, ut vexatio det intellectum, that ſmart may make wit; and that they may not bellow as beaſts do, when they feel pain: but flie to God by well-prepared prayer, not ſo much for eaſe, as for the uſe of what they ſuffer. Now, bleſſed is the man whom God chaſteneth, and withal teacheth him out of his Law: that he may give him reſt from the dayes of adverſity, Pſal. 94. 12, 13. Hereunto, not only Reaſon is required, (the Mercy here mentioned, and celebrated) but Religion alſo, which is the true Philoſophers ſtone that makes golden afflictions, 1 Pet. 1. 7. and as Moſes his his hand, turneth a Serpent into a Rod. The truth is, Religion is the higheſt reaſon, (neither is any thing more irrational than irreligion, 2 Theſſ. 3. 2.) and this alſo God alone teacheth. For, Cathedram habet in cœlo qui corda docet, ſaith Auſtin. And again, Quando Chriſtus Magiſter, quàm citò diſcitur quod docetur? It is God above, who teacheth the heart: and this if he once undertake, it is ſoon diſpatcht. All this, if ſinful men would well weigh, and be thankful for, as they ought, God would ſurely help them, and not ſuffer them ſo to be held under.

And maketh us wiſer than the fowles of heaven] Sapientificat. Some Birds are very ſilly, as the Struthiocamelus, that having thruſt his head into a thicket, and ſeeing no body, thinketh that therefore none ſeeth him, and ſo maketh himſelf a prey. Doves ſit in their dove-cotes, and ſee their neſts deſtroyed, their young ones taken away and killed before their eyes: neither ever do they offer to reſcue, or revenge. Mention is made by Writers, of a certain nameleſſe little Bird, which for fear leſt the Heavens ſhould fall upon her, puts alwayes, when ſhe ſleepeth, one foot upon her head: How much better the Bird Onocrotalus? of whom it is reported, that out of expectation of the Hawk to grapple with her, ſhe ſleepeth with her beak exalted, as if ſhe would contend with her adverſary. Something there is that the wiſeſt may learn from the fowles of the air, to whom therefore they are ſent and ſet to ſchoole, Mat. 6. 26. Jer. 8. 7. yet generally God hath put more underſtanding into men: ſo that as he ſhould not do like them by preying upon others, ſo he ſhould not cry unto God only in diſtreſſe, as the young Ravens do when hunger-bit: but pray alwayes, and in every thing give thanks; for which purpoſe it is, that God hath given us reaſon, ſpeech, and much matter and meanes, far above the unreaſonable Creatures. Væ igitur ſtupiditati hominum in calamitatibus torpentium.

Plin. l. 10. c. 1.

Cæl. Rhod.

Verſe 12. There they cry, but none giveth anſwer] Cry they do, but not to the true God, Jon. 1. 5. The Papiſts have their he-ſaints, and ſhe-ſaints, for ſeveral uſes. Or if to the true God, yet not in a due manner: not in faith, and with remorſe for their miſdoings. And hence it is, that either they are not heard and helped: or not in mercy, but for a further miſchief, and to furniſh out their indictment at the laſt day: and on their death-beds, God will not come at them, or be intreated by them, Prov. 1. 28. Pſal. 18. 42.

Becauſe of the pride of evil men] i. e. Becauſe theſe oppreſſed ones that thus cry, are not ſo poor as proud; humbled they are, but not humble; low, but not lowly. Plectuntur, ſed non flectuntur: they have loſt the fruit of their afflictions, and are not a button the better for all that they have ſuffered.

Verſe 13. Surely God will not hear vanity] Prayer without Faith, is but an empty ring, a tinkling cymbal. Neque enim omnes qui citharam habent, ſunt citharœdi; Every ſound is not Muſick, neither is every complaint and out-cry of men in extremity, an effectual Prayer. Thoſe in Hoſea, when pined almoſt, howled as Dogs, growled as Swine, bellowed as Bulls, ſcreeched horribly as the Ravens of Arabia, Hoſ. 7. 14. but becauſe they cryed not to God with their hearts, he heard them not. It is not the labour of the lips, or the loudneſſe of the voice, but the travel of the heart, and truth in the inward parts that he regardeth: Pſal. 51. 6. Wilt thou not know, O vain (or empty) man, that Faith without Works is dead? ſaith St. James chap. 2. 20. ſo that prayer without faith is to no purpoſe? Men may cry aloud in diſtreſſe, and make their voices to be heard on high; they may chatter out a charm when Gods chaſtening is upon them, yea, be with child, as it were, of a prayer, yet bring forth nothing better than wind, work no deliverance at all in the earth, Iſai. 26. 16, 17, 18. God may turn them off, and juſtly, with Depart ye workers of iniquity; get you to the gods whom ye have choſen, let them deliver you in the time of your tribulation: for I will deliver you no more, Judg. 10. verſ. 13, 14.

Neither will the Almighty regard it] Heb Look intently into it. It is other, and better fruit of affliction that he looketh for. Whereof miſſing, he looketh another way, as it were, and taketh no notice of their prayers, or preſſures. Hence they deny, or at leaſt doubt of the divine providence: and are ready to let fly at God, as the Chineſes whip their gods, if they help them not at a call.

Verſe

Verſe 14. Although thou ſaieſt thou ſhalt not ſee him, &c.] This is that tertium Jobi pronuntiatum, Jobs third ſpeech, which Elihu taketh upon him to reprehend and refute: It is taken out of chap. 23. 8, 9. and the ſenſe is, that God would never appear to do him right. But although thou ſaieſt ſuch a thing, and ſo ſeemeſt to chime in with thoſe wicked ones who deny Gods providence; yet thou oughteſt to be better preſwaded of his preſence with thee, and providence over thee: for judgement is before him, and he will certainly do right; only thou muſt give glory to God, and wait his time.

Yet judgement is before him] Or, Judge thy ſelf in his ſight; give glory to God, and confeſſe thy ſin; and then, ſtepping from the Bar to the Bench, judge thy ſelf worthy to be deſtroyed, 1 Corinth. 11. verſ. 31. This do, and then Truſt thou in me] For ſafety here, and ſalvation hereafter; acting thy Faith upon the precious promiſes, and hopefully expecting the performance thereof in due time. This was excellent counſel indeed, and worthy of all acceptation. Pia & ſalubris adhortatio. Mercer.

Verſe 15. But now, becauſe it is not ſo, he hath viſited in his anger] Becauſe thou haſt not yet done as I have preſcribed, God is forced thus to treat thee, and to encreaſe his plagues upon thee in great diſpleaſure at thine incorrigibleneſſe. Thus is good Job miſcenſured, whom God ſuffered ſo to be afflicted for his tryal, and not for his puniſhment; though there wanted not in him cauſe enough, if God ſhould have taken advantags. But know now, that his anger hath viſited thee but a little; (this is Beza's tranſlation of the whole verſe) neither hath he made any great inquiſition. Piſcator readeth this and the next verſe thus; But now, becauſe his anger hath not viſited, neither hath he taken notice of the multitude of his ſins very much: therefore doth Job open his mouth with vanity, and heap up words without knowledge. Tremellius thus, For now, becauſe there is nothing of theſe, doth his anger viſit thee: viz. becauſe thou neither rightly judgeſt thy ſelf, nor waiteſt upon God: but lookeſt upon thy ſelf as utterly undone, caſting away all hope of better, therefore art thou yet held under.

Yet he knoweth it not in great extremity] Job perceiveth not (ſo blind he is) though he have his back-burden of afflictions, and knows not how to be rid of them. This, Elihu ſpeaketh to the company, by an angry Apoſtrophe.

Verſe 16. Therefore doth Job open his mouth in vain] Dilatat, divaricat, rictum diducit ut bellua. An open mouth is oft a purgatory to the Maſter: digito compeſce labellum.

He multiplieth words without knowledge] Eliphaz had charged Job with malice and blaſphemy, chap. 22. Elihu only with vanity, and ignorance. We may not make the worſt of things, but give a favourable interpretation.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Verſe 1. Elihu alſo proceeded and ſaid]

HEB. And Elihu added, viz. This his fourth Oration (not unlike the former) made in behalf, and for defence of Gods Juſtice, which he here further aſſerteth againſt Job (who had ſeemed to caſt ſome ſlur upon it) by arguments drawn from his wondrous works, the Meteors eſpecially: and all to prevail with Job, to ſubmit to Gods juſtice, and to implore his mercy. Ex abundanti qua ſequuntur adjicit.

Verſe 2. Suffer me a little, and I will ſhew thee] He promiſeth brevity, and thereby wooeth attention: brevity and perſpicuity are to great graces of ſpeech, and do very much win upon intelligent hearers, who love to hear much in few, and cannot cannot away with tedious prolixities. When a great Trifler had made an empty diſcourſe in the preſence of Ariſtotle, and then cryed him mercy for troubling him ſo long: You have not troubled me at all, ſaid He, for I ſcarce hearkned to any one word you ſaid all this while.

That I have yet to ſpeak on Gods behalf] Heb. That there are yet words for God. His zeal for Gods glory drew from him this following ſpeech, wherein ingnis eſt Elihu & magnificus: Elihu excelleth himſelf, and appeareth to be no worſe an Orator then was M. Craſſus among the Romans, who had this commendation given him, Quod cum aliquid accuratiùs dixiſſet, ſemper fere contigit ut nunquam dixiſſe melius putaretur, That when ever he ſpake, it was judged to be the very beſt that ever he ſpake. Cic. de Orat. l. 1

Verſe 3. I will fetch my knowledg from afar] Even from heaven, as one taught of God; I will diſcourſe of ancient things (for τὰ ἄνωθεν νενὰ) and fetch my reaſons from the wonderful and ſublime works of God, thoſe real demonſtrations of his Deity. Eſt autem planè hic Elihu mirus & egregius, ſaith Mercer: And he is not a little wronged by that French Paraphraſt, who ſaith of him, That he knew well how to begin a diſcourſe, but knew not how to end it: and that ſeeing well that his tediouſneſſe might make him troubleſome, he awakened his languiſhing Auditours by this artificial preface. De arduis atque admirandis Dei operibus.

And will aſcribe righteouſneſſe to my Maker] This is both the maine propoſition of the enſuing Oration, and the main end of mans creation; viz. to glorifie his Maker, Rom. 11. ult. Rev. 4. 11.

Verſe 4. For truly my words ſhall not be falſe] I ſhall deal truly and plainly with thee, my Diſcourſe ſhall be ſimple and ſolid, having no better ornament but that of Truth; which is like our firſt parents, moſt beautiful, when naked; 'twas ſin covered them, 'tis treachery hides this. Aperta veritas clauſos etiam oculos ferit, ſaith One.

He that is perfect in knowledge is with thee] Integer ſententiis; meaning himſelf, who fully underſtood the buſineſſe betwixt them, and would faithfully deliver it. There are that hold God to be hereby meant. A pious ſenſe, but not ſo proper. Vatab.

Verſe 5. Behold God is mighty, and deſpiſeth not any] Much leſſe oppreſſeth he any one in a good Cauſe, or tyrannically abuſeth his power to the cruſhing of an Innocent. He is equally good, as great; neither was Job well adviſed in ſeeming to ſunder theſe two excellencies in God, the one from the other; ſith whatſoever is in God is God; neither ought we to think of him otherwiſe, then of one not to be thought of; as of one, whoſe Wiſdom is his Juſtice, whoſe Juſtice is his Power, whoſe Power is his Mercy, and all Himſelf.

He is mighty in ſtrength and wiſdom] Or, He is mighty, the ſtrength of the heart. He was ſo to David, Pſal. 138. 3. In the day when I cryed, thou anſweredſt me, and ſtrengthnedſt me with ſtrength in my ſoul. At the ſack of Ziglag, in the fail of all outward comforts, David encouraged himſelf in the Lord his God, 1 Sam. 30. 6. A Chriſtian is never without his cordial. Validus eſt, virtus animi. Trem

Una eſt in trepida mihi re medicina, Jehova
Cor patrium, os verax, omnipotenſque manus.

Verſe 6. He preſerveth not the life of the wicked] He is no ſuch friend to them (though he be good to the godly) he greatly careth not what becomes of them. Their life they hold of him, and many good things beſides; for he is the Saviour (or Preſerver) of all men, but eſpecially of them that believe. But he ſuffereth not the wicked to live (as the Hebrew here hath it) he withdraweth them not from the hand of Juſtice, he bindeth not them up in the bundle of life, he reckoneth them not among the living in Jeruſalem, among the firſt born, whoſe names are written in heaven: he many times ſlayeth them with his owne hand, and cutteth them ſhort in righteouſneſſe: Or if not ſo, yet their preſervation is but a reſervation, &c.

But giveth right to the poor] Or, To the afflicted. For poverty is an affliction, and ſubjecteth a man to many injuries; Zeph. 3. 12. they are an afflicted and poor people people, but truſting in the name of the Lord, they ſhall be relieved and righted, not ſo ſoon perhaps as themſelves would, nor yet ſo long hence as their Oppreſſours would. In the Mount will the Lord be ſeen, who as he ſeldome comes at our times, ſo he never failes his owne time. Meane while this comfort they have:

Verſe 7. He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous] He is ſo loſt in love (as I may ſay) toward ſuch, that he cannot like to look beſide them: he beholdeth them when afflicted with ſingular care and complacency. Then, if ever, The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears open to their cry, Pſal.34.15 then they may have any thing of God, there being no time like that for hearing of prayers, *Zach.*13.9. Times of affliction are times of ſupplication, *Pſal.*50.15. and 91.15. They are Molliſſima fandi tempora, Jer.51.19,20,21. Then our hearts are largeſt, then Gods ears are openeſt. Neither his eares only, but his eyes too are buſied about his ſuffering ſervants, as the Gold-ſmiths are about the Gold caſt into the furnace, that no grain thereof be loſt. He ſits downe by the fire, ſaith Malachi, and tends it, as a Refiner and Purifier of ſilver, chap. 3.3. He refines them, but not as ſilver, *Iſai.*48.10. that is, Not exactly, and to the utmoſt, leſt they ſhould be conſumed in that fiery tryal: he ſeeth to it, that the choice ſpirits of his people fail not before him, Iſai. 57.16. as they would do, if he ſhould bring upon them an evil, an only evil, Ezek. 7.5. and not in the midſt of judgement remember mercy.

But with Kings are they on the throne] i.e. He raiſeth them to higheſt honors, as he did Joſeph; whoſe fetters God in one houre changed into a chain of Gold, his ſtocks into a Chariot, his Jaile into a Palace, his Rags into fine linnen, &c. yea, as Jeremy's rags helped to draw him out of the dungeon, ſo do afflictions work out to Gods people, an exceeding exceeding, eternal weight of glory. Here perhaps they may be held under, but to him that overcometh, wil the Lord Chriſt grant to ſit with him in his throne, *Rev.*3.21. The deluge of calamities may aſſault them, but it ſhall certainly exalt them. They ſhall have Crownes on their heads, and Palmes in their hands, and walk arm in arm with Angels. Some of the Hebrewes by Kings here underſtand Angels, as if it were written מלאכים, not Melachim, but Malachim.

Yea, he doth eſtabliſh them for ever, and they are exalted] Or, When they are exalted. This no earthly Prince can promiſe himſelf. Dionyſius, who thought his Kingdom had been tyed to him with cords of Adamant, was at length driven out of it. But Chriſts Kingdom is an everlaſting Kingdom, and he will not raign alone; if we ſuffer with him, we ſhall alſo raign together, *Rom.*8.

Verſe 8. And if they be bound in fetters] If it ſo fall out, that through abuſe of their proſperity and preferment, they wander as they are men, out of the right way, and God ſends out afflictions as his Purſuivants to attach them, and lay them in cold irons for their correction, and to prevent judgment, *Pſal.*107.10.

And be holden in cords of affliction] Or, Poverty; ſo that irretiti funibus miſerè vixerint (as the Tigurines here tranſlate) they have onely priſoners pittances, which will neither keep them alive, nor ſuffer them to dye.

Verſe 9. Then he ſheweth them their work] By theſe ſharp waters he cleareth up their eye-ſight, and gives them to ſee their ſin the mother of their miſery. Vexatio dat intellectum; Smart makes wit. Manaſſeh for inſtance, and the Prodigal, and King Crœſus with his Nocumenta documenta, and Tullus Hoſtilius with his exceſs of devotion, when once he had paid for his learning. Herodot.lib.1. Liv.decad.1.l.1

And their tranſgreſſions that they have exceeded] Heb. When they prevail; that before they grow too potent they may caſt them away; Ne illis vitii in Gehennam deſcendant, leſt they hale them into hell. Mercer.

Verſe 10. Hee openeth alſo their eare to Diſcipline] See on chap. 33.16.

And commandeth that they return from iniquity] Unleſſe they will have it to be their ruine; whereof obſtinate ſinners, (who refuſe to return,) ſeem to be ambitious. Affliction ſanctified, is Lex practica, a practical Law, ſaith One: it is Verus Scripturæ commentarius, an excellent Comment upon the Scripture, ſaith Another. David could not learn Gods Statutes till taught by this Free-School-maſter; curſt enough and crabbed, but ſuch as whereby God openeth mens eares to Diſcipline, and ſpeaketh to them to return from iniquity, which is a piece of learning, that people cannot pay too dear for.

Verſe 11 If they obey and ſerve him, they ſhall, &c.] Heb. They ſhall finiſh, they ſhall ſpend and end their dayes in proſperity, and their yeares in pleaſure, as Joſeph, Job, and ſome others have done, who lived and dyed with glory. Howbeit this Promiſe is to be underſtood with exception of the Croſſe, which yet God both can, and to his, will make profitable and pleaſant; as he did to that godly Prince, who being asked, How he could ſo well endure ſo long and hard impriſonment? anſwered, That he had therein felt the divine Conſolations of the Martyrs. But,

Haud facilè invenies multis è millibus unum,
Virtutem pretium qui putet eſſe ſui.

Verſe 12. But if they obey not, they ſhall periſh by the ſword] In gladium tranſibunt; they ſhall paſſe away by the ſword; that is, ſome evil end ſhall befal them, and worthily, becauſe they would not be warned, which is both a preſage and deſert of utter ruine. Leſſer and lighter judgements (where they work not) are foretokens of greater and heavier at the heels of them; as the black horſe in the Revelation followeth the red. And as clouds cluſter againſt a ſtorm, one following in the neck of the other, unleſſe the Sun break forth and ſcatter them; ſo do Gods judgements uſher in one another, and every leſſe a greater, unleſs Repentance, and better obedience take up the matter.

And they ſhall dye without knowledge] Heb. Becauſe they were without knowledge; and wilfully ſo. It was not a bare neſcience, but an affected ignorance that undid them. Some render it, Non præſentientes, they ſhall dye ſuddenly, and before they have bethought themſelves. It ſhould be our care, that death do not ſuddenly ſurprize us. No gueſt comes unawares to him, who keeps a conſtant Table. Every ſharp affliction is a warning piece, and let us ſo conceive of it. Stillicidia præcedant ruinam.

Verſe 13. But the hypocrites in heart heap up wrath] Or, Yet: Or, Howbeit q.d. Theſe fowle ſinners, that have turned repentance into a form, and converted converſion it ſelf into ſin, though they ſee bad men made good, and good men made better by their afflictions, and incorrigible perſons deſtroyed before their eyes, yet they amend not by Gods hand upon them, but are the worſe for it: as Iron grows more cold after a heat, and as naughty boyes are more ſtupid and more ſtubborn after a whipping. Hypocritis nihil ſtupidius. Theſe hollow hearted ones heap up wrath againſt the day of wrath, as St. Paul makes up this ſaying, Rom. 2. 5. which ſhall fall upon the Jew firſt, becauſe of his pretence to Religion, and then upon the Gentile. Nemo enim magis iram meretur, quam amicum ſimulans inimicus, ſaith Bernard, No man more deſerveth wrath upon wrath, then a feigned friend, but true enemy. Such are all hypocrites, whether groſs or cloſe. And hence our Saviours ſeverity againſt ſuch in the Goſpel, but eſpecially Mat. 23. Neither let any ſuch Goat in ſheep-skin think to ſteal on Chriſts right hand at the laſt day: He ſhall uncaſe ſuch and caſhiere them, yea caſt them into the hotteſt fire of hell, whereof hypocrites are as the Free-holders, and other ſinners but as Tenants to them, for they ſhall have their portion with the Devil and hypocrites. Some render it, Ponunt iram, and expound it incuſaſſe Deum: When they are afflicted, they wax hot againſt God, they gather wrath as a toad ſwelleth when handled, as a Serpent gathereth poiſon to ſpue out at thoſe who meddle with him.

They cry not when God binds them] Cry they do after a ſort, as Hogs do when to be ſtuck, or dogs, when tyed up from their meat. Murmure they do, and expoſtulate a wrong with God, as thoſe, Iſai. 58. 2, 3. Non ira Deos coluimus, as that heathen hypocrite ſaid, We have not ſerved God ſo well, that he ſhould ſerve us no better: but pray they do not, unleſſe it be as thoſe hypocrites in Zachary, chap.

chap. 7. who fasted to themselves, and prayed for their own ends, more to get off their chaines then their sinnes. They bear fruit to themselves, as Ephraim, and see what comes of it.

Verse 14. They dye in youth] They dye before their time, as Solomon expresseth it; then, when it were better for them to do any thing then to dye, for they are killed with death, as Jezebels children were, Rev. 2. Their soul dyeth, as the Hebrew here hath it. Their soul perisheth among the boyes, their life among the buggerers; as Beza translateth this Text, and thus Paraphraseth. Therefore as accursed before God they dye, and are reckoned amongst those impure young men, whose youth being spent in all filthinesse and uncleanesse, was subject to that most abominable lust which is not to be named. The sum of all is, saith Brentius, Hypocrita peribit turpiter; The Hypocrite shall once come to a shameful end. And when the fowle sinner shall be damned, what shall become of the faire Professour? God will lead such forth with the workers of iniquity, yea, with the worst kind of sinners (Sodomites for instance) shall he punish them.

Verse 15. He delivereth the poor in his affliction.] Oft in this life, as he did David signally, Psal. 34. 6. This poor man (meaning himself) cryed, and the Lord heard him, and saved him out of all his troubles. So he pulled Paul out of the mouth of the Lion, yea, and the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and preserve me unto his heavenly kingdome; where the Saints shall be sure of full deliverance, and shall say of their afflictions, as that Adultereſs said of her accusers, John 8. They are all gone. 2 Tim. 4.

He openeth their ears in oppression] Or, By oppression, as by a key; he openeth the eares of their hearts to holy and wholsome counsel. This Elihu had said before; but he saith it again for that end and purpose, that Job might rowse up, and raise up himselfe to the hope of a comfortable restauration; for as much as God afflicteth, not his to destroy them, but to make them partakers of his holinesse; and that once done, to deliver them.

Verse 16. Even so would he have removed thee, &c.] Thesin revocat ad hypothesin; Here Elihu applyeth to Job that which he had more generally discoursed concerning godly mens afflictions turned to their greatest good, if they be careful to improve the same. Heb. He would have perswaded, or gently removed thee.

Out of the strait, &c.] Heb. Out of the mouth of the strait. A Metaphor from wild beasts, that hold some prey in the mouth, saith Piscator. Or from a pit, narrow at the top, and wide at the bottom, as R. Solomon, and some others, who understand it of hell. Brentius to the same sense rendreth the Text thus, Eripiet te ab ore angustiæ lato, sub quo nullum est fundamentum, He shall deliver thee from the broad mouth of straitnesse, under which there is no bottom.

And that which should be set on the table, &c.] Thou shouldst eat of the fat, and drink of the sweet, thou shouldst have knowne no want of any thing, if thou hadst not been wanting to thy selfe, in making the best use of thy troubles. See Psal. 23. 5.

Verse 17. But thou hast fulfilled the judgement of the wicked] But thou contrarily blustereſt against God, and blurteſt out such words, that thou seemeſt to be as bad as the worst, and to have little or no goodnesse in thee. See chap. 34. 8. It is a shame to Gods people to symbolize with the wicked; to be carnal in their speeches or carriages, and to walk as men, 2 Cor. 3. 3. They should so speak, and so do, as those that shall be judged by the Law of liberty, Jam. 2. 12.

Judgement and justice take hold of thee] Thou art worthily attached by the divine justice, which thou hast quarrelled.

Verse 18. Because there is wrath, beware lest he take thee away with his stroak] Beza readeth it thus, Surely it is wrath, take heed lest with stroakes it take thee away; i.e. Certainely the wrath of God doth in this thy calamitie most manifestly shew it self. Oh beware lest he double his stroakes, and beat thee to pieces for thy disobedience and stubbornesse. With the froward God will wrestle, Psal. 18. 26. and adde to their miseries seven times more, and seven times and seven to that, Levit. 26. 18, 21, 24, 28.

Then a great ransome cannot deliver thee] Heb. Turn thee aside, or help thee to decline; that is, to escape, no, though thou shouldst offer thousands of Rams, or ten thousand Rivers of Oyl, as Mic. 6. 7.

Verse 19. Will he esteem thy riches?] Tremellius rendreth it, Thy Nobility. Others read it thus, Will he regard thy crying in thine adversity? Or, That thou shouldst not abide in adversity? See Proverb. 10. 2. and 11. 4. with the Notes.

No, not gold] Which yet can do much with men. The Hebrew word signifieth, finest gold, Job. 22. 24. and hath its name from defending, because gold is a mans defence: With men it may be so, but not with God, Zeph. 1. 18. See the Note there. Others read it, No not in affliction.

Nor all the forces of strength] Which are poor things in comparison of God, whose weakness is stronger then men, 1 Corinth. 1. 25. He need but to arise, and his enemies shall be scattered: yea, all that hate him, shall flye before him, Psal. 68. 1. As the Rocks repel the greatest waves, so doth God his enemies.

Conantia frangere frangunt.

Verse 20. Desire not the night, &c.] That is, as some sense it, do not thou peevishly desire death (see chap. 7. 15.) lest it comes too soon, and it do by thee, as it doth by many an one, whom it cuts off in judgement. For surely in the state thou art now in, thou oughtest to fear an extraordinary kind of death, an inlet to eternal destruction, as in the Deluge, Sodom and Egypt. Others render it thus, Neither let it disquiet thee in the night, how people are destroyed out of their place; that is, in the night season, when thy mind is void of cares, puzzle not thy self how and why some Nations perish, and not others, but rather rest thy selfe upon Gods providence and unsearchable wisdome, and trouble not thy head in searching out the cause of this so sudden misfortune. Brentius makes this the sense, Noli impiè agere; Desire not the night; that is, Deal not wickedly by complaining against God, and impatiently bearing his hand; as Theeves and Adulterers desire the night for dispatch of their deeds of darkness. Think not thou to hide thy self in the dark from the dint of Gods displeasure.

Vatabl.

Beza.

When people are cut off in their place] Heb. Ascend under them: i. e. Rise, that they may fall, Psal. 102. 10. as the light of a candle when it is ready to go out, flieth up, and then vanisheth away: Or as the corn is first taken up by the hand of the Reaper, and then cut off, and laid flat on the ground.

Verse 21. Take heed, regard not iniquity] This especially of blaming Gods judgements, as if they were unequal. No more of that, saith Elihu. Cave tibi, ne conjicias oculos ad vanitatem. Beware thou cast not an eye towards such a vanity or iniquity as that is. This was very good counsel, and it is very well observed, that this whole following Treatise to the end of the thirty seventh chapter, is as it were a gentle lenitive of that foregoing sharp rebuke which otherwise was likely to drive Job beside all patience.

For this thou hast chosen rather then affliction] That is, this forementioned iniquity of speaking rashly and wickedly against Gods proceedings with thee; this thou hast chosen rather then to bear thine affliction (or, thy poverty) patiently. Now this was an ill choice; for, quas non oportet mortes prestigere, saith Zuinglius, What deaths ought not a man rather to make choice of, what torments not rather undergo, yea, into what deepest gulf of hell it self not rather enter, then wittingly and willingly to sin against God? The ancient Martyrs would not be delivered upon base termes, Heb 11. 35. Daniel chose rather to be thrown to the Lions, then to violate his conscience, and so to have a Lion roaring in his own bosome. The Primitive Christians cryed out, Ad Leonem magis quam Lenonem. I had rather enter into hell, being clear from sin and innocent, quam peccati sorde pollutus, certo in regna teneri, then go to heaven, if I might, besmeared with the filth of sin, saith Anselm. I had rather leap into a Bonfire and be burnt, said another of the Ancients, then commit any sin against God. Some write, that there is a certain little beast, called the Mouse of Armenia, which will rather dye then be defiled with any filth: insomuch that if her hole be besmeared with dirt, she will rather chuse to be taken then polluted. Such ought the servants of God to be.

Tertul.

Pintus in Daniel.

Verse 22. Behold, God exalteth by his power.] Vulg. God is high in his strength.

He

He both exalteth himself and others, whensoever he pleaseth. Beza reads it, Behold God in his strength is above all; q.d. It is he that must restore thee, if ever thou beest restored.

Who teacheth like him?] Vulg. None amongst the Law-givers is like unto him. But the word Moreh signifieth a Doctor or a Teather; as Moreh Nebuchim, a Teacher of perplexed things, an unriddler of Riddles. He knowes all things exactly, and does all things with singular skil and understanding. He hath many wayes of teaching people, and making them to profit, *Isai.*48.17. and one is, by afflictions, which Luther therefore fitly calleth Theologiam Christianorum; the Christians System of Divinity, as hath been before noted. Mr. Ascham was a good School-Master (saith one) to Q. Elizabeth, but affliction was a better.

Verse 23. Who hath enjoyned him his way?] q.d. Wilt thou take upon thee to teach this great Teacher how to govern the world? This were a strange kind of arrogancy.

Or, Who can say, Thou hast wrought iniquity?] Gods judgements are sometimes secret, but alwayes just. Let not men reprehend what they do not yet comprehend, but content themselves with a learned ignorance, till God shall further discover himselfe, saying of Gods Works, as Socrates did of a certain Book that he had read, What I understand therein is very good, and so I think is that I understand not. When we come into an Artificers shop, we see many Tooles, the use whereof we know not, and yet we conclude they are of some use. Why then should men rashly censure Gods proceedings, which are many times in mediis contrariis, as Luther was wont to say, brought about by contrary means; that he may be the more admired, as Nazianzen giveth the reason. The Artificer with a crooked Tool makes straight work. The Apothecary maketh of a poisonful Viper a wholsome Triacle: so here. Far be it from us therefore to charge God with iniquity, for this were, with those mad Manichees, to affirme, That till he had created light, he dwelt in darkness, as if God were not an eternal Light, 1 John 1.5. 1 *Tim.*6.16.

Verse 24. Remember that thou magnifie his work] His work of Creation; wherein the wisdome, power, and goodnesse of God is clearly manifested, *Rom.*1.19 in that glorious structure of the heavens especially, which men behold. Or his work of Administration, and Gubernation, whereof David saith, All thy Works praise thee, O Lord; that is, they yeeld matter of magnifying thee; and thy Saints shall blesse thee, Psal.145.10. Remember that this be done, saith Elihu. Junius by Gods Works here understandeth Noahs Flood.

Which men behold] Or, whereof men do sing, saying, as in the next verse, Id quod & prudentes viri olim veluti gnomâ quadam & communi sententiâ jactarunt, dicentes, Omnis homo aspicit &c. Brent.

Verse 25. Every man may see it] scil. In quo est vel mica bonæ mentis; for a brutish man knoweth it not, *Psal.*92.6,7. But stupidus est & dignus cui oculi eruantur saith Plato. He is a very blockhead, and worthy to have his eyes pulled out of his head, who looketh not above him, and about him, that he may magnifie and admire the wisdom of the Creator of all; and Preserver of mankind.

Man may behold it afar off] For heaven is far above earth, and it is a wonder that we can look to so admirable an height, and that the very eye is not tired in the way. And for things that are neerer to us, we see them but as through a glass obscurely; our knowledg of them is very imperfect, 1 Cor 11.13. the reason of many things is above our reach. We read of one who had spent above forty yeares in finding out the Nature and Property of Bees, and yet was not fully satisfied of many things therein.

Verse 26. Behold God is great] Yea, he is maximus in minimis, Greatest and most of all seen in the meanest creatures, as in Ants more then in Elephants, &c. God sheweth in his works of all sorts, se aliquantum esse; sed quantus sit varsus operibus involvis; that he is very great, but how great he is, that appeares not. Brent.

Neither can the number of his years be searched out] How should they say, when as his countenance is beyond all count, Psal. 102.24,27. ner of men; and ſhould teach us, neither curiouſly to enquire into his counſels, nor diſcontentedly to complain of his doings.

Verſe 27. For he maketh ſmall the drops of water] Here Elihu beginneth to inſtance the greatneſſe of God in his works, and particularly in the Meteors; many of which Ariſtotle confeſſeth he underſtood not. And this I dare ſay, ſaith a learned Interpreter here, that there is not extent any Poem, either of the Greeks or Latines, which may be compared with this ſtately eloquence of Elihu in deſcribing thoſe natural effects which are cauſed in the air; and for the ſame cauſe are of the Philoſophers called Meteors, or aiëry impreſſions: as namely, clouds, rain, hail, ſnow, thunder, lightning, and ſuch-like; whereof he here diſcourſeth very gravely, and learnedly: And firſt of rain, which he deſcribeth, 1. by the form or manner of producing it, verſ. 27, 28. 2. by the largeneſſe of the clouds, and their noiſe, verſ. 29. 3. by the ſuddain ſucceſſion of fair weather and foul, verſ. 30. and laſtly, by the different uſe thereof in the three laſt verſes of this Chapter, God maketh ſmall the drops of water; that is, he raineth by dividing the drops in the cloud, cauſing them to come down guttatim, piece-meale, and not by whole ſpouts, or paile-fulls. Others read it, Subtrahit Deus, God draweth up drops of water; viz. out of the Sea, the rivers, and other moiſt places, whence thoſe vapours do aſcend, of which are generated thoſe drops of rain, Pſal. 147. 8. He covereth the heaven with clouds, he prepareth rain for the earth, &c.

They powre down rain according to the vapours thereof] As the vapours are greater or leſſer, ſo is the rain. The rain aſcendeth in thin vapours, but deſcendeth oft in thick ſhowers: So do our poor Prayers come down in greateſt bleſſings; and we are ſure of as much mercy, as we bring faith to carry it away.

Verſe 28. Which the clouds do drop, and diſtil upon man abundantly] Hence the Dutch call it ruegen, and we rained, à rigando, from watering the earth all over, at times: This is Gods work, and it ought to be marvellous in our eyes: it would be ſo, were it not ſo ordinary. Non ſanctis id aſcribamus, multò minus ſagis; the Heathens gave their gods the glory of it. The holy Ghoſt here, and elſwhere, ſetteth before us theſe common things, that when we ſee them, and yet know not the reaſon of them, we may gather, that we ought not over-curiouſly to pry into the profound judgements of God, which are far above the clouds, thoſe receptacles of rain; yea, far above the higheſt heavens.

Verſe 29. Alſo can any underſtand the ſpreading of the clouds?] That is, the skill that God ſheweth in ſpreading forth the clouds to that large extent, and muffling the whole heavens with them; ſo that Nature finds her ſelf buried in darkneſs? Some render it, the diviſions, or differences of the clouds; illic enim fiunt miracula magna. Vatab. For ſome clouds are empty, and anſwer not expectation (worthleſſe and vain boaſters are compared to ſuch, Prov. 25. 14. Jude 12.) ſome yield rain, and drop fatneſſe. R. Levi. Some again, ſend forth hail, ſnow, froſt, ſtorm, thunder, lightnings, &c. Theſe are wonders in nature, far beyond humane apprehenſion. The clouds God maketh one while as ſome aiëry ſeas, to hold water; another while as ſome aiëry furnaces, whence he ſcattereth the ſuddain fires into all parts of the earth, aſtoniſhing the world with the fearful noiſe of that eruption. Out of the midſt of water he fetcheth fire, and hard ſtones out of the midſt of thin vapours. Hæc ſunt ſanè admiranda & tremenda, ſaith Mercer. Theſe are wonderful things, and no leſſe dreadful. Is it not ſtrange, that of one and the ſame equal matter, viz. the vapours exhaled from the earth or water, ſo many ſeveral and different Meteors ſhould be engendred?

On the noiſe of his Tabernacle] i. e. The ſwinging ſhowres, or ruſtling winds, or ratling thunder-claps, one in the neck of another, out of the clouds, called here, Gods Tabernacle; in quo velut abditus, tot rerum miracula creat, wherein he ſits in ſecret and unſeen, creating many ſtrange Meteors to ſend down upon the earth, whereof the profoundeſt Philoſopher of them all can give no certain and undoubted reaſon.

Verſe 30. Behold, he ſpreadeth his light upon it] That is, his fair weather, clearing up the cloudy ſky, as ſome expound it: Or, as others, his lightning ſhot forth every way, Pſal. 18. 13, 15. & 144. 6. Or the ſun-beams ſpread upon the ſea, and drawing drawing up vapours; unde mare hoc loco nubium radix dicitur, ſaith Brentius, whence the ſea is here called the root of the clouds: or the ſurface of the ſea is called the root of it, in regard of the wandring waves which are cut in ſunder, after the manner of roots; ſo ſaith Vatablus. Thoſe that by light here underſtand lightnings ſay, that God maketh them dart ſo abundantly through the waters of the ſea, that they do as it were cover all the bottom of it.

Verſe 31. For by them judgeth he the people] i. e. By rain and drought in exceſſe or defect, he puniſheth people at his pleaſure: whom, oh how eaſily could he affamiſh by denying them an harveſt or two: in granting whereof, he giveth teſtimony of his bounty, Job 14. 17.

He giveth meat in abundance] ſc. By ſending moderate ſhowers fatning the earth: whereunto alſo the preaching of the Word is fitly compared, Iſai. 55.10.11. which thoſe that drink not in and fructifie, Deut. 32. 2. are accurſed, Heb. 6. 8.

Verſe 32. With clouds he covereth light] Heb. With the palmes of his hands; (ſo the clouds are called, ſee 1 King. 18. 44.) he hideth light; that is, the Sun-beams, viz. when he ſendeth rain, the heavens are masked.

And commandeth it not to ſhine] Heb. And forbiddeth it (thoſe words, not to ſhine, are not in the original) propter intercedentem, for the ſake of thoſe that intercede. He giveth rain or fair weather upon the prayers of his faithful people; who can thereby open and ſhut heaven, as did Elias, and the thundering Legion. R. Levi interpreteth this and the following verſe concerning thunder. Trem. Merlin.

Verſe 33. The noiſe thereof ſheweth concerning it] The hurry-noiſe made in the air before a ſhower of rain, fore-ſhoweth it to be at hand.

The Cattel alſo concerning the vapour] Heb. Concerning that which goeth up: Hogs, Sheep, Oxen, &c. are much more quick-ſcented than men; and can perceive the vapours going up to cauſe rain, before men can ſee or feel them. Hence ſhepherds and herdſmen gather prognoſticks of rain, and are ſo weather-wiſe, as we call it. Aben-Ezra noteth, that ſheep lying on the right-ſide, fore-ſignifie foul weather. See Virgil. Georg. lib. 1. and Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib. 18. cap. 35. Some render this verſe (than which there is not an harder in all the book, ſaith Mercer) thus, Declaring toward him (who intercedeth) his good-will, toward the cattel, and alſo toward the encreaſe of the earth. Ad dextram cubantes oves pluviam portendunt. Merlin.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Verſe 1. At this alſo my heart trembleth]

AT this? At what? at the thunder, whereof he had ſpoken before, and more meant to ſpeak: and which he heard at that inſtant, (as it may ſeem by the next verſe) and therefore no wonder that his heart trembled, and was moved out of its place by an extraordinary palpitation, or (as the Tigurines have it) luxation. Thunder is ſo terrible, that it hath forced from the greateſt Atheiſt an acknowledgement of a Deity. Suetonius telleth us of Caligula, (that Monſter, who dared his Jove to a Duel) that if it thundred and lightned but a little, he would hood-wink himſelf: but if much, he would creep under a bed, and be ready to run into a mouſe-hole, as we ſay. Auguſtus Cæſar alſo was ſo afraid of thunder and lightning, that alwayes and every where, he carried about him the skin of a Sea-Calf, (which thoſe Heathens fondly held to be a preſervative in ſuch caſes) and if at any time there aroſe a great ſtorm, he ran into a dark vault. The Romans held it unlawful to keep Court Jove tonante, fulgurante, in a time of thunder and lightening, as Tully telleth us. And Iſidore deriveth tonitrum à terrendo, thunder from its terrour; and others, from its tone, or ruſhing craſhing noiſe, affrighting all creatures! At the voice of thy thunder Beza. Diodat. De Divin. lib. 2.

Verſe 2. Hear attentively the noiſe of his voice] Conjunctam commotione vocem ejus, the great thunder-crack that now is: that angry noiſe (as the word ſignifieth) Hear in hearing; you cannot but hear it with the eares of your bodies, hear it alſo with the eares of your minds, tremble and ſin not; contrary to the courſe of moſt men, who ſin and tremble not, drowning the noiſe of their conſciences, as the old Italians did the thunder, by ringing their greateſt Bells, diſcharging their roaring-Megs, &c. But what ſaith Elihu here to his hearers? Audite, audite, audite etiam atque etiam, contremiſcetis & vos, vos teſtes adhibeo, as Mercer paraphraſeth it out of Kimchi: Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye again and again, and then ye alſo will tremble. I take you to witneſſe; whether ye conſider his greater thunder-claps ringing and roaring in your eares (See Pſal. 29. 4. & 87. 7.) or the leſſer rumblings, called here, Murmur vel Muſſitationem, vel habitum, citra quem ſermo non profertur; the ſound (or breath) that goeth out of his mouth. All's aſcribed to God; though Naturaliſts tell us (and truly) that there are ſecond cauſes of thunder and lightning: wherein, nevertheleſſe, we muſt not ſtick, but give God the glory of his Majeſty, as David teacheth, Pſal. 29. and as blind Heathens did, when they called their Jove Altitonantem, the high Thunderer. The beſt Philoſophy in this point is to hear God Almighty by his thunder ſpeaking to us from heaven as if he were preſent: and to ſee him in his lightnings, as if he caſt his eyes upon us to ſee what we had been doing. His eyes are as a flaming fire, Rev. 1. 14. and the ſchool of nature teacheth, that the fiery eye ſeeth Extra-mittendo, by ſending out a ray, &c.

Ariſtot. Pliny.

Verſe 3. He directeth it under the whole Heaven] Heb. He maketh it to go right forward, meaning the thunder, the vehement noiſe or ſound whereof (not altogether unlike that of cloth violently torn, or of air thruſt out of bellows, or of a cheſnut burſt in the fire, but far louder) is brought through the air to our eares with ſuch a mighty force, that it drowns all noiſes, clappings, clatterings, roarings even of many waters; making the earth to ſhake again, and all things tremble, non ſecùs quàm ſiquis currum onuſtum per plateam lapidibus ſtratam ducat; And this dreadful noiſe is by God directed to this or that place under the heavens, at his pleaſure. The word rendred (directeth) ſignifieth alſo Beholdeth; whence ſome interpret this text of Gods ſeeing all things under heaven. But the former ſenſe is better.

Lavat.

And his lightning unto the ends of the earth] God commands the lightning to cleave the clouds, and to ſcatter its flames through the world. Lightning is the brightneſſe of a ſhining flame, running through the whole air in a moment, riſing of a ſmall and thin exhalation kindled in a cloud; ſee Pſal. 18. 13. The natural end and effect of thunder and lightning is, to clear the air by waſting poyſonous vapours. The ſupernatural is, to ſhew Gods excellent Majeſty and Might, which the Mightieſt muſt acknowledge, Pſal. 29. 1, 2. to be his officers about him to make room for him, Pſal. 97. 1, 4. to execute his wrath upon his enemies, Exod. 9. 23. 27. Pſal. 77. 18, 19. 1 Sam. 2. 10. Iſai. 29. 6. and his mercy toward his people for the humbling of them, 1 Sam. 12. 18, 19, 20, &c. raiſing them again to an aſſured confidence, Pſal. 29. 11, &c. But that God can ſhoot theſe arrows of his ſo far, Mat. 24. 27. Pſal. 77. 18. & 97. 3, 4. and here; yea, and that at the ſame time when it raineth, when one would think that the one ſhould quench the other, Pſal. 135. 7. this is a juſt wonder: and Jeremy urgeth it twice, as ſuch, chap. 10. 13. & 51. 16.

Verſe 4. After it a voice roareth] After it, that is, after the lightning, it thundereth: indeed, before, or at leaſt together with it; but the lightning is ſeen before the thunder is heard, becauſe the ſenſe of hearing is ſlower than the ſenſe of ſeeing (thus fire is firſt ſeen in a Gun, ere the report is heard; the Ax of the Wood-cleaver is up for a ſecond blow, ere we hear the firſt, if any way diſtant, &c.) And beſides, as R. Levi well obſerveth here, that the ſight of the lightning may come from heaven to us, there needeth no time; becauſe our eyes reach up thither in an inſtant; but that a ſound may come therehence to us (in regard of the diſtance, and becauſe the air muſt be beaten and many times impreſſed as into ſo many circles) there muſt be ſome ſpace of time; neither can it be done ſo ſuddenly.

He

He thundereth with the voice of his excellency] Or, of his height, or, of his pride. Proud persons think themselves high, and use to speak big-swoln words of vanity, bubbles of words, as St. Peter calls them. If they be crossed never so little, verbis bacchantur, & cum quodam vocis impetu loquuntur. Oh the tragedies, the blusters, the terrible thunder-cracks of fierce and furious language that follow thereupon. Some have been threatned to death, as Cornelius Gallus was by Augustus Cæsar: and Sir Christopher Hatton Lord Chancellour, by Queen Elizabeth. How much more should men quake and even expire before the thunder of the most high, or wriggle as worms do into their holes, the corners of the earth?

And he will not stay them, when his voice is heard] Them, that is, new flashes of lightning: or, rain and haile, which usually break out either while it thundreth, or presently after, in a most vehement, and impetuous manner.

Verse 5. God thundereth marvellously with his voice] Or, God thundereth out marvellous things with his voice] Marvellous indeed, if we consider the effects of thunder, lightning, and light-bolts, which differ from lightning in form only, and not in matter; and for the effects thereof Naturalists tell us strange things: as, that by them the money hath been melted, without hurting the purse; the Sword hath been broken within the scabbard, the wine hath been exhausted within the barrel, the bones broke within the flesh, &c. How various and marvellous the nature, generation, matter, form, effects of the thunder and thunder-bolt are, not only Seneca, Pliny, and other Meteorologists testifie, but daily experience sealeth to the truth of it.

Great things doth he, which we cannot comprehend] As being above the reach of our shallow capacity: Or, which we will not know; so the Hebrew hath it: such is our ofcitancy, or obstinacy, that we will not take knowledge of Gods works of wonder, though they do even run into our senses. This he construeth for an high contempt; as a skilful Artificer would do when he hath set forth a curious piece to publick view, and none will take notice of it. God seemeth to have made the Meteors in such great variety, that therein he might shew his own skill, and their imperfection.

Verse 6. For he saith to the snow, Be thou on the earth] He commandeth it, and it is done; for together with his word there goeth forth a power. Dixisse Dei, est fecisse, Psal. 147. God giveth snow like wooll. Many wonders there are in snow: as that it should be made in the lowest part of the air, and not above where it is coldest: that it should snow upon the earth, but never upon the sea, as Pliny saith: that snow should lye continually, not only upon the Alps, but upon mount Ætna, where fire flames out: that no snow falleth in Egypt; but in Tartaria, a hot Country, sometime it snoweth in the heat of Summer: that it serves for a cover to preserve the earths heat, though it self be cold: that being white, it should sometimes bring forth red worms, &c.

Likewise to the small rain, and to the great rain of his strength] Not a drop of rain, whether it come leasurely or hastily, but falleth by a divine decree, chap. 28. 26. see the Note there. The Chaldee Paraphrast understandeth here the Summer and Winter-rains. God sheweth his strength in a thing so weak, and diffluent of it self, that thereby he may overturn and break in pieces the proudest of mens spirits: for whom also if they repent not, he hath a more terrible rain, Psal. 11. 6. overflowing with fire and brimstone, Ezek. 35. 22.

Verse 7. He sealeth up the hand of every man] i. e. He, by his great showres, sendeth men home for shelter, glad to intermit their work till better weather. See Exod. 9. 18. The Hebrews call rain, Sagrir, Prov. 27. 15. from shutting up: because it keeps men at home, from travelling or working abroad. Chiromantie findeth here no footing, whatever some have doated: as if God had set certain signes and notes in mens hands of what should hereafter befal them, and this text is alleaged for proof; but absurdly. Vide Joan. de Indag.

That all men may know his work] i. e. That they may take notice of Gods handy-work in ordering the seasons; and have time to think on their domestick affairs.

Verse 8. Then the beasts go into dens] In rainy and snowy weather, the very wild beasts, (as lively and lusty as they are, whence also they have their name in the Original) are glad to take harbour, and there to hold them till the ſtorm be over.

Verſe 9. Out of the South cometh the whirl-wind] Which is a wonderful wind indeed; τυφων, the Greeks call it (as they do a like wind at ſea, ευρωκλυδων, the Marriners miſchief) the Latines Vortex, becauſe it turnes up trees by the roots, houſes by the foundation, Job 1. And Turbo, as breeding great trouble; for which cauſe alſo Pope Urban was called Turban. It ſuddenly ariſeth, and as ſuddenly ceaſeth, but doth much miſchief, and eſpecially in ſtrait and narrow places. In alluſion whereunto the Apoſtle would not have people to be wherried and whirled about, with every wind of Doctrine, Eph. 4. 14. as unſtable ſouls uſe to be. Illebius for inſtance; who of a Proteſtant, firſt turned Antinomian, and afterwards a Papiſt. So the old Illuminates, boaſting at firſt of a certain Angelical purity, fell ſuddenly to the very counterpoint of juſtifying beaſtiality. For prevention of this pernicious lightneſſe, It is good (ſaith the Apoſtle) that the heart be eſtabliſhed with grace, Hebr. 13. 9. That men be ſound in the faith, well principled, bottomed and ballaſted. Spec. Europ.

And cold out of the North] Heb. Out of the ſcattered winds. North winds ſcatter the clouds, cleare the Skie, and ſo bring on faire cold weather. By Mezarim here ſome underſtand certain Stars toward the North-Pole; Arcturus the Vulgar Latine rendreth it. Καὶ Βορέης αἰθηγενέτης. Hom. Odyſſ.

Verſe 10. By the breath of God froſt is given] Froſt is the exceſſe of cold by the blowing of the coldeſt winds, which are here called, The breath of God: theſe congeal the waters, and turn them into ice contracting them into a narrower room. Hence it is, that as any Countrey is more Northerly, ſo it is colder; the ſea alſo is frozen and unpaſſable.

And the breadth of the waters is ſtraightned] This the ſame again in other words, though ſome underſtand it of hail: when the broad-flowing water in the clouds by the force of the cold is narrowed up into hail. All this is of the Lord. Fides non in ventum operis, ſed in authorem oculos ſuos dirigit, ſaith Brentius upon the Text: Faith ſeeth God in all.

Verſe 11. Alſo by watering he wearieth the thick clouds] That is, by ſhowring down of much rain he disburdeneth and diſſipateth them, ſeeme they never ſo thick and large. Theſe ſeeme to be troubled and tired out when as they are watering the earth, they are waſted and drawn dry by the heat of the Sun.

He ſcattereth his bright cloud] Heb. The cloud of his light; that is, the cloud by diſſolving whereof he reſtoreth light and fair weather, or the cloud which was covered over with lightning before, chap. 36. 30.

Verſe 12. And it is turned round about by his counſel] Vertit Dominus & revertit. The Lord turneth and returneth: letteth out, and bringeth back the clouds, as it were by a rope, at his own pleaſure: a Metaphor from Mariners, who skilfully manage the ropes of the Ship to beſt advantage. In like ſort the clouds are, by Gods cunning turned about in a circuit (as Beza rendreth it) that is in a round compaſſe or circle; they are not carried up and down the aire by any wandring and inconſtant motion: but they are, as it were, by certain Engines (ſo he maketh the Metaphor) of Almighty God, turned about at his own pleaſure, when and where he thinketh good to uſe them; for he beſt knoweth where is moſt need of raine, ſhow, &c. and therefore he by his wiſdome driveth them hither and thither, for the fulfilling of his purpoſe. Some refer this Text to the revolution of the Heavenly Orbs, which is alſo done by God.

That they may do whatſoever he commandeth them] A Metaphor like that Deut. 25. 21. where God ſaith that he will command his bleſſing upon the ſixth year, and it ſhall bring forth fruit for three years. Now if the ſenſleſs creatures ſo readily obey God, how much more ſhould we? And if he be Lord of Tempeſts, he is alſo of Diſeaſes and diſaſters. Chear up therefore, and ply the throne of Grace. He will ſee that all ſhall go well with his ſuppliants.

Verſe 13. He cauſeth it to come, whether for correction] Heb. For a rod. God hath his rods ſticking up in every corner of his houſe for chaſtiſement of his children, and they ſhall take it for a favour too, Hebr. 12. 7. 1 Cor. 11. 32. Sinite vos eam corripientem, ne forſitan in multam tumultum, ſaith an Ancient. Be content with εἰς νουθεσίαν. Sept. Bern.

the rod of correction, that ye feel not the maul of confusion. Better suffer immoderate raines and lightnings, then that terrible tempest, chap. 27. 21. and the black flashes of hell fire, that ἀειφλογίστον, as Plato calleth it; the fiery Lake, as the Scripture.

Or for his Land] i.e. His Church, Hos. 9. 3, A Land that he watereth and watcheth over from one end of the year to the other, Deut. 11. 12. His vineyard cared for, and kept to himself night and day, Isai. 27. 3. Or, the earth at large, which is Gods great field, Psal. 24. 1. (as the Church is his fold, Psal. 100. 3.) and especially that part of it which is desert and uninhabited. There also God causeth his Sun to shine, and his raine to fall, Matth 5. 45. Job 38. 26, 27. That the wild beasts also may have food.

Or for mercy] Some singular and extraordinary mercy, as 2 Sam. 21. 10. 1 King. 18. 45. Sive ad faciendum beneficentiam; or to bestow his bounty, and to bestow a largesse; as Princes sometimes make a scatter of monies among the multitude. Clouds are Gods Store-houses, which he eft-soons openeth to our profit, Deuter. 28. 12. by them, he maketh a scatter of riches upon the earth; which good men gather, and bad men scramble for.

Verse 14. Hearken unto this, O Job] Here Elihu by little and little draweth to a most wise conclusion bringing Job to this point, that as the wisdome of God in these daily and ordinary works of Nature doth far exceed the reach & capacity of man so he should much more consider the same in this grievous calamity, which was now befalne him. And for as much as he could not come to the knowledg of any other secondary and middle causes, he should rather adore and reverence the secret counsel and purpose of God herein, then labour in vain, and without any profit at all to torment himselfe in searching out that which is not possible for any man to understand. Which argument God himself doth at large most truly and divinely prosecute in the four following Chapters. Beza. Merlin.

Stand still and consider the wondrous works of God] Consiste, considera, and that thou mayest see into these divine secrets, Non arrigenda sunt aures carnis, sed fidei, Prick up the eares of thy faith, which alone can skill of these mysteries; whereinto if thou hast yet no insight, and canst not yet feel the justice, wisdome and goodnes of God in thy present sufferings, it is for want of judgement, (as I shall evince in that which followes) it is because thou hast not mine eyes, senses habitually exercised to discern good and evil, Hebr. 5. ult. Nicostratus in Elian, himself being a cunning Artisan, finding a curious piece of work, and being wondred at by one, and asked, What pleasure he could take, to stand gazing as he did on the Picture? answered, Hadst thou mine eyes thou wouldst not wonder, but rather be ravish'd as I am, at the inimitable Art of this rare Piece. Elihu seemeth here to say as much to Job.

Verse 15. Dost thou know when God disposed them?] Viz. Those wondrous works of God in the Aire especially; those varieties of Meteors, the generation and motions whereof, the greatest Philosophers cannot perfectly find out by their natural causes, neither do they wel agree amongst themselvs concerning those causes. For Anaximander holdeth one thing, Metrodorus another, Anaxagoras a third, Aristotle a fourth; let those that have a mind to it, read their janglings and Disputes in Plutarch, De placitis Philosophorum. Now if no man (though never so wise) can understand the wondrous works of God in these common things of Nature, how can he comprehend his hidden works, hoc est, crucem, saith Brentius?

And caused the light of his cloud to shine] Or, That he may cause the light of his cloud to shine. Hereby he meaneth lightnings, issuing out of the moist and cold cloud say some, the Rainbow, say others, that wonderful work of God (fained therefore by the Heathens to be the daughter of Thaumantias, or of wonderment) which is full of wonders, witnesse the beautiful shape thereof, and various colours, with their several significations, as some conceive: the several Prognosticks, viz. Of rain in the morning, of fair weather in the evening, as Scaliger concludeth, the form of it a bow, which yet never shooteth any man unlesse it be with astonishment and love, &c. God puts his bow in his hand (saith Ambrose on Genes. 9. 13) not his arrow, but his bow, and the string of the bow is to us-ward. The Jewes conceit that the name Jehovah is written on the Rainbow, and therefore they no soon- Plut.

er see it, but they hide their eyes, confesse their sins that deserve a second deluge) celebrate Gods great goodness to mankind, &c. Some by the light of Gods cloud, here understand the Sun-shine through the clouds, causing it to clear up. Now who can certainly foretel rain or fair weather? Some Learned men have spent much time and pains in Astronomy to get skill in prognosticating, but could do little good of it: when they foretel a faire day, it commonly raineth, and the contrary. The Country mans Prognosticks, the Shepherds Calender, hold better for most part, then the Predictions of these Artisans.

Verse 16. Dost thou know the balancings of the clouds?] i.e. How they are hanged up even in the aire, like Architas or Archimedes his Pigeon, equally poised with their own weight. But how they are upheld, and why they fall here, and now, we know not, and wonder. Some Naturalists tell us, that the clouds are upheld by the heat of the Sun: but thats more then they can tell, and there is much to be said against it. Wherefore it is better for men to confesse their ignorance, then so peremptorily to pronounce of things they know not. Let it be proper to God to be perfect in knowledge. It was too much that some ascribed to Tertullian, to Hierom, to Tostatus and some others, that they knew all that was knowable.

Verse 17 How thy garments are warme, when he &c.] Canst thou give a reason of the extreme heat that is about the Summer-Solstice, when the warm South-winds blow so gently, that they are scarce felt at all, and thy cloathes heated by thy body are a burden to thee, so that thou art ready to cast them off, and but for common honesty, thou couldst go naked? Brentius thinks, That although one of the winds only is here instanced, yet the disposing of them all is intended; wherein much of God may be seen: for it is he alone, who holdeth them in his fist, hideth them in his Treasures, sendeth them out as his Postes, rideth upon them as his Chariot, 2 *Sam.*22.10. *Psal.*104.3. checks them at his pleasure (whence they concluded Christs Deity, *Matth.*8.27.) makes them pace orderly appointing them their motion, &c. chap. 28. Non motum sentimus, modum nescimus, Joh 3.8. Thou heareſt the sound of the wind, but knoweſt not whence it cometh, nor whither it goeth. Now if in these common matters men are so blind, how much more in the deep judgements of the most High?

Verse 18. Hast thou with him spread out the Skie?] He had convinced Job of his ignorance, and now he will of his impotence and imbecility: and this by an irony; q.d. Tune ille gigas es? Art thou indeed that Gyant or Demi-god that helped the Almighty when he spred the heavens, when he laid the foundation of the earth, &c? Age itaque si tantus vir es, quantum te ostentas, &c. Go to then, if thou be indeed such an one as thou wouldst seem to be, whiles thou takest upon thee to be, viz. to contend with God, and to complain of his hard dealing with thee, Teach us what we shall say unto him, &c. as ver. 19. for we dare not, as thou hast done, dare him to come into the lists with us, as hoping to have the better of him.

Which is strong] Not by reason of any hard massie Elemental thickness, but by reason of their airy, incorruptible, indissoluble nature, composed of very thin and even parts. Hence the Greeks call it, στερεωμα, and the Latines Firmamentum. See the Note on Gen. 1.7. Diod.

And as a molten Looking-glass] Perspicuum & sapphirinum, clear and transparent as a mirrour wherein God maketh himself visible, as it were; who, of himself is too subtle for sight or sinew to seize upon. The Hebrew hath it, which is strong as a molten Looking-glasse; i.e. as a polished brazen Looking-glass, being more solid then brass, more transparent then christal. R. Levi.

Verse 19. Teach us what we shall say unto him] A notable scoffe, a sharp sarcasme. Verba sunt urgentis & insultantis; q.d. Velim ut à tot argumentis, cap. 23.4. aliqua nunc proferas, I would that thou wouldst bring out some of those many Arguments thou didst brag of: for we are at a fault, neither can we (such is our ignorance) find what to say in thy just defence, had we never so good a mind to it.

For we cannot order our speech by reason of darkness] We are benighted and word-bound, forced to acknowledg our ignorance our infancy, and to complain, (as Anaxagoras afterwards did) omnia esse circumfusa tenebris, and (as Empedocles) angustas esse fores sensus suum semitas, that we are fat to ſeek of what to ſay in this caſe, and ready to think that ſilence would be our ſafeſt eloquence.

Verſe 21. Shall it be told him that I ſpeak] An in altera referetur ei ſi loquar? Shall it be recorded before him, &c? q.d. Then wo be to me, for I am ſure to rue it, yea, and (without mercy) to be ruined for it. Did not Enoch the ſeventh from Adam propheſie long ſince, ſaying, Behold the Lord cometh to execute judgment upon all, and to convince them of all their hard ſpeeches which ungodly ſinners have ſpoken againſt him, Jude 14, 15.

If a man ſpeak, ſurely he ſhall be ſwallowed up] If he ſpeak in thy behalf, or after thine example, preſuming to controle Gods works, and to quarrel his proceedings as thou haſt done, he is ſure to be undone. Some read the words thus, For if he ſpeak, man ſhall be devoured; That is, if God ſpeak, man (who before he cometh to ſpeak, thinks that he ſhall be able to reaſon with him) ſhall be quite confounded, and his words, as it were, ſwallowed up by his profound wiſdome, and he made unable to ſpeak one word for himſelf. Wherefore let all fleſh be ſilent before the Lord; for if any preſume to chat againſt his judgements, he ſhall have his words driven down his throat again by a divine vengeance, Cave ne lingua feriat collum, Take heed thy tongue cut not thy throat, ſay the Arabians Proverbwiſe.

Verſe 21. And now men ſee not the bright light that is in the clouds] It ſeemeth ſaith an Expoſitor, that at that very inſtant the cloudy weather, did begin to clear up, and that thereupon Elihu took occaſion to ſpeak theſe words, q.d. Thou art not able to look into the body of the ſhining Sun, quia nimium ſenſibile ladit ſenſum; How much leſſe canſt thou behold God in his glory, in compariſon of whom, the Sun in his ſtrength is but as a clod of clay? Hereafter we ſhall ſee God as he is, ſee him face to face, 1 John 3. See as we are ſeen, &c. but here we can ſee his back parts only and live, Exod. 33. Surely out of what Elihu had hitherto ſaid Job ſhould have reaſoned thus with himſelf, I cannot bear the force of a flaſh of lightning, of a clap of thunder, of a violent ſhowre, of an overturning whirl-wind of an extreme froſt, of the out-ſhining Sun, &c. how much leſſe of God in his Majeſty? The Sun is called Light by an excellency: the Egyptians call him Orus, from the Hebrew, Or.

Verſe 22. Fair weather cometh out of the North] Heb. Gold cometh, &c. that is, the golden beames of the Sun, as golden Oyle, Zech. 4. 12. The North-wind alſo cleanſeth the clouds, and ſhewes us the pleaſant face of the Sun, that Gold-maker; all whoſe rayes come tipt and gilt with a gliſtering glory upon them. Serenitas aut ſimilis. Tig.

With God is terrible Majeſty] Far beyond that of the Sun, or of the moſt dread Soveraign upon earth: he is an Auguſtus Cæſar, or a terrible Tamberlane, in whoſe eyes ſate ſuch a rare and reverend Majeſty, as a man could hardly endure to behold them, without cloſing his own. The Tigurines render it, Ad Deum reverendiſſimum pertinet confeſſio, To the moſt reverend God belongeth praiſe. Others by way of Doxology, Unto God be reverend Majeſty, a fit perchoſe of Elihu's excellent Diſcourſe. It was the laſt ſpeech of dying Chryſoſtome, Glory be to God from all creatures. Let it be the badge of the Beaſt, Laus Deo, & beatæ Virgini. Cry we, Deus terribilis laudetur, as Brentius rendreth this Text, Let God alone be praiſed. Turk. hiſt. 23 & 415.

Verſe 23. Touching the Almighty, we cannot find him out] Heb. The Almighty, the Nominative Caſe put abſolute, q.d. in ſhort, as for the Almighty (that nomen Majeſtatiuum, as Tertullian phraſeth it) we cannot comprehend him, any more then we can the main Ocean in a cockel ſhell. And whereas we can ſay, as here, that he is excellent in Power, and in Judgement, and in plenty of Juſtice, Iſta de Deo dicimus, quia non invenimus melius quod dicamus; We ſay theſe things of God, becauſe we have nothing better to ſay of him, and muſt owe the reſt unto our thoughts, although indeed, He is above all name, and above all notion. In ſearching after God, ſaith Chryſoſtom, I am like a man digging in a deep Spring. I ſtand here, and the water riſeth upon me, and I ſtand there, and ſtill the water riſeth upon me. To Thomas Aquinas buſie in this ſearch, was ſhewed (they ſay) a deep pit in the edge of the ſea, (which empty it, and carry away the water as oft as they will, it is ſtill filled with other. It is a knowledge that paſſeth knowledge, Eph. 3. 19 Auguſt.

That

That which in meaſure is pleaſant and profitable, being too much enquired into, proves unſavoury and unſafe.

He will not afflict] viz. Willingly, Lam. 3.33. or cauſleſly, 1 Pet. 1.6. Or He will not anſwer; viz. Every one that queſtioneth the juſtice of his proceedings as Job in his heat had done. The Seventy render it queſtion-wiſe, Will he not anſwer? ſcil. Thoſe that call upon him in truth, ſith he is excellent in power and in judgment, &c? Sure he will.

Verſe 24. Men do therefore fear him] They do, or ſhould do, for his excellent greatneſſe and goodneſſe, Pſal. 130.4. Matth. 10.28. But in caſe they do not

He reſpecteth not any that are wiſe of heart] That out of a conceit of their owne wiſdome ſtand it out againſt him, and think to reaſon it out with him, as thou haſt done. Or, But he ſeeth not all wiſe in heart: He findeth not all wiſe, whom he beholdeth here upon earth. Stultorum plena ſunt omnia, and thou alſo haſt dealt very fooliſhly, as God hath ſeen and will ſhortly ſhew thee better then I can do.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Verſe 1. Then the Lord anſwered Job.]

GOD himſelf taking the word out of Elihu's mouth, (who had ſpoken well, but wanted Majeſty to ſet it forth) became his owne Patron, et hujus diſputationis ſequeſter, and Decider of this long Controverſie, vindicating his own Authority, and teaching that truth in the four following Chapters, which Saint Paul briefly comprizeth in theſe words, Rom. 11.33,34. O the depth of the riches both of the wiſdome and knowledge of God! How unſearchable are his judgements, and his wayes paſt finding out! For who hath knowne the mind of the Lord, or who hath been his Counſellor? Why then ſhould any one require an account of his proceedings, or queſtion his Juſtice? Job had often deſired that God would take knowledg of his Cauſe. His friends alſo had deſired the ſame, chap. 11.5. Here therefore He appeareth in perſon, not as out of an Engine deviſed for that purpoſe, after the manner of ſome partial Tragedy, for the whole narration teſtifieth, that this is a true ſtory of things done indeed, and afterwards faithfully recorded. Which hiſtory is highly to be eſteemed as an incomparable Treaſure, if it were for nothing elſe, yet for the right knowledge of natural Phyſophy here laid open, in theſe four following Chapters, together with the chief and principal end thereof, which is, that in theſe viſible creatures, we may behold the inviſible things of God. Beza.

Out of the Whirle-wind] That is, Out of a cloud whence iſſued a whirle-wind or a ſtorm, as a teſtimony of his heavenly Majeſty, and to procure attention. See the like Deutr. 4.12. 1 King. 19.11. &c. Ezek 1.4. &c. Nah. 1.3. Heb. 12.18. God loves to be acquainted with men in the walks of their obedience, yet he takes ſtate upon him in his Ordinances, and will be trembled at in his word and judgments.

And ſaid] With much more mildneſs and moderation then Elihu or any of them had uſed in reprehending Job, and yet with ſuch plenty and efficacy of words and arguments, Ut facilimè omnes omnium orationes ſuperet, That no ſuch Oration can any where elſe be read. Well might Lavater ſay, Hoc poſtremum colloquium eſt admodum ſuave & mite, this conference of God with Job, is very ſweet and profitable, for it teacheth us, among other things, how gently God dealeth with his offending ſervants, and how hardly the beſt are brought to confeſſe their ſins, and truly to repent of them.

Verſe

Verſ. 2. Who is this that darkneth counſel?] Who's this that talketh thus, (ſaith God, ſtepping forth, as it were from behind the hangings) how now? What's to do here? Some Ancients think it meant of Elihu: but Job is the man, ſee chap. 42. 3. where he takes it to himſelf; and it may be God here pointed to him with a Quis eſt iſte Job?

That darkneth counſel] My Counſel, by miſconſtructions, his own, by raſh and unskilful expreſſions: for which Elihu alſo rightly blamed him, and his other friends took great offence at him; who ſhould rather have ſaid as Cruciger did of Luther, Enim commodius ſentire quam loquitur, dum effervescit, that he thought not ſo ill, as he ſpoke in his heat.

By words without knowledge] This is the worſt that God chargeth Job with; words of folly and ignorance: not with malice, falſhood, blaſphemy, &c. Counſel alſo he attributeth to him, though not wiſely managed. If there be any good in us, he noteth and noticeth it; paſſing by our defects and failings: as when Sarah called her husband Lord, ſhe is much commended for it; though there was never another good word in all that ſentence, Gen. 18. 12. 1 Pet. 3. 6. See on chap. 35. verſ. 16.

Verſe 3. Gird up now thy loins like a man] As men did uſe to do when they went to fight, 1 King. 20. 11. Stand to thy ward, and ſee to thy ſelf: for I mean to aſſail thee, and to try thy manhood. Plato hath obſerved, that the beſt Fencers are the worſt Souldiers. Many can brave it afore-hand, as that Thraſonical Gaal did, Judg. 9. 29. who yet cannot look their enemy in the face with blood in their cheeks.

For I will demand of thee, and anſwer thou me] I will be thy opponent (ſith thou haſt challenged me into the ſchooles, as it were, and given me my choice) and prove thee with hard queſtions; whereunto if thou canſt give no good anſwer, ſee thine own folly, and be ſatisfied.

Verſe 4. Where waſt thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?] q. d. Thou waſt no where, a meer Non-ens: thou waſt no companion or counſellour of mine; nay, not ſo much as a looker on, for thou art but of yeſterday. Thou underſtandeſt not the reaſon of this fair fabrick: much leſſe of my dark and deep counſels.

Declare if thou haſt underſtanding] Heb. If thou knoweſt underſtanding. An irony, but friendly, and free from all bitterneſſe, the better to convince Job of his folly and faultineſſe: for which end alſo, multis eum interrogationibus onerat, God loadeth him with many deep queſtions, the leaſt whereof he could not anſwer. Mercer.

Verſe 5. Who hath laid the meaſures thereof] In that circumference and diameter that it holdeth?

If thou knoweſt] Or, For thou knoweſt; quandoquidem ſcitus es, a tart irony. Geometricians take upon them to know the ſeveral dimenſions of the earth: and Archimedes boaſted, that if he had but where to ſet his foot from off the earth, he could ſhake the whole body of it. As alſo, that he could number all the ſands that were in the whole World, habitable and inhabitable. But theſe were vain brags.

Or who hath ſtretcht the line upon it?] A metaphor from Maſons and other Maſter-builders, who work by line and by rule. Vitruvius in his 7*th.* Book ſaith thus, Longitudines ad regulam & lineam, altitudines ad perpendiculum, anguli ad normam reſpondendo designantur.

Verſe 6. Whereupon are the foundations thereof faſtened?] Surely, upon nothing, but the word of Gods power. The Philoſophers diſpute many things concerning the foundations of the earth; but without any ſound foundation of good reaſon. Some Jew-Doctors make the mountains to be them: but theſe bear not up the earth, but the contrary. The Pſalmiſt ſaith, that God hath founded the ſolid earth upon the liquid waters, Pſal. 24. wherein appeareth the infinite wiſedom and power of God the founder. Vitruvius ſaith, In ſolido extruendum, foundations muſt be laid in ſolid places. But God is not tyed to rules: his works are in oppoſitis mediis, as was above noted.

Or who laid the corner-ſtone thereof?] i. e. The Center (ſay ſome Jew-Doctors) whither whither all heavie things are carried, and about which the whole world hangeth: the elements and heavenly orbs ſurrounding it in their motions. Others fetch this corner-ſtone out of the middle of the ſea. But all this diſcourſe is metaphorical, to ſhew the firmneſſe of the work, wherein none had any hand but only the eſſential wiſdom of God, Prov. 8. who did it with more eaſe than men can build an houſe.

Verſe 7. When the morning ſtars ſang together] There is but one morning ſtar properly ſo called, viz. Phoſphorus, Lucifer, or Venus, the Suns fore-runner. But, for their brightneſſe, they are all called here, Stars of the morning, and ſaid to ſing together, as birds uſe to do at break of day: ſo did theſe in the morning of the Creation, when firſt thoſe heavenly torches began to ſhine, and joyfully to dance, as it were, in number and meaſure. This they do ſtill in their kind, Pſalm 19. verſ. 1. beckening alſo, as it were, to us to do the like, Pſal. 145. 3.

And all the ſons of God ſhouted for joy] i. e. All the Angels, as chap. 1. 6. meant alſo by thoſe morning ſtars, as Piſcator and others will have it. Theſe being created together with the higheſt heavens, on the firſt day (as it is probable) like as Chriſts ſoul was created in and with his body in the Virgins womb the ſame moment) were preſent at a great part of the Creation, if not at all: and were rapt with admiration at the great wiſdom and power of their Creator, ſinging, Holy, holy, holy, &c. Shall the ſtars ſing, the Angels ſhout, and ſhall we be ſo dull? This was all they did, at the Creation. Note this againſt thoſe, who held that God made the ſuperior creatures himſelf, but the inferior by his Angels. A great hand they have, as Gods inſtruments, in governing the world, Ezek. 1. 5, 6, 7, &c. (whence alſo they are called Watchmen and Keepers, Dan. 4. 13.) but not any had they in making the world: for in that work, God was alone, and by himſelf, Iſai. 44. verſ. 24.

Verſe 8. Or who ſhut up the ſea with doors] i. e. With bounds and banks: the Sea God ſhut up in the hollow parts of the earth, as in a great houſe, that the dry land (naturally overwhelmed thereby) might appear, and become fit, both to bear grain, graſſe, plants, &c. and to yield an habitation for men and beaſts. Piſcator thinks it is a Metaphor from Flood-gates at Mill-ponds.

When it brake forth as if it had iſſued out of the womb] The Sea is here ſet forth in lively colours, as an incomprehenſible work of Gods wiſdom. Out of Nothing God produced it at firſt, as an infant out of the mothers womb. How great is God then, to whom the great Sea is but as a little infant? It brake out of the womb, when it was ſevered from the Abyſſe; which lay covered with darkneſſe, till the waters below were ſeparated from thoſe above, Gen. 1. 10.

Verſe 9. When I made the cloud the garment thereof] When I clothed this new born child with a cloud; commanding the vapors which environ it, to ſerve it for garments. Clouds are begotten of the waters, of the ſea eſpecially, and appear daily upon it.

Elegans allegoria. Jun.

And thick darkneſſe, a ſwadling band for it] This thick darkneſſe is well interpreted to be thoſe fogs and miſts which ariſe upon the ſea, and are between the clouds and the ſea; as the ſwadling bands between the upper garment and the child. Interim ſignificat, ſaith Mercer here; Meanwhile here is ſignified, that God can as eaſily rule and repreſſe the ſea, as the mother, or nurſe, can her ſuckling, when it is ſwathed up.

Verſe 10. And brake up for it my decreed place] That great houſe in the hollows of the earth, verſ. 8. gathering it together by a perpetual and powerful decree, into that place and pit. Tremellius rendreth it, Quum diffregi pro eo terram decreto meo; When I brake up for it the earth by my decree. Others, And laid upon it my Statute: for ſhabbar ſignifieth alſo ſtatuere, decernere, ſay they: but that's more than I know.

And ſet bars and doors.] Vectes & valvas: See verſ. 8. This is a work of Gods great power: and is therefore much inſtanced and inſiſted upon in Scripture, Pſ. 104. Jer. 5. 22, &c. God could have put many other hard queſtions to Job about the ſea; as, why it ſwelleth not by the inflowing of ſo many great Rivers? why the waters of it are ſo ſalt? whence it is that it ſo ebbeth and floweth, &c? Ariſtotle ſheweth himſelf ſelf no very wiſe man in anſwering theſe queſtions; whom yet Averroes ſo madly admireth, that he ſaith, there is no errour at all to be found in him; and that his doctrine is the chiefeſt truth, &c.

Verſe 11. And ſaid, Hitherto ſhalt thou come and no further] This God commanded, and it is done. If the ſea at any time break its bounds, and over-flow countries (as in Holland, Zealand, and other parts it hath done) that is to declare the power of God, and his juſt anger againſt ſin.

And here ſhall thy proud waves be ſtayed] Canutus commanded ſuch a thing: but the ſea regarded him not. Xerxes beat the ſea, and caſt a pair of fetters into it to make it his priſoner, but to no purpoſe. God here chides it by an elegant Eclipſis or Apoſiopeſis, Illic ponit (ſc. ventus) elationem fluctuum tuorum, and it is quieted immediately, as Jon. 1. Matth. 8. Think the ſame of the waters of Afflictions.

Verſe 12. Haſt thou commanded the morning, ſince thy dayes?] It may be thou wilt ſay, Theſe are ancient things, done long before I was born: but ask me of things within my reach, and remembrance. Well then, what ſaieſt thou to the Sun-riſing? Haſt thou either lengthened or haſtened it at any time, ſince thou wert born, cauſing it to riſe at ſuch or ſuch an hour, in ſuch or ſuch a point of heaven according to the divers degrees and ſituations of the Zodiak? No: this is more than ever any man could do. The day is thine, the night alſo is thine, ſaith David, Thou haſt prepared the light and the Sun, Thou haſt ſet all the borders of the earth, thou haſt made ſummer and winter, Pſal. 74. 16, 17. If all the Emperours and Potentates of the earth ſhould conjoyn their forces to hinder or haſten the riſing of the Sun, they could never do it. Joſhua did indeed ſtop the courſe of the Sun: but that was by the power of God ſet a work by his faithful prayer. Whence One cryeth out, O admirabilem piarum precum vim ac potentiam, quibus etiam cœleſtia cedunt! O the admirable power of Prayer, force of Faith, which is ſuch as the viſible heavens are ſenſible of, and giveth way to! how then ſhould earth or hell ſtand before it?

And cauſe the day-ſpring to know his place] The word day-ſpring comes from Aurora ſic à nigrore dicta qui eum comitatur. blackneſſe, for it is not νυκτὸς λάμψις O clear light at firſt: but σκότος τι, rather dark, than light.

Verſe 13. That it might take hold of the ends of the earth] That is, ſuddenly it lighten the whole Horizon: for which cauſe alſo David aſcribeth wings to the morning, Pſal. 139. ſo that the light is not a body, nor (as ſome will have it) a ſubſtance, but an accident. The truth is, no man can tell what it is, of any certainty: an admirable creature it is, ſurely a divine and heavenly thing, than which nothing is more deſirable, nothing more profitable. Two excellent uſes of it are here ſet forth, 1. To refreſh men by the ſight of the earth, and the things thereon. 2. To ſet us upon ſerious employments, ſuch as is the puniſhment of evil doers, for ſo ſome interpret thoſe next words.

That the wicked might be ſhaken out of it] ſc. By baniſhment, or rather by death inflicted upon them in the light, for their deeds of darkneſſe. Or at leaſt, that thoſe lucifugæ, tenebriones, thoſe inauſpicate night-birds, who hate the light, becauſe their works are evil, might be ſhamed and ſhunned. Their Motto is, Jam lux inimica propinquat. See chap. 24. verſ. Virg. 13, 17.

Verſe 14. It is turned as clay to the ſeal] That is, The earth now diſcerned, by reaſon of the aire inlightened. The ſenſe is this, Like as clay in the lump that hath no figure ſtamped upon it, is changed by a ſeal impreſſed, and receiveth the figure of the ſeal upon it ſelf: ſo the earth, which by night was without form by reaſon of darkneſſe, when once the Sun is up, is figured as it were: that is, it ſhewes the ſeveral figures ſtamped upon it. Piſcator.

And they ſtand as a garment] All the ſeveral fruits, flowers, and various workmanſhip of God in her produced creatures that grow thereupon, appear as a ſtately garment or ornament unto man, Mat. 6. 28, 29. the Sun-beams ſhining upon it as faſt. Abbot.

Verſe 15. And from the wicked, their light is with-holden] They have no ſuch joy of thoſe comforts which the light affordeth: but as it diſcovereth their dark practises, Ephes. 5. 13. so it bringeth them forth to condigne punishment; Utpote indignos, qui hac luce fruantur.

And his high arm shall be broken] i. e. His strength, tyranny, and power, whereby he oppressed others as with an out-stretched arm lifted up to strike with violence, this shall be broken, as Moabs was, Jer. 48. and as all the wickeds shall be; but the Lord upholdeth the righteous, Psal. 37. 17. It is well noted, that this verse is an Exposition of the latter part of vers. 13. as the former verse was of the former part. And well might Mercer say of this, and the three following Chapters, Sunt haec alta & insignia, & nonnulla difficilia; these are things high, and excellent, and somthing dark, and difficult.

Usque ad plorata maris. Job. 28. 11.

Verse 16. Hast thou entred into the springs of the sea?] Heb. Into the teares of the sea; for springs poure out water as eyes do teares: and the same Hebrew word signifieth an eye, and a spring; because, saith One, the eye is of a watery constitution: or to shew, that from it, as from a spring or fountain, did flow both sin it self, the cause of sin, and misery the punishment of both; and because by it came the greatest hurt, therefore God hath placed in it the greatest tokens of sorrow: iisdem quibus videmus oculis, flemus. Now if Job cannot fathom the Sea, much lesse can he the deep counsels of God.

Or hast thou walked in the search of the deep?] Et in vado voraginis ambulasti? No: that's Gods walk alone, Psal. 77. 19. whatever the Papists legend of their St. Christopher.

Verse 17. Have the gates of Death been opened unto thee?] &c. That thou shouldest know when, how, and of what Disease every man shall die: together with the state and condition of the dead.

Or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death?] No, nor any man living hath ever seen those dark and dismal receptacles of the dead, called here, the shadow of death; that is, so dreadful, that they were enough to strike a man dead.

Frigida sunt & leves conjecturae. Mercer.

Verse 18. Hast thou perceived the bredth of the earth?] Heb. The bredths, i. e. the length also and circumference thereof. Geographers define the length of the earth from East to West, the bredth from North to South, and they have their supputations and conjectures. Pencer, and others, tell us, that if there were a path made round the earth, an able foot-man might easily go it in 900. dayes. Which if he could, yet what mortal man, though he should live 900. years, could ever visit and view the whole face, nature, and dimension of the earth, wherein are so many deserts and bogs unpassable? Or, what Job can give a reason why God made the earth of such a length and bredth, and no more, when he could so easily have done it? How much lesse can he of Gods secret and unsearchable judgements? and why should he so desire to know the cause wherefore he is Afflicted?

Declare if thou knowest it all] Sith a great part of it is uninhabited: and the sea surroundeth it as a girdle.

Diod.

Verse 19. Where is the way where light dwelleth?] These are Poëtical terms likewise: which signifie, or mean nothing else, but that God alone without any help or work of any man, appointed the divers points of Sun-rising, and Sun-setting.

And as for darkness, where is the place thereof?] i. e. Little canst thou tell what is become of it, or where the Sun setteth: by the absence whereof cometh darkness. The truth is, our reason is by original sin so darkened, that we understand not these lesser and common matters. Those that are more high and hard we learn not, but with much labour, and long experience. As for the Mysteries of God, and things pertaining to Salvation, we cannot at all attain unto them by humane reason, as is to be seen in Nicodemus, Joh 3. & 1. Cor. 2.

Verse 20. That thou shouldest take it to the bound thereof] That thou shouldest take light and darkness by the hand as it were, and lead them to the place of their abode.

And that thou shouldest know the paths, &c.] That is, Which way to go to bring them out of their retiring-rooms: and to reduce them into our Hemisphere.

Verse 21. Knowest thou it because thou wast then born?] Beza readeth it thus,

These

These things, forsooth, thou knowest, because thou wast then born (viz. when I made them, and appointed what order and course they should keep) and the number of thy dayes is great, thou art very far grown in yeares, as having lived ever since the Creation. Es annosissimus & antiquissimus, &c. Ironicè omnia.

Verse 22. Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow?] i. e. Into the clouds where these Meteors (whereof before chap. 37.) are ingendred: and from whence God, when he pleases, bringeth such great store, as if he had them treasured up by him of a long season. See the like said of the winds, Psal. 135. 7. Quasi parata haberet horum penuaria. Gregory allegorizing these words, sheweth, that earthly treasures are treasures of Snow. We see little children what paines they take to rake and scrape together snow to make a Snow-ball: Right so, they that scrape together the Treasure of this world, have but a snow-ball of it: so soone as the Sun shineth, and God breatheth upon it, and so entreth into it, by and by it cometh to nothing.

Or hast thou seen the treasures of hail?] Another Metaphor from Officers of the Exchequer, or publick Treasury; q.d. Hast thou the inspection or administration of these Meteors?

Verse 23. Which I have reserved against the time of trouble] Or, Against the time of the enemy to punish him, as Exod. 9. 24. Josh. 10. 11. Isai. 30. 30. By deep Snowes men are sometimes withered and destroyed: by violent hail-stones and coales of fire (as Psal. 18. 13, 14, 15.) What an overthrow was procured against the Quades by the prayers of the thundring Legion, as they were afterwards called in the dayes of Aurelius the Emperour? Ingens grando complurague fulmina in hostes ceciderunt; Huge hail-stones and many light-bolts fell upon the enemy saith the Heathen Historian. Dio in vit. & Ant. Phil.

Against the day of battle and war] When God is pleased to bring forth his upper and lower troops ready prest, as the Rabbins phrase it.

Verse 24. By what way is the light parted] Scil. From the clouds by lightning, or from darkness by the Sun-rising? Knowest thou that? Or the cause of it? Nothing lesse. Something Philosophers have to say here, but upon no great certainty.

Which scattereth the East wind upon the earth] Eurus est ventus versus exiccans, the East wind hath its name in Hebrew from the Sun-rising; the Latines call it, Ventum subsolanum, as that which usually followeth the rising-Sun; but whence it cometh, and whither it goeth, is more then Job or any other can tell.

Verse 25. Who hath divided (or derived) a water course for the over-flowing of waters?] That is, the water-clouds for the powring out of raine, Velut per canales & tubulos; as by Pipes and conveyances whersoever God pleaseth, men being amazed at those miracles of Nature, Is it not the Lord alone? He it is who divideth the Deluge of waters, as it were draining them into certain furrowes which would otherwise fall down from heaven all at once, and make great spoil here below.

Or a way for the lightning of thunder] Nimbo sonoro, saith Tremellius. See chap 28. 6. with the Note.

Verse 26. To cause it to rain on the earth where no man is] But wild beasts only. These also are Gods Creatures, and he provideth food for them. How much more will he do so for us, though small faiths.

On the wilderness wherein there is no man] Repetitio ad varietatem & elegantiam, as also to shew the certainty of the thing.

Verse 27. To satisfie the desolate and waste ground] The waste and waste ground saith Broughton elegantly, and the Hebrew sounds alike.

And to cause the bud of the tender herb to spring forth] For the use of wild Creatures, whereof there are great store in the Desert of Arabia, not farre from Job; for the which, and the rest of his living Creatures, this great House-keeper of the world provideth food, sutable to their several appetites.

Verse 28 Hath the rain a father?] Subaudi, præter me, saith Vatablus? Hath to any father but me? Can any of the Heathen Deities give raine? Or can the Heavens give ſhowres? Art not thou He, O Lord our God? Therefore we will wait upon thee, for thou haſt made all theſe things, Jerem. 14. 22.

Or who hath begotten the drops of the dew?] Thoſe round orient Pearls, that falling from heaven in a clear night, do ſweetly refreſh whatſoever groweth in fields and Meadowes. The natural cauſes hereof, and of raine are knowne, but we muſt riſe higher to God, the firſt Authour and Father of theſe and other things, before and after mentioned, who bringeth them out of his Treaſuries, and doth wonderfully both make and manage them. It is remarkable that Chriſt ſaith, Hoſ. 14.5. I will be as the dew unto Iſrael, He ſhall grow as the Lilly, &c. (See the Note on that Text) Chriſt is unto them as a cloud of dew in the heat of harveſt, Iſai. 18.4. Making their hearts to be as ſo many watered gardens, Jer. 31.12.

Verſe 29. Out of whoſe womb came the ice?] Indeed of ice and water is ſaid in a ſenſe, Mater me genuit: eadem mox gignitur ex me.

But theſe creatures are not produced by cauſes which are conſtant and invariable in Nature, as humane generation is, but they proceed from Gods pure and ſimple free-will.

And the hoary froſt of heaven, who hath gendred it?] Out of the heaven; that is, Out of the lower Region of the Aire cometh the matter of it, but God maketh it. Naturaliſts ſay, that the hoar froſt is a vapour congealed by a cold wind in cold places of the lower Region of the Aire, as in Winter we ſee the breath that cometh out of the mouth, to congeal and hang upon the beard and haires. This hoare froſt is anſwerable in the counter-point to the dew, but laſteth much longer.

Quæ aquæ magno & diuturno frigore congelaſcunt, velut per 10 vel 20 annos continuos appellantur chryſtalli, velut in Alpibus.
—Et glacialem Oceanum—

Verſe 30. The waters are hid as with a ſtone] This is a further deſcription of ice, which is hard as a ſtone, and clear as chryſtal; ſo great is the force of froſt, how much more then of God to do what ſoever he pleaſeth.

And the face of the deep is frozen] Some deep Rivers are ice to the bottom, ſo that loaden carts are driven over, fires made upon them, meat dreſſed, &c. as was here upon the Thames in the great Froſt, ſome forty five years ſince. Yea, ſome ſeas are over-frozen (Juvenal ſpeaks of the icy Ocean) in the Northern part of the world, the ice thereof when once thawed, floteth in the waters like huge mountaines, as in Groenland, &c.

Verſe 31 Canſt thou bind the ſweet influences of the Pleiades?] That is, Reſtrain the pleaſantneſſe of the Spring, or aſſwage the ſharpneſſe of winter, that cold and comfortleſſe Quarter? There is none beſide God, who can either forbid flowers to breed forth in the Spring tide, or elſe cauſe them to flouriſh in winter. The Pleiades (otherwiſe called Virgiliæ and the Hens) are the ſeven Stars in the end of Aries. They are in Hebrew called, Chimah, of Chamah to love ardently, becauſe of the fellowſhip and working together that appeareth in them. They have all one name, becauſe they all help one another in the work, which is, to bring the Spring; and like ſeven Siſters or Lovers, ſo are they joyned together in one Conſtellation, and in one company. We ſee (ſaith One) that God will have the ſweeteſt works in Nature to be perfected by mutual help. The beſt time of the year cometh with theſe Pleiades, and the beſt time of our life cometh, when we enter into true love and fellowſhip.

A veris temporis ſignificatione

Or loſe the bands of Orion?] Which is a Star that ariſeth in the beginning of Winter, and draweth foul weather after him as with bands: theſe can no man looſe; for Winter never retteth in the Aire (as the Proverb hath it) nor is it fit it ſhould, for it is of very great uſe for mellowing of the earth, killing of worms and weeds, &c. Neither can the Spring come kindly, till Orion have prepared the way. God will have us ſuffer, before we reigne. The word Cheſil here uſed, ſignifieth in the Chaldee to perſwade; becauſe (ſaith One) by ſuffering and offering violence to our ſelves, we enter into perfection, Luke 13, 32. If we would have a pleaſant Spring of graces in our hearts, we muſt firſt have a nipping winter. The Spirit of Mortification muſt be like the cold Star Orion, to nip our quick motions in the head, and to bind all our unclean deſires and burning luſts, that they ſtir not in us; and unleſs we do thus the delights of Pleiades, or the ſeven Stars of comfort ſhal never appear to us.

Verſe 32 Canſt thou bring forth Mazzaroth?] Or, the Twelve Signes; or the Southern Stars that bring in Summer. Lucifer ſome render it; others, the Hyades and others again every one of the ſtars or ſigns. It is like it was ſome one ſtar very well known in thoſe dayes, as were likewiſe the reſt here mentioned, and put for the four ſeaſons of the year.

Or canſt thou guide Arcturus with his ſons] Or, Bootes with his waine, (thoſe Northern ſtars) or, Autumne with his yearly fruits, the gift and work of God alone Of Arcturus, Hierome obſerveth that ſemper verſatur nunquam mergitur; this is moſt true of Chriſts Church, much toſſed, never drowned.

Verſe 33. Knoweſt thou the Ordinances of heaven?] Either how to order them, as Maſter over them, or to comprehend what they are certainly and perfectly. Dind.

Canſt thou ſet the dominion thereof in the earth?] As well in regard of the motion of the heavens, which varieth the ſeaſons of the year, as of the influences and vertue which cometh from thence. For they who think that the ſuperior bodies have no power at all upon theſe inferiour, do go againſt common ſenſe and experience, yea, this and many other texts of Scriptures, which yet make nothing at all for that Judiciary Aſtrology ſo much cryed up, in theſe laſt and worſt dayes of the world, by ſome who would have the manners, ſtudies and events of every man to depend upon the ſtars, yea, the riſe and ruine of Kingdomes, Arts, Religion, &c.

Verſe 34 Canſt thou lift up thy voice to the clouds?] Thy commanding voice, as Numb. 9 23. Some render it, Thy thunder. Will the clouds obey thee, and rain upon thee at thy pleaſure? Something thou maiſt get by thy prayers as Elias did, James 5 17. and the thundering Legion in the Eccleſiaſtical hiſtory, but nothing by command or compulſion. The Monarch of Mexico is a mad man to take an Oath at his Coronation, that it ſhall be what weather ſoever he pleaſeth all the time of his Raigne. Lopez de Gomara.

Verſe 35 Canſt thou ſend lightnings?] Nunquid emittes. Canſt thou ſend forth lightnings and thunder-bolts, as hurtful Creatures out of the Cave wherein they are kept? Or as ſo many ſouldiers or ſervants to do as thou commandeſt them? The Poets faine that Mercury had once a mind to ſteal Jupiters thunder-bolts, but durſt not leſt they ſhould burn his fingers. Hiſtories tell us of a King of Egypt, and of Caligula the Roman Emperor, that they attempted to thunder and lighten, but with very ill ſucceſs. Job is here told, that that is too hard a work for any creature to do. Admirari duntaxat poteſt, efficere non poteſt. Brent.

Verſe 36. Who hath put wiſdome in the inward parts?] Hitherto God hath ſet forth his own admirable Power, Wiſdome and providence in making and governing the life-leſs creatures the Meteors eſpecially. Now he comes to declare the ſame in things endued with life, and firſt with man his Maſter-piece: Who hath given him wiſdom (ſaith God) in the inward parts, or reines? where the reaſonable ſoul ſitteth and ſoveraigneth. The Hebrewes ſay, That the heart underſtandeth, and the raines deliberate. They haue their name here from plaiſtering over, or covering; becauſe they are over-covered with fat and fleſh; howbeit the Lord tryeth them, Jer. 17.10. and hath given wiſdome to man to moderate his affections and concupiſcences which are here ſeated, and to get truth into theſe inward parts, Pſalm 51.6. that this hidden man of the heart may be highly accepted in heaven, 1 Pet. 3. 4.

Or who hath given underſtanding to the heart?] To the Cock, ſaith the Vulgar Latine, after the Talmudiſts and Jew-Doctors, who teach their Diſciples whenſoever they hear the Cock crow by night, to ſay this Benediction, The Lord be praiſed, who giveth underſtanding to the Cock; ſcil. to awaken men, and to announce day. The Septuagint render it, Who hath given to women skill to weave, and art to embroy- der? But they do beſt that take the word (though found only in this place) for the Heart, as that wherein are painted and imprinted the imaginations and repreſentations of things, as the word ſeemeth to import.

Verſe 37. Who can number the clouds in wiſdome?] Quis ſapphirinas efficit nubes? Who can make the clouds like Sapphire, that is bright and clear? ſo ſome read it. Others, Who can declare the clouds? ſcil. their number, nature and uſes?

Or who can ſtay the bottle of heaven?] i.e. the clouds, fitly compared to bottles, as thoſe veſſels that hold the rain, and powre it out on the earth, when God pleaſeth to turn the mouths of thoſe bottles downward. This is a great Miracle, ſaith Lavater, that whereas water is fluid, and beareth downward, yet it abideth in the lofty and ſoft aire, nor can fall, but where and when God appointeth.

Verſe 38 When the duſt groweth into hardneſſe, &c.] When the ground hath had its fill, ſo that the light duſt is turned into lumps of earth: and that which was toſſed with every wind, is clodded and agglutinated by water into an heavy ſubſtance. Hic enim ſimplex eſt & nativus hujus loci ſenſus, ſaith Merlin. Danæus diſcourſing of ſtones, how they are made of earth, ſaith, That this Text is a compendium of all the large Diſcourſes of the natural Philoſophers concerning that Subject.

Phyſic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 31.

Verſe 39. Wilt thou hunt the prey for the Lion?] Heb. For the old Lion, (as Neh. 2.9.) that cannot hunt for himſelf. Prey he muſt have, as being a very ravenous creature: but wilt thou provide it him? With what great charge do Princes maintain a few Lions? But God maintaineth all, and all other creatures, Pſal. 104. 27,28. and 145.15. putting it into the young Lions, to provide prey for the old; and cauſing theſe creatures to keep for moſt part in the Deſerts, where they feed upon Camels, and ſuch as they can light upon. Ammianus Marcellinus writeth, That in Chaldæa there are an huge number of Lions, which were like enough to devour up both men and beaſts throughout the Country. But withal he ſaith, That by reaſon of the ſtore of water and mud thereof, there breed yeerly an innumerable company of Gnats, whoſe property is to flye into the eye of the Lion, as being a bright and Orient thing, where biting and ſtinging the Lion, he teareth ſo fiercely with his clawes, that he puts out his own eyes: and by that means many are drowned in the Rivers, others ſtarve for want of prey, and many the more eaſily killed by the Inhabitants.

Plin. & Ariſtot. ſcribunt, Leones multa ſolida ſine diſſectu devorare.

Or fill the appetite of the young Lion?] Which is very greedy and inſatiate. Some render it, Catervam, the Troop or company of young Lions. But God in mercy to mankind hath ſo diſpoſed it, that as devouring Creatures are more rare (the Lioneſs ſeldome bringeth forth more then one in all her life) ſo they go not often by troops, but range alone ſeeking their prey.

Verſe 40. When they couch in their dens, &c.] When both by might and ſlight they provide for themſelves. Hunters with all their paines and means cannot catch a beaſt ſo ſoon as the Lion can. An Ape he hateth in a ſpecial manner, as being too crafty for him: And yet he feareth man (although as the Poet ſaith, Ennius. Simia quam ſimilis turpiſſima beſtia nobis.)

Whereof no other probable reaſon can be given, but the ſmall remnant of Gods Image left as yet in man, who once had dominion over all the Creatures, and is ſtill feared by the fierceſt of them.

And abide in the covert to lye in wait] Where they crouch, counterfeit themſelves aſleep, lye quiet and cloſe, as Cats that would catch Mice, or Foxes birds. But if this way they ſpeed not, Baſil ſaith they ſet up a loud roar, whereby the Beaſts are ſo amated, that they have no power to ſtir out of the place they ſtand in, till the Lions have taken them.

Verſe 41 Who provideth for the Raven his food?] Though the Raven be a moſt vile creature, and hated almoſt of all: in ſome places there is a reward appointed for thoſe that ſhall kill them up. Though an unclean creature, and therefore abominable, Lev. 11.13,15. Though unmerciful to her own, and pitileſſe to other birds birds, though an inauſpicate creature, a ſign both of mans puniſhment, and Gods curſe, Iſai. 34 11. Though he cryeth with a hoarſe and harſh voice (whence alſo he hath his name in the Original) and ſo unfit to move pity; yet God provideth food for him: What then will he do for his faithful ſervants, Matth. 6.26? Where our Saviour fetcheth not an example from the Iſraelites miraculouſly fed in the wilderneſſe, or Elias in the Deſert, but from Fowles of the Aire; and among them, not from Eagles, Hawks, Nightingales, but Ravens, &c. Conſider the Ravens, Luke 12.24.

Corvus incubat 20 diebus, & pullos nido excludit. Plin. Ariſt. Ariſt. hiſt. Animal. l 9.c.31.

When his young ones cry to God] Though by implication only they cry, and not directly, being forſaken by the old ones, and left bare, they are fed by God with flies and wormes bred in the neſt out of their excrements; till able to flye, and leave the neſt, they wander for lack of meat to take it where-ever they can meet with it.

CHAP. XXXIX.

Verſe 1. Knoweſt thou the time when the wild Goats of the Rock bring forth?]

THe Hiſtory of the living Creatures is of ſingular uſe we ſee to ſet forth the Goodneſs, Power, Wiſdom, and other of Gods Attributes clearly ſhining in them. And therefore they have very well deſerved of all ſorts who have put forth ſuch Hiſtories and diſcourſes; as Ariſtotle, Elian, Pliny, Geſner, Aldrovandus, &c. of whom I may ſay, as once Eneas Sylvius (afterwards Pope Pius 2.) did of Learning in general, That Popular men ſhould eſteem them as ſilver, Noblemen as Gold, Princes as Pearles; and not ſo ſlenderly reward them, as Pope Sixtus did Theodorus Gaza (who tranſlated, and dedicated unto him, Ariſtotle, De Natura Animalium) paying him only for the rich Binding and Boſſing forty Crowns: but bountifully encourage them, as Great Alexander did his Maſter Ariſtotle for that ſame Work, he gave him ſaith the Hiſtory, eight hundred Talents, which is foure hundred and foure ſcore thouſand Crownes. The pleaſure of reading ſuch Authors, is not ſo great as the profit, for thereby we may attain to the knowledg of God and of our ſelves, of his Will, and our Duties. Hence we are ſent to School to the unreaſonable Creatures, even the moſt contemptible, as the Piſmire, Prov. 6.6. And Baſil writing to one, that was proud of his knowledge, propoundeth unto him diverſe queſtions concerning this ſame Piſmire, as namely, how many feet he hath? whether he hath entrailes, as kidneyes, liver, heart, veines, nerves, as other living Creatures, &c? Semblably, God here to humble Job, and to convince him of his meanneſs, asketh him, whether he knoweth the wild Goats and Hinds, with the time of their bringing forth young, the means and the manner, &c? And whether theſe things were done by his ordination and vigilancy? Many admirable things are written of theſe wild Goats, as what cold places they live in, what inacceſſible Rocks, how ſtrangely there they hang, what huge leaps they fetch; but eſpecially about their bringing forth, how by a natural ſagacity they help themſelves, both before and after, by biting upon certain herbs that are helpful to them in that caſe. Theſe things, and many more ſuch may be read of in Pliny's Natural Hiſtory; of which Book Eraſmus well ſaith, That it is a ſtore-houſe, or rather a world full of things moſt worthy to be read. So are not the Jewiſh Expoſitors, who tell us many ſtrange things here concerning theſe Creatures, quæ commentitia eſſe puto, which I take to be meer Fictions, ſaith Learned Mercer. And I, to be trifles, and old wives Fables, ſaith Lavater. To the belief whereof they are juſtly given up by God for their rejecting of Chriſt the Light of the world. We grant that the whole world is full of miracles, though for the commonneſs of them they are little noted, or noticed. But ſhould theſe men think to help the truth by their lyes? Should they speak wickedly for God, and talk deceitfully for him?

Or canst thou mark when the Hinds do calve?] Which they do not, without a great deal of pain, (as the Hebrew word importeth) no creature the like, unlesse it be woman. God sometimes frighteth them by his thunder, and so furthereth their delivery, Psal. 29. 9. whilest they struggle with many griefs, and to give life to their calves, are in danger of losing their own. Now, if God help the Hinds in this case, will he be wanting to his labouring daughters? Let them send for Lady Faith to be their Midwife; and all shall go well. She hath delivered Graves of their dead, Heb. 11. 35. How much more then will she, them of their quick births, yea, though they carry death in their bowels?

Verse 2. Canst thou number the months they fulfil?] Eight months Aristotle saith (the Elephant is said to go above eight yeares) but who can tell the instant when? or why not sooner, or later? Doest thou exactly observe and count those months as I do, to a moment? Sola hic Dei providentia elucet.

Verse 3. They bow themselves] sc. By an instinct of nature, whether it be the pain they suffer which compelleth them to it, or the fear of hurting their calves, which obligeth them to it.

They bring forth their young] Diffindunt: fissa sc: et aperta tandem matrice; they bring forth with a great deal of difficulty, to the crushing of their young, which yet escape and grow up. Let good women learn, sperare à Deo faciles & felices partus, to trust in God for a happy delivery, though it go hard with them, sometimes to the making of some Medea say, Millies in acie mori mallem quam semel parere, I had rather, a thousand times, die in battel, than bring forth one childe. Eurip.

They cast out their sorrows] Tormina, their throws, and therewith their young, by the benefit of the herbs Arus and Seselis, which they feed upon, for the better bringing away of their gleanings as they call the involucrum, that wrappeth the young in the matrix. The vulgar hath it, They utter roarings; they cast forth cryes which are as terrible as the roarings of Lionesses. Aristot. hist. anim. lib. 9 cap. 5. Plin. lib. 8. c. 31. Statò partus tempore valva dehiscunt quæ à partu mox occludantur: id quod fieri videmus, inquit Galenus, sed quomodo fiat, admirari tantum possumus. Avicenna vocat opus supra mirabilia omnia, mirabile. Sed miracula assiduitate vilescunt. If a man should be born but once in an hundred years, all the world would stand amazed at such a Miracle.

Verse 4. Their young ones are in good liking] Or, They recover; revalescunt, as Isai. 58. 16. notwithstanding the hardnesse of their birth, by reason of their dams exceeding dry temperature, Psal. 42. 1. As the Hinde brayeth after the Water-brooks, as being naturally hot, and dry when in pain especially; and this the young are sensible of in their coming into the world, which yet they soon recover and grow slick and fat. Let God be trusted for the welfare of our children, though weak, and wearish when new-born, and hard put to't in the birth. ἠ ἴλαφος. Sept.

They grow up with Corn] Or, In the Field, after that they have been nourished a while with their dams-milk, they forrage for themselves, being calved about Autumne, as Aristotle noteth, that is in Seed-time: others say, about Harvest, when corn is in the field, and Gods great barn-door open, as the proverb is. This is here brought as an Argument of the divine providence.

They go forth, and return not unto them] That is, To their dams, as finding food enough abroad. Thus other creatures, so soon as born almost, can shift for themselves, only poor shift-lesse man is long ere he can do any thing, or comes to any proof, to be able to provide for himself.

Verse 5. Who hath sent out the wild-Asse free?] פרא Phere, ferus animal, (so Tremellius rendreth it) the wild Creature. And it is not unlikely that the Latine word Fera, comes from this Hebrew word for a wild-Asse, which is a most untameable, & untractable creature. Every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, & hath been tamed of mankind, Jam. 3. 7. We read of Augustus Cæsar, that he had a tame Tiger, but who ever heard of a wild-Asse tamed? Ed quòd onager feritate antecellit. Piscat.

Africa

Africa is said to have whole heards of them: and it is reported, that when they see a man, they stand stock still, and kick with their hinder feet, braying aloud. And when the Hunter comes so near them, that he could touch them almost, they snuff up the wind, kick up their heels, and run quite away: so nimble they are, that they can hardly be taken, much lesse tamed? To the Colt of this wild Creature, is a natural man compared by Zophar, chap. 11. 12. for his extreme rudenesse and unrulinesse: The Prophet Jeremy hath the like of the Idolaters of his time, chap. 2. 24. who were lawlesse and lewd Lôsels, obstinate, and refractary; such as multò facilius fregeris quàm flexeris, will sooner break than bend: with these froward God will wrestle, Psal. 18. 26. with these Antipodes God will walk contrary, Levit. 26. 41. and be as crosse as they are, for the hearts of them. His Law hath four teeth to taw and tame these masterlesse Monsters; viz. 1. Irritation, Rom. 7. 7. 2. Induration, Isai. 6. 10. 3. Obstignation, Gen. 4. 7. 4. Execration, Deut. 28. 16, 17, &c. Obeyed he will be of them, either actively or passively: and sanctified he will be, either by them, or upon them, Levit. 10. 3. Wild Asses are free from men: but so are not wild Ismaelites from God. Who hath ever loosed the bands of the wild Asse? but God will hamper his rebels, and certainly subdue them; all his foes shall become his foot-stoole. Be instructed therefore, O Jerusalem, Jer. 6. 8. Be not as Horse and Mule that have no understanding, &c. for many sorrows shall be to such wicked, Psal. 32. 9, 10. and it is too hard for them to kick against the pricks, Acts, 9. 5. to push back upon the goad, as untamed Heifers use to do; but to their further sorrow, and sufferance.

Verse 6. Whose house I have made the wilderness] That of Arabia especially near unto Job, where were whole droves of these wild Asses. There are a sort of them also in Plara, one of the Ilands of the Egean sea. Hermites and Anchorites seem to affect the same liberty: but where did God ever grant it them? Man is Ζῶον πολιτικὸν saith Aristotle, Natures good-fellow, as One englisheth him: and no sooner had the Philippians received the Gospel, but they were in fellowship to a day, Phil. 1. 5. The Communion of Saints is as well a point of Christian practise, as an Article of Christian belief: and they have much to answer for, who fly up themselves, and forsake the assembling of our selves together, as the manner of some is, Heb. 10. these are in the ready way to utter Apostacy, Ibid. He is not like to walk long, who affecteth to walk alone. Two are better than one; and why, see Eccles. 4. 9, 11, 12. with the Notes.

And the barren land his dwelling] Heb. The salt place, that is, barren as if it had been sowed with salt, Judg. 9. 45. Psal. 107. 33, 34. Salt is taken in Scripture to be both a cause and signe of barrennesse, Deut. 20. 23. Zeph. 2. 9. though amongst us there are some kind of soyles, they say, that are manured with salt, and thereby made fruitful: but in those hot and dry Countries it was otherwise. In these barren places, God provideth for the wild-Asse: and although he hath there but mean food, yet he is lusty and nimble, and saveth himself both from the Hunter, and from the ravage of other fierce and savage creatures, by his strength and swiftnesse. Xenophon telleth us, That Cyrus passing through the wilderneſse of Arabia, with his Horse-men, there were many of these wild-Asses: who, being stirred, ran so swiftly away, that some horse-men following could not come neer them; then standing still: but when the horse-men approached, they fell again a running as before, thus deluding them. Hac igitur bestia non mediocre mirabilis Dei potentiæ vestigium est, saith Brentius. In this beast therefore there is much of Gods great power and providence to be seen. And from hence also we may gather, saith another Interpreter, that a little is enough to sustain men in the wilderneſse of this world: As the Children of Israel also were here sustained, having nothing to eate but what God sent them down from heaven from day to day, forty years together. Nature is content with a little, grace with lesse. Cropad. lib. 3.

Verse 7. He scorneth the multitude of the City] Heb. He laugheth. Insignis Metaphora. He would scorn to be set to work, as the tame Asse is. Asinum onerarium & non curat, quia asinus est, saith Bernard, We load the Asse, and he taketh it well aworth, because he is an Asse. But the wild-Asse will not take so: he is not a beast born to bear burdens as the other. He is not tardum & pigrum animal: as the other, a dull and slow creature: for which cause also, saith Bellarmine, God would none of him, Exod. 13. 13. & 34. 20. Christ so far hateth dulneſſe, that he bad Judas the traytour, what he did, do quickly. The wild-Asse is very swift, and fed by Gods providence in the wilderneſſe; scorning the multitude, or the hurry-noise of the City.

Neither regardeth he the crying of the driver] Heb. Of the Exactour, who rateth and rageth against the tame Asse with words and blowes, to hasten him to his work, and to bring him this way, and that way. Oppressive Princes do the like to their poor subjects, (the King of France is called, Rex asinorum) which somtimes maketh them turn wild, and shake off subjection; as the Jewes did that to the Romans, chu-

But what a mad conceit was that of Martin Stembach, a Dutch Sectary, Anno 1566. who would needs correct the Lords Prayer, Stultam & inefficacem asserens orationem in qua interjectione ô uteremur: non secus enim hac exclamandi formulâ divinam gra-

Verse 8. The range of the mountains is his pasture] There he keeps, probably, for fear of Lyons, and other fierce creatures: and there he finds food and forrage, such as doth not only appease his hunger, but excite his appetite; as if he were in some fat pasture.

And he searcheth out every green thing] Speeding better in his search than those Asses of Hetruria, which feeding upon green Hemlock, are thereby laid for dead for three dayes; till half inleded by the Countrey men, who take them for dead, they start up, and with an horrible noise run away in that pickle.

Naricornia. Verse 9. Will the Unicorn be willing to serve thee?] The Rhinoceros, saith the Vulgar: but that's another kind of beast, so called from the growing of his horn from his nose. This is the Monoceros or Unicorn, which cannot be taken alive (interimi potest, capi non potest) as the Rhinoceros may. A very fierce and strong creature it is; and now adayes very rare, but anciently more common: He hath one horn only (and not many, as R. Levi by a mistake would infer from Deut. 33. 17.) that groweth in the middle of his fore-head; and that he lifted up on high: whence also he hath his name in the Hebrew. He is described in Scripture, 1. By this high
Lib. 8. cap. 21. lifting up of his horn, Psal. 92. 10. 2. By his strength, Numb. 23. 22. 3. From his untameable fierceneſſe, here. Pliny calleth him a Liecrn. Vertomannus saith he saw two of them. Scaliger saith he had seen the horn of an Unicorn, a special Anti-Keckerm. dote against Poyson. But some deny that there is any such creature: because if he had an horn so placed, and of such a length as is affirmed, he could not graze: and Æl. lib. besides it appeareth not certainly, that ever any man saw such a creature. Ælian saith that there are a sort of wild-Asses in India of the bigneſſe of an horse, that have one horn in the middest of their foreheads in length a cubit and an half: and so sharp, that therewith he pierceth through the hardest things. Some conceive that by the beast here mentioned is meant the wild-Bull, here opposed to the tame Ox, and elsewhere joyned to Oxen, Deut. 33. 17. Isai. 34. 6. Whatever it is, it will not be brought to do man service; though fitted by stature and strength to do much; but lives at liberty, and is provided for by God.

Or abide by the crib] Heb. Ly all night there as Oxen do, ready for service next morning? I trow not.

Verse 10. Canst thou bind the Unicorn, &c?] To keep him in order, and to hold him hard to his work, that he may lay the furrows even? Canst thou tether or geere him like a horse? Or will he be brought to drive or lead a Plow or Harrow? No such matter. Before the Fall, all Creatures would gladly have served man.
August. Sed rebellis factus est, quia homo numini, creatura homini.

Verse 11. Wilt thou trust him because his strength is great?] Of the Unicorns strength Balaam speaketh, Numb. 23 22. the Hebrew word signifieth such lustineſs, courage, & prowess, as whereby one endureth labor without wearineſs or fainting. Such strength is required in plowmen, whose work is never at an end: and hard fallow must have a strong team. But the Unicorn will never fadge, nor frame to such an employment. Free God hath made him: and rather than part with his freedom, he will part with his life. Let men learn to stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made them free, (Gal. 5. 1.) and not be again entangled (as Oxen tyed to the yoke) with the yoke of spiritual bondage, worse than the Egyptian servitude.

Verse

Verſe 12. Wilt thou believe him that he will bring home thy ſeed?] That is, the crop that comes of thy ſeed; as in the former verſe, thy labour, that is the fruit of thy labour, as Pſal. 128. 2. There is no truſting to this wild and fierce creature to do any ſuch thing. Vertoman ſaith, that he ſaw two Unicorns, and that they were not of ſo fierce a nature, but that they might be brought to ſomewhat. But then they were not true Unicorns, ſay we: ſuch as God here deſcribeth.

And gather it into thy barn?] No truſting to the Unicorns gentleneſſe for any ſuch matter, unleſſe we deſire to be deceived.

Verſe 13. Gaveſt thou the goodly wings unto the Peacock?] Alam exultandam, the wings and tail to the Peacock, wherein he ſo prideth himſelf and taketh ſuch pleaſure, being all in changeable colours, ſo are ſome great promiſers; (the Peacock here hath his name from his loud and ſhrill voice) as often changed as moved. A beautiful bird it is, and preciouſly clothed by God. They were wont to ſay here, That Peacocks, Hops, and Hereſie, came firſt into England in one and the ſame ſhip. They ſay, he moſt of all ſpreads his fair tail, when he is moſt beheld by men, and praiſed. His feathers are good for little elſe but only to pleaſe children. But that he pulleth down his fair plumes, and ſetteth up his harſh Note, when he looketh down upon his ill-favoured feet, is an old ſaid ſaw; let them believe it that liſt. Plin. l. 10. c. 20.

Or wings and feathers unto the Oſtrich?] And ſo by a Synecdoche, to all other fowles of the air: in the admirable variety of whoſe colours, tunes, and taſtes, 1 Cor. 15. 39. much of Gods power, and wiſdom, yea, of his goodneſſe alſo may be ſeen: and therefore the loſſe of theſe creatures (good for food, for phyſick, and for delight, as the companions of our lives) is threatned as a judgement, Jer. 4. 25. & 9. 10. Some for the Oſtrich render the Stork, and ſome a Night-bird of an ill note: But the following deſcription agreeth beſt with the Buſtard or Oſtrick, which is between a beaſt and a fowle; having ſo thin feathers, and ſo heavie a body, that he cannot flye; but only liſteth up his wings, and runneth very ſwiftly. Elian ſaith that he is almoſt as big as a Camel, being therefore called Struthio-camelus. Pliny ſaith that he is higher than an horſe-man on horſe-back, and can out-run him: but is ſo fooliſh, that being purſued, if he can hide his head onely in ſome hole, or thicket, and can ſee no body, he thinks himſelf ſafe, and that no body ſeeth him; though his great bulk be all in ſight. Other effects of his folly, follow in the next words. Cum interim totus corporis moles promineat.

Verſe 14. Which leaveth her egges in the earth] Some ſay that ſhe layeth 86. eggs, and having a faculty of diſcerning which of them will prove Oſtriches, and which will come to nothing; ſhe leaveth ſome of them upon the ſand, and upon other ſome ſitteth, and hatcheth them. But this appeareth to be a fiction, becauſe another and a better reaſon of her leaving her eggs is here alleaged: and the power and providence of God giving them life by the heat of the Sun, evidenced, and evinced.

And warmeth them in the duſt] Julius Scaliger reporteth the like of a certain creſted bird of the bigneſſe of an hen, found in Catigan an Iland in the ſea Sur; which ſitteth not upon her eggs, but buſieth them two foot deep in the ſand: whence they are hatch't by the Sun and hot ſands: and this, ſay ſome, in very hot Countries is not unuſual.

Verſe 15. And forgetteth that the foot may cruſh them, or, that the wild beaſt may break them] This brutiſh and blockiſh bird forgetteth, that is, ſhe never conſidereth what may befal her eggs, left ſo careleſſly. Other fowle ſet their Neſts aloft and out of harms-way: not ſo this fooliſh and careleſſe creature, who hath neither affection to preſerve them, nor fear to loſe them.

Verſe 16. She is hardned againſt her young ones, as though they were not hers] Heb. Her ſons: So are thoſe peremptores potius quam parentes, as Bernard calleth them, rather Parricides than Parents; who look not to the precious ſouls of their poor children; who labour not to mend that by education, which they have marred by propagation. Theſe are worſe than thoſe daughters of Jeruſalem, who ſlain almoſt with grief and hunger, became cruel to their ſucklings, like the Oſtriches of the wilderneſſe, Lam. 4. 3. What a cruel Mother was Medea? and the Mother of King Edward the Martyr, whom ſhe baſely murthered: And when his brother Egelred who ſucceeded him in the Kingdome) being then but ten yeers old, mourned thereat; his mother was ſo enraged, that taking Wax candles, which were readieſt at hand, ſhe therewith ſcourged him ſo ſore, that he could never after endure Wax candles to be burnt before him? But this cruelty was nothing to that of ſoul-murder, whereof many parents by their negligence at leaſt, are deeply guilty: they bring forth children to that old Man-ſlayer, and ſo their labour (in bearing and breeding children) is in vain, and worſe, without fear, for they will not be better adviſed nor affected.

Mr. Clark Martyrol. fol. 31

Verſe 17. Becauſe God hath deprived her of wiſdom.] That is of ſuch fore-caſt to provide for her young ones by a natural inſtinct, as other fowles and beaſts have. Gods mercy to men appeareth, 1. in giving us wiſdome beyond them, Job 35.11. 2. In giving us power over them, Pſal. 8. And 3. In learning us ſo much by them in thoſe many Scripture-compariſons, Prov. 7.23. and 26.2. and 27.8. Matth. 8.26 that's a ſweet place, Iſai. 31.5. As birds flying, (ſcil. to ſave their young) ſo will the Lord defend Jeruſalem; defending alſo, he will deliver it; and paſſing over, he will preſerve it. The Fowles of the Aire are, and may be unto us examples and Monitours of many vertues to be embraced, and vices to be eſchued. In the Oſtrich, for inſtance, we may ſee that ſtrength and bigneſſe of body is not alwayes accompanyed with wiſdom and underſtanding: that it is God who either giveth or denyeth wiſdome to his Creatures; that natural affection is of him; that he gives not all things to one man, but diverſly diſtributeth his gifts: The Oſtrich hath wings, but not to flye with, &c.

Verſe 18. What time ſhe lifteth up her ſelf on high, &c.] That is, when ſhe runneth away from the hunter (which ſhe doth with ſingular ſwiftneſs) ſhe lifteth up her ſelf on high, not from the earth, as other birds (for that ſhe cannot do) but on the earth, with wings ſtretcht out like ſailes, and her whole body bolt upright, ſcarce touching the earth at all with her feet, but quickning her own pace with ſharp ſpurs, which they ſay ſhe hath in the pinnion of each wing, ſo pricking her ſelf on, that ſhe may run the faſter, to teach us what we ſhould do in the race of Religion, and when purſued by Satan, how to haſten to Chriſt.

She ſcorneth the horſe and his rider] That is, ſhe eaſily out-runs them, being as ſwift as a bird that flyeth. They ſay, the Arabians are wont to try their horſes ſwiftneſs by trying to overtake them.

Verſe 19. Haſt thou given the horſe ſtrength?] Having mentioned the horſe, he comes next to ſhew his nature: and here we have a moſt elegant deſcription of a generous horſe, ſuch as Dubartas maketh Cain to manage, and as the Greeks call, ὁπλομαχίαν, Fremebundum.

In this Creature therefore we have a clear inſtance of the wonderful Power and Wiſdome of God. If the hoaſe be ſo ſtrong and warlike, what is the Almighty, that man of war, Exod. 15.3. and Victor in Battle, as the Chaldee there calleth him? This is one way whereby we may conceive of God; ſcil. per viam eminentiæ, for if there be ſuch and ſuch excellence in the Creature, what is there in the Creator, ſith all that is in us is but a ſpark of his flame, a drop of his Ocean? How then wilt thou, O Job, dare to contend with him, who art not able to ſtand before this Creature of his? Wonderful things are reported concerning Bucephalus, and the horſe of Julius Cæſar, of Nicomedes King of Bithynia, of the Sibarites War-horſes, Qui ad ſymphoniæ cantum ſaltatione quadam movebantur. The Perſians dedicated an horſe to the Sun, ſo did the Idolatrous Iſraelites, 2 Kings 23.11. as the ſwifteſt Creature to the ſwifteſt God. Very ſerviceable he is for drawing and carrying, but eſpecially in battle, whereof only here, De equis militaribus & cataphractis; of War-horſes, the uſe whereof appeareth to be very ancient, even in Jobs dayes. Θεὸς ἐκ ἔστ φίλιππος. Plut. in Numa.

Haſt thou cloathed his neck with thunder?] That is, with neighing and ſnorting, anſwerable to his ſtrength, and which ſoundeth terribly from within his neck, till his very eyes ſparkle, as if he did both thunder and lighten. The Apoſtles, and other Miniſters of God are called Chriſts white horſes, Rev. 6. 1, 2. upon which he rideth about the world conquering and to conquer: Horſes for their courage and conſtancy, and white for their purity of Doctrine, Diſcipline and Converſation: They thunder in their Doctrine, and lighten in their lives (as Nazianzen, ſaith Baſil, did) to the ſubduing of ſouls to the obedience of faith.

Verſe 20. Canſt thou make him afraid as a Graſhopper?] Which ſoon flinches and flyeth with the leaſt noiſe. But the horſe is more like that formidable Army of Locuſts deſcribed, Joel 2. that bare down all before them, and ſhook all places where ever they came.

The glory of his noſtrils is terrible] Heb. Terrors: His ſnorting and ſneezing ſtrikes terror into people. The more wonderful is Gods goodneſſe in ſubduing to weak man ſo luſty a creature, to be ridden and ruled at his pleaſure. He trains him to the great ſaddle, and teacheth him to obey his hand and ſpur, to bound in the aire, to obſerve his meaſures, to ſhew that docility, dexterity and vigour which none but God hath given him, and be every way ſo ſerviceable and uſeful both in War and Peace. Joannes Bodin hath obſerved, That whereas Lions, Wolves, and other ravenous creatures have a gall and choler, whereby they are eaſily ſtirred up to anger and revenge: not ſo horſes, aſſes, camels, elephants, and other creatures made for mans help; theſe have neither gall nor hornes, wherein appeareth ſumma Opificis ſapientia, the great wiſdome and goodneſſe of the Creator. *Theat. Such is the impatiency of his ſpirit, that he champs his bit, and ſtamps with his feet, he pricks up his eares, and growes white with foame, and can hardly be held in till the enemy come, but would fain be in the battle, whither when he comes, he runs upon the Pikes, and undauntedly caſts himſelf and his rider among the enemies ſquadrons: Quod ſummè mirum eſt, ſaith Mercer, which is a wonderful thing indeed: and it is no leſs wonderfully ſet forth by a moſt lively and lightſome hypotypoſis, giving us to ſee, as it were, the horſes ruſhing into the battle, and to hear him ſnoaring, and ſnorting with diſdain and deſpight, bringing every where horror and diſorder. Quadrupedante putrem ſonitu quatit ungula Campum. Virg.

Verſe 22. He mocketh at fear &c.] Heb. He laugheth, by an elegant Proſopopœia, ſuch as this Book is full of. Non vanos horret ſtrepitus. He feareth no colours when once ingaged in fight, but counts that a ſport and play whereof others are afraid.

Verſe 26. Doth the Hawk flye by thy wiſdom?] Or, Doth the hawk plumeſcere get her feathers by thy wiſdome? The word cometh from a root which ſignifieth, ſtrong, becauſe the ſtrength of fowles is in their wings, their delight in high flying. Hath the Hawk her wings from thee? and doth ſhe recruit and uſe them, artificio & auſpicio tuo, by thy Art or Induſtry? Tame them indeed men may, and bring them to hand, as Falconers do, for pleaſure more then for profit; but neither can they give them their wings, nor repair them when broken.

Mat. 24.

And make her neſt on high] Not in plaines, but on lofty tops, and inacceſſible Rocks, for the ſafety of her young ones. Of the nature of Eagles, read Ariſtotle, De Nat. Animal. lib. 9. cap. 32. and Pliny, lib. 3. cap. 10. They tell us, That there is an enmity between the Eagle and the Serpent; and becauſe the Serpent ſeeketh to deſtroy the young Eagles, ſhe ſetteth her neſt on high to ſafeguard them. And if any man ſeek to rob her neſt, ſhe doubteth not to aſſault him with her wings and talons. Formidable ſhe is to all birds ſave only the Hawk, who is able to deal with her if he can but avoid the firſt ſhock.

Verſe 28. She dwelleth and abideth upon the rock, &c.] Which are counterſcarſed and encompaſſed with Precipices; there ſhe makes her neſt in the clefts and crags. The reaſon whereof ſee in the Note on the Verſe afore-going.

Upon the crags of the Rocks] She neſteth not upon the ſand as the Oſtrich doth, ver. 14. And in this ſo great difference of birds and other creatures, is ſeen the wonderful Power and Providence of God.

Verſe 29. From thence ſhe ſeeketh the prey] Beſides fowles, (whereof ſhee is called the Queene) ſhe preyeth upon Hares, Hinds, Foxes, and ſuch other beaſts, as ſhe can maſter. Hence that complaint of the Hare,

In me omnis terreque mariſque avíumque ruina eſt. Martial.

And her eyes behold afar off] To a very great diſtance. She is ſharp-ſighted, and firſt ſees her prey, and then ſeeks it. She is alſo ſo ſtrong ſighted, that ſhe can look intently into the body of the Sun, without being dazeled; and by that property makes proof of her young ones whether they be right or not. Thoſe that cannot ſo behold the Sun, ſhe drives out of the neſt as ſpurious. Thoſe that can, ſhe owneth, and beareth abroad with her upon her wings (as Munſter noteth out of R. Solomon) that none can ſhoot them, but through her body: and thereto Moſes alludeth Exod. 19.4. Schol. in Deut. 32.11.

Verſe 30. Her young ones alſo ſuck up blood] Heb. They glut-glut blood; the Hebrew word, jegnalegna dam, ſeemes to be made from the ſound in ſucking. The young Eagles, not yet able to tear the prey brought unto them by the old one with their talons, ſuck the blood with their Beak, and ſo are fleſht in blood betimes.

And where the ſlain are, there is ſhe] This is true of all the kinds of Eagles, but eſpecially of the Vulturine Eagle, which is of a very ſharp ſmell as well as ſight, and by a ſtrange ſagacity of nature, reſorteth with her young to places of ſlaughter and bloodſhed; ſhe followeth Armies, and feedeth on carcaſſes, which they can ſmell, ſay ſome Naturaliſts, before the battle be fought. And can this be of any one but the Lord. Our Saviour alludeth to this Text, Mat. 24.28. Where the carcaſſe is, there will the Eagles be alſo. See my Note on that place.

CHAP. XL.

Verſe 1. Moreover the Lord anſwered Job and ſaid]

HIC veriſimile eſt aliquantiſper Deum tacuiſſe, ſaith Mercer. Here it is likely that God held his peace a while, and ſeeing that Job replyed not, he added the following words, the more fully to convince and affect him. There is ſomewhat to do to reduce a ſinner from the error of his way, yea, though he be in part regenerate, the fleſh will play its part againſt the Spirit. This muſt be conſidered, and all gentleneſs uſed to thoſe that offend of infirmity, after Gods example here.

Verſe 2. Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty inſtruct him?] Or, Is it wiſdom to contend with the Almighty? No, but the greateſt folly and ſottiſhneſſe. Job might think otherwiſe, ſo long as he compared himſelf with others; but being once ſet by God in his ſuperexcellencies conſidered, he ſhall ſee his owne nothingneſſe, and ſit down in ſilence and patience, though ſeverely tryed, and ſharply afflicted. An diſputare cum Omnipotente eſt eruditio?

He that reproveth God, let him anſwer it] Anſwer it if he can, or elſe yeeld the cauſe. Praſtat herbam dare quàm turpiter pugnare. But if Job have yet further a mind to queſtion and quarrel God in any his wayes and works, let it be heard what anſwer he can returne to what hath been already ſpoken.

Verſe 3. Then Job anſwered the Lord, and ſaid] 'Twas time for him, if ever, to ſtoop to the Moſt High, ſo far condeſcending to his meanneſſe, and to anſwer his expectation by acknowledging a fault, and promiſing amendment. Lo this is the guiſe of a godly perſon: He may be out, but he will not uſually be obſtinate. An humble man will never be an Heretick; convince him once, and he will yeeld: Not ſo the obſtinate and uncounſellable perſon, he runs away with conviction, as the unruly horſe doth with the bit between his teeth: and his wit will better ſerve him to devile a thouſand ſhifts to elude the truth, than his pride will ſuffer him once to yield to it, and acknowledge his errour.

Verſe 4. Behold I am vile] Light and little worth: and therefore deſerve to be ſlighted and laid by, as a broken veſſel. The humble man vilifies, yea, nullifies himſelf before God, as Abraham, Gen. 18. 27. as Agur, Prov. 30. 2. as Paul, Epheſ. 3. 8. as that Martyr who cryed out, Gehenna ſum Domine, Lord, thou art heaven, but I am hell, &c. Tantillitas noſtra, ſaith Ignatius of himſelf and his colleagues. Behold, I am an abject, ſaith Job here, contemptible, and inconſiderable. This was well, but not all: an excellent confeſſion, but not full enough: his meanneſſe he acknowledgeth, and that he was no fit match for God: but not his ſinfulneſſe, with deſire of pardon, and deprecation of puniſhment: God therefore gives him not over ſo, but ſets upon him a ſecond time, verſ. 6. and brings him to it, chap. 42. 1. There muſt be ſome proportion betwixt a mans ſin, and his repentance, Ezra. 9. and this, God will bring all his Jobs to, ere he leave them.

What ſhall I anſwer thee?] I am ſilenced, and ſet down; I ſee there is no reaſoning againſt thee. I acknowledge thy greatneſſe ſo plainly and plentifully demonſtrated in the fore-going diſcourſe: and am well pleaſed that thou ſhouldeſt be juſtified when thou ſpeakeſt, and over-come when thou judgeſt, Pſal. 51. 4. Rom. 3. 4.

I will lay my hand upon my mouth] I that have ſpoken more freely and boldly then I ought, Et ore patulo multa ſine judicio effutivi; and have opened my mouth more wide then was meet: will henceforth be better adviſed, and keep my mouth with a bridle, or muzzle, as Pſal. 39. 1. See the Note on chap. 21. verſ. 5.

Verſe 5. Once have I ſpoken, but I will not anſwer] 'Tis enough of that Once: The Saints running out, and meeting with a bargain of ſin, come back by weeping-croſſe, and cry, What have I to do any more with wickedneſſe, Hoſ. 14. 8? Judah knew his daughter Tamar no more, Gen. 38. 26. If I have done iniquity, I will do no more, chap. 34. 31, 32. That was Elihu's counſel; and now it is Jobs practiſe.

Yea, Twice] That is, Often: ſo eager was I ſet upon a diſpute. This was an Aggravation of Jobs ſin, the committing of it again and again. Numbers added to numbers are firſt ten times more; then, an hundred; then, a thouſand, &c. This hath been thy manner from thy youth, Jeremiah, 22. 21. that was an ill buſineſſe.

But I will proceed no further] ſc. In this controverſie. I will not come into the liſts to contend with thee. I ſee there is no ſafety in ſuch a conteſt. In many things we offend all, ſaith St. James: and he is a perfect man who ſinneth not with his tongue. But as he who hath drunk poyſon, maketh haſte to caſt it up again, ere it get to the vitals: ſo ſhould we deal by our daily miſdoings. It is not falling into the water that drowns a man, but lying long under it. Bewaile thy ſin, and haſten to get out of it.

Verſe 6. Then anſwered the Lord unto Job out of a Whirl-wind] As before, chap. 38. 1. notwithſtanding Jobs ſubmiſſion. See the reaſon on verſ. 4. God took his out-burſts againſt him ſo very ill, that he is not eaſily pacified; but the better to abaſe Job, and quite to break the neck of his pride, he anſwereth him again angerly, not by a ſoft and ſtill voice, as he dealt by Eliah, but out of the whirl-wind, though with ſome abatement of terrour, as Rainbau conceiveth from the leaving out here the notificative Article, ſet before Segnarah the whirl-wind in the 38 chapter. Peter was not over-forward to comfort thoſe that were prickt at heart with ſenſe of ſin, and fear of wrath; but preſſeth them yet further to repent, Act. 2. 38. Men are apt to ſlight and ſlubber over the work, doing it to the halves; and muſt therefore be held hard to it, leſt it ſhould not be done to purpoſe.

Verſe 7. Gird up thy loynes now like a man] Reſume new ſtrength, and prepare your ſelf for a ſecond encounter: for I have not yet done with you. If therefore you think your ſelf able to ſtand in contention with me, ſhew your valour. See the Note on chap. 38. 3.

Verſe 8. Wilt thou alſo diſannul my judgment?] Doſt thou think to ruin my juſtice, ſtice, to eſtabliſh thine own innocency? and wilt thou needs be a ſuperiour judge over me? Wilt thou not revoke thy former expoſtulations and complaints againſt me, and with open mouth give me my due glory? Here God ſheweth his diſſatisfaction with Jobs former confeſſion.

Wilt thou condemne me, that thou maieſt be righteous?] Job had bolted out ſome words that either tended to this purpoſe, or ſeemed ſo to do to the juſt grief & offence of his friends. For this therefore he muſt be better humbled, and henceforth learn to abſtain not only from things ſimply evil, but ſeemingly ſo; quicquid fuerit malè coloratum, (as Bernard hath it) whatſoever looks but ill-favouredly.

Verſe 9. Haſt thou an arm like God?] That thou ſhouldeſt wreſtle a fall with him, and hope to over-match him? Thou haſt a mighty arm, ſaith David, ſtrong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand, Pſal. 89. 13. It ſpans the heavens, and holds the earth in the hollow of it. The weight of it broke the Angels backs: and the terrour of it may be ſeen in all thoſe writs of execution recorded in the Scriptures. Oh its a fearful thing, ſaith the Apoſtle, to fall into the (puniſhing) hands of the living God, Heb. 10.

Or canſt thou thunder with a voice like him?] Of Pericles the Oratour it is ſaid, that when he declaimed, Intonabat, fulgurabat, totam Græciam commiſcebat, &c. Cicero. he thundered, he lightned, he mingled all Greece together. And Livy, ſpeaking of a certain Roman Commander, ſaith, Hæc cum intonuiſſet iracundus, &c. Theſe things when he had thundered out angerly, and with a courage, the people departed of their own accord. Alexander the Great, being once vexed at his Souldiers for mutining and tumultuating, thunder-ſtruck them with theſe words, Faceſſite hinc ocyùs, neminem teneo; liberate oculos meos ingratiſſimi milites; Get you quickly out of my preſence, and be packing hence, ye ungrateful Souldiers. And Severus the Emperour in like ſort dealt with his unruly Army, Diſcedite Quirites, ſaid he, et incertum an Quirites; Theſe were terrible hard words, and very reſolutely uttered: But what's any, or all of this to the voice of Gods thunder, whereof ſee before? Knoweſt thou not, O Job, that thine arm is an arm of fleſh? and thy voice ſo ſmall and low, that a Fly would not be frighted at it?

Verſe 10. Deck thy ſelf now with Majeſty and Excellency] Or, With magnificence, and ſublimity, &c. i. e. Deum age, ſhew thy ſelf as God: for he thus decks himſelf, Pſal. 93. 1. & 96. 6. & 104. 1, 2. Job 29. 14.

And array thy ſelf with glory and beauty] That thou maieſt appear, Os humeroſque Deo ſimilis, as Herod afterwards in his cloth of ſilver, which being beaten upon by the Sun-beams (ſaith Joſephus) dazeled the peoples eyes, and drew from them that fond acclamation, It is the voice of a God, Act. 12. 22.

Verſe 11. Caſt abroad the rage of thy wrath] In this glorious equipage; make thy juſt indignation felt by all the rebels of the world. Nemo te impunè laceſſet.

And behold every one that is proud] Look upon him oculo minaci, with a flaming eye: look through him, let him ſee thy diſpleaſure. Upon ſome God looketh, to convert them, as Chriſt did upon Peter, Luk. 22. 61. Upon others, to confound them, ——Ὑχαι θεὸς ὑπέρτερον ὄμμα.

And abaſe him] Abate his pride, and abaſe his pomp, and greatneſſe: this is God-like, Pſal. 147. 6. Æſop being asked by Chilo (one of the ſeven wiſe-men of Greece) What God was doing? Anſwered, He abaſeth the proud, and exalteth the lowly-minded. Tamberlain, to manifeſt that he knew how to puniſh the haughty, made Bajazet the great Turk to be ſhackled, and ſhut up in an iron cage, and ſo carried up and down as he paſſed through Aſia, to be ſcorned and derided of his own people. And when one of his Favourites requeſted him to remit ſome part of his ſeverity againſt the perſon of ſo great a Prince: Tamberlain anſwered, That he did not uſe that rigour againſt him out of hatred to the man, but to manifeſt the juſt judgement of God againſt the arrogant folly of ſo proud a Tyrant. Turk. hiſt. f. 228

Verſe 12. Look on every one that is proud, and bring him low] This God doeth, Iſai. 2. 11, 12, 17. & 5. 15. The Babel-builders, Pharaoh, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Herod, Dioclefian, Attilas, and others for inſtances; Amurath the third

And tread down the wicked in their place] Heb. Under them; lay them as low as may be. God putteth away all the wicked of the earth as droſſe, he treads them, as vile things, under his feet, Pſal. 110. 1. till they bethink themſelves, and humble their ſouls at his feet for mercy: for then he will make the place of his feet glorious, as he promiſeth, Iſai. 60. 13. and as Exod. 24. 10. they ſaw under Gods feet as it were, a paved work of Sapphire ſtone; to ſhew that he had now changed their condition, the Bricks made in their bondage, into Sapphire. See Iſai. 54. 11.

Verſe 13. Hide them in the duſt together] Make a hand of them all at once, as God can do his enemies by raking them all into the grave; yea, turning into hell, whole Nations that forget God, a whole rabble of rebels that fight againſt heaven, he can ſoon lay them low enough, even in that ſlimy valley, where are many already like them, and more ſhall come after them, chap. 21. 31, 32. Now when God biddeth Job do all this, who was himſelf lying in the duſt, full of ſores and ſorrows, how could he but be greatly aſhamed, and affected with grief for his former follies?

And binde their faces in ſecret] As Hamans face was covered when the King had ſentenced him, Eſth. 7. 8. See the Note there: Or rather, as dead-mens faces uſe to be bound up and covered: for we like not to look on deaths face; Abraham was deſirous to bury his dead out of his ſight, Gen. 23. 4. though ſhe had once been the deſire of his eyes, Ezek. 24. 16. Lazarus came out of his grave with his face bound about with a napkin, Joh. 11. 44. See the like done to our Saviour, Joh. 20. 6, 7. though there was as little need to have done it, as was of thoſe ſweet ſpices brought by the good women to anoint his body, which could not ſee corruption, Mark 16. 1.

Verſe 14. Then will I alſo confeſſe unto thee, &c.] Or, I will give praiſe unto thee, as thou by right ſhouldeſt do to me: not for my goodneſſe only, but for my greatneſſe and majeſty alſo, in deſtroying the wicked. See David doing it, Pſal. 18. 27. and Moſes, Exod. 15. 1. and the whole quire of heaven, Revel. 19. 1, 2.

And that thine own right hand can ſave thee] That thou art ſelf-ſufficient, and Et ego quoque prædicabo te herœa. Tig. my compere; ſtrong enough to maintain thine own cauſe, and that thou haſt ſome ſhew of reaſon to withſtand me. This is that which we all naturally (but fooliſhly) fancy, viz. that we are petty-gods within our ſelves: we would be abſolute and independent; when in truth all that we have is derivative; the Churches beauty is borrowed, Ezek. 16. and we may ſay of all that we are, as he did of his hatchet, Alas Maſter, I borrowed it, 2 King. 6. 5.

Vocatur Bellua per Antonomaſiam, & θὴς Græc. Verſe 15. Behold now Behemoth which I made with thee] i. e. The Elephant called Behemoth; that is Beaſts in the plural, for his hugeneſſe: as if he were made up of many beaſts. So David, aggravating his own brutiſhneſſe, ſaith, So fooliſh was I and ignorant: I was as a beaſt (Heb. Behemoth, beaſts in the plural) before thee, Pſal. 73. 22. that is, as a great beaſt: his ſin ſwelled in his eyes, as a toad; he befools and be-beaſts himſelf, as reaſon required: for nothing is more irrational, than irreligion.

Which I made with thee] Thy fellow-creature, made to ſerve thee. He is in the Chaldee called, בהמות Pil; that is, Wonderful: becauſe the wonders of Gods glory do ſo marvellouſly appear in him. Made he was the ſame day with man, and hath a kind of familiarity and love to him, if brought up with him, doing him great good ſervice in Peace and War, and may be taught to adore Kings.

Lyra. He eateth graſſe like an Ox] He is not ravenous, nor carnivorous; neither eateth he daily the graſſe upon a thouſand hills, as the Hebrews fooliſhly fable, and that he is to be killed at the reſurrection to feaſt the Saints, as being a creature of a monſtrous bigneſſe. As the Ox licketh up graſſe, Numb. 22. 4. ſo doth the Elephant, yet not with his tongue, (which for so great a Beast is but little, neither read we here any thing at all of his voice, (to teach great men, saith One, not to speak bigge swolne words) but with his Trunk or great Snout, called his tail, verse 17. (as Beza thinketh) because it beares the resemblance of a taile, and is of most marvellous and necessary use to him. With this he grazeth, and with this he over-throweth trees, and then feedeth upon them. But he doth not proudly abuse the mightinesse of his limbs to the hurt of other cattle. Yet he will not be wronged, and is of so great strength, that no one man dare assaile him. Arist. de Nat. Anim. l. 2. c. 5, 6.

Verse 16. Lo now his strength is in his loines] Wherein he is so strong, that he can beare a wooden Tower upon his back, and upon that two and thirty men standing to fight there-from. In India, where the hugest Elephants are, they ride upon the bigger, plow with the lesser, and carry great loads and burdens with both. For which and the like purposes, totus robustissimus est superne & infernè. Howbeit God hath chiefly placed his strength, not in any offensive part (his head hath no horns, nor his feet no clawes to do mischief with) but in his loynes, and about his belly. Junius.

And his force is in the navel of his belly] Which must needs be very hard undergirded, when so great weight is made fast to his back. Naturalists observe, That the softest part of the Elephant is his belly; and therefore the Rhinoceros, (his deadly enemy) setteth upon him there with his crooked horn whetted against a Rock, and overcometh him; yet is he stronger in his belly then other Creatures are in the back: and therfore his Navel is here called Navels in the plural. His skin is exceeding hard and rough, so that an Arrow can hardly pierce it. Yet Eleazer, Machab. 6 rushing into the enemies Army, gat under an Elephants belly, (upon which he thought King Antiochus rode) and killed him, being himself crushed to death with the weight of the Beast falling upon him.

Verse 17. He moveth his tail like a Cedar] The Elephant hath but a small and short taile, for his bulk; Beza therefore rendreth it his prominent part which is as the Cedar, and interpreteth it of his Proboscis, or large Snout, which truly (saith he) as being proper to the Elephant, and of very great use, might not in any wise, be pretermitted in this description. See vers. 15. Sic. & Deodat.

The sinewes of his stones are wrapt together] This is also another of the Elephants properties, whose testicles are hidden and stick to his belly, fastned there by certaine sinewes and ligaments, and do not hang as other beasts testicles do. As his genital members are but small, considering his bignesse, so his lust to the female is not great, never coupling with her but in secret, and when she is once filled, forbearing her company.

Verse 18. His bones are as strong pieces of brasse] Or, As Conduit Pipes of brasse, whereby may be understood his hollow bones, as by bars of Iron the solid ones and by both, (together with his Trunk, composed of gristles, and his teeth and tushes eight foot long some of them) we may conjecture of the bignesse of his whole body; the hugest of all earthly creatures, saith Pliny; nine cubits high, saith Elian of some. Now can Job look upon such a monstrous creature, or hear his noise or stand before him without great horror? and will he not submit to the great God and give him all his glory.

Verse 19. He is the chief of the wayes of God] i. e. The Master-piece among all the beasts (and perhaps first made) as Man is among all earthly creatures, being divini ingenii cura, as One calls him. Of all earthly irrational creatures, the Elephant is the hugest and strongest and of most understanding.

He that made him can make his sword to approach unto him] i. e. God alone can deal with him, and kill him, for no man dare undertake him unlesse it be by Art and cunning, and that in Jobs dayes, likely, was not yet known or practiced. And if God had not given an horn to the Rhinoceros, and poison to the Dragon (who are the Elephants most mortal enemies) there were no beasts to be found that could have the better of him. He is of himself long-lived, saith Aristotle, but God can, and doth cut him off at his pleasure; and so he will those masterlesse Monsters that persecute his people, though they may seem to be out of the reach of his rod. Some read the words thus, He that made him, made his sword to be near him; and interpret it of his Probosci, or Snout, wherewith, as with a sword, he fights, and does many feats. Curtius saith, That when Porus the Indian King, being wounded in battle, fell down armed to the ground, his Elephant with his Trunk gently took him up, and set him upon his back again. Some in their wars have fastned sharp swords to the Snouts of the Elephants, and done much mischief therewith to the enemy.

Verse 20 Surely the Mountaines bring him forth food] And food enough, though he be of an huge body. Learne we to trust unto Gods providence for our necessary provision: the earth is the Lords, and the fulnesse thereof. See verse 15.

Where all the beasts of the field play] And play they may securely for him; for he is so far from using his sword to destroy them, that when he is to passe through the herds of other beasts or cattle, he maketh way (saith Pliny) with his Snout, that he may not hurt any of them, and beckneth to them therewith, as it were with his hand, that he will only pass by them, and do them no harm.

Verse 21. He lyeth under the shady trees] Vatablus readeth the words question-wise thus, Lyeth he under the shady trees in the covert of the reeds and fens? No such matter, he is too big to be shaded by trees, neither can reeds and fens cover him. But Aristotle tells us, That he loves to lye by the banks of Rivers beset with trees, as being naturally hot, and bred in hot Countries: and yet he is impatient of cold and winter. And therefore when Hannibal brought many Elephants out of Africa into Italy, they all perished in the cold Alps, except only that one whereupon Hannibal himself rode.

Plin. lib. 8. c. 10.

In the covert of the reed and fens] Hence Cardinus saith, That the Elephant is of a Swinish nature, delighted with mud and mire. And Gulielmus Parisiensis applyeth, Behemoth in the fens, to the divel in sensual hearts. He sleepeth in moist places, saith he, that is, in those that lye melting in sinful pleasures and delights: therefore Luke 11. it is said, that he walketh in dry places, seeking rest, but finding none: and Ezek. 47. 11. when the waters of the Sanctuary overflowed, the miry places could not be healed.

Ad calorem frangendum crasso cœno perfundunter. Plin.

Verse 22. The shady trees cover him with their shadow &c.] He leaneth against those trees, and sleepeth, for lye downe and rise again he cannot for want of joynts in his limbs. And why may not we conceive the trees in those parts big enough to overshade the Elephant; when as in America, but especially in Brasile, the trees are so huge, that it is reported of them, that several families have lived in several armes of one tree, to such a number as are in some petty Village or Parish amongst us?

Abbots Geog. pag. 271.

The willows of the brook compasse him about] To shelter him from the wind and cold. And although they cannot swim, they are so big, yet they love to be about pooles and brooks for shade, and to ease their thirst; for the Elephant drinketh off fourteen firkins of water in a morning, saith Aristotle, and eight at night, as it followeth, Verse 23. Behold he drinketh up a River, and hasteth not] Viz. Through fear, tanquam canis ad Nilum, as the dogs that drink at Nilus fear the Crocodile; or as they of this Land anciently drank in fear of their lives the whiles, and were therefore wont to have some friend to undertake for their safety: whence that expression of him who is drunk to, I'll pledge for you. The Elephant as he drinks huge draughts (beyond that of the Camel, who drinketh, saith Pliny, Et in præteritum, & in futurum, for both the time past, and the time to come) so he drinks without disturbance for who dare deal with him? Other cattle, through the frightfulnesse of their disposition, break their draughts to stare about them. Not so the Elephant, who drinks as if he would exhaust and drain dry the River, and steps into it with such a big body as if he would stop the course of it; therfore some read the words thus, He hindreth the River that it hasteth not. Some by he hasteth not, understand that custom of the Elephant, not to drink, till he have first by going into, and stirring the water made it pudley, for he loveth not clear waters, as Elian writeth. Neither yet doth he at any time enter higher into a River then he can breath through his large Snout, for swim he cannot by reason of the weightinesse of his body, saith Aristotle.

Lib. 8. cap. 18.

Hist. anim. l. 9. cap. 46.

He trusteth that he can draw up Jordan into his mouth] In the vast imagination of his fancy he conceits that he can devour and drink up whole Jordan at once. Jordan is the greateſt River of Canaan, running along the Land, and falling into the dead Sea which yet grows no bigger by ſwallowing it. Hereunto ſome think, that this Text alludeth. But better by Jordan here, (which ariſeth from the root of Lybanus, and as ſome ſay, from a double fountain, the one on the right ſide called Dan, and the other on the left called Jor) we may underſtand by a Synecdoche, any River; and ſo theſe words are nothing elſe but an hyperbolical repetition of the former.

Verſe 24 He taketh it with his eyes] It, that is, Jordan, which he thinks when he ſeeth it, to drink up at a draught; but it is better filling his belly then his eye, as we ſay. Others, He thruſteth his head in up to the eyes through extreme greedineſſe. Brentius readeth it, Oculis ſuis capitur ipſe, decipulis perforatur naſus; and ſaith, That this Creature is taken only by his eyes and noſe; for otherwiſe he is as ſlick and ſlippery as an Eele: ſo is Satan (ſaith he) neither can we ſhun his wiles but by the Spirit of faith. But Nonne hoc ſpumoſum? Luther in one place calleth allegories, Spumam Scripturæ, the froth of the Scriptures: and in another, the allegorical ſenſe is a beauteous harlot, that inticeth idle men, who think themſelves in Paradice, and in Gods boſom when they fall upon ſuch ſpeculations. Gregory and others, (who have wholy allegorized this and the former chapter, applying all to the divel and Antichriſt) obſerved not what was the ſtate and ſcope of this diſputation. Some read the Text thus, Will any take him in his ſight, will any pierce his noſe with ſnares? q. d. That is not the way to take him, or hold him when taken. He muſt be caught by wiles, and not by main force or open ſtrength (See Pliny to this purpoſe) although when he is once caught, he is ſoon tamed and made tractable to many uſes. See Ariſtotles hiſtory of living Creatures. Pliny ſaith, he had ſeen Elephants dance on the Rope, and write Greek letters with their feet, &c. In Gen. 3. p. 67. Lib. 8. cap. 8. & 9. Lib. 9. cap. 46.

His noſe pierceth through ſnares] Or, Will any bore his noſe to put in ſnares? Though he be apt enough to be tamed and taught, yet he will not endure halter, bridle, bit or ring in his noſe; as neither will Leviathan, of whom the like is ſpoken, chap. 41. 1, 2.

CHAP. XLI.

Verſe 1. Canſt thou draw out Leviathan with an hook?]

AS men uſe to do the leſſer fiſhes in angling? No, as little as thou canſt bore Behemoths noſe with a ſnare, chap. 40. 24. Leviathan is a common name for all great Sea-Monſters, Pſal. 104. 26. Bezæ and Deodate underſtand it of the Crocodile, others of the Sea-Dragon: others of the whirl-pool: But moſt of the Whale; in creating whereof, Creavit Deus vaſtitates & ſtupores, ſaith One. Pliny writeth of them, when they ſwim and ſhew themſelves, aunare inſulas putes, you would think them to be ſo many Iſlands. Another ſaith, they appear like huge mountaines, and that when they grow old they are ſo fat and corpulent, that they keep long together in a place, ſo that upon their backs (by the duſt and filth gathered and condenſed) graſs and ſhrubs grow, as if there were ſome Iſlands there; whereat Sea-men attempting to land, have caſt themſelves into no ſmall dangers. Some tell us of a Whale that would have covered four Acres of ground, his mouth ſo wide, that he could have ſwallowed a whole Ship. Virgil calleth Whales Aſtoſtros, the Greeks call them, Θῆρες ἄγρια, Wild Beaſts. The Majeſty and Power of the Creator, is much ſeen in theſe vaſt creatures. Pſal. 74. 14. Thou brakeſt the heads of Leviathan in pieces, and gaveſt him to be meat to the people inhabiting the wilderneſſe. Here-upon Lib. 9. cap. 2. Heidfeld. Olaus. Plin. lib. 9.

upon the Jew-Doctors have fabled, that God at firſt made two Leviathans only; the one whereof he gave to the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs to feaſt with, the other he hath ſalted up for a feaſt to be made for the Jewes, to be gathered together by the Meſſias at the end of the world. Others have turned all this, and a great part of the former chapter into allegories: whereof ſee chap. 40,24. Let us by the enſuing deſcription take notice of, 1. Gods Omnipotency, who hath made ſuch great wonders, whereof the ſea hath more ſtore then the earth, as they know well who are converſant therein. 2 His Juſtice, who by theſe creatures oft puniſheth Offenders. Procopius telleth us, That in his time a great Whale much infeſted the coaſts of Conſtantinople, and did great miſchief for fifty yeers together, till at length being taken and brought to land, he was found to be thirty cubits long, and ten broad. 3. His Wiſdome in making the Whale ſo complete in all its parts, which all have their ſeveral uſes; all which are here noted and numbred, how much more are our members, yea, our very haires? 4. His goodneſſe in creating ſuch Sea-monſters for mans uſe and benefit in many particulars; as his fleſh for meat, his fat for oyl his hide for thongs, his teeth for combs, his bones for building, mounding, Bodice making, &c. In Africa the Whales bones ſerve commonly for rafters of houſes. Leviathan he is called of the faſt joyning together of his ſcales and members, wherein conſiſteth his ſtrength: and ſo doth ours in unity.

Verſe 2. Canſt thou put a hook into his noſe?] Canſt thou ring him like a Swine, or rule him like a Bear? God can, and did Sennacherib that crooked Leviathan, *Iſai.*27,1. & 37.29. And doth ſtill the Great Turk, who deſireth to devour Chriſtendom.

Or bore his jaw through with a thorn] Or twig, as men do leſſer fiſhes, taken with an Angle, or Herrings from the fiſh-market. Theſe are facetious and ironical queſtions that are put to Job in theſe five firſt verſes: hinting to him, that although he could not do any of theſe things, yet God could with eaſe.

Verſe 3. Will he make many ſupplications unto thee?] As conquered Captives uſe to do; witneſſe Benhadad, 1 *King.*20. 32. and Teridates King of Parthians, who being brought priſoner to Nero, thus beſpake him; I come unto thee as unto my God, and will henceforth worſhip thee as I do the Sun in heaven; I will be whatſoever thou ſhalt appoint me; for thou art my Fate and Fortune, &c.

Σὺ γάρ μοι, ἢ μοῖρα εἶ ἢ τύχη. Dio in Neron.

Will he ſpeak ſoft words unto thee?] Verba byſſina; as unto his Lord and Maſter. An elegant and pleaſant Proſopopaia? No, his ſtomack is too great, to ſtoop ſo low.

Verſe 4 Will he make a Covenant with thee?] And compound, where he cannot conquer.

Wilt thou take him for a ſervant for ever?] To be at thy diſpoſe, and to do thy drudgery? q.d. He ſcornes the motion. Before the fall, this and all other Creatures were at mans ſervice, *Gen.*1.28. & 2.19,20. But now alaſs it is otherwiſe. Howbeit to thoſe that are in Chriſt, this part of Gods loſt image is in part reſtored, Heb. 2.6. with Pſalm 8. 4.5. and ſhall be perfectly, Revelat. 2. 26. What ſingular ſervice the Whale did Jonas in ſhipping him to Land, who knows not?

Verſe 5. Wilt thou play with him as with a bird?] Shall he make thee ſport, as thoſe poor birds that ſerve as paſtime for little children? Or as the fooliſh Emperor Honorius, delighted in his bird Roma (ſo he called it) at the loſſe whereof, when the City was taken by the Vandals, he grieved more, then at all the reſt? Indignum Jam, regem aves præferre viribus, ſaith the Divine Chronologer.

Wilt thou bind him for thy maidens?] Shall your daughters tye him with a thred, which lengthning or ſtraightning at their diſcretion ſhall make his priſon either larger or ſtraiter?

Verſe 6. Shall companions make a Banquet of him?] The Cetarii Whale-fiſhers, who uſually go out in companies. It was anciently held impoſſible, and is ſtill perilous to take the Whale and make a banquet of him; as the tongue and ſome other parts of the Whale are good meat. Or, Make a Banquet for him; ſhall they feaſt those

those Merchants they meane to sell him to, they may get the better price for him?

Shall they part him among the Merchants?] Who might sell him out for sundry uses. See vers. 1.

Verse 7. Canst thou fill his skin with barbed irons?] Harpagonibus. Heb. with thornes; scil. to pull him to the shore? Opianus, Albertus Magnus, Gesner, and others now write, how Whales are to be taken; and experience proves it to be feisable. They are sometimes cast upon the Land by the surging rage or violence of the sea, or by the ebbing thereof, left in a ford where they cannot swim, and so they become a prey to the fishermen with their guns, darts, &c.

Verse 8. Lay thy hand upon him] Stroke him, clap him on the back, and see if that way thou canst winne upon him, (if by force thou canst not catch and kill him. Or draw neer, and offer but the least violence to him if thou dareſt, and he will quickly make thee repent it; so that thou wilt have little joy either to flatter him, or to fight it out with him, for he will be the death of thee.

Verse 9. Behold the hope of him is in vain] Heb. Is lying. A man may promise himself or others to take the Whale, but how or when will he effect it? It is a misery to lye languishing at Hopes Hospital, and after all, to be disappointed; to labour all night, and take nothing, &c.

Shall not one be cast downe even at the sight of him] Surely there is cause enough to be cast down, if he be so big and dreadful to behold as is reported. See the Note on Verse 1.

Verse 10. None is so fierce that dare stir him up] Unlesse he be ambitious of his own destruction: cruel (so the word here signifieth) to his owne life, which hereby he desperately casteth away. Aristotle telleth us, That fishes do sleep; and perhaps these greater fishes take more sleep. Now who dare awake them sleeping, or encounter them waking, and rouling in the waters? None surely but a mad man.

Who then is able to stand before me?] Et ost qui coram me stet? No more surely then a man before a Whale, or a glass-bottle before a Cannon shot. Here then we have the accommodation and application of the former Discourse, which we must not look upon as cunningly devised fables, 2 Pet. 1. 16. or read as we do the old stories of forragne businesses, but as that wherein our selves are nearly interested and concerned, that we may give God the glory of his Power, (as here, far beyond that of the Whale or any other creature) and of his Justice, as verse 11, 12.

Verse 11. Who hath prevented me that I should repay him?] Who can tax me with injustice, who am bound to no man, but Owner of all things? If any one can say, I am beholding to him, let him prove it, and I shall readily requite it: he shall have no cause at all to complain of me as ungrateful, Rom. 11. 34, 35.

Whatsoever is under the whole heavens is mine] The Divel told our Saviour that all was his, and to whomsoever he would, he gave it, Luke 4. 6. The Pope also, (that first born of the Divel) takes upon him, as Lord of all, to dispose of Spirituals or Temporals in all Countries, as Boniface the VIII wrote to Philip King of France, who answered him with a Sciat fatuitas tua, &c. And as the Pope that then was, gave our Henry the Eighth's Kingdome, primo occupanti, to him that should first take it; but he slighted him with O Papa & cultus Diaboli in eodem sunt prædicamento. It is for God alone to say, as Dan. 4. 32. I rule in the Kingdome of men, and give it to whomsoever I will. How then can I do any man wrong who am obliged to none, but all are engaged to me for all they have?

Verse 12. I will not conceal his parts nor his power] That therein, as in a picture of the most principal piece of my Workmanship, thou maist behold how great, and how glorious a God I am. In the year of Grace 1577, July 2. the Ship-men took a Whale not far from Antwerp, the picture whereof was printed and published to this effect, His hide was without scales, and of a leaden colour, he was 85 foot long long, and ſixteen foot high. From his mouth to his eyes was fifteen foot; from his eyes to his finnes, four foot and three fingers, &c. Such a kind of picture, or character of this Sea-monſter we have here, from the moſt skilful hand of heaven. Pliny obſerveth that pictures of things exact and excellent, are ſeldom drawn but with great diſadvantage. Not ſo this in the text, as will appear in the ſequel.

Vatab.

Nor his comely proportion] Heb. Nor the grace of his diſpoſition. i. e. Dicam quàm egregiè & concinnè membra ejus compoſita ſint; I will declare how finely and fitly all his parts are proportioned, and put together. In the moſt deformed Creatures (as we count them) there is no part ſuperfluous, uſeleſſe, or uncomely. Deus eſt magnus in minimis, nec parvus in maximis.

Verſe 13. Who can diſcover the face of his garment?] That is, ſaith Piſcator, Who can pull him out of the ſea, wherewith he is covered as with a garment? Who can ſlip off his skin whiles he is alive; as men do the Eels-skin, ſay others? Who (as men uſe to do when horſes are to be ſaddled) will take off his cloth, and ſet the ſaddle upon his back? This laſt is Beza's Paraphraſe: and it ſuits beſt with that which followeth.

Or who can come to him with his double bridle?] Let it be never ſo large, or ſtrong, his mouth is too wide, his jawes too ſtrong, to be held in with bit and bridle, leſt he come near unto thee.

Verſe 14. Who can open the doors of his face?] The two-leaved-doors of his jawes, to let in a bridle? Sampſon durſt venture upon a roaring Lion and rend him, as a man would rend a Kid. But never durſt any ſuch thing be done to a Whale.

His teeth are terrible round about] The Whales teeth are ſaid to be 120. each tooth four cubits long.

Verſe 15. His Scales are his pride] They are like ſo many gliſtering ſhields, wherein he puts his confidence, and takes his pride; as thinking them impenetrable.

Shut up together as with a cloſe ſeal] So cloſed and put together, like Paper ſealed with Wax, as that nothing can part them. The Jewes uſe to write upon the back of their ſealed Letters, Nun, Cheth, Shin; that is, Niddui, Cherem, and Shammatha; all ſorts of Excommunication to thoſe that open them.

Verſe 16. One is ſo near to another, that no air, &c.] One ſcale or flake is. This is more proper, ſay ſome, to the Crocodile, than to the Whale: but who can tell the ſeveral kinds of Whales, ſome whereof are ſaid to have great and thick ſcales cloſely compacted as here? Quòd ſi ſquammæ Leviathan ita cohæreant, ut earum opere textili denſato, &c. Let the Saints ſtrengthen themſelves by cloſe-ſticking the one to the other, as the primitive Chriſtians did; ſo that the very Heathens acknowledged, that no people under Heaven did ſo hold together and love one another, as they; being like that Sacra cohors, holy band of Souldiers in the Theban Army, which conſiſted ἐξ ἐραστῶν καὶ ἐρωμένων, of ſuch only who were joyned together in the bonds of love: and theſe they eſteemed the prime of all their ſtrength in battel.

Athenæus lib. 3.

Verſe 17. They are joyned one to another, &c.] They are lapt over one another, like tiles on a houſe. See the Note on verſ. 16.

In ſublime nimbos efflat.
Plin. lib. 9. c. 6.

Verſe 18. By his neeſings, a light doth ſhine] When this dreadful Monſter ſneezeth, or ſnorteth, fire breaketh out at his eyes and noſe. By this neezing of the Whale is meant the abundance of white frothy water which he caſteth forth at his noſtrils.

And his eyes are like the eye-lids of the morning] Bright and beamy. Olaus writeth of the Norway Whales, that their eyes ſhine in a dark night like a fire: ſo that Marriners have oft thought, when they have ſeen them, that they ſaw a great fire.

Verſe 19. Out of his mouth go burning lampes] This and thoſe that follow are all hyperbolical expreſſions. Here he is brought in as a ſpit-fire, as the Devil was wont to be in Playes and Pageants. And by this paſſage, ſome conjecture, that not the Whale, but the Sea-dragon is here deſcribed. Let it be what it will, it muſt needs be a great heat within this great Fiſh, that ſendeth forth, as it were, burning lamps, and and ſparks of fire; and a ſtrong ſulphurous breath he muſt have like the out-burſts of Ætna, by this deſcription. Ariſtotle ſaith the Whale is of an hot fiery nature, and that he hath Lungs, and breatheth: a pipe or paſſage alſo he hath in his fore-head, whereat he throweth out the water he hath taken in, either by his breathing, or eating. This tranſparent water thus with a force thrown up againſt the Sun-beams, may bear a ſhew of lightning, or burning lamps. Lib. 4. de part. anim. cap. 12.

Verſe 20. Out of his noſtrils goeth ſmoke, &c.] Whiles his meat heateth in his ſtomack for concoction, as if fire were put under ſome great reaking pot or Caldron boyling: Heb. blown; for of blowing comes boyling. Sufflati.

Verſe 21. His breath kindleth coals] Or, would kindle coals (as a Smiths bellows) if there were any to kindle. Such a kindle-coal was Arrius and Hildebrand of old: the Jeſuites at this day, and not a few others, Prov. 26. 21. Eſ. 33. 10. your breath as fire ſhall devour you. Some mens tongues are like Gun-powder, which touched with the leaſt ſpark, will inſtantly be in the face, Jam. 3. 6. A flame goeth out of their mouths, enough to ſet the whole courſe of Nature on fire.

Verſe 22. In his neck remaineth ſtrength] Ariſtotle ſaith, that among Fiſhes, the Dolphin, Whale, and ſuch as breath, have necks proportionable to their bodies. The word rendred remaineth, is in the Hebrew, lodgeth, or abideth all night: ſo ſpoken, ſaith One, becauſe the Whale, as alſo the Dolphin, ſleepeth with his head erected above water. De part. anim. lib. 3.

And ſorrow is turned into joy before him] i. e. He knows no ſorrows, he fears no hurt, but alwayes rejoyceth, bearing himſelf bold upon his ſtrength, God having made him to ſport in the ſea, Pſal. 104. 26. Others read it, And before him danceth fear; Pavor & Pallor, (Tullus Hoſtilius his two gods) men dance, or ſtart for fear.

Verſe 23. The flakes of his fleſh are joyned together] Heb. The fallings, or the refuſe and vileſt parts, as the word is rendred, Am. 8. 6. Now if God be ſo punctual in the deſcription of theſe alſo, can any one think that he hath let paſſe any thing in the holy Scriptures, that belong to our Salvation? What need is there then of humane traditions? Meland. Tremell.

They are firm in themſelves] Heb. Moulton. Firm they muſt be, becauſe ſo joyned together. Vis unita fortior; but diſſention is the mother of diſſolution. England is a mighty Animal (ſaith a great Politician) which can never die, except it kill it ſelf.

They cannot be moved] Or, He cannot be moved. He may ſay, as Terminus of old, Nulli cedo, I give place to none, unleſſe I pleaſe.

Verſe 24. His heart is as firm as a ſtone] He is corpore & corde validiſſimus. Of the ſword-fiſh, Plutarch ſaith, that he hath a ſword, but not an heart to uſe it. But the Whale hath courage to his bulk; his heart is as firm as a ſtone, as his head (ſaith Scaliger) is as hard as a flint. In the hearts of ſome creatures, ſaith Ariſtotle, is found a bony, or griſly hardneſs; but the Whales heart is all as it were a bone; and this bone as a ſtone. μάχαιραν μὲν ἔχει, καρδίαν δὲ μὴ ἔχει.

As a pair of the neather milſtone] Meta, upon which the whole weight lyeth: the Greek call it ὄνος μυλικὸς, Mat. 18. 6. the Mill-Aſs; becauſe it is the bigger and harder of the two. The vulgar here for the neather Mill-ſtone, hath the ſmiths-Anvil, which by hammering, is made harder.

Verſe 25. When he raiſeth up himſelf, the mighty are afraid] When he ſhewes himſelf like ſome moving mountain upon the ſurface of the water, the moſt aſſured Piſotes or paſſengers are ſeized with fear of death, and ſeek to make peace with God, as thoſe Marriners did, Jon. 1. 5, 6, &c.

By reaſon of breakings] Broughton reads of ſhiverings.

They purifie themſelves] Expiant ſe, they beg pardon of ſin, and prepare to die. Others render it aberrant, they are diſpirited, and know not what courſe to take. Others again, they purge downwards, their retentive faculty being weakned with fear, they let go their excrements: as Loper the traytour did, when he was upon his tryal before the Lords of the Council: and as God ſomewhere in Ezekiel threatneth his rebels, that for fear of his diſpleaſure they ſhall not be able to hold their water.

Verſe 26. The ſword of him that layeth at him cannot hold] So cloſe are his ſcales, ſo thick his skin, that there is no wounding of him. There was not of old, it ſeemeth,

But now there is a way found of ſhooting and piercing of him, ſo that he dieth with an horrible noiſe, and out-cry.

Nor the Harbergeon] A defenſive weapon will be as uſeleſſe, as thoſe other offenſive: for the Whale will ſoon ſwallow up the armed, as well as the unarmed.

Verſe 27. He eſteemeth iron as ſtraw, and braſſe as rotten wood] He makes nothing of any thing that ſhall be done againſt him. Bears and Lions may be wounded with hunting-weapons: other Fiſhes with Eele-ſpears, and the like: not ſo the Whale, or not ſo eaſily.

Verſe 28. The arrow cannot make him flee] Heb. Sons of the bow, as chap. 5. 7. Sparks are called ſons of the coal. Arrows were then as much in uſe as bullets are now.

Sling-ſtones are turned with him into ſtubble] Thoſe ſtones which the ſling caſtes with ſo much force, make as little impreſſion upon his body, as a ſtraw would, which the hand of a child ſhould puſh.

Verſe. 29. Darts are counted as ſtubble] When any thing in the Decrees or Decretals likes not the Pope, he ſets Palea, that is, ſtubble upon it; or Hoc non credo: ſo doth this Leviathan upon all kind of weapons; he ſlightes them. The word here rendred darts, is as ſtrange, as the weapon it ſignifieth is to us unknown, lapides balliſtæ, an engin, whereby great ſtones were thrown againſt Walles or Towers (as now Cannon-bullets) to make a breach in them. Catapulta, aries vel ſimile aliquod tormentum. Be they what they will, the Whale fears them not, no though they were as terrible to others, as thoſe two great pieces of Ordnance caſt by Alphonſus Duke of Ferrara; the one whereof he called the Earthquake, the other Grandiabolo, the great Devil Acumina teſtacea. Verſe 30. Sharp ſtones are under him] Heb. Sharp pieces of the potſheard, which prick him no more than if he lay upon the ſofteſt couch; ſo hard is his belly.

He ſpreadeth ſharp-pointed things upon the mire] When he might lye ſofter, he ſcorns it: as our hardy forefathers ſome two or three hundred years agoe, who ordinarily lay upon ſtraw-pallets covered with canvas, and a round log under their heads inſtead of a bolſter. As for pillows, they ſaid they were fit only for women in childbed, &c. Hollinſhed.

Plin. lib. 9. c. 3. & 6. Verſe. 31. He maketh the deep to boyl like a pot] He troubleth the whole Ocean: he maketh a mighty commotion in the ſea, when he rouls himſelf therein upward and downward, and caſts up water on high thorow a certain conveyance, that he hath in his head.

He maketh the ſea like a pot of oyntment] Turning it into a foam, like the ſcum of a boyling pot. Beza rendreth it thus, He maketh the ſea like a Mortar, wherein colours are beaten: that is, the whirling of the water is like unto a quern that is turned round of the painter, to temper his colours.

Verſe 32. He maketh a path to ſhine after him] A Ship doth ſo, much more a whale.

One would think the deep to be hoary] By reaſon of the white ſhining foam left behind him.

Verſe 33. Upon earth there is not his like] Heb. There is no compariſon of him: Much was ſaid before of Behemoth, but Leviathan is far beyond him for hugeneſſe and ſtrength: which yet Mercer noteth to be the work of God, and not of Nature, quòd humor ſolvas & infirmet; and therefore in reaſon earthly creatures would be harder and ſtronger, than thoſe in the ſea.

Who is made without fear] He ſeems not to come into the world but to fear nothing, and to defie all things. No creature carrieth it ſelf ſo ſtately or ſtoutly as the whale.

Verſe 34. He beholdeth all high things] As far below him (be they never ſo excellent) both for bulk of body, and ſtoutneſſe of minde.

He is a King over all the children of Pride] Or, Over all the wild creatures (ſo Tremellius and Buxtorf interpret it) which are proud and do domineer over the tame ones, no leſſe then Leviathan if he were amongſt them, would do over them.

CHAP.

CHAP. XLII.

Verſe 1. Then Job anſwered the Lord, and ſaid.]

After that he had been ſo plainly and plentifully convinced by Almighty God; 1. That he was far ſhort of him in eternity, Wiſdome, Power, Providence, &c. 2. That he could not ſtand before Behemoth and Leviathan the works of his hands; Job yeeldeth, ſubmitting to Gods Juſtice, and imploring his Mercy; ſo effectual is the word of Gods grace in the hearts of his Elect. It had need to be an elaborate ſpeech that ſhall work upon the conſcience, ſuch as was this afore-going. Vide etiam quid afflictio faciat, ſaith Mercer. See here alſo the happy fruit of an affliction ſanctified. By this ſhall the iniquity of Jacob (of Job) be purged; and this is all the fruit, to take away his ſin, Iſai. 27.9. To make his works full, Rev. 3.2. Job had repented before, chap. 40.4,5. but not ſo completely. Dico hic narrari panitentiam Jobi plenam, ſaith Piſcator: Here he doth it throughly by a deep and downe-right repentance, ſuch as was never to be repented of.

Verſe 2. I know that thou canſt do every thing] Gods power is either Abſolute or Actual. By the former he can do every thing, make a world, and unmake it in an inſtant; of ſtones raiſe up children to Abraham, &c. By the latter, whatſoever he willeth, that he doth both in heaven and in earth, and none can withſtand him. This Job knew before, but now better, becauſe by experience, and unqueſtionable evidence given in by Gods own mouth. And although this be but a ſhort acknowledgment of Gods Power and Juſtice, yet is it well accepted, as proceeding from a true ſenſe of faith. Neque exigis Deus à nobis multa verba, ſed multam fidem. Merlin.

And that no thought can be with holden from thee] Te non ſolùm omnia poſſe, ſed & omnia noſſe; That thou art not only Omnipotent, but Omniſcient, and that not ſo much as a thought of any mans heart (which alſo is of thy making) can be hid from thee; ſith which way ſoever he turneth him, he ſhall find thee both potent and preſent. The words may be read thus, And that no thought of thine can be cut off or hindred. Having ſpoken of Gods power, he ſpeaketh of his thoughts; to teach, ſaith Calvin, That Gods Power and his Will are things inſeparable, his mind and hand agree together; the one to determine, the other to effect. Parem in eo eſſe voluntatem & facultatem. Mercer.

Verſe 3. Who is he that hideth counſel without knowledge?] Quis iſte eſt, inquis Who is he, ſaiſt thou (chap. 38.2.) that hideth counſel, &c. ſo Tremellius rendreth it. Is ego ipſe ſum, I am the very man that have done it, and now would as gladly undo it again, by an humble confeſſing and diſclaiming mine own folly therein, and by applying thoſe words of thine to my ſelf, with an holy indignation; for therein thou haſt fully met with me. Ἀσυνέτως ἢ σοφὸς ἐλάλησα; Septuag. Nempe ego. Tigurin. Ἀσυνετοῦντας 1 Pet. 2.15

Therefore have I uttered that I underſtood not] I have raſhly and imprudently, yea, graceleſſly and impudently ſpoken of thy judgements, and deſired to diſpute with thee; daring to reprehend that which I did not comprehend, and to paſſe my verdict on things which I was not verſed in, Things too wonderful for me which I knew not. Broughton reads thus, Therefore I tell, that I had not underſtanding; that is, I confeſſe I have ſinned, but I did it ignorantly. And ſo he makes way to the enſuing Petition, That God would heare him, and teach him better things. Idcirco indicò me non intellexiſſe. Merc.

Verſe 4. Hear I beſeech thee, and I will ſpeak] We have had his confeſſion follow now his Petition here, his Humiliation and Reformation, verſe 6. Theſe are the parts and properties of true repentance, that fair daughter of a foule mother, Sin. But had not Job promiſed to ſpeak no more, to proceed no farther, chap. 40.4,5.

40.4,5. How then doth he say here, I beseech, and I will speak? The answer is easie; he would speak no more so rashly, and unadvisedly as he had done, to Gods dishonour, and the offence of his best friends. But he would not spare to speak Supplications, as here, and to set forth his humble docility to give glory to God, and to take shame to himself, &c. Such a silence he knew would be sinful and savour of a dumb divel. He therefore addresseth himself to God, 1. For audience and acceptance: 2. For advice and direction: In all which, he renounceth his owne wisdome, and delivereth himself up wholy to God, to be taught and led into all truth and holinesse. The matter we see, is well amended with Job, since challenging God into the Schooles, he once said, Then call thou me, and I will answer; or let me speak, and answer thou me, chap. 13. 22. So afterwards Peter, when penitent, turned his crowing into crying: and Paul, his breathing out threatnings against the Saints, into, Lord, what wilt thou have me do? Act. 9. 1,6.

I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me] As a dutiful and docible Scholar, (who should be Discipulus) I will ask thee questions, and hang upon thy holy lips for an answer.

Verse 5. I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear] God hath ordained, that as death entred into the world at first by the ear, poisoned by that old Man-slayer, Genes. 3. so life shall enter into the soul by the same door: for it is, Hear and your soul shall live, Isai. 55. 3. And, The dead (in sins and trespasses) shall hear the voice of the Son of God (sounding in his Ordinances) and shall live the life of grace here, and of glory hereafter, John 5. 25. This great mercy Job had received, and he thankfully acknowledgeth it: But behold a greater,

But now mine eyes hath seen thee] Not only in the temple and whirl-wind, those clear testimonies of thy presence, but by some other special, glorious apparition (so some think) and by a Spirit of Prophecy (as the Hebrewes would have it) by the inward teaching of thy Spirit howsoever, as Vatablus senseth it, Et quando Christus Magister, quam citò discitur quod docetur; saith Austin. When God by his Spirit taketh in hand to teach a man, he soon becometh a skilful Scholer. Nescit tarda molimina Spiritus Sancti gratia, saith Ambrose. The Spirit is not long in teaching those that commit themselves to his tuition. The hypocrite knowes God but by hear-say, as a blind man knoweth colours; such may say as those in the Psalm, Audivimus famam, something we have heard, and some confused notions we have got concerning God and his will; but they are meerly disciplinary, but not intuitive, id est, Per speciem Propriam, &c. Such as transformes the soul into the same Image; it is not that claritas in intellectu quæ parit ardorem in affectu, That light in the understanding that kindleth the affections. Job was such, witnesse his next words.

Verse 6. Wherefore I abhor my self] Aspernor illa; so Tremellius: I utterly dislike those my former base and bald conceits of thee, my hard and unsavoury speeches, mine impatient and imprudent carriages. Horreo quicquid de meo est, ne meus sim, as Bernard expresseth it. Reprobo meipsum, so Brentius; I do utterly reject my selfe, I condemn mine own folly: I eat those words of discontent at thy righteous proceedings, Digna sanè quæ per jugulum redeunt. Abiicio vitam meam, so Mercer and Lavater render it. I cast away my life, and look upon it as lost, if thou shouldst take the forfeiture: I humbly put my self into the hands of justice, yet in hope of mercy.

Displiceo mihimetipsi, ac pervelim ut aliter dixissem ac feci∫sem. Lavat. Jerem. 6. 16. and 15. 34. Virg. Æneid. lib. 12.

I repent in dust and ashes] As in an expresse and publick pennance. I throw my self here upon the ground, I put my mouth in the dust, Lam. 3. 24. Canitiem immundo perfusam pulvere turpo, I sprinkle dust and ashes upon mine head, in token, that I have deserved to be as far under ground, as now I am above ground; I repent my presumptuous misbehaviour with as lowly a spirit, as ever I sinned with an high. Lo this was panitentiam agere, quod est pro malo bonum reponere, saith Brentius; This was true repentance to change evil for good; as piety for blasphemy, chastity for fornication, charity for envy, humility for pride, Christ for Satan. And Reformation is the best Repentance, saith Luther: Such as so repent, are sure of comfort. The word here rendred, I repent, signifieth also to take comfort, as Ezek. 32. 31.

zek. 32.31. It is repentance unto life, Acts 11.18. and such as accompanieth salvation, Hebr. 6.9. Neither is it wrought in any man but by a saving sight of Almighty God in his Greatness and Goodness; such as may make him at once to tremble and trust, as Job did here, and Isaiah chap. 6 1,5.

Verse 7. And it was so, that after the Lord had spoken these words to Job] And Job those other again to God, it soon repented the Lord concerning his servant. Pro magno delicto parum supplicii satis est patri. A little punishment is enough to a loving father for a great fault. Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith the Lord — for (alass) they have received of my hand double for all their sins. So it seemed to him who is all bowels, and who in all their afflictions is equally afflicted. God weeps on his peoples necks tears of compassion, they weep at Gods feet tears of compunction. Oh beautiful contention! Terent. Isai. 40.1,2.

The Lord said to Eliphaz the Temanite] Because he was the ancienter man of greatest Authority, and he that passed the heaviest censures upon Job, doing enough to have driven him into desperation.

My wrath is kindled against thee] Thus God passeth not sentence on Jobs side, till he had first angerly repressed and reprehended those three friends of his, who had assailed him without all right and reason. Let Gods servants hold out faith and patience: sooner or later they shall be righted.

And against thy two friends Bildad and Zophar] Who stuck so close to thee and chimed in with thee, against a better man then any of you all. As for Elihu, he is neither commended here, nor condemned. He spake well for the main, but many times took Job at the worst, and misconstrued his speeches. He is therefore punished (as Ambassadors are used to be when they commit undecencies) with silence, which is the way royal to correct a wrong. The other three had great cause to be much troubled and terrified at that short, but sharpest speech of God, My wrath is kindled against you: for, Who knoweth the power of Gods wrath, saith David: It is as the Messenger of death, and Harbinger of hell. God never said so much to Job, in all those long and large speeches he made unto him, for he knew that milder words would do, and he loveth not to overdo. Psalm 90.11

Ille dolet quoties cogitur esse ferox.

By the way observe, That although these three had offended more then Job, yet he was afflicted, and they escaped free. Judgement beginneth at Gods house; neither have any out of hell ever suffered more then those Worthies, of whom the world was not worthy, Heb. 11.

For ye have not spoken the thing that was right] And yet they seemed to be all for God: and to plead his Cause against Job throughout. But as in some things they were much mistaken, so they had their self-respects, and were much byassed in their discourses. Hypocrites and Heretikes (saith Gregory here) seem unto men more righteous, but God accepteth them not for all their plausible pleas, and specious pretences. Luke 16.15. Ye are they (said our Saviour to the Pharisees) who justifie your selves before men, but God knoweth your hearts, for that which is highly esteemed amongst men is abomination in the sight of God.

As my servant Job hath] They also were Gods servants, but because they had lent Satan their service against Job; and drawne from him many passionate speeches, they are for a punishment set by after a sort; as David also was when he had numbred the people, 2 Sam. 24.12. Go and say unto David. Now 'tis plaine David, who was wont to be my servant David, 2 Sam. 7.5. That Job is called Gods servant, (and that emphatically and exclusively) is a very great honour done him upon his repentance, and the like was done to David and Peter.

Verse 8. Therefore take unto you now seven bullocks] God reproveth not his for any other end, but that he may reduce them, and be reconciled unto them. The Sun of righteousness loveth not to set in a cloud:

Delicti

Dejicit ut relevet; premit ut ſolatia præſtet.
Enecat, ut poſſit vivificare Deus.

Seven Bullocks, and ſeven Rams] A great Sacrifice, whether we look to the greatneſſe of the Cattle, or the number; (eſpecially if each of them were to bring ſeven of each ſort as ſome underſtand it) to ſhew the greatneſſe of their ſin, in not ſpeaking right things of God and Job, though of a good intention, and with a very faire pretence. Seven of each they were to bring, which is noted for a number of perfection; and this pointed them of old (for the Ceremonial Law was their Goſpel) to the complete perfect Sacrifice of Jeſus Chriſt, the Lamb ſlain from the beginning of the world, every way ſufficient to expiate their ſinnes, and to ſave them from the wrath to come. Its aſſured them alſo, that God was through Chriſt perfectly ſatisfied, and pacified toward his faithful people.

And go to my ſervant Job] Who was to do the honourable Office of a Prieſt for them (as before the Law Abraham did, and Melchiſedech and others) and is thrice in this verſe called, Gods ſervant, for honours ſake; to the end that his friends might the more reſpect him, whom before they had vilipended, and be reconciled unto him, whom before they had wronged.

And offer up for your ſelves a burnt offering] Holocauſtabit is holocauſtum; a whole burnt Offering: Where we muſt not imagine, that God took delight in the ſmell or rather ſtench of the burnt beaſts hides and all, but in the faith of thoſe that offered them, who alſo were hereby inminded of their ſins (for which they had deſerved to be burnt in hell) and of their duties, to mortifie their earthly members and to preſent their bodies a living Sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, Rom. 12.1.

And my ſervant Job ſhall pray for you] Which as he could do very well, Ezek. 14.14. ſo he ſhould now do, to ſhew his hearty reconciliation; but ſhould have little availed for them, had not they repented, and believed, and prayed for themſelves. For the Juſt ſhall live by his faith; and it is a great vanity in ſome great Papiſts, who preſume to live looſely and baſely, becauſe they have hired ſome hedg-Prieſt to ſay a certain number of prayers for them daily.

For him will I accept] ſcil. Through the Office and perſon of my Son, which herein he reſembleth. The High-Prieſts Office was, 1. To expiate the ſins of the people. 2. To intercede and make requeſt for them. Chriſt is the High-Prieſt of the New-Teſtament; in whom the Father is well pleaſed, and through whom he will deny nothing to his humble Suppliants, for themſelves or others.

Leſt I deal with you after your folly] Heb. Leſt I work fooliſhneſſe with you; that is, (ſaith Beza) leſt I ſo behave my ſelf toward you, as your fooliſhneſs doth deſerve. Or, leſt I ſo handle you, that you may think me no wiſer then I ſhould be ſith you have ſeemed ſo to rough-hew Job out of zeal to me. Thus to the froward God ſeemeth to deal frowardly, Pſal. 18.27. Tremellius rendreth it not folly but haynous offence; others, diſgrace.

Mercer.

Flagitium, ignominia.

In that ye have not ſpoken, &c.] And if for hard words and ill language, good men may ſuffer, what ſhall become of ſuch, as both with virulent tongues, and violent hands, ſet againſt ſuch as fear God?

Verſe 9. So Eliphaz the Temanite, &c.] Here was reſipiſcentia ex fide conſtans ſaith Brentius, the repentance of faith, the obedience alſo of faith readily yeilded. Had not theſe been good and godly men, they would have ſtuck at the coſt of ſo great a Sacrifice, they would alſo have ſcorned to have ſought to Job, whom they had ſo much ſlighted, and to beg his prayers of whom they had ſo ill deſerved. But they had not ſo learned Chriſt. God they ſaw well was greatly offended, and Job highly accepted; glad therefore were they by any good means to ingratiate, each of them ſaying to God for himſelf, as he did once to Ceſar,

Ovid. Omne trahit ſecum Numinis ira malum.

The

The Lord alſo accepted Job.] Whether he teſtifieth his good acceptance by conſuming his Sacrifice with fire from heaven, is uncertain. 'Tis enough for us to know that he ſhewed himſelf reconciled unto them, and well pleaſed with Jobs prayer for them, and their own prayers joyned no doubt with his, and proceeding from a faith in the Merits and Mediation of Jeſus Chriſt. And hitherto Gods deciſive ſentence, whereby all the ſtrife was graciouſly ended, and all parties happily and heartily reconciled. What became of Satan a chief Actor in this Tragedy, we read not; Victus enim abiit. And as God would not once call him to account, when he had beguiled our firſt parents, Gen. 3. becauſe he meant him no mercy: ſo here he never mentioneth him, as being judged already, and by Job bravely worſted and defeated. All that we find of him is, that his commiſſion to vex Job any farther, was now taken away, for ſo it followeth

Verſe 10. And the Lord turned again the Captivity of Job.] He took him out of Satans clutches, who had hitherto held him priſoner, as it were, in the bands of poverty, ſickneſs, ſorrow, contempt, diſtreſs, &c. Whether all at once, or by degrees, God did all this for him, it ſkills not. Upon his prayers for his friends (which was no ſmall evidence and effect of his Piety and Charity) it appears, that God did all this that followeth for him. So true is that of Solomon, The reward of humility, and of the fear of the Lord, is riches, and honour, and life. Prov. 22.4.

When he prayed for his friends.] According to that of the Apoſtle Paul, Being diſfamed we pray. This is an high degree of Chriſtian perfection, which but few attain unto, as Merlin here bewaileth it; O raram & ſingularem virtutem, &c. And another well obſerveth, That God gives and forgives, according as man forgives his neighbour.

Alſo the Lord gave Job twice as much, &c.] Underſtand it both of Goods and Graces; which though he never parted with, yet by tryal and experience he found them much increaſed. As for outward things it is nothing unuſual for men to recover and recruit as far as God ſeeth fit.

The beſt way is to hang looſe to theſe things below, not truſting in uncertain riches, but in the living God, 1 Tim. 6.17. who will be our exceeding great reward, and give to his Sufferers an hundred fold here, and eternal life hereafter, Mat. 19.29. Optanda nimirùm eſt jactura quæ lucro majore penſatur, ſaith Agricola. It is doubtleſſe a lovely loſſe that is made up with ſo much gaine. Well might Saint Paul ſay, Godlineſſe is profitable to all things, as having the Promiſe of both lives, 1 Tim. 4.6. Well might Saint Peter call it, the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1.2. For as God brings light out of darkneſſe, comfort out of ſorrow, riches out of poverty, &c. ſo doth Godlineſſe. Let a man, with Job, bear his loſſes patiently and pray for his enemies that wrong and rob him, and he ſhall be ſure to have his own againe, and more, either in money or moneys worth, either in the ſame or a better thing: contented Godlineſſe ſhall be great gaine to him, 1 Tim. 6.6. Beſides heavens happineſſe, which ſhall make a plentiful amends for all. The Rabbins would perſwade us, That God miraculouſly brought back again to Job the ſelf-ſame cattle, that the Sabeans and others had taken from him, and doubled them. Indeed his children, (ſay they) therefore were not doubled unto him, becauſe they periſhed by their own fault and folly, as one of his friends alſo told him. But of all this nothing certain can be affirmed: and they do better who ſay, That his children being dead in Gods favour, periſhed not, but went to heaven; they were not loſt but laid up, ſo that, before God, Job had the number of his children doubled: for they are ours ſtill, whom we have ſent to heaven before us, and Chriſt at his coming ſhall reſtore them unto us, 1 Theſſal. 4.14. In confidence whereof faithful Abraham calleth his deceaſed Sarah, his dead, That I may bury my dead out of my ſight. Gen. 23.4. and ſo ſhe is called eight ſeveral times in that one Chapter, as Paræus hath obſerved.

Verſe 11. Then came there unto him all his brethren] Then; when God had begun to reſtore him. As his adverſity had ſcattered his friends, ſo his proſperity brought them together again. This is the worlds uſage.

Dum fueris fœlix multos numerabis amicos:
Tempora ſi fuerint nubila, ſolus eris.

Summer-birds there are not a few: Samaritans, who would own the Jewes whiles they flouriſhed, but otherwiſe diſavow them, as they did to Antiochus Epiphanes: Rich Job had many friends, Prov. 14.20. Qui tamen perſiſtebant amicitiæ ſicut lepus juxta tympanum, as the Proverb is. All this good Job paſſeth by, and forgetting all unkindneſſes, magnificently treateth them; as Iſaac in like caſe, had done Abimelech and his train, Gen. 26.30.

And did eat bread with him in his houſe] It's likely they came with their coſt to make Job a Feaſt of comfort, ſuch as were uſual in thoſe dayes, Jer. 16.7. Ezek. 24.17. But whether they did or not, they were welcome to Job; who now never upbraids them with their forſaking of him in his diſtreſſe (which yet was then a great grief to him) but friendly re-embraceth them, and courteouſly entertaineth them. This is contrary to the practice of many fierce and implacable ſpirits in theſe dayes, whoſe wrath, like that of the Athenians, is δόλιγος Θ, long-laſting; and although themſelves are mortal, yet their hearts are immortal.

And they bemoaned him] They condoled with him, and ſhook their heads, as the word ſignifieth; not by way of deriding him, as once they had done, chap. 16. but of ſorrow for their former deſerting him, and aſſurance that they would henceforth better ſtick to him in what eſtate ſoever.

And comforted him over all the evil &c.] So they ſhould have done long before: A friend is made for the day of adverſity; but better late then never. Nunquam ſanè ſerò ſi ſeriò. See here, ſaith Brentius, the change of affaires, and the right hand of the Moſt High, and learn the fear of God; for as he frowneth or favoureth any man, ſo will the world do.

Every man alſo gave him a piece of money] Or, a Lamb to ſtock him againe. Beza rendreth it, Some one of his Cattle, and paraphraſeth thus: Yea, every one of them gave him either a ſheep or an Ox, or a Camel, and alſo an Ear-ring of gold; partly as a pledge of their good will and friendſhip renewed toward him, and partly in conſideration and recompence of that loſſe, which he had before by the will and fore-appointment of God ſuſtained. Honoraria obtulerunt, ſaith Junius, they brought him theſe preſents as Pledges of their love and obſervance; for ſo were great men wont to be ſaluted with ſome gift, 1 Sam. 10.27. 2 Chron. 17. 5. And the ſame cuſtome was among the Perſians and Parthians, whoſe Kings might not be met without ſome token of congratulation, and Symbol of Honour. Sen. Epiſt. 17.

And every one an Ear-ring of gold] Inaurem aureum, an Ear-pendant of gold, at the Receipt whereof, Job might well ſay as the Poet did, Theog.

Σοὶ μὲν τοῦτο φίλε σμικρὸν, ἐμοὶ δὲ μέγα.
To thee this is a ſmall matter, but to me a great.

Verſe 12. So the Lord bleſſed the latter end of Job] According to Bildads Prophecy, chap. 8.7. And S. James his uſeful obſervation, chap. 5.11. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have ſeen the end of the Lord, that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy. If he afflict any of his, it is in very faithfulneſſe, that he may be true to their ſouls, it is alſo in great mercy, that he may do them good in the latter end; and this they themſelves alſo ſhall both ſee and ſay, by that time he hath brought both ends together. Pſal. 119.71. Be ye therefore patient, ſtabliſh your hearts, James 5.7. Patient Job had all doubled to him. Joſeph of a Slave became his Maſters Maſter. Deut. 8.16.

But if God deny his ſuffering ſervants Temporals, and give them in Spirituals, they have no Cauſe to complaine: One way or other they ſhall be ſure to have it. Great is the gain of Godlineſſe.

For he had fourteen thouſand ſheep, &c.] Cattle only are inſtanced; becauſe therein eſpecially conſiſted the wealth of that Countrey; but other good things alſo doubtleſſe were doubled unto him, as his family, poſſeſſions, grounds, houſes, and eſpecially Wiſdom to make a good uſe of all: for commonly Stultitiam patiuntur opes; and what's more contemptible then a rich fool, a golden beaſt, as Caligula called his father in Law Syllanus. *Pecunia à pecude. Ten children he had in heaven, and ten on earth. See the Note above on verſ. 10. The Lord well knew that wealth would be nothing ſo comfortable to Job. unleſſe he had children to leave it to, Gen. 15.2. His wife therefore returning to her duty from which ſhe had ſwerved, became fruitful at an age well advanced; for we read not of any other that he had.

Ver. 14. And he called the name of the firſt, Jemimah] That is, Day-bright, from her orient and gliſtering beauty; q.d. fair as the day: Cant. 6.10. the Church is ſaid, to look forth as the Morning, fair as the Moon. Diurna.

And the name of the ſecond, Kezia] That is, Caſſia; a kind of Spice, whereof there are three ſorts, ſaith Dioſcorides but all very ſweet, and ſend forth a moſt pleaſant ſmell, like that of the Roſe. This ſecond daughter therefore ſeemes to be ſo named from the ſweetneſſe of her breath, or perhaps of her whole body, proceeding from the goodneſſe of her conſtitution, as it is reported of Alexander the Great. So ſweet ſmelling Smyrna, the beſt of all the ſeven Churches of Aſia. Revel. 3.

And the name of the third, Keren-happuch] That is, the Horn of beauty, (better then that which is borrowed) and of abundance; as whoſe cheeks Nature had painted with a moſt pleaſing Vermillion, far beyond any artificial tincture, which ſhe had no need of, Utpote omnes aliarum fucos & veneres ſuperans. Some intepret it, the horn of converſion; and think, That Job herein would expreſſe and memorize the ſtrange turn and alteration of his condition, as Joſeph did, Gen. 41.51,52. But the Chaldee Paraphraſt, the Jew-Doctors, and moſt of our Expoſitors, are for the former Interpretation, favoured alſo by the words following: Vatab.

Verſe 15. And in all the Land there were no women found ſo fair, &c.] Beauty though but a bonum fragile, and one of the gifts of Gods left hand, Prov. 31.30. yet is it the Flower of vertue, as Chryſippus called it; one of the greateſt excellencies of Nature, and ſingular degree of Gods Image in man, as Another. And although vertue is —Proprio contenta theatro, yet to others Plutl.

Such probably were Jobs Daughters, not fair and fooliſh, as thoſe Daughters of Jeruſalem, Iſai. 3. but adorned with all variety of Moral vertues, as a clear Skye is with Stars, as a Princely Diadem with Jewels. Hence their good father ſo affected them, that he

For a ſhort braid of adverſity, Job had an hundred and forty years health and proſperity: Like as Joſeph for his thirteen years of ſlavery and impriſonment, had fourſcore years liberty, proſperity and preferment. Who would not ſerve thee, O King of Nations?

And ſaw his ſons] Who doubtleſs were good and towardly (though nothing is ſaid of them) agreeable to their education, and anſwerable to Jobs former children, chap. 1.

Verſe 17 So Job died, being old and full of dayes] How long he lived, we know not. The Rabbins ſay, above two hundred years, which was longer then either Abraham or Iſaac lived: of both whom it is likewiſe ſaid, that they were ſatur dierum, ſated with this earthly life, and deſirous of life eternal. To thoſe old men that would yet live longer, we may ſay,

A COMMENTARY OR EXPOSITION Upon the Book of PSALMS.

He Book of Pſalms] So Chriſt calleth it, Luke 20. 42. the Hebrew word ſignifieth Hymns, or Praiſes; becauſe the greater part of theſe Pſalms ſerve to ſet forth the praiſe of God. This title ſeemeth to be taken from Pſal. 145. called Davids Hymn, or Pſalm of Praiſe; ſo highly prized by the ancient Hebrews, that they pronounce him an Heir of Heaven, who ſhall three times a day devoutly repeat it. The Greeks call this Book the Pſalter; and deſervedly give it many high commendations; as that it is the Souls Anatomy, the Laws Epitomy, the Goſpels Index, the Garden of the Scriptures, a ſweet Field and Roſary of Promiſes, Precepts, Predictions, Praiſes, Soliloquies, &c. the very Heart and Soul of God; the Tongue and Pen of David, a man after Gods own heart; one murmur of whoſe Michtam, or Maſchil, one touch of whoſe heavenly Harp is farre above all the buskind Raptures, gariſh Phantaſms, ſplendid Vanities, Pageants, and Landskips of prophaner wits; farre better worthy to be written in letters of Gold, than Pindars ſeventh Ode in the Temple at Rhodes (though Politian judged otherwiſe, like a Wretch as he was) and farre more fit to have been laid up, as a rare and precious Jewel, in that Perſian Casket, embroydered with Gold and Pearl, than Homers Iliads, for which it was reſerved by great Alexander. But that Cock on the Dunghil never knew the worth of this peerleſs Pearl; as did our good King Alured; who himſelf tranſlated the Pſalter into his own Saxon Tongue; and as the Emperour Andronicus, who cauſed this Book to be bound up in a little Volume by it ſelf, to ſerve as his Manual, and attend him in his running Library: for therein he found amulets of comfort, more pleaſant than the Pools of Heſhbon, more glorious than the Tower of Lebanon, more redolent than the Oyl of Aaron, more fructifying than the dew of Hermon, as one expreſſeth it. All the latitude of the Holy Scriptures may be reduced to the Pſalms, ſaith Auſtin, after Athanaſius; Luther calleth them Parva Biblia, & ſummarium utriuſq; Teſtamenti, a little Bible, a Summary of both Teſtaments. The Turks diſclaim both the Old and New Teſtament, and yet they ſwear as ſolemnly by the Pſalms of David, as by the Alcoran of Mahomet. Anciently they were ſung in the Temples, and in the Primitive Chriſtian Church happy was that tongue held that could ſound out aliquid Davidicum, any part of a Pſalm of David. Nicephorus telleth us, that as Athanaſ. Chryſoſt.

they travelled and journied they uſed to ſolace themſelves with Pſalms, and that thereby there was at a certain time a Jew converted. Saint Paul calleth them Spiritual Songs, Col. 3. 16. both becauſe they were indited by the Holy Spirit; and for that they do ſingularly ſuit with mens ſpirits; for they are ſo penned that every man may think they ſpeak De ſe, in re ſua, of himſelf, and to his particular purpoſe, as Athanaſius obſerveth. And laſtly, becauſe they do after a ſpecial manner Spiritualize, and ſanctifie thoſe that ſing them in the right tune; which is, Sing with grace in your hearts unto the Lord, as the Apoſtle there ſetteth it; and elſewhere hinteth unto us, that there is no ſmall edification by the choyce of a fit Pſalm, 1 Cor. 14. 26.

Verſ. 1. Bleſſed] Heb. O the bleſſedneſs, the heaped up happineſs both of this Life, and a better, fitter to be beleeved than poſſible to be diſcourſed. The Hebrew comes from a root that ſignifieth to go right forward, ſcil. in the way that is called Holy, having Oculum ad metam, an eye upon the mark, viz. True and real happineſs, ſuch as all men pretend to, but he only attaineth to who is here deſcribed. Sylla was by his flatterers ſurnamed Felix, becauſe high and mighty; and Metellus likewiſe, Quod bona multa bono, modo invenerat, becauſe rich by right means. But he that firſt called Riches Bona was a better Husband than Divine; and they that ſeek for a felicity in any thing here below, ſeek for the living among the dead. The Philoſophers diſcourſes of this ſubject are but learned dotages; David ſaith more to the point in this ſhort Pſalm, than any, or all of them put together; they did but beat the Buſh, God hath here put the Bird into our hands.

Policrat. lib. 8. cap. 4.

Is thema n] Heb. that man, with an Article, with an Accent, and by an excellency, as Jer. 5. 1. that eminent and eximious man, who is rationally Spiritual, and Spiritually rational; that man in Chriſt, 2 Cor. 12. 2. who hath learned Chriſt, and doth live Chriſt, walking as he walked, 1 Joh. 2. 6. and not in the counſel of the ungodly, &c. But his delight is in the Law of the Lord, &c. Magnus atque admirabilis vir, ſimodo viri nomine deſignare illum fas eſt, as Chryſoſtom ſaith of Babylas the Martyr, that is, a great and an admirable man, if a man we may call him, and not an earthly Angel rather. He muſt indeed bee content to paſs to Heaven as a concealed man, becauſe the World knoweth him not, 1 Joh. 3. 1. but thoſe that have ſenſes exerciſed to diſcern good and evil, may eaſily know him, as he ſtands here deſcribed, 1 To depart from evil, verſ. 1. 2 To do good, verſ. 2.

Walketh not in the counſel of the ungodly] or reſtleſs; the counſel of ſuch ſhould be far from us, Job 21. 16. & 22. 18. The Jews caſt their whole Nation or People into three ranks, Reſhagnim (the word here uſed) that is, the profane rabble. Tſadichim, righteous men, and Chaſidim, good, or gracious men; ſee Rom. 5. 7. To theſe two latter are oppoſite here Sinners, and Scorners; theſe laſt being the worſt of wicked perſons, and therefore ſet laſt in this gradation, as ſome will have it. The Septuagint here render them Peſts or Botches, and elſewhere incorrigible, wicked (with a witneſs) proud, prevaricating, &c. Beware of this Sin, ſaith Father Latimer; for I never knew but one ſcorner that repented: he who is ſitten down in this Chair of Peſtilence (as having tired himſelf in ways of wickedneſs, and will not bee better adviſed, Prov. 9. 7, 8. but with Lots Sons in Law, jeareth what he ſhould fear) wil not eaſily be raiſed out of it.

Verſ. 2. But his delight is in the Law of the Lord] i. e. in the whole Doctrin of the Holy Scriptures, that invariable rule of truth, as Irenæus rightly calleth it. He findeth reſt no where, Niſi in angulo cum libello, in a Nook with this Book, as Thomas à Kempis was wont to ſay, who alſo with his own hand wrote out the Bible. King Alphonſus read it over fourteen times, together with ſuch Commentaries as thoſe times afforded. Luther ſaid, hee would not live in Paradiſe without the Word, as with it he could live well enough in Hell. Magdalen Wife to D. Pareus, after ſhe was married, and forty years of age, out of love to the Scriptures learnt to read, and took ſuch delight in it, and eſpecially in the Pſalms, that ſhe gat them almoſt all by heart. Beza being above fourſcore years old, could ſay perfectly by heart any Greek Chap. in St. Pauls Epiſtles. Cranmer and Ridley had all the New Teſtament by heart; the former had learnt it in his journey to Rome, the latter in the Walks of Pembrook-Hall in Cambridge.

Act. & Mon.

And in his Law doth he meditate day and night]

Hoc

Hoc primus repetens opus, hoc postremus omittens; Having gathered with the Bees the sweet of those heavenly flowers, he doth by meditation work his Hony-comb within his Hive; and at this work he is perdius & pernox, till he feel it to become an ingrafted word, yea till he hath turned it in succum & sanguinem, and is after a sort transformed into it, 2 Cor. 3. 18. The Hebrew word Hagah here signifieth both to speak with the mouth, and with the heart, to read, and to meditate; because to read is not to run over a Chapter, as a Childe at School, but to muse upon the matter, and to make some benefit of it. It is storied of Pythagoras, that he lived in a Cave for a whole year together, that being sequestred from the society of men, he might the better meditate upon the abstruser parts of Philosophy; he used also with a thread to tye the hair of his head to a beam over him, that so when he did but nod by reason of sleep, he might be awakened thereby. Is not this check to our oscitancy and carelesness of searching the Scriptures, and making them our daily and nightly study? Hierom exhorted some godly women to whom he wrote, not to lay the Bible out of their hands, until being overcome with sleep, and not able any longer to hold up their heads, they bowed them down, as it were to salute the leaves below them with a kiss. Hier. Hier. ad Eu De custod Virgin.

Vers. 3. And he shall be like a tree] An Olive-tree, say some, from Psal. 52. 8. which is green all the year, saith Pliny; that in Noahs Flood kept its greenness though it had been so long time under the water; and is therefore made an Emblem of the Resurrection. Others will have it to be the Palm-tree, from Psa. 92. 12. which likewise is always green, and very fruitful. Plutarch saith, that the Babylonians make three hundred and sixty Commodities of it. The Tree whereon the Coquonuts grow in the Indies, is said to be such, as where-with alone a ship may be built, and furnished to Sea with Meat and Merchandize. Let it be what tree it will that is here meant, if Plato could say, that Man is a tree inverted, with the root above, and the branches below, and that he is φυτὸν οὐράνιον, an heavenly Plant, γεγενημένον ἐκ Διὸς ἔνθεν, as another hath it; Much more may we say so of a godly man, that Plant of renown, rooted in Christ, and fruited by the Spirit, of a right constitution, and righteous conversation, Gal. 5. 25. See Jer. 17. 8. Ezekiel 47. 12. Nat. Hist. li 16. cap. 20. Gen. 8. 11. Purch Pilgri v. 2. p. 1466 Plato. Homer.

Planted by the rivers of water] In locis irriguis, in moyst places, where most trees thrive best; understand it of those waters of the Sanctuary, Ezek. 47. 12. together with those never-failing influences of grace and consolation that are in him, as a Well of water bubling up to eternal life, Joh. 4. 14.

That bringeth forth his fruit in his season] There are no barren trees in Gods Orchard, and yet they may have their fits of barrenness, as an Apple-tree sometimes hath: but they will re-flourish with advantage, as those Philippians did, Chap. 4. 10. (see the Note there) and bear fruit in the right season, Nec præcocem nec serum. Now, every thing is beautiful in its season, Eccles. 5. 11. and it was no small shame to Achitophel, when it was told him by Hushai the Archite, Thy counsel is good, but not now, 2 Sam. 17. 7.

His leaf also shall not wither] Heb. fade, for want of sap or safety from Christ the root; but as the Olive or Palm-tree, Semper in suo genere viret vigetq; retaineth its green leaf, and hath for its Motto, Nec premor nec perimor; so doth the good Soul persevere and persist in the profession and practise of the truth, which is after godliness, Tit. 1. 1. Maugre the malice of Earth, and of Hell. Of Tylos an Indian Island Pliny and Austin say. That no tree therein growing doth at any time of the year lose their leaves. Certain it is, that saving faith cannot be lost altogether, though it may suffer some decays, Isa. 6. 13. Plin. l. 12. cap. 11. Aug. de C. lib. 21. cap.

And whatsoever he doth shall prosper] So Josh. 1. 7, 8. This, and the like Promises must be understood with an exception of the Cross, as need requireth, 1 Pet. 1. 6. Gain, his prosperity, that of the Soul I mean, he shall be sure of, Rom. 8. 28. 37. Temporal also, so far as may make for his eternal good. Pintus out of Pliny tells us, That the Palm-tree will not grow well in a fat ground, but in a light and sandy, and that if the soyl be strong and fertile, they must cast salt and ashes at the root to qualifie the strength of the ground. As Christ is the true Vine, so his Father is a good Husband-man, and knoweth well how to order his trees of righteousness: but usually Piety hath prosperity, an is profitable to all things, 1 Tim. 4. 8. And outward proſperity, if it follow cloſe walking with God, is very ſweet; as the Cypher when it followeth the Figure, addeth to the Number, though it be nothing in it ſelf.

Verſ. 4. The ungodly are not ſo] Not like any ſuch tree afore deſcribed, but rather like the Cypreſs-tree, which the more it is watered, is the leſs fruitful: or like the Cyparit-tree, whereof Pliny writeth, that it is good for nothing, no not for ſhew, ſhadow, or ſmell. Saint Jude ſaith, They are trees indeed, but ſuch as are twice dead, pulled up by the roots, verſ. 12. Twice dead they are ſaid to be, 1. Becauſe a Spiritual death is ſo great a death, that it may well go for two. 2 Becauſe thoſe ungodly ones were dead, both in regard of fruit and leaves, truth of grace, and any outward actings of grace. Their fruit, if any, is but Hedge-fruit, their leaves of formal profeſſion wither, and come to nothing; if they proſper in the World, (as Sigonius obſerveth of Pope Zachary that he dyed, Rebus non tàm piè quàm proſperè geſtis, Not over-pious, and yet very proſperous) it is that they may be cut down for ever, Pſal. 37. 2. ſuch a temporary proſperity, Plus deceptionis habet quàm delectationis, ſaith Lactantius, is more deceitful than delightful, and is therefore well called by Bernard, Miſericordia omni indignatione crudelior, a gift-leſs gift, &c.

But are like the chaff] Not ſo they are, but much worſe in many reſpects, as it is fit they ſhould be. God will ſurely ſet a difference, Mal. 3. ult. See the note there. A profane Souldier at the ſiege of a Town, paſſing a place of danger was heard ſwearing, and when one that ſtood by warned him, ſaying, Fellow Souldier, do not Swear, the bullets fly; he anſwered, They that ſwear come off as well as they that pray: But what came of it? Soon after a Shot hit him, and down he fell. The wicked is (as chaff) driven away in his wickedneſs: but the righteous hath hope in his death, Prov. 14. 32. The word here rendred Chaff, is Palea tenuiſſima & minutiſſimè contrita, chaff beaten to duſt, and therefore good for nothing, but apt to be whiffled up and down with every wind of Doctrine, with every puff of temptation. A good man is, as a tree, ſtedfaſt, and unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. ult. An evil man as chaff, light and worthleſs, Religionem habens Ephemeram, conſtant in nothing ſo much as in his inconſtancy, ſerves God by fits and ſtarts, flies in his face when afflicted, as chaff doth in the face of the Winnower; whiles the weightier Corn falls low at his feet. See Job 21. 18. Pſal. 55. 5. Hoſ. 13. 3. Mat. 3. 12. with the notes.

Verſ. 5. Therefore the ungodly ſhall not ſtand in the judgement] i. e. Cauſâ cadent & damnabuntur; at the Great Aſſizes they ſhall bee caſt and condemned. Revel. 6. 17. For the great day of his Wrath is come, and who ſhall be able to ſtand? If the righteous ſcarcely be ſaved, where ſhall the ungodly and the ſinner appear? 1 Pet. 4. 18. Surely no where, but in Hell, their own place, Acts 1. 25. not before God, for he is a conſuming fire, Heb. 12. ult. and they chaff, or ſtubble fully dried. See Iſa. 33. 14. Not before Chriſt, for he ſhall come in flaming fire rendring vengeance, &c. 2 Theſſ. 1. 7. not in Heaven, for it's an undefiled inheritance, neither may any dirty Dogge trample on that golden pavement, Revel. 22. 15. Not any longer on Earth, defiled by their iniquities, and therefore to bee purged by the fire of the laſt Day: for the earth alſo, and the works that are therein ſhall be burnt up, 2 Pet. 3. 10. R. David Kimchi by Judgement here, underſtandeth the day of the wicked mans death; and indeed his Deaths-day is his Doomeſday, when he muſt take a fearful farewell, and breath out his Soul and hope together with the breath of the ſame dying groan, Job. 27. 8. & 11. 20. Hinc illa Lachrymæ, hence that loth-to-depart, though ſome ſet a good face upon it when to dye, as Sir Thomas Moore, who dyed for the Popes Supremacy with a light jeſt in his mouth; Veſpaſian likewiſe dyed with a jeſt, and Auguſtus in a Complement. This was but the Hypocriſie of mirth: for Death is the King of terror to a Natural man. See Heb. 2. 15. 1 Sam. 15. 32. & 28. 20. Saul at the meſſage of death ſwooned quite away, and fell all along, Quantus quantus erat, as Peter Martyr phraſeth it; yea good Hezekiah wept when ſentenced to death, and the approach of it was to him Mar mar, bitter bitterneſs, Iſa. 38. 3. 17. he muſt have his faith at his fingers ends, as one ſaith, that will dye actively. But all men have not faith, 2 Theſſ. 3. 2. and thoſe few that have, are not always aſſured that their hearts ſhall live for ever, as Pſal. 22. 26. and that Death, the Devils Serjeant to drag wicked men to Hell, ſhall be to them the Lords Gentleman-uſher to conduct them to Heaven; as Mr. Brightman expreſſeth it.

Nor Sinners in the Congregation of the righteous] They ſhall never ſet foot within heavens Threſhold, within that general Aſſembly, that ſacred Panegyris, ample Amphitheatre, the Congregation-houſe of crowned Saints, and glorious Angels. Tertullian ſaith of Pompies Theatre (which was the greateſt ornament of old Rome) that it was Arx omnium turpitudinum, a receptacle of all kind of Ribaldry and Roguery. Not ſo Heaven; There ſhall in no wiſe enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatſoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lye, Rev. 21. 27. The Iriſh air will ſooner brook a Toad, or a Snake, than Heaven a Sinner. Mali in area nobiſcum eſſe poſſunt, in horreo non poſſunt, Chaff may be with Gods good Corn on the floor, but in the Garner it ſhall not. For Chriſt will throughly purge his floor, and gather his Wheat into the Garner, but will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire, Mat. 3. 12. Auguſtin.

Verſ. 6. For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous] Or, acknowledgeth, approveth, adminiſtreth, and ordereth all things to their eternal Salvation; as may appear by the oppoſition, wherein there is a Rhetorical Apoſiopeſis. Gods knowledge of men and their ways is not meerly Intuitive, but Approbative of the good, and Vindictive of the evil; ἔχει Θεὸς ἔκβυτον ὄμμα. His Providence (which is the carrying on of his Decree) is that helm which turns about the whole ſhip of the Univerſe with ſingular skill and juſtice. Dominus diligit, & dirigit viam, id eſt, vitam & omne inſtitutum juſtorum. See Pſal. 37. 18. & 142. 4. Nahum 1. 7. Prov. 2. 8. with the notes there. God knows the righteous by name, Exod. 33. 17. knows them for his own, looks upon them and their whole courſe with ſingular delight and complacency; they are his Hephzibah, Iſa. 62. 4. the dearly beloved of his Soul, Jer. 12. 7. Verba notitiæ apud Hebræos ſecum trahunt affectum.

But the way of the ungodly ſhall periſh] Their practices and perſons ſhall periſh together, be done away, be loſt for ever. And why? becauſe the Lord knoweth them not; unleſs it be for black Sheep, as we ſay, or rather for reprobate Goats, Mat. 25. Hence their Souls are flung out, as out of the middle of a ſling, when the Souls of the Saints are bound up in the bundle of life, with the Lord their God, 1 Sam. 25. 29.

PSAL. II.

Verſ. 1. WHy do the Heathen rage?] Why? or for what? The Pſalm beginneth abruptly, with an angry interrogation, q. d. What? are they mad to attempt ſuch things, as whereof they can neither give any good reaſon, nor expect any good effect? The Lord Chriſt of whom David was both a Father and a Figure, (as here appeareth) ſhall ſurely reign, maugre all the rage and reſiſtance of his enemies, who may ſeem to be ambitious of their own deſtruction, and are therefore in this Pſalm ſchooled, and counſelled to deſiſt. Nothing is more irrational than irreligion; Why do the Heathen tumultuouſly rage, or hurtle together, Fremunt & ferociunt? When the Philiſtines heard that David was made King in Hebron, they came up to ſeek him, and to unking him, 2 Sam. 5. 17. ſo the Heathen and People, that is, Gentiles and Jews would have dealt by Chriſt, Acts 4. 25, 26. The Devil ever ſince hee was caſt out of Heaven, tumultuateth, and keepeth ado; ſo do unruly ſpirits acted and agitated by him. Dan. 6. 15. Then thoſe men kept a ſtir with the King againſt Daniel; it is the ſame Hebrew word that is here, and poſſibly Daniels ſpirit might think of Davids terms. John 11. 33. Jeſus troubled himſelf, but after another manner than theſe his enemies; his paſſions were without mud, as clear water in a Chryſtal Glaſs; what was an act of power in Chriſt, is an act of weakneſs, if not of wickedneſs, in others. The Apoſtles Greek word for this in the text denoteth rage, pride, and fierceneſs, as of Horſes that Neigh, and ruſh into the Battel. ἐφρύαξαν, Acts 4. 25.

And the people imagine] Heb. meditate, or mutter a vain thing, an empty deſign, that ſhall come to nothing.

Niteris incaſſum Chriſti ſubmergere puppem:
Fluctuat, at nunquam mergitur illa ratis.

Dipt

Dipt may the Churches Ship be, but not drown'd;
Christ will not fail her enemies to confound.

Some think that by this, muttering people are meant, such as act not open outrages against Christ; but yet in words murmur and mutiny, whispering Treason.

Vers. 2. The Kings of the earth set themselves] Or, stand up, as if they would do the deed, and bear down all before them. The many had acted their part, vers. 1. and now the mighties shew themselves, but go off again with shame enough. The Spanish Frier used to say, there were but few Princes in Hell; and why? because there were but few in all. It was a poor comfort to our Henry 8. to bee told upon his Death-bed, That he was now going to the place of Kings. Some such there have been as proved nursing Fathers to the Church, and propagated the Kingdom of Christ in their Generations, Esa. 49. 33. but what a vain vaunt was that of those bloudy Tyrants in the Primitive times, who sounded the Triumph before-hand, and thus engraved the Victory upon pillars of Marble, Nomine Christianorum deleto qui Remp. evertebant? What was all this, but a blaze before their last Light went out? or like some bulging wall that was swoln immediatly before it fell? have any ever yet waxed fierce against Christ and prospered? Job 9. 4.

And the Rulers take counsel together] Or, have laid their foundation: for counsel is to action, saith Aben-Ezra here, the same that the foundation is to a building. The Chaldee hath it, they consociate to rebel before the Lord, and to fight against his Annoynted. But with what success, see Isa. 8. 9, 10. Immanuel will over-match them.

Syncretismum ineunt, & quasi se fundant consiliis suis, &c.

Vers. 3. Let us break their bands asunder, &c.) Here these Rebels are brought in, proclaming their treasonable Decrees against Christ, and his adherents, who seek to promote his Kingdom. Resolved they were to run riot, as lawless and awless, and therefore they slander the sweet Laws of Christs Kingdom, as bonds and thick cords (those signs of slavery, Jer. 27. 2, 6, 7.) as burdens, and grievances. So the Popish Clergy of Collen told their good Arch-Bishop Albert (who had made use of Bucer and Melanchthon to bring things into better order) that they had rather live under the Turkish Government, than under such a Reformation. But what saith our Saviour? My yoke is ease, and my burthen light: No more burthen it is to a regenerate person, than the wings are to the Bird. He delighteth in the Law of God after the inward man, Rom. 7. It is not to him now, as once, bands and cords, but as Girdles and Garters, which gird up his loyns, and expedite his course the better. It confineth him to live in that element where he would live; as if one should be confined to Paradise, where he would be, though there were no such Law.

Vers. 4. He that sitteth in the Heavens shall laugh at them] Videt, videt: He seeth and smileth, he looketh and laugheth at these Giants. Hee sitteth in Heaven far above their reach; neither doth he much trouble himself about the matter. No more should we; but trust in him, and know that there is a Council in Heaven that will dash the mould of all contrary Counsels upon Earth; as the stone cut out of the Mountain did the Four great Monarchies, Dan. 2. 34. See an instance hereof in latter times. Luther, that Heroical Reformer was Excommunicated by the Pope, proscribed by the Emperour, hated and cursed all Christendom over almost, yet he prospered, and the Work of Christ went on in his hands. And when the Elector of Saxony (his only Patron) was much afraid what would become of him, and of the business of Religion, Luther out of his Pathmus (as he called it) where he lay hid, writeth him a rousing Letter, wherein is read this among many other brave passages; Sciat Celsitudo tua & nihil dubitet longè aliter in cœlo quàm Noriberga de hoc negotio conclusum est, Let your Highness rest well assured of this, that things are far otherwise carried, and concluded of in Heaven, than they are at the Imperial Diet held at Norinberg. After this, in the year of Grace, one thousand five hundred twenty six, there conspired against the Gospel, and the Professors thereof, the Emperour and his Prisoner in Spain, the French King, the Princes also, and Bishops in Germany, stirred up by the Pope. The French King was set at liberty, upon condition to joyn with the Emperour to root out Lutheranism, that is, true Religion. This was the agreement, but God brake it; for the French King

King was no ſooner come home, but he made a League with the Pope, and the Venetians, againſt the Emperour. The Pope excuſeth his falling off from Cæſar by a petulant and malapert Epiſtle. Cæſar by another Letter lays open to the World the Popes perfidy, exhorting him to peace, and concluding, that they had more need to unite their Forces for the extirpation of Lutheran Hereſie, &c. By this means the Church had an happy Halcyon, whiles theſe great ones were out, and at it.

The Lord will have them in deriſion] Adonai, that is, the ſuſtainer and upholder of all. Chriſt is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, Rev. 19. 16. Lords and Loſels are all his vaſſals and underlings, as Conſtantine, Theodoſius, and Valentine, thoſe great Emperours called themſelves. This Name or Stile Chriſt hath written on his Veſture, that all may ſee it, and on his Thigh, where hangs his Sword; to ſhew his abſolute Dominion, his illimited Empire, got and held out of the hands of his enemies, with his Sword, and with his Bow, as Gen. 48. 22. And when he is ſaid to deride them, this is more than to laugh at them, as the following effects ſhew.

Verſ. 5. Then ſhall he ſpeak unto them, &c.] Heb. He ſhall tell them, viz. a peece of his minde, to their ſmall comfort. As a great Prince ſitting on a lofty Throne, rateth his Rebels when once he hath brought them before him, and pronounceth ſentence upon them in fierce wrath. See Jer. 52. 9. ſo will the King of Heaven do by his ſturdy refractories. Whether he will ſpeak unto them by his words, or by his rods, Job 33. 14, 19, 20, 21. and when he will do it, he hath reſerved in his own power and pleaſure, Acts 1. 7. but ſooner or later he will not fail to do it; and Pœna venit gravior, quò magè ſera venit.

And vex them] Or trouble them, as he did the Babel-builders, Pharaoh, Sennacherib, others: Either by horror of Conſcience, or corporal Plagues, one way or other he will have his penny-worths of them, as he had of the old and late Perſecutors of his people.

Verſ. 6. Yet have I ſet my King] Heb. And I have ſet, Heb. I have anointed; where the ſign of his inauguration, or entrance into his Kingdom, is put for the poſſeſſion and injoying thereof. David was anointed by Gods appointment: Chriſt was alſo annointed and appointed by his Father, to the Office and work of a Mediator; and is therefore here called his King. And, is here a ſign of indignation ſtirred.

Upon mine holy hill of Zion] Davids ſtrong Hold, and a Figure of the Church; Heb. 12. 22. Rev. 14. 1. Iſa. 60. 14. as being the Seat of the Kingdom and Sanctuary. Out of Zion alſo went forth the Law; and the Word of the Lord out of Jeruſalem, Iſa. 2. 3. it ſignifieth a Watch-tower: In the Church Chriſt, Angels, Miniſters, common Chriſtians, watch againſt enemies viſible and inviſible.

Verſ. 7. I wil declare the decree] that irrevocable decree of the Father, for the ſetting up of his Sons Scepter contra gentes, point blank oppoſite to that decree of theirs, verſ. 3. This Ordinance or Decree of his, Chriſt is ſtill declaring in his Church by the Miniſters of the Goſpel, whoſe Office it is to ſet forth Chriſt to the world in all his Offices and Efficacies, and to bring as many as may be to the obedience of the faith.

Thou art my Son] David was ſo by Adoption, and Acceptation, Pſal. 89. 26, 27. But Chriſt, 1 By eternal generation; Prov. 8. Heb. 1. 5. 2 By hypoſtatical union, and ſo God had one only Son (as Abraham had his Iſaac) though otherwiſe he were the Father of many Nations.

This day have I begotten thee] Underſtand it either of the day of Eternity, or elſe of the fulneſs of time wherein God brought his firſt begotten Son into the world, and afterwards mightily declared him to be the Son of God by the Reſurrection from the dead, Rom. 1. 3. Acts 13. 33. whence he is called the firſt begotten of the dead, Col. 1. 18. Rev. 1. 5.

Verſ. 8. Ask of me, and I will give thee] All things were conveyed to Chriſt by asking: Shall we think to have any thing without asking? Or, are we not worthily miſerable that will not make our ſelves happy by asking? Now, through Chriſts Paſſion, and Interceſſion, it is but ask and have: Open thy mouth, and I will fill it. If at any time we ask and miſs, it is for moſt part becauſe we ask amiſs,

The Heathen for thine inheritance] The Kingdom of Grace, (the object whereof are all Nations) Chriſt hath by Donation from his Father: for his Natural Kingdom he hath as God coæqual with his Father from all eternity.

Thou ſhalt roughly rule them. Ainſw:

Verſ. 9. Thou ſhalt break them, &c.] ſc. thoſe that will not bend, thou ſhalt thus break. Chriſts gracious Government of his obedient people, though not ſo fully expreſſed here, yet is to be neceſſarily underſtood; and in the laſt words of the Pſalm it is plainly held forth, Bleſſed are all they that truſt in him.

Thou ſhalt daſh them in peeces (or, ſcatter them abroad, being already broken) as a Potters veſſel] i. e. without any hope of repair and recovery. It is a fearful thing to fall into the puniſhing hands of the living God, Heb. 10. He that will not be warned in hearing, ſhall be cruſht to peeces in feeling, ſaid that Martyr, Aut faciendum aut patiendum, God will be obeyed either actively, or paſſively. Look to it.

Verſ. 10. Be wiſe now therefore O yee Kings] Redeem your own ſorrows, by trembling at Gods Judgements, whiles they hang in the threatnings: this is an high point of heavenly wiſdom.

Ergo Dei tandem verbo ſubſcribite reges:
Ne rapiant Stygiæ vos Acherontis aquæ.

Theſe Kings were not without wit and learning; Julian the Apoſtate for inſtance (who ſaid unto the King Chriſt, Apoſtato) but they wanted godly Wiſdom, and are therefore here called upon to behave themſelves prudently, and to play the wiſe men. For as wicked men are fools in print: ſo on the contrary, in our old Engliſh Books, a righteous man is printed a right wiſe man, and righteouſneſs right-wiſeneſs. For it is the only true both Wiſdom, Pſal. 111. 10. Prov. 1. 7. and Honour, for the righteous are Princes in all Lands, Pſal. 45. 16. yea they are Kings. Compare Mat. 13. 17. with Luke 10. 25. Many righteous, ſaith the one, many Kings, ſaith the other Evangeliſt.

Be inſtructed yee Judges] Be nurtured yee Sages; ſubmit to Chriſts Diſcipline, acknowledge his Prophetical Office here, his Prieſtly, verſ. 11. his Kingly, v. 12. Eſtote ligati, ſo Aben-Ezra rendreth it, Be yee bound, in oppoſition to that evil decree of theirs, verſ. 3. Let us break their bonds, &c. And this they are adviſed to do forth-with, while it is called to day, Now therefore, before God the Father vex you, God the Son bruiſe you, with his Iron mace.

Verſ. 11. Serve the Lord with fear] Timore non ſervili ſed amicali, with reverence and godly fear, Heb. 12. 28. Say to Chriſt as the people did to Joſhua, chap. 1. 16. and as the Rulers and Elders of Iſrael did to Jehu, 2 King. 10. 5. We are thy ſervants, and will do all that thou ſhalt bid us.

And rejoyce before him with trembling] A ſtrange mixture of contrary paſſions, (for baſe fear hath torment, 1 Joh. 4. 18.) but ſuch as is uſual with Gods Servants, whoſe task it is to work out their ſalvation with fear and trembling, Phil. 2. 12. Agreeable whereunto is that of Bernard, Lati ſimus ſed non ſecuri: gaudentes in Domino ſed caventes à recidivo. Thoſe good women went from Chriſts Sepulcher with fear and great joy. We ſhould come to him in his Ordinances, like affected.

Verſ. 12. Kiſs the Son] That Son of God, verſ. 7. Bar is an Hebrew word alſo; (ſee Prov. 31. 2.) as R. Abraham confeſſeth, though other Rabbins deny it; and therefore render this text. Oſculamini purè, Kiſs purely, and Oſculamini eum qui ſelectus eſt, Kiſs him who is ſelected, or ſet apart: Chriſt is Gods elect, Iſa. 42. 1. Mat. 12. 14. Him men muſt kiſs with a kiſs of adoration and ſubjection, with a kiſs of faith and love, 1 Pet. 5. 14. Kiſs his holy Wounds, as Conſtantine did the Eye of Paphnutius, that was bored out in Maximinus the Tyrants time; ſo ſhall hee kiſs us with the kiſſes of his mouth, Cant. 1. 1. and with his kiſſes ſuck out the ſting of death, and take away our ſouls with a kiſs, as the Rabbins from Deut. 34. 5. ſay he did Moſes his ſoul. The ancient Patriarks ſaluted Chriſt afar off, and were interchangeably ſaluted by him, Heb. 11. 13. for they ſaw by faith him who is inviſible, verſ. 27. O get a Patriarks eye, ſtudy Moſes his Opticks: for here the Northern Proverb is found true, Unkent unkiſt. Men know not the Son of God, and therefore love him not, kiſs him not, unleſs it be Oſculo Iſcariotico, as the Traitor kiſſed him: See a lofty and lively deſcription of him, Heb. 1, 2, 3.

Oſculo homagii, ut Samuel kiſſed Saul. 1 Sam. 10. Gen. 41; 40. Euſeb. Mortuus eſt Moſes ad os Jehovæ. Maimonides. ἀσπασάμενοι

Leſt

Leſt he be angry] For meek though he be as a Lamb, and will not break the bruiſed Reed; yet ſo angry he can be, that the Kings and great ones ſhall be glad to flee from the wrath of this Lamb, Rev. 6. who hath feet like burning braſs, and eyes like flaming fire, Rev. 1. Plato ſaith of the King of Bees, that although he hath no ſting, yet he ruleth and governeth his Common-wealth with great ſeverity and juſtice: So doth the Lord Chriſt; and every good Soul is ready to ſay as the Poet did,

Ut mala nulla feram niſi nudam Cæſaris iram, Nuda parùm nobis Cæſaris ira mali eſt? Ovid.

And yee periſh from the way] Or, in the way, that is in medio ſtadio, before yee come to your Journies end, to the full accompliſhment of your purpoſes and practices, deſtruction ſhall ſuddenly ſeize you, 1 Theſſ. 5. 3.

When his wrath is kindled but a little] It is ſometimes let out in minnums, as Hoſ. 5. 12. but if timely courſe be not taken it grows to a great matter, as Thunder doth, and as Fire, that at firſt burns a little within upon a few boards, but if not quenched, burſteth out in a moſt terrible flame.

Bleſſed are all they that put their truſt in him] That is, in Chriſt, Joh. 14. 1. Now to truſt in him, is ſo to be unbottom'd of thy ſelf, and of every Creature, and ſo to lean upon Chriſt, that if he fail thee, thou ſinkeſt: it is to relye upon him alone for ſafety here, and Salvation hereafter. This, this is to ſecure a mans title to true Bleſſedneſs; and with this grave ſentence the Prophet ſhutteth up the whole Pſalm, ſhewing the different condition of the godly from the wicked. See the Note on verſ. 9.

PSAL. III.

A Pſalm of David] Tremellius addeth, Quem cecinit, which he ſang when hee fled, &c. As Birds in the Spring, tune moſt ſweetly, when it rains moſt ſadly. This was better yet, than that black Sanctis (as they call it) ſung by our Henry 2. in like caſe, and for like cauſe. For when, as ſome few hours before he dyed, he ſaw a Liſt of their names who conſpired with the King of France, and Earl Richard, (his Son and Succeſſor) againſt him, and found therein his Son John (whom he had made Earl of Cornwell, Dorſet, Sommerſet, Nottingham, Darby, and Lancaſter, &c.) to be the firſt: he fell into a grievous paſſion, both curſing his Sons, and the day wherein himſelf was born; and in that diſtempetature departed the world, which ſo often himſelf had diſtempered. Dan. Hiſt. 112

When he fled from] Heb. from the face of Abſolom, which he had too much admired, and was now afraid of. Then when he went up Mount Olivet weeping, 2 Sam. 15. 30. made he this Pſalm, ſay the Rabbins. So in the Sack of Ziglag, he comforted himſelf in the Lord his God, 1 Sam. 30. 6. A Chriſtian is never without his Cordial. Midraſh Tillim

Abſalom his Son] his Darling, his Tidling, his one Eye. Such another good Son was Barabbas, which ſignifies His Fathers Son, his white Boy, as we ſay, like as Abſalom ſignifieth his Fathers peace, but it proved otherwiſe: as it likewiſe befell Eve, when ſhe called her firſt-born Cain, and thought ſhe had got a great boon from the Lord. But Fallitur augurio ſpes bona ſæpe ſuo.

David was diſappointed: for Abſalom proved like the Sea Pacifick, or calm, ſo it is called; but Captain Drake found it rough and troubleous above meaſure. Abſalom would have done by David, if he could have come at him, as afterwards Amidas did with his Father Muleaſſes King of Tunes in Africk, whom he firſt dethroned, and afterwards put out his eyes. In Abſalom was nothing good but his name; That may have a good name, the nature whereof is ſo ill, that it is not to be named: like as Levit. 20. 17. abominable. Inceſt between Brother and Siſter is called Choſed, or Kindneſs, per Antiphraſin. Heyl. Geog. Turk. Hiſt.

Verſ. 1. Lord, how are they increaſed that trouble me?] He worthily wondreth at ſo ſudden a change:

Omnia ſunt hominum tenui pendentia filo:
Et ſubito caſu, quæ valuere, ruunt.

David was deſerted by all almoſt, and had now as many enemies as till now he had ſubjects, excepting a few that ſtuck to him. Our Hen. 6. who had been the moſt Potent Monarch for Dominions that ever England had, was, when depoſed, not the maſter of a Mole-hil: and ſerved to ſhew that mortality was but the ſtage of mutability.

Many are they that riſe up againſt me] Many, and many; by the Figure Anaphora: here is alſo in the Original an ὁμοιοτέλευτον in the words, Tſarai in the former clauſe, and Gnalai in the latter: not unlike that doleful ditty of the Church, Lam. 5. 16. Oi na lanu, chei chatanu, Wo to us that we have ſinned: which is ſo elegant in the Original, that Mr. Will. Whately of Banbury (who uſed to bee very plain in his preaching, and not to name a Greek, Latine, or Hebrew word) quoted it once in the Hebrew, as an Hearer of his relateth.

Mr. Leigh Saints encou. Ep. dedic.

Verſ. 2. Many there be which ſay of my ſoul] Theſe ſcoffs and ſarcaſmes Leniter volant, non leniter violant. David felt them as a murthering weapon in his bones, Pſal. 42. 3. 10. and oft complaineth of them to God, Qui ſatis ideneus eſt patientiæ ſequeſter, as Tertullian phraſeth it, who will ſee that his Saints ſhall loſe nothing by their patience.

De patient. cap. 15.

There is no help for him in God] Salvation it ſelf cannot ſave him: he is at that paſs, that there is neither hope of better for him, nor place of worſe: there is no help, health, or deliverance for him at all. The Hebrew hath a letter more than ordinary, to increaſe the ſignification. R. David rendreth it, Nullum auxilium, nullum auxilium, there is no help, there is no help for him: and interpreteth it, neither in this world, nor in the world to come. Thus haply his enemies argued from his ſin in the matter of Uriah; concluding that God would not look at him therefore. But for that matter, he had ſoundly repented, and made his peace, 2 Sam. 12, 13. & Pſal. 51. 1, 2. though this preſent conſpiracy, and the trouble thereupon (which laſted ſix Months, ſaith Hierom) was a part of the temporal puniſhment of that ſcandalous ſin, 2 Sam. 12. 10. But that it lay not upon his Conſcience, it appeareth, in that on his Death-bed he regrateth it not, as he did his not puniſhing of Joab and Shimei; concerning whom he therefore leaveth his charge with his Son Salomon, 1 King. 2. 5, 8.

Ex tradit. Hebræor.

Selah] i. e. In truth, or Amen, ſaith Aben-Ezra. The Hebrews at this day accordingly adde to the end of their Prayers and Epitaphs, Amen, Selah, twice or thrice repeated. The Greek maketh it only a Muſical Notion.

Verſ. 3. But thou O Lord art a Shield for me] And ſuch a Shield as will never fail me: Prodemte clypeo vulneratus ſum, I am betrayed by my Shield, ſaid Braſidas the Lacedæmonian, when he was wounded through it. David had a better Shield than ſo: better then that of Ajax, in Homer, which was ἑπτάβοειον; better than that of Demoſthenes, whereupon was written, Quod felix faustumq; ſit; better than that of Sceva at the ſiege of Dyrrachium, wherewith he ſo long reſiſted Pompeys Army, that he had two hundred and twenty Darts ſticking in it. -- Denſumq; tulit in pectore ſylvam. God was to David a Shield round about him, as the Hebrew here hath it: and not a Shield only, but a Sun too, as Pſal. 84. 11. Hence it followeth,

My Glory] Or, my Victory, Quia victor ſemper habet gloriam, ſaith Aben-Ezra here, becauſe a Conquerour is never without glory: ſuch as was Cæſar with his Veni, vidi, vici; and Cimon the Athenian, who twice in one day triumphed over the Perſian Navie; and Huniades, who fought five times in one day with the Turks, and five times foyled them, and put them to flight. Whereupon he was entertained, and welcomed home with moſt glorious acclamations of the people, ſome calling him the Father, ſome the Defender of his Country: the Souldiers their invincible General, the Captives their Deliverer, the Women their Protector, the Young-men and Children their moſt loving Father, &c.

And the lifter up of my head] Giving me matter of mirth, and making me who was very ſad, and thrown down with grief, joyful and cheerful. See Gen. 40. 13, 20. Luk. 21. 28. Jer. 52. 31. Pſal. 110. 7.

Verſ. 4. I cried unto the Lord with my voyce] I prayed aloud, and luſtily; I rouſed rouſed up my ſelf, and wraſtled with God: and this was the ground of his courage, and confidence. So Eſter, when ſhe had faſted and prayed, put her life in her hands, and was fearleſs. So Chriſt, when being in an Agony, hee had prayed more earneſtly, went and met his enemies in the face; though before his Soul was heavie to the death, and he began to be out of the world, as the word ſignifieth, Matth. 26. 37. ἀδημονεῖν

And he heard me out of his holy hill] i. e. è ſuo ſacrario & cæleſti & terreſtri, out of his heavenly and earthly Sanctuary. Zion ſignifieth a Sure-hold, a goodly Proſpect; for that, from the top of that Hil a man might have ſeen all the Country over. And it was a type of Heaven, whence God ſeeth all, and heareth his. Lucian the Atheiſt feigneth, or fancieth, that there are certain chinks in Heaven, through which Jupiter at certain times only heareth his Suters: which times they who take not, pray to no purpoſe. Jun.

Verſ. 5. I laid me down and ſlept] My faith was above my fear: I knew whom I had truſted. No marvel I ſlept ſo ſoundly, ſeeing Antipater was by, and watched; ſaid Philip of Macedon. We may better ſay ſo of Antipater our gracious Father. O the ſafety of a Saint! He ever goes guarded with the peace of God within him, and the power of God without him, Phil. 4. 7. 1 Pet. 1. 5. and hence his Spiritual ſecurity. David will never break his ſleep for any danger, or doubt of ſucceſs. Peter was found faſt aſleep the night before he ſhould have been executed, Acts 12. 6. So was our Proto-Martyr in Queen Maries days, Mr. Rogers; in ſo much as that, ſcarce with much ſhogging, could he be awaked, when he was called for to be burned. Some few years ſince, Mr. White of Dorcheſter, being a Member of the Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtminſter, was appointed Miniſter of Lambeth; but for the preſent could get no convenient houſe to dwell in, but one that was poſſeſſed by the Devil. This he took; and not long after, his Maid ſitting up late, the Devil appeared to her: whereupon in a great fright ſhe ran up to tell her Maſter; he bad her get to bed, ſaying, ſhe was well ſerved for ſitting up ſo late. Preſently after the Devil appeared to Mr. White himſelf, ſtanding at his beds feet. To whom Maſter White ſaid, If thou haſt nothing elſe to do thou maiſt ſtand there ſtill, and I will betake my ſelf to my reſt: And accordingly compoſing himſelf to ſleep, the Devil vaniſhed. Plutarch. Mirrour for Saints, by Mr. Clark, 460.

I awaked] A Proverbial ſpeech, as Mar. 4. 27. Tamerlan could not ſleep at all through care (though he indeavoured it) the night before the mortal battel between him and Bajazet. Turk. Hiſt. 218.

For the Lord ſuſtained me] Heb. Will ſuſtaine me. He hath done it, and I doubt not, but he will do it again: Experience breedeth confidence. He hath, he will, is an ordinary Scripture medium.

Verſ. 6. I will not be afraid of ten thouſands of people, &c.] Quomodo timeret hominem homo in ſinu Dei poſitus? ſaith an Ancient. See here in David the triumph of truſt in God. David looketh not downward on the ruſhing and roaring ſtreams of troubles that ran ſo ſwiftly under him, for that would have made him giddy; but ſtedfaſtly faſtneth on the power and promiſe of God All-ſufficient, and is confident. This, the world wondreth at; but little do they know the force of faith, nor the privie armour of proof that the Saints have about their hearts. Achilles was ſaid to be ſafe, becauſe Styge armatus: A Chriſtian is Deo armatus, and therefore hee walketh about the world as a Conquerour. Gloriatio fidei elegantiſſima. Jun.

Verſ. 7. Ariſe, O Lord, &c.] If the Lord do but ariſe only, his enemies ſhall be ſcattered; thoſe alſo that hate him ſhall flee before him, Pſal. 68. 1. And God will ariſe and harneſs, when his people put his promiſes in ſute by their faithful prayers. This Moſes knew, and therefore appointed the Prieſts, whenſoever the Ark removed, to ſay, Riſe up Lord, &c. Numb. 10. 35. Commanders muſt pray before they lead on their forces to battel, as did Hunniades, and that late brave King of Sweden, more addicted to pray than to fight; according to that,

Vincere quiſquis aves hoſtilem exercitum, agè antè
Invictum, vincas per tua vota, Deum.

Save me, O my God] David had many good old Souldiers about him, as the Cherethites, Pelethites, Gittites, and others that would ſtick to him —— Animoſq; capaces 2 Sam. 15. 18. Lucan.

capaces mortis, mighty men of War, and chafed in their mindes, as a Bear robbed of her Whelps in the field; himſelf alſo was a man of Warre from his youth, 2 Sam. 17. 8. and not uſed to be worſted; yet he flies to God for deliverance, and pleads the Covenant (Save me, O my God) which is that Alvearium Divini mellis, the Beehive of heavenly honey. So Pſal. 119. 94. I am thine, ſave me.

For thou haſt ſmitten all mine enemies on the cheek-bone] Thou haſt given them a box on the ear, as Queen Elizabeth once did the Earl of Eſſex, turning his back upon her uncivilly, upon ſome diſcontent: Or, as ſome great man doth a mean fellow, with whom he ſcorns to fight. Thou haſt ſent them away with ſmart and ſhame enough, Job 16. 10. Thou haſt ſo handled them that now they may go ſeek their teeth in their throats, as the Proverb is. Gods hand is a mighty hand, ſaith Peter, 1 Epiſt. 5. 6. it is a fearful thing to fall into it, ſaith Paul, Heb. 10. 31. For who knoweth the power of his wrath, ſaith Moſes, Pſal. 90. 11? Verſ. 8. Salvation belongeth unto the Lord] Here is much in few. Fulgentius ſaith, that the moſt golden ſentence is ever meaſured by brevity, and ſuavity. Brevis & ſuavis, planeq; aurea eſt hæc ſententia. Salvation in the full extent of it (and it is very comprehenſive) is of the Lord. It properly denoteth the privative part of mans happineſs, freedom from evils and enemies of all ſorts. But it importeth the poſitive part alſo, fruition of all good: and all is from the Lord, he alone is the chief efficient, and Author of all, the true Soſpitator, the ὁ σωτὴρ which ſaith Tully, is a word ſo emphatical, that other Tongues can hardly finde another word fit to expreſs it. See the Note on Jon. 2. 9.

Act. 4 in Verr.

Thy bleſſing is upon thy people. Selah] Or (prayer-wiſe) Let thy bleſſing be upon thy people: Etiam qui imprudenter ad Abſalomum deſciverat, even upon thoſe alſo who have fooliſhly taken part with Abſalom againſt me (thus David prays for his Rebels, as Chriſt and Stephen afterwards did for their Perſecutors and Murtherers) but eſpecially upon thoſe that do yet adhere unto me, and are ſhortly to fight for me. David knew that victory is of the Lord, and muſt be got by prayer. For it Queen Elizabeth could ſay, Cui adhæreo præeſt, He whoſe part I take ſhall get the better, how much more may the Lord of Hoſts ſay ſo? This, the people alſo knew and therefore perſwaded David not to venture his perſon amongſt them in the Field, but to ſtay at home and pray for them, 2 Sam. 18. 3. It is better, ſay they, that thou ſuccour us out of the City: thence ſhalt thou help us, or cauſe us to be helped; that is, thy prayers ſhall prevail with God for our aſſiſtance, as the Rabbins ſenſe that text.

1 Chro. 25. 1, 2.

TO the chief Muſician] Or, to the moſt excellent Muſick-maſter, to the chief Chaunter Aſaph, was this, and ſome other Pſalms, committed; that they might be ſung in the beſt manner, and with greateſt care. So Alexander on his Death-bed left his Kingdom τῷ κρατίστῳ, Optimatium optimo, to him that ſhould be the beſt of the beſt. Ἀεὶν ἀριστεύειν was Tully's Motto, that is, ſtrive to excel others, to crop off the very top of all vertues, as Scipio is ſaid to have done; to be beſt at any thing, to be careful to excel in good works, Tit. 3. 8. and to bear away the bell, as we ſay, in whatſoever a man undertaketh.

Πρέπειν ἀρετῶν κόρυφας ἐπὸ πασῶν. Hoc jamdiu conſecutus eſt Roſcius, ut in ſuo quiſq; artificio excelleret in ſuo genere Roſcius haberetur. Cic. de Orat.

On Neginoth] i. e. Inſtrumenta pulſatilia, ſtringed Inſtruments, ſuch as are to bee touched, or plaid upon with the hand. Lord, ſaith Nazianzen, I am an Inſtrument for thee to touch. Let us lay our ſelves open to the Spirits touch; and ſo make muſick.

Verſ. 1. Hear me when I call, O God of my righteouſneſs] that is, O thou righteous Judge of my righteous Cauſe, and of my good Conſcience. David ſpeaketh firſt to God, and then to men: This is the right method. Wee therefore ſpeak no better better to men, becauſe no more to God. It is ſaid of Charls the Fifth, that he ſpent more words with God than with men. When we are vilified, and derigrated by others, as David here was, let us make God acquainted with our condition, by his example. But why doth David beg audience, and mercy, in general only, and not lay open to God his particular grievances? Surely becauſe he looked upon the favour of God as a complexive bleſſing, that perfectly comprehendeth all the reſt; as Manna is ſaid to have had all good taſts in it. For particulars, David was content to be at Gods diſpoſe. I humbly beſeech thee, that I may finde grace in thy ſight, my Lord, O King, ſaid that falſe Ziba to David, 2 Sam. 16. 4. q. d. I had rather have the Kings favour than Mephiboſheths Lands. David really had rather have Gods love and favour than all this worlds good: and therefore ſo heartily beggeth it above any thing.

Thou haſt inlarged me when I was in diſtreſs] Heb. Thou haſt made roomth for me. Hoc autem in Prophetia dictum eſt, ſaith R. David. This was Prophetically ſpoken. Thou haſt, that is, thou wilt enlarge me who am now in diſtreſs. God will ſurely be neareſt unto his in their greateſt ſtraights: and becauſe they have made him the God of their Mountains, he will be the God of their valleys alſo.

Verſ. 2. O yee ſons of men] Yee Grandees, Pſal. 49 3. who think to carry all before you with thoſe big looks, and bubbles of words; yee who are potent at Court, and therefore inſolent above meaſure. David having poured out his heart to God in prayer, takes heart of grace thus freely to beſpeak theſe great ones his enemies.

How long will yee turn my glory into ſhame?] i. e. attempt to put me beſide the Kingdom, whereunto God hath deſigned and deſtined me? You think, belike, to jeer me out of my right, and by caſting upon me Cart-loads of Calumnies, and contumelies, to make me deſiſt, and hang up my hopes. But it is otherwiſe, beleeve it, Pſal. 14. 6, 7. yee have ſhamed the counſel of the poor, becauſe the Lord is his refuge. But will he therefore give over praying? No, for in the next words he falls on, and ſays, O that the Salvation of Iſrael were come out of Zion, &c.

How long will yee love vanity? &c.] i. e. trouble your ſelves to no purpoſe, whiles yee plot, and plow miſchief to him who is bleſſed, and ſhall be bleſſed, ingratiis veſtris? you love, you ſeek: that is, you both inwardly affect wickedneſs, and outwardly act it; but all in vain.

Verſ. 3. But know that the Lord hath ſet apart him that is godly] Quod ſeparatum aſſeruerit, that God hath deſtined mine head to the Diadem of the Kingdom, and therefore it ſhall not be in your power to hinder me: Sith voluntas Dei, neceſſitas Rei, and this I would have you to know, and reſt aſſured of. Let us be no leſs confident of the Crown of Glory, Luke 12. 32. Fear not little flock, for it is your Fathers good pleaſure to give you a kingdom. And 2 Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of God abideth ſure, having this double ſeal, i. e. The Lord (for his part) knoweth who are his; and we, for our parts may know, that if we but name the name of the Lord in prayer, and depart from evil, we ſhall certainly be ſaved.

The Lord will hear when I call unto him] Being that I am a godly man, a gracious Saint, one that have obtained mercy, and am thereby made merciful to others, (for ſo much the word ſignifieth) I doubt not of audience and acceptance in Heaven. God regards not the prayer, if the perſon be not right. For Witches ſome plead, that they uſe good prayers: in anſwer whereunto one ſaith well, Si magicæ, Deus non vult tales: ſi pia, non per tales. God heareth not good prayers from a bad man; as that State in ſtory would not hear a good motion from an ill mouth: or, as wee cannot indure to hear ſweet words from a ſtinking breath. The bloud of a Swine might not be offered in Sacrifices, though better to look upon than the bloud of a Sheep.

Verſ. 4. Stand in awe and ſin not] Be ſtirred, or commoved, or troubled. Tremble and ſin not. But now adays the Word and the World too is altered; for men ſin and tremble not; being arrived at that dead and dedolent diſpoſition of thoſe Heathens who were paſt feeling, Epheſ. 4. 18, 19. St. Paul rather alludeth to this text, Eph. 4. 6. than citeth it, as ſome think.

Commune with your own heart upon your bed] Adviſe with your Pillow what you have to do in a buſineſs ſo important, as the practice of Repentance, whereunto I am now exhorting you. Here then examine your ſelves, prove your own ſelves, as 2 Cor. 13. 5. Sift you, ſift you, Zeph. 2. 1. Recoil, turn ſhort again upon your ſelves, thruſt your hands into your boſoms, as Moſes did, and took it out again Leprous, white as ſnow. Take a review of your hearts and lives, converſe with your ſelves; a wiſe man can never want with whom to diſcourſe, though he be alone. But as it is a ſign that there are great diſtempers in that Family where Huſband and Wife go divers days together, and ſpeak not the one to the other: ſo in that Soul that flyeth from it ſelf, and can go long without Self-examination. A good mans buſineſs lieth moſt within doors, and he taketh the fitteſt time (night or day) for the better diſpatch of it, though thereby he abridge himſelf of his Natural reſt. Mr. Bradford, the young Lord Harrington, and ſundry others, kept Journals, or Day-books, and oft read them over, for an help to Humiliation.

And be ſtill, Selah] Or, make a pauſe, dwell upon the work of ſelf-examination till you have made ſomewhat of it, till you have driven it up to a Reformation; as Lam. 3. 39, 40. Let us try, and turn. The word ſignifieth Be dumb; and hereupon all our Silentiaries have founded their ſuperſtitious opinions and practices; ſuch as were thoſe old Monks of Egypt, who ſaith Caſſian, were umbrarum more ſilentes & ἄλαλοι as ſpeechleſs as Ghoſts. So the Carthuſian Monks at this day, who ſpeak together but once a week. Some kind of Anabaptiſts alſo will not ſpeak a word to any, but thoſe of their own Sect.

Verſ. 5. Offer the ſacrifices of righteouſneſs] Confeſs your ſins, and ſlay them; run to him who is the propitiation, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous, preſent your bodies a living Sacrifice, bring a contrite ſpirit; to do good, and to communicate forget not, &c. elſe you offer the ſacrifice of fools, as Eccleſ. 5. 1. and not of righteouſneſs, as here. The Chaldee hath it, Domate concupiſcentias, ſacrifice and ſubdue your luſts.

And put your truſt in the Lord] It is well obſerved, that God brings men home by a contrary way, to that they fell from him. We fell from him by diſtruſt, by having him in a jealouſie, as if he aimed more at himſelf than at our good. Wee return to him by having a good conceit of him, that he loves us better than we can love our ſelves, and therefore that we ought to put our truſt in him, both in life and death.

Verſ. 6. There be many that ſay, Who will ſhew us, &c.] This is Vox populi, the common cry: Studium improborum vagum, good they would have, but pitch not upon the true good. It was well obſerved, that he who firſt called Riches Bona, goods, was a better Husband than Divine; but the moſt are ſuch Husbands. O ſiquis daret ut videamus bonum! Who will help us to a good bargain, a good eſtate? &c. but God the chief good is not in all their thoughts; they minde not communion with him, or conformity to him, which is the Bonum hominis, Mic. 6. 8. the totum hominis, Eccleſ. 12. 13. the one thing neceſſary, though nothing is leſs thought upon. What are theſe outward comforts, ſo much affected, and admired, ſaith Plato, but Dei ludibria, banded up and down like Tennis Balls, from one to another? A Spiritual man heeds not wealth, or at leaſt makes it not his buſineſs. What tell you me of Money, ſaith Paul? I need it not, but to further your reckoning, Phil. 4. 1. And David having ſpoken of thoſe rich and wretched people that have their portion here in all abundance, Pſal. 17. 14. concludeth, I neither envie their ſtore, nor covet their happineſs: it is enough for me, that when I awake, &c. at the Reſurrection of the juſt, I ſhall be full of thine Image, verſ. ult. Chriſt, who had all riches, ſcorned theſe Bona ſcabelli, earthly riches; he was born poor, lived poor, dyed poor; for, as Auſtin obſerveth, when Chriſt dyed he made no will, &c. and as he was born in another mans houſe, ſo he was buried in another mans tombe; And yet he was, and ſtill is, God bleſſed for ever. Cicero indeed writing to Atticus, would have one friend wiſh to another three things only, viz. to enjoy Health, poſſeſs Honour, and not ſuffer Neceſſity. How much better Pauls wiſh, Grace, Mercy, and Peace? or Davids deſire here?

Lord lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us] One good caſt of Gods countenance was more to David than all this Worlds wealth than a confluence of all outward comforts and contentments. He had ſet up God for his chief good, and the light light of Gods loving Countenance was the guide of that way that leadeth to that good; and hence his importunity; he cannot draw breath but in that air, nor take comfort in any thing without Gods gracious aſpect, and ſome comings in from Chriſt. It is better, ſaith one, to feel Gods favour one Hour in our repenting Souls, than to ſit whole Ages under the warmeſt Sun-ſhine that this world affordeth. Saith not David ſo much in the next words?

Verſ. 7. Thou haſt put gladneſs into my heart, more than, &c.] Joys unſpeakable, and full of glory, 1 Pet. 1. 8. We read of ſome godly men that they have been overwhelmed with Spiritual joy, till they have cried out, Hold Lord, ſtay thine hand, I can bear no more: like weak eyes, that cannot endure to bear the light. Indeed, this is not every good mans caſe, witneſs that ſaying of ſweet Maſter Bain, I thank God in Chriſt, ſuſtentation I have, but ſuavities ſpiritual I taſte not any. And that of holy Rolloc, Whiles I live I never look to ſee perfect Reformation in the Church, or to feel perfect raviſhing joys in mine heart. But thoſe Gods people have, are far beyond all Carnal comforts. Bain. Letter.

Than in the time that their Corn, &c.] Theſe indeed are the precious fruits of the earth, Jam. 5. 7. but they ſeal not up ſpecial favour. A man may have together with them animam triticeam, as that rich fool had. Animas etiam incarnavimus, as a Father complaineth. Theſe outward things are got within men, and have ſtolen away their warmeſt and livelieſt affections from God: Not ſo in the Saints; They muſt have God, or elſe they dye. The people mourned, and put on black, when they heard that God would not go with them himſelf, but ſend an Angel with them, Exod. 33. 2, 3. And when great gifts were ſent to Luther, he ſent them back again with this brave ſpeech, I will not be put off with theſe poor things: I look for better. Let God beſtow himſelf upon me, and it ſufficeth. As with Manna there fell a dew, ſo to a good Soul, together with Corn and Wine (be it more or leſs) there is a ſecret influence of God, which the carnal heart is not acquainted with. A fly cannot make that of a Flower, that a Bee can do. The treacherous Shechemites had plenty of Corn and Wine, Judg. 9. 27. but having not the grace of God withall, they were ſoon after deſtroyed by Abimelech.

Verſ. 8. I will both lay me down in peace and ſleep] Heb. In peace together will I lye down and ſleep; that is, ſaith the Syriack interpreter, Non ſolum cubabo ſed etiam Dormiam, I will not only lye down, but alſo ſleep; which many cannot do for fears and cares, thoſe Gnats that keep them waking. The Arabick hath it, I ſleep as ſecurely in adverſity as thoſe can that are in proſperity. Others thus, I wil lay me down together with the joy before ſpoken of, and confidence in God: this ſhall be my Bed-fellow; and then I am ſure to reſt ſweetly and ſafely. For, Thou Lord only makeſt, thou ſetteſt me in ſafety, thou giveſt to thy beloved ſleep, Pſal. 127. 2. that is, extraordinary quiet refreſhing ſleep, as the learned note upon the Aleph quieſcent in אַךְ which is not uſual.

PSAL. V.

TO the chief Muſician] See on Pſal. 4. title.

Upon Nehiloth] Upon Wind-inſtruments. Pneumatica, tribulata. The Rabbins ſay that this Pſalm was made and appointed to be ſung concerning Doeg and Ahitophel.

Verſ. 1. Give ear to my words, O Lord] David knew him to be a Prayer-hearing God, Pſal. 65. 2. and that his ears were always open (as the doors of the Roman Ædiles were) to hear complaints and requeſts; hence this prayer.

Conſider my meditation] i. e. the conceptions of my ſoul uttered with a low voyce, (Murmur meum. Hieron.) but with moſt vehement affection. All this, the Hebrew word importeth. Muſitationem meam.

Verſ. 2. Hearken unto the voyce of my cry] He thrice repeats the ſame requeſt, to ſhew the greatneſs of his grief, and the neceſſity of help from Heaven. Let mind and mouth, ſpirit and ſpeech, go together in prayer, and then its right, the voyce of the Heart is ſimply neceſſary: Moſes cried to God at the red Sea, though he ſaid nothing. The voyce of the lips is of great uſe alſo, 1. For preventing of diſtraction. 2. For exciting devotion.

My

My King] And therefore help O King, as ſhe ſaid, 2 King. 5. 24. And my God] who art in covenant with me, both offenſive and defenſive.

For unto thee will I pray] Thou art the proper object of Prayer, as being Omnipreſent, Omniſcient, Omnipotent: and a God in covenant with thy people.

πᾶν ἔργον. Verſ. 3. My voyce ſhalt thou hear in the morning] That fitteſt ſeaſon, uſually, for Prayer, or any other ſerious buſineſs: The very Heathens choſe the morning chiefly for Sacrifice, as Neſtor in Homer, the Argonauts in Apollonius. The Perſian Magi ſang Hymns to their Gods at break of day, and worſhipped the riſing Sun. The Pinarii and Potitii (certain Idolatrous Prieſts) ſacrificed every morning and Evening to Hercules upon the great Altar at Rome. The Jews counted and called it an Abomination of deſolation, if at any time the Morning and Evening Sacrifice to the Lord were intermitted: So ſhould Chriſtians, if they offer not unto him twice a day at leaſt, viz. Morning and Evening prayers and praiſes. Maſs and Meat hinder no mans thrift, ſay the very Papiſts. A whet is no let, a bait by the way hindreth not the journey: ſo neither doth prayer in a morning hinder a mans buſineſs, be it never ſo haſty or weighty, but furthereth it rather. Cardinal Wolſie, though hee were Lord Chancellour, when he came in a morning out of his privie Chamber, would not go abroad till he had heard two Maſſes, nor go to bed at night with any part of his ſervice unſaid, no not ſo much as one Collect. Mahometans, what occaſion ſoever they have by profit or pleaſure, pray conſtantly five times a day. Chriſtians have a charge to continue inſtant in prayer, and to let all buſineſs wait upon it, Rom. 12. 12. with Act. 6. 4. David knew that if prayer ſtand ſtill, the trade of godlineſs ſtandeth ſtill. He therefore will be up and at it betimes, and rather break his ſleep than leave ſuch a duty undone.

His Life and Death by his Gentle. Uſh. pag. 18.

In the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up] Or, look out, ſpy like a Watch-man. Two Military words the Prophet here maketh uſe of; hee would not only pray, but marſhal up his prayers, put them in array. And when he had done, he would be as a Spy upon a Tower, to ſee whether he prevailed, whether he got the day. Some men pray of courſe, or as a task, but never look after their prayers, or mark what anſwer: This is very great folly and oſcitancy. Who ſends forth a Ship, and waits not for the return thereof? Who ſhoots an Arrow, or caſts a Boul, and looks not where it lights? Prayer is the Souls Arrow, Angle, Seed, Dove, Meſſenger, &c. And they that take not notice how they ſpeed, deal as ſcoffing Pilat did, who ſcornfully asked Chriſt, What's truth? but ſtay'd not for the anſwer. If God ſhall hearken what David ſpeaketh, David muſt likewiſe hearken what God will ſpeak. He muſt look up to God, if God ſhall look out of himſelf to David; ſith he humbleth himſelf to behold things done in Heaven, Pſalm 113. 6. by a wonderful condeſcenſion; how much more then to look upon man that is a Worm, and the Son of man that is a Worm, Job 25. 6. Tantus, tantillum?

Gnarach. Ordinavit, aciem diſpoſuit. Tſaphah. Speculando expectavit.

Verſ. 4. For thou art not a God that hath pleaſure in wickedneſs] As the Kings of the Earth have, ſaith R. Solomon. Alexander the Great promiſing a Crown of one hundred and eighty pound to thoſe of his Gueſts that drank moſt, cauſed one and forty to kill themſelves with drinking for that Crown. King Charls the Ninth of France, gave one Albertus Tudius, an Huckſters Son, ſix hundred thouſand Crowns, to teach him to ſwear with a grace. But God perfectly hateth wickedneſs, and wicked perſons. There were more remarkable expreſſions of Gods anger upon mans ſin, in the dead body of a Man, than of a Beaſt, Numb. 11. 31. The one made unclean but till the evening, the other, ſeven days. God hateth ſin worſe than he doth the Devil, for he hateth the Devil for ſins ſake, and not ſin for the Devils ſake. He hateth ſin naturally in whomſoever, like as wee hate Poyſon, whether it be in a Toad, or in a Princes Cabinet. We read of Antipathies in Nature betwixt the Elephant and the Boar, the Lion and the Cock, the Horſe and the Stone Taraxippe, &c. but nothing ſo great, as betwixt God the chiefeſt good, and ſin the utmoſt evil. Let us be like affected to our heavenly Father, as deat Children, abhorring that which is evil, Rom. 12. 9. hating it as we do Hell it ſelf, ſo the Greek word there ſignifieth, abandoning it, and abſtaining from all appearance of it, as it is Offenſivum Dei, & averſivum à Deo, an offence againſt God, and a breach of his Law.

Camera. Med. Hiſtor.

Neither

Neither ſhall evil dwell with thee] Heb. ſojourn with thee, or bee harboured as a Gueſt, much leſs as an home-dweller. Peter Martyr out of Nathans Parable obſerveth, that Luſt was but a ſtranger to David, that lodged with him for a night only. Though corruption may intrude upon us, and enter, yet it may not bee harboured, and dwell with us; leſt the Traveller become the man of the houſe. 2 Sam. 12.

Verſ. 5. The fooliſh ſhall not ſtand in thy ſight] Heb. before thine eyes, as thy Favourites and Attendance. Thoſe furious, vain-glorious Mad-caps, as they call them, Royſters, Royoters, Roaring-boys, as they delight to call themſelves by a woful Prolepſis of the preſent for the future. The word is uſed for mad, or raving with folly, Eccleſ. 2. 2. 12. & 7. 9. & 10. 13. Iſa. 44. 25. Pſal. 75. 5. & 73. 3. God hath no need of ſuch Mad-men as Achiſh King of Gath ſaid, when they brought David before him, and he feigned himſelf diſtracted. We likewiſe muſt have no fellowſhip with ſuch, Eph. 5. 11. but reprove them rather.

Thou hateſt all workers of iniquity] Though they not only act it, but art it, poliſh and trim their ſin, that it may ſeem leſs hainous, as Hypocrites do, who hide their wickedneſs with no leſs ſubtle ſlights, than Rachel hid the Idols, Rahab the Spies. But God will detect and deteſt them. See the Note on verſ. 4.

Verſ. 6. Thou ſhalt deſtroy them that ſpeak leaſing] Whether in jeſt or earneſt, thoſe that lye in jeſt, will without repentance go to Hell in earneſt. And for the officious lye, ſome think it no fault: whereas Gal. 1. 10. we muſt not ſpeak truth to pleaſe men, much leſs may we lye. The truth is, all lies are pernicious, and all Liers will be deſtroyed, but eſpecially thoſe that have taught their tongues to ſpeak lies, Jer. 9. 5. that take faſt hold of deceit, Jer. 8: 5. ſo that they cannot bee got off without ſtriving: ſuch an one was Doeg, Saul, &c.

The Lord will abhor the bloudy and deceitful man] Heb. the man of bloud: for bloud hath ſo many tongues as drops to cry for vengeance, Gen. 4. and God makes inquiſition, Pſal. 9. 12. commanding that Murtherers ſhould be drawn from the Altar to the Slaughter, Exod. 21. 14. This made King James ſay, that if God did leave him to kill a man, he would think God did not love him. As for deceitfull perſons, the Lord is the avenger of all ſuch, 1 Theſſ. 4. 6.

Verſ. 7. But as for me] Who am conſcious of none of theſe foul and flagicious practiſes. The upright ſhall dwell in Gods preſence, Job 12. 16. Pſal. 140. 13. not ſo the hypocrite and ungodly. He is like a Vagabond begging at the Gate, and not knowing whether the Maſter of the houſe is providing for him an Almes, or a Cudgel.

I will come into thine houſe, &c.] He knew that the Ark and Mercy-ſeat were never ſeparated.

And in thy fear will I worſhip, &c.] The fear of God is, 1 Servile; this David meaneth not. 2 Filial or amicable. And this again is, either Timor culpæ, fear to offend ſo good a God, and to forget his favour, Prov. 8. 13. Or, Timor cultus, the fear that is to be expreſſed in our addreſſes to Almighty God, that reverential godly fear, Jer. 5. 22. Heb. 12. 28. Pſal. 2. 11. and here. Thus the very Angels make their addreſſes to the moſt high God, with greateſt ſelf-abacements, Iſa. 6. How much more ſhould we ſilly and ſinful Creatures? Omnino oportet nos orationis tempore curiam intrare cœleſtem (ſaith Bernard) in qua Rex regum ſtellato ſedet ſolio, circundante innumerabili & ineffabili beatorum ſpirituum exercitu. Quantâ ergo cum reverentiâ, quanto timore, quanta illuc humilitate accedere, debet è palude ſua procedens & repens vilis ranuncula? that is, at prayer time we ſhould enter into the heavenly Pallace, where the King of Kings ſitteth in a ſtately Throne, environed with an innumerable company of Angels and Saints. With how great reverence therefore, godly fear and humility ſhould a poor paltry Frog come, who is newly crawled out of his guzzle? Bern. de diverſ. ſerm. 25.

Verſ. 8. Lead me, O Lord, in thy righteouſneſs] that is, in thy faithfulneſs, and according to thy promiſe in that behalf made unto me, to be my God and guide even unto death, to lead me in the way everlaſting, to direct my footſteps in thy fear, &c. Dedue me ut non titubem, ſaith R. David, Lead me, that I ſtumble not; or if I do, yet that I fall not: for he that ſtumbleth and falleth not, gets ground.

Becauſe of mine enemies] Or, becauſe of mine obſervers, who narrowly watch for my halting, that they might blaſpheme thee, and thy religion, through my default, 1 Sam. 18. 9. Saul fixed his eyes upon David, but for no good to him. So 1 Pet. 2. 12. & 3. 2. wicked men ſpy, and pry accurately (as the word ſignifieth) into the courſes of Gods people, to ſee what evil they can finde out and taſten on. We ſhould therefore walk exactly, Epheſ. 5. 15. and pray earneſtly, as here.

Make thy way ſtreight before my face] Remove all rubs and Remoraes, and lay all plain and level, that I may walk and not bee weary, run and not faint, Iſa. 40. ult.

Verſ. 9. For there is no faithfulneſs in their mouth] Or, ſtedfaſtneſs, nothing that a man may binde or build upon, ſo ſlippery they are and untruſty.

Their inward part is very wickedneſs] Heb. Woful evils, heavie annoyances; their hearts are the Devils Store-houſes.

Their throat is an open Sepulcher] And ſo, more dangerous than if it were ſhut, ſaith Aben-Ezra here. In theſe open Sepulchers ſending out much noyſome ſtench, they frequently bury the good names of their betters. But the comfort is, that there ſhall one day be a Reſurrection as well of names as of bodies. This the Apoſtle accommodateth, (Rom. 3. 13.) to the univerſal corruption of Mankind; and well he might, for as much as by Nature there is never a better of us: but as there were many Marii in one Cæſar, ſo are there many Doegs and Abſoloms in the beſt of us all. As in water face anſwereth to face, ſo doth the heart of a man to a man.

They flatter with their tongue] The Apoſtle, Rom. 3. 13. rendreth it: With their tongues they have uſed deceit. And it is remarkable, that in the Anatomy of a Natural man there he ſtands more on the Organs of Speech, Tongue, Lips, Mouth Throat, than on all the reſt of the Members.

Verſ. 10. Deſtroy thou them, O God] Heb. Condemn them as guilty. They were Gods enemies no leſs than Davids, and implacable, incorrigible: and hence hee ſo prayeth againſt them Eſt Prophetia, non maledictio, ſaith Auſtin.

Tom. 8. in Enarr. hujus precationis.

Let them fall by their own counſel ;] As it befel Ahitophel, Haman, the Powder-Traitors. Or, let them fall from their own counſels, i. e. not be able to effect their evil deſigns, but defeated, fruſtrated.

Caſt them out, &c.] Let thoſe who were once a terrour, now be a ſcorn: for they are even ripe for ruine, as having added rebellion to their ſin, Job. 34. 37.

For they have rebelled againſt thee] And ſo are more thine enemies than mine: which maketh me ſo earneſt againſt them, being ſwallowed up with a zeal of thy glory.

Verſ. 11. But let all thoſe that put their truſt in thee rejoyce] Joy is the juſt mans portion, & contra, Hoſ. 9. 1. Iſa. 65. 13, 14. and according to the meaſure of his faith, ſo is his joy, 1 Pet. 1. 8.

Let them ever ſhout] or, ſhrill out, ſet up their Note as a Peacock doth, which hath his name in Hebrew from this root.

Velut pie tabernaculum. R. David.

Becauſe thou defendeſt them] Heb. Thou over-covereſt them with thy ſure defence, for upon all the glory ſhall be a defence. And there ſhall be a Tabernacle for a ſhadow in the day time from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from ſtorm, and from rain, Iſa. 4. 5, 6. The Ram-skins covering the Ark from the violence of wind and weather, figured out Chriſts protecting his people.

Let them alſo that love thy name] As all the Virgins do who have ſmelt Chriſts name as an Oyntment poured out, Cant. 1. 3. See the Note there.

Be joyful in thee] Heb. exult, and leap for joy, as if they were dancing Levalto's. Thus Dr. Taylor the Martyr, fetcht a friſk, and danced when he was near unto the place where he ſhould be burnt. Rabbi Zabdi Ben Levi repeated this verſe when he was at point of death. Another, that in Pſal. 32. For this ſhall every one that is godly pray unto thee. A Third, that in Pſal. 84. One day in thy Courts is better, &c. A Fourth, that in Pſal. 31. O how great is thy goodneſs, &c.

Mid. Tillin. in Pſal. 5

Verſ. 12. For thou Lord wilt bleſs the righteous] yea the righteous man ſhall abound with bleſſings, Prov. 28. 20. yea God will bleſs all them that bleſs him, Gen. 12. 3. or that but give him a cup of cold water, Mat. 10.

With favour] Or, good will; Qua præcedit noſtram bonam voluntatem, ſaith Auguſtin.

Wilt

Wilt thou compass him] Or, encircle him as with a Crown, and so make them higher than the Kings of the earth, Psal. 89. 27. whose Crowns cannot keep their heads from aking, but fill them with cares; which made one King cry out, O vilis pannus, &c. and another spake this to his Crown, Val. Max.

Nobilis es fateor, rutilisq; onerata lapillis,
Innumeris curis sed comitata venis.
Quod benè si nossent omnes expendere, nemo
Nemo foret qui te tollere vellet humo.

As with a shield] A piked-shield, such as doth circuire tres partes hominis, compass about three parts of a man, saith R. Salomon on this Text. Shields and Bucklers besides other Bosses for ornament, had one great Bos in the middle with a sharp pike in it for use, to pierce and wound the adversary. See Job 15. 26. God will be all in all to his People; Crown, Shield, &c. they may therefore well enough rejoyce, shout, leap, as in the former verse.

PSAL. VI.

TO the chief Musician on Neginoth] See Psal. 4. Title.

Upon Sheminith] or upon the eight, i.e. Intentissimo sono & clarissimo voce, to be sung aloud. An Eight is the highest Note in Musick. See 1 Chron. 15. 21. Others say, that hereby is meant the Base and Tenor, as fittest for a Mourner. Vatab.

Vers. 1. O Lord rebuke me not in thine anger] In this and some other Psalms, David begins so heavenly, ends so merrily, that one might think they had been composed by two men of a contrary humour, as Moulin observeth. Every new man is two men, Rom. 7. The Shulamite hath in her as it were the company of two Armies, Cant. 6. 13. The Lord also chequereth his Providences white and black, hee speckleth his work; (represented by those speckled Horses, Zach. 1. 8.) Mercies and Crosses are inter-woven. De L'amour Divin.

Neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure] Chastened, David desires to be, as Jer. 10. 24. 1 Cor. 11. 32. Heb. 12. 7, 8. But in Mercy, and in measure, 1 Cor. 10. 13 Fury is not in me, saith God, however it may sometimes seem to be, Isa. 27. 4. Of furious people the Philosopher giveth this Character, that they are angry, 1 ὁὶς δεῖ against those whom they should not. 2 ἐφ' ὁὶς δεῖ for matters they should not. 3 μᾶλλον ἢ δεῖ more than they should be. But none of all these can be affirmed of God. Anger is not in him secundum affectum, but seemeth so to be secundum effectum, when he chideth and smiteth (as angry people use to do) when there is no other remedy, 2 Chron. 36. 16. his anger is in Scripture put, 1 For his threatnings, Hos. 11. 9. Jon. 3. 10. 2. For his punishments, Mat. 3. 7. Rom. 2. 8. But as God therefore threatneth that he may not punish, Amo. 4. 12. so in the midst of Judgement he remembreth Mercy, and it soon repenteth him concerning his people.

Vers. 2. Have mercy upon me, O Lord] As the woman in story appealed from Philip to Philip; so doth David fly from Gods anger to Gods grace; for he had none else in Heaven or Earth to repair to, Psal. 73. 25. he seekes here to escape him, by closing with God, and to get off, by getting within him.

For I am weak] or crushed, gnashed, extreamly dejected with sickness of body and trouble of mind. Basil expounds it of his soul sins into which he fell of infirmity, and for which hee was threatned with Judgements by the Prophet Nathan.

O Lord heal me] On both sides heal my soul, for I have sinned against thee, Psal. 41. 4. heal my body which is full of dolours and diseases, Psal. 107. 18. 20. for thou art Jehovah the Phisician, Exod. 15. 26. Heal mine estate, which is very calamitous by reason of mine enemies, who wish my death, and would gladly revel in my ruines. See Hos. 6. 2. Isa. 30. 26.

For my bones are vexed] viz. by reason of my leanness, and long lying. For albeit the bones of themselves are insensible, and ake not: yet the membranes and tunicles do, that compass the bones.

Vers. 3. My soul is also sore vexed] This was worse than all the rest. A light load to a raw ſhoulder is very grievous. A little water in a leaden veſſel is heavie, ſo is a little outward grief to a laden ſoul. Hence Job ſo complaineth, and Jeremy prayeth; be not thou a terrour unto me, O Lord; and then I much matter not what becomes of me.

But thou, O Lord, how long?] ſcil. Wilt thou ſtand off, and not haſt to my help? This is plena affectus Reticentia, an emphatical and affectionate Apoſiopeſis, ſuch as is ordinary with thoſe that are in pain, and durance. Vatab.

Verſ. 4. Return, O Lord, deliver my ſoul] He calleth hard upon Jehovah, which ſweet name of God he hath now five times in theſe four firſt Verſes made uſe of, as one that knew, and could improve the full import of it. Here David beggs of him to return, not by change of place, for God filleth all places (being Enter, præſenter Deus hic & ubiq; potenter.)

But Miſerationis ſerenitate by a beam of his mercy, and by a diſpenſation of his gracious providence, altering his condition for the better, Deut. 30. 9, Act. 15. 16.

O ſave me for thy mercies ſake] Quàm pulcherrimè iſta ſupplicatio propriis & proficuis ſermonibus explicatur, ſaith Caſſiodore concerning this text, i.e. How finely and fitly is this requeſt ſet forth? David pleadeth not Merit, but humbly craveth Mercy. The Heart (that peice of proud fleſh) muſt be brought to ſuch a temper and tameneſs, as to crouch to God, for the crums that fall from his table.

Verſ. 5. For in death there is no remembrance of the] Some Heathens were of opinion that when a man dyed all dyed with him; neither was there any further ſenſe of weal or woe for ever. Socrates doubted, but Ariſtotle affirmed it to be ſo, for ought he knew. Euſebius and Auguſtine make mention of certain Arabian Heteticks, who held that the Soul dyed with the Body, and ſo remained dead till the laſt day, and then they revived with the reſurrection of the body. This was long ſince exploded for a foul errour, contrary to that which the Scripture holdeth forth in many places. All that David would ſay here is, that dead men remember not, that is, they mention not Gods worthy Acts; to the quickning of others; their praiſes cannot provoke other men to beleeve in God, or ſerve him, as in their lifetime they might, therefore David would fain live to do more good. A certain Martyr going to ſuffer ſaid, he was ſorry that he was going to a place where hee ſhould do God no more work, but be receiving wages only. Domine ſi adhuc populo tuo ſim neceſſarius non recuſo laborem, ſaid a dying Saint, Lord, if I may be yet uſeful to thy people, I ſhould be very well content it might be ſo. See Iſa. 38. 18. 19. David and Hezekiah prayed hard that they might not yet dye, leſt Religion, and the true Worſhip of God, which they had begun to vindicate and eſtabliſh, ſhould by their deceaſe fall to the ground, through the wickedneſs of their ſurvivers and ſucceſſors.

Some render it, In Hell who ſhall confeſs to thee? Hereby is ſhewed the fear of Gods Children (ſaith Diodate) anguiſhed by the feeling of his Wrath, leaſt they ſhould dye out of his grace unreconciled, and by that means be excluded and debarred from their deſired aime, to be everlaſtingly inſtruments of his glory. But it is better to take Sheol here for the place and ſtate of the dead, after their diſſolution; though Dilrio will needs have it to be always in Scripture meant of Hell: which if it be ſo, then why ſhould Job ſo earneſtly deſire to be hid in it, chap. 14. 13. That was a ſingular example of Paul the Hermite, who though dead, ſeemed to be ſerving God, and affected thoſe that beheld him. For he was found (ſaith Hierom) dead kneeling upon his knees, holding up his hands, lifting up his eyes; ſo that the very dead corps ſeemed yet, by a kind of religious geſture, to pray unto God.

Verſ. 6. I am weary with my groaning] I have laboured therein, even unto laſſitude. There muſt be ſome proportion between our ſin and our ſorrow. A ſtorm of ſighes at leaſt, if not a ſhower of tears; ſome ſorrow is above tears, ſome conſtitutions are dry, and will not yeeld tears, and in ſuch caſe dry ſorrow may be as available as wet. She that touched the hem of Chriſts Garment only was as welcome to him as Thomas, who put his fingers into the print of the nails.

All the night make I my bed to ſwim] So one hours ſin brought many nights pain. Did we but fore-think what ſin will coſt us, we durſt not but be innocent. But now adays (ſaith a reverend Writer) weep a man may not, for disfiguring his face; faſting is thought Hypocriſie and ſhame; and when his panch is full, then as Prieſts with their drunken Nowls ſaid Mattens, and belched out, Eructavit cor meum verbum, with good devotion as they thought; ſo hee bluſters out a few bluſtering words, and thinks it repentance ſufficient, &c. Another deſcants thus upon the text: As in Sicilia there is Fons Solis, the Fountain of the Sun, out of which at Mid-day, when the Sun is neareſt, floweth cold water; at Mid-night, when the Sun is further off, floweth hot water: So the Patriarch Davids head is full of water, and his eyes a fountain of tears, who, when he enjoyed his health as the warm Sun-ſhine, was cold in confeſſing his ſins. But being now viſited with ſickneſs, his reins chaſtiſing him in the night ſeaſon, he is ſo ſore troubled, and withall ſo hot, and ſo fervent, that every night he waſheth his bed, and watereth, nay even melteth his Couch with tears. &c. A third makes this good Note upon theſe words; The place of Davids ſin (his Bed) is the place of his repentance, and ſo it ſhould be; yea when we behold the place where wee have offended, we ſhould be prickt in heart, and there again crave him pardon: As Adam ſinned in the Garden, and Chriſt ſweat bloudy tears in the Garden: ſanctify by tears every place which we have polluted by ſin, and let us ſeek Chriſt Jeſus in our Bed, with the Spouſe in the Canticles, who ſaith, In my bed by night I ſought him whom my ſoul loved, Cant. 3. 1.

Others take it for his Pallet, his under-bed, which he alſo watered by the abundance of his penitent tears. Ainſworth rendreth it, I water, or melt my bed-ſtead. Theſe are all exceſſive figurative ſpeeches, to ſet forth the greatneſs of his grief, and the multitude of his tears. Weeping becomes not a King, ſaith Euripides. But King David was of another mind, and ſo was he who ſaid

Verſ. 7, Mine eye is conſumed] Heb. gnawn, moth-eaten. That eye of his that had looked, and lufted after his Neighbours Wife, is now dimmed, and darkned with griet and indignation, he had wept himſelf almoſt blinde; as it is ſtoried of Fauſtus the Son of King Vortiger by his own Daughter, that he wept himſelf ſtark blinde for the abominable inceſt of his Parents.

It waxeth old] or, is ſunk in my head. Doth not do its office, but is become like an old duſty window that lets in little light. An heavie affliction to thoſe whoſe eyes have been loop-holes of Luſt, and windows of wickedneſs, the remembrance whereof is a thorn to their blinde eyes, and puts them to grievous pain, eſpecially when their enemies ſhall have got it by the end, as Davids had his ill pranks, and ſpared not to lay it in his diſh.

Verſ. 8. Depart from me all yee workers of iniquity] What a ſtrange change is here all on the ſudden? well might Luther ſay, Oratio eſt birudo animæ; Prayer is the Leech of the Soul, that ſucks out the venom and ſwelling thereof. Prayer, ſaith another, is an Exoriſt with God, and an Exorciſt againſt ſin and miſery. The Prophet Iſaiah calleth it a Charm, chap. 26. 16. becauſe it lays our Soul-diſtempers, and like Davids Harp, drives away the evil ſpirit that is upon us. Pray therefore when out of order, though not ſo fit to pray, fall upon the duty by Davids example here, and that will further fit thee for the duty. Thy leaden lumpiſh heart caſt into this holy fire, will heat and melt. Quoties me oratio, quem pœnè diſperantem ſuſcepérat, reddidit expultantem & præſumentem de venia, ſaith Bernard? How oft hath prayer found me deſpairing almoſt, but left me triumphing, and well aſſured of pardon? The ſame in effect ſaith David here, Depart from me, &c. What a word is that to his inſulting enemies, Avoyd, come out, vaniſh. Theſe bee words words uſed to Devils, and doggs, but good enough for a Doeg, or a Shimei. And the Son of David ſhall ſay the ſame to his enemies, when he comes to Judgement.

For the Lord hath heard the voyce of my weeping] Tears then have a voyce (as well as Bloud hath) and God hath an Ear for them. And as Muſick upon the waters ſoundeth further, and more harmoniouſly than upon the Land; ſo do prayers joyned with tears, Porta Lachrymarum ne ſint clauſa, let not the wounds of godly ſorrow be ever ſo healed up in us, but that they may bleed afreſh upon every juſt occaſion.

Verſ. 9. The Lord hath heard my ſupplication] And thereby ſealed up ſweeteſt love to my Soul; as Ahaſhuerus afterwards did to his Heſter, by granting her requeſt. But how knew David, and how may another man in like ſort know that God hath heard his prayer, though as yet no viſible return appeareth?

I anſwer; This he may know.

1 By a caſt of Gods pleaſed countenance.

2 By the teſtimony of his own Conſcience, Phil. 4. 6, 7. and by the aſſurance of faith, which ſaith to a man as the Angel once did to Cornelius, Thy prayers are heard and anſwered. Of Luther we read, that having been once wraſtling hard with God by prayer, for the proſperous proceeding of the Reformation in Germany, about which there was a general meeting of the States at that time, he came leaping out of his Cloſet with Vicimus, Vicimus, in his mouth, that is, we have prevailed, we have got the day. God ſometimes anſwereth his people before they pray, ſometimes whiles they are praying, as here, and ſometimes after they have prayed, but ſooner or later they ſhall be ſure of it.

The Lord will receive my prayer] He hath, and therefore he will. This is the Language of faith, this is the triumph of truſt.

Verſ. 10. Let all mine enemies be aſhamed] When they ſee all their hopes of my death and downfall diſappointed.

Let them return] Retrocedant & in terram cadant, ſaith the Arabick Interpreter, let them go backward, and fall to the earth. Some make this a Prayer, ſome a Prophecy, it comes all to one.

And be aſhamed ſuddenly] Let them be double aſhamed, or deboſht, and that in a moment. Theſe ſudden and ſtill revenges are very terrible. God uſually premoniſheth before he puniſheth; but not always. Now as bleſſings the more unexpected, the more welcome; ſo Judgements, the more ſuddain, the more grievous.

A certain Gentleman ſaid unto him, Ah, Bradford, Bradford, thou ſaveſt him that will help to burn thee. I give thee his life, if it were not for thee, I would run him thorow with my ſword. And it proved as the Gentleman had Propheſied. There he ſits, I mean my Lord of Bath, Mr. Bourn (ſaid Bradford in his third Examination before Stephen Gardiner) which deſired me himſelf for the Paſſion of Chriſt, I would ſpeak to the people. Upon whoſe words, I coming into the Pulpit, I had like to have been ſlain with a Dagger which was hurled at him, I think, for it touched my ſleeve. He then prayed me I would not leave him, and I promiſed, that as long as I lived I would take hurt before him that day: And ſo went I out of the Pulpit, and intreated with the people, and at length brought him my ſelf into an houſe. Beſides this, in the afternoon I preached in Bow Church, and there going up into the Pulpit, one willed me not to reprove the people; For, quoth hee you ſhall never come down alive if you do it. And yet in that Sermon I did reprove their Fact, and called it Sedition at leaſt twenty times. The Arch-biſhop of Toures made ſute for the erection of a Court called Chambre Ardent, wherein to condemn the French Proteſtants to the fire. But ere he dyed he had fire enough, for he was ſtricked with a Diſeaſe called The Fire of God; which began at his feet, and ſo aſcended upward, that he cauſed one Member after another to be cut off, and ſo he dyed miſerably. This was Gods burning Arrow againſt a hot burning Perſecutor. The like may be ſaid of Dioclesian that bloudy Tyrant, who had his houſe burnt over his head with fire from Heaven; wherewith he was ſo affrighted that he dyed ſoon after. The above-mentioned Count Felix of Wartemburg was, the ſame night that he had ſo vowed and vaunted, choaked in his own bloud. So he rode not, but bathed himſelf, not up to the Spurs but Throat, not in the Lutherans bloud, but in his own, before he dyed. And the like we read of Charls the ninth of France.

2 In our Reſtauration by Chriſt: which laſt is the true end of this Pſalm, as appeareth Mat. 21. 15. 1 Cor. 15. 27. and Heb. 2. 8.

How excellent is thy Name] This, David ſpeaketh as one ſwallowed up with admiration at that Nomen illud Magnificum & Majeſtativum, that Glory, Honour, Power, Wiſdom, Goodneſs, &c. that being inveſted in God, and manifeſted in the Creature (Gods Handy-work) ſhould make us both wonder and inquire into Gods excellencies, according to that of Ariſtotle, to admire, and learn at once is a pleaſant thing: and ſure that which is admirable, ſtirreth up deſire to ſee further into it. Admiratio peperit Philoſophiam, ſaith another, Admiration brought forth Philoſophy; let it breed devotion in us, and a deſire to praiſe God, who hath therefore diſplayed his excellencies in his Works, that we might give him his due glory. The Angels ſhouted at the Creation, Job 38. 4, 5, 6. and ſhall we be dul, and dumb? God tells Job of his own great Works, (the Elephant, and Whale eſpecially) and thereby brings him to a right temper. The Elephant is in Chaldee called Pil, of a word that ſignifieth Wonderful; becauſe the Wonders of Gods glory do ſo marvellouſly appear in him. See Job 40. 15, 16, &c. with the Notes. The Philoſophers make Iris, or the Rainbow, the Daughter of Thaumas, or Admiration; but becauſe that when they knew God, ſcil. Per ſpecies Creaturarum, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations — therefore were they given up to a reprobate ſenſe, Rom. 1. 21. 28.

In all the earth?] Where a man cannot look beſide a Miracle, ſo full of God are all places.

Who haſt ſet thy glory above the Heavens] Nam in eis rebus Dei maximè apparet; for in the Heavens (how much more above them) doth the glory of God chiefly appear: the Earth is a ſmall point in compariſon of the Heavens, and is governed by them, as R. David here noteth.

Verſ. 2. Out of the mouth of Babes and ſucklings] For whom, God hath filled two Bottles of Milk againſt they come into the World: and in whoſe birth, ſuſtenance, and wonderful protection (for Puerilis ætas eſt periculorum pelagus) but eſpecially in their holy and religious education, much of Gods Providence, Power, and Goodneſs is clearly ſeen and ſet forth to the conviction of the vileſt Atheiſts. So that, beſides the Earth and the Heavens, we have very Infants Preachers of Gods praiſes, and more more effectual Oratours than ever were Iſocrates, Demoſthenes, Pericles, &c. ſo our Saviour underſtands it, Mat. 21. 10. where the Children ſang Hoſanna when the Phariſees were ſilent. It is ſometimes ſeen,, that John Baptiſt ſprang in the Wombe for joy of Jeſus. Hierom writeth of Paula, that noble Matron, that ſhe rejoyced in nothing more than this, That ſhe heard her Neece Paula ſing Hallelujah in her Cradle. Bellarmine tells us out of Theodoret, that the Children of Samoſatena playing at Tenniſ-ball in the midſt of the Market, did ſolemnly caſt it into the fire, becauſe it had but toucht the foot of the Aſſe, whereon Lucius the Heretical Biſhop rode. The Children of Merindal ſo poſed, and anſwered one another, in matters of Religion, before the perſecuting Biſhop of Cavaillon, that a religious man that ſtood by ſaid unto the Biſhop, I muſt needs confeſs that I have often been at the Diſputation of the Doctors in Sorbon, but yet I never learned ſo much as I have done by hearing theſe young children. When Mr. Bleeter the Biſhops Chaplain told Mr. Wiſehart the Scotch Martyr, that he had a Devil in him, and the ſpirit of Error; a Childe that ſtood by anſwered him, ſaying, A Devil cannot ſpeak ſuch words as yonder man ſpeaketh. At the burning of John Laurence at Colcheſter, as he was ſitting in the fire (for ſtand he could not, he had been ſo hardly uſed in the Priſon) the young Children came about the fire, and cried, Lord, ſtrengthen thy Servant, and keep thy promiſe. Here was ſtrength out of the mouthes of little ones, taught betime to ſpeak the language of Canaan. Sed væ væ parentibus illis (ſaith Polanus on the Text) But wo, wo to thoſe Parents who make their Children (whom God would have to be witneſſes of his Majeſty) witneſſes of their impiety, pride, and vanity.

That thou mighteſt ſtill the enemy and the avenger] i. e. Silence Atheiſts and Perſecutors.

Verſ. 3. When I conſider thy Heavens] And that men ſhould be much in this conſideration, both the bolt-upright figure of their bodies may moniſh them, and alſo that fifth Muſcle which God hath ſet in Mans eye (whereas other Creatures have but four) to draw it upward, Ut ejus auxilio cœlum intueremur, ſaith the Anatomiſt, that by the help thereof we might conſider the Heavens. This, thoſe Chriſtians that do not, ſhall have thoſe Heathens riſing up in Judgement againſt them. Anaxagoras Clazomenius, who uſed to ſay, that he was therefore born that he might contemplate the Heavens. And Ennius, who blameth Epicurus for that Dum palato quid ſit optimum judicaret, cœli palatium non ſuſpexerit, he did ſo purvey for his Palate, that he looked not up to Heavens Palace. Certain it is, that many men have ſo much to do upon Earth, that they cannot have while to caſt an eye towards Heaven, as the Duke of Alva told a great Prince, who asked him if he had taken notice of the laſt Eclipſe. That wonderful Globe of Silver ſent by King Ferdinand to Solyman the great Turk, lively expreſſing the wonderful motions, and converſions of the Cæleſtial frame, the hourly paſſing of the Time, the Change and Full of the Moon, &c. was much more beheld and admired, than Heaven it ſelf is by moſt people. True it is, that that Globe was a moſt curious and ſtrange Piece of Work, deviſed and perfected by the moſt cunning Aſtronomers, for Maximilian the Emperour, whoſe noble minde never ſpared for any coſt to obtain things of rare and ſtrange deviſe. But what was all this to the Heavens? That Work of Gods finger] That is, moſt elaborate and accurate; a Metaphor from Embroyderers, or from them that make Tapeſtry. Aben-Ezra's Note here is, Digiti ſunt decem, & ſphæræ ſunt decem, As there are ten Fingers, ſo there are ten Spheres, &c.

The Moon and the Stars] No mention of the Sun, becauſe included in this word Heaven; wherein by Day the Sun is moſt conſpicuous, as by Night, the Moon and Stars.

Which thou haſt ordained] That was a witty ſpeech of Cyril, They were Ἄθεοι κατὰ νύκτος Atheiſts by Night, who worſhipped the Sun; and Atheiſts by Day, who worſhipped the Moon and Stars.

Verſ. 4. What is man that thou art mindful of him?] Sorry, ſickly man, a Maſs of Mortalities, a Map of Miſeries, a mixture or compound of Dirt and Sin? And yet God is mindful of him; he not only takes care of him in an ordinary way, as he doth other Creatures, but ſingularly attendeth, and affecteth him, as a Father doth his deareſt Childe. He is, Divini ingenii cura, ſaith one; he is the end of all in a ſemi-circle, ſaith another Philoſopher; meaning, that all things in the World were made for man, and man made for God: Neither is there ſo much of the glory of God in all his Works of Wonder, as in one gracious performance of a godly perſon. But if we underſtand the Text (as the Apoſtle doth, Heb. 2. 6.) of the Man Chriſt Jeſus, Hic homo & filius hominis qualis & quantus eſt, Deus bone! ſaith Junius.

Arrian in Epictet.

And the Son of Man] Heb. Of earthly men; for what is the greateſt Potentate, but πῆλος κόμψος πεφυραμένος, a peece of Clay neatly made up?

That thou viſiteſt him?] That thou mindeſt him more than other Creatures, and makeſt him Lord of all? thy viſitation preſerveth his ſpirit, Job 10. 12.

Verſ. 5. For thou haſt made him a little lower than the Angels] Compare here with Heb. 2. 6, 7. and it will appear that whatſoever is ſpoken here of man, is applied to Chriſt, and ſo is proper to the Saints, by vertue of their union with Chriſt; in which reſpect they are more glorious, ſaith one, than Heaven, Angels, or any Creature. This is their dignity: and for their duty they muſt therefore give the more earneſt heed to the Doctrin of the Goſpel, leſt at any time they ſhould leak, or let ſlip the ſame, but retain and obey it. This is the Apoſtles own inference, Heb. 2. 5, 6, 7. for thus he argueth: Unto the Angels God hath not put in ſubjection the World to come, whereof we ſpeak; But to man (for whoſe ſake the Son of God came in the fleſh, for whoſe ſake the Goſpel was preached, for whoſe ſake wee ſpeak of that World to come) he hath; therefore it behooveth man to obſerve, and obey the Goſpel.

And haſt crowned him with glory and honour] Some refer this to the reaſonable Soul, whereby he not only differeth from Beaſts, but draweth nigh to the heavenly Nature. As Rome was an Epitome of the World; as Athens was the Greece of Greece; and as one ſaid to his Friend who deſired to ſee Athens, Viſo Solone vidiſti omnia, when thou haſt ſeen Solon thou haſt ſeen all Athens: So man is a little World, and is therefore called every Creature, Mark 16. 15. and the Saints (in whom Gods Image is repaired) are called All things, Coloſ. 1. 20. Chriſt being unto them All, and in all.

Verſ. 6. Thou madeſt him to have dominion, &c.] He had ſo at firſt, Gen. 1. 26. and ſhall have again, Zech. 8. 12. Rev. 21. 7. mean while (though Rebellis facta eſt Creatura homini, quia homo numini, the Creature rebelleth againſt man, becauſe man doth againſt God; yet) we cannot but ſee ſome foot-ſteps remaining of that ancient Soveraignty, which the very Heathens alſo acknowledged, and there-hence fetched excellent Arguments for a Providence. Lions hate Apes, but fear men; though Simia quam ſimilis, turpiſſima beſtia, nobis: Hereof no probable reaſon can be given but this, That God hath put all things under mans feet; inſomuch as that the moſt timerous men dare kick and beat the hugeſt Elephants. Indeed by reaſon of Sin, as was ſaid, we ſee not all things ſubdued. Heb. 12. 8. But why hath Nature denied to Horſes, Aſſes, Camels, Elephants, Deer, &c. a Gall, which it hath given to Lions, Wolves, and other fierce Creatures? Surely herein appeareth the wonderful Wiſdom and goodneſs of God, who hath done this, that thoſe ſo ſerviceable Creatures might be the better tamed, and ſubdued by man. Let man conſider (ſaith one well) what excellency he hath loſt through Adams fall, and bewail his miſery. Let him alſo on the other ſide well weigh the grace beſtowed on him in Chriſt, and be joyful and thankful for mercy; knowing this, that if the Creatures be not now ſubjected unto us, it is by reaſon of the Body and relicks of Sin, that yet remain in us; and that therefore if we would have a conqueſt over the Creatures, we muſt begin firſt to get a victory upon ſin, or elſe we ſhall never profit that way.

Terra à terendo.

Thou haſt put all things under his feet] The Earth hath its name from treading upon it; teaching us, 1 To trample upon earthly things, as baſe and bootleſs; not to dote upon them with out hearts, nor graſp them over greedily with our hands: as that covetous Cardinal Sylberperger, who took ſo great felicity in Money, that when he was grievouſly tormented with the Gout, his only remedy to eaſe his pain was, to have a Baſon full of Gold ſet before him, into which he would put his lame hands, turning the Gold upſide down. But if Silver and Gold be a mans happineſs, then it is in the earth, and ſo (which is ſtrange) nearer Hell than Heaven, and ſo nearer the Devil than God. The ancient Romans had for a difference in their Nobility, a little ornament in the form of a Moon, to ſhew that all worldly things were mutable; and they wore it upon their ſhooes, to ſhew that they trod all under their feet. 2. By this poſture of all things under mans feet, God would teach him to uſe them as a Stirrop, for the raiſing of his heart to thoſe things above. A ſanctified fancy can make every Creature a Ladder to Heaven, and ſay with that Father, Si tanti vitreum, quanti verum margaritum? If this traſh be ſo highly eſteemed of, how much more the true Treaſure?

Verſ. 7. All Sheep and Oxen, &c.] There are Beaſts ad eſum et ad uſum, ſaith one. Some are profitable dead, not alive, as the Hogge; ſome alive, not dead, as the Dogge, Horſe, &c. ſome both, as the Oxe; yet none ſo profitable as the Sheep, who hath Wool for Raiment, Skin for Parchment, Fleſh for Meat, Guts for Muſick, and was therefore in Sacrifice ſo frequently offered.

Verſ. 8. The Fowl of the air] Theſe Moſes ſeemeth to have forgot, in that diſcontented ſpeech of his, Numb. 11. 22, but God ſent thoſe murmurers ſuch a driſt of Quails (meat of Kings, with their bread of Angels) as he could not have imagined, or hoped for.

And the Fiſh of the Sea] Piſcis of Paſco. Many Iſlands are maintained, and people fed by Fiſh. In Hebrew the ſame word ſignifieth a Pond, or Fiſh-pool, and a Bleſſing. And ſurely it is a bleſſing to any Country that they have plenty, and dainty, of theſe good Creatures.

And whatſoever paſſeth, &c.] As Whales, and other great Fiſhes, which make a ſmooth path in a calm Sea, as a Ship or Boat doth, Job 41. 23, &c. See the Note there.

Verſ. 9. O Lord, our Lord, &c.] Prius incipit Propheta mirari quam loqui, & deſinit loqui non mirari. The Pſalmiſt endeth as he began, tranſported with an extaſie of admiration. So he begins, and ends many of his Pſalms with Hallelujah. Betwixt God and us the diſtance is infinite; and if it were poſſible our love and thankfulneſs ſhould fill up that diſtance, and extend it ſelf to infiniteneſs, ſaith a grave Divine.

PSAL. IX.

Upon Muth-Labben] This was the name of a certain Inſtrument, ſay ſome; the beginning of a Song, ſay others, to the tune whereof this Pſalm was to bee ſung. Montanus, and many more hold it to be an Annagramatiſm, and render it, For the death of Nabal, viz. by a covert intimation, and inverſion of the Letters. So in the Title of Pſal. 7. Cuſh Benjemini, for Kiſh the Benjamite. This is,

Parcere nominibus, dicere de vitiis.

Verſ. 1. I will praiſe thee, O Lord, with my whole heart] This is a gratulatory Pſalm, wherein David ſhews his thankfulneſs, which a very Heathen calleth Maximam imò matrem omnium virtutum reliquarum, the Mother of all the reſt of the Vertues. True thankfulneſs, as one well obſerveth, is here and in the next verſe deſcribed, Cic.

1 By the matter of it.
2 By the manner.

Firſt, for matter, the Pſalmiſt delivereth it in Four parcels. Of סתר ſeems to come Cipher.

1 The acknowledging of God in all.
2 A Ciphering, and ſumming up of ſpecial Mercies.
3 An expreſſion of Spiritual joy in God, as well as in his Gifts.
4 A dedication of our Songs and ſelves to his Name.

Secondly, For the manner, he preſſeth

1 Integrity for the ſubject, and object, verſ. 1,
2 Sincerity for affection, and end, verſ. 2.

I will be glad and rejoyce in thee] Spiritual cheerfulneſs is the Mother of Thankfulneſs, fulneſs, Jam. 5. 13. Birds when got in the air, or on the top of trees, and have taken up a ſtand to their mind, ſing moſt ſweetly.

O thou moſt High] God was ſo firſt called by Melchiſedeck, upon a like occaſion, as here by David, Gen. 14. 19, 20. The Greeks might have their ἥλιος, for the Sun which they worſhipped, from this Hebrew Helion moſt High.

Verſ. 3. When mine enemies] This, Tremellius maketh to be the form of praiſe which the Pſalmiſt profeſſeth, that he will ſing to God, and rendereth it thus, That mine enemies returning back are fallen, &c.

And periſh at thy preſence] The victory is of God, and to him alone to be aſcribed. The Romans in their Triumphs preſented a Palm to Jupiter. The Gracians alſo thankfully aſcribed to Jupiter their deliverance from the Perſians, wrought by Themiſtocles, and there-hence called him ἐλευθέριος, that is, Deliverer.

Verſ. 4. For thou haſt maintained my right] Heb. Thou haſt done me judgement. Locus hic inſignis eſt, ſaith Polanus: this is an excellent place, and maketh much to the comfort of Gods poor people that are oppreſſed by the World: the righteous Judge will not fail to right them. See Luke 18. 7, 8.

Verſ. 5. Thou haſt rebuked the Heathen, &c.] God firſt chideth the Churches Enemies by lighter Judgements; if theſe be not improved, he deſtroyeth them, Pſal. 119. 21. and becauſe they ſought to obſcure and extirpate his name from amongſt men, therefore he puts out their name, that is, their fame and reputation for ever and yet, or for ever and a day, as we uſe to ſay: -- Ingloria vita recedit, they go out in a ſnuff, as did the Primitive and Modern Perſecutors, of abhorred memory.

Verſ. 6. O thou enemy] The ſame whom he called Wicked one in the former verſe; where the word Wicked is of the ſingular number, q. d. O thou implacable Wretch, that wouldſt never be reconciled till thou waſt ruined; which now thou art, &c. Some read it interrogatively, and withall ironically, O enemy, are deſtructions come to an end? and Cities ſo waſted that they can never be repaired? q. d. So indeed thou haſt deſigned it, but art fairly diſappointed. And the like befel Antiochus, Nero, Dioclefian, Philip the Second of Spain, Charls the Ninth of France, and other bloudy Perſecutors, with their devilliſh thoughts and threats; which they could never effect and accompliſh.

Their memorial is periſhed with them] Heb. Of them, of them (twice) for more vehemency. The vulgar (after the Greek) hath it cum ſonitu, with an humming noyſe, ſo that the ſound thereof ringeth all the World over. R. David rendreth it, Memoria eorum periit; ſuntne illi? Their memorial is periſhed; have they yet a being any where?

Verſ 7. But the Lord ſhall endure for ever] Vivit Chriſtus regnatq; alioqui totus deſperaſſem, ſaid that good Dutch Divine, upon the view of the Churches enemies, i.e. Chriſt liveth and reigneth for ever, ſetting one foot on the earth, and the other on the ſea, as Lord of both; otherwiſe I ſhould have been altogether hopeleſs. Bleſſed bee God that he is God, was a learned Divines motto.

Verſ. 8. And he ſhall judge the world, &c.] See on verſ. 4.

Verſ. 9. The Lord alſo will be a refuge, &c.] Heb. An high tower, edita arx, wherein men are ſecured, and eſcape the impreſſions of an enemy. The very Lame and Blinde, thoſe moſt ſhiftleſs Creatures, when they had gotten the ſtrong Hold of Zion over their heads, thought that then they might ſecurely ſcorn David and his Hoſt, 2 Sam. 5. 6, 7. yet their Hold failed them: So did the Tower of Shechem thoſe that ran into it. Not ſo the Almighty, his poor oppreſſed. Univerſal experience ſealeth to this truth; neither can one inſtance be given of the contrary; Higgaion, Selah. It is reported of the Ægyptians, that living in the Fens, and being vext with Gnats, they uſe to ſleep in high Towers, whereby, thoſe Creatures not being able to ſoar ſo high, they are delivered from the biting of them: So would it be with us when bitten with cares and fears, did we but run to God for refuge, and reſt confident of his help.

Herod. Lib. 2.

Verſ. 10. And they that know thy name will put their truſt in thee] They can do no otherwiſe that ſavingly know Gods ſweet Attributes, and noble Acts for his people. We never truſt a man till we know him, and bad men are better known than truſted. Not ſo the Lord, for where his name is poured out as an oyntment, there the Virgins love him, fear him, rejoyce in him, repoſe upon him. Them

Them that ſeek thee] So they do it ſeriouſly, ſeaſonably, conſtantly.

Verſ. 11. Sing praiſes to the Lord, &c.] This is the guiſe of godly people, to provoke others to praiſe God, as being unſatisfiable in their deſires of doing him that ſervice, and as deeming that others ſee him as they do totum totum deſiderabilem, worthy to bee praiſed, Pſal. 18. 3. highly to be admired, verſ. 1. of this Pſalm.

Verſ. 12. When he maketh inquiſition for blood] for innocent bloud unjuſtly ſpilled; as he did for the bloud of Abel, Gen. 4. 10. of Naboth (1 King. 9. 26. ſurely I have ſeen yeſterday the bloud of Naboth; Murther ever bleeds freſh in the eyes of God) of Zechariah the Son of Barachiah, 2 Chron. 24. 22. thoſe ungrateful Gueſts, who ſlew thoſe that came to call them; And when the King heard it (for Bloud cryes aloud) he was wroth, and deſtroyed thoſe Murtherers, Matth. 22. 6, 7. Theſe ſhall have bloud to drink; for they are worthy, Revel. 16. 6. God draws Articles of enquiry in this caſe as ſtrict, and as critical, as ever the Inquiſition of Spain doth; the proceedings whereof are with greateſt ſecrecy, and ſeverity.

He forgetteth not the cry of the Humble] Heb. of the poor, lowly, meek, afflicted. Humility and Meekneſs are Collactaneæ, twin-ſiſters, as Bernard hath it.

Verſ. 13. Have mercy upon me, O Lord, &c.] Theſe are the words (ſay ſome) of thoſe humble ones whom God forgetteth not; they were Gods remembrancers. See Iſa. 62. 6. or, it is a prayer of David for further deliverances, according to that, I will call upon the Lord, who is worthy to be praiſed, Pſal. 18. 3. Betwixt prayſing and praying he divided his time, and drove an holy trade between Heaven and Earth.

Thou that liſteſt me up from the gates of death] i. e. Ex præſentiſſimo & certiſſimo interitu, from deſperate and deadly dangers ſuch as threaten preſent deſtruction; and ſhew a man the Grave even gaping for him. David was oft at this paſs; and God delivered Paul from ſo great a death, 2 Cor. 1. 10. he commonly reſerveth his hand for a dead lift, and reſcueth thoſe who were even talking of their Graves.

Verſ. 14. That I may ſhew forth all thy praiſes] i. e. All that I can compaſs or attain unto: Aliter omnes laudes Dei dici non poſſunt, quia plures ignorat homo quàm novit, ſaith R. David here: for all the praiſes of God cannot be ſhewn forth; ſith thoſe wee know not are more than thoſe we know.

In the gates of the daughter of Zion.] Theſe are oppoſed to the Gates of Death, as Aben-Ezra here noteth; and betoken the moſt publick places, and beſt frequented.

Verſ. 15. The Heathen are ſunk down, &c.] Hoc eſt initium cantici Sanctorum, ſaith Aben-Ezra. This is the beginning of the Saints Song, knit to the former verſe thus: ſaying, The Heathen, &c.

In the Net which they hid, &c.] To Hunters, they are compared for cruelty, and to Fowlers for craft. But ſee their ſucceſs, they are ſunk down in their own pit, caught in their own Net. Thus it befell Pharaoh, Exod. 15. 9, 10. Jabin, and Sicera, Judg. 4. Sennacherib, 2 Chron. 32. Antiochus Epiphanes, Maxentius the Tyrant, (who fell into the river Tiber, from his own falſe Bridge laid for Conſtantine) The Spaniſh Armado, our Powder-Papiſts, &c. See the Note on, Pſal. 7. 15. Euſeb. lib. 9. cap. 9.

Verſ. 16. The Lord is known by the judgement, &c.] The Heathen Hiſtorian obſerved, that the ruine of Troy ſerved to teach men, that God puniſheth great ſinners with heavie plagues. Go up to Shiloh, &c. Herod.

The wicked is ſnared in the work of his own hands] Heb. Palms, hollows, noting the cloſe conveyance of his wicked plots and practiſes, but for his own miſchief.

Higgaion, Selah] Ainſworth rendreth it Meditation Selah; meaning that this is a matter of deep meditation, worthy to be well-minded, and ſpoken, or ſung with earneſt conſideration always. The word is found only here, and Pſal. 92. 3. where alſo the wonderful works of God are diſcourſed. R. Solomon Note here is, Ultimum judicium debet eſſe continua meditatio. The laſt Judgement ſhould be continually thought upon.

Verſ. 17. The wicked ſhall be turned into Hell] Heb. into to Hell (twice) that is, into the nethermoſt Hell, the loweſt Dungeon of Hell. The word Leſchaulah hath a vehement inforcement from ה locall, as Grammarians call it, and importeth, that they Auguſt. they ſhall be caſt into outer darkneſs, In tenebras ex tenebris infelicitèr excluſi, infelicius excludendi. R. Solomons Note here is, They ſhall be carried away from Hell to Judgement, and from Judgement they ſhall be returned to the deepeſt Pit of Hell. This if men did but beleeve, they durſt not do as they do, as once Cato ſaid to Cæſar.

And all the Nations] The wicked be they never ſo many of them, they may not think to eſcape for their multitudes, as amongſt Mutineers in an Army, the tenth man ſometimes is puniſhed, the reſt go free.

Verſ. 18. For the needy ſhall not always be forgotten] Becauſe he that ſhall come will come, and will not tarry. The Lord is at hand to help thoſe that are forſaken of their hopes. Julian Lining was apprehended by Dale the Promooter (in Queen Maries days) who ſaid unto him, You hope, and hope, but your hope ſhall be aſlope. For though the Queen fail, ſhe that you hope for ſhall never come at it; for there
Act. & Mon. 1871. is my Lord Cardinals Grace, and many others between her and it, &c. But the Cardinal dyed ſoon after the Queen, and (according to Father Latimers prayer) Elizabeth was crowned, and England yet once more looked upon.

Luther. Verſ. 19. Ariſe O Lord, let not man prevail] Prayers are the Churches Weapons, her Bombarda & inſtrumenta bellica, whereby ſhe is terrible, as an Army with Banners; ſhe prays down her enemies.

Verſ. 20. Put them in fear O Lord] ſtrike them with a panick terrour, as once the Canaanites, Philiſtines, 2 Sam. 5. Syrians, 2 King. 7. Germans, in the War againſt the Huſſites, &c. Some read it, Put a Law upon them, bridle them, bound them as thou haſt done the Sea, Job 38. 11. The Greek and Syriack favour this reading.

That the Nations may know themſelves to be but men] And not gods, as that proud Prince of Tyrus, Ezek. 27. and Antiochus, who would needs be ſtiled θεὸς, to ſuch an height of pride will Perſecutors grow, if they proſper, and be not taken a link lower, as we ſay. Homo, id eſt fracti, ſaith R. Obad. on this Text; Men, that is, broken crackt-creatures, Morbis mortiq; obnoxii, woful weights, ſorry and ſickly Caitives. This to know ſavingly, is the beginning of true Humility, ſaith Auguſtine here.

PSAL. X.

VErſ. 1. Why ſtandeſt thou afar off, O Lord?] As if thou hadſt forgotten what thou hadſt promiſed thy people in the former Pſalm; which the Greek and Latine Verſions make to be one and the ſame with this, as having no title, and tending almoſt to the ſame purpoſe: Hence the difference in Numbers, which holdeth almoſt to the end of the Pſalter, viz. to Pſal. 148.

Why hideſt thou thy ſelf in time of trouble?) So God ſeemeth to do, when he helpeth not preſently; neither doth any thing more trouble the Saints in affliction, than the want of Gods gracious preſence. This maketh them thus to expoſtulate and lament after the Lord; not quarrel as thoſe Hypocrites did, Iſa. 58. 3. or revile, as Caligula did his Jupiter, taking up that Verſe in Homer, Ζεῦ πατὲρ ὅτις σεῖο θεῶν ὀλοώτερος ἄλλος, or with him (little better) in the holy Hiſtory, who ſaid, Behold this evil is of the Lord, and what ſhould I wait for the Lord any longer? 2 King. 6. 33. The good Soul knows that God waiteth to be gracious; and as he ſeldom cometh at our time, ſo at his own (which is ever the beſt) time, he never faileth.

ἐμπυρίζεται Chryſoſt. Verſ. 2. The wicked in his pride doth perſecute, &c.] Heb. hotly purſueth, and that out of his pride, the true cauſe of Perſecution; whatever elſe is pretended. And this is fitly here alledged, and urged as an Argument to move God to make haſt. See Deut. 32. 27. The Saints fare the better for the inſolencies and outrages of their enemies, whoſe ruine is thereby accelerated, and ſomewhat God will do the ſooner for his people, leſt the enemy exalt himſelf, Pſal. 140. 8. and ſay, Our hand is high, the Lord hath not done this.

Let them be taken in the devices, &c.] As all Perſecutors are ſure to be. In which regard Tertullian well adviſeth Scapula, Si nobis non parcis, tibi parce; ſi non tibi, Carthagini. If thou wilt not ſpare us Chriſtians, yet ſpare thy ſelf; or if not thy ſelf, yet thy City Carthage, which elſe will ſmart and ſmoke for thy cruelty.

Verſ. 3.

Verſ. 3. For the wicked boaſteth of his hearts deſire] Though the Soul of the wicked deſire evil, Prov. 21. 10. yet he glorieth in it, as did that Thraſonical Lamech, Gen. 4. and that Pyrgopolynices Nebuchadnezzar, Iſa. 10. 9, 10, 11, 12. This the juſt and jealous God cannot bear, as neither that which followeth. See Pſal. 5. Phil. 3. 19.

He bleſſeth the Covetous] Ut ſapientem & providum, as a wiſe man and good Husband. So they in Malachy, who ſaid, And now we count the proud happy, &c. Felix ſcelus virtus vocatur. Seneca.

Whom the Lord abhorreth] ſmiting his hands with indignation at his diſhoneſt gain, Ezek. 22. 13. like as Balac did at Balaam, with whom he was deeply diſpleaſed, Numb. 24. 10.

Verſ. 4. The wicked through the pride of his countenance] That is, of his heart, appearing in his countenance; as a maſter-pock in his fore-head. For Pride buddeth, Ezek. 7. 10. the pride of Iſrael teſtifieth to his face, Hoſ. 5. 5. the thoughts are oft ſeen in the countenance; and the heart is printed upon the face; Iſa. 3. 9. 'Tis a hard thing, ſaith one, to have a brazen face, and a broken heart.

Will not ſeek] He thinks it not neceſſary, or worth the while; and his practice is agreeable, that is, nought all over. Pride in the Soul is like a great ſwelling in the body, which (beſides that it is a dangerous Symptom) unfits it for any good ſervice; and is apt to putrifie and to break, and to run with loathſome and foul matter: So doth Pride diſable the Soul from doing duty, and at laſt breaketh forth into odious deeds, abominable to God and men. It is obſerved, that the ground whereon the Peacock uſeth to ſit, is by that occaſion made exceeding barren: ſo where pride roofteth and reigneth, no good groweth.

God is not in all his thoughts] God is neither in his head, as here, nor in his heart, Pſal. 14. 1. nor in his words, Pſal. 12. 4. nor in his ways, Tit. 1. 16. he is wholly without God in the world, Epheſ. 2. he ſtudies Atheiſm, and all his thoughts are, There is no God (ſo this Text may be read) he would fain ſo perſwade himſelf.

Verſ. 5. His ways are always grievous] As he Pleaſeth not God, ſo he is contrary and vexatious to men. Via ejus ſemper terrent, ſo Aben-Ezra. The Pſalmiſt here noteth him, for ſuch an one as the Cyclops are ſet forth to have been by the Poets.

Thy Judgements are far above out of his ſight] He looketh not ſo high, but reckoneth that qua ſupra nos nihil ad nos. If he read them at any time, he regardeth them as little as he doth the ſtory of forein Wars, wherein he is not concerned.

As for all his enemies, he puffeth at them] He holdeth himſelf man good enough to make his party good with them, and that he can overthrow them all with a puffe. He defieth them, and domineereth over them, as the Greek renders it. πασιν αυτοις ἐνυβρίζει Sept. ἐκφυσᾷ. Chryſoſt.

Verſ. 6. He hath ſaid in his heart, I ſhall not be moved] So ſaid a better man once, Pſal. 30. 6. but he was quickly confuted. If a beleever conclude by the force of his faith, that he ſhall never be moved from that good eſtate in which Chriſt hath ſet him, this is the triumph of truſt, and not the vain vaunt of preſumption.

For I ſhall never be in adverſity] The Chaldee hath it, Quoniam non ſum in malo; and underſtandeth it of the evil of ſin, as Exod. 32. 22. and then the ſenſe is, becauſe the wicked man ſuffereth not the puniſhment of ſin, therefore he conceiteth that he is innocent,, and without ſin. See Hoſ. 12. 8. with the Note.

Verſ. 7. His mouth is full of curſing and deceit] Such curſing men are curſed men; and for ſuch ſlippery and deceitful perſons, the Lord is the avenger of all ſuch; 1 Theſſ. 4. 8.

Under his tongue is miſchief] that is, in his heart, which is by Nature placed beneath the Tongue, making its uſe of it, for much miſchief, Matth. 12. 34. Jam. 3. 8. The word Toch here rendred fraud, ſignifieth properly the middle of any thing, Quoniam fraus in medio cordis eſt, ſaith R. David, becauſe fraud is in the middle of the heart, and there-hence ſent into the mouth.

Verſ. 8. He ſitteth in the lurking-places, &c.] A deſcription of an High-way-robber, ſaith Diodate, under which name are meant all violent and fraudulent men, and their actions.

Verſ. 9. He lieth in wait ſecretly as a Lion in his den] See Job 38. 40. with the Note.

When hee draweth him into his Net] that is, into his bonds, debts, morgages, ſaith Chryſoſtome. When a poor man is once gotten into theſe Nets, wicked Oppreſſors do not only rob but raviſh them; coyning their mony upon poor mens skins, and wringing the ſponges of poor people into their own purſes. David compareth them to Canibals, Pſal. 14. 4. to greedy Lions here; another ſaith they are like the fiſh Polypus that lying in wait for other fiſhes upon the Rock, aſſimulateth to the Rock and taketh them in his Net, which hee hath naturally behind his head, and can, ſpread at his pleaſure, before they find themſelves in danger.

Sir Richard Berkley his Sum. Bon. 1. 1

Verſ. 10. He croucheth (or cruſheth) and humbleth himſelf] Lyon-like, Job. 38. 40. He can ſew the Foxes skin to the Lions hide for a need, and to compaſs his deſign. As proud as he is, yet in ſubtlety he can abaſe himſelf; and with glavering ſpeeches, and fawning behaviour, indirectly indeavor the overthrow of the innocent and diſtreſſed. To which purpoſe he can put himſelf to pain, feign himſelf ſick, and in a dying condition (as thoſe do that ſtand for the Popedome) counterfeit and pretend humility, but all is Hypocriſie.

Seipſum ægrum, & attritum fingit R. David.

That the poor may fall by his ſtrong ones] whether teeth or pawes, per impia decreta, ſaith R. Obadiah, by his wicked decrees, by the hands of his Privado's, deſperate Aſſaſſinates, ſaith another Expoſitor.

Verſ. 11. Hee hath ſaid in his heart God hath forgotten] that is, he knoweth it not, regardeth it not. To learn is nothing elſe but to remember, ſaid Socrates; and what a man hath utterly forgotten, it is all one, as if he had never known it, 2 Pet. 1. 9. hee hath forgotten that hee was purged from his old ſins, that is, hee was never purged. See verſ. 4.

Verſ. 12. Ariſe O Lord, ſurge, age, ſumme Pater, ſaid Mantuan to the Pope, ſtirring him up againſt the Turks; may wee better ſay to the Almighty God, againſt his peoples enemies. O God lift up thine hand] lift it up on high, that it may fall down the more heavily. In the firſt verſe of this Pſalm, the Prophet complained that God ſtood a farre off, and hid himſelf in time of trouble. Here hee is intreated to ariſe, to come neer, to put forth his hand for his peoples help, &c.

Verſ. 13. Wherefore doth the Wicked contemn God? q. d. It is time for thee, Lord, to ariſe and beſtir thy ſelf; for otherwiſe what will become of thy great name? The Saints cannot endure that God ſhould be ſlighted.

Hee hath ſaid in his heart] Verſ. 3. 4. This ſticks in Davids ſtomack, and draws this prayer from him, who was now bleſſedly blown up with an holy zeal for God; as was alſo good Zuinglius, when hee ſaid, In aliis manſuetus ero, in Blaſphemiis in Chriſtum, non ita. In other matters I can be mild and patient, but not ſo in caſe of Blaſphemy againſt Chriſt.

Verſ. 14. Thou haſt ſeen it] For thou art All-eye, whatever the wicked conceiteth to the contrary, making thee a God of clouts, as they ſay, or an Heathen-Idoll, which is nothing in the World.

To requite it with thine hand] reponendo in manu tua, by taking it in thy hand (ſo ſome render it) ſc. ut propius intuearis, certius conſideres, dijudices & vindices, that thou mayeſt take a more neer and narrow view of it, and duely puniſh it.

Aben-Ezra. Relinquit in te onus ſuum. R. Solomon.

The poor committeth himſelf unto thee] Heb. leaveth, relinquit ſeipſum, & currit ad te, he relinquiſheth himſelf, and runneth unto thee. Now whoſoever committeth himſelf, and his affaires to God, ſhall bee ſure to find him a faithfull Depoſitarie.

Thou art the helper of the fatherleſſe] The Worlds Refuge, as the Grand Signiour is called; The poor mans King, as James 5. of Scotland. In God the Fatherleſs findeth mercy, Hoſ. 14. 3. And theſe Arguments David uſeth in his prayer, not to move God to hear and help, but to work upon his own heart thereby, and to perſwade himſelf to more Faith, Love, Obedience, Humility, Thankfullneſs, whereby wee are the better fitted for mercy. When a man in a Ship plucks a Rock, it ſeemeth as if he pluckt the Rock nearer the ſhip, when as indeed the ſhip is pluck'd nearer the Rock. So is it in this caſe, wee ſeem to perſwade God by our Arguments, when as indeed the change is not wrought in him, but only in our ſelves; our Arguments are curarum noſtrarum levamenta, & fiducia impetrandi argumenta, the cure of our cares, and props to our faith of obtaining.

Verſ. 15. Break thou the arme of the Wicked] that arm that hath been lifted up againſt the godly, ſee Pſal. 3. 8. & 58. 7.

Seek

Seek out his wickedneſſe, that thou finde none] ad alios vel inveſtiendos, vel infeſtandos, Ezech. 23.48. Or, leave no ſin of his unpuniſhed. The Franciſcans, to prove that Francis the founder of their order was without ſin, fooliſhly alledge this Text, Quaretur peccatum illius & non inveniatur; wherein (according to the ſenſe of the Pſalmiſt) what do they elſe but wiſh that God would trace him quite thorow the courſe and trade of his iniquities, even to the uttermoſt end of them, and puniſh him accordingly; which is done, no doubt, long ſince.

Verſ. 16. The Lord is King for ever and ever] Therefore he will doubtleſſe do whatſoever hath been before deſired, and much more than wee can ask or think. Many Kings have been long-lived, as was Artaxerxes Mnemon, who reigned 62. years; Auguſtus Cæſar 56. & Elizabeth 44, &c. but died at length, to the great grief of their ſubjects and ſervants, who are ready to wiſh (as once the Romans did concerning Auguſtus) that either they had never been, or never dyed. But God is the King immortall, inviſible, &c.

The Heathen are periſhed out of his Land] the enemies, whether Jews or Gentiles are rid out of his Church; for that is Gods Land by a ſpecialty, his peculiar Portion.

Verſ. 17. Lord thou haſt heard the deſire of the humble] The whole life of a good Chriſtian is an holy deſire, ſaith Auſtin. And the deſires of the Righteous ſhall be ſatisfied, Prov. 10.24. becauſe they are framed by the Holy Spirit, according to the will of God, Rom. 8. 27. and they have the mind of Chriſt, 1. Cor. 2. 16. who knoweth the mind of the Spirit, Rom. 8, 27. though their deſires be not uttered, v.26.

Thou wilt prepare their heart] In removendis ab illo mundi negotiis, ſaith R. David, and by putting them into a praying frame, and ſo fitting them for mercy. Where God giveth a praying heart, 'tis ſure that hee will ſhew a pittying heart. If hee prepare the heart, hee will alſo bend his ear; like as when wee bid our Children ask us for this or that, wee mean to give it them; and as when wee open a purſe as wide as wee can pull it, 'tis a ſign wee intend to fill it top-full.

Thou wilt cauſe thine ear to hear] even whilſt they are preparing, and before they can ſpeak many times, Iſa. 65. 24. or whileſt they are praying, as Dan. 9. 20. Act. 4. 31. or not long after; they ſhall be ſure to have out their prayers, either in mony, or in monies-worth, as they ſay.

Verſ. 18. To judge the fatherleſſe, &c.] the Vulgar hath it, to judge for the fatherleſs, and for the oppreſſed. It is one thing (ſaith Auſtin) to judge the fatherleſs, and another thing to judge for him; this later is, to paſs ſentence on his ſide; which God the righteous Judge will be ſure to do without writhing or warping, for hee hath all that is required of a Judge originally, and eminently, viz. Wiſdome, Juſtice, Courage, Conſtancy, and Power.

That the man of the earth may no more oppreſſe] or terrifie, daunt with terrour, as Phil. 1. 28. See the Note there. Why ſhould one man be terrible to another, ſith wee are all mortales è terra, worms of the earth, clods of clay, and ſhall ſhortly return to the duſt whence wee were taken? unde ſuperbit homo? I even I am hee that comforteth you; who art thou that thou ſhouldeſt be afraid of a man that ſhall die, and of the Son of man that ſhall bee made as graſſe? And forgetteſt the Lord thy Maker--and haſt feared continually every day, becauſe of the fury of the Oppreſſor, as if hee were ready to deſtroy? and where is the fury of the Oppreſſor? Iſa. 51. 12, 13. Some obſerve that the cloſe of this Pſalm is much like that of the former. How they have been taken (by the Greek Fathers eſpecially) for one entire Pſalm, See the Note on Verſ. 1.

PSAL. XI.

VErſ. 1. In the Lord put I my truſt] This was that which David had and held, wherewith to anſwer him that reproached him (and it was an excellent good one) that hee truſted in Gods Word, Pſal. 119. 42. When it was that he gave this anſwer, In the Lord put I my truſt (whether when Sauls courtiers, under pretence of friendſhip, counſelled him to quit the Court for fear of Saul, which hee was very loth to do; or elſe when he was with Samuel at Naioth, 1 Sam. 19. 18. &c. where his carnall friends might adviſe him, as Peter did his Maſter, Mat. 16. 22. with a Fuge, fuge, David, cito, citius, citiſſime) is uncertain. But this is certain, that all the troops of ungodlineſs aime and act vigorouſly to caſt down the caſtle of confidence we have in God. This therefore we muſt be ſure to ſecure, as the Serpent doth his Head, the Souldier his Shield, Epheſ. 6. 16. This is the victory whereby we overcome the World (with its Allurements, or Affrightments) even our faith, 1 Joh. 5. 4. The beleever walketh about as a Conquerour; and he alone is the man whom the Heathen Poet elegantly deſcribeth,

Horat. Carm. lib. 3. Od. 7

Juſtum & tenacem propoſiti virum,
Non civium ardor prava jubentium,
Non vultus inſtantis tyranni
Mente quatit ſolida, &c.
Si fractus illabatur orbis,
Impavidum ferient ruinæ.

The Poet inſtanceth in Hercules and Bacchus, but had he known of David, Moſes, Micaiah, Nehemiah, Daniel, and his three friends, &c. he would rather have pitched upon them, or ſome others of thoſe Worthies, of whom the world was not worthy, Heb. 11.

Flee as a Bird to your mountain] Get you gone, you and your followers (the Hebrew word Flee is plural) or flee to your mountain, O bird; ſee you not the Fowlers ſnare? and will you not away with all ſpeed? Thus they ſought to fright him (as Birds are fearful, Iſa. 16. 2. and to make him flee from his place, as a Bird fleeth from her Neſt, Prov. 27. 8. But he was never without his Cordial, the ſame that releeved him at the ſack of Ziglag, where, in the fail of all other comforts, he incouraged himſelf in the Lord his God, 1 Sam. 30. 6. he knew that as birds flying, ſo will the Lord of Hoſts defend his people; defending alſo, he will deliver them, and paſſing over he will preſerve them, Iſa. 31. 5. This, though it were not written in Davids days, yet he had the good aſſurance of it in his ſoul.

Verſ. 2. For loe, the wicked bend their bow] ſcil. to ſhoot at you a ſilly Bird; you were beſt therefore to be packing, and not to ſtay till you come tumbling down as a Bird fetcht off with a bolt. This hath ever been the guiſe of the Churches enemies, and is ſtill, to terrifie her (if they could) and affright her out of her faith, and true religion. Nebuchadnezzar for inſtance, Antiochus that little Antichriſt, the primitive Perſecutors, and ſtill the Papiſts with their cruel Inquiſition, and otherwiſe. But what ſaith the Apoſtle, In nothing be terrified by your adverſaries, Phil. 1. 28. Be not afraid with any amazement, 1 Pet. 3. 6. Nos quidem neq; expaveſcimus neq; pertimeſcimus ea quæ ab ignorantibus patimur, ſaith Tertullian; We fear not what any of you can do to us, do your worſt. Contemptus eſt à me Romanus & favor & furor, ſaid Luther, I care not for Romes frowns, or fair hooks. This the blinde World counteth, and calleth fillineſs, or ſtubbornneſs, but they know not the force of faith, nor the privie armour of proof, that the Saints have about their hearts. They make ready their Arrow upon the ſtring (not in the quiver as the Vulgar reads it.)

Ad Scapulam,

That they may privily ſhoot] Heb. to ſhoot in the darkneſs: ſo that although the Saints hide themſelves in Caves, and dark corners, yet they are ferreted out thence by their Perſecutors, as David was by Saul often. And this ſome hold to bee the meaning of that place, Pſal. 74. 20. The dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty; that is, we can hide our ſelves no where, but the Perſecutors find us out.

Verſ. 3. If the foundations be deſtroyed] If all things be turned topſie turvie in the State, and no regard had to right or wrong, Sed vi geritur res, ut in regno Cyclopico; If Saul, notwithſtanding mine alliance to him, and innocency toward him, his many fair promiſes to me, and thoſe hazards and hardſhips I have ſuffered for his ſake, will needs go on to hunt me up and down, as a Partridge in the mountains, and to ſeek mine utter undoing, what can I do to help it? how can it bee but the moſt righteous muſt have his ſhare of ſufferings? See Pſal. 82. 5.

What can the righteous do?] More than glorifie God, by ſuffering his Will, and patiently wait for better times, comforting himſelf (as in the next verſe) in this confidence, that God is in Heaven, &c. Some render it, What hath the righteous done? The wicked will ſay, that he hath undone all, and that David with his complices complices are the cauſes of all the publick calamities and confuſions. So the Primitive Perſecutors charged the Chriſtians, and Papiſts do ſtill the Proteſtants, to be the troublers of the State, the Seeds-men of ſedition, the diſturbers of the Churches peace, &c. when as indeed themſelves are flagella Reip. flabella ſeditionis, the only traitors and troublers of Iſrael; with Athaliah they cry out Treaſon, Treaſon, when themſelves are the greateſt Traitors and Incendiaries of Chriſtendom. We may confidently ſay with the Pſalmiſt, The foundations are deſtroyed, but what hath the righteous done? Some render the words thus, But thoſe purpoſes or counſels (of Saul and his flatterers, verſ. 2.) ſhall be deſtroyed. (Saul ſhall be fruſtrated of his hope, therefore I will not flee into the mountains) But what hath the righteous done? That is, I have done nothing unrighteouſly againſt Saul, therefore I will not fly, &c.

Verſ. 4. The Lord is in his holy Temple] i. e. in Heaven, and there-hence hee both can and will do much for the releef of his poor oppreſſed, though the righteous can do little for themſelves: he alſo knows, and will clear their innocency; for he ſits between the Cherubims, whence he is wont to ſend help, Pſal. 20. 3. and hath his Throne in Heaven, whence he is wont to ſtrike terrour into the enemies, Pſal. 18. 8, &c.

Ubi deficit auxilium humanum incipit divinum. Philo.

The Lords Throne is in Heaven] This is the ſame with the former, ſerving to ſet forth Gods Sufficiency, as the following words do his Efficiency, thoſe props of Davids faith, anſwerable to Jachin and Boaz, thoſe two braſen Pillars in Salomons Temple.

Dei ſolium eſt noſtrum aſylum.

His eyes behold, his eye-lids try the children of men] The eye of God is taken in Scripture (ſaith one) either for his knowledge, or for his judgement; his eye in this Text pointeth out his knowledge, his eye-lids his critical deſcant. It is a manner of ſpeech, ſaith another, taken from thoſe mens actions who being deſirous to look upon a thing more intently do wink with their eyes, or cloſe up one of them, that they may ſee the better with the other.

Verſ. 5. The Lord trieth the righteous] or approveth, as Jam. 1. 12, he juſtifieth and accepteth him as appeareth by the oppoſition here. The vulgar rendreth it thus; Deus interrogat juſtum & impium, &c. quia per interrogatoria veritas dignoſcitur. The Lord interrogateth the juſt and the wicked ſcil. that ſo he may ſift out the truth of things. But neither doth the Hebrew word ſo ſignifie, nor doth God need any ſuch help.

His ſoul hateth] i. e. he can in no wiſe away with; and this is ſpoken of God after the manner of men, for fury, hatred, and the like affections are not in him. If it could be ſaid of Trajan the Emperour, that hee neither feared nor hated any man, how much more of God? And if of the Tribunal at Zant, much better of Gods Throne.

Hic locus odit, amat, punit, conſervat, honorat,
Nequitiam, pacem, crimina, jura, bonos.

Verſ. 6. Upon the wicked he ſhall rain ſnares] His ſoul hateth them; and, as revenge is the next effect of hatred, he will exerciſe horrible Judgements upon them. Go on they may in their wicked ways for a time, and haply think to out-run Wrath, but it ſhall eaſily overtake them, and inevitably; for the firſt thing that God ſhall rain upon them is Snares, to catch and hold them faſt, that they may ſurely ſuffer the reſt that follow. Take him, and lead him away ſafely, ſaith Judas concerning Jeſus to the Souldiers. Mark 14. 44. And the ſame in effect ſaith God to his Judgements concerning the wicked, on whom for that purpoſe he raineth Snares, i. e. he ſuddenly ſurpriſeth them: as by unexpected foul weather.

Fire and Brimſtone] Hell from Heaven, as once upon Sodom and her Siſters, figuring the vengeance of eternal fire. Jude 7. Rev. 20. 10. where the Sacrifice is ſalted with fire, Mark 9. 49. that is, burneth, but conſumeth not, Fire being of a burning, but Salt of a preſerving nature. Tophet is of a moſt tormenting temper, the fuel thereof is fire and much wood: the breath of the Lord like a ſtream of fire doth kindle it, Iſa. 30. 33. Utinam ubiq; de Gehenna diſſererentur, ſaith a Father; O that men would think, and talk much of Hell! O that they would take a turn in it; and taking a view of that formidable fire fed with a river of Brimſtone, and blown blown by the breath of the Almighty, they would haſten out of their Natural condition, as Lot did out of Sodome; ſith there is the ſmell of the fire and brimſtone already upon them!

And an horrible tempeſt] Ventus procelloſiſſimus, a moſt terrible blaſting Whirlwind, ſuch as the Greeks call Preſter; whereof ſee Plin. Lib. 2. c. 48. and the Evangeliſt calleth Euroclydon, Act. 27. 14. The mariners miſchief.

This ſhall be the portion of their cup] Vel, portio partu eorum, id eſt, ipſiſſima eorum portio; duplicatur idem ſenſus duobus verbis, ſaith R. David. He ſeemeth to allude to the cuſtom at Feaſts, where each had his Cup, his demenſum, or meaſure of meat and drink. Wicked ones ſhall drink up the cup of Gods Wrath (worſe than that cup of boyling Lead powred down the drunken Turks throat by the command of the Baſhaw) though it be brim-full, and have eternity to the bottom, Pſal. 75. 8.

Verſ. 7. For the righteous Lord loveth righteouſneſs] Sc. as a reflection of himſelf, as a peece of his own image. This is better than eyes opened, limbs reſtored, Pſal. 146. 8.

His countenance] Heb. Countenances, or their faces, in myſtery of the Holy Trinity.

Vide Vicars in Loc.

Doth behold the upright] With ſingular delight and complacency.

PSALM XII.

VErſ. 1. Help Lord] 'Twas high time to call to Heaven for help, when Saul cried, Go kill me up the Prieſts of Jehovah (the occaſion as it is thought of making this Pſalm) and therein committed the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, as ſome grave Divines are of opinion, 1 Sam. 22. 17 David after many ſad thoughts about that ſlaughter, and the occaſion of it, Doegs malicious information; together with the paucity of his faſt Friends, and the multitude of his ſworn Enemies at Court, breaks forth abruptly into theſe words, Help Lord, help at a dead lift. The Arabick verſion hath it, Deliver me by main force, as with Weapons of War, for the Lord is a Man of War, Exod. 15. 3.

For the godly man ceaſeth] Heb. The merciful man, who having obtained mercy from thee, would ſhew me mercy, and defend mine innocency; ſuch as theſe are baniſhed the Court, which is now poſſeſſed by Paraſites and Sycophants.

For the faithful fail] Veraces, the true and truſty ones, ſuch as a man may ſafely confide in; theſe are rare Birds. See Mic. 7. 1, 2, 3, &c. with the Notes there. When the Son of Man cometh, ſhall he finde faith (in this ſence alſo) in the earth? Luke 18. Hard and ſcarce. When Varus was ſlain Auguſtus complained that now he had none left, that would deal plainly and faithfully with him; Lewis the Eleventh of France would ſay, that he had plenty of all things but of one. And being asked of what? Of Truth, quoth he. Aurelian the Emperour was bought and ſold by his Counſellours, for he might know nothing, but as they informed him. David complaineth of Saul, that he was too too apt to hearken to every claw-back tell-tale, 1 Sam. 24. 9. & 26. 19. ſo that he could have no fair dealing.

Verſ. 2. They ſpeak vanity every one with his neighbour] They ſpeak falſly and fraudulently, and therein have an Art, as Jer. 9. 4, 5. ſuch as the Devil hath taught them.

With flattering lips] Blandientibus, vel dividentibus. The Syriack verſion hath it, with dividing lips, ſuch as ſeparate very friends.

With a double heart do they ſpeak] Heb. With an heart and a heart. So Horace ſaith of Ulyſſes.

Vid. 6. Animus verſutulus & verſatilis.

Curſus duplicis per mare Ulyſſei.

The Prophet here meaneth that they had one heart in their body, and another in their mouth, being deſperate diſſemblers, ſuch as the French are ſaid to be. Thoſe men of Zebulon were none ſuch, 1 Chro. 12. 33.

Verſ. 3. The Lord ſhall cut off all flattering lips] as a rotten member is cut off from the body — Ne pars ſincera trahatur; or as a barren tree is ſtocked up, that it cumber not the ground. There is a wonderful ſympathy between Princes and Paraſites, raſites, whoſe ſong is, Mihi placet, quicquid Regi placet; and whoſe practice is to ſpeak ſuavia potius quam ſana, ſweet, rather than ſound things. But God will cut off ſuch lips (taking notice of the offending member) as hee dealt by Doeg, Ahitophel, Sheba, Shemaiah the Nehelamite, Jer. 29. 32. and as it were to be wiſhed that Chriſtian Princes would do; ſerving them all as the Theſſalians did that City in Greece called Κολάκεια, or flattery, which they deſtroyed and pulled down to the ground. Hen. Steph. Apol. pro Herod.

And the Tongue that ſpeaketh proud things] Magnifica, bubbles of words, bluſtering ſpeeches, breathing out nothing but arrogance, and contempt of God and his people. Theſe grandiloqui muſt one day anſwer for their hard ſpeeches with flames about their ears, whatever they meet with in the mean while, as did Neſtorius, Tho. Arundel, Stephen Gardiner, and others; plagued here in their tongues, thoſe little Members that had boaſted ſo great things, Jam. 3.

Verſ. 4. Who have ſaid, with our tongues will wee prevail) Dictitant enim, this was a common word with them; And ſurely the tongue is a deſperate weapon, made in the form a flaming ſword, and elſewhere by David compared to a Tuck or Rapier, Pſal. 42. to a raſor alſo doing deceit, Pſal. 52. The Chalde Paraphraſt hath this Text thus, Becauſe wee can ſwear and lie, therefore wee ſhall prevail.

Our lips are our own] Heb. are with us, that is, wee have the command of our tongues, and have words at will; wee can ſpeak perſwaſively, and therefore wee doubt not to perſwade Saul to any thing againſt David. Socrates in his Apology, My Lords, ſaid he to the Judges; I know not how you have been affected with mine adverſaries eloquence, while you heard them ſpeak; for mine own part, I aſſure you, that I, whom it toucheth moſt, was almoſt drawn to beleeve that all they ſaid, though againſt my ſelf, was true; when they ſcarcely uttered one word of truth. Caius Curio the Roman was ingenioſe nequam, wittily wicked, and the Duke of Buckingham in his ſpeech to the Londoners, for Rich. 3. gained this (though ſlender) commendation, that no man could deliver ſo much bad matter in ſo good words, and quaint phraſes. Paterculus.

Who is Lord over us?] ſc. to hinder us from ſpeaking what and when we liſt with fineneſſe and eloquence; though to the ſlaying of three at once, the tale-bearer, the tale-hearer, and the party traduced. R. Samuel Ben. Jochai hath this note upon the Text; A ſlanderous tongue is called Laſhon Tabitha, becauſe it ſlayeth three; but here it ſlew four, viz. Doeg, Saul, Nob the City of the Prieſts, and Abner, who ſuffered it ſo to be, 1. Sam. 22. Lingua tenax.

Verſ. 5. For the oppreſſion of the poor] whoſe very oppreſſion (though they complain not) hath a voice and God will hear it, for he is gracious, Exod. 22. 27. Hee heard Hagars affliction, though ſhe ſaid nothing, Gen. 16. 11. hee heareth the young Ravens that cry unto him by implication only.

For the ſighing of the needy] If it bee but their breathing, Lam. 3. 56. God can feel it, but the ſighs of his people are effectuall orators, Exod. 2. 23, 24, 25. & 3. 7. and their tears he puts in a bottle, Pſal. 56. 9.

Now will I ariſe] ſc. in the nick of time, when all ſeems to be loſt. Mans extremity is Gods opportunity. Cum duplicarenter lateres, venit Moſes, ſee Iſa. 33. 10. Now, Now, Now.

Saith the Lord] Dixit mihi per Prophetiam, Iſa. 22. 14.

From him that puffeth at him] That defyeth him, and thinks hee can blow him away at a blaſt; but if God ariſe onely, his enemies ſhall bee ſcattered, as Thiſtle-down is by a puff of wind, Pſa. 68. 1. Some render the Text, Hee will puff at him, that is, the oppreſſed will now dare to ſpeak freely, who before durſt not mute. R. David.

Verſ. 6. The words of the Lord are pure words] free from all inſincerity or falſhood, and not like thoſe of Sauls flatterers, vile and vitious. All Gods promiſes are infallible, and ſuch as a man may write upon, as they ſay; They are yea and Amen, 2 Cor. 1. 20. that is, Truth and aſſurance. God hath hitherto kept promiſe with nights and dayes, that they ſhall one ſucceed another, Jerem. 33. 20, 25. therefore much more will he keep promiſe with his people.

As ſilver tryed in a Furnace] In a ſublimatory or crucible. The Greeks call it δοκίμιον, St. Peters word, 1 Ep. 1. 7.

Purified

Puriſied ſeven times] that is, ſufficiently. Alchimie-gold as it will not paſſe the ſeventh fire, ſo it doth not comfort the heart, as true gold will.

Verſ. 7. Thou ſhalt keep them] that is, Verba prædicta, the forementioned words or promiſes, ſaith Aben-Ezra. Or, keep thou them (prayerwiſe,) and ſo David puts Gods promiſes in ſuit. A certain good man having all taken from him, and his Wife deſiring to know how hee and his Family ſhould live? He anſwered, hee would now put his Bond in ſute; that is, he would urge God with his Promiſes.

Thou ſhalt preſerve them] Heb. Him, that is, every one of them, viz. the poor and needy, amongſt whom David reckons himſelf, which ſhews his humility.

From this Generation] So they are called for their multitude, in oppoſition to thoſe few faithful ones, verſ. 1. An evil and adulterous Generation they were, a Baſtardly brood, as Mat. 12. 39. Omne tempus feret Clodios, Catones non omne feret, ſaith Seneca.

Verſ. 8. The wicked walk on every ſide] In circuitu, ſaith the Vulgar; the circular Motion is moſt ſubtle, the Devil walketh the round to do miſchief; but better render it circumquaq; on every ſide, to ſhew their numbers and their inſolencies; all places are full of them, ſuch duſt-heaps are found in every corner; when as the godly are as the ſalt of the earth, ſprinkled here and there (as Salt uſeth to be) to keep the reſt from putrifying.

When the vileſt men are exalted] Heb. Vilities, the abſtract for the concrete, quiſquiliæ, ἐτίδαιοι. Oft, empty Veſſels ſwim aloft, rotten Poſts are gilt with adulterate Gold, the worſt weeds ſpring up braveſt. Chaff will get to the top of the Fan; when good Corn, as it lieth at the bottom of the heap, ſo it falls low at the feet of the Fanner. The reaſon why wicked men walk on every ſide, are ſo brisk, ſo buſie, and who but they? is given in to be this, becauſe Loſels and Rioters were exalted. See Prov. 28. 12. 18. & 29. 2. As Rhewms and Catarrhes fall from the Head to the Lungs, and cauſe a Conſumption of the whole body; ſo it is in the Body Politick. As a Fiſh putrifies firſt in the head, and then in all the parts: So here. Some render the Text thus, When they (that is the wicked) are exalted, it is a ſhame for the Sons of men, that other men, who better deſerve preferment, are not only ſlighted, but vilely handled by ſuch worthleſs Ambitioniſts; who yet the higher they climbe, as Apes, the more they diſcover their deformities.

PSAL. XIII.

VErſ. 1. How long wilt thou forget me, O Lord, for ever?] It appeareth that when David penned this Pſalm (which ſome think was about the end of Sauls Perſecution, when he was forced to fly into the Land of the Philiſtines, 1 Sam. 27. 1.) he was under a dreadful deſertion, and that for a long while together; Hence his many How-longs, and for ever? Chriſt (ſaith Greenham) was forſaken for a few hours, David for a few months, and Job for a few years. Luther confeſſeth of himſelf, that after his converſion he lay three days in deſperation; and the like is reported of Mr. Robert Bolton, who felt himſelf for the time in the Suburbs of Hell, as it were. So did Heman, Pſal. 88. 5. ſo did David here, and elſewhere. The final abſence of God is Hell it ſelf; Depart from me yee curſed, is worſe than into everlaſting fire. To be puniſhed from the preſence of the Lord is the Hell of Hells, 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. God ſeemeth to forget his deareſt Children ſometimes for a ſeaſon, to the end that they may remember themſelves, and become every way better; as the Lion leaves her Whelps till they have almoſt killed themſelves with roaring, that they may become the more courageous. But to ſpeak properly, God cannot forget his people, Iſa. 44. 16. & 49. 14, 15, 16. Non deſerit Deus, etiamſi deſerere videatur; non deſerit etiamſi deſerat, ſaith Auſtin: If he leave us for a time, yet he forſaketh us not at all. If he hide his face (as in the next words) which is a further trial, and a greater miſery (for it importeth indignation, contempt, and hatred) yet it is but for a moment, though it ſhould be during life; and he therefore taketh liberty to do it, ſaith one, becauſe he hath an eternity of time, to reveal his kindneſs in; time enough for kiſſes and embraces: mean while, as when the Sun is eclipſed, though the earth wants the light thereof, yet not the influence thereof; ſo Gods

ſupporting Grace is ever with his deſerted.

Verſ. 2. How long ſhall I take counſel in my ſoul?] i. e. conceal my grief, ſaith Aben-Ezra, which is no ſmall aggravation of it; or, how long ſhall I toſs and tumble in my mind, ſundry counſels, and purpoſes, but all to no purpoſe? This is no ſmall affliction, when we try all courſes to get out of durance, and nothing will do. Such muſt needs have much ſorrow in their hearts.

Having ſorrow in my heart daily] Heb. by day, ſc. when others are full of buſineſs and forget their ſorrows, ſaith R. David. But the Greek rendreth it, day and night. David was a cheerfull man, and a great Muſician; but at this time heavineſſe had poſſeſt his heart, and his harp would not relieve him. Sadneſſe of Spirit had dryed up his bones, Prov. 17. 22. and made him a very bag of bones, a bottle in the ſmoak ſhrinking away to nothing almoſt. See Prov. 12. 25. & 15. 13. and the Notes.

Verſ. 3. Conſider and hear mee O Lord my God] Hee turns him to God in this peck of troubles (for they ſeldome come ſingle) and pleads the Covenant, My God; beſeeching him to ſee and hear both at once, how it fared with him, and to ſend him ſeaſonable and ſuitable ſuccour. It were wide with the faithfull, if they had not their God to repair unto in diſtreſſe, pouring out their ſouls into his bleſſed boſome. This they muſt do moſt earneſtly, when under a cloud of deſertion; as our Saviour being in an agony prayed more fervently, Luk. 22. 44. and as Micah having loſt his Gods, ſet up his Note, Judg. 18.

Lighten mine eyes leſt I ſleep death] i. e. Comfort my conſcience, clear up my condition, and chear up my drooping ſpirit, leſt I faint away as a dying man, whoſe eyes through weakneſſe wax dimme; leſt I fall into that ſomnus ferreus, as the Poets call death, that longeſt ſleep;

Surge, ne longus tibi ſomnus unde
Non times, detur.

Hor. lib. 3. O
11.

Verſ. 4. Leſt mine enemy ſay, I have prevailed againſt him] This David frequently deprecateth, as a great evill, becauſe Gods honour was concerned in it, and would ſuffer by it. As unskilfull hunters ſhooting at wild Beaſts, do ſometimes kill a man; ſo Perſecutors ſhooting at Saints, hit Chriſt, reproach him; and this the Saints are very ſenſible of.

And thoſe that trouble me rejoyce when I am moved] Compoſe Comedies out of my Tragedies, & iram Dei ad calumniam rapiant. The wicked are vindictive and implacable, ſick of the Devills diſeaſe ἐπιχαιρεκακία, rejoycing at other mens harms, revelling in other mens ruins; But this is to inrage God, and haſten wrath, Prov. 24. 17, 18.

Verſ. 5. But I have truſted in thy mercy] Notwithſtanding all the endeavours of Earth and of Hell to caſt down this caſtle of my confidence, I will not quit it; but be ſtill as a green Olive tree in the houſe of God; Ile truſt in the mercy of God for ever and ever, Pſal. 52. 8.

Verſ. 6. I will ſing unto the Lord] How farre different is the end of this Pſalm, from the beginning? See the like, Pſalm 6. 1. with the Note there.

Becauſe hee hath dealt bountifully with mee] Qui retribuit mihi, ſo Popiſh meritmongers read it, and would there-hence collect ſomething in favour of their abſurd Tenent. But their own Vulgar Tranſlation hath it, bona tribuit, hath given mee good things; And it is well obſerved, that though the Hebrew word be ſometimes taken for rewarding evill for good, Pſal. 7. 5. or evill for evill, Pſal. 137. 8. yet from God to his people it commonly ſignifieth a bountifull rewarding of good things inſtead of evill, which wee rather do deſerve, So Pſal. 116. 7. & 110. 17. & 142. 8.

PSAL. XIV.

Verſ. 1. The fool] That ſapleſſe fellow, that carcaſe of a man, that walking ſepulchre of himſelf, in whom all Religion and right Reaſon is withered and waſted, dryed up and decayed. That Apoſtate, in whom naturall Principles are extinct, and from whom God is departed; as when the Prince is removing, hangings are taken down. That meer Animal that hath no more than a reaſonable ſoul, and for little other purpoſe than as ſalt, to keep his body from putrefying. That wicked man hereafter deſcribed, that ſtudieth Atheiſm, Hath ſaid in his heart] As David proves afterward by his practice; for there are practicall Atheiſts as well as Dogmaticall. See a like paſſage, Pſal. 36. 1. the tranſgreſſion of the Wicked ſaith, within my heart (that is, my mind gives mee, and I am ſtrongly perſwaded) that there is no fear of God before his eyes. This is the charge, but what proof is there? proof good enough, verſ. 2,3,4. For hee flattereth himſelf, &c. So here; Hee is a flat Atheiſt; for corrupt hee is, and become abominable, &c. That which Cicero ſaith of Epicurus, that leſt hee ſhould offend the Athenians, verbis reliquit deos, re ſuſtulit, in words hee affirmed there were Gods, but in deed hee denied a deity, is found true in many even at this day; for all places are full of them, and ſo is Hell too. Lucian is their old Teſtament, and Machiavell their New. Worſe they are than Agrippa, who was almoſt a Chriſtian; worſe than Protagoras with his De diis utrum ſint, non an ſim affirmare. For in their hearts and lives there is heard this helliſh language,

De nat. Deor.

There is no God] Oh horrible! Not that Atheiſm can ever find a perfect and continuall aſſent in mans heart: For there is no Nation under Heaven ſo barbarous, but yeelds that there is a God. When man fell from God, this Truth ſtood; as when Cities and great buildings are overthrown by war, ſome Towers, ſome Pinnacles ſurvive the violence. They lye, ſaith Seneca, who ſay that they hold there is no God; for though to thee they ſay ſo by day, yet to themſelves and by night they doubt of it, at leaſt. And when they come to dye, they ſometimes cry out they are damned; as did Thomas Blaverus chief Counſellor ſometimes to the King of Scots; and one Arthur Miller a profeſt Atheiſt, and before them both, a certain deſperate Dean of Pauls.

Theat. Hiſt. 127.

Sword againſt Swearers, Pa. 36.

Corrupt are they and become abominable] Or loathſome; how ſhould they bee better, that have laid hands upon al the principles in their heads, and made a clean riddance of them; that they may run riot in ſin without reſtraint or controule? which while others ſee, they alſo are ready to ſay with that Poet,

Sollicitor nullos eſſe putare Deos.

Mr. Wards Hap. of Parts

I have read of a Woman who living in profeſſed doubt of the God-head, after better illumination and repentance, did often proteſt, that the vicious life of a great Schollar in that Town did conjure up thoſe damnable doubtings in her ſoul.

There is none that doeth good] i. e. None to ſpeak of, no conſiderable number,

Apparent rari nantes in gurgite vaſto.

Virgil. Æneid.

Verſ. 2. The Lord looked down from Heaven upon the Children of men] As oppoſed to the Children of God; ſo ſome take it, as Gen. 4. 26. & 6. 2. As a Judge he looketh down, he vieweth, he taketh cognizance, ere hee proceedeth to ſentence: Thus he dealt with the old World, with Sodom, with Egypt, &c. to teach us not to bee over haſty. No more haſt than good ſpeed, ſaith one. The cæleſtiall Spheres, the higher they are in ſituation, the ſlower in their proper motion; and the ſupreme Judge of all uſeth much forbearance.

Any that did underſtand and ſeek God] Theſe only are they, whom God looketh after; not the rich, but the righteous. And becauſe Knowledge is the ground of all goodneſſe, as folly is of wickedneſſe, verſ. 1. therefore is it here ſaid, any that did underſtand and ſeek God. Loe theſe are thoſe precious ones whom God regardeth; ſuch as are full of goodneſſe, filled with all knowledge, Rom. 15. 14. The Father ſeeketh ſuch to worſhip him, Joh. 4. 23.

Verſ. 3. They are all gone aſide, &c.] This is Gods own report of the matter, fully anſwering to that before given in by David, verſ. 1. Good men have the mind of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 2. 16. and do fully concurre with him in Judgement and affection. David was a man after Gods own heart, and the heart of Paul is the heart of Chriſt, ſaith Chryſoſtome. But why then doth not David except himſelf out of this univerſitas declinantium, community of ſtraglers that are gone aſide? and why doth St. Paul argue from this Text, that all, both Jews and Gentiles, are ſtark naught? Rom. 3. 10,11,12. I anſwer, becauſe by nature there is never a better of us: but πανοὶ μὲν θρῖπες πανοὶ ἠδὲ καὶ ἰπνὸς, as the Greek Proverb hath it. All we like ſheep have gone aſtray, ſaith the whole Church, Iſa. 53. Homo eſt inverſus decalogus, we naturally all ſtand acroſs to all goodneſs. The word here rendred gone aſide, ſignifieth to give back ſturdily, as a ſtubborn Heifer, that refuſeth to receive the yoke.

They are altogether become filthy] Heb. ſtinking, yeelding a worſe ſmell than Carrion doth, or than the filthy Fox doth, of whom Oppianus reporteth (and experience ſheweth it to be true) that when he is beſet on all ſides by the Doggs that hunt him, he bewrayeth his tail with urine, and dung, of a moſt loathſome ſmell, and beſmearing therewith the Doggs Noſes, driveth them away therewith many times. But all this is nothing to the filth and ſtench of ſin, which made their very Incenſe an abomination, Iſa. 1. 13. and rendreth them moſt like the Devil, that foul Spirit, that ever goeth out with a ſtench, as they ſay of him. The Hebrews have the ſame word for ſin, and a dead Carcaſs; and again, the ſame word for ſin, and ſtench. Gods Vine-yard brought forth ſtinking Grapes, Iſa. 5. and the wicked utter rotten Language, Epheſ. 4. Hence Longinquus eſt Jehovah ab impiis, The Lord ſtands aloof off from the wicked, Prov. 15. 29. Pſal. 5. 5. that is, from all for whom Chriſt hath not given himſelf an Offering, and a Sacrifice to God for a ſweet ſmelling ſavour, Epheſ. 5. 2. The Apoſtle rendreth it, They are uſeleſs: or, as he elſewhere phraſeth it, to every good work reprobate, Tit. 1. ult.

Bodin. Nat. 352.

There is none that doth good] Spiritually good, and unto divine acceptation. There is many times Malum opus in bona materia. How can you that are evil do good works? Good they may be materially, but not formally and eventually; ſuch were the good parts and practices of Socrates, Ariſtides, Scipio, Atticus, Cato, and other honeſt Heathens; they were no better than ſplendida peccata, gliſtering ſins, becauſe they failed,

1 Quoad fontem, they did not out of the good treaſure of their hearts bring forth thoſe good things: they were ſtrangers to the Life of God, to the new Nature.

2 Quoad finem, they brought forth fruit to themſelves, Hoſ. 10. 1. they had not good aims in their good actions. Now, Bonum non fit niſi ex integra cauſa; malum ex quolibet defectu, ſay the Schools.

No not one] עַד; ad unum. i. e. ad Chriſtum, ſaith Auſtin, not conſidering the force of the Hebrew phraſe, which importeth an utter denial of any meer man, that of himſelf doeth good.

Verſ. 4. Have all the workers of iniquity no knowledge?] No, not ſo much as Pilates Wife had in a Dream; for elſe they would take heed of having any thing to do with thoſe juſt men. But they are workers of iniquity, habituated and hardned in cruelty, fleſhed in bloud; and having an hoof upon their hearts, ſo that they are Maſters of their Conſciences, and have taken a courſe with them. In this queſtion here asked, the Pſalmiſt doth not ſo much quærere, as queri, ask, as chide, and complain.

Who eat up my people as they eat bread] That is, quotidie, daily, ſaith Auſtin; as duly as they eat bread; or, with the ſame eagerneſs and voracity. Theſe man-eaters, theſe λαοβόροι, cruel Cannibals, make no more conſcience to undoe a poor man, than to eat a good meal when they are hungry. Like Pickerels in a Pond, or Sharks in the Sea, they devour the poorer, as thoſe do the leſſer Fiſhes; and that many times with a plauſible inviſible conſumption; as the Uſurer, who like the Oſtrich can digeſt any metal; but eſpecially mony.

They call not upon the Lord] viz. for a bleſſing upon that their bread, as ſome ſenſe it; how ſhould they, ſith God abhorreth them? Pſal. 10. 3. But better take it for neglect of the duty of Prayer; they rob God of his inward and outward Worſhip, and ſo deal worſe with him than Idolaters do with their Dunghil-deities, whom they ceaſe not to call upon. Theſe will commit no Soleciſm in Gods Service; and be ſure that their prayer (like that of Hamans, Eſth. 7. 7.) ſhall never be turned into ſin. If they pray in extreamity (as then a Toad will lay hold on the Horns of the Altar) it is but as blinde Beggers are forced to ask, though they know not of whom.

Verſ. 5. There were they in great fear] There and they? what, in great fear? where?

and who? and what kind of fear was it they were in? For anſwer; There, that is, in the generation of the righteous, in the aſſemblies of the Saints, according to that, Pſal. 76. 3. There brake he the arrows of the Bow, the Shield, and the Sword, and the Battel. Selah. There, that is, in Salem, where is Gods Tabernacle; and in Sion, where is his dwelling place, verſ. 2. in the Congregation where the Saints were praying. Or, There, that is, in the very place where they oppreſſed and devoured the poor, they were ſurpriſed with a ſudden horrour; even there where they had ſaid, peace and ſafety &c. and where no fear was, Pſal. 53. 5. no apparent cauſe of ſuch an amazement, Iſa. 13. 8. A panick terrour fell upon them; they feared a fear, as the Hebrew hath it, but could not tell why: The Hornet within ſtings them, and they have many a ſecret twinge that the World is never aware of. Saul was afraid of David, and Catiline trembled upon the leaſt noyſe made.

In loco ubi opprimunt, R. David.

For God is in the generation of the righteous] And natural Conſcience cannot but do homage to the Image of God, ſtamped upon the natures and works of the godly. See it in the carriage of Nebuchadnezzar and Darius toward Daniel, ſticking ſtoutly to his Principles. The piety, patience, mercy, goodneſs, expreſt by the righteous when oppreſſed, makes the hearts of wicked men ake within them; and they are ſore afraid of the Name of God called upon by them, Deut. 28. 10. Or, God is in the generation of the righteous, ſcil. Ad juvandum eum, ſaith Aben-Ezra, to ſupport and ſuccour them; and that ſtrangely many times, the enemies themſelves being Judges, to their great aſtoniſhment.

Verſ. 6. You have ſhamed the counſel of the poor] And thought to mock him out of his confidence, as Sennacherib did by Hezekiah, and the Jews by our Saviour. Religion was long ſince grown, as it is alſo at this day among many, not more a matter of form, than of ſcorn. In our wretched days, as the Turks count all fools to be Saints, ſo many with us account all Saints to be fools. He is a fool, we ſay, that would be laughed out of his Coat; but he were a double fool that would bee laughed out of his skin, that would hazard his Soul, becauſe loath to bee laughed at.

Becauſe the Lord is his refuge] Sed Jehovah Protector ejus, becauſe he runs to God by prayer, and commits himſelf wholly to him for direction and ſucceſs in all his enterpriſes; Pudefacitis, id eſt, facitis ut videatur putidum, you jeer, and hold it an egregious ſillineſs. You reject his confidence, and relye on the arm of fleſh; which yet was never true to thoſe that truſted unto it.

Verſ. 7. O that the Salvation of Iſrael, &c.] This is the ſecond part of the Pſalm, wherein David prayeth to God to deliver his Iſrael out of the hands of thoſe Atheiſts, and Oppreſſors. The whole Church muſt be remembred in our prayers, and that ancient people of God the Jews not forgotten. Many of their Rabbins make this whole Pſalm a Prophecie of their diſperſion among the Genitles their Oppreſſors; and this, a prayer for their reſtauration. For our ſins, ſay they, which are many, the coming of the Meſſiah (that Salvation of Iſrael) is deferred; the time of his coming is ſealed up, Dan. 12. 4. Verum enimverò Deus nos dignabitur clariſſima viſione cum reducet Zionem; tunc intelligemus res ipſas prout ſunt, ſaith Jachiades on that Text: but God ſhall give us a clear ſight of all things, when he ſhall bring back Zion, &c. This is truth, and we muſt haſten that time by our heartieſt wiſhes for that obdurate people, that a Redeemer would come to them out of Zion, Rom. 11. 26. that the covering caſt over that people might be deſtroyed, Iſa. 25. 7. and a general joy conceived throughout all the Churches for their happy re-admiſſion.

Sanhed. c. 11.

Out of Zion] i. e. Out of the Church, whence all good cometh; and ſuch bleſſings as are better than all elſe that Heaven or Earth affordeth, Pſal. 134. 3.

PSAL. XV.

VErſ. 1. Lord, who ſhall abide in thy Tabernacle?] Heb. Who ſhall ſojourn? for that is our condition whiles here, in a forein Country, and not at home. The Church Militant alſo is Tranſportative, as well as the Tabernacle; and not fixed to one place. Never was the Ark ſetled, till ſet in Solomons Temple; neither ſhall we till we come to Heaven. David having deſcribed an Atheiſt in Pſal. 14. and finding finding but too many ſuch in the boſome of the Church, Politicians, prophane Perſons, Hipocrites, who profeſs that they know God, but in works they deny him, Tit. 1.16. (He that dethroneth a King, doth as bad as he that denieth him) He therefore beggs of God to diſterminate, and put a difference between the righteous and the wicked, by certain infallible diſtinctive Notes and Characters, wherein men may ſurely reſt, without danger of being deceived; ſith his teſtimony is beyond all exception, and he is αὐτόπιϛος Self-credible. Here then that grand and grave Queſtion is propounded by David as a Prophet of God, conſulting with him, and anſwered by God himſelf, for more authority ſake; who is the true Citizen of Zion, the free Denizon of the New Jeruſalem, who is a right member of the Church Militant, and ſhall be at length of the Church Triumphant? A reverend Divine ſaid once to a poor Soul, that told him he was troubled about his Salvation, I tell thee, ſaid he, it is able to trouble the whole World. Let a man but approve himſelf the party here deſcribed, in deſire at leaſt, and endeavour, being humbled for his daily failings, and he may be confident. Sinners ſalv by Hooker, pag. 2.

Who ſhall dwell in thine holy hill?] Heaven is aptly compared to a Hill, Hell to a Hole. Now who ſhall aſcend into this holy Mount? None but thoſe whom this Mount comes down unto, that have ſweet communion with God in this life preſent, whoſe converſation is in Heaven, though their commoration be for a while upon earth, who do here eate and drink, and ſleep eternal life.

Verſ. 2. He that walketh uprightly] This is Gods anſwer, for men are unſound, and unfit to judge, ſaith Calvin. They judge according to opinion, and appearance many times, and ſend thoſe to Heaven that can never come there; as the Pope doth his Canonized Saints; Mahomet thoſe that dye in defence of Turciſme; and Paraſitical Preachers, their irreligious benefactors. But God only admitteth ſuch as are righteouſly religious, and religiouſly righteous; ſuch, as through whoſe whole lives godlineſs runneth, as the Woof doth through the Warp. Hee then that ſhall be an inhabitant of Heaven, muſt firſt walk uprightly, or evenly. Chriſtians, ſaith Tertullian, are funambulones, as thoſe that walk on ropes, if they tread but one ſtep awry they are utterly gone; they muſt be Sine terrena & profunda fraude (as R. David here gloſſeth) without guile, and unacquainted with the depths of the Devil. Prov. 11.22. the upright in their way are oppoſed to the froward in heart. And ſuch only ſhall dwell with devouring fire, that is, with God, Iſa. 33. 14, 15. The Arabick verſion for uprightly here, hath, without a cloud of vices.

And worketh righteouſneſs] This is wrought by faith, Heb. 11.33. and ſuch a man is acceptable to God, Act. 10.35. But the whole life of unbeleevers is ſin, ſaith Auſtin, neither is there any thing good, without the chiefeſt good. It was well ſaid of Luther, Walk in the heaven of the Promiſe, but in the earth of the Law; that in reſpect of beleeving, this of obeying.

And ſpeaketh the truth in his heart] His λόγ⊙ ἐνδιάθετ⊙ & προφορικὸς are all one, he ſpeaks as he thinks; his ſpeech is the lively image of his inward affection. That was no commendation to that Pope and his Nephew, of whom it was ſaid, that the one never ſpoke as hee thought, the other never performed what he ſpoke.

Verſ. 3. Hee that backbiteth not with his tongue] that trotteth not up and down for the purpoſe, as the word ſignifieth; that walketh not about as a Pedlar with his pack, as the word is Levit. 19.16. this is a bloody ſin, ibid. confer, Ezek. 22.9. Many wayes a man may backbite with his tongue, that unruly member. Ragal, whe Regal a foo Ruchill.

Imponens, augens, manifeſtans, in mala vertens,
Qui negat, aut minuit, tacuit, laudatque remiſſe.

One obſerveth from this Text, that there is alſo a ſlander of the heart, that never commeth into the tongue, ſc. hard conceits, and evill ſurmiſes. Some ſay, that the word here ſignifieth to ſpeak truth, but with a miſchievous mind, to hurt another; as Doeg dealt by David, and is therefore accurſed, Pſal. 52. and called a lyer for his labour, Pſal. 120. The ſmutting of another mans good-name in any kind behind his back, is backbiting; it is an irreparable wrong; take heed of it. The eye, and the good-name can bear no jeſts, as the Proverb hath it.

Nor doth evill to his Neighbour] Neither by diſparaging, nor diſprofiting him. There is an elegancy in the originall, that cannot be Engliſhed.

Nor taketh up a reproach againſt his Neighbour] Or receiveth, Or indureth. The tale-bearer carrieth the Devill in his tongue; the tale-hearer in his ear. Plautus wiſheth that the one may be hanged by his tongue, and the other by his ear; the receiver wee ſay is as bad as the Theef. Not only he that maketh a lye, but he that loveth it is excluded Heaven, Rev. 22. 15. It is evill to ſow reports and ſlanders; but worſe to harrow them in. The Heathen could ſay, Hee that eaſily beleeveth ſlanders, aut improbis, aut puerilibus eſt moribus, is either a knave, or a fool.

Verſ. 4. In whoſe eyes a vile perſon is contemned] An abject, a Reprobate, as one rendreth it; be he as high as Haman, See Eſthers Character of him, chap. 7. 6. and Mordicai's ſlighting of him, chap. 3. 2. Bee he as great as Antiochus Epiphanes, to whom the Samaritans excuſing themſelves that they were no Jews, wrote thus, To Antiochus the great God; Daniel counted and called him a vile perſon, chap. 11. 21. So Eliſha deſpiſed Jehoram the King, 2 King. 3. 14. we alſo muſt deſpiſe the wicked; yet non virum, ſed vitium, & ſalvo cuiq; loci ſui honore; giving honour, befitting their places, to whom honour is due, Rom. 13. but ſhunning that partiality taxed by St. James, chap. 2. 3, 4. The Burgeſſe of the new Jeruſalem, reprobos reprobat, & probos probat, hee cannot flatter any man, nor fancy ſuch as in whom hee findeth not aliquid Chriſti, ſomething of the image of God. A golden Coloſſe ſtuffed with rubbiſh hee cannot ſtoop to.

Joſephus.

But hee honoureth them that fear the Lord] As the only earthly Angells, though never ſo mean, and deſpicable in the Worlds eye. Mr. Fox being asked whether hee remembred not ſuch a poor ſervant of God, who had received ſuccour from him in time of trouble? anſwered, I remember him well; I tell you I forget Lords and Ladies to remember ſuch. Ingo an ancient King of Draves and Veneds ſet his Pagan-Nobles (at a feaſt) in his Hall below, and a company of poor Chriſtians with himſelf in his preſence Chamber, entertaining them with the royalleſt chear, and kingglieſt attendance that might be. At which when his Nobles wondred, he told them, this he did not as he was King of the Draves, but as he was King of another World; wherein theſe ſhould be his companions, and fellow-Princes.

Æneas Sylv. cap. 20.

He that ſweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not] Covetouſneſſe he ſo hateth, that firſt, hee will rather ſuffer loſſe than be worſe than his oath, or honeſt word; ſecondly, he lendeth, looking for nothing again; thirdly, hee taketh no reward againſt the innocent, either as a Judge, or as a Pleader. Of many ſwearers it may be ſaid, that they can play with oaths as Children do with Nuts; or as Monkies do with their collars, which they can ſlip off at their pleaſure. And of many promiſers, that they are like the Peacock, all in changable colours, as often changed as moved: But this is not the guiſe of Gods people. The Jews at this day keep no oath, unleſſe they ſwear upon their own Torah, or Law, brought out of their Synagogues. The Turks keep no oath further than may ſtand with their own convenience; The Papiſts hold, that faith is not to be kept with Heretieks; and they practice accordingly. But the old Romans had a great care alwaies to perform their word, whatever it coſt them; inſomuch that the firſt Temple built in Rome was dedicated to the Goddeſſe Fidelity. In after times indeed, Romanis promittere promptum erat, promiſſis autem, quanquam juramento firmatis, minime ſtare. The Romans were forward to promiſe and ſwear, but careleſſe to perform, if Mirrhanes the Perſia Generall may be beleeved. But an oath was ever held amongſt all Nations a ſacred bond, and obligatory, unleſſe it were contra bonos mores, as the Lawyers ſpeak. Joſuah and the Elders kept their oath to the Gibeonites, though to their inconvenience. Zedekiah was puniſhed for not keeping touch with the King of Babylon. And one of the laws of the Knights of the Band in Spain was, that if any of them broke his promiſe, hee went alone by himſelf, and no body ſpake to him, nor he to any.

Procop. de bel. Perſic. lib. 1.

Verſ. 5. He that putteth not out his mony to uſury] To biting uſury, ſo ſome diſtinguiſh it from Tarbith, the toothleſſe uſury. But both theſe are condemned, Ezek. 18. 8. 13. and no man of note in all Antiquity (Jews and Manichees excepted) for one thouſand five hundred years after Chriſt, hath ever undertaken the defence thereof. Here and Neh. 5. it is plainly cryed down; neither is there any ground ground in Scripture for that diſtinction of uſury into biting and toothleſſe. The Bever biteth ſo ſore, as that he never looſeth his teeth, untill he have broke the bones.

Nor taketh reward againſt the innocent] Olim didici quid ſint munera, ſaid one. A good man as he deſpiſeth the gain of oppreſſions, ſo he ſhaketh his hands from holding of bribes, Iſa. 33. 15. leſt the touching thereof ſhould infect and benumme him; as Pliny writeth of the fiſh Torpedo, and as Hiſtories report of Demoſthenes that great Lawyer, tempted and prevailed with againſt right, by poiſing Harpalus his goblet.

Hee that doth theſe things] For not the hearers of the law, but the doers ſhall be juſtified, Rom. 2. 13. And to them who by patient continuance in well-doing ſeek for glory, and honour, and immortality, ſhall bee eternall life. Verſ. 7.

Shall never be moved] Poteſt in momentum moveri, ſed non in æternum: reſurget enim, ſaith R. Solomon here; Moved he may be for a time, but not removed for ever. His ſoul is bound up in the bundle of life, near unto the throne of glory; when the ſouls of the Wicked are reſtleſſe as a ſtone in the midſt of a ſling, ſaith the Targum in 1 Sam. 25.

PSAL. XVI.

Michtam of David] i. e. Davids precious Jewel, or Pſalm of Gold, propter mirificam ejus excellentiam, better worth than its weight in gold, both for the matter thereof, and the meeter. Aureum flumen orationis, ſaid Cicero concerning Ariſtotles Politicks; there is in that Book a golden flood of diſcourſe; and Liber iſte auro contra non carus, ſaid Another, concerning the Lives of the Philoſophers written by Diogenes Laertius; No gold is comparable to that gallant piece. How much more may the ſame be ſaid of this notable Pſalm? as that which, beſide many other remarkable matters, lively ſetteth forth the myſterie of Chriſt his paſſion and reſurrection, with the fruit of both; this hee doth more like an Evangeliſt than a Prophet, and may therefore be called (as likewiſe Iſaiah is) the Evangelicall Prophet. And whereas ſaith learned Beza, hee calleth the Meſſiah Chaſid, verſ. 10. (that is, as I interpret it, that Man, upon whom the Father hath moſt plentifully powred out all his grace and bounty, which alſo we all draw from him alone by faith) David ſeemeth in this one word to have ſummed up the whole Doctrin of the Goſpell.

Verſ. 1. Preſerve mee O God] Keep mee ſafe unto the Kingdome both temporall and eternall, which thou haſt promiſed mee; and now that I am flying to the Philiſtines for ſhelter, 1 Sam. 27. 1. (for that is held to be the time when he compoſed this golden Pſalm) guard mee, guide mee, keep mee by thy power through faith unto ſalvation. This prayer of his, David was well aſſured ſhould be granted, and therefore hee giveth thanks, Verſ. 7.

For in thee do I put my truſt] This was a moſt powerfull plea, for to truſt God is the higheſt honour wee can do him, it is to ſet the Crown upon his head, See Judge 9. 15. And if ſuch ſhall be forſaken, God will be a great loſer in his glory, whereof hee is very tender.

Verſ. 2. O my ſoul thou haſt ſaid unto the Lord] Or I have ſaid unto the Lord; and ſo I had rather read it, with Hierome and the Septuagint; becauſe the letter Jod may be wanting in Amarti. See the like Job 42. 2. Ezek. 16. 59. David was here extra ſe abreptus, carried beyond himſelf, and ſo might eaſily ſpeak ſhort, and ſay, Amart, for Amarti; like as Moſes in a paſſion ſaid to God, At for Atta, Num. 11. 15. as not able to ſpeak out. Amor Dei eſt eceſtaticus, &c.

Thou art my Lord] Heb. Thou my Lord, ſo the next words, My good not unto thee; all conciſe and abrupt, out of deepeſt affection; broken language from a broken ſpirit, ſpending and exhaling it ſelf into Gods bleſſed boſome.

My goodneſſe extendeth not to thee] But if it did, I could with all my heart beteem it thee, even the very beſt of my beſt: but what can I give thee ſave only τὰ σὰ ἐκ τῶν σῶν, ſith all is thine own? 1 Chron. 29. 14. 16. Pſal. 24. 1. thou needeſt no ſacrifices Pſal. 50. 8. neither art thou delighted therein. Pſal. 51. 18. Iſa. 1. 11. All that thou requireſt is mercy. Heſ. 6. 6. Mic. 6. 8. Mat. 12. 7. Therefore I will ſeek out thoſe thy Receivers, the Saints that are in the earth, &c. See the Note on Job 35. 6. 7. 8.

Verſ. 3. But to the Saints] The family of faith were, by a ſpeciality, the object of of Davids bounty. Socrates ſeeing a certain man giving alms to all hee met, were they good or bad, ſaid, male pereas qui ex Gratiis cum ſint Virgines, facias ſcortum. David, the better to perſwade with God to preſerve him ſafe to the Kingdome, promiſeth two things; firſt, that he will cheriſh and countenance the godly party; ſecondly, that he will caſhier and caſt out all kind of Idolatry, and maintain to his utmoſt the ſincere ſervice of God. verſ. 4.

And to the excellent] Or, Noble, glorious, wonderfull, magnificent. The Saints are Princes in all lands, Pſal. 45. 16. of an excellent Spirit, Prov. 17. 27. More excellent than their Neighbours, dwell they whereſoever, Prov. 12. 26. They are ſtiled the glory, Iſa. 4. 5. a Crown of glory, Iſa. 62. 3. a royall Diadem ibid. a Kingdome of Prieſts, Exod. 19. 6. higher than the Kings of the earth, Pſal. 89. 27. greater than the four famous Monarchies, Dan. 7. 18. worthies of whom the World is not worthy, Heb. 11. 38. fitter to be ſet as ſtars in Heaven. And ſurely as ſtars though ſeen ſometimes in a puddle, or ſtinking ditch, though they reflect there, yet have they their ſituation in Heaven: So the Saints, though here in a low condition, yet are they fixed in the Region of happineſſe.

In whom is all my delight] Heb. Chepeſibam; So the Church is called Gods Chepeſibah, Iſa. 62. 5. Next to communion with God, the communion of Saints is moſt delectable. It is the very being bound up in the bundle of life, which was the bleſſing of Abigail upon David. Ipſe aſpectus viri boni delectat, ſaith Seneca, the very ſight of a good man (morally good) delighteth; what then of a Saint, Ezra. 10. 3? This the Heathen Perſecutors knew, and therefore baniſhed and confined the Chriſtians to Iſles and Mines, where they could not one come at another, as Cyprian obſerveth.

Vide Plutarch. περὶ δεισιδαιμονίας.

Verſ. 4. Their ſorrows ſhall be multiplied] Many ſorrows ſhall be to thoſe wicked Idolaters, Pſal. 32. 10. ſome, of their own Creating by their ſuperſtitions and will-worſhips; others, from a jealous and juſt God; others, from the Devill who acteth and agitateth them, beateth and whippeth them (as at this day he doth the poor Indians, who worſhip Devills in moſt terrible figure; beleeving that they are permitted of God to puniſh or ſpare them at their pleaſure;) And ſome they ſhall be ſure of from mee, whenever I come to the Kingdome. Some, after the Chaldee, read it, their Idols are multiplied. The old Heathens had thirty thouſand in Heſiods dayes; In China there are ſaid to be at this day no fewer than an hundred thouſand Idols, which they uſe to whip if they come not at a call to help them; Before a ſick man they put the Devills picture, that hee may learn to know him in another World, and take him for his friend.

It is ſtoried of one King of England that he beſtowed as much upon a Croſſe as the revenues of his Kingdome came to in a year.

That haſten after another God] Or, that endow another God. Superſtition is not only painfull, but chargeable. Idolaters laviſh out of the bag, and ſpare for no coſt; witneſſe the Papiſts vowed preſents and memories as they call them hanged up in honour of their he-Saints, and ſhe-Saints, the Lady of Loretto eſpecially. But it was the Serpents grammar that firſt taught men to decline God in the plurall number, Eritis ſicut Dii, as Damianus obſerveth from Gen. 3. 5. and hence that innumerable rabble. The Jeſuites boaſt of their Ignatii Apotheoſis; and Cardinall Bembus is not aſhamed to ſay of his St. Francis, quod in deorum numerum ab Eccleſia Romana ſit relatus. Is not this abominable Idolatry? 1 Pet. 4. 3.

Hiſt. Venet.

Their drink offerings of blood] Many Heathens ſacrifiſed to their Idols (that is, to Devils) with mans blood, againſt all laws of humanity and piety. Thus they ſacrifiſed to Bellona the Siſter of Mars; as alſo with blood let out of their own armes. The Prieſts of Baal (who perhaps was Mars) cut and launced themſelves, 1 King. 18. So do the Mahometan Prieſts at this day; as the Papiſts whip themſelves, &c. the old Idolaters offered their Children in ſacrifice to Moloch, or Saturn. David abhorreth the thought of ſuch inhumanities, Neq; deos illegitimos, nec illegitimè colam, ſaith he, I'le have no ſuch doings.

Euſeb. de præp. Evangil.

Nor take up their names into my lips] But ſpit them out of my mouth with utmoſt deteſtation, according to the law, Exod. 23. 13. It repented Auſtin that ever hee had uſed the word Fortuna, that Heathen Goddeſſe. And Abſit ut de ore Chriſtiano ſonet Jupiter omnipotens, &c. ſaith Hieronie, Let no Chriſtian mouth ſay, Jupiter omnipotent, or ſwear Mehercule, Mecaſtor. The Primitive Chriſtians would not call their dayes of the week, dies Martis, Mercurii, &c. as Triſmegiſt had named med them; but the firſt, ſecond, third, &c. day of the week. All occaſions or ſemblances of Idolatry ſhould be ſhunned; it is not ſafe being at Satans Meſſe, though our ſpoon bee never ſo long, ſaith One. See Hoſ. 3. 16, 17. Zach. 13. 2. Deut. 12. 2.

Verſ. 5. The Lord is the Portion of mine inheritance] Therefore I have neither need nor mind to run a madding after dumb Idols, for hee is Good originall, univerſall, all-ſufficient and ſatisfactory, proportionable, and fitting to my ſoul; ſo that having Him, I am abundantly provided for.

And of my cup] A phraſe taken from thoſe ſhares that every one had aſſigned unto him at feaſts, Gen. 43. 34. 1 Sam. 1. 4. & 9. 23. q. d. Thou art my meat and my drink Lord, and I am very well content with my condition, bee it better or worſe. That which gives quiet in any portion, is firſt, The favour and preſence of God; ſecondly, that tis from the hand of a Father; thirdly, that it comes to us in the covenant of grace; fourthly, that tis the purchaſe of Chriſts blood; fifthly, that tis an anſwer of prayers; and a bleſſing from above on honeſt indeavours.

Thou maintaineſt my lot] Upholdeſt mee in a good condition, who ſhould otherwiſe ſoon loſe and forgoe it, were it in mine own keeping. And here the Pſalmiſt uſeth four ſeverall words, all to theſame ſenſe, ad corroborandum ſaith R. David.

Verſ. 6. The lines are fallen] In alluſion to thoſe lines wherewith they meaſured Land, when they parted it. See Deut. 32. 9. Pſal. 105. 11. & 78. 55. Act. 26. 18. Epeſ 1. 11. David, having God for his portion, could ſay with Jacob, I have all things, Gen. 33. 11. Paul alſo ſaith the ſame, Phil. 4. 18. and further telleth us, that having nothing, he yet poſſeſſed all things; for why he had got the divine art of contentation, verſ. 12. and ſo could bee either on the top of Jacobs Ladder, or at the bottome; hee could ſing either Placentia or Lachryma, abound, or be abaſed, &c. Sine Deo omnis copia eſt egeſtas. Beru.

In pleaſant places] From the delectable Orchard of the Leonine Priſon, ſaid that Italian Martyr, dating his Letter. Tua præſentia, Domine, Laurentio ipſam craticulam dulcem fecit, ſaid that Ancient; Thy preſence, Lord, made Laurence his gridiron pleaſant to him. Quia in Deo e portio mea, e quaſi in loco mæno. R. David.

Yea, I have a goodly heritage] I have as much (in content at leaſt) as hee who hath moſt. The Bee is as well pleaſed with feeding on the dew, or ſucking from a flower, as Behemoth that grazeth on the Mountaines. The Lark when aloft, ſeeth further with a little eye, than the Oxe on the ground with a greater.

Atque ſuum tirilitirilitiritirlire cantat.

Verſ. 7. I will bleſſe the Lord who hath given mee counſel] David frequently conſulted with God by Abiathar the Prieſt; whom God, by a ſweet providence, ſent unto him with an Ephod for a comfort in his baniſhment, 1 Sam. 22. 20. Saul had ſlain thoſe that ware the Ephod, therefore God anſwered him not neither by dreams, nor by Vrim, nor by Prophets, 1 Sam. 28. 6. as hee did his Servant David; who therefore bleſſeth him, when the other runneth from him to the Witch for counſel, and from her to the ſwords point.

My reines alſo inſtruct mee] God hath not only illuminated mee, whereby I ſhall bee the better able to endure a great fight of affliction, Heb. 10. 32. but hee hath alſo ſanctified mee, and honoured mee with holy inſpirations, and feeling of the Spirit of Adoption, whereby mine internall thoughts and ſecret motions do dictate and ſuggeſt unto mee what I ought to do and undertake. Methinks I hear a ſweet ſtill voice within mee, ſaying, This is the way, walk in it; and this in the night-ſeaſon, when I am rapt in reſt and ſilence; or, night after night, the Spirit is a continuall ſpring of counſel and comfort within mee, prompting mee to make God my portion, and to chuſe this good part that ſhall never be taken away from mee.

In the night-ſeaſons] When commonly we are prone to evill (Nox & Amor, &c. Illa pudore vacat, &c.) and which is the wicked mans fitteſt opportunity, Job 24. 13, 15, 16. &c. It muſt not content us that God by his word hath given us counſel, but wee muſt labour to be inwardly taught of God. A man may read the figure upon the Diall, but hee cannot tell how the day goes, unleſſe the Sun ſhine upon the Diall. Ovid.

Diall; Wee may read the Bible over, and hear it opened and applied, but can learn nothing till the Spirit ſhine into our hearts, 2 Cor. 4. and ſo our reines inſtruct us, &c.

Verſ. 8. I have ſet the Lord alwaies before mee] Heb. I have equally ſet, or propoſed. The Apoſtle tranſlateth it, I foreſee the Lord alwaies before my face, Act. 2. 25. I ſet the eye of my faith full upon him, and ſuffer it not to take to other things; I look him in the face, oculi irretorti, as the Eagle looketh upon the Sun; and oculo adamantino, with an eye of Adamant, which turns only to one point: ſo here, I have equally ſet the Lord before mee, without irregular affections and paſſions. And this was one of thoſe leſſons that his reines had taught him, that the holy Spirit had dictated unto him. Ex Syro Serm.

Becauſe he is at my right hand] To help mee that I fall not, ſaith R. David, or as a thing that I cannot but remember, as being of continuall uſe to mee. It is as neceſſary to remember God, as to draw breath, ſaith Chryſoſtome.

I ſhall not be moved] i. e. not greatly moved, as Pſal. 62. 2. though Satan ſtand at the right hand of a godly man, to reſiſt and annoy him, Zech. 3. 1. yet ſo long as God is at his right hand to aſſiſt and comfort him, and hee at Gods right hand, Pſal. 45. 9. (which is a place of honour and ſafety) hee cannot bee moved. The gates of Hell ſhall never prevail; Chriſt, our Sampſon, hath flung them off their hinges.

Verſ. 9. Therefore my heart is glad, &c.] That is, I am all over in very good plight, as well as heart can wiſh, or need require; I do over-abound exceedingly with joy; God forgive mee mine unthankfullneſſe and unworthineſſe of ſo great glory, (as that Martyr ſaid) In all the dayes of my life I was never ſo merry, as now I am in this dark dungeon, &c. Wicked men rejoyce in appearance, and not in heart, 2 Cor. 5. 12. their joy is but skin-deep, their mirth frothy and flaſhy, ſuch as wetteth the mouth, but warmeth not the heart. But David is totus totus, quantus quantus exultabundus, his heart, glory, fleſh, (anſwerable, as ſome think to that of the Apoſtle, 1 Theſ. 5. 23. Spirit, Soul, and Body) were all over-joyed. Mr. Philpot.

My fleſh alſo ſhall reſt (or confidently dwell) in hope] Namely in this World, as in a wayfaring lodging; then, in the grave as a place of ſafeguard and repoſe; and at laſt, in heaven, as in its true and eternall manſion. Diod.

Verſ. 10. For thou wilt not leave my ſoul in Hell] that is, my body in the grave, (--animamq; ſepulchro condimus--) or in the State of the dead, Gen. 37. 35. That Soul is ſometimes put for a carcaſs or dead corps, See Job 14. 22. Lev. 19. 28. & 21. 1. 11. Num. 5. 2. & 6. 6. & 19. 13. which place is expounded, Ezek. 44. 25. David can confidently write upon his grave Reſurgam, I ſhall riſe againſt. This, many Heathens had no hope of 1 Theſ. 4. 13. Virg. de Polydori funere. Æneid. 3.

Cum ſemel occideris,
Non Torquate, tuum genus, aut facundia, non te Reſtituet pietas, &c. Horat. lib. 4. od. 7.

Yet ſome Heathens beleeved both the immortality of the ſoul, and therefore durſt dye (--animaque capaces Mortis--) and the Reſurrection of the body, as did Zoroaſtes, Theopompus, Plato; and as do the Turks at this day.

Neither wilt thou ſuffer thine holy One, &c.] that is, the Meſſiah, that is to come out of my loines, and who ſaith to mee and all his Members (as Iſa. 26. 19.) in effect, Thy dead men ſhall live, together with my dead body ſhall they ariſe, awake and ſing ye that dwell in the duſt, &c. See the Note on the Title Michtam. The former part of this verſe ſeems to be ſpoken of David, the latter of Chriſt; like as Job. 35. 15. the former part is of God, the latter of Job. See the Margin. Chriſts reſurrection is a cauſe, pledge and ſuerty of the Saints reſurrection to glory; for joy whereof Davids heart leapt within him. Chriſts body, though laid in the corrupting-pit, could not ſee, that is, feel corruption. It was therefore a pious errour in thoſe good women who brought their ſweet odours to embalm his dead body, Luke 24. 1.

Verſ. 11. Thou wilt ſhew mee the path of life] This being applied to Chriſt, ſeemeth to ſhew that as man hee did not yet fully underſtand that inexplicable glory wherewith the Father would glorifie him after death with himſelf, Joh. 17. 5.

Sure

Sure it is, that David did not, nor can any man living, 1 Cor. 2. 9. here is as much ſaid, as can be ſaid (but words are too weak to utter it:) For quality, there is in Heaven joy, and pleaſures. For quantity, a fulneſſe, a torrent, whereat they drink without let or loathing. For conſtancy, it is at Gods right hand, who is ſtronger than all, neither can any take us out of his hand; it is a conſtant happineſs without intermiſſion. And for perpetuity, it is for evermore. Heavens joyes are without meaſure, mixture, or end.

PSAL. XVII.

A Prayer of David] Hee was a man of prayer; but this was his appeal to God the ſupreme Judge, as the word importeth.

Verſ. 1. Hear the right O Lord] Heb. Righteouſneſſe, which cryeth unto God no leſſe than blood doth, Gen. 4. Or, hear the right, that is, my prayer, ſaith R. David, rightly made with heart and voice. Or, Hear O righteous Lord, as Chriſt alſo ſaith, O righteous Father, Joh. 17.

Attend unto my cry] Some prophane perſons bear well their croſſes, becauſe their cauſe is good; but they cry not when God bindeth them, Job 36. 13. Or, if they cry, they cry out of hard fortune, as the Athenians did when their good Generall Nicias was ſlain, and their army routed in Cicily; or againſt Dame Vertue, as if it were no more than a meer name, as Brutus did, when beaten out of the field. Or, againſt Providence, as if there were a miſt over the eye of it, as Pompei did, when diſcomfited by Cæſar; ſo blaming the Sun, becauſe of the ſoreneſſe of his own blear eyes. But David (greatly wronged by Saul and his Courtiers) by humble and hearty prayer maketh his requeſt known to God with thankſgiving, Phil. 4. 6. And this, like his harp, drove away the Evill ſpirit of grief and diſcontent. Thucyd; Dio.

That goeth not out of feigned lips] His devotion was not ludibrious, as is that of Hypocrites; it was not an empty ring, a meer out-ſide, the labour of the lips, but the travell of the hurt; it was ſincere and thorough-wrought, as St. James hath it; Wicked men ſpeak God fair, but it is as the Devill did our Saviour, to bee rid of him, or as thoſe, Pſal. 78. 36. who flattered him with their mouthes, and lyed unto him with their tongues. ἐνεργουμένη Jam. 5. 16.

Verſ. 2. Let my ſentence come forth from thy preſence] Let it be both pronounced, and executed forthwith.

Let thine eyes behold, &c.] i. e. Make it appear that thou both ſeeſt and likeſt mine integrity; and that thou winkeſt not at mens wickedneſſes.

Verſ. 3. Thou haſt proved my heart] And knoweſt mee to bee no diſſembler and traytor, as they wrongfully charge mee, whilſt they muſe as they uſe.

Thou haſt viſited mee in the night] In which God is wont to ſtir up, and inmind men of his will, Job 4. 13, 14. as being all gathered within themſelves; and when the darkneſſe doth unmask them of worldly diſſimulation.

Thou haſt tryed mee] As Metallaries do their gold and ſilver.

And ſhalt find nothing] Heb. haſt not found, לא מצאת deficit, ſaith Aben-Ezra; no blot or blemiſh, that is, not the ſpot of Gods Children, Deut. 32. 5. no droſſe or deceit that may not well conſiſt with godlineſſe.

I am purpoſed that my mouth ſhall not tranſgreſſe] My generall purpoſe is ſuch, though I may have my particular failings. I ſpeak my whole heart, ſo farre as I know it. Magna eſt concordia cordis & oris.

Verſ. 4. Concerning the works of men] ſc. which ought to bee done by them, according to thy Law; Or, which they are wont to do, whether right or wrong, I have not now to ſay, but this I can ſafely ſay by thy mercy, that

By the word of thy lips] Which I have taken for the rule and rudder of my life,

I have kept mee from the paths of the deſtroyer] Effractoris, of the breach-maker; ſuch as is the Bridge-maker of Rome, at this day. David meaneth that hee had ſhunned the ſociety of graceleſſe perſons, Pſal. 26. 4. Prov. 24. 21. Jer. 15. 17. and taken heed to his wayes, that hee offended not with his tongue, whilſt the wicked was preſent, Pſalm 39. 1, 2. leſt the Wicked ſhould rejoyce at his Miſdemeanors, Pſal. 38. 17.

Verſ. 5. Hold up my goings in thy paths, &c.] Keep me within the circle of thy Word, as thou hitherto haſt done; make me to walk exactly, and as in a frame, Epheſ. 5. 15. Grant me thy preventing, concomitant, and ſubſequent grace; O thou God of all grace, perfect, ſtrengthen, ſtabliſh me, 1 Pet. 5. 10.

That my foot-ſteps ſlip not] by the malice of Satan, who ſeeks to ſubvert ſuch as are moſt eminent, to the ſcandal of the weak, and ſcorn of the wicked; by the corruption alſo of mine own heart, Qua quiſq; ſibi Satan eſt, as one well ſaith, whereby every man is a Satan to himſelf; could we but divorce the fleſh from the Devil, there would be no ſuch danger: And laſtly, by the allurements, or affrightments of this preſent evil world; the way whereof is like the vale of Siddim, ſlimy, and ſlippery, full of Lime-pits, and Pit-falls, Springs, and ſtumbling-blocks.

Verſ. 6. I have called upon thee, for thou wilt hear me] q. d. Thou waſt always wont to hear me, and therefore I preſume thou wilt. Experience breeds confidence.

Incline thine ear] See how he re-enforceth his former requeſt; as if he would wring the bleſſing of out Gods hands by an holy violence, and take no denial.

Verſ. 7. Shew thy marvellous loving kindneſs, &c.] Mirificas benignitates tuas; leſs than a marvellous mercifulneſs will not ſerve Davids turn, he was ſo hardly beſtead; ut niſi miabiliter feceris, pereo. We now alive have lived in an age of Miracles; and God hath dealt with our Land, not according to his ordinary courſe, but according to his Prerogative; by a Miracle of his Mercy have we hitherto ſubſiſted, and by a prop of his extraordinary patience.

O thou that ſaveſt, &c.] Servator ſperantiam. Choyce muſt be made in Prayer of fit Titles and Attributes of God; ſuch as may ſtrengthen faith, and quicken affection.

From thoſe that riſe up againſt them] Or, againſt thy right hand. The Saints are at Chriſts right hand, Pſal. 45. 9. as Chriſt is at the Fathers; and he puts his holy hand betwixt them and harm.

Verſ. 8. Keep me as the apple of the eye] Heb. As the black of the apple of the eye, two words to the ſame ſenſe, for more vehemency. q. d. Serva me ſtudioſiſſimè. The apple of the eye, that little man in the eye (as the Hebrew word importeth, the girl, as the Greeks for like cauſe call it) is the tendereſt piece of the tendereſt part, the eye; which is kept moſt diligently, and ſtrongly guarded by Nature with tunicles. David therefore fitly prayeth to be ſo kept.

κόρη Huc pertinet locus Cicer. a De nat. deor.

Hide me under the ſhadow of thy wings] Another excellent ſimilitude taken from Fowls, which either cover their Young with their wings from the ſcorching heat of the Sun beams, as doth the Eagle; or keep them thereby from the cold, or from the Kite, as Hens do. Gods love to, and care of his poor people is hereby ſhadowed out; as it was likewiſe by the out-ſpread wings of the Cherubins in the Sanctuary. See Ruth 2. 12. Deut. 32. 10. Zach. 2. 8. Pſal. 36. 8. & 57. 2. Matth. 23. 37.

Verſ. 9. From the wicked that oppreſs me] Heb. That waſte me, i. e. that caſt me out into baniſhment, deſpoyled of all. This hard uſage of his enemies drove David into Gods bleſſed Boſom; as Children miſuſed abroad, run home to their Parents.

From my deadly enemies] Heb. My enemies againſt the ſoul. i. e. the Life at leaſt, if not the ſoul, which they would gladly deſtroy. Some malice is ſo miſchevous, that it would ruine Body and Soul together; as that Monſter of Millain, the enemies of John Huſſe, and Hierom of Prague, whoſe bodies they delivered to the fire, and their Souls to the Devil. David elſewhere complaineth of his enemies, that they did Satanically hate him. Pſal. 55 4. Beware of men, ſaith our Saviour, Mat. 10. for one man is a Devil to another.

Verſ. 10. They are incloſed in their own fat] See Job 15. 27. with the Note. They abound in all delights, and therefore ſpare not to ſpeak proudly. They have cloſed up their eyes in their fulſome fat, ut non videant nec timeant te, ſaith R. Solomon, that they can neither ſee, nor fear thee.

Adipem ſuum obeſant. Trem.

With their mouth they ſpeak proudly] Heb. in pride, that is, Palam & plenis buccis; openly openly and with full mouth they contemn God and men; they belch out Blaſphemies, and do what they pleaſe.

Verſ. 11. They have now compaſſed us in our ſteps] i. e. Me and my company; ſo that we cannot ſtir any whither but we are in danger of them. In all thy ways acknowledge God, and he ſhall direct thy paths, Prov. 3. 6. Commit thy way unto the Lord, truſt alſo in him, &c. Pſal. 37. 5. Keep within Gods Precincts, and thou ſhalt be under his protection. He took order that a Bird ſhould be ſafe upon her own Neſt.

They have ſet their eyes bowing down to the earth] i. e. Hoc unum ſpectant ut ruamus, They are earneſtly bent, and firmly reſolved upon our ruine, as one that fixeth his eyes upon another, to mark him, or to know him again; or as Bulls ready to run at one, ſet their eyes downward. Junius.

Verſ. 12. Like as a Lion that is greedy, &c.] Cruelty and Craft are conjoyned in the Churches enemies; as the Aſpe never wandreth alone, they ſay, without his companion. David here pointeth out ſome one ſpecial enemy (Saul likely) who ſhould have been a Shepherd, but proved a Lion.

As a young Lion lurking] Therefore as we tender our ſafety, keep cloſe to God, out of whoſe hands none can take us, no not the roaring Lion of Hell.

Verſ. 13. Ariſe, O Lord, diſappoint him] Anticipa faciem ejus, that is, that raging and ravening Lion; ſtep between me and him, and ſtop his fury, defeat his purpoſe, and diſable his power.

Which is thy Sword] As Aſſyria is called the Rod of his Wrath. Attilas ſtiled himſelf, Orbis flagellum, the wrath of God, and the ſcourge of the World. So Tamerlan was commonly called, The Wrath of God, and Terrour of the world. Some render it, by thy Sword, i. e. or thy might and power. See Job 40. 41. or by thy Word execute thy judgement. Turk. Hiſt.

Verſ. 14. From men which are thy hand] This, ſaith one, is Davids Letany, From thoſe men, &c. good Lord deliver me. Gods hand they are called, as before Gods Sword. Titus, Son of Veſpaſian, being extolled for deſtroying Jeruſalem, ſaid, I have only lent God my hand, but he hath done the work.

From men of the World] Heb. From Mortals of this tranſitory world, qui ſunt mundani, mundum ſpirant & ſapiunt, the inhabitants of the earth, and of the ſea, as oppoſed to the Citizens of the New Jeruſalem, Rev. 12. 12. ſuch as having incarnated their ſouls (as that Father ſpeaketh) are of the earth, ſpeak of the earth, and the earth heareth them, Joh. 3. 31. mind earthly things only, as if they were born for no other purpoſe. Terrigenæ fratres animam habentes triticeam, as thoſe Stall-fed beaſts in the Goſpel. A mortuis, i. e. impiis qui ſunt mortui in vita eorum. R. Gaon.

Which have their portion in this life] And they love to have it ſo; ſaying with the Prodigal, Give me the Portion that belongeth to me. They crave it, and they have it, but with a vengeance. (Munera magna quidem miſit, ſed miſit in hamo) As the Iſraelites had Quails to choke them, and afterwards a King to vex them, a table to be a ſnare to them, &c. By the way obſerve, that wicked men have a right to earthly things (a man muſt needs have ſome right to his portion; what Ananias had was his own whilſt he had it, Acts 5.) and it is a rigour to ſay, they are Uſurpers. As when the King gives a Traitor his life, hee gives him meat and drink that may maintain his life; So is it here: neither ſhall wicked men be called to account at the laſt day for poſſeſſing what they had, but for abuſing that poſſeſſion. As for the Saints who are heirs of the world with faithful Abraham, and have a double portion, even all the bleſſings of Heaven and of Earth conferred upon them, though here they be held to ſtrait allowance, let them live upon reverſions, and conſider that they have right to all, and ſhall one day have rule of all, Rev. 3. Mendicato pane hic vivamus, annon hoc pulchrè ſarcitur? &c. What though we here were to live upon Alms, ſaith Luther, is there not a good amends made us, in that here we have Chriſt the bread of life in his Ordinances, and ſhall hereafter have the full fruition of him in Heaven? The whole Turkiſh Empire is nothing elſe but a cruſt caſt by our Father to his Doggs; and it is all they are likely to have, let them make them merry with it. Wilt not thou (ſaith another) bee content, unleſs God let down the veſſel to thee, as to Peter with all manner of Beaſts of the Earth, and Fowls of the Air, Acts 10. 12. Muſt you needs have firſt and ſecond courſe? Difficile eſt ut præſentibus bonis quis fruatur & futuris; ut hic ventrem illic mentem reficiat, ut de deliciis ad delicias tranſeat, ut in cœlo & in terra glorioſus appareat, ſaith Hierom, It is a very hard thing to have Earth and Heaven too, &c. Gregory the Great trembled whenſoever he read thoſe words of Abraham to the rich Glutton (who thought this life to be his ſaginary or boares-frank) Son, remember that thou in thy life time receivedſt thy good things, Luke 16. Yee have lived in pleaſure upon earth, Jam. 5. 5. no fit place for ſuch a purpoſe. God did not turn you out of one Paradiſe that you ſhould here provide your ſelves of another; earth is a place of baniſhment and bondage. Of the wickeds proſperity here, ſee Job 21. 7, 8. with the Notes.

And whoſe belly thou filleſt with thy hid treaſures] That is, with Gold, and other precious things digged out of the earth, ſaith Aben-Ezra; Opimis rebus, ſaith Junius; with abundance of outward bleſſings and benefits, ſaith another; which are called Gods hidden treaſures, not becauſe they are not ſeen, but becauſe they are not ſo well perceived and uſed of the ungodly, as were meet; or becauſe the reaſon of their preſent plenty of all things is hidden from them, and yet it appears not but ſhall bee made manifeſt that theſe fatting ware are but fitting for the ſlaughter.

They are full of Children] which they ſend forth as a flock, Job 21. 11. See the Note there. Or, their Children are full carne porcinâ, ſaith the Arabick here, or of wordly wealth, and mountaines of mony left them by thoſe faithfull drudges, their rich, but wretched Parents and progenitours, whoſe only care was to heap up hoards of wealth for their poſterity.

Verſ. 15. As for mee] I neither envy, nor covet theſe mens happineſſe, but partly have and partly hope for a farre better.

I will behold thy face in Righteouſneſſe] which none can do but the pure in heart, Mat. 5. and thoſe that keep cloſe to God in a conſtant communion, being juſtified and ſanctified perſons.

I ſhall be ſatisfied] Better than thoſe muck-worms, and their Children are.

When I awake] ſc. Out of the duſt of death, at the Reſurrection.

With thy likeneſſe] With the viſible ſign of thy glory in Heaven, 1. Joh. 3. 2.

PSAL. XVIII.

TO the chief Muſician] Some render it Ad triumphandum; and well they may; for this is old Davids ἐπινίκιον, or triumphant ſong after ſo many victories and deliverances; and it is twice recorded in Scripture, with very little variation (See 2 Sam. 22.) for the great worth and weightineſſe of the matter; that wee may the more obſerve it, and bee the better verſed in it. This here recorded ſeemeth to bee the Review of it, and thence thoſe ſmall additions and alterations that are found here and there, but not of any great moment.

A Pſalm of David] Who having now gotten ſome breathing while from his troubles, gave not himſelf to Idleneſſe, or worldly pleaſures (as the Romans uſed to do after that they had once ridden in triumph) but calling to mind Gods great mercies towards him, compoſed this ſweet Pſalmodie to his glory.

The Servant of the Lord] So hee ſtiled himſelf before, Pſal. 36. when hee firſt entred upon the Kingdome; and now here again, when being to lay it down together with his life, hee breatheth out his holy ſoul to God in this divine ditty.

Sic ubi fata vocant, &c.

This hee did after that as a faithfull ſervant of the Lord hee had done all the wills of God, Act. 13. 22. had ſerved out his full time, Verſe 36. and dwelt in Gods houſe to length of dayes, Pſal. 23. 6.

Who ſpake unto the Lord the words of this ſong] God lets out his mercies to us for this rent of our praiſes; and is content wee have the benefit of them, ſo hee may have the glory. The Hebrews give this Note here; Every man for whom there is wrought a miracle of mercy, and hee thereupon uttereth a ſong, hath his ſins forgiven him. This is better yet than that of the Papiſts who promiſe pardon of ſin to thoſe that ſhall hear two Maſſes a day. Wee, who have received ſo many mercies, ſhould compaſs God about with ſongs of deliverances, and not only ſervire Deo, ſed & adulari, as Tertullian hath it.

From

From the hand of all his enemies] Heb, From the Palm, of other enemies as leſs conſiderable, but from the hand (or clutch-fiſt) of Saul.

And from the hand of Saul] his greateſt enemy, and of longeſt continuance. So Chriſt is ſaid to ſave his people from their ſins, by a ſpecialty, Mat. 1. 21. becauſe theſe do us the moſt miſchief.

Verſ. 1. I will love thee, O Lord my ſtrength] Heb. I will love thee dearly and entirely, Ex intimis viſceribus, from the very heart root, from the bottom of my bowels; with like intention of affection, as a tender-hearted Mother doth her deareſt Babe, that is her own bowels, her ſelf of the ſecond edition. Neither did David herein ſuper-erogate; for God requireth to be loved with all the heart, minde, ſoul, ſtrength, as one that is beſt worthy; good without meaſure, that hath loved us without meaſure, and therefore is without meaſure by us to be beloved. Not that we are bound to love God in quantum eſt diligibilis, ſo much as he is lovely, or love-worthy; for ſo God only can love himſelf: but, Nihil ſupra, æquè, aut contra, Nothing muſt we love above God, or ſo much as God, much leſs againſt God: we muſt be able to ſay affectionately with David, Pſal. 73. 25, 26. Whom have I in heaven but thee? there is none upon earth that I deſire beſides thee. And as Bernard, Amo te Domine, plus quam mea, meos, me, I love thee Lord, more than my goods, my friends, my ſelf. A Chriſtian begins with loving God for himſelf, but he ends in loving himſelf, and all other, both perſons, and things, in and for God. His friend he loveth in the Lord, his foes for the Lord: but God he loveth abſolutely, and for himſelf, affecting not only an union with him, but even an unity, his heart being turned, as it were, into a very lump of love, as was Maries, Luke 7. 47. Hiſtories tell of a certain Woman that came to Veſpaſian the Emperour, profeſſing that ſhe was in love with him; he commanded that a liberal reward ſhould be given her for the ſame; and when his Steward asked him under what Item he ſhould put that gift in his Book of Account, Veſpaſiano adamato, ſaid the Emperour, Item, To her that loved Veſpaſian. God, ſaith the Apoſtle, is not unrighteous, to forget your labour of love, &c. Heb. 6. I love them that love me, ſaith Chriſt, Prov. 8. and his love is not like the Winter Sun, which hath light, but not heat, &c. he is the ſtrength of his people, their Rock, Fortreſs, &c.

Verſ. 2. The Lord is my Rock, and my Fortreſs, &c.] i. e. He is all in all for my preſervation. Ten words ſay the Hebrews, he here heapeth up in reference to Ten ſignal Victories; or rather becauſe his thankful heart was ſo enlarged, that hee could never ſatisfie himſelf in ſaying what God had been to him, and done for him: and hence this congeries, or heap of holy expreſſions; and all to ſhew that God is a Rock of refuge, a firm Fortreſs, a receptacle of reſt, a ſanctuary of ſafety to all his Saints in time of trouble. David had had his ſhare, and had been put to his ſhifts; glad to hide himſelf, as he could, in rocks, and ſtrong-holds that ſheltered him from the ſtorm. To theſe he alludeth, when he calls God his Rock, Fortreſs, &c.

And my deliverer] Rocks, and Strong-holds do not always deliver (witneſs the Shechemites, Jebuſites, Arimaſphes), but God always doth.

And the Horn of my Salvation] Qui veluti cornu petit & conficit hoſtes meos, ſaith Vatablus, who goareth and diſpatcheth mine enemies. A Metaphor either from horned Beaſts, or elſe (as ſome will have it) from the ancient cuſtom of wearing horns of Iron upon their Helmet, for a Creſt, or Military ornament: whereupon the raiſed Horn was a ſign of Victory, and the Horn beaten down a ſign of being overcome.

Verſ. 3. I will call upon the Lord who is worthy to be praiſed] Or, is the proper object of praiſes, becauſe he is good, and doth good, Pſal. 119. 68. David vows to praiſe him,

1 By loving him entirely.

2 By truſting in him ſtedfaſtly, verſ. 1.

3. By calling upon him continually, here, and Pſal. 116. 2, 3. which Pſalm is very like to this (in the beginning eſpecially) both for matter and method.

So ſhall I be ſaved, &c.] He had often proved the power of Prayer, ſpecially when he came ready prepared to praiſe God for the return of Prayer; and thence he is bold to promiſe himſelf all good.

Verſ. 4.

Verſ. 4. The ſorrows of death compaſſed mee] Or, the pangs, pains, throws as of a travelling woman, theſe invironed mee, or came thick and threefold upon mee, pervenerunt uſq; ad נפשי even to my face, (as the Rabbines deſcant upon the word) or flew upon me; deſperate and deadly dangers aſſailed mee. The worſt of an evill eſcaped, is to bee thankfully acknowledged, and higheſt ſtraines of eloquence therein to bee uſed, ſo that pride bee avoided, and the praiſe of God only aimed at.

Medraſh. Tillin. Aphaphuni pro gnaphaphuni.

And the floods of ungodly men] Heb. of Belial, that is, of Belialiſts, acted and agitated by the Devill; theſe came tumbling upon him like many and mighty waters, Fluctus fluctum trudit. Torrentes Belial terrebant me.

Verſ. 5. The ſorrows] Or, throws or cords, ſuch as wherewith they bind malefactors led forth to execution.

The ſnares of death prevented mee] David knew how to make the moſt of a mercy; hee means, I was almoſt ſurprized, and all hope of help ſeemed to bee prevented; if help ſhould come, it would come too late.

Verſ. 6. In my diſtreſſe I called upon the Lord] This was Davids anchora ſacra; prayer hee knew could never come too late, nor God want a way to deliver his diſtreſſed. The time of affliction, is the time of ſupplication; and mans extremity is Gods opportunity.

And cryed unto my God] Hee grew more and more earneſt; wee muſt pray and not faint, Luk. 18. 1. but riſe in our ſutes.

Out of his Temple] i. e. Heaven, whereof the Temple was a type, as being the place of Gods ſpeciall preſence, and of tranſcendent holineſſe.

Verſ. 7. Then the earth ſhook and trembled, &c.] Upon Davids prayer all this befell; like as Act. 4. the houſe ſhook wherein they were praying; and the thundering Legion procured thunder and rain; and ſo did Samuel by his prayers, 1 Sam. 12. But this terrible tempeſt here deſcribed is to be taken rather allegorically than hiſtorically. The Prophet in moſt lofty and lively tearmes and expreſſions (farre above the ſtrain of the moſt ſublime either Poets or Oratours) deſcribeth Gods powerfull preſence and concurrence in Davids conqueſts.

The foundations alſo of the hills] That is, ſo vehement was the Earthquake, that it ſhook, as it were the roots of the Mountains, which lye deep within the ground, 2 Sam. 22. 8. theſe hills are called the foundation of Heaven, as Job 26. 11. the pillars of Heaven; becauſe the tops of high Mountains ſeem to touch the clouds, and the Heavens ſeem to lean upon them; and becauſe the Earth is in the centre of the World, about the which the Heavens do continually turn.

Becauſe he was wroth] Or, burn did his noſe. So

Verſ. 8. There went up a ſmoak out of his noſtrills] As angry men breath vehemently, and ſeem to ſpit fire by their bluſtering ſpeeches and menaces, ſo here ανθρωποπαθως omnia, quæ tamen θεοπρεπως ſunt intelligenda.

Verſ. 7. Hee bowed the Heavens] i. e. velociter venit, ſaith R. David, hee came ſpeedily to deſtroy mine enemies.

And darkneſſe was under his feet] Hee came inviſible.

Verſ. 10. And he rode upon a Cherub] Which word hath affinity with Rechub a Charret; Hereby is noted Gods ſwiftneſſe in comming to ſuccour David. He waits to bee gracious, and when it is a fit ſeaſon hee comes leaping and skipping over the Mountaines of Bether or diviſion, all lets, and impediments; Gabriel came to Daniel with wearineſſe of flight, chap. 9. 21.

Hee did flie upon the wings of the Wind] For, by the Miniſtry of Angells, God raiſeth and ſtilleth the winds.

Vatab.

Verſ. 11. Hee made darkneſſe his ſecret place] As a King, that being angry, withdraweth himſelf from his ſubjects, and will not bee ſeen of them. Vel quia decreta Dei veniunt inviſibiliter, ſaid R. David.

Verſ. 12. At the brightneſſe that was before him, &c.] i. e. at his bright preſence, his thick clouds (wherein hee was inveloped) paſſed, or did cleave as it were in ſunder; whence came hailſtones mixed with coales of fire, or lightnings out of the cloudes, which God maketh at once aery ſeas, and aery furnaces, fetching fire out of the midſt of water, and hard ſtones out of the midſt of thin vapours.

Verſ. 13. The Lord alſo thundred in the Heavens] Quaſi pro claſſico, & auſpicio prælii ſecundi.

Verſ.

Verſ. 14. Yea hee ſent out his arrowes, &c.] Tandem permiſcentur omnia grandine flammis & fulminibus tanquam telis & ſagittis Dei adverſus hoſtes pugnantis. After the vaunt-curriers, verſ. 12. the great Ordinance, verſ. 13. the battel begins, and all is on an hurry.

Verſ. 15. Then the Chanels of waters were ſeen] The force of this terrible Tempeſt is further ſet forth by the effect of it, a dreadful concuſſion of the univerſe; not without an alluſion to the drying up of the red Sea, and of Jordan before Iſrael; which deliverances ſtood for Archetypes, or chief patterns to all Poſterity.

Verſ. 16. He ſent from above, he took me] He reſcued me as by an hand reacht me from Heaven. Deus ἐκ μηχανῆς; or, he ſent his Angels to ſecure me.

He drew me out of many waters] As he had once done Moſes, Exod. 2. 10. who there-hence alſo had his name. Muſæus, for the ſame cauſe, calleth him ὑδρόγενης Water-ſprung.

Verſ. 17. He delivered me from my ſtrong enemy] Saul; this he oft inſtanceth, rolling it as Suger under his tongue, and turning aſide often to look upon it, as Sampſon did to ſee his dead Lion; fetching Hony out of it.

For they were too ſtrong for me] And then Gods help was moſt ſeaſonable, when David found himſelf over-matcht.

Verſ. 18. They prevented me, &c.] They took me on the ſudden, and unprovided. The Children of this World are wiſer, &c.

But the Lord was my ſtay] Or, my ſtaff, whereon I ſo leaned as that if he had failed me, I had been all along.

Verſ. 19. He brought me forth alſo, &c.] He freed me out of all ſtraights, and ſtated me in a moſt happy condition.

He delivered, becauſe he delighted in me] All was of free grace and favour, not of any merit. And this he purpoſely premiſeth as a caution to the enſuing profeſſion of his innocency.

Verſ. 20. The Lord rewarded me according to my righteouſneſs] viz. The righteouſneſs of my Cauſe; and my freedom from ſuch crimes of diſloyalty, and ambition, wherewith mine enemies charged me, as if prickt on by my pride I ſought the Kingdom. As alſo, according to mine honeſt deſire and endeavour in all things elſe, to keep a good Conſcience, voyd of offence toward God, and men. This, though Gods own work, and a debt moſt due to him, yet he is pleaſed graciouſly to reward.

Verſ. 21. For I have kept the ways of the Lord] For the main, and for the moſt part, though not without ſome particular ſtumblings and ſtartings aſide, againſt my general reſolution, and the tendency of mine heart.

And have not wickedly departed from my God] By an utter defection; I have not been transformed into Sins Image, by projecting ſin, by falling into it with full conſent, and by lying under the power of it. Non ex ſuperbia ſed errore, ſaith R. David here; not of preſumption have I offended, or with an high hand, but of infirmity, and with reluctancy; riſing up again by repentance, and renewing my Covenant.

Verſ. 22. For all his Judgements were before mee] Mine obedience (in deſire and indeavour at leaſt) was univerſall, extending to the compaſs of the whole Law; and this is a ſure ſign of ſincerity: Hence in the next words,

Verſ. 23. I was alſo upright before him] This he had becauſe he kept Gods Commandements, as verſ. 22. had reſpect to them all, Pſal. 119. 6. both to the Magnalia, and minutula legis, which he kept as the apple of his ye, Prov. 7. 2. even all Gods Wills, Act. 13. 22. and was therefore approved in Chriſt, as Apelles, Rom. 16. 10. and paſſed for an Iſraelite indeed, in whom was no guile, as Nathaniel, Joh. 1. 47.

And I kept my ſelf from mine iniquity] i. e. from my peccatum in deliciis, my darling ſin, whereto I am either by Nature or Cuſtom moſt inclined and addicted. From the iniquity of my heart and ſecret thoughts, which no man can charge me with, ſaith Aben-Ezra; from that ſin of diſloyalty, which Saul and his Courtiers falſly charge me with, Say others. R. David.

Verſ. 24. Therefore hath the Lord recompenſed me] See on verſ. 20. Reward and Mercy are joyned together in the Second Commandement; and Pſal. 62. 12. it is a mercy in God to reward a man according to his work.

Qua illo judice præditus ſum. Vatab.

According to the cleaneneſs of my hands in his eyeſight] i.e. which he hath beheld in me; though mine enemies were of another judgement.

Ver. 25 With the mercifull, &c.] Hypotheſin hic ad theſin tranſfert; it is as if he ſhould ſay, I and mine enemies are a pattern of thy Truth and Juſtice, that thou wilt do good to thoſe that are good, and to them that are upright in their hearts. As for ſuch as turn aſide unto their crooked paths, thou Lord ſhalt lead them forth with the workers of iniquity, Pſal. 125. 4, 5.

Verſ. 26. With the pure, &c.] Cum candido candide agere ſoles. The pure ſhall have all that heart can wiſh.

And with the froward thou wilt ſhew thy ſelf froward] Or, thou wilt wraſtle, viz. with ſuch croſs peices, as proudly and perverſly erre from thy precepts; as it were on purpoſe to thwart thee, or to try Maſteries with thee. Againſt ſuch ſtubborn perſons God threatneth not eight degrees (which are the higheſt Notes in Muſick, and degrees in qualities, as the Philoſopher diſtinguiſheth them) but twenty and eight degrees of wrath, Levit. 26. 18, 21, 24, 28. Exiget ab iis rationem minutiſſimorum, ſaith R. Obad. Gaon upon this Text; he will reckon with them for their leaſt offences, and not bate them an Ace of their due puniſhment. He will pay them home in their own coyn, over-ſhoot them in their own Bow, fill them with their own ways, be as croſs as they are, for the hearts of them; yet ſtill in a way of Juſtice, though he break the necks of them in wraſtling, and ſend them packing to their place in Hell. Ainſworth rendreth it, With the froward thou wilt ſhew thy ſelf wry. It is a Similitude taken from Wraſtlers, and noteth a writhing of ones ſelf againſt an adverſary. Compare herewith Deut. 32. 5. They are a perverſe and crooked Generation (the ſame two words that are here in this Text) the latter importeth, that they wriggled and writhed after the manner of Wraſtlers that wave up and down, and wind the other way, when one thinks to have them here or there. But all will not ſerve their turn to ſave them from puniſhment. God will be ſure to meet with them, his Word will lay hold on them, and their ſin ſhall finde them out.

Verſ. 27. For thou wilt ſave the afflicted people] Even the ſame whom before he had called Merciful, or godly, upright, pure, here are the Afflicted, and ſeem by God to be neglected; but he will ſave them aſſuredly, though he bear long with them, Luk. 18. 7.

But will bring down high looks] In Samuel it is, Thine eyes are upon the haughty, that thou maiſt bring them down, 2 Sam. 22. 28. q.d. Gods eyes are upon them all the while that he ſpareth them, to watch for a fit ſeaſon to ruine them.

Verſ. 28. For thou wilt light my Candle] Or, Thou haſt lighted my Candle (that is, thou haſt bettered my condition) which ſeemed to be put out in obſcurity. The wicked mans is, Job 18. 6. & 21. 17. Prov. 13. 9.

The Lord my God will enlighten my darkneſs] He hath, and yet ſtill will turn my grief into joy, as Heſt. 8. 19. and mean while direct and comfort me in mine Afflictions; as a Candle is a great comfort in the dark, though it doth not make Day where it comes, as the Sun doth.

Verſ. 29. For by thee have I run thorow a Troop] Though but a little man, yet by Gods help he atchieved great matters, did great exploits. Homo tricubitalis (ſaith a Father concerning Paul) Et cœlum aſcendit: ſo here. Some render it, Currebam accinctus, I ran well appointed; and they interpret it of his Victory over Goliah, whom he ran upon and cut off his head, after that he had hurled at him with as good a force; Perinde ac ſi fundæ ſuæ tunicis non lapillum, ſed Deum ipſum induiſſet ac implicuiſſet, ſaith one; as if he had got not a ſtone, but God himſelf into the bought of his ſling. Bucholc.

And by my God have I leapt over a wall] That is, I have ſtormed a walled Town, or Fort, with very little ado; being no leſs valiant and venturous than Alexander the Great was among the Indians; but upon farre better grounds, becauſe in the ſtrength of God, as at the Fort of Zion. 2 Sam. 3.

Verſ. 30. As for God, his way is perfect] All his Diſpenſations toward his Children, his actions, and directions, his providences, and promiſes are moſt truſty and true; having neither vice, vanity, inſincerity, nor deceit in them.

Verſ.

The Word of the Lord is tried] This is a famous ſentence, and was much in the mouthes of Gods people. See Prov. 30. 5. with the Note there.

Verſ. 31. For who is God ſave the Lord] Fictitios Deos & vanas ſpes proſternit, ſaith Vatablus; Here he ſtriketh down to the ground all falſe gods, and all vain hopes. Contemno minutulos iſtos Deos modo Jovem mihi propitium habeam, ſaid an Heathen. David might much better ſay, I care not for thoſe petty Deities, ſo I may have Jehovah to favour me.

Verſ. 32. It is God that girdeth mee with ſtrength] It is a Metaphor, ſaith Vatablus, either from a Souldiers belt which buckleth his armour cloſe to him, and maketh him more ſteddy; or elſe from the reines themſelves, in which the Scripture ſometimes placeth ſtrength and vigour. God did all for David, and hath here the glory of all his valour and victories.

And maketh my way perfect] i. e. Compleateth and proſpereth all my deſigns and enterpriſes. For want hereof many attempt much, but effect little or nothing. Antiochus King of Syria was called Magnus for undertaking much, and performing little. Guicciardin ſaith of Charles the eighth, in his expedition to Naples, that he came into the field like thunder and lightning, but went out like a ſnuffe; more than a man at firſt, and leſſe than a woman at laſt.

Verſ. 33. Hee maketh my feet like Hindes feet] Heb. Hee matcheth my feet, like Hindes feet; that is, not only ſwift, if I have occaſion by flight to provide for my ſelf, or to purſue mine enemies flying before mee; but alſo ſteddy if I come into any dangerous places. Aſahel was ſwift of foot as a wild Roe, 2 Sam. 2. 18. Joſephus ſaith of him, that hee contended with horſes in running. Saul and Jonathan are ſaid to be ſwifter than Eagles, 2 Sam. 1. 23. Achilles was ποδὰς ὠκὺς, ſaith Homer, The Hind, when purſued by the woolf, runs moſt ſwiftly; witneſſe the Poet,

Quem tu, cervus uti vallis in altera
Viſum parte lupum, graminis immemor, ſublimi fugies mollis anhelitu. Horat. lib. 1. Od. 1
And gain, Vitas hinnuleo me ſimilis, Chloe, &c. lib. 1. Od. 23.

But they that wait upon the Lord have a promiſe that they ſhall not only run as Hindes, but mount up as Eagles; they ſhall run and not bee weary, and they ſhall walk and not faint, Iſa. 40. 31.

Hee ſetteth mee upon my high places] Where, having by flight or fight eſcaped, I am ſecured; yea hee hath advanced me, and brought me to this high honour. Securus poſt quam Evaſi a illis. R. Davi Verſ. 34. Hee teacheth mine hands to warre] David aſcribeth all his military skill and ſucceſſe to God, ſo did not other great Warriors, Alexander, Scipio, Fabius, &c. but ſacrificed to their own nets, and were ready to ſay as Seſoſtris King of Ægypt did, when hee had conquered any Country, hee was wont to ſet up pillars with theſe words ingraven upon them, This Country I got by mine own ſtrength and vallour. ταύτην τὴ χώρην ἐμοὶ ο τοῖς ἐμοῖσ ἐκτησάμην. Herodot. l.

So that a bow of ſteel, &c] Which is more flexible and ſtronger than a bow of Iron; whence is that, Job 20. 24.

Verſ. 35. Thou haſt alſo given mee, &c.] i. e. Thou haſt preſerved and ſetled me. See the Note on Pſal. 5. 12.

And thy gentleneſſe hath made mee great] Or, Thy meekneſſe hath multiplied mee, i. e. Thou haſt ſo farr ſtooped to my meanneſſe, as to advance mee to this heighth of honour. Or, by thy humbling mee, thou haſt magnified mee, according to 1 Pet. 5. 6. & Prov. 15. 33.

Verſ. 36. Thou haſt enlarged my ſteps under mee] Or, Thou haſt widened my paſſages, and made roomth for mee; when the wicked mans ſtrong paſſages are ſtreightened, Job 18. 7. his paſe impeded.

And my feet did not ſlip] Heb. Mine anckles, or my heeles, Sep. my footſteps.

Verſ. 37. I have purſued mine enemies, and overtaken them, &c.] Of David we may ſay, as one did of Julius Ceſar, you may perceive him to have been an excellent ſouldier by his very language; for hee wrote with the ſame ſpirit hee fought. In eo tanta vis, id acumen, ea concitatio, (ſaith Quintilian concerning Ceſars Commentaries) ut illum eodem animo dixiſſe appareat quo bellavit. l. 10 ad ſilium

Verſ. 38. I have wounded them that they were not able to riſe] Much leſſe to reſiſt. And herein hee was a type of Chriſt; all whoſe foes ſhall bee his footſtool, Pſal. 110. 1.

Verſ. 39. Thou haſt girded mee with ſtrength, &c.] See verſ. 32. It is God that weakeneth or ſtrengtheneth either party, Ezek. 30. 24. and rendreth their weapons vain or proſperous, Iſa. 54. ult. Jer. 50. 9.

Thou haſt ſubdued under me, &c.] David aſcribeth all to God, and uſeth wonderfull variety of expreſſions in ſetting forth his benefits.

Verſ. 40. Thou haſt given mee the necks of mine enemies] ſc: to chop them off at my pleaſure; or to cut the throats.

Verſ. 41. They cryed] Through grief and impatiency, clamore incondito, as beaſts when in durance, fill the air with loud out-cryes.

Even unto the Lord] As nature prompteth men in an extremity to look up for help; but becauſe it is but the prayer of the fleſh for eaſe, and not of the Spirit for grace, and a good uſe of calamities, and not but in extreme deſpaire of help elſewhere, therefore God hears them not. In Samuel it is, They looked, but there was none to ſave them, q. d. If they could have made any other ſhift, God ſhould never have heard of them. Therefore Sero, inquit Nero.

Verſ. 42. Then did I beat them as ſmall as the duſt] When God once withdraws his protection and help from a people, it is an eaſie matter to tread them down and beat them in pieces. Lay hold upon him therefore as the Church did, and hang on. Say as Jer. 14. 21. Do not abhorre us for thy names ſake; for as Bodin ſaid well of obtaining, ſo for retaining religion and civill rights, Non diſputationibus, ſed rogationibus agendum, prayer is moſt prevalent. If once our ſhaddow depart, &c. woe bee unto them when I depart from them.

I did caſt them out, &c.] Evacuabam eos, I dealt by them, as men do by the ſweepings of the houſe, or noyſome excrements. God ſometimes dungeth his Vineyard with the dead bodies of his enemies.

Verſ. 43. Thou haſt delivered mee from the ſtrivings of the people] viz. In the rebellions under Abſolom, and Sheba the ſon of Bichri. Theſe, like bubbles which Children blow up into the air, were ſoon blown out; and fell into the eyes of thoſe who with the blaſts of diſloyalty and ambition held up the ſame.

Thou haſt made mee head of the Heathen] Philiſtines, Syrians, Ammonites, &c. This is moſt true of Chriſt, Head of his Church, which conſiſteth of all Nations, and moſt of theſe were unknown unto him as man; and by hearing of him, they were brought to ſubmit unto him, when the Apoſtles came and preached him amongſt them. Hence it followeth, Verſ. 44. Aſſoon as they hear of mee] Heb. at the hearing of the ear; that is, by the preaching of the Goſpell they ſhall bee brought to yeeld the obedience of faith.

Subjectio fucoſa & Hypocritica.

The ſtrangers ſhall ſubmit] Heb. Falſly deny or diſſemble with mee; their ſubmiſſion is forced and feigned, they dare do no leſſe; they receive my yoke, but their hearts I have not. Chriſt hath many ſuch falſe-hearted ſubjects, fawning and faining profligate profeſſors, carnal Goſpellers, &c.

Verſ. 45. The ſtrangers ſhall fade away] As do the dry leaves of Trees; their vigour and confidence ſhall periſh in a moment.

And bee afraid out of their cloſe places] Whence they ſhall come creeping to mee their conqueror, to ſeek favour. And this may very fitly alſo be applied to Chriſt and his ſubjects, who muſt bee driven unto him out of their cloſe places, or ſtarting holes of ſelf-confidences, ſelf-conceitedneſſe, &c. by the ſpirit of bondage, before they will unfeignedly ſubmit to Chriſts Government.

Verſ. 46. The Lord liveth] Or, Vivat Dominus, Let the Lord live. It is ſpoken, ſaith Calvin, after the manner of men, who uſe ſuch kind of acclamations to the Kings, whom they love and honour. The Wicked could wiſh God extinct, that ſo they might never come to an account before him; but the Saints cry out, Let the Lord live, let Chriſt reign, &c. Bleſſed bee God that Hee is God, was a learned mans motto. Luthers was, Vivit, ſc. Chriſtus. Si non viveret, vellem me non unam horam vivere, &c. Chriſt is alive, otherwiſe I would not wiſh to live an hour. Another good man ſaith, Chriſt liveth and raigneth, atque totus terrus deſperaſſem, otherwiſe I ſhould be utterly out of hope.

Miconius.

Let the God of my ſalvation bee exalted] Triumphali elogio ab omnibus celebratur, let him bee ſet up in all hearts and houſes.

Verſ. 47. It is God that avengeth mee] Heb. that giveth vengeances for mee, whence whence alſo hee is called the God of vengeances, Pſal. 94. 1. and the God of recompences, Jer. 51. 56.

And ſubdueth the people under me] It is the great work of God, to perſwade the hearts of ſo many millions to obey one man.

Verſ. 48. He delivereth me from mine enemies] This David hath never done with, but goeth over it again and again, as deſirous to do the Lord all the right that might be.

From the violent man] That is, from Saul, ſaith R. David, and him he mentioneth laſt, Quia erat principium omnis Davidicæ gloriæ; becauſe the fall of his houſe was the riſe of all Davids glory. The Chaldee hath it, From Gog, and his Armies.

Verſ. 49. Therefore I will give thanks, &c.] See how the Pſalmiſt in theſe three laſt Verſes endeth as he began.

Among the Heathen] This the Apoſtle applieth to Chriſt and his people, as a Prophecy of his Kingdom, and of the calling of the Gentiles, Rom. 15. 9. I, that is, Chriſt, (but yet in the perſon of his faithful, and eſpecially his Miniſters) will praiſe thee, or confeſs unto thee, &c.

And ſing praiſes unto thy name] Which to have done abſurdum fuiſſet apud ſurdos, would have been abſurd, had not thoſe Heathens had their ears opened.

Verſ. 50. Great deliverance giveth he to his King] In Samuel it is, He is the tower of Salvation for his King] This Tower is Meſſias, ſay the Jew-Doctors, Qui eſt turris ſalutis. O that thoſe poor Creatures would once run to that ſtrong tower and be ſafe.

To David and to his ſeed for evermore] That is, to Chriſt (who was made of the Seed of David, according to the fleſh, Rom. 1. 3. Act. 13. 23.) and to all faithful Chriſtians who are called Chriſts Seed, Iſa. 53. 10. and Pſal. 72. 17. Filiabitur nomine ejus, the Name of Chriſt ſhall endure for ever, it ſhall be begotten as one Generation is begotten of another, there ſhall be a ſucceſſion of it to the Worlds end.

PSAL. XIX.

THE Heavens declare the glory of God] The World, ſaith Clemens Alexandrinus, is Dei Scriptura, the firſt Bible that God made for the inſtitution of man. The Heavens (here inſtanced as a chief part of that Mundi totius machina) are compared to a Scroul that is written, Rev. 6. 14. As in a Horn-book, which little ones carry, there be Letters in a paper within, which appear through the ſame; ſo under the blew ſaphire of the Firmament, is ſpread a ſheet of royal Paper written all over with the Wiſdom and Power of God. This Book was imprinted (ſaith one) at the New Jeruſalem, by the Finger of Jehovah, and is not to be ſold, but to be ſeen, at the ſign of Glory, of every one that lifts up his eyes to Heaven; where he may plainly perceive, Deum eſſe mentem, Architectricem, intelligentem, ſapientem, potentem, &c. This leſſon is fairly lined out unto us in the brows of the Firmament, which therefore we are bidden to behold and diſcern; ſith therein God hath made himſelf viſible, yea legible, even his eternal Power and God-head; ſo that men are left without excuſe, Rom. 1. 20. But becauſe this Book of Nature (with its three great Leaves, Heaven, Earth, and Sea) though never ſo diligently read over, cannot bring a man to the ſaving knowledge of God in Chriſt, nor make him perfect, throughly furniſhed unto all good works; behold another and better Book, even that of the Holy Scriptures, ſet forth, verſ. 7, 8. &c. of this Pſalm, that like as where the Philoſopher endeth, the Phyſician beginneth, ſo where Nature faileth us, Scripture may inform and comfort us. In this excellent Pſalm then we have the ſum of all true Divinity, ſaith Reverend Beza, the end whereof is to give us that knowledge of God, and of his holy Worſhip, whereby we may be made partakers of eternal life. Here then in the ſix firſt Verſes the Prophet ſheweth, that God manifeſteth his glory to Mankind by his Works; and firſt by the Work of Creation, verſ. 1. Next, of Government, verſ. 2, 3, &c. and that, 1. In the revolution of the ſtarry Sky, which revolution, firſt cauſeth a perpetual viciſſitude of Days, and Nights, and ſo declareth the glory of God. 2. It beſpeaketh all people at ones as a Catholique Preacher of Gods glory,

ry, verſ. 4, 5. Secondly, In the conſtant courſe of the Sun (that common Servant as his Name importeth) verſ. 4. who with his motion, verſ. 5. enlightneth all things with his Light, and pierceth all things with his Heat, verſ. 6. Thus the Heavens declare the glory of God; that is, they yeeld matter and occaſion of glorifying, him according to that Pſal. 145. 10. All thy Works praiſe thee, O Lord, but thy Saints bleſs thee. Some Philoſophers, and with them ſome Rabbins, have deemed, or rather doted, that the Heaven was a living Creature, and did actually praiſe and ſerve God. But this conceit is exploded by the wiſer ſort; and that Axiom maintained, Formica cœlos dignitate ſuperat, a Piſmire (becauſe a living Creature) is more excellent than the whole viſible Heavens. As for the Saints and Servants of God, it is truly affirmed by Divines, that there is not ſo much of the glory of God in all his Works of Creation, and Providence, as in one gracious action that they perform.

Foord.

Maimonides

And the Firmament ſheweth his handy-work] The Expanſe or out-ſpread Firmament. It is taken both for the Air, Gen. 1. 6. and for the Sky, Gen. 1. 14. the whole Cope of Heaven, which ſheweth, Quàm eleganter & ad amuſſim operetur Deus manibus ſuis; how neatly and exactly God worketh with his hands, which are attributed to him for our weakneſs ſake.

Vatablus,

Verſ. 2. Day unto day uttereth ſpeech] Some read it, one day ſucceeding another uttereth (or Welleth out, as a Fountain, continually, and plentifully) ſpeech, yet without ſound; by a dumb kind of eloquence, eructant; by a continual revolution and ſucceſs of days men are inſtructed concerning the Power and Providence of God, as alſo concerning his truth and faithfulneſs; for if God hath hitherto kept promiſe with Nights and Days, that one ſhall ſucceed the other; will he not much more keep promiſe with his people? Jer. 33. 20, 25.

Sicut fons ſcaturiens. R. Menahem.

And Night unto Night ſheweth knowledge] Days and Nights by their perpetual courſe and order, Dei potentiam & ſapientiam concelebrant; there being no leſs neceſſity of the Night in its kind, than of the Day. The knowledge it ſheweth us, is, that man in himſelf is weak, and cannot long hold out hard labour; that he is permitted to ſleep a while, and take his reſt; that he muſt abridge himſelf of ſome part of his reſt to commune with his own heart on his bed, and be ſtill; that if hee beſtir not himſelf, and do up his work quickly, the Night of Death cometh, when no man can work, &c.

Verſ. 3. There is no ſpeech, nor language, where their voyce] And yet few hear theſe Catholique Preachers, theſe Regii Profeſſores, theſe real Poſtilles of the Divinity, as one ſtileth them, who do preach to all people at once, Non ſolum diſerte ſed & exertè, at ſurdis plerumq; fabulam, they are by the moſt as little reſpected as is the Cuckoe in June.

Verſ. 4. Their line is gone out through all the earth] Or, their rule, or direction, or delineation, or Scripture (confer Iſa. 28. 13.) Quòd in cœlis tanquam in volumine omnibus conſpicuo deſcripta ſit Dei gloria, becauſe that in the Heavens, as in an open Book, is written down the glory of the Creator. The like is done alſo in other leſs conſiderable Creatures: every of which do after a ſort write as well as ſpeak, and have a Pen as well as a Tongue. The Chaldee word for a Mint ſignifieth alſo a Book of Hiſtories, becauſe in that one Herb large ſtories of Gods Wiſdom, Might, and Love are deſcribed unto us. The ſame word alſo that ſignifieth an ear of Corn, ſignifieth a word, becauſe every Field of Corn is a Book of Gods praiſe, every Land a Leaf, every Sheaf a Verſe, every Ear a word, every Corn of Wheat a Letter, to expreſs the glory of God by. Præſentem narrat qualibet herba Deum. Antony the Eremite being asked by a certain Philoſopher, how he could contemplate high things, having no help of Books? anſwered, That the whole World was to him inſtead of a well-furniſhed Library, this he had ready by him at all times and in all places, and in this he could read when he pleaſed the great things of God. Bernard alſo ſaith, that the time was when he had no other Maſters niſi quercus & fagos, but the Oaks and Beech-trees.

Aug. de doct. Chriſt. l. 1. Niceph. l. 8. c. 40. In vita Bern.

In them hath he ſet a Tabernacle for the Sun] That Prince of Planets, but ſervant to the Saints of the moſt High, as his name importeth; ſo ſweet a Creature he is, that Eudoxus the Philoſopher profeſſed, that he would be content to be burnt up by the heat of it, ſo he might be admitted to come ſo near it as to learn the nature of of it. A Tabernacle, or ſlitting-tent it is here ſaid to have in the Heavens: becauſe it never ſtayeth in one place, but courſeth about with incredible ſwiftneſs.

Verſ. 5. Which is as a Bridegroom coming out of his Chamber] ſc. after long expectation, with a great deal of pomp and gayety; ſuch is the Sun-riſing, when hee firſt ſheweth himſelf above our Horizon. Kimchi addeth, that as the Bridegroom when he is abroad haſteneth home to his Bride, ſo doth the Sun to his deſcent, anhelat ad occaſum, Eccleſ. 1. 5.

And rejoyceth as a ſtrong man (or Champion) to run a race] readily running, and effectually affecting all things with his heat. The Perſian Angari or Poſts, the Oſtrich, the wild Aſſe, the Buſtard, the Dromedary, the Eagle is nothing ſo ſwift as the Sun. Bellarmine ſaith, that he runneth in the eighth part of an hour ſeven thouſand miles. This dumb Creature gives check to our dulneſs; as Balaams Aſſe alſo did to that Prophets madneſs. De aſcenſ. mentis in Deum, grad. 7.

Verſ. 6. His going forth is from the end of the heaven] i. e. from the Eaſt unto the Weſt, in which courſe notwithſtanding, while he compaſſeth the circle of Heaven and Earth, he viſiteth the South and the North, and is unwearable.

And there is nothing hid from the heat thereof] i. e. from the benefit of the Suns heat, who is ut cor incorpore, as the heart in the body, ſaith Aben-Ezra: all things feel the quickning heat of the Sun; not only the roots of Trees, Plants, &c. but Metals, and Minerals in the bowels of the earth.

Verſ. 7. The Law of the Lord is perfect] Or, Doctrin: the whole Word of God, commonly diſtinguiſhed into Law and Goſpel, is perfect immaculate, ſincere, entire, compleat. If Tully durſt ſay, that the Law of the twelve Tables in Rome did exceed all the Libraries of Philoſophers, both in weight of authority, and fruitfulneſs of matter, how much rather is this true of Gods Law, ſaith a Learned Writer? Nothing may be added to it without marring of it, Prov. 30. 6. Note this againſt Jewiſh, Popiſh, and Turkiſh Traditions, and additions; as alſo againſt Antiſcripturiſts, and Anabaptiſts, who at firſt rejected all Books but the Bible; and after that grew ſo wiſe as to be religious enough without that alſo. And laſt of all, they came to blaſpheme that bleſſed Book, as a dead Letter, and a beggerly Element, &c. when as the Apoſtle telleth us, that all Scripture is pure, precious, and profitable for Doctrin, for reproof, &c. that the Man of God may be perfect, &c. 2 Tim. 3. 16, 17. Here in this, and the two following Verſes, it is eaſie to obſerve; 1. That every of them are in the Hebrew written with ten words. 2. That here is a Six-fold commendation of Gods holy Word. 1. By the ſeveral names thereunto given, Law, Teſtimony, Statutes, &c. 2. By the Nature, perfect, ſure, right, &c. 3. By the effects, converting the ſoul, making wiſe the ſimple, &c.

Converting the Soul] This no Doctrin beſides can do. Plato went thrice to Sicily to convert Dionyſius the Tyrant, but could not. Ambroſe ſaith well of Polemo, who of a Drunkard, by hearing Xenocrates, became a Philoſopher, Si reſipuit à vino, fuit ſemper tamen temulentus ſacrilegio, if he gave over his Drunkenneſs, yet he continued ſtill drunk with ſuperſtition. Seneca the Philoſopher wrote a Book (now loſt) againſt ſuperſtitions, but yet lived and died in them; Colebat quod reprehendebat, agebat quod arguebat, quod culpabat adorabat, ſaith Auſtin of him, he exerciſed what he condemned, and would not leave what he did ſo utterly diſlike. But the Word works a tranſmentation, an entire change of the mind, and manners, a new Creation, 2 Cor. 5. 17. Integra eſt Doctrina, ac proinde animos redintegrat. Jun. De Elia & jejunio cap. 12.

The teſtimony of the Lord is ſure] Theſe words are faithful and true, Rev. 22. 6. they are all in righteouſneſs, neither is there in them any thing perverſe or froward, Prov. 8. 8. Teſtimonies they are called, 1. Becauſe they teſtifie (as a Record) to all Ages what the will of the Lord is, Joh. 5. 39. 2. They were given with great conteſtation, and preſſing of all men to keep them. 3. They will be a witneſs againſt all ſuch as do not. The Goſpel alſo is called a Teſtimony, 1 Cor. 2. 1. 2 Theſ. 1. 10. Iſa. 18. 20.

Making wiſe the ſimple] That is, the humble, teachable, and ſuch as are not puffed up with a conceit of their own wiſdom, 1 Cor. 7. 18. the very entrance into Gods word giveth light, it giveth underſtanding to the ſimple, or to the perſwadable, Pſal. 119. 130. It is reaſonable milk, 1 Pet. 2. 2.

Verſ. 8. The ſtatutes of the Lord are right] As being the iſſue of the moſt righteous will of God. Of humane lawes Demoſthenes ſaith, that they are ἕυρημα τῶν θεῶν; the invention of the Gods. Much better may wee ſay the like of this law here commended: Right it is, becauſe it teacheth men the right way to life, non flexuoſum quale docet caro & cautio humana; Right alſo, becauſe it ſpeaketh right to every mans caſe and condition; de quolibet in re ſua, affording a ſalve for every ſore, a medicine for every malady; ſo that it may better bee called than was that famous library at Alexandria, ἡ τῆς ψυχῆς ἰάτρεια Phyſick for the ſoul, food and Phyſick both, and of the beſt ſort, the beſt of the beſt.

Rejoycing the heart] This is the proper work of the Goſpel; the ſweet promiſes whereof hid in the heart, and there mingled with faith, make it to over-abound exceedingly with joy, and to conceive ſtrong conſolation; the Martyrs of all ages for inſtance. And although it bee the Doctrine of the Croſſe, yet Lecythos habet in malis, it hath cordialls of comfort, ſuch as the World can neither give, nor take away: the Goſpel is a precious book; every leaf drops myrrhe and mercy. We ſhould therefore prize it much more than Cæſar did his Commentaries; Major fuit cura Cæſari libellorum quam purpuræ; for ſwimming through the waters to eſcape his enemies, hee carried his books in his hand above the waters, but loſt his robe. Now what were his books to Gods?

The Commandement of the Lord is pure] And ſo differeth from humane lawes, which eſtabliſheth wickedneſſe ſometimes; as thoſe of Lycurgus did ſome kind of theft, adultery, &c. Humane Doctrines alſo are mixt with many errours. Irenæus juſtly taxeth Plato for this that hee did lacte gypſum miſcere, mingle lime with milk, ſtain the pure ſtream of divine truth with fabulous narrations and foppe-ries. But every word of God is pure, Pſalm 12. 7. & 18. 32. See the Notes.

Inlightening the eyes] Giving both light and ſight, Act. 26. 18. the ſaving knowledge of God and his will, of our ſelves, and of our duties; and bringing us out of darkneſſe into his marvellous light, 1 Pet. 2. 9. When Chriſt came preaching, the people which ſate in darkneſſe ſaw a great light, Mat. 4. 16. And wee have a more ſure light of prophecie, whereunto wee muſt take heed as unto a light that ſhineth in a dark place, 2 Pet. 1. 19. Whileſt the Moon looketh directly upon the Sun, ſhe is bright and beautifull; but if ſhee once turn aſide, and be left to her ſelf, ſhe loſeth all Her glory, and enjoyeth but only a ſhaddow of light, which is her own: So whilſt men with humility and teachableneſſe turn their faces toward Chriſt revealed in the Goſpel, and thoſe ſtars in his right hand, the faithfull Miniſters, to receive illumination and inſtruction; God doth graciouſly vouchſafe unto them the glorious light of ſaving knowledge. But when they turn their backs upon him and his Oracles, and will needs walk by the light of their own tinder-boxes, kindling a fire, and compaſſing themſelves with ſparks, Iſa. 50. 11. they are ſure to be bewildred, and to lye down in ſorrow.

Verſ. 9. The fear of the Lord is clean] That is. The Doctrine which teacheth the true fear of God, is ſuch as cleanſeth the conſcience, ferreteth out corruption, ſanctifieth the whole man, Joh. 17. 17. & 15. 3. Act. 20. 32. & 26. 18.

Enduring for ever] For ever, O Lord thy word is eſtabliſht in Heaven, Pſal. 119. 89. Heaven and Earth ſhall paſs, but not one jot or tittle of the law; not one hair of that ſacred head ſhall fall to the ground, Mat. 5. 18. ſhould all the powers on earth make warre againſt the very paper of the Scriptures, they cannot poſſibly deſtroy it. What God hath written, hee hath written, and it ſhall ſtand inviolable to the Worlds end. Antiochus Epiphanes, Dioclesian, and other Tyrants have attempted to burn up all Bibles: but could never effect it. Other lawes, and Religions are antiquated and altered, as all Hiſtories teſtifie; not ſo this.

The Judgements of the Lord are true] Heb. Truth, as comming from a God of Truth, and without iniquity, juſt, and righteous is hee, Deut. 32. 4. All his ſayings are faithfull, and therefore worthy of all acceptation. 1 Tim. 1. 15. The Eternity of Iſrael cannot lye, 1 Sam. 15. 29. Hee will not ſuffer his faithfullneſſe to fail, nor alter the thing that is gone out of his mouth, Pſal. 89. 33. Μόνιμον ἡ ἀλήθεια ſaith Plato; Truth is laſting, and γλυκεῖα ἡ ἀλήθεια, Truth is ſweet, ſaid Mercuries Prieſts when they ate their figs. Divine Truths ſhould bee ſo to us, in a ſpeciall manner. And as Cyprian, in any great doubt or difficultie would call to Paulus Concordienſis (who was his notary) for Tertullians works ſaying, Da Magiſtrum, Reach hither my Maſter;

Maſter; ſo ſhould wee call for the Bible, and there-hence fetch ſatisfaction, and ſettlement, as holding it infallible.

And righteous altogether] Not one of them to be found fault with; but all of them every way compleat and abſolute. Juſtificata ſunt ſimul, ſo ſome render it, they are altogether juſtified. What an high eſteem the Jews at this day have of the Law, hath been elſewhere noted; whilſt they carry it uſually about their Synagogues at the end of their ſervice in proceſſion, with many ornaments of Crowns and Scepters; the Children kiſſing it, as it paſſeth by them. To their Diſciples they preſcribe, not to write any letter of the law without a coppy, no line of it without a rule, no parchment but made of the skin of a clean beaſt, no word muſt be written in a different colour. No man might carry it behind him, but lay it next to his heart in his travell; nor read it, but in a clean place; nor ſell it, though the coppy were moth-eaten, and himſelf half famiſhed. The laſt day of the feaſt of Tabernacles they call Shimchah Torah, the rejoycing at the Law. They have choſen alſo then, two, that are called ſponſi legis; one of which is to read the end of it called Chathan Torah, the Bridegroom of the Law ended; the other Chathan Bereſhith, becauſe hee preſently beginneth it again; theſe are to expreſſe joy.

Verſ. 10. More to bee deſired are they than gold] Old people are all for profit, young for pleaſure; here's gold for the one, yea the fineſt gold (gold of Fes) in great quantity; here's hony for the other, yea live-hony dropping from the comb, liquor of the hony-comb. As Manna had all ſorts of ſweet taſtes in it; ſo hath the word, to thoſe that have ſpirituall ſenſes exerciſed to diſcern good and evill. Great is the ſweetneſſe of humane learning to thoſe that have got a taſte of it, as it was to Pythagoras and Plato, who travelled farre for it; to Julian the Apoſtate, who preferred the ſtudy of it, before all paſtimes whatſoever; to M. Aurelius the Emperour, who ſaid, hee would not leave the knowledge hee might learn in one hour, for all the gold that hee poſſeſſed; to Alphonſus King of Arragon, who preferred his skill in the Mathematicks, before the Empire of Germany when it was offered unto him; he profeſſed, that hee had rather loſe his Jewels than his books; and all his Kingdomes rather than that little learning hee had attained unto. How then ſhould we prize divine learning, which is infinitely more precious, profitable, and pleaſant? David had much of it, and yet hee cryes to God ever and anon, Teach mee thy ſtatutes. Moſes was but newly come down from the Mount, and hee preſently prayes as one inſatiate, Lord ſhew mee thy glory. The Angels themſelves know not ſo much of the myſtery of Chriſt, but they would fain know more, 1 Pet. 1. 12. Epheſ. 3. 10. &c.

Acæto melle Plin. l. 11. c.

Verſ. 11. Moreover by them is thy ſervant warned] Clearly admoniſhed, or fourbiſhed and brightned, Dan. 12. 3. made circumſpect. Gods Teſtimonies were Davids counſellors, Pſal. 119. 24. better than ever was Polybius to Scipio, Agrippa to Auguſtus, Seneca to Nero, Anaxagoras to Themiſtocles, Plato to Dio, Alexander to Ariſtotle, or Nigidius to Cicero; Princes of old had their Μαιμονες Monitores, Remembrancers. David deſired no better than Gods ſtatutes for his learned counſell, and by them hee reſolved to be ruled; for ſo it followeth,

And in keeping of them] Zenophon writeth that in Lycurgus his lawes this was much to be admired, that whereas all men commended them, yet no other City beſides that of Sparta, would ever obſerve them. Men do rather praiſe right things than practiſe them; as it was ſaid of Demoſthenes. But David was of another ſtrain; hee, after a large encomium of Gods Commandements, is ſet upon the keeping of them; and the rather, becauſe

In keeping of them there is great reward] Not only for keeping, but in keeping of them. As every Flower hath its ſweet ſmell; ſo every good action hath its ſweet reflection upon the ſoul: and as Cardan ſaith, that every precious Stone hath ſome egregious vertue; ſo here, Righteouſneſs is its own reward, though few men think ſo, and act accordingly:

Haud facilè invenies multis è millibus unum;
Virtutem pretium qui putet eſſe ſui.

Howbeit, the chief reward is not till the laſt caſt, till we come to Heaven. The word here rendred reward, ſignifieth the heel, and by a Metaphor, the end of a work, and the reward of it, which is not till the end. Sicut opus non eſt uſq; ad mor- tem perfectum, ſic nec merces, ſaith R. David here; As the work is not done till death; ſo neither is full wages till then to be had.

Verſ. 12. Who can underſtand his errour?] This David ſpeaketh doubtleſs out of a deep ſenſe of his own imperfections, and defects in what the Law (ſo much by him commended) requireth; and to prevent miſtakes, leſt any man hearing him ſpeak of great reward, ſhould think that Heaven may be merited, and Salvation attained by a mans own righteouſneſs. No ſuch matter, beleeve it, ſaith holy David, I have neither done the Law, nor deſerved the reward, but do fly to God by prayer; and three things I have to beg of him; Firſt, that he would graciouſly pardon my ſecret ſins and errours, unknown to my ſelf, or at leaſt to others. Secondly, That he would keep me from proud and preſumtuous ſins, verſ. 13. Thirdly, That he would bridle my tongue and minde from ſpeaking, or but thinking ought that may be offenſive to his Majeſty, verſ. 14. For the Firſt of theſe, Humanum eſt errare & ignorare errorem ſuum; It is incident to every man to erre, and then to be ignorant of his errours. Certain it is, that our lives are fuller of ſins, than the Firmament is of Stars, or the Furnace of ſparks. And if the beſt mans faults were written in his fore-head, it would make him pull his hat over his eyes, as the Proverb hath it. David here ſeeth ſuch volumes of corruptions in his heart, and ſo many foul Erratas in his life, that he cannot but cry out, Who can underſtand, &c. O cleanſe, &c. The moſt perfect Saints are the moſt ſenſible of their imperfections; as the more delicate the Senſes are, the more ſharply are they affected with what offends them, Rom. 7. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 9, 10. Alas for us! (ſaith one good man) Ipſa lachryma ſunt lachrymabiles; we had need to weep over our tears, ſigh over our ſobs, mourn over our griefs, &c. Look how when we have ſwept a room never ſo clean (ſaith Spineus) if the Sun do but come into it at the windows, we ſoon eſpy abundance of filthy motes, mingled with the beams thereof: ſo is it with our hearts, when once illightned. What a blinde buzzard then was he that ſaid, Non habeo Domine quod mihi ignoſcas, Lord, I have nothing for thee to pardon? And no wiſer was Bellarmine that great Scholar, but ill read in his own heart, if that be true that is reported of him, viz. that when the Prieſt came to abſolve him, he could not remember any particular ſin to confeſs, till he went back in his thoughts as far as his youth. Of Philip the Third King of Spain, it is ſaid, that he lived ſo ſtrictly, that he never committed any groſs Crime, or wilful wickedneſs; yet coming to dye, he cried out, O that I had never reigned! O that I had lived a private life in the Wilderneſs, that I might not have now to anſwer for not doing the good, or hindering the evil that I might have done in my government!

De inſtit. Chriſtian.

Val. Max. Chriſt. 263.

Cleanſe thou me from ſecret faults] Secret from my ſelf, many of them (ſins of ignorance and of inadvertency) ſecret from the world, more of them, heart ſins, but not ſecret from the Lord, Pſal. 90. 8. Heb. 4. 13. Theſe are of daily and hourly incurſion, involuntary and unavoydable infirmities, yet are they ſins properly ſo called; and we muſt be cleanſed from them by the Merit and Spirit of Chriſt: they muſt be repented of in general at leaſt; and then there is a pardon of courſe for them, and they do not uſually diſtract and plunge the Conſcience.

Verſ. 13. Keep back thy ſervant alſo from preſumptuous ſins] Heb. With-draw, inhibit, for we are naturally prone to the worſt of ſins, even the beſt of us, and to lye buried with the World in a bog of wickedneſs, adding rebellion to ſin, and doing wickedly with both hands earneſtly, unleſs God reign us in, and reſtrain us from ſuch enormities. Pray we therefore as here, Etiam à ſuperbiis contine ſervum tuum. Davids Murthering Uriah was a ſin of this ſort. The Rabbins here obſerve how the Prophet riſeth in his requeſt, firſt for pardon of leſſer ſins, and then for power againſt greater; like as a Begger, ſay they, firſt craves a little water, and then a Morſel of bread. We ſhould do ſo.

Midraſh Tillin in Pſal. 191.

Let them not have dominion over me] Sin will rebel, but it muſt not reign in our mortal bodies, it muſt not play Rex, and bear ſway in the ſoul. Pray hard againſt that in chief, Ne iniquitas victrix dominetur, that our luſts be not our Lords, that vice vanquiſh us not.

Then ſhall I be upright] Then, when I have gotten both pardoning and prevailing-grace, to bee cleanſed from infirmities, and kept from preſumptions and arrogance rogancies, which cum temerario auſu & faſtu fiunt contumaciter, I ſhall bee upright in Gods account, and entire in his obedience.

And I ſhall bee innocent from the great tranſgreſſion] That ſin unto death, 1 John 5. 16. that wickedneſſe with a witneſſe, for which there remaineth no more ſacrifice, Heb. 10. 26. and unto which a way is paved by ſins of preſumption with an high hand committed againſt knowledge and conſcience.

Verſ. 14. Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations, &c.] Sint ad beneplacitum verba, &c. Let both my words and thoughts, as well as my life and actions, bee to favourable acceptation; let them be ſuch as may ſuit with thy law and will.

O Lord my ſtrength] Heb. My Rock. In Mare, vel in Marah, vel in hoc mundo ſay the Rabbines; In the Sea of ſorrow, and all along the Wilderneſſe of this World. Midraſh Tillin.

And my Redeemer] Or, My near-kinſman, who is Jeſus Chriſt, in whom we may look for all good from God, by vertue of the Covenant. This David well underſtood, and therefore hee layeth all the weight on this, O Lord my ſtrength and my Redeemer.

PSAL. XX.

A Pſalm of David] Or, Concerning David; ſo Kimchi. Or for and on the behalf of David; ſo Aben-Ezra. David, as a Prophet, dictated this form of prayer to bee made by the people for himſelf, their King; when hee went forth to fight their battels, probably, againſt the Ammonites and Syrians; or when hee fled from Abſolom, and was to help them from the City, by his prayers, 2 Sam. 18. 3. as Aben-Ezra thinketh.

Verſ. 1. The Lord hear thee in the day of trouble] Great men, though gracious, as David, have their diſtreſſes, and muſt pray for themſelves then; not truſting to the prayers of others for them; as did that prophane Earl of Weſtmorland, who ſaid, that hee had no need to pray, ſith hee had Tenants enough to pray for him. Camden.

The name of the God of Jacob defend thee] Heb. ſet thee in an high place, ſuch as Gods name is, Prov. 18. 10. the righteous run thereto and are ſafe, as in a Tower of braſſe, or Town of war. By the name of God is meant, Deus nominatiſſimus, the moſt renowned God, ſaith Junius, and worthy to bee praiſed, as Pſal. 18. 3. And hee is called the God of Jacob here, ſaith Another; firſt, becauſe Jacob was once in the like diſtreſſe, Gen. 32. 6, 7. ſecondly, becauſe hee prayed to the like purpoſe, Gen. 35. 3. thirdly, becauſe hee prevailed with God as a Prince; and there God ſpake with us, Hoſ. 12. 5. fourthly, becauſe God of Jacob is the ſame with God of Iſrael; and ſo the Covenant is pleaded.

Verſ. 2. Send thee help from the Sanctuarie] Or, From his holy heaven, ſaith Tremellius; without which vain is the help of man. God is all the Doer in battels; and whenceſoever the ſword comes, it is bathed in Heaven, Iſa. 34. 5. whatſoever Ajax, Timotheus Athenienſis, and other Atheiſts think to the contrary. God will ſend from Heaven and ſave mee ſaith holy David.

And ſtrengthen thee out of Sion] i. e. Out of the Aſſemblies of the Saints, where they are praying hard for thy well-fare, See Pſal. 76. 2, 3. with the Note.

Verſ. 3. Remember all thine offerings] Before they went to war, they were wont to offer ſacrifices, as did Saul; though by his over-haſte therein hee loſt his Kingdome, 1 Sam. 13. 9. From the people of God, the Heathens alſo had learned this courſe and cuſtome. Io Paan is in force Jehovah Peneh, that is, Lord look upon us. The Devil (Gods ape) had taught the Athenians, when they began the battel, to uſe theſe words, and thereby to hearten one another. The Romans alſo did the like; and would not deſiſt till they had an auſpicious anſwer; hence alſo they called a ſacrifice hoſtiam, becauſe, when they went againſt their enemies, they offered it.

And accept thy burnt ſacrifice] Or, turn it to aſhes (and ſo ſeal up his acceptance) or, make it fat, i. e. take delight in it, as men do in fat things full of marrow, ſaith R. Solomon.

Selah] This is added, to ſhew, ſaith Vatablus, with how great fervency the people ought to pray for their King.

Verſ. 4. Grant thee according to thine own heart] Davids heart was according to Gods heart (otherwiſe this had not been a warrantable Petition) and therefore might ſay (and the people on his behalf) as once Luther did, Fiat voluntas mea; mea Domine quia tua, Let my will be done; mine I ſay, Lord, becauſe the ſame with thine.

Aug. Confeſ. li. 5. c. 8. And fulfill all thy counſel] Anſwer thee, ad cardinem deſiderii, as a Father expreſſeth it; Let it be unto thee even as thou wilt. Sometimes God doth not only grant a mans prayer, but fulfilleth his counſel; that is, in that very way, by that very means, which his judgement pitcht upon in his thoughts.

Verſ. 5. We will rejoyce in thy ſalvation] i. e. We are well aſſured that God will ſave us by thee, O King; and that ſhall produce a general joy amongſt us. This confidence Prayer had begotten in them: for it is a ſure grain; and if men would ſow more of it in Gods boſome, they ſhould not fail to reap the fruit and comfort of it in their greateſt need. Pray, that your joy may be full.

And in the name of our God will we ſet up our Banners] Our Flaggs of defiance to the enemie; or our tokens of triumph to Gods glory, who hath given us the Victory. The Romans when they had conquered an enemy, rode in triumph to the Capitol, where in all humility they preſented a Palm, or Laurel-buſh, to Jupiter.

Verſ. 6. Now know I that, &c.] This is Vox populi; I, that is All we; but they ſpeak as if they had been all one, and had uttered it all with one mouth; ſuch was their unity, and concent in prayer. Or, it is ſermo uniuſcujuſq; in Iſraele, as Kimchi will have it, the triumph of their truſt.

He will hear him from his holy heaven, &c.] He will hear him: he will do for him; Hæc duo ſunt documenta, ſaith Junius: by the ſe two ways (beſides the Word) the Church comes to know the grace and good will of her God.

Verſ. 7. Some truſt in Chariots, &c.] i. e. in their National accommodations and military proviſions; but theſe were never true to thoſe that truſted them. All is but an arm of fleſh.

But we will remember, &c.] i. e. in the remembrance of his excellent Attributes, whereof we have had ſuch proof, we will take courage.

Verſ. 8. They are brought down, &c.] They lye flat by the fall they have taken, being confuted in their confidences, as Benhadad was of old: as a late, the French at the Battle of Agincourt: Sigiſmund the young King of Hungary, and many others.

But we are riſen] Who before ſeemed to lye along, Et tanquam ſideratos humi ſerpere. God helpeth his when forſaken of their hopes almoſt.

Verſ. 9. Save Lord] A ſhort but pithy prayer: Quam multa quam paucis.

Let the King hear us] They beg of God that the King may hear them, ſo, as to govern and defend them in equity and tranquillity; or, Reſpondeat Rex (ſo Aben-Ezra readeth it) Let the King ſay, Amen, to our prayers to thee, and our requeſts to him.

PSAL. XXI.

VErſ. 1. The King ſhall joy in thy ſtrength] This Pſalm dependeth upon the former; and is therefore fitly ſet next unto it. Some call it Davids Triumphant Song of praiſe, for victory gotten over the Ammonites and Syrians. For that Victory it was certainly, which he and the people had begged ſo fervently, Pſal. 20. and promiſed ſolemnly to rejoyce in Gods Salvation, &c. verſ. 5. as here is done accordingly. Vow and perform unto the Lord your God: bring preſents, &c. Pſal. 76. 11.

And in thy ſalvation] All is Gods. As Joab once ſent to David to come, and take the honour of the Victory over Rabbah of the Ammonites: ſo dealeth David by the Lord. His Poſie was, Non nobis Domine; his practiſe was to drive an holy trade between Earth and Heaven, receiving and returning, importing one commodity, and tranſporting another: Prayers and Praiſes were his whole life:

Verſ. 2. Thou haſt given him his hearts deſire] Good men are ſure to have out their their prayers either in mony, or in monies worth, as they ſay; in that very thing they deſire, or a better. If God croſs them, it is in faithfulneſs to their Souls: when the wicked boaſteth of his hearts deſire, Pſal. 10. 3. which yet he hath for a miſchief: Deus ſæpe dat iratus, quod negat propitius. See the Note on Pſal. 20. 4.

And hath not with-holden, &c. Selah] Ac ſi dicat, O magnam & admirabilem Dei benevolentiam erga Davidem! ſaith Vatablus. This Selah is added here, to ſet forth the very great and wonderful love of God to David, in hearing his Sutes after that ſort.

Verſ. 3. For thou preventeſt him with the bleſſings of goodneſs] Not ſtaying till he asked them of thee. He had but a thought of building thee an houſe, and thou ſenteſt Nathan to tell him, that thou wouldſt build him an everlaſting houſe, and ſtabliſh his Throne to all perpetuity, 2 Sam. 7. 16. So Iſa. 65. 1. Before they call, I will anſwer, &c.

Thou ſetteſt a Crown of pure gold upon his head] Hebræi dicunt per hoc intelligi favorem Dei, the Jew-Doctors by this Crown underſtand the favour of God; confer Pſal. 103. 4. God had ſet a Crown of loving kindneſs, and tender mercies upon his head, by pardoning all his iniquities, as it is there; and he bleſſeth God for this as a farre better Crown, than that which he took from off the head of the King of Ammon, and ſet upon his own, 2 Sam. 12. 30.

Verſ. 4. He asked life of thee] Quando fugiebat à Saule, ſaith R. Solomon, when he fled from Saul; rather when he went into the field againſt his enemies, carrying his life in his hand. His life we begged, Pſal. 20. 1, 2. and thou haſt not only given him his life, but a long continued ſeries of lives in his Succeſſors, 2 Sam. 7. 13. Pſal. 72. 15. yea life everlaſting in Chriſt his Son, according to the fleſh. See Pſal. 61. 6. Thus God is better to his people than their prayers; and when they ask but one Bleſſing, he anſwereth them as Naaman did Gehezi, with Nay take two. Hezekiah asked but one life, and God gave him fifteen years, which we reckon at two lives, and more. He giveth liberally, and like himſelf; as Great Alexander did when he gave the poor Begger a City; and when hee ſent his School-maſter a ſhip full of Frankincenſe, and bade him ſacrifice freely.

Verſ. 5. His glory is great in thy ſalvation] He was at firſt ſlighted even by his own, as a petty Prince; and the Philiſtines came up to ſeek him, that they might ſuppreſs him, before he grew too ſtrong for them; in ſo much as he for fear of them went down to the Hold, 2 Sam. 5. 17. but ſoon after he became formidable to them, and the reſt of the neighbour-Nations, whom he ſubdued, and reigned over. The like hereunto befell our Queen Elizabeth, who how low ſoever at firſt, became at length, as her enemies confeſſed, the moſt glorious Woman that ever ſwayed Scepter, becauſe Poſuit Deum adjutorem ſuum.

Honour and Majeſty haſt thou laid upon him] a growing weight of glory, a load of it, even before man. The Saints when they come to Heaven ſhall have an exceeding exceſſive eternal weight of glory, 2 Cor. 4. 17. ſuch as if the body were not upheld by the mighty Power of God, it were impoſſible it ſhould ever bear it.

Verſ. 6. For thou haſt made him moſt bleſſed for ever] Heb. Thou haſt ſet him to be bleſſings. For as the wicked, when deſtroyed by ſome horrible Judgement, are examples to others of Gods curſe, Iſa. 65. 15. Jer. 29. 22. 2 Pet. 2. 6. Judæus ſim, ſi fallam, ſay the Turks at this day, when they would aſſure any thing for a certainty; ſo the godly when in a ſpeciall manner bleſſed, are Patterns of bleſſings to others, that in them they may bleſſe themſelves or others, Pſal. 72. 17. Pſal. 128. 4. Gen. 12. 2. & 48. 20. Ruth 4. 11, 12. See Pſal. 37. 26. So here they ſhall ſay, Tanto rerum ſucceſſu polleas, quanto David, Maiſt thou bee as ſucceſsfull as ever David was.

Thou haſt made him exceeding glad with thy countenance] One good caſt whereof David long ſince preferred before all the worlds good, Pſal. 4. 6. See the Note there.

Verſ. 7. For the King truſteth in the Lord] So then, his joy was the joy of faith which is unſpeakable and full of glory; and hee muſt needs bee ſafe who relyeth upon God, Iſa. 26. 4.

Hee ſhall not bee moved] ſc. from the proſperous ſucceſſe of his affaires and ſtate; the beauty and bulwark whereof is Gods never failing mercy.

Verſ.

Verſ. 8. Thine hand ſhall find out all thine enemies] Thine, becauſe ours; for thou art in a league with us both defenſive and offenſive: Now our enemies act as if they were out of the reach of thy rod, but thou wilt eaſily hunt them down, and root them out. Purſued they ſhall bee by thee, and overtaken, run they never ſo farre, never ſo faſt.

Οὐδεὶς ἀνθρώπων ἀδίκων τίσιν ὀκ ἀποτίσει.

Verſ. 9. Thou ſhalt make them as a fiery Oven] i. e. Thou ſhalt lay upon them grievous and exquiſite miſeries, Lam. 5. 10. Hee alludeth to the overthrow of Sodom, ſaith Vatablus.

The Lord ſhall ſwallow them up] As the fire doth the fuel. Some think the Prophet here alludeth to that direfull kind of puniſhment which David inflicted upon the Ammonites whom hee made to paſs thorow the brick-kiln, 2 Sam. 12. 31. perhaps the furnace of their Idol Moloch or Milcholm, wherein they cauſed their Children to paſſe thorow the fire, 2 King. 16. 3. & 23. 10.

And the fire ſhall devour them] Hell-fire, ſaith the Chaldee Paraphraſt.

Nulla emolumenta laborum Juven.

Verſ. 10. Their fruit ſhalt thou deſtroy] i. e. Their labour, and that which comes thereof, Prov. 21. 16, 31. they ſhall toil to no purpoſe; the gains ſhall not pay for the paines.

And their ſeed] For as perſonall goodneſſe is profitable to poſterity; ſo on the contrary; as, in the ſecond Commandement: they are peremptores potius quam Parentes. Bern.

Verſ. 11. For they intended evill againſt thee] Becauſe againſt thy people. Hee that wrongeth a ſubject is arraigned for injury done to the King, his Crown and dignity. And as a certain Gentleman of Normandy was executed for but intending only to kill Francis the ſecond King of France, which he diſcovered to a Prieſt, ſub ſigillo confeſſionis, not thinking ever to hear further of it again; ſo here.

Verſ. 12. Therefore ſhalt thou make them turn their back] Who faced the very Heavens, and ran, as it were, full butt againſt thee; ſuch was their impudence and inſolence. But thy wrath ſhall ſo meet them in the teeth, whereſoever they turn, that they ſhall bee forced to give over their chaſe and purſute of thy people. Thou ſhalt make them turn their back, Heb. their ſhoulder; whence ſome ſenſe the words thus, Thou ſhalt bind them back to back, and caſt them into the Sea of perdition.

Pones eos ut metam. Kimchi

Some read the words thus, Thou ſhalt ſet them as a Butt or Mark to ſhoot at; and this agreeth beſt with that which followeth.

Againſt the face of them] Which is elegantly campared to the white; as their bodies to the whole mark or Butt.

Verſ. 13. Bee thou exalted, Lord, in thine own ſtrength] Finit Pſalmum cum laude, ſicut incepit, ſaith Aben-Ezra. Hee cloſeth up the Pſalm, as hee began it, with praiſe and prayer that God would ariſe and deſtroy the reſt, as hee had all-ready done ſome of their enemies. Gods power and ſtrength is in it ſelf infinite, and cannot be exalted or amplified; but in reſpect of us it is ſaid to bee exalted, when exerted and put forth for the defence of his people.

So will we ſing and praiſe thy power] This they reſtipulate; as knowing that it would pleaſe the Lord better than an Ox or Bullock that hath hornes and hoofs, Pſal. 69. 31.

PSAL. XXII.

Upon Ajeleth Shahar] Or, The morning-Hart or ſtag; ſuch an one as the huntſman ſevereth out in the morning from the reſt, to hunt for that day. It ſheweth, ſaith One, Davids and Chriſts early and unceſſant perſecution and hunting (by thoſe doggs, verſ. 16.) till they came to their Kingdomes. David had his ſhare of ſharp afflictions, doubtleſſe, when hee penned this Pſalm; witneſſe that graphicall deſcription of his greateſt grief in all parts and powers of body and ſoul, Verſ. 14, 15, 16, &c. But his mind and thoughts were by Gods holy Spirit carried out to Chriſts moſt dolorous and inexpreſſible ſufferings, to the which all his were but as flea-bitings, as the ſlivers or chips of Chriſts Croſſe; and this was no ſmall mitigation of his miſery. When the Jews offered our Saviour gall and vinegar, hee taſted it, but would not drink. The reſt hee left for his people, and they muſt pledge him, filling up that which is behind of his ſufferings, Col. 1. 24. though for a different end, as for exerciſe, example, triall, witneſſe of truth, &c.

Verſ. 1. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken mee?] David had prayed, Oh forſake mee not utterly, Pſal. 119.8. In part and for a time hee knew God might forſake him, to his thinking at leaſt. But what ſaith Auſtin? Non deſerit Deus etiamſi deſerere videatur; non deſerit etiamſi deſerat; God forſaketh not his, though hee ſeem ſometimes to do ſo; hee leaveth them ſometimes, but forſaketh them never: as in an eclipſe, the earth wanteth the light of the Sun, but not the influence thereof. David could at the ſame time call God, his God thrice over, which are words of faith, and do plainly evince that this deſertion under which hee groaned, was neither abſolute nor reall, but only that hee was in a great diſtreſſe and perplexity; ſo that hee did beleeve, and yet not beleeve (Plato though a Heathen could ſay that a man may do ſo.) See the like, Pſal. 31. 22. Jon. 2. 4. See the Note there. Our Saviour in his deepeſt diſtreſſe on the Croſſe, when coping and conflicting with the wrath of his heavenly Father, who (beſide the wrath of men, and rage of Devills in that three houres darkneſſe eſpecially) fought againſt him with his own bare hand, hee ſuffered more than can bee imagined, took up this patheticall exclamation, and as ſome think, repeated this whole Pſalm. Then it was that hee felt in ſoul and body the horrour of Gods diſpleaſure againſt ſin, for which he had undertaken. Then it was that the Deity (though never ſeparated from his Humanity, no not in death when ſoul and body were ſundred for a ſeaſon) did ἡσυχάζειν (as a Father ſpeaketh) ſuſpend for time the influence of its power, and lye hid as it were, neque vires ſuas exſerebat, not putting forth its force, as formerly. Hilary hath a good Note upon this part of Chriſts paſſion; Habes conquerentem relictum ſe eſſe, &c. Here thou haſt him complaining as forſaken of God; this ſheweth him to have been a man; but withall thou haſt him promiſing paradiſe to the penitent theef; this ſpeaketh him God. Plat. in Phæd

Why art thou ſo farre from, &c.] I roar and am not relieved, as to eaſe; God will have his people feel what an evill and bitter thing ſin is, Jer. 2. 19. and therefore he holdeth them eſtſoones long upon the rack. Chriſt alſo, under the deep ſenſe of our ſins, for which hee ſuffered, offered up prayers, with ſtrong crying and tears to him that was able to ſave him from death, Heb. 5. 7.

Verſ. 2. O my God, I cry in the day time, &c.] This was a ſore temptation, that his heartieſt prayers were not heard. This might have made him jealous of God; to have had hard conceits of him, and heavy conceits of himſelf. But ſaith hee in the following verſes, Thou art holy, and thy Name is to bee ſanctified, though I bee not gratified. And moreover, Others have called upon thee and have been heard, verſ. 4, 5. though I now for mine unworthineſſe am denyed. For I am a worme, and no man, Verſ. 6. Thou it puts him not off that hee is not heard, as others; but humbles him. It drives him not, (as is uſuall with carnall people in like caſe) to ſhifting courſes, as a dogg that hath loſt his Maſter will follow after any one for relief. A Chriſtian never prevaileth ſo little by his prayers, but that hee will take heart of grace, to come again to God. Silence, or ſad anſwers, do not utterly diſhearten him. Hee ceaſeth not wreſtling till hee hath wreſted the bleſſing out of Gods hand with Jacob; and gotten matter of praiſe for his prayers granted, as David here doth, ere he had done the Pſalm, verſ. 24, 25.

Verſ. 3. But thou art holy] And therefore to bee ſanctified in righteouſneſſe, Iſa. 5. 16. whatever betide mee or my prayers. I alſo will truſt and try thee to the uttermoſt, for thou waiteſt to bee gracious; and being a God of Judgement thou beſt underſtandeſt when and how to diſpenſe and deal forth thy favours to thy ſuppliants, Iſa. 30. 18. And if I ask good things of thee and miſſe, it is becauſe I ask amiſſe, Jam. 4. 3. If I bee ſtrained, it is not in thee, but in mine own bowels. They that have Conduit-water come into their houſes, if no water come, they conclude not the ſpring to bee dry, but the pipes to bee ſtopped or broken. If prayer ſpeed not, wee muſt bee ſure the fault is not in God, but in our ſelves; were we but ripe for mercy, hee is ready to extend it to us, and even waits for the purpoſe.

O thou that inhabiteſt the praiſes of Iſrael] i. e. The Sanctuary where thou art continually praiſed by thine Iſrael, who have the happineſſe to receive thine anſwer to their ſuites, though I cannot. Some render it, O ſancte, ſempiterne, & laudatiſſime;

Verſ.

Verſ. 4. Our Fathers truſted in thee] They truſted, and truſted, and truſted, they lengthened out their truſt. The Hebrew word for Hope or Truſt ſignifieth alſo a line; becauſe thereby the heart is ſtretcht out as a line to the thing hoped for; and hee that beleeveth, maketh not haſte.

And thou didſt deliver them] Never could any inſtance bee given to the contrary. Let the ſucceſſe of our forefathers confidence, and hope unfailable, flowing from faith unfeigned, confirm our fiduciall dependance upon Goſpel-promiſes.

Verſ. 5. They cryed unto thee] Having firſt truſted; It is the prayer of faith that does the deed.

And were not confounded] Deo confiſi, nunquam confuſi.

Verſ. 6. But I am a worm, and no man] David (ſaith a learned man) in the Arabick tongue ſignifieth a worm; to which hee may here ſeem to allude. I am a worm ſaith Hee, I am duſt and aſhes ſaith Abraham, leſs than the leſt of thy loving kindneſſes, ſaith Jacob. Nos autem quid ſumus? ſaith Moſes. Thus the Saints expreſſe themſelves in a low language, as ſo many broken men. Contrarily the wicked ſpeak big words, bubbles of words, as Peter hath it; ampullantur, as Pharaoh, who ſaid, Who is the Lord? Nebuchadnezzar, Who is that God that can deliver you? Dan. 3. who is Lord over us? &c. Pſal. 12. Our Lord Chriſt, of whom the greateſt part of this Pſalm muſt bee underſtood, emptied and humbled himſelf to the utmoſt, Phil. 2. 7, 8. that wee might bee exalted; this Sun of Righteouſneſs went ten degrees back. in the Diall of his Father, that hee might come unto us with health in his wings, &c.

A Reproach of men] Rejectamentum hominis, & nulliſicamen populi, as Tertullian phraſeth it. So was Chriſt, Iſa. 53. ſo were his Apoſtle, 1. Cor. 4. 13. wee are made the ſweepings of the World, the off-ſcourings of all things, the very dung-cart into which every man caſteth his filth to bee carried thorough the dung-port. Why then ſhould we think much to be ſlighted?

Verſ. 7. All they that ſee mee laugh mee to ſcorn] Contemptus populi ludibriis & opprobriis declaratur, Luk. 22. 63. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh of cruel mockings, Heb. 11. 36. The Phariſees who were covetous derided him, Luk. 16. 14. and ſet his people on the ſtage as it were, for mocking-ſtocks, Heb. 10. 23. Now, poſt Carthaginem vinci neminem puduit, ſaith the Hiſtorian. If Chriſt, David, and other precious men were ſo diſgraced and abuſed by the World; what matter is it for us?

They ſhoot out the lip, they ſhake the head] God is ſenſible of any the leaſt affront or offence done to his people, bee it but in an unſeemly geſture, as Labans lowrings, (See Matth. 27. 39.) and ſets them upon record againſt the day of account.

Verſ. 8. Hee truſted on the Lord that hee would deliver him] Is this a prophecie of of our Saviours ſufferings, or an Hiſtory rather? See Matth. 27. 43. with the Note.

Seeing hee delighted in him] A moſt virulent Irony, whereby they ſought to cajole him of his confidence, and ſo to drive him into utter deſperation and deſtruction.

Verſ. 9. But thou art hee that took mee out of the womb] When, but for thine almighty midwifery, I might have been ſtrangled; or, as an untimely birth, never ſeen the Sun. It is no leſſe than a miracle that the child is kept alive in the womb, and periſheth not in the midſt of thoſe excrements, and that in comming forth, it dyeth not, &c. The very opening and ſhutting again of the body when the child is to be born, is a thing ſo incomprehenſible, that ſome Naturaliſts acknowledge the immediate hand and power of God in it. But becauſe it is a common mercy, little notice is taken, or uſe made of it.

Thou didſt make mee hope] Or, kepeſt mee in ſafety; for puerilitas eſt periculorum pelagus, a thouſand deaths and dangers little ones are ſubject to; but God preſerveth, and provideth; & hæc non ſunt per accidens, ſaith Kimchi, theſe things are not by chance, but by divine providence.

Verſ. 10. I was caſt upon thee from the womb] Id eſt, à Patre & Matre mea, ſaith Kimchi, by my Father and my Mother, whom thou Lord feddeſt, and filledſt her breaſts, that ſhe might ſuckle mee. Did men but ſeriouſly conſider what kept and fed them in the womb, and at the breaſts, when neither they could ſhift for themſelves, nor their Parents do much for them, they would conclude hee would much more more now by their holy prayers, honeſt endeavors, &c.

Thou art my God from my Mothers belly] This is a privilege proper to Children born within the Covenant, and they may claim it; they have God for their God from their nativity; and they may lay their reckoning ſo in all their addreſſes unto God.

Verſ. 11. Bee not farre from mee, for trouble is near] And ſo it is high time for thee to put forth an helping hand. Hominibus profanis mirabilis videtur hac ratio, to profane perſons, this ſeemeeth to bee a ſtrange reaſon, ſaith an Interpreter; but it is a very good one, as this Prophet knew, who therefore makes it his plea.

For there is none to help] Set in therefore, O Lord, and help, at a dead lift, poor mee, who am forſaken of all other hopes.

Verſ. 12. Many Bulls have compaſſed mee] Young Bulls, which noteth their luſtineſs and courage; Tauri bene ſaginati & petulci.

Strong Bulls of Baſhan] A farre Country beyond Jordan; famous for fat and fierce cattel. Hereby are meant Princes and Potentates, perſecutors of Chriſt and his people, againſt whom they run and ruſh with utmoſt might and malice, but not alwaies with deſired ſucceſſe. Of the wild Bull it is ſaid, that of all things hee cannot abide any red colour. Therefore the hunter for the nonce ſtanding before a tree, puts on a red garment; whom when the Bull ſeeth, he runneth hard at him, as hard as hee can drive; but the hunter ſlipping aſide, the Bulls hornes ſtick faſt in the tree; as when David ſlipped aſide, Sauls ſpear ſtuck faſt in the wall. In like manner ſaith a Divine, Chriſt ſtanding before the tree of his Croſſe, put on a red garment dipt and died in his own blood, as one that cometh with red garments from Bozra, Iſa. 63. 1. Therefore the Devill and his agents, like wild Bulls of Baſhan ran at him: But hee ſaving himſelf, their hornes ſtick faſt in the Croſſe; as Abrahams Ram by his hornes ſtuck faſt in the briars.

Verſ. 13. They gaped upon mee with their mouths] As if they would have ſwallowed mee up at a bit, like ſo many Lycanthropi, or ſavage Canniballs.

As a ravening and a roaring Lyon] Rapiens & rugiens Leo, licet non ſit mos Bovum rapere; Bulls do not uſe to raven though they roar; but the malignities of all fierce and fell Creatures are to bee found in cruell perſecutors. Would any man take the Churches picture, ſaith Luther? then let him paint a ſilly poor Maid ſitting in a Wood or Wilderneſſe, compaſſed about with hungry Lions, Wolves, Bulls, Boares and Beares, and with all manner of cruell and hurtfull beaſts, and in the midſt of a great many furious men, or rather Monſters, aſſaulting her every moment and minute; for this is her condition in the World. Kimchi. Loc. cum de Perſec.

Verſ. 14. I am powred out like water] i. e. I am almoſt paſt all recovery, as water ſpilt upon the ground.

And all my bones are out of joynt] Or, diſparted, as on a rack, or by a ſtrappado. Who hath not heard how Lithgow the Scot was uſed at Maligo in Spain, by the bloody Inquiſitours? (after that hee had paſſed thorough the greateſt part of the known World, and travelled thorough Forreſts, Wilderneſſes and Deſerts, where hee met with theeves and murderers, Lions, Bulls, Bears, and Tigers, and eſcaped them) how they ſtarved him, wounded him, diſ-joynted him, in ten houres ſpace laid ſeventy ſeverall torments upon him, though they had nothing againſt him, but ſuſpition of Religion. And yet after this, God wonderfully delivered him; ſo that hee was brought on this bed wounded and broken to King James, whoſe letters of recommendation hee had for his ſafe travell through the World, and to whom hee made this relation to the face of Gundamour the Spaniſh Ambaſſadour. This was much, but yet little or nothing to Chriſts ſufferings, whence that paſſage in the Greek Letany, Διὰ ἀγγώσων σου παθημάτων, &c. By thine unknown ſufferings, good Lord deliverus. Lithg. trav.

My heart is like wax, &c.] Fear and faintneſſe cauſeth an extreme ſweat, (ſuch as was that of our Saviour in his agony, Luk. 22. 44.) it diſableth alſo the Members from acting their patts, and ſofteneth the heart, Job 23. 16.

Verſ. 15. My ſtrength is dried up like a pot-ſherd] My ſpirits are utterly ſpent, my naturall moiſture quite waſted and dryed up; ſo that I am even like a skin-bottle in the ſmoak, &c. For my ſtrength, ſome read my palat. Viror meus. Humidum radicale membra in unum conglutinans. Aben-Ezra.

And my Tongue cleaveth to my jawes] That which ſeedeth and facilitateth the motion of the tongue in ſpeech is exhauſted. Conſider here the greatneſſe of the divine diſpleaſure poured upon Chriſt our ſuerty: Words are too weak to utter it.

And thou haſt brought mee into the duſt of death] Here is the utmoſt of our Saviours humiliation. Whilſt alive hee was a worm and no man; but now hee is lower; for a living dog is better than a dead Lion, ſaith Solomon. O humble Saviour, whither wilt thou deſcend? Oh that the ſame mind might bee in us, that was in Chriſt Jeſus, &c.

Verſ. 16. For dogs have compaſſed mee] That is, men of mean rank (oppoſed to Bulls and Lions, i. e. great ones and interpreted in the next words, the aſſemblie of the wicked, the rude rabble, and of rancorous diſpoſition, Job 30. 1. Prov. 26. 11. Mat. 7. 6. Phil. 3. 2. Pſal. 59. 7. 15. Anno Dom. 1556. at Weſſenſten in Germany, a Jew for theft was in this cruel manner to bee executed: Hee was hanged by the feet with his head downward, betwixt two doggs, which conſtantly ſnatcht, and bit at him.

Melch. Ad. in vit. Jac. And.

They peirced my hands and my feet] ſc. When they nailed Chriſt to the Croſſe, Mat. 27. 35. Joh. 20. 25. Where let mee ſimilate, ſaith a learned man, the Oratours gradation, Facinus vincire civem Romanum, &c. It was much for the Son of God to bee bound, more to bee beaten, moſt of all to bee ſlain; Quid dicam in crucem tolli? but what ſhall I ſay to this, that hee was crucified? that was the moſt vile and ignominious of all puniſhments; it was alſo a cruel and curſed kind of death: which yet hee refuſed not; and here wee have a clear teſtimony for his Croſs, which the Devill would fain wring from us by his agents, the Jews, with their Keri and Chetib. See Galatin. lib. 8. cap. 17. & lib. 1. c. 8. & Mercer. in Job 7. 20.

Verſ. 17. I may tell all my bones] Now eſpecially, when ſtretcht out upon the Croſſe, Quando pendens extentus erat in ligno, ſaith Auſtin. Derident maciem meam, ſaith Kimchi.

They look and ſtare upon mee] Aſpicimt, id eſt, deſpiciunt, ut Cant. 1. 6. ſaith Kimchi, they feed their eyes and paſſions with my miſery, as Luk. 23. 35. This ἐπιχαιρεκακία is the Devils diſeaſe, and declareth a deviliſh diſpoſition, ſc. for a man to make himſelf merry in other mens miſerie.

Verſ. 18. They part my garments among them, and caſt lots] A very clear Teſtimony to us that our crucified God (as they ſcornfully term him) was the true Meſſiah, ſo long ſince fore-prophecied of, and accordingly accompliſhed, Luk. 23. 34. Joh. 20. 24. Such Texts as this wee ſhould make much of, as the beſt and ſureſt evidences of our Chriſtian faith, 2 Pet. 1. 19.

Verſ. 19. But bee not thou farre from mee, O Lord] Here hee reſumeth and reinforceth his former prayer, after a moſt patheticall deſcription of his ſo doleful condition. Faith wadeth out of trouble (as the Moon doth out of a cloud) by hearty and affectionate prayer.

O my ſtrength] God is ſo to a Beleever; then eſpecially when hee feeleth himſelf weak as water.

Haſte thee to help mee] Who am now in an exigent, and am therefore bold, without limitation, to requeſt thee to haſte away to me.

Verſ. 20. Deliver my ſoul from the ſword] i. e. From deſperate and deadly danger, from the wicked which is thy ſword, Pſa. 17. 13.

My darling from the power of the dog] Heb. Mine only one from the hand, &c. as Gen. 9. 5. Sic eſt anima in corpore, ut in domo ſuttea, nec habet ſocium, ſaith R. David here. The ſoul is alone in its cottage of clay, and hath no companion. That was a mad fellow who gave out that hee had two ſoules, one for God, and another for whomſoever would have it; If the dog, that is the Devill (as ſome interpret this Text) lay hands on this darling, it will bee found to bee all that a man hath, his alonely-ſoul, the loſſe whereof our Saviour ſheweth to bee both incomparable and irreparable, Matt. 16. 26.

Verſ. 21. Save mee from the Lions mouth] 2 Tim. 4. 17. David was oft ſnatcht out of deaths mouth, and ſo was Chriſt; for although hee had his life taken away upon the Croſs, yet was it (as Calvin here well obſerveth) more miraculouſly, and by greater power reſtored after death, than if hee had been delivered from the Croſs; and it is a greater miracle to raiſe the dead, than to heal the moſt dangerouſly ſick, and to ſtay the life when it is departing.

For thou haſt heard me from the Horns of the Unicorns] See Heb. 5.7. It is ordinary with David to call his enemies, by the names of the fierceſt Creatures. This here mentioned, whether the Unicorn, or Rhinoceros, or ſome other wild Beaſt (See Job 39.9, &c.) Cornua habet fortiora aliorum cornibus, ſaith Aben-Ezra: Et audivi quod dejicit ſeipſum ab alto monte ſuper cornu ejus, irrupto illo permanente. Aſperrimam feram appellat Plinius.

Verſ. 22. I will declare thy Name, &c.] Here beginneth the ſecond part of this Pſalm, which is gratulatory, and declaratory of the fruit of Chriſts Paſſion and Reſurrection, who is not here aſhamed to call us Brethren; but doth communicate the Kingdom to us as coheirs with himſelf.

In the middeſt of the Congregation, &c.] viz. That I may not ſing alone, but in conſort with others, and be their precentor.

Verſ. 23. Ye that fear the Lord praiſe him] viz. For your redemption by Chriſts Death and Reſurrection. Neither are any fit for ſuch a purpoſe but ſuch as fear the Lord. Excellent words become not a fools mouth, ſaith Solomon: Chriſt would not ſuffer the Devil to confeſs him. To be praiſed by a praiſeleſs perſon, is no praiſe, ſaith Seneca.

All yee the ſeed of Jacob] i. e. Illi qui diligunt eum.

All yee the ſeed of Iſrael] Qui timent, ſed adhuc non diligunt, ſaith R. David: but I like not his diſtinction; for none do truly fear God, but thoſe that love him, Hoſ. 3. 5. R. David.

Verſ. 24. For he hath not deſpiſed nor abhorred the affliction] Vel reſponſionem, id eſt orationem quæ eſt reſponſio linguæ, Prov. 16. 1. With men a poor mans tale cannot be heard; and the anſwer given to ſuch cuts off half the Petition, as the Eccho doth the voyce; but here it is otherwiſe. I know thy poverty, ſaith Chriſt to one of the Seven Churches: but (that is nothing) thou art rich. God thinks not the worſe of his Suppliants for their meaneneſs, but the better rather.

Verſ. 25. My praiſe ſhall be of thee in the great Congregation] where it may bee moſt publick and exemplary. They that neglect publick ſervice for private, do but read their own Inditement, pray their own puniſhment.

I will pay my vows, &c.] My Peace-offerings vowed in my diſtreſs; theſe are heavily payed by moſt people, according to that Italian Proverb, The danger once eſcaped, the Saint is defrauded. See Davids care, Pſal. 116. and elſewhere.

Verſ. 26. The meek ſhall eat and be ſatisfied] They ſhall be well filled at my Peace-offering Feaſt, ſaith David; at my holy Supper, ſaith Chriſt: and in me ſhall have the full fruition of all good things; as at a feaſt of fat things full of Marrow, of Wines refined on the lees, Iſa. 25. Nec copiam hujus ſæculi concupiſcent nec timebunt inopiam, ſaith Auſtin: here they ſhall neither covet the wealth of this World, nor fear the want of it.

They ſhall praiſe the Lord] viz. At the Euchariſt, and after.

Your heart ſhall live for ever] Apoſtrophe ad manſuetos Emphatica. You meek of the earth, and ſeekers of the Lord, who have eaten of Chriſts fleſh that was given for the life of the World, Joh. 6. 51. Your heart ſhall live for ever: And if ſo, then in death it ſelf. As Ariſtotle giveth the reaſon of the Swans ſinging a little before his death, becauſe generous bloud goeth then to the heart, making it cheerful, and that thence cometh the melody.

Verſ. 27. All the ends of the World ſhall remember] Shall turn ſhort again upon themſelves, as thoſe Solomon prayed for, 1 King. 8. 47. and the Prodigal, Luke 15. 17.

And turn to the Lord] From their dead Idols, as 1 Theſſ. 1. 9.

And all the Kindreds of the Nations, &c.] Chriſt, when he is lifted up, ſhall draw all men to him, Joh. 12. the heavenly Eagles from all parts ſhall fly to this dead, but all-quickning carcaſs, and ſhall feed thereupon.

Verſ. 28. For the Kingdom is the Lords] The Spiritual Kingdom over the Church, and the univerſal Kingdom over all the World belongeth unto Chriſt, the eternal God. Diod.

Verſ. 29. All they that be fat upon earth] i. e. Rich and proſperous, wealthy and well-liking, theſe ſhall feed on Chriſt, and be furthered thereby in his ſervice; ſo ſhall alſo the poorer ſort called here,

They that go down to the dust, and that cannot keep alive, &c.] That is, that are low kept, and half dead, through hunger and misery.

Vers. 30. A Seed shall serve him] And be saved by him, a remnant reserved for royal use, a chosen generation, Rom. 9. 20. Isa. 53. 10.

Vers. 31. Declare his righteousness] i.e. his Mercy and Goodness, they shall propagate his praise to all posterity.

That he hath done] Or performed, viz. the Salvation promised by Christ.

PSAL. XXIII.

VErs. 1. The Lord is my Shepherd] This Psalm may well be called Davids Bucolicon, or Pastoral; so daintily hath he struck upon the whole string, through the whole Hymn. Est Psalmus honorabilis, saith Aben-Ezra; it is a noble Psalm, written and sung by David; not when he fled into the Forrest of Hareth, 1 Sam. 22. 5. as some Hebrews will have it; but when as having overcome all his enemies, and setled his Kingdom, he enjoyed great peace and quiet, and had one foot as it were upon the battlements of Heaven. The Jews at this day use for most part to repeat this Psalm after they are sate down to meat. God is often in Scripture called the Shepheard of his people, Psal. 80. 1. Ezek. 34. 12, 14, 15. Isa. 40. 11. Joh. 10. 11. 1 Pet. 2. 25. although non est officium magis contemptibile quam opilionis, saith R. Jos. Bar. Hamna. there is not a more contemptible office than that of a Shepheard. Every Shepheard was an abomination to the Ægyptians. But God disdaineth not to feed his Flock, to guide, to govern, to defend them, to handle, and heal them, to tend, and take care of them; and all this he hath tied himself by Covenant to do, Ezek. 34. 25. well therefore might David confidently conclude,

I shall not want] Non deficiam, indigebo, destituar. The wicked in the fulness of his sufficiency is in straits, Job 20. 22. Tantalus-like, he is ever wanting: content he hath none. Contrarily, true piety brings true plenty, and a Saint is never to seek of wel-contenting sufficiency, 1 Tim 6. 6. for to him, Parva seges satis est. And he saith,

Discite quam parvo liceat producere vitam,
Et quantum natura petat, &c.

Lucan, Pharsl. lib. 4.

Vers. 2. He maketh me to lye down in green pastures] In folds of budding-grass, where he feedeth me daily, and daintily, plentifully, and pleasantly, as among the Lillies, Cant: 6. 3. that is, amidst the Ordinances (David here seemeth to resemble powerful and flourishing Doctrine to green Pastures, and the secret and sweet comforts of the Sacraments to the still waters) where I shall not need to bite on the bare ground, but may go in and out, and finde pasture, Joh. 10. 9. such as will breed life, and life in more abundance, Joh. 10. 10. Isa. 49. 10. fat pastures hee provideth, Ezek. 34. 14. and fair Coates, or Coverts from the Suns heat, as the word here used may also be rendred. Confer Cant. 1. 6. Virgil saith, it is the office of a good shepheard, Æstibus in mediis umbrosam exquirere vallem.

He leadeth me (Heb. Gently leadeth me) beside the still waters] Heb. waters of rests, Ex quibus diligunt oves bibere, saith Kimchi, such as sheep love to drink of, because voyd of danger, and yeelding a refreshing air. Popish Clergy-men are called the inhabitants of the Sea, Rev. 12. 12. because they set abroach gross, troubled, brakish, and sowrish Doctrine, which rather bringeth barrenness to their Hearers, and gnaweth their entralls, than quencheth their thirst, or cooleth their heat. The Doctrine of the Gospel (like the waters of Siloe, Isa. 8. 6.) run gently, but taste pleasantly.

Vers. 3. He restoreth my Soul] He reduceth me, when like a lost sheep I have gone astray, Psa. 119. 176. A Sheep, saith Aristotle, is a foolish and sluggish Creature, Et omnium quadrupedum stupidissimum, apt est of any thing to wander; though it feel no want, and unable st to return. The Ox knoweth his owner, and the Asse his Masters

De nat. Animal. lib. 9

Maſters crib. Swine in a ſtorm run home, and at night will make to the trough; But a ſheep can make no ſhift to ſave it ſelf from tempeſts or inundations; there it ſtands and will periſh, if not driven away by the ſhepheard. Loe ſuch a ſilly ſhiftleſſe thing is man left to himſelf. But bleſſed be God for a Chriſt that beſt of Shepheards, who reſtoreth the loſt ſoul, and maketh it to return into the right way, giving it reſt, and cauſing it to ſerve Him without fear in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, Luk. 1. 74.

Hee leadeth mee in the paths of Righteouſneſs] Or, In plain ſmooth eaſie paths, or ſheep-tracks, wherein I may walk unweariably, unblameably, without ceſſation or ceſpitation. The wayes of ſin are craggy, crooked, full of errour, and terrour, leading to thoſe precipices that tend to deſtruction. From ſuch ſtand off, ſaith Chriſt to his ſheep, who are all rationall, and will bee ruled by him, Joh. 10.

For his Names ſake] i. e. Of his free grace, and for his meer mercy-ſake. Otherwiſe, hee would never do us any of theſe good offices, but let us alone to periſh in our own corruptions.

Verſ. 4. Yea though I walk thorow the valley of the ſhaddow of death] In the moſt dark and dangerous places, where there is Luctus ubique, pavor, & plurima mortis imago, thoſe dark places full of cruelty, Pſal. 74. 20. where Wolves wait for mee. Though I walk (not ſtep) thorow (not croſſe) the valley (not a dark entry only) of the ſhaddow of death (the darkeſt ſide of it, death in its moſt hideous and horrid repreſentations) I will not fear; for I fear God, and have him by the hand; I muſt needs bee Tutus ſub umbra leonis, ſafe by his ſide, and under his ſafe-guard. If God be for us, who can be againſt us?

For thou art with mee] Hence my ſecurity; ſee a promiſe anſwerable to it, Joh. 10. 28. Chriſt is not to loſe any of his ſheep, Joh. 17. 12. Having therefore this Ark of Gods Covenant in our eyes, let us chearfully paſſe the waters of Jordan, to take poſſeſſion of the promiſed land. Cur timeat hominem homo, in ſua Dei poſitus, ſaith a Father?

Thy rod and thy ſtaff] Hee purſueth the former Allegory; Shepheards, in driving their flocks, have a rod or wand in their hand, wherewith they now and then ſtrike them; and a ſtaff or ſheep-hook on their necks, wherewith they catch and rule them. Of Chriſts rods and ſtaves, ſee Zach. 11. 7. &c. fooliſh Shepheards have only forcipes & mulctram, Zach. 11. 15. R. Solomon, by rod here underſtandeth afflictions, by ſtaff ſupport under them, a good uſe and a good iſſue.

They comfort mee] Gods rod, like Aarons, bloſſometh; and like Jonathans, it hath hony at the end of it.

Verſ. 5. Thou prepareſt a table before] Here hee makes uſe of another Metaphor from a liberall feaſt-maker, or (as ſome will have it) from a moſt kind Father, making proviſion for his dearly beloved child; So did God for David, both in regard of temporalls and ſpirituals. God had given him (as hee doth all his people) all things richly to injoy, all things needfull for life and godlineſſe, the upper and nether ſprings, the bleſſings of the right hand and of the left, bona throni, & bona ſcabelli, as Auſtin phraſeth it. Now outward proſperity when it followeth cloſe walking with God, is very ſweet; as the cipher when it followeth the figure addeth to the number, though it bee nothing in it ſelf. Davids Table was laden with Gods Creatures, and did even ſweat with variety of them. God had let down to him, as afterwards hee did to Peter, a veſſell with all manner of beaſts of the earth, and foules of the air in it, Act. 10. 12. This he is very ſenſible of, and thankfull for, as a ſingular favour.

In the preſence of mine enemies] i. e. In ſight and ſpite of them, hoſtibus videntibus & ringentibus. God doth good to his people maugre the malice of earth and of Hell.

Thou anointeſt my head with oyle] A peece of entertainment common in thoſe times, and amongſt that people, Luk. 7. 36, 37, 38. to ſhew the greater reſpect to their gueſts. And although this is not every good mans eaſe in temporall reſpects, yet at the Word and Sacraments God anointeth his gueſts with the Oyl of gladneſſe.

My cup runneth over] Hee had not only a fullneſſe of abundance, but of redundancy. Thoſe that have this happineſſe muſt carry their cup upright, and ſee that it overflow into their poor Brethrens emptier veſſells.

Verſ.

Verſ. 6. Surely goodneſſe and mercy, &c.] Vtique bonitas & beneficentia, Or, as Tremellius hath it, Nihil niſi bonum & benignitas, Nothing but goodneſſe and loving-kindneſs, &c. This is his good aſſurance of Gods favour for the future, grounded upon Gods promiſe; whereby hee was well aſſured that mercy ſhould follow him, though hee ſhould bee ſo fooliſh as to run from it; like as the Sun going down, followeth the paſſenger that goeth Eaſtward, with his beames.

And I will dwell, &c.] Devoted to his fear I will ſtick to him in life, in death, and after death. Apprehenſions of mercy in God, muſt work reſolutions of obedience in us.

PSAL. XXIV.

A Pſalm of David] The Greek addeth, Of the firſt day of the week (Becauſe wont to be ſung in the Temple, on that day) which is now the Chriſtian Sabboth, in memory of Chriſts reſurrection and ruledome over all, which is here celebrated.

Verſ. 1. The earth is the Lords, and the fullneſſe thereof] Hee alone is the true Proprietary, Job 41. 11. Deut. 10. 14. and the earth is Marſupium Domini, as One ſaith, the Lords great purſe; the keeping whereof hee hath committed to the ſons of men, Pſal. 115. 16. like as alſo hee hath given the heavenly bodies to all peoples, Deut. 4. 19. every ſtar being Gods ſtorehouſe, which hee openeth for our profit, Deut. 28. 12. and out of which hee throweth down riches and plenty into the earth, ſuch as the Servants of God gather, and the reſt ſcramble for. What uſe the Apoſtle putteth this point to, See 1 Cor. 10. 26, 28. with the Notes. Other uſes may well bee made of it; as, that Kings and Princes bear not themſelves as Lords of all (the Turk and Pope ſo ſtile themſelves; the great Cham of Tartary every day aſſoon as hee hath dined cauſeth, they ſay, his trumpets to be ſounded; by that ſign giving leave to other Princes of the earth (his Vaſſals, as hee conceiteth) to go to dinner) but the Lords vicarii & villici, vicegerents and Stewards, to whom they muſt give an account of all. Again, that Gods dear Children cannot want any thing that is good for them; ſith they have ſo rich a Father, who ſeemes to ſay unto them, as Gen. 45. 20. Regard not your ſtuff, for all the good of the land is yours. To him that overcommeth will I give to inherit all things; I have all things. Phil. 4. 18 2 Cor. 6. 10.

The world, and they that dwel therein] This is Gods univerſall Kingdome by right of Creation, verſ. 2. beſides which hee hath a ſpirituall Kingdome over his elect, (ut docet nos pulcherrimus hic Pſalmus, ſaith Beza) who are here deſcribed, verſ. 4, 5, 6. and encouraged to enlarge their deſires after their Soveraigne in the exerciſe of faith, and uſe of means; and to give him the beſt entertainment, verſ. 7, 8, 9, 10. For the Church is Chriſts Temple; and every faithfull ſoul is a gate thereof to let him in as Rev. 3. 20.

Verſ. 2. For hee hath founded it upon the Seas] The ſolid earth hee hath founded upon the liquid waters. This Ariſtotle acknowledgeth to bee a miracle; as alſo that the waters which are naturally above the earth, overflow it not, but are kept within their ſhoares, as within doors and barres. This is the very finger of God, and a ſtanding miracle, worthy to bee predicated to his praiſe all the World over, Job 38. 6, 7, 8. &c. See the Notes there. See alſo Gen. 1. 9. with the Note.

And eſtabliſhed it upon the floods] Upon the waves and ſurges of the Sea; which, but for Gods decree, would ſoon ſurmount it. The dry land is that which is here called Tebel תבל, the habitable world. And this is Gods univerſall Kingdome, which becauſe leſſe conſiderable, the Prophet ſpeaketh but little of it in compariſon, as haſtening to the ſpirituall.

Verſ. 3. Who ſhall aſcend into the Hill of the Lord] Montem cæleſtem ſignificat, ſaith Vatablus, hee meaneth into Heaven: for the Prophets purpoſe is to ſhew, that although God made all, yet hee will not ſave all; but that there is a ſelect number, culled and called out of the many, who ſhall bee everlaſtingly happy; and theſe are here characterized, as they are alſo, Pſal. 15. wherewith this Pſalm hath great affinity, and is thought to have been compoſed at the ſame time, that is, ſaith R. David, poſt negotium Ornani Jebuſæi, after the buſineſſe with Araunah the Jebuſite, when God by fire from Heaven had pointed out the place where the Temple ſhould bee built, 1 Chro. 21. 26. & 22. 1.

And

And who ſhall ſtand in his holy place?] Stand with the Lamb upon Mount Sion? Tautologia hæc eſt Hebræis perquam familiaris. Who is a true Member of the Church militant? and ſhall bee no leſſe of the Church triumphant?

Ver. 4. He that hath clean hands] The clean in hands, that is, of innocent and unblamable converſation; debet eſſe purus corde, ore, opere, ſaith Kimchi; he muſt not touch that unclean thing, 2 Cor. 6. 17. Non magna munera, ſed immunia manus mensq; ſincera Deo placent. Men muſt lift up pure hands in prayer, 1 Tim. 2. 8. or elſe their inceníe will ſtinck of the hand that offereth it, Iſa. 1. 13. Thoſe that draw neer to God muſt not only have their hearts ſprinkled from an evill conſcience, but their bodies alſo waſhed with pure water, Heb. 10. 22.

Immunis ara ſi tetigit manus Horat.

And a pure heart] Which while Pilat wanted, it nothing profited him to waſh his hands in the preſence of the people. Heaven is an holy place; and they that would go thither, muſt cleanſe themſelves from all filthineſſe of fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſſe in the fear of God, 2 Cor. 7. 1. The Serpent could ſcrue himſelf into Paradiſe; but no unclean creature ever came into Gods Kingdome. The Citizens of Heaven muſt here affect purity of heart, aim at it, and in ſome meaſure attain to it too; the old frame of impure motions being diſſolved, &c.

Who hath not lift up his ſoul unto vanity] i. e. Ad idola vel opes, ſaith One, that is, to Idolls, or riches, Jer. 22. 27. but hath lifted it up in the wayes of the Lord, as Jehoſaphat did, 2 Chron. 17. and David, Pſal. 25. 1. not heeding or hankering after the Worlds delights, or the Devills deluſions. Some write the word Shau, ſignifying vanity, with a little Vau, ad indicandum quòd minima vanitas eſt vitanda, &c. to ſhew, that hee who would dwell in Gods holy Mountain, muſt carefully avoid the leaſt vanity that is; keeping Gods Commandement as the apple of his eye, that will bear no jeſts, Prov. 7. 2. Some for his Soul, read my Soul; Hee hath not taken in vain my Soul, that is, ſaith R. Obadiah, That ſoul inſpired by God (which I alſo have received) he taketh not in vain, he miſemployeth not to iniquity, but conſecrateth to the ſervice of God, whoſe image and ſuperſcription it beareth.

Nor hath ſworn deceitfully] Or inured his tongue to any other kind of the language of Hell, rotten communication, to the diſhonouring of God, or deceiving of others. Perjury is here inſtanced for the reſt, as one of the moſt hainous. But Peraldus rekoneth up four and twenty ſeverall ſins of the tongue; all which every Burgeſſe of the new Jeruſalem is carefull to avoid, as the Devills drevill, no way becoming his pure lip.

Tom. 1. pag. 264.

Verſ. 5. He ſhall receive the bleſſing from the Lord] i. e. Omnimodam felicitatem, all manner of mercies, ſaith Vatablus; hee ſhall bee as happy as heart can wiſh; for great is the gain of godlineſſe. See my Righteous mans Recompence.

And Righteouſneſſe, &c.] i. e. The fruit and reward of Righteouſneſſe, which the Righteous God will not fail to beſtow upon all his; even the Crown of Righteouſneſſe, 2 Tim. 4. 8. A grave Interpreter hath here obſerved, that there is ſuch a reciprocation between the deſcription of this reward and the perſons deſcribed, that the bleſſedneſſe aſſured to the perſons exciteth them to the care of piety; and this care of piety bringeth unto them a ſure and firm expectation of bleſſedneſſe.

Ames.

Verſ. 6. This is the generation of them that ſeek him] Theſe are the true Seekers, farre different from thoſe that now-adayes ſo ſtile themſelves; being no better indeed than the Jeſuites by-blowes, as one wittily calleth them, though they are not yet ſo wiſe as to know their own Father. Theſe are a generation too, but an evil and adulterous, one in theſe laſt and looſeſt times of abounding and abetted Errours.

M. Baxſter.

That ſeek thy face] i. e. Thy favour, that deſire nothing more than to bee in communion with thee and conformity unto thee.

O Jacob] Or, O God of Jacob: As the Church is called Chriſt, 1 Cor. 12. 12. So God is here called Jacob; ſuch a neer union there is betwixt him and his people. Or, this is Jacob. So the true Seekers are ſtily called, firſt, becauſe Iſraelites indeed, Joh. 1. 47. Rom. 9. 6. ſecondly, becauſe they ſee God face to face, as Jacob did at Pennel, Gen. 32. 24, 26, 29, 30. thirdly, becauſe they alſo, as hee, do bear away a bleſſing, Hoſ. 12. 4. even Righteouſneſſe from the God of their ſalvation, as in the verſe aforegoing.

into, as the first fruites, and the opener of the way to all his Members; And hee doubleth the same speech, vers. 9. for the joy that hee had in the contemplation thereof; bidding them again and again, lift up and bee lifted up; a phrase or term taken from triumphall arches, or great Portico's set up or beautified and adorned for the coming in of great victorious and triumphant Captaines. There are at this day to bee seen at Rome the ruines of Constantines triumphall arch erected at that time when hee entred the City, triumphing over the Tyrant Maxentius, quem vicit signo crucis, as Eusebius reporteth; making Christ to triumph at Rome, after those ten bloody persecutions; with which triumph this Psalm may fitly bee compared, saith a learned Interpreter: Our late Annotatours tell us of a fashion in ancient times, that when they would solemnize the enterance of any Prince, or others that had well deserved of the publick, they would break down the walls, and pull off the gates of the City; partly for more free entrance, and partly to shew that their City needed no walls nor gates, as long as they had such a Guardian and Protector within it. It is likely, say they, that David by these words doth allude to some such custome. Or as Calvin and others will have it, to the Temple to bee set up by Solomon; which hee wisheth were done, that so hee might bring in the Ark of the Covenant, hitherto transportative, into the place of its rest, Psal. 132. 14. Certain it is, that the Saints, those living Temples of the Lord, are here called upon to lift up their hearts, in the use of holy ordinances; yea therein to bee abundantly lifted up through faith, with a joyfull and assured wel-come of the King of Glory, who will thereupon come in to them, by the ravishing operation of his love, benefits, and graces.

Vatablus.

Vers. 8. Who is this King of glory?] The gates are brought in as asking this question, saith R. David. This is the Angells admiration at the comming in of Christs humanity into Heaven, saith Diodate; Rather, it is the question of the faithfull concerning the person of their King, whom they hereby resist not; but for their further confirmation, desire to bee better informed of Him, and his never-enough adored excellencies.

The Lord strong] Jehovah the Essentiator, the Eternall God; the most mighty and puissant Warriour; who if hee do but arise only, his enemies are scattered; and all that hate him flie before him, Psal. 68. 1.

Vers. 9. Lift up your heads, &c.] See Vers. 7. And learn, that in matters of moment wee must be more than ordinary earnest, and importunate with our selves and others.

Vers. 10. Who is this King of glory?] The best are acutè obtusi in the mystery of Christ crucified; and must therefore by study and inquiry grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, 2 Pet. 3. 18. praying for that Spirit of wisdome and revelation, for the acknowledgement of him, Ephes. 1. 17.

The Lord of Hoasts] Hee who hath all Creatures at his beck, and check, the Lord of Sabaoth, Rom. 9. 29. Jam. 5. 4. where the word signifying hoasts or armes is used untranslated; because well understood both by Jews and Gentiles, as is also Hosanna, Hallelujah, Amen.

PSAL. XXV.

Beza.

A Psalm of David] An excellent Psalm; the second of those seven called by the Ancients penitentiall; and such as may well serve us for a pattern of our daily prayers; as wherein David beggeth three things (answerable to those two last petitions in the Lords prayer) first, Pardon of sin; secondly, Guidance of Gods good Spirit; thirdly, Defence against his enemies. It appeareth, that this Psalm was made by David, when hee was well in years, vers. 7. after his sin in the matter of Uriah (that great iniquity as hee calleth it, vers. 11. saith Vatablus) and some gather from vers. 19. that hee framed this Psalm, when Absolom was up in armes against him, vers. 19 (compared with Psal. 3. 1.) See also vers. 15. & 22. It may seem therefore that when hee came to Mahanaim, 2 Sam. 17. 24, 27. (where God shewed him marvellous loving kindnesse in a strong City, Psal. 31. 21. and where-hence hee was at the peoples request, to succour them, or to cause them to bee helped, viz. by his hearty prayers for Gods assistance, 2 Sam. 18. 3.) he composed poſed this Pſalm with more than ordinary artifice, viz. in order of Alphabet, as hee hath done alſo ſome few others, both for the excellencie of the matter, and likewiſe for help of memory; for which cauſe alſo St. Matthew ſummeth up the genealogie of Chriſt into three fourteenes; all helps being but little enough. Nazianzen and Sedulius, have done the like; the former in his holy Alphabet, Ἀρχὴν ἁπάντων, &c. and the latter in his Hymn, A Solis ortus cardine Beatus auctor ſæculi, &c.

Verſ. 1. Unto thee O Lord, do I lift up my ſoul] i. e. Præparo cor meum, ſaith R. Solomon. My heart maketh its faithfull addreſſes to thee (and not any other) with ſtrength of deſire and delight, with earneſt expectation and hope of relief. See Jer. 22. 27. Deut. 24. 15. Pſal. 86. 5. Cyprian ſaith, that in the primitive times the Miniſter was wont to prepare the peoples minds to pray, by prefacing Surſum corda, Lift up your hearts. The Jews at this day write upon the walls of their Synagogues theſe words, Tephillah belo cavannah ceguph belo neſhamah. That is, A prayer without the intention of the affection, is like a body without a ſoul; and yet their devotion is a meer out-ſide, ſaith One, a brainleſſe head, and a ſouleleſſe body; Antiquum obtinent, Iſa. 29. 13. This people draweth nigh to mee with their lipps, but their heart is farre from mee. A carnall man can as little lift up his heart in prayer, as a moul can flye. A David finds it an hard task; ſith the beſt heart is lumpiſh, and naturally beareth downward, as the poiſe of a clock, as the lead of a net. Let us therefore lay aſide every weight, and the ſin that doth ſo eaſily beſet it; and pray God to draw us up to himſelf, as the load-ſtone doth the Iron, &c.

Verſ. 2. O my God, I truſt in thee] I pray in faith, which is as the fire, and my prayer as the flame that ariſeth out of it. Faith is the foundation of prayer; and prayer is the fervency of faith. Now David knew that the hand of faith never knocketh at the gate of grace in vain.

Let mee not bee aſhamed] Shame is the Daughter of diſappointment. This David deprecateth; Quæq; repulſa gravis; ſee Job 6. 20.

Let not mine enemies triumph over mee] By ſaying, that I pray to no purpoſe, as Rabſhakeh did, Iſa. 35. 6. I ſay (ſaith Hezekiah) I have words of my lipps, prayer; prayer? but alaſſe, what's that more than empty words, an aiery nothing? Counſel and ſtrength are for the battel. Thus Hee.

Verſ. 3. Yea let none that wait on thee bee aſhamed] Be noſed and twitted with my diſappointments, as they are ſure to be, if I be repulſed by thee, and worſted by mine enemies; all thy praying people ſhall have it caſt in their teeth, and laid in their diſh.

Let them bee aſhamed which tranſgreſſe without cauſe] Let ſhame bee ſent to the right owner, even to thoſe that deal diſloyally, unprovoked on my part. And ſo it was; for Achitophel hanged himſelf; Abſolom was truſſed up by the hand of God, and diſpatcht by Joab; the people that conſpired with him, partly periſhed by the ſword, and partly fled home much aſhamed of their enterprize. Oh the power of prayer! what may not the Saints have for asking?

Verſ. 4 Shew mee thy wayes O Lord] q. d. However other men walk towards mee, yet my deſire is to keep touch with thee; for which purpoſe I humbly beg thy beſt direction. See Exod. 33. 13. Iſa. 2. 3.

Teach mee thy paths] Aſſuefac me; inure mee to thy paths, Sicut parvulus ad ambulandum aſſuetus, ſaith Kimchi, as a little one is taught to find his feet.

Verſ. 5. Lead mee in thy Truth, and teach mee] i. e. Aſſidùe doce & urge. David was a great proficient in Gods School, and yet he would learn more: ſo ſweet is divine knowledge. Four times together here, prayeth David to bee further inſtructed. See Moſes in like manner holily encroaching upon God, Exod. 33. 12, 13, 16, 18. as if his Motto had been that of Charles the fifth, Vltrà, More yet.

For thou art the God of my ſalvation] Perfect therefore that which concerneth mee; Thy mercy O Lord endureth for ever; forſake not the works of thine own hands, Pſal. 138. 8. Thou haſt written mee down in thy book of preſervation with thine own hand; oh read thine own hand-writing and ſave mee, ſaid Queen Elizabeth in her troubles.

Verſ. 6. Remember O Lord thy tender mercies] Heb. Thy bowels, which thou mayeſt ſeem to have loſt, but I ſhall find them for thee. Where are thy bowels and thy compaſſions? are they reſtrained? If thou haſt forgotten them (but that cannot be) I ſhall bee thy Remembrancer, and read them over unto thee out of the Regiſter of a ſanctified memory.

For they have been ever of old] Etiam ad Adamum, qui vixit quaſi mille annis, Ever ſince Adam, and ſo onward ſaith R. Solomon; and why not then to mee, who am one of thine, to whom mercy ſucceſſively belongeth in my generation, as it did to mine Anceſtors in theirs?

Verſ. 7. Remember not the ſins of my youth] Which, though long ſince committed, muſt not bee remembred without remorſe; ſith for them God often puniſheth men in their age, Job 13. 26. Jer. 3. 25. It is not the laſt ſand that emptieth the hour-glaſſe, nor the laſt blow that throweth down the Oak. Sin may ſleep a long time, like a ſleeping debt, not called for of many years; as Sauls ſin in ſlaying the Gibeonites, not puniſhed till forty years after; as Joabs killing of Abner ſlept all Davids dayes, &c. It is not ſafe to bee at odds with the Ancient of dayes. This David knew, and therefore was willing to clear all old ſcores, to get pardon of youthfull luſts; leſt they ſhould put a ſting into his preſent ſufferings. And that being thorowly done, as hee could expect mercy and direction from God, ſo if any ſhould maliciouſly upbraid him with his by-gone iniquities, hee could anſwer as Auſtin did in like caſe, Quæ tu reprehendis, ego damnavi, What thou reprehendeſt in me, I have long ſince condemned in my ſelf. And as Reverend Beza, when a ſpitefull Papiſt hit him in the teeth with his wanton poems ſet forth in his youth, and long before repented of, Hic homo invidet mihi gratiam Chriſti, This fellow ſaid hee, envieth mee the grace of Jeſus Chriſt.

Nor my tranſgreſſions] Or, prevarications, In perſonam Uriæ, In the matter of Uriah, ſaith R. Obadiah; the ſins of mine age, ſaith Kimchi; all my faults of former and later time, ſaith another. David was well in years, when hee defiled himſelf with Bathſheba. In many young men, the Roſe is cankered in the bud. And again, as the canker ſooneſt entreth into the white Roſe; ſo doth corruption eaſily creep into the white head. David prayeth God to forgive him his ſins, both of former and of latter time; and not to forgive them only, but to forget them too; Remember not the ſins, &c. And as hee fitly joyneth memorie of mercies and forgetfulneſſe of ſins, ſo hee forgetteth not to ſubjoyn

According to thy mercy remember thou mee, for thy goodneſſe ſake, O Lord] Do all of free grace, not for any motive or merit of mine. Lorinus a Jeſuite here bringeth in ſundry paſſages (as well hee may) Pſal. 6. 8. & 51. 3. & 69. 14. & 86. 5. 15. & 106. 45. & 119. 156. & 136. 7. Dan. 9. 18. Iſa. 55. 7. to prove that all is of mercy, and not of merits.

Verſ. 8. Good and upright is the Lord] i. e. Gracious, and righteous, or faithfull; and hence it is, that our God is mercifull, as Pſal. 116. 5. hence it is, as that we poor Creatures are not overwhelmed, aut magnitudine peccatorum, aut mole calamitatum, either with the greatneſſe of our ſins, or the multitude of our miſeries.

Therefore will hee teach ſinners in the way] i. e. Senſible ſinners, meek and mortified, as in the next verſe, ſelf-judging, and ſelf-outed; thoſe will hee teach to turn to him, and to walk before him in all well-pleaſing; and this Doctrin of direction muſt needs bee good, becauſe hee is good, and certain, becauſe he is upright.

Verſ. 9. The meek will hee guide in judgement] Or, the poor (viz. in ſpirit) will he make to tread in judgement, to foot it aright, to walk judiciouſly, to behave themſelves wiſely as David did, 1 Sam. 10. 14. ſo that Saul feared him 1 Sam. 23. 22. Naturall conſcience cannot but ſtoop to the image of God, ſhining in the hearts and lives of the really Religious.

And the meek will hee teach his way] Such as lye at his feet, and ſay, Speak Lord for thy ſervant heareth, ſuch as whoſe hearts are ſupple and ſoluble, tractable and teachable, ſo as that a little child may lead them, Iſa. 11. 6. Auſtin was ſuch an one, Ego ad ſum ſenex, ſaith he, à juvene coepiſcopo Epiſcopus tot annorum, à collega nondum annieulo paratus ſum diſcere, i. e. I am here an old man ready to learn of a young man, my coadjutour, in the miniſtry, who hath ſcarce been one year in the ſervice.

Aug. Epiſt. 75. ad Auuil. Epiſ.

Verſ. 10. All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth] All the paſſages and proceedings, both ordinantiall and providentiall whereby he cometh and communicateth himſelf to his people, are not only Mercy (though that's very ſweet) but Truth; they come to them in a way of a promiſe from God, as bound to them by covenant; this is ſoul-ſatisfying indeed; this turns all that a man hath to cream; when when every mercy is a preſent ſent him from Heaven by vertue of a promiſe.

Unto ſuch as keep his Covenant, and his Teſtimonies] i. e. His Law (that ſingular Teſtimony of his goodneſſe towards them) called a Covenant, becauſe hee bargaineth with us, as it were, that wee ſhould keep it; which becauſe wee can never do, he undertaketh to perform his own part, and ours too. Lex jubet, gratia juvat, he worketh all our works in us, and for us; he giveth us to be what he biddeth us to be; this is the everlaſting Covenant, and the fruits of it are ſure mercies, compaſſions that fail not.

Verſ. 11. For thy names ſake, O Lord, pardon mine iniquity] Never did priſoner at the barre beg more earneſtly for his life, than David did for pardon of his great offence, eſpecially in the matter of Uriah; for that lay heavieſt. Could he but get off the guilt of that, it were an eaſie matter for him to glory in tribulations with Paul, Rom. 5. 3. and to cry out with Luther, Feri Domine, feri; nam à peccatis abſolutus ſum; Smite Lord, ſmite; for I am a pardoned ſinner, and therefore all is in mercy, and for good.

For it is great] But that's nothing to ſo great a God, who delighteſt in mercy, and makeſt thy power appear in pardoning the many and horrid ſins of thy poor penitents. The high Heaven covereth as well tall Mountaines, as ſmall molehills. The vaſt Ocean ſwalloweth up huge Rocks, as well as little pibbles. St. Paul was (for the firſt table) a Blaſphemer, and (for the ſecond table) a Perſecutor, and injurious; but I obtained mercy, ſaith Hee; and why? that the grace of our Lord might appear to bee exceeding abundant, even to an overflow, 1 Tim. 1. 13, 14. and that the glory of free grace might be ſo much the more manifeſted, Rom. 5. 20. The more deſperate was my diſeaſe, the greater is the glory of my Phyſician, who hath fully cured mee, ſaid Auſtin once to one, who upbraided him with his former looſe living.

Verſ. 12. What man is hee that feareth the Lord?] This queſtion implieth, firſt, a paucity of ſuch, as Hoſ. 14. ult. ſecondly, the felicity of ſuch as out of a reverentiall fear of God, ſue to him for pardon of ſin, and ſeek to bee made his ſervants. O quanta eſt felicitas iſtius viri! O the heaped up happineſſe of ſuch a rare man! David admireth it here; and well hee may; for hee hath cloſe communion with God, and ſweet communication of Chriſts ſecrets, as followeth.

Vatab. Utitur exclamatione Mol

Him ſhall hee teach in the way that hee ſhall chuſe] i. e. That the good man ſhall pitch upon. God will direct him in all dealings to make a good choice; and will give good ſucceſſe. This is not in a mans own power to do, Jer. 10, 23. But the ſteps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, and hee delighteth in his way, Pſal. 37. 23. Hee was a pillar of fire, and cloud to the Iſraelites, Exod. 14. 19. and carefully choſe out their way for them; not the neareſt alway, but yet the ſafeſt.

Verſ. 13. His ſoul ſhall dwell at eaſe] Heb. ſhall lodge in good, even then when his body happily is toſſing on his ſick bed, and at great unreſt. One being asked how hee did? anſwered, My body is weak, my ſoul is well. Hee ſhall be freed from the Devill of diſcontent, and have a bleſſed ſelf-ſufficiency; ſuch, and better than hee had, whom Horace deſcribeth Epod. 2. Beatus ille qui procul negotiis, &c. ſuch as good Jacob had, when hee ſaid, I have enough my Brother, &c. Godlineſſe only hath ſuch a contentednesſe, 1 Tim. 6. 6.

And his ſeed ſhall inherit the earth] Gods love dieth not with the Parents; but reviveth in their poſterity, 2 Sam. 7. 12.

It would bee a great ſtay of mind to us, if God ſhould ſay of our Children, as once David did of Mephiboſheth, and afterwards of Chimham; I will take care of them, and ſee them well provided for. Hee doth upon the matter ſay as much and more, to every Beleever.

Verſ. 14. The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him] It is neither learning nor labour that can give inſight into Gods ſecrets, thoſe Arcana imperii, Mat. 13. 12. the Myſteries of the Kingdome of Heaven, the mind of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 2. ult. theſe things come by revelation, rather than diſcourſe of reaſon, and muſt therefore bee obtained by prayer. Thoſe that diligently ſeek him, ſhall bee of his cabi net counſel, ſhall know his ſoul-ſecrets, and bee admitted into a gracious familiarity and friendſhip, Joh. 15. 15. Henceforth I call you not ſervants, for the ſervant knoweth not what his Lord doth; but I have called you friends, for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known to you.

And he will ſhew them his Covenant] As having no greater ſecret to impart to them, than by ſhewing them the Covenant of Grace, his good pleaſure and purpoſe of their eternal Salvation: to make them know the love of Chriſt which paſſeth knowledge, that they may be filled with all the fulneſs of God, Epheſ. 3. 19. The Jews bragged much of Gods Covenant, but here they are given to underſtand, that only ſuch as fear God are Covenanters. Acts 13. 16. Men of Iſrael, and yee that fear God, give audience.

Verſ. 15. Mine eyes are ever toward the Lord] I look him full in the face, and confidently expect deliverance. This he ſpeaketh, ſaith one, in reference to the Army that he had ſent out to meet Abſolom, 2 Sam. 18. 1. nothing doubting of getting the day.

For he ſhall pluck my feet out of the net] Of evil concupiſcence, ſaith Aben-Ezra; rather of my foes, thoſe crafty and cruel Fowlers.

Verſ. 16. Turn thee unto me] Heb. Face about towards me.

And have mercy upon me] There being no ſuch mercy, as to have thy favour. This is a voluminous mercy.

For I am deſolate and afflicted] As all Creatures flag and hang the head, when the Sun is eclipſed. Miſery is an object of Mercy; as it was to the compaſſionate Samaritan.

Verſ. 17. The troubles of my heart are enlarged] Whereby my heart is ſorely ſtraitned, ſo that I can hardly breath: Oh, hide not thine ear at my breathing, at my cry, Lam. 3. 56. En patet in curas area lata meas: all afflictions enter into mine heart, as by a wide gate.

R. Obad. Cor vix capax tribulationum mearum. Vat.

Out of my diſtreſſes] Wherewith I am pent up, and pinched; as afterwards Paul was pricked with the meſſenger of Satan.

Verſ. 18. Look upon mine affliction, and my pain] My griefs under which I groan and labour; my concupiſcence, ſaith Aben-Ezra, againſt which I ſtrive, but prevail not.

And forgive all my Sin] Heb. Lift up, take away; lay them on the true Scape-goat, on that Lamb of God who taketh away the ſins of the World, Joh. 1. 29.

Verſ. 19. Conſider mine enemies, for they are many] This was to David half a promiſe, and a whole reaſon that he ſhould be helped; ſith it was come to an extremity. If God but look out of the pillar of Cloud upon the Egyptian Army, it is enough for their utter confuſion, Exod. 14. 24.

And they hate me with cruel hatred] Of their craft he had complained, verſ. 15. now of their cruelty. Theſe are never ſundred in the Churches enemies; as the Aſp, they ſay, never goeth without his mate. See Eſai. 34. 16.

Verſ. 20. O keep my Soul] The repetition of the ſelf-ſame Petition argueth earneſtneſs, and is not always battologie.

Let me not be aſhamed] rendred ſcornful and ſcandalous.

Verſ. 21. Let integrity and uprightneſs preſerve me] Integrity of Conſcience, and uprightneſs of converſation.

For I wait on thee] viz. For the accompliſhment of thy promiſe, That with the upright thou wilt ſhew thy ſelf upright, Pſal. 18. 11.

R. David. Verſ. 22. Redeem Iſrael, &c.] In vita vel poſt mortem meam, Either whiles I live, or after my death. This is every good mans care, and prayer. None is in caſe to pray for the Church, that hath not firſt made his own peace with God.

PSAL. XXVI.

VErſ. 1. Judge me, O Lord] i. e. Judge betwixt me and mine enemies; not betwixt me and thee, as R. David expoundeth it; for then I am ſure to bee found faulty.

For I have walked in mine integrity] viz. Toward Saul, whatever his pick-thank Courtiers ſuggeſt againſt me; as Pſal. 7. which is much like this, and made as it may ſeem about the ſame time as this, viz. about the beginning of Sauls perſecution secution raised against David, 1 Sam. 22. 7. &c. who thereupon appealeth here to Gods just Judgement, and stands upon his Justification, as holding fast faith and a good conscience.

Therefore I shall not slide] Or, not fayrt; I shall not be greatly moved, Psal. 62. 2. Moved I may be, but not removed; shaken, but not shivered; thrust at, but not thrown down, &c. because bottomed and built upon the rock of Ages, Isa. 26. 4. 2 Cor. 4. 8.

Vers. 2. Examine me O Lord, and prove me] It must needs be a good Conscience that thus boldly offereth it self to Gods trial; so Job 31. 6.

Try my reins and my heart] i. e. Mine affections and thoughts; for these are sibi mutuò causa. Whilst I mused, the fire kindled, Psal. 39. David was neither ambitious nor factious, as his adversaries represented him.

Vers. 3. For thy loving kindness is before mine eyes] And that's a strong tye upon my Conscience. The cords of love are the cords of a man, Hos. 11. 4. To sin against Mercy is to sin against Humanity, it is no less than bestial, than devillish. When therefore I am tempted to recompence evil for evil, thy loving kindness comes before me, and reigneth me in.

And I have walked in thy truth] i. e. according to thy Word: I have led a Bible-conversation, though sollicited to do otherwise by the Courtiers, and Politicians, with that prophane Proverb of their πολιτικῶς νῦν ἔχε, comply with the times, and be not so straight-laced: Religiosum oportet esse, sed non Religentem. Theog.

Vers. 4. I have not sate with vain persons] who are voyd of Gods holy fear, but filled with all unrighteousness, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness, &c. Rom. 1. 29. Courtiers are such for most part, and David never delighted in such company, to sit with them, especially when they were acting mischief; which whiles Cromwell did at the condemnation of Lambert Martyr, and Sir John Cheek, at other such like meetings, they were cast upon no small snares and inconveniences. See Jer. 15. 17.

Neither will I go in with dissemblers] Heb. close workers of iniquity, secret and sly Sirs, such as hide themselves to do evil, as the Chaldee hath it, and can carry their wickedness cleanly and closely, so as that the World shall be little the wiser, Versatiles & versutili, multiplices, Protei; such as can serve the times, and shift their sails to the sitting of every Wind, Machiavellians, Ahitophels, Jonadabs, 2 Sam. 13. 3. These mens wisdom may serve them, as the Ostriches wings, to make them out-run others upon earth, though it be into Hell-mouth, but help them never a whit toward Heaven; David therefore would have nothing to do with them, he would neither enter, walk, nor sit with any such (Confer Psal. 1. 1.) they should not sprinkle him with their Court-holy-water. Qui secreto malè agunt, Chald.

Vers. 5. I have hated the Congregation of evil-doers] The Church Malignant, whose lives are a Mystery of iniquity, as Josephus saith of Antipater; qui omnia turbant & miscent, tantum ut ipsi crescere possint, as Aristophanes saith of Cleon; care not whom they ruine, so they may raise themselves, nor what mischief they work to others, so they may drive on their own sinful designs. Luther said of the Monks in Germany, that they were so bad, tam desperatæ malitiæ, ut nihil cogitent quod non idem patrare ausint, that they would stick at no villany whatsoever. David held it a hell to be in company with such incarnate devils. It was once the prayer of a good Gentlewoman when she was to dye, being in much trouble of Conscience; O Lord, let me not go to Hell where the wicked are, for Lord, thou knowest I never loved their company here.

And will not sit with the wicked] But hate the very garment spotted by the flesh, Jude 2, 3. that is, avoyd evil company, saith Mr. Perkins, as Levit. 15. 4. so Deut. 22. 12. It is not safe coming near stinking Carrion, except one have the wind of it. Sin is as catching as the plague.

Vers. 6. I will wash mine hands in innocency] As Exod. 40. 32. So 1 Tim. 2. 8. See Deut. 21. 6. Isa. 1. 15. Jam. 4. 8. If in our addresses to God we cannot wash our hands in innocency, yet we must wash them in tears; Quem pœnitet peccasse, pœne est innocens, saith Seneca; Penitency is well-nigh as good as innocency; but one way or other be sure to come clean when you come to Gods Altar, when you draw nigh to him in holy duties. We wash our hands every day, and often, but when Sic Egyptii sacerdotes apud Herod. in Euterpe, tertio quoq; die corpus eraduntur, &c.

we are to ſit with ſome great perſon, we ſcoure them with balls; ſo here, we muſt be always holy, but eſpecially when we preſent our ſelves to the holy eyes of our Creator; And hereby David differenceth himſelf from the wicked in the uſe of Ordinances, wherein they were as forward as the beſt (Doeg may ſet his foot as farre into the Sanctuary as David, and cry, the Temple of the Lord, &c.) but cared not to come clear thereunto; their hands were full of bloud, their hearts full of wickedneſs.

So will I compaſs thine Altar, O Lord] i. e. I will cover it with Sacrifices and Oblations, and perform what is required of me diligently and cheerfully. The people might not touch the Altar, but only ſee afar off what was done there by the Prieſts. Howbeit, thoſe that were more zealous among them, to the end that they might have a full view of the ſervices, ſtood not ſtill in one place, but ſtirred up and down on all ſides of the Altar; and ſome ſuch thing David did, when he is ſaid to have danced before the Lord, 2 Sam. 6. 14. D. Am.

Verſ. 7. That I may publiſh] This was the end David propounded to himſelf in all his ſolemn ſervices; that he might ſet up God, and not ſerve himſelf upon God.

And tell of all thy wondrous Works] All Gods Mercies to his are Wonders, if well weighed in their ſeveral circumſtances. But we commonly deal by them, as Solomon did by the braſs of the Temple, it was ſo much that hee weighed it not.

Verſ. 8. Lord, I have loved the habitation of thy houſe] Much more the people, and the Ordinances there, but moſt of all the Lord himſelf of that houſe (as if a man love the School-maſter for his Childes ſake, he loveth his Childe much more) and hence it is that I ſo hate the Society of the ungodly; For what communion hath Chriſt with Belial? The word rendred habitation, ſome derive from a word that ſignifieth the eye, and therefore render it ſight, or beauty; the Seventy ὑπερέπειαν comlineſs. The Proteſtants at Lions in France called their publick meeting-place Paradiſe.

And the place where thine honour dwelleth] i. e. Where thou thy ſelf dwelleſt, or thine Ark, which is called Gods glory, 1 Sam. 4. 21. Pſal. 78. 61. yea Gods ſelf, Pſal. 132. 5. and Gods face, Pſal. 105. 4.

Verſ. 9. Gather not my ſoul with ſinners] I have loved thy Houſe, which ſinners never delighted in; therefore gather not my ſoul with ſinners; ſo the Syriack ſenſeth it. Let me not dye the death of Sinners, for I never cared for their company; ſo the Rabbines. See the Note on verſ. 5. Let me not ſhare with them in puniſhment, for I could never abide their practice. Balaam would dye the death of the righteous, but he liked not of their life. Euchrites would be Craſus vivens, & Socrates mortuus. Sir Walter Rawleigh would live a Papiſt (there being no Religion like that for Licentious liberty, and laſciviouſneſs) but dye a Proteſtant. We have ſome that would gladly dance with the Devil all day, and then ſup with Chriſt at night; live all their lives long in Dalilaes lap, and then go to Abrahams boſome when they dye. But this cannot be, as David well underſtood; and therefore both eſchewed the life of a wicked perſon, and deprecated his death; Gather not, or take not away, &c. The righteous is taken away (Heb. gathered, Iſa. 57. 1. as men gather Flowers and candy them, preſerve them) with ſuch to be gathered, David would hold it an happineſs, but not with ſinners, with ſanguinaries; for ſuch are gathered but as houſe-duſt, to be caſt out of doors.

Verſ. 10. In whoſe hands is miſchief] Wicked contrivance. Here we have the true portracture of a corrupt Courtier, ſuch as Sauls were.

Verſ. 11. But as for me, I will walk] Whatever others do, their example ſhall be no rule to me to deviate. See my Righteous mans recompence, D. 1.

Redeem me, &c.] For I am likely to ſuffer deeply, for my ſingularity.

Verſ. 12. My foot ſtandeth in an even place] i. e. Mine affections are in an equal tenour. A good man is τετράγωνος ὁλόκληρος the ſcales of his minde neither riſe up toward the beam through their own lightneſs, or their over-weening opinion of proſperity; nor are too much depreſſed with any load of ſorrow, but hanging equal and unmoved between both, give him liberty in all occurrences to enjoy himſelf.

I

I will bleſs the Lord] For performance of promiſes; chiefly in that great Panegyris, Heb. 12.

PSAL. XXVII.

VErſ. 1. The Lord is my light] That is, my comfort and direction, he that diſſolveth all my clouds of terrours within, and troubles without. To theſe all hee oppoſeth Gods All-ſufficiency, as making for him, and as being All in all unto him, Light, Salvation, Strength of Life, what not? and there-hence his full aſſurance; and ſuch a maſculine magnanimity as feareth not the power of men and Devils, be they who they will, and do what they can. Animo magno nihil eſt magnum. When a man can out of this conſideration, God is my light (in things of the minde) and my Salvation, (in things of the body, as Aben-Ezra expoundeth it) contemn and reckon all things elſe as matters of ſmall moment, it ſhews he hath in truth apprehended God: and this is true holy magnanimity.

The Lord is the ſtrength of my life] He that keeps life and ſoul together, ſaith Aben-Ezra, as the Spirits do ſoul and body; and therefore, Quis poteſt me interimere, ſaith Kimchi, who can do me to death?

Of whom ſhall I be afraid] Faith fortifieth the heart againſt diſtruſtful fears; which it quelleth and killeth. In a fright it runneth to the heart, as the bloud doth, and releeveth it, ſetting it ἔξω βέλων καὶ φόβου, out of the Gunſhot of Creature-annoyances. Expertus loquor; for Verſ. 2. When the wicked, even mine enemies, came upon me] Made impreſſion upon me, with utmoſt violence, and open mouth, as if they would have devoured me, Cannibal-like; or as a Lion doth a ſheep, inhumaniſſimè, ferarumq; more, ſaith Junius, barbarouſly, and beaſtly.

They ſtumbled and fell] Irritis conatibus corruerunt, they utterly loſt their deſign, as did thoſe Amalekites who had ſacked Ziglah, 1 Sam. 30. and Saul often. If a man ſtumble, and fall not, he gets ground; but if after much blundering hee kiſs the ground, he falleth with a force. Davids enemies did ſo, Corruerunt & conciderunt; they were irreparably ruined.

Verſ. 3. Though an Hoſt ſhould encamp againſt me] See Pſal. 3. 6. with the Note. We ſhould propound the worſt to our ſelves (the beſt will bring with it, as wee ſay) eſpecially if we finde our faith to be in heart and vigour, as here Davids was.

Though War ſhould riſe againſt me] War is a complexive evil, and is therefore called ſo by a ſpecialty, Iſa. 45. 7. I make peace, and create evil, that is, War; Sin, Satan and War have all one name (ſaith a learned Divine) evil is the beſt of them; the beſt of ſin is deformity, of Satan, enmity, of war, miſery.

In this will I be confident] In this? In what? In this one enſuing Petition, ſaith Aben-Ezra; or, in this that I have ſaid before, The Lord is my light and my Salvation; in this confident gloriation of mine, which is ſuch as an unbeleever is a perfect ſtranger unto.

Verſ. 4. One thing have I deſired of the Lord] One thing above the reſt. Every of Gods ſuppliants hath ſome one ſpecial requeſt that he mainly inſiſteth on; and King Davids was the liberty of Gods Sanctuary, and enjoyment of his publick Ordinances.

Ut cultu Dei libero & legitimo uti poſſit. Jun.

Hoc primus petit, hoc poſtremus omittit.

This was dearer to him than Wife, Children, Goods, all. This Sute he knew to be honeſt, and therefore he began it; and being ſo, he is reſolved never to give it over, but to proſecute it to the utmoſt, and to perſevere in prayer (which is a great vertue, Rom. 12. 12.) till he had prevailed.

That will I ſeek after] As Gods conſtant Remembrancer, who loveth to be importuned, and as it were jogged by his praying people. Herein David ſhewed himſelf a true Iſraelite, a Prince of God, and (as Nazianzen ſtileth Baſil the Great) Ἀνὴρ ἐπιθυμιῶν τῶν τοῦ πνεύματος, a man of deſires flowing from the Spirit. He knew well that a faint Suter doth but beg a denial.

That I may dwell in the Houſe of the Lord] i.e. In the place where was the Ark, with with the Prophets, Prieſts, Levites, Aſaph and his brethren, &c. with whom David deſired to be taken up in the ſervice of God, free from Secular cares and delights, at times convenient. Pyrrhus told Cyneas, that when he had finiſhed his Wars once, he would then ſit ſtill and be merry. The Roman Generals when they had once triumphed over their enemies, might take their eaſe and pleaſure for ever after. But good David reſolves to improve his reſt when ever God ſhall grant it him, to perpetual piety, That I may dwell, ſaith he, or ſit in the houſe of Jehovah all the dayes of my life; this was the height of his ambition, this was Davids delight.

To behold the beauty of the Lord] Heb. The delight, amenity, or pleaſantneſſe of Jehovah; hoc eſt cultum Dei ordinatum, ſaith Kimchi, thoſe ceremoniall ſervices which were their Goſpell, and Chriſt in figure, Heb. 8. 5. whom David deſired to contemplate

And to enquire in his Temple] Heb. Early to enquire, that is, earneſtly, what that good and holy and acceptable will of God is. Here it was that David uſed to ſeek ſatisfaction and reſolution of his doubts and ſcruples; when at any time he was gravelled, Pſal. 73. 16, 17. Some render it, ut luſtrem Templum ejus.

Ver. 5. For in time of trouble hee ſhall hide mee] This protection hee boldly promiſeth himſelf as a fruit of his faith, foſtered by the uſe of the ordinances. He knew that the only way to bee ſafe, was to get under Gods wing, Pſal. 91. to take ſanctuary there, to bee hid under Gods Altar; for upon all the glory there is a defence, Iſa. 4. 5. Joaſh was preſerved ſix years in the ſanctuarie, where hee was hid. The Sanctuary is called Gods hidden place, Ezek. 7. 22. and his Saints, his hidden ones, Pſal. 83. 4.

In his Pavilion] The Hebrew Succoh is written with a little Samech, to ſhew, ſay the Maſorites, that a little pavilion or cottage where God is, ſhall be ſufficient to ſafeguard the Saints.

Quod tabernaculum exile σὺν Θεῷ. eſt aſylum tutiſſimum.

In the ſecret of his tabernacle] I ſhall bee as ſafe, as if I were ſhut up in his holy Ark.

Hee ſhall ſet mee upon a Rock] Out of mine enemies reach.

Verſ. 6. And now ſhall mine head bee lifted up] See Pſal. 3. 4. and take notice how clear David was upon his prayer, of the poſſeſſion of the promiſe, that hee ſhould both get the better of his enemies, and injoy the publick ordinances.

Sacrifices of joy] Heb. Of loud ſhouting, hoc eſt ſacrificia cum canticis, ſaith R. Solomon. Sacrifices with triumph, alarm, or jubilation to the Lord; not with prophane triumphings, as the manner of the World is; as if by mine own ſtrength or prudence I had gotten the victory. So at the battel of Agincourt when our Henry the fifth had beaten the French, the honour of the day was, by the Kings command, aſcribed only to God. Hee would not ſuffer his broken Crown, or bruiſed armour to be born before him in ſhew; or any ballads to be ſet forth or ſung in his honour, &c.

Speed. Daniel.

Verſ. 7. Hear O Lord, when I cry] This was his form of prayer, or to this effect, when hee was in any diſtreſſe or danger. As a good ſouldier of Jeſus Chriſt hee had weapons, not only defenſive (the ſhield of Faith, helmet of Hope, breaſtplate of Righteouſneſſe, &c. as Epheſ. 6.) but alſo offenſive, viz. the darts of Prayer, as here, and the ſword of the Spirit, the Word of God, as in the next.

Verſ. 8. When thou ſaidſt Seek yee my face, &c.] Or, My heart ſaid unto thee (or, for thee, and in thy ſtead) Let my face ſeek thy face, &c. Or concerning Thee, ſaid my heart, that is, I have conſtantly conſidered of thoſe words of thine, Seek yee my face, and therefore I come confidently unto thee. See Deut. 4. 19. Upon which Commandement (involving a promiſe) David ſeems to ground this ſpeech of his. R. Solomon hath it thus, Thou haſt ſaid to my heart, Seek yee my face, that is, Thou haſt told mee by thy Spirit that all Iſrael ſhould ſeek thy face, and as for mee, I will ſurely ſeek thy face.

My heart ſaid unto thee, &c.] My heart (moved and inſpired by thy Spirit working in mee a gracious compliance) eccheed out as it were, Thy face, &c. See the like, Jer. 3. 22. Return yee backſliding Children, and I will heal your backſlidings; behold we come unto thee; for thou art the Lord our God. Every godly perſon hath the duplicate of Gods law in his heart; and is willingly caſt into the mould of his word, Rom. 6. 17.

Verſ.

Verſ. 9. Hide not thy face farre from mee] For then it will bee to no purpoſe for mee to ſeek it; eclipſe not thy favour, with-hold not thy ſuccour, but meet mee; yea, prevent mee with thy loving kindneſſe. Tantum velis, & Deus tibi praeccurret, ſaith an Ancient.

Put not thy Servant away in anger] Thy Servant I am, though a ſinfull ſervant, and ſuch as provoketh thee to diſpleaſure; nevertheleſſe reject mee not as thou haſt done Saul, and ſundry others, for their miſdoings. So 2 Sam. 24. 10. take away the iniquity of thy ſervant: and to prove himſelf ſo, hee addeth, For I have done fooliſhly; As ſome godly learned think, hereby intimating, that if hee deſerved not to be called Gods ſervant in regard of his late ſin; yet in regard of his latter ſervice of confeſſion. God puts away many in anger for their ſuppoſed goodneſſe; but not any at all for their confeſſed badneſſe.

Thou haſt been my help, leave mee not, &c.] It is a good note that one giveth upon theſe words; The godly many times have ſuch earneſt affections in prayer, that they can hardly content themſelves with any words, to expreſſe their minds withall.

Verſ. 10. When my Father and my Mother forſake mee] Or, For my Father and my Mother do forſake mee (that is, they are not able to help mee) but thou, &c. There is an Ocean of love in a Parents heart toward their even untoward Children, as was in David toward Abſolom, after all his unnaturall miſcarriages; inſomuch as Joab upbraideth him with it, 2 Sam. 19. 6. But all the mercies of all the Fathers and Mothers in the World put together, make not the tythe of Gods mercy toward his Children, Iſa. 41. 15. 1 Sam. 22. 1.

Then the Lord will take mee up] Heb. Will gather mee, that is, take mee into his care and keeping. In the Civill law we find proviſion made for outcaſts and friendleſſe perſons; ſome Hoſpitalls to entertain them, ſome liberties to comfort, and compenſate their trouble. Tis ſure, that in God the forlorn and fatherleſſe find mercy, Hoſ. 14. 3. See 1 Sam. 22. 2, 3. Joh. 9. 35. Jer. 30. 17. In the Iſraelites marching thorow the Wilderneſſe, at the fourth alarm aroſe the ſtandard of Dan, Aſher, and Nephthali; and to theſe was committed the care of gathering together the lame, feeble, and ſick, and to look that nothing was left behind; whence they were called the gathering hoaſt, Joſh. 6. 9. Unto this, ſome think David here alludeth.

Verſ. 11. Teach mee thy way, O Lord, and lead mee, &c.] Deus non deſerit ſuos, dum eos docet ac ducit, God ſhews that hee forſaketh not his (whatever other friends do) ſo long as hee teacheth and leadeth them. See Pſal. 25. 4, 5. with the Notes.

In a plain path] Heb. In a way of plainneſſe, wherein I may eſcape mine enemies ambuſhes.

Becauſe of mine enemies] Or, Becauſe of mine obſervers; ſo it may bee read; ſuch as Saul and Doeg were, who looked upon David with an evill eye, and watched for his halting. It was the wiſdome of the Lacedemonians alwaies to ſend two Ambaſſadors together, which diſagreed among themſelves; that ſo they might mutually eye one anothers actions. The wicked will bee eying and prying into the practiſes of good people, who muſt therefore watch and pray. Propter inſidiatores meos. Ariſtot. Polit. lib. 2. cap. 7.

Verſ. 12. Deliver mee not over unto the will of mine enemies] Heb. Unto the ſoul: for the wicked are carried on againſt the godly, with all their ſoul, as it were.

For falſe witneſſes] Such as whereof Sauls court was full, viz. his Aimes & Negoes, who fed his humour by traducing and denigrating innocent David.

And ſuch as breath out cruelty] As Saul breathed out threatning againſt the Diſciples, Act. 9. So did Davids ſpit-fires.

Verſ. 13. I had fainted, unleſſe I had believed] Saved hee was then by his Faith, which drank to him as it were in a cup of Nepenthes, and fetcht him again, when ready to ſwoon and ſink. See Pſal. 119. 92. The word rendred Unleſſe, here, is (as the Maſorites note) one of the fifteen Scripture-words, that were extraordinarily pointed by the men of the great Synagogue. The reaſon whereof given by Kimchi and others (as if David doubted of his ſalvation) is not ſatisfactory, nor ſound. Lule habes puncta ſupera & infra.

To ſee the goodneſſe of the Lord] That is, to taſte, one ſenſe uſually put for another; the ſoul alſo hath her ſenſes; and theſe muſt bee habitually exerciſed to diſcern good and evill, Heb. 5. ult.

In the Land of the living] That is, here on earth, (Pſal. 116. 9. Iſa. 38. 11. where men live, and I my ſelf have not only a portion of life with them, but a promiſe of many good things beſides. To blame therefore was good David, when hee ſaid in his halte, All men are lyars, Prophets, and all who had promiſed him the Kingdome, Pſal. 116. 10. But the beſt have their paſſions; which they daily outgrow, and adde to their faith patience, 2 Pet. 1. 5, 6. And albeit as Calvin here noteth, every ones caſe is not like Davids, who had particular promiſes concerning this life, beyond many other faithfull perſons; yet, becauſe according to every mans faith it ſhall bee unto him, let us all likewiſe truſt in God, as wee are all hereupon exhorted in the next words.

Verſ. 14. Wait on the Lord] Expecta, expecta. See how earneſt good David is with himſelf and others; for hee knew mens dullneſſe, and the difficulty of the duty. Religious men find it more eaſie to bear evill, than to wait till the promiſed good bee enjoyed, Heb. 10. 36. the ſpoyling of their goods required patience; but this, more than ordinary. Let our diſtance from God, our dependance upon him, and our undone condition without him, bee but conſidered; and wee ſhall bee the willinger to wait, yea to want, and go without ſome things, that we are but too much ſet upon.

Bee of good courage] Be confirmed, hold faſt, play the man (as the Seventy have it, and the Apoſtle uſeth the ſame word, 1 Cor. 16. 13.) and let not the big words of thine enemies make thee to caſt away thy confidence, which hath ſo great recompence of reward.

And hee ſhall ſtrengthen thy heart] Or, let thine heart be confirmed, chear up, hold out faith and patience.

Wait I ſay on the Lord] i. e. De die in diem expecta, wait ſtill; do it from one day to another. God is a free agent, neither is it fit for us to ſend for him by a Poſt. Many of his promiſes bear a long date, but they are ſure and infallible. Wait therefore, and why? See Habakkuk 2. 3. with the Note.

PSAL. XXVIII.

VErſ. 1. Unto thee will I cry O Lord my Rock] That thou mayeſt grant mee what I begged ſo earneſtly of thee in the former Pſalm eſpecially, verſ. 4. One thing have I deſired of the Lord, that I will ſeek after, &c. For this Pſalm is of the ſame ſubject with that; and ſeemeth to have been made much about the ſame time; viz. after that David had twice ſpared Sauls life, 1 Sam. 24. 4, 5, 6, &c. & 26. 12, 21. Only here he expreſſeth himſelf, not as if hee had been a private perſon, and in daily danger of his life; but as deſtined and deſigned to the Kingdome by Almighty God, to whom therefore hee prayeth for himſelf and the people, and againſt their implacable enemies, with ſo great confidence, as that he preſently praiſeth him for his requeſt obtained, verſ. 6.

Bee not ſilent to mee] Ceaſe not, as deaf, from mee. If God ſeem to be deaf to us, wee muſt cry the louder; that having prepared our hearts by ſuch a ſeeming ſilence, hee may cauſe his ears to hear, Pſal. 10. 17. which he will not fail to do, when once wee ſet up our note, and make bitter moan.

Leſt if thou bee ſilent, &c.] Here are his reaſons to help his hope to bee heard. God is well pleaſed that wee argue it out with him in prayer.

Like them that go down into the Pit] Or, dirty dungeon, that is, the grave; or, as Kimchi, leſt I bee as the wicked, that go down to Hell. The Righteous periſheth, Iſa. 57. 1. that is, the World looks upon them as loſt.

Verſ. 2. When I lift up my hand] An ordinary geſture in prayer; expreſſing faith (for they held out their open hands, as craving beggars with the Palmes upward, 1 King. 8. 22.) and helping fervency, whilſt hands and heart went up together to God in the heavens, Lam. 3. 40. Preces fundimus, cælum tundimus, miſericordiam extorquemus, &c.

Toward thy holy Oracle] Called Debbir, becauſe there-hence God ſpake and gave anſwer. Toward this (a type of Chriſt, the Verbum eſſentiale) David lifteth up his hands, that ſo might bee as a Ladder, whereby his prayer might get up to Heaven. The Devill alſo (who delighteth to be Gods ape, but for mans miſchief) gave oracles at Delphos and elſewhere, but vaſa & mendacia, doubtfull and lying; as to Croeſus, Pyrrhus, others. But the eternity of Iſrael cannot lye, 1 Sam. 15. every word of God is pure, hee is a ſhield to them that put their truſt in him, Prov. 30. 5.

Verſ. 3. Draw mee not away with the wicked] Who ſeek to draw mee away from my ſetled purpoſe of attending upon thee ἀπερισπάστως, 1 Cor. 7. 35. and are therefore likely to be drawn away by thee to Execution, as Malefactors are drawn, hanged and quartered (there wanteth but a hurdle, a horſe, and a halter, ſaid Belknapp to do mee right) as Siſera was drawn by God to the River Kiſhon to be ruined, Judg. 4. 7. Ducunt volentem fata, nolentem trahunt. Sen.

Which ſpeak peace to their Neighbours, but miſchief is in their hearts] Saul and his Courtiers are here noted. Perſ.

Aſtutam vapido ſervantes pectore vulpem.

The Florentine Secretary (Machiavell) was not born of many years after; but the Devill was as great a Maſter then as afterwards; and David oft complaineth of it.

Verſ. 4. Give them according to their deeds] God loveth to retaliate; and David out of a publick and prophetick ſpirit (not from private revenge, or troubled affections) taketh thus upon him to imprecate,

And according to the wickedneſſe of their endeavours] They were therefore old habituated irreclaimable ſinners whom he thus curſed, And againſt ſuch, this and ſuch like imprecations are ſtill in force.

Give them after the works of their hands] Becauſe they regard not the works of thine hands, Verſ. 5. Par pari, ſaith Aben-Ezra here.

Verſ. 5. Becauſe they regard not the works of the Lord] that is, ſaith Kimchi, the worſhip of God they care not for; but follow the vanities of the World. Or, the works of God in heaven and earth; the conſideration whereof is a part of Gods worſhip. Or, they regard not the works of the Lord, that is, the firſt making: nor The operation of his hands] that is, the preſent diſpoſing of his Creatures, either by way of mercy, or judgement, whereof theſe brutiſh perſons make no obſervation at all, Pſa. 92. 5, 6, 7. Iſa. 5. 12. particularly they neither regard my preſent affliction, Amos 6. 6. nor beleeve my future exaltation to the Throne, as God hath promiſed mee; but oppoſe it all they can; and would gladly prevent it, which yet they cannot, but will bee found fighters againſt God.

Hee ſhall deſtroy them, and not build them up] Deſtroy them in this World, and not build them up in the World to come, ſay the Rabbines. Or, as others, he ſhall break them down, as men do old rotten ruinous houſes, and never more repair or rebuild them. Non poteſt Deus non perdere judiciis ſuis, qui non erudiuntur documentis. Junius They that will not be ruled, ſhall bee ruined. See 1 Sam. 2. 25.

Verſ. 6. Bleſſed bee the Lord, becauſe hee hath heard, &c.] God will one day turn the prayers of his people into praiſes. David Verſ. 1. had ſaid, Bee not ſilent to mee; here, Bleſſed bee God, for hee hath anſwered mee. So Jehoſaphat had his Bacah ſoon turned into Berachah, 2 Chron. 20. 18, 19. See Davids Syllogiſm; and mark his Concluſion, Pſal. 66. 18, 19, 20. not according to the rules of Logick, but better.

Verſ. 7. The Lord is my ſtrength and my ſhield] So that I am furniſhed and harneſſed within and without. See Pſal. 18. 2.

My heart truſted in him, and I am helped] Faith ſubſtantiateth things not yet ſeen, Heb. 11. 1. it altereth the Tenſes, ſaith One, and putteth the future into the preſent tenſe, as here.

My heart greatly rejoyceth, &c.] Inwardly I am glad, warmed at heart; and outwardly chearfull, even unto ſinging. And what will David ſing? See his Ditty in the next words.

Verſ. 8. The Lord is their ſtrength] Not mine only, as verſ. 7. but the ſtrength of all and every one of the holy Community, of true Chriſtians, partakers of Chriſts unction, of his Spirit.

Verſ. 9. Save thy people] The Church muſt ſhare in our prayers.

And bleſſe thine inheritance] Which cannot but be dear to thee.

Feed them alſo] For they are but ill-favouredly fed by Saul.

Lift them up] Over all their enemies, as Pſal. 27. 6.

PSAL. XXIX.

VErſ. 1. Give unto the Lord] Verbo & confeſſione, ſaith Kimchi; By word and confeſſion, as Joſh. 7. 19. Jer. 13. 16. acknowledge him the King immortal, inviſible, &c. and your ſelves his Vaſſals; as did thoſe three beſt Emperours, Conſtantine, Theodoſius, and Valentinian. Cedite, colite, ſtep back, ſtoop, humble and tremble before this dread Soveraign of the World; bear an awefull reſpect to the divine Majeſty, the High thunderer, the great Wonder-worker; unleſſe you will come ſhort of brute beaſts, and dumb Creatures.

O yee Mighty] Heb. Yee ſons of the Mighty, Grandees and Potentates, who are readieſt to rob God of his glory, and being tumour'd up by their worldly wealth and greatneſſe, to deem or rather dream themſelves demy Gods; ſuch as may do what they liſt, as not accountable to any mortall. The Septuagint render it, O yee Sons of Ramms. Theſe Bel-weathers ſhould not caſt their noſes into the air, and carry their creſt the higher, becauſe the ſhepheard hath beſtowed a bell upon them more than upon the reſt of the flock.

Give unto the Lord] Give, give, give; This ſheweth how unwilling ſuch are, uſually to give God his right; or to ſuffer a word of exhortation to this purpoſe.

Glory and ſtrength] By aſcribing all to him, caſting down your Crowns at his feet, ſetting up his ſincere ſervice where-ever ye have to do, &c.

Nominatiſſimam & celeberrimam. Jun.

Verſ. 2. Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name] Which yet you cannot do; for his name is above all praiſe, Pſal. 148. 13. but you muſt aim at it. The Rabbines obſerve that Gods holy name is mentioned eighteen ſeverall times in this Pſalm; that great men eſpecially may give him the honour of his name, that they may ſtand in awe and not ſin, that they may bring preſents to Him, who ought to be feared, and thoſe alſo the very beſt of the beſt, ſith He is a great King, and ſtandeth much upon his ſeniority, Mal. 1. 14.

Worſhip the Lord in the beauty of Holineſs] Or, In his glorious Sanctuary; therefore glorious, becauſe there they might ſee Gods face, and hear his voice in his ordinances. Away therefore with your ſuperſtitions, and will-worſhips; and bring your gifts to his beautifull Sanctuarie; for no where elſe will he receive them. Send a Lamb to this Ruler of the earth, Iſa. 16. 1. as an homage-penny.

Verſ. 3. The voice of the Lord is upon the waters] Thunder is here called (and fitly) the voice of the Lord (being brought as one inſtance of thoſe many other glorious works of his in nature) becauſe it comes from him alone. Naturall cauſes there are aſſigned of it; but we muſt not ſtick in them, as Epicurus and his Hoggs would have us. The beſt Philoſophy in this behalf, is to hear God Almighty by his thunder ſpeaking unto us from Heaven, as if hee were preſent; and to ſee him in his lightenings, as if he caſt his eyes upon us, to behold what we had been doing. This voice of the Lord is fitly inſtanced as an evidence of the divine power and Majeſty; becauſe it is ſo dreadfull, even to the greateſt Atheiſts; as it was to Cains Caligula that potent Emperour, ready to run into a mouſe-hole in a time of thunder.

The ancient Romans ſaid Deus tonat, Deus fulgurat, for which now Tonat, fulgurat.

Sueton.

The God of glory thundereth] And men quake before him; as worms at ſuch a time wriggle into the corners of the earth. And yet your dive-dappers duck not at this rattle in the air, though they do at a farre ſmaller matter: So, many tremble not at Gods terrible threats, that yet are afraid of a penall ſtatute.

The Lord is upon many waters] viz. When he thundreth; De aquis pendulis loquitur, ſaith Vatablus; He ſpeaketh of the waters in the clouds, which are many, and of great force, as appeared in the generall deluge, and doth ſtill appear by that infinite inundation of rain that followeth upon the thunder claps. Some render it, The Lord, or, the voice of the Lord is above many waters, i. e. above the loud roaring of many waters, which is even drowned by the thunder.

Validum eſt & vehemens tonitrus. Var. Beza.

Verſ. 4. The voice of the Lord is powerfull] So that it ſhaketh heaven and earth, Heb. 12. 26. Cogitent ergo Principes quantum infra Deum ſubſidant, &c. Let thoſe that think themſelves ſome great buſineſſe, conſider Gods infinite power, putting forth it ſelf in thunders, and tempeſts, and they will ſoon bee creſt-fain.

The voice of the Lord is full of Majeſty] Heb. In Majeſty; it is magnificall, and immutable immutable, though ſome fools have attempted to imitate it (as a certain King of Egypt, and Caligula the Emperour) by certain Engines and devices.

Verſ. 5. The voice of the Lord breaketh the Cedars] i. e. The thunder; and thoſe things that either go before it, or follow it, as lightenings, thunderbolts, ſtorm, tempeſt, &c. breaking and turning up by the roots huge trees.

The Lord breaketh the Cedars of Lebanon] Which are the talleſt, thickeſt and moſt durable of any place, in the habitable World. What a ſhame is it then that our hard hearts break not, yeeld not, though thunder-ſtruck with the dreadfull menaces of Gods mouth? Corripimur ſed non corrigimur, &c. A fearfull caſe. Let the tall Cedars ſee to it. Nam per Cedros intelligit ἀλληγορικῶς quicquid eſt eximium in mundo; Where is that hammer of the Nations Nebuchadnezzar? that terrour of the World, Tamerlan, &c.? Are they not broken in pieces as a Potters Veſſell?

Verſ. 6. Hee maketh them alſo to skip like a Calf] Young living Creatures are full of motion. God by his thunder and earthquake thereupon (for ſo the Hebrews underſtand it) maketh not only thoſe huge trees, the ſplinters of them, to flie up into the air, but alſo the Mountaines whereupon they grow, to skip and jump out of their places, and aloft from their center.

Lebanon and Sirion, &c.] Or, Hermon, two known Mountaines.

Verſ. 7. The voice of the Lord divideth, (Heb. cutteth out) the flames of fire] Deut. 5. i. e. The lightening which the thunder is ſaid to ſtrike, or cut out, becauſe it cauſeth them to ſhoot and glide; it immediately followeth one flaſh, and goeth before another; diſperſing and darting them hither and thither.

Verſ. 8. The voice of the Lord ſhaketh the Wilderneſſe] i. e. The beaſts abiding in the Wilderneſſes, the moſt ſavage creatures, thoſe that lye in woods, and are moſt fearleſſe of men, are put to pain by thunder, and made to travell with trembling.

The Lord ſhaketh the wilderneſſe of Kadeſh] Thorough which the Iſraelites paſſed into Canaan, Num. 13. 27. the beaſts whereof were cruel, Deut. 8. 25. & 32. 10. Beza paraphraſeth, & Arabum teſqua ſuccutit, it ſhaketh the Cottages of the Arabians. Animalia quantumvis horrifica. Junius.

Verſ. 9. The voice of the Lord maketh the Hindes to calve] Which they naturally do not, without a great deal of difficulty, Job 39. 4, 5, 6. See the Note there.

And diſcovereth the Forreſts] By driving the beaſts into their dennes, baring the Forreſts of their leaves and fruits, turning up trees by the roots, and ſo making a clear proſpect thorough woods and groves, as one phraſeth it.

And in his Temple doth every one ſpeak of his glory] Heb. Every one, or, every whit of it ſaith Glory; Every godly man obſerving his dreadfull thunder, and other his ſtupendious works, ſaith, Glory bee to God on high. Some conceive that this Pſalm was appointed by David to be ſung in the Temple in time of thunder; which is not unlikely. There are that make God to be the Nominative caſe to the Verb ſpeaketh, and render it thus; And in his Temple, or Palace, doth hee utter all his glory. As if the Pſalmiſt ſhould ſay; Much of his glory God uttereth in his thunder; but all in his Temple. For whatſoever there he ſpeaketh with his mouth, he fulfilleth it with his hand, Pſal. 115. 3. & 119. 91. & 33. 9. Iſa. 44. 26. See a like collation of Gods works and word, with a prælation of this above thoſe, Pſal. 19. 1--7. Pſal. 111. 7. Moller. Tremel.

Verſ. 10. The Lord ſitteth upon the flood] Hee reigned in that generall deluge in Noahs dayes, Gen. 6. & 7. and doth ſtill over thoſe horrible inundations that follow upon thunder and ſtrong-tempeſts; ruling that raging Element, and governing all by his providence, and ſoveraign power.

Yea the Lord ſitteth King for ever] And over all; therefore all, even the Mightieſt ſhould give him glory, as Verſ. 1.

Verſ. 11. The Lord will give ſtrength unto his people] To bear up their hearts in time of thunder, or other terrible occurrences. In tempore tonitru. Aben Ezra.

The Lord will bleſſe his people with peace] Pace omnimoda. With peace internall, externall, eternall; for godlineſſe hath the promiſes of both lives, of proſperity, ſafety and welfare, both of ſoul and body.

PSAL.

PSAL. XXX.

A Pſalm and ſong] i. e. An holy hymn, firſt framed in meeter; then ſung with mens voices.

At the dedication of the houſe of David] Either when it was new built, 2 Sam. 5. 11, confer Deut. 20. 5. Neh. 12. 27. ſaying as He once,

Jamq, meos dedo tibi, Princeps, jure Penates,
Tu mihi jus dederas, poſſe vocare meos.

God ſo loveth his people, that their walls are ever in his ſight, Iſa. 49. 16. they ſhould therefore have holineſſe to the Lord written upon them, Zach. 14. ſanctified they ſhould be by the word and prayer, 1 Tim. 4. 5. Or elſe, after he had defiled it by his Adultery, with Bathſheba, and Abſolom had much more defiled it by his abominable inceſt and other villanies, See 2 Sam. 20. 3.

Verſ. 1. I will extoll thee O Lord, for thou haſt lifted mee up] De puteo peccati cænoſo, ſaith Kimchi, out of the miry pit of ſin; or out of the ditch of deadly danger, ſay others. Therefore I will extol thee, that is, I will have high and honourable conceptions of thee. I will alſo do mine utmoſt, both by words and deeds, that thou mayeſt be acknowledged by others to bee as thou art, the great and mighty Monarch of the whole World.

And haſt not made my foes to rejoyce over mee] Beſides all former victories, Abſolom and Sheba were lately ſlain.

Verſ. 2. I cryed unto thee] In ſome great ſickneſſe, ſay ſome, that befell him about the time that he built his houſe of Cedar, 2 Sam. 5. that he might not be overjoyed, and take a ſurfeit: Or rather, when by my ſons riſing up againſt mee, I was likely to have loſt my ſtate and Kingdome.

And thou haſt healed mee] That is, helped mee, as Jon. 2. 6. thou haſt reſtored and re-eſtabliſhed mee in my Kingdome. Kimchi ſenſeth it thus, Thou haſt delivered my ſoul from Hell, though in this World thou haſt grievouſly afflicted my body.

Verſ. 3. O Lord thou haſt brought up, &c.] Here he ſaith the ſame again as before; the better to ſet forth the greatneſſe of the benefit, and ſo to excite himſelf to due thankfullneſſe. The uttermoſt extremity of a calamity is to be acknowledged, after wee are delivered out of it, Iſa. 38. 10.

Thou haſt kept mee alive] Thou haſt reſcued mee from inſtant death; and this I look upon as a reſurrection from the dead.

Verſ. 4. Sing unto the Lord] Here he calleth in help to praiſe God, as holding himſelf too weak to do it alone. Publication of Gods praiſes ſhould be ſeconded by provocation of others to do the like. David thought one mouth too little to do it.

Chaſid. Pius, Benignus. O yee Saints of his] Or, O yee his mercifull ones, that having partaken of his mercy, are ready to impart the ſame to others; and not to pull up that bridge before them, that your ſelves have once gone over.

At the Remembrance (or memorial) of his holineſſe] That is, at his Tabernacle, ſay ſome; that his holineſſe, his grace and goodneſſe may be alwaies had in remembrance, ſay others; and that which he doth for us be carefully kept upon record.

Verſ. 5. For his anger endureth but a moment] Though it laſts all a mans life; for what's that to eternity? Invectum eſt quod vivimus & puncto minus. But it ſoon repenteth the Lord concerning his ſervants; whom, out of love diſpleaſed, hee correcteth for a ſhort braid, Iſa. 54. 7, 8. 2 Cor. 14. 17. Iſa. 26. 20. Heb. 10. 37. Tantillum, tantillum, adhuc puſillum. Bear up therefore, faint not, fret not.

Flebile principium melior fortuna ſequetur.

If our ſorrowes be long, they are light; if ſharper the ſhorter. The ſharp North East-wind never laſteth three dayes; nothing violent is permanent.

In his favour is life] Vita in voluntate, elſe wee ſhould dye in our ſins; but his favour never faileth. Kimchi here noteth that of thoſe thirteen attributes of God, Exod. 34. 7. twelve are mercy, and one only is anger. Joſeph for his thirteen years of of ſervitude and impriſonment, had fourſcore years freedome and preferment. Davids perſecution by Saul was but a moment to his following happineſſe, when once he came to the Kingdome.

Weeping may endure for a night] Diſeaſes and aches are worſt toward night. At even-tide loe there is trouble; but afore morning it is gone, Iſa. 17. 14. mourning laſteth but till morning, and then departeth, as did Lots two Angels. The morning of the Reſurrection howſoever, ſhall put a period to all our miſeries, and make a plentifull amends.

But joy commeth in the morning] Heb. Singing; flebilibus modis modus addibebitur. God turneth his peoples ſighing into ſinging, their muſing into muſick, tears into triumph, wringing of hands into clapping of hands for joy, &c. And as there is a viciſſitude of nights and dayes; ſo of croſſes and mercies to Gods people, whiles they are in this vale of miſery, and valley of tears. God checkereth his providences (ſaith One) white and black; hee ſpeckleth his work, as is ſet forth by thoſe ſpeckled horſes among the Myrtle-trees, Zech. 1. 8. Mercies and Croſſes are interwoven. This World is called a valley of tears, or as ſome render it, of Mulberry-trees, Pſal. 84. 6. Betwixt them both, they may make up an emblem of the Saints condition here. Tears are moiſt, Mulberries grow in dry places. Gods people have their interchanges of joyes and ſorrows, whilſt here. See in this and the following verſes the circle God goes in with them. David was afflicted and delivered, in this verſe; In the next hee grew wanton. Then he is troubled again, Verſ. 7. cryeth again, 8, 9. God turneth his mourning into mirth again, 11, 12.

Verſ. 6. And in my proſperity I ſaid] Or, In my tranquillity, then it was that he was overgrown with ſecurity, as was alſo Job, chap. 29. 18, 19, 20. See the Note there; and Job 9. 18. How many have burnt their wings about Jobs candle? chap. 29. 3. ſaith One; Oh the hazzard of honour! damnage of dignity! how ſoon are wee broken upon the ſoft pillow of eaſe? Lunaticks, when the Moon is declining and in the wain, are ſober enough; but when full, more wild and exorbitant. Flies ſettle upon the ſweeteſt perfumes when cold; ſo do ſin and Satans temptations on the beſt hearts, when diſſolved and diſ-ſpirited by proſperity; Watch therefore. Adam in Paradiſe was overcome, when Job on the dung-hill was a Conquerour.

I ſhall never bee moved] Exceſſere metum mea jam bona. David by miſreckoning of a point, miſſ the haven, and had almoſt run upon the Rocks. How apt are the holieſt to bee proud and ſecure? even as worms and waſps, eat the ſweeteſt apples and fruits. What reaſon had David to promiſe himſelf more than ever God promiſed him, immunity from the Croſſe? Did he think (as Dionyſius afterwards did, but was clearly confuted ſoon after) that his Kingdome, and with it proſperity, was tyed unto him with cords of Adamant? what though he ſat quietly now at Jeruſalem, 2 Sam. 11. 1. free from fear of enemies? and could find time to look and luſt after his neighbours wife, would this alwaies hold, thought he? and could not God ſet up his own darling Abſolom, to put him to trouble? No; David ſaid in his proſperity, Non vacillabo. I ſhall never be moved; and why?

Ælian. [var. hiſt. lib. 2.

Verſ. 7. Lord, by thy favour thou haſt made my mountain, &c.] Yea, but there is no mountain ſo ſtrong that may not bee moved, if not removed with an Earthquake. Is it not as eaſie with God to blaſt an Oak, as trample a muſhrome? And what though God in his favour had ſetled ſtrength to Davids mountain? what though he had conſtituted and eſtabliſhed it ſure as Mount-Zion (for there was Davids Arx, & aula regia) which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever? Pſal. 125. 1. yet by a turn of his countenance only, God can ſoon diſ-ſweeten all his enjoyments, and plunge him into a deplorable condition.

Thou didſt hide thy face, and I was troubled] i. e. Thou didſt ſuſpend the actual influence and communication of thy grace (ſhe Chaldee calleth it Shechinah, the divine preſence) and I was aſtonied. The life of ſome creatures conſiſteth in the Sun; ſo doth that of the Saints in the light of Gods countenance. And as in an Eclipſe of the Sun there is a drooping in the whole frame of nature; ſo when God hideth his face, the good ſoul laboureth and languiſheth. And as none look at the Sun but when it is in the eclipſe; ſo neither prize we Gods loving countenance, till we have loſt it.

Verſ. 8. I cryed to thee, O Lord, &c.] For why? I ſee not all that while that I was deserted, in a kind of Hell above-ground. Hæc tentatio initium aliquod & gustus fuit illorum inenarrabilium dolorum quos impii sentiunt in omni æternitate. David felt himself now in the suburbs of Hell, as it were; and doth therefore set up as loud a cry after God, as once Micah did after his mawmets, Judg. 18. and farre greater cause he had.

And to the Lord I made supplication] He knew that the same hand alone must cure him that had wounded him; neither was Gods favour recoverable, but by humble confession, and hearty prayer. Some think to glide away their groans with games, and their cares with cards; to bury their terrours and themselves in wine and sleep. They run to their musick with Saul, to building of Cities with Cain, when cast out of Gods presence, &c. sed hæret lateri lethalis arundo; but as the wounded Deer that hath the deadly arrow sticking in his side, well he may frisk up and down for a time, but still he bleedeth, and will ere long fall down dead: so it is with such as seek not comfort in God alone, as make not supplication to Him for Him; as return not to God who hath smitten them, nor seek the Lord of Hosts, Isa. 9. 13.

Vers. 9. What profit is there in my blood, &c?] i. e. In my life, say some, q. d. To what purpose have I lived, sith Religion is not yet settled? In my death (say others, and better) a violent death especially, and out of thy favour? Now all beleevers have ever abhorred such a kind of death, before they were reconciled to God, and had a true feeling of his grace. Divines.

Shall the dust praise thee, &c?] See Psal. 6. 6. with the Note.

Vers. 10. Hear O Lord, and have mercy upon me] When faith hath once said to God what it hath to say, it will wait for a good answer, relying on his mercy, and expecting relief from the Lord, as here David doth; looking in the mean whiles, through the anger of his corrections, to the sweetnesse of his loving countenance; as by a Rain-bow we see the beautifull image of the Suns light, in the midst of a dark and watery cloud.

Vers. 11. Thou hast turned from me my mourning, &c.] Sustulisti luctum, & lætitiam attulisti. See the Note on vers. 5.

Ver. 12. To the end that my glory may sing praise to thee] i. e. That my tongue, oyled from an heart enlarged, may exalt thee according to my bounden duty, and thine abundant desert. A good tongue that watcheth all opportunities to glorifie God, and edifie others, is certainly a mans great glory; but an evill tongue is his foul shame. Basil expoundeth glory by τὸ πνεῦμα the spirit or soul. The Chaldee Paraphrast, Laudabunt te honorabiles mundi, The glorious ones of the World shall praise thee.

O Lord my God, I will give thanks unto thee for ever] Epiphonematica & pathetica conclusio, Davidi ex summis calamitatibus erepto familiaris. He concludeth as he began, ingaging his heart to everlasting thankfullnesse; and therein becoming a worthy pattern to all posterity.

PSAL. XXXI.

[A Psalm of David] made, say Vatablus and others, at that time when Saul pursued David in the Wildernesse of Maon, 1 Sam. 23. 24. But by many circumstances and passages of this Psalm it appeareth more probable, that it was, as the former, composed when Absolom was up, 2 Sam. 15. 10. &c. See vers. 11, 12, 22. of this Psalm, with 2 Sam. 17. 24, 27. & 19. 33. Joseph. Antiq. lib. 7. cap. 9.

Vers. 1. In thee O Lord do I put my trust] Hic Psalmus varia mixtus & magna affectuum vicissitudine insignis est, This Psalm is strangely mixt and made up of many and diverse passions and petitions; according to the change of times and estate. In the time of affliction he prayeth, in the time of consolation he praiseth the Lord, Eccles. 7. 15. In these three first verses is little said, but what had been before said, and is already opened.

Let me never be ashamed] i. e. Repulsed, worsted, defeated.

In thy Righteousnesse] And not according to mine own Righteousnesse, saith Kimchi, or according to thy faithfullnesse.

Vers. 2. Bow down thine ear to me, deliver me] This repetition of his petition is no vain babbling, as Mat. 6. 9. but an effect and an evidence of greatest earnestnesse, as Mat. 26. 44.

For an house of defence] Where the enemy can as little hurt mee, as when I was in the Hold, 1 Sam. 22. 4.

Vers. 3. For thou art my Rock and my fortresse] Such places David had been forced to fly to; but stil he trusted in God.

Lead mee and guide mee] Duc me, & deduc me. A Metaphor from Captaines and Generalls, who lead on their armies with greatest art and industry. Vatab.

Vers. 4. Pull mee out of the net] That noted net, as the Hebrew hath it; Nam Zu denotat rem notam omnibus, saith Kimchi. David was not caught in it, but the enemies presumed he would be; so selling the hide before the beast was taken, as did likewise the proud Spaniards, when coming against England in eighty eight, they triumphed before the victory, and sang,

Tu qua Romanas sæviſti temnere leges,
Hiſpano diſces ſubdere colla jugo.

But blessed be God, the net brake, and wee escaped, Psal. 124. 7.

For thou art my strength] As a tree is strongest at the root, and a branch or bough next the trunck or stock; and the further it groweth out from thence, the smaller and weaker it groweth too: So the nearer the Creature is to God, the stronger; and on the contrary.

Vers. 5. Into thine hand I commit my spirit] So did our Saviour, so did St. Stephen, and diverse of the dying Martyrs with these very words, most apt and apposite surely for such a purpose. But what a wretch was that Huberus who dyed with these words in his mouth, I yeeld my goods to the King, my body to the grave, and my soul to the Devill.

Thou hast redeemed] And so hast best right unto mee.

O Lord God of truth] I know whom I have trusted.

Vers. 6. I have hated them that regard lying vanities] i. e. Idols, or ought else besides the living God, who giveth us all things richly to injoy, 1 Tim. 6. 17. See Jon. 2. 8. with the Note. Vanitates vanitatis, Vatablus rendreth it, and telleth us, that some understand it of Astrology. R. David doth so in this Note of his upon the Text, Astrologos & incantatores in fuga mea non consului, sed in Domino & prophetis ejus confisus sum; I have not consulted Astrologers and Soothsayers in my trouble, but have trusted to the Lord and his Prophets.

Vers. 7. I will be glad and rejoyce] In the midst of trouble faith will find matter of joy; as extracting abundance of comfort in most desperate distresses from the precious promises, and former experiences.

Thou hast known my soul in adversity] God knows our souls best, Psal. 1. 6. and wee know him best, in adversity. Isa. 63. 16. the Church thought she should know him, in the midst of all his austerities.

Vers. 8. Thou hast not shut mee up, &c.] i. e. Not given mee into their power. See Psal. 27. 12.

Thou hast set my feet in a large room] So that I can freely and fearlesly go in and out. See Psal. 25. 15.

Vers. 9. Have mercy upon mee O Lord] Antiquum obtine, Do now Lord, as thou hitherto hast done.

For I am in trouble] Overwhelmed with the terrours of death, and ready to sink, animus mihi pendet, I know not what to do.

Mine eye is consumed with grief] Computruit facies mea, mine eye (alias vultus, vel faciei) is grown rotten, or worm-eaten.

Yea my soul, and my belly] Belly may be taken for the whole body, which was pined away and infeebled with pensivenesse. Kimchi by soul understandeth the naturall appetite after meat, and by belly, the digestion, both which were decayed.

Vers. 10. For my life is spent with grief, &c.] Which also wasteth the thread of life, and soon snappeth it in sunder, 2 Cor. 7. 10. See Prov. 27. 22, 23. with the Notes.

My strength faileth] So that I stumble and stagger (alias, my)

Because of mine iniquity] Or, My misery, &c. and the Scripture often confoundeth the names of the cause and of the effects.

And my bones are consumed] Heb. Moth-eaten.

Vers. 11. I was a reproach among all mine enemies] Such as Shimei, who now insulted lustily; Leoni mortuo vel mus insultat.

But especially among my neighbours] My near-allies and friends, such as Absolom and Ahitophel; these most vexed mee.

And a fear to mine acquaintance] It is no new thing that those which should most love men, do sometimes, either for fear or flattery of others, make least account of them.

They that see mee without (or, in the streets) flee from mee] To shift for themselves, fish to own mee whom they could not help, was bootlesse, and besides perilous.

Vers. 12. I am forgotten, as a dead man out of mind] How soon dead men are forgotten, even by those that promise to remember them longest of all; experience teacheth; trust not to protestations of best friends in that case.

I am like a broken Vessel] Of which there is no further use, or esteem.

Vers. 13. For I have heard the slander of many] Or, as Calvin, Mollerus, and others render it, Magnorum, of the great ones, such as take counsel (so it followeth here) which the Vulgar seldome do; and their tongues oft are no slander, as we say.

Fear was on every side] Magor missabib, Pashur new name and doom, Jer. 20. 3, 4. But good Davids condition at this time; without were fightings, within were feares.

While they took counsel together against mee] See 2 Sam. 16. 20. where we have an exposition of this verse.

Vers. 14. But I trusted in thee, O Lord] In this distresse I acted my faith upon thy power and promises; this was right, and that which God aimed at; for we can no way more honour him. Hence it is that he is very jealous of our trust; neither can he endure that any Idoll of jealousie should be set up in our hearts.

I said, thou art my God] In nearest relation, and dearest affection, whatever befalleth mee.

Vers. 15. My times are in thy hand] Both the time of my abode on earth, and all those various occurrences of that time; all is predetermined by Thee; particularly how long I shall suffer, and when I shall be delivered. See 1 Chron. 29. 30. Job. 7. 30.

Deliver mee from the hand of mine enemies] Oh command deliverances for mee, for thou canst easily do it. And here observe how David riseth in his requests; He laid the Covenant for a foundation, and then he well knew he might be bold to ask any thing.

Vers. 16. Make thy face to shine, &c.] Which by reason of the clouds of affliction clustering about mee, I cannot for present perceive. See the Notes on Psal. 4. 6. & 30. 7.

Save mee. &c.] i. e. Deliver mee out of these dangers.

Vers. 17. Let mee not bee ashamed] i. e. Disappointed of my hopes.

Let the Wicked bee ashamed] For they call not upon God, but shame those that do, Psa. 14. 6.

Let them bee silent in the grave] Let their big-spoken mouthes be stopped, with a spade full of mould.

Vers. 18. Let the lying lips bee put to silence] Heb. The lips of lye, mendacium, or mendaces, as Jer. 9. 3, 5. Among the Persians it was ἄτιμον τὸ ψεύδεσθαι, held a base shame to tell a lye. Oh that it were so among Christians! when shall that golden age return, that the argument may again proposed, Sacerdos est, non fallet; Christianus est, non mentietur, Hee is a Minister, hee will not deceive, Hee is a Christian, therefore he will not lye?

Herod. in Clio Xenoph. Cyrop. Strab. lib. 15.

Which speak grievous things] Heb. An hard thing, dirum, & diuturnum dictum, durable and long-lasting reproaches, such as stick, and leave a scar, though the wound bee healed up. Revelation, Which would follow the Beast. Such mouthes shall one day speak for it, Jude 15.

Proudly and contemptuously] Heb. In pride and contempt. It is Pride that causeth contempt of others. Compare Prov. 8. 13. with Psal. 9. David elsewhere complaineth of

Vers.

Verſ. 19. Oh how great is thy goodneſſe] The Prophet venteth himſelf by way of exclamation, as finding it unſpeakable; fitter to be beleeved, than poſſible to be diſcourſed; words are too weak to utter it. What ſhall we ſay to theſe things? quoth that great Apoſtle, Rom. 8. 31.

Which thou haſt laid up] Heb. Hidden. Beſides that good which God worketh openly for his before the ſons of men, a great part of his wonderfull kindneſſe is hidden from the world, and in part alſo from themſelves, both in reſpect of the fountain, 1 Joh. 3. 1, 2. Col. 3. 3. the fullneſſe, 1 Cor. 2. 9. and the inward ſealing up thereunto, 1 Cor. 2. 11, 12. Rev. 2. 17. Prov. 14. 10.

For them that fear thee -- that truſt in thee] For faith muſt be actuated; and when we have ſuch a precious promiſe as this, we muſt ſuck and be ſatisfied, Iſa. 66. 11. put on to get the goodneſſe of God to work, which is done by beleeving. Catch hold, as David did, 1 Chron. 17. 23, 24, 25, 26. and make the utmoſt of Gods loving kindneſſe laid up in a promiſe; preſs it, and oppreſſe it, till the goodneſſe be expreſſed out of theſe breaſts of conſolation.

Verſ. 20. Thou ſhalt hide them in the ſecret of thy preſence] In the golden cabinet of thy gracious providence, where they ſhall bee as ſafe as if they were in Heaven.

Thou ſhalt keep them ſecretly in a Pavilion] A kind of ſpeech taken from Princes retiring-roomes, and withdrawing-chambers, which are ſacred places. Diodat.

From the ſtrife of tongues] From the Calumnies and contumelies of graceleſs tongue-ſmiters. The Arabick rendreth it, from the inſurrection of Tongues. Sedition is firſt in the tongue, and then in the hand; an unruly tongue ſetteth on fire, Jam. 3. But the Saints have a promiſe, that as no Weapon formed againſt them ſhall proſper; ſo every tongue that riſeth againſt them in judgement ſhall be condemned, Iſa. 54. 17.

Verſ. 21. Bleſſed be the Lord] This ſhould always be in a Chriſtians mouth, as Deo gratias was in Auſtines. He can never want matter, and ſhould therefore ever finde an heart.

For he hath ſhewed me his marvellous kindneſs] Mirificavit bonitatem ſuam, hath been farre better to me than my hopes.

In a ſtrong City] In Mahanaim, 2 Sam. 17. 27. where it is likely he made this, and ſome other Pſalms.

Verſ. 22. For I ſaid in my haſte, I am cut off, &c.] A frightful and ſinful ſaying doubtleſs, full of diffidence and deſpair. (See the like, Pſal. 116. 11. Job 9. 16. Judg. 13. 22. Pſal. 77. 3. Joh. 2. 4.) Thus he ſpake when he tremblingly fled, and was poſting away.

Nevertheleſs thou heardeſt the voyce of my ſupplication] A pitiful poor one though it were, and full of infirmity. God conſidereth whereof we are made; he taketh not advantages againſt his ſuppliants; it would be wide with them if he ſhould.

Verſ. 23. O love the Lord] Let not your haſty diſcontent beget in you hard thoughts of God, or heavie thoughts againſt your ſelves, as it hath done in me; but love him, truſt him, and he will do you right.

And plentifully rewardeth] Heb. repaieth abundantly, or with ſurpluſſage, in ſeipſo vel in ſemine ſuo. It may be rendred, Upon the remainder, and underſtood of the proud mans poſterity, wherein God will be ſure to bemeet with him.

Verſ. 24. Be of good courage, &c.] Bear up, be ſtout, and ſtedfaſt in the faith under trials. See Pſal. 27. 14. with the Note. Thus good courage cometh not but from the true love of God. Verſ. 23.

PSAL. XXXII.

A Pſalm of David, Maſchil] i. e. Giving inſtruction, or making prudent; for David here, out of his own experience, turneth Teacher, verſ. 7. and the leſſon that he layeth before his Diſciples is the Doctrin of Juſtification by Faith, that ground of true bleſſedneſs, Rom. 4. 6, 7. Docet igitur hic Pſalmus verè precioſus præcipuum & proprium fidei Chriſtiana caput, ſaith Beza, This moſt precious Pſalm inſtructeth us in the chief and principal point of Chriſtian Religion; and it differeth herein from the firſt Pſalm, that there are ſet forth the effects of Bleſſedneſs, but here, the cauſe; Quomodo etiam eſt Paulus cum Jacobo conciliandus, ſaith he.

Verſ. 1. Bleſſed is he whoſe tranſgreſſion is forgiven] The heavy burthen of whoſe treſpaſſes is taken off, as the word importeth, and he is looſed, eaſed, and lightned. Sin is an intollerable burden, Iſa. 1. 3. ſuch as preſſeth down, Heb. 12. 1. a burden it is to God, Am. 2. 13. to Chriſt it was, when it made him ſweat water and bloud; to the Angels, when it brake their backs, and ſunk them into Hell; to men, under whom the very earth groaneth, the Axeltree thereof is even ready to crack, &c. it could not bear Corah and his company, it ſpewed out the Canaanites, &c. O then the heaped up happineſs of a juſtified perſon, disburdened of his tranſgreſſions! The word here rendred tranſgreſſion ſignifieth Treachery, and wickedneſs with a witneſs. Aben-Ezra ſaith, David hereby intends his Sin with Bathſheba; and ſurely this Pſalm, and the one and fiftieth may ſeem to have been made upon the ſame occaſion, they are tuned ſo near together.

Whoſe ſin is covered] As excrements and ordure are covered, that they may not be an eye-ſore, or annoyance to any. Sin is an odious thing, the Devils drivell, or vomit, the corruption of a dead ſoul, the filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit. Get a cover for it therefore (ſc. Chriſts righteouſneſs, called a propitiation, or coverture, and raiment, Rev. 3. 18.) Ut ſic veletur, ne in judicio reveletur, that the ſhame of thy nakedneſs may not appear.

Verſ. 2. Bleſſed is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity] Let no man think this triplication of the ſame thing needleſſe or ſuperfluous; ſith the poor ſoul afflicted with ſenſe of ſin and fear of wrath, is not eaſily perſwaded of pardon; but when faith would lay hold on the promiſe, Satan rappeth her on the fingers, as it were, and ſeeks to beat her off. Beſides, by ſuch an emphaticall repetition and heap of words to one purpoſe, the great grace of God in pardoning mens ſin, is plainly and plentifully declared and celebrated; it being a mercy that no words, how wide ſoever, can ſufficiently ſet forth. By the word iniquity, ſome underſtand originall ſin, that peccatum peccans, as the Schooles call it, that παντοπρεμὲς common cauſe and impure ſeminary of all actuall diſobediences. Neither this, nor any of the fruites of it, doth the Lord impute, reckon, count, or think to the pardoned ſinner, 2 Cor. 5. 19. Cui non cogitat peccatum, ſo ſome render it, To whom he thinketh no ſin, that is, he reputeth or imputeth it not for a ſin he putteth it not into the reckoning, Iſa. 43. 25. & 48. 9, 11. the Bill or Bond is cancelled, Col. 2. 14. and there remaineth no action. Chriſt is our ſuerty, Heb. 7. 22. Now the ſuerty and debtour are in law reputed as one perſon. Chriſt is made ſin for us, that is, in our ſtead or place, that wee might be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him, 2 Cor. 5. ult.

And in whoſe ſpirit there is no guile] Sed ſincere & ſine dolo à ſuis peccatis reſipiſcit, & ad Dei miſericordiam ſe recipit. The juſtified are alſo ſanctified, 1 Cor. 6. 11. they hide not their ſins as Adam, thy neither excuſe nor extenuate what evills they have done, but think and ſpeak the worſt of their ſins; they lay load upon themſelves, they hate Hypocriſie and deteſt diſſimulation; it is a queſtion whether they do more deſire to be good, or abhorre to ſeem only to be ſo. B ſil, as he commendeth that ſentence of Plato, that ſeeming ſanctity is double iniquity; ſo hee juſtly condemneth that ſaying of Euripides; I had rather ſeem to bee good, than be ſo indeed. That maxim of Machiavel is the ſame for ſenſe, that vertue it ſelf ſhould not be ſought after, but only the appearance; becauſe the credit is an help, the uſe a cumber. The pardoned ſinner is ſanctified throughout, waſhed not only from his ſin (the guilt and filth of it) but his ſwiniſh nature alſo (the love and liking of it) he hath no mind to return to his vomit, or wallowing in the mire, ſaith R. Solomon here; he ſaith not Reſipiſcam & denuo peccabo, vel peccabo & reſipiſcam, as R. David ſenſeth it, I will repent, and then ſin again; or ſin again, and then repent. This he knoweth to be incompatible with faith unfeigned, and hope unfailable, 1 Tim. 1. 5. 1 Joh. 3. 3.

Verſ. 3. When I kept ſilence] i. e. Whileſt I through guile of ſpirit (for this leaven of Hypocriſie is more or leſſe in the beſt hearts, though it ſway not there) concealed my ſin, and kept the Devills counſel, contenting my ſelf with his anodines and falſe plaiſters. That old man-ſlayer knoweth well, that as ſin is the ſoules ſickneſſe, ſo confeſſion is the ſoules vomit; and that there is no way to purge the ſick ſoul, ſoul, but upwards. He therefore holdeth the lips cloſe, that the heart may not diſburden it ſelf. David by his perſwaſion, kept ſilence for a while, but that he found was to his ruthe; and if he had held ſo, it might have been to his ruine. Men, in pain of conſcience, will ſhark for eaſe, rather than ſue for pardon; as the Prodigall firſt joyned himſelf to a Citizen, then ate huſks, &c. before he would reſolve to return. Satan had firſt ſeduced David, and then gagg'd him, as it were, that he might keep ſilence. But then God took him, and ſet him, upon the rack, where he roared till he reſolved to confeſſe. And the like befell Bilney, Bainham, Whittle, and many other of the Martyrs, who having firſt yeelded, could never be at reſt within themſelves till they had publickly confeſſed their fault, and retracted their ſubſcriptions to thoſe Popiſh Articles.

My bones waxed old] i. e. My ſtrength waſted and wore away, I was in a pittifull plight, per febrim forſan, ſaith an expoſitour, by a feaver, poſſibly, the fruit of his inward affliction. So bitter and burdenſome is ſin cloaked, and cloſe kept.

Through my roaring all the day long] Like a wild beaſt, belluinos potius quam humanos gemitus & querimonias fudi, I rather roared to the enfeebling of my body, than repented to the eaſing of my conſcience. I cryed out for pain, but prayed not for pardon. As a Lyon in a ſnare roareth, as a bird in a gin fluttereth, ſo it fareth with Hypocrites under Gods hand (and with better men too ſometimes, and for a ſeaſon) but eſpecially in pangs of conſcience, they bellow like bulls in a net, or ſwine, when a ſticking; they beat the air with many brutiſh roarings and ragings, which avail them no more than if an Ox ſhould break out of the ſlaughter-houſe after the deadly blow given him; the ſting of conſcience ſtill remaineth. Jun.

Verſ. 4. For day and night thy hand was heavy upon mee] See what God can do when once he taketh a man to do. Day and night hee had ſinned againſt God; therefore day and night he ſuffereth; and glad he may be that he ſo ſcapeth, and is not forced to undergo an eternity of extremity. Some think that this Pſalm, and the ſixth, were made much about a time; when David was newly recovered of ſome grievous fit of ſickneſſe. It may be meant only of his inward terrours, or chiefly at leaſt; his body ſuffering by Sympathy, as having ſhared in his ſin.

My moiſture is turned into the drought of Summer] My naturall radicall moiſture, that oyl that maintaineth the lamp of life, is dryed up and become like a lump of clay; the vigour alſo and verdure of my ſoul is quelled and conſumed with the fire of thy fierce wrath. God will bring his beſt people to this, if they put him to it; that they ſhall find it to be the greateſt folly in the World, to buy the ſweeteſt ſin at ſo dear a rate.

Selah] I ſpeak it feelingly. O quantum tormentum, &c. O aridum & exhauſtum me præ mœſtitia, &c. O my pittifull condition! Vat.

Verſ. 5. I acknowledged my ſin unto thee] Though it were long firſt, yet thou broughteſt mee to it. The ſoul is ready to hang her comforts on every hedge, to ſhift and ſhark in every by-corner for comfort, rather than to repair to the right fountain. Lot ſhould have eſcaped to the Mountaines at firſt; but he would needs to Zoar; which yet was ſoon too hot to hold him; David ſhould have acknowledged his ſin ere this time; he ſhould ſpeedily have caſt up the poyſon he had ſwallowed down, before it got to the vitalls; but he had no mind to it, till he had taſted of the whip, and then he agnized his ſin unto the Lord, he put himſelf into the hands of juſtice, in hope of mercy. The properties or conditions of ſound Confeſſion are theſe, ſay the Schoolmen in this Tetraſtich.

Sit ſimplex, humilis confeſſio, pura, fidelis,
Atq; frequens, nuda & diſcreta, lubens, verecunda,
Integra, ſecreta, & lachrymabilis, acceleratq,
Fortis, & accuſans, & ſe punire parata.

And mine iniquity have I not hid] In confeſſion wee muſt ſhew the Lord the iniquity of our ſin, the filthineſſe of our leudneſſe, the abomination of our provocations, Rom. 7. 13. Wee muſt bring out our ſins (as they took the Veſſells of the Sanctuary, Ezra. 8. 34.) by number, and by weight; laying open how many tranſgreſſions are wrap'd up in our ſins, and their circumſtances. See for this, Levit. 26. 21.

I ſaid, I will confeſſe, &c. i. e. I reſolved and purpoſed ſo to do, but on that could could be done, thou forgaveſt, &c. Gods ear was in Davids heart, before his confeſſion could be in his tongue. So, at another time, he did but conceive a purpoſe to build God an houſe, and God rewarded it with the building and eſtabliſhing of Davids houſe, 2 Sam. 7.

Vel peccatum peccati. Utitur duobus vocabulis ad aggravandum peccatum ſuum. Kimchi.

And thou forgaveſt the iniquity of my ſin] The ſting and ſtain of it, the criminall and penall part of it, the worſt thing that was in it; not the fire only, but the filth that was in it; reſerving ſtill to thy ſelf a power of fatherly corrections, and medicinall miſeries. But the iniquity of ſin is wiped off by the ſponge of true confeſſion. Homo agnoſcit, Deus ignoſcit. Man no ſooner acknowledgeth the debt, but God croſſeth the Book. It is therefore good counſell that a Father giveth, Fac confitendo propitium, quem tacendo non facis neſcium, Confeſſe and find mercy; ſith by a ſenſeleſſe ſilence thou canſt not keep thy ſins from Gods knowledge of them. Let out that bad blood by opening a vein, that good health may enter.

As we ſay, terra pulveris, or cœnum luti.

Per miſerere mei, tollitur ira Dei.

Wot you what? (ſaid Henry the eighth to the Duke of Suffolk concerning Stephen Gardiner when he had confeſſed his Popery, for which he ſhould have been the morrow after ſent to the Tower) he hath confeſſed himſelf as guilty in this matter as his man, and hath with much ſorrow and penſiveneſſe ſued for my pardon. And you know what my nature and cuſtome hath been in ſuch caſes, evermore to pardon them that will not diſſemble, but confeſſe their fault, &c.

Act. & Mon. fol. 1177.

Selah] q. d. I ſpeak it joyfully, there being no ſuch matter of mirth in all the World, as the ſweet ſenſe of forgiveneſſe of ſin. O ſingularem (inquit David hic) Dei erga homines peccata ſua agnoſcentes gratiam & benevolentiam!

Verſ. 6. For this ſhall every one that is godly pray unto thee] For this, that thou haſt ſo graciouſly done for mee, the godly ſhall gladly perform theſe two duties; the prayer of faith, and the obedience of faith. As I have been an example to them of ſin (which is now my grief) ſo I ſhall be to them of good, and that's my comfort. Where note firſt, That every godly man is a praying man. God hath no dumb children in his houſe. Secondly, That ſuch will be making uſe of Gods dealing with others for their own inſtruction and comfort, For this. Thirdly, That they will obſerve the fitteſt times to make their addreſſes to God; as Courtiers watch their --molliſſima fandi Tempora

In a time when thou maieſt be found] i. e. In a time of need, ſay ſome, Pſal. 50. 15. Or, in a time of favour (as the Chaldee here hath it) Iſa. 55. 6. before the decree bring forth, Zeph. 2. 2. before the draw-bridge be taken up, the day of grace be expired, Joh. 7. 34. & 8. 21. Heb. 6. 6. Luk. 13. 29.

Surely in the floods of great Waters] In the greateſt of outward troubles, or inward perplexities.

They ſhall not come nigh unto him] ſc. To prejudice his eternall ſalvation; freed he ſhall be, if not from the ſmart, yet from the hurt of perſonall croſſes; and for publick calamities, he ſhall be delivered, if not from the common deſtruction, yet from the common diſtraction. Waſhed he may bee, as Paul was in the ſhipwrack, but not drowned with thoſe floods of great waters; be they never ſo great, they are bounded. Beſides, the godly man reſcipiſcit antequam ſuperveniant fluctus miſeriarum, as R. Obad. here noteth, repenteth before thoſe floods come upon him, and ſo redeemeth his own ſorrows. For he ſaith thus,

Verſ. 7. Thou art my hiding place, &c.] And therefore I being a pardoned perſon, ſhall be in ſafety under thy wings, Pſal. 91. per totum.

Thou ſhalt preſerve mee from trouble] Either from it, or in it; that I be not hurt by it. The godly, after one trouble muſt prepare for another; after one deliverance expect another. A company cometh, as ſhe ſaid.

Thou ſhalt compaſs mee about with ſongs] i. e. Plentifully furniſh mee with matter of praiſe, ita ut latus Peana canam. And like as in a lottery, at every prize the trumpet ſoundeth; ſo at every deliverance I will ſing aloud to thy glory. All my ſprings ſhall be in thee.

Verſ. 8. I will inſtruct thee and teach thee, &c.] No diſgrace is it then for great men to be teachers of others. Here we have a Prince preacher; ſuch as was alſo Salomon, George Prince of Anhalt, and others.

I will guide thee with mine eye] i. e. With my careful inſpection and overſight; I will ſee that thou profit in godlineſſe. The Chaldee hath it, I will counſell thee, and ſet mine eye upon thee for good. Thus Chriſt counſelled Peter with his eye, Luk. 22. 61. Miniſters muſt watch over their people, and ſee that all go right. Hence they are called Seers, Superintendents, Biſhops.

Verſ. 9. Be yee not as the horſe, or as the mule] David having according to the title Maſchil promiſed to teach, uſeth this preface to beſpeak attention: Be not uncounſellable, irreclaimeable, ſuch as Baſil complaineth of, qui neq; quid ſit verum ſcinnt, neq; ſuſtinent diſcere, who neither knew, nor would bee taught what was true, and fit to be practiſed. Of the Rhinoceros, ſome write, that ſlain he may be, caught he cannot be. Others, that he is animal animo indomito, a moſt untameable creature; for if he be taken, he preſently dyeth of ſullenneſſe. Such ſpirits we meet with not a few, who yet would take it in foul ſcorn to bee reckoned horſes, and Aſſes that have no underſtanding, neither will be taught any. To theſe the Pſalmiſt here ſaith, Ne obſtupeſcite, & obbrutеſcite ad exercitationes Dei, &c. Be not as horſe or mule, leſt ye be led thorough a fools Paradiſe into a true priſon. Bee not headlong, headſtrong, untameable, untractable, &c. The horſe and mule are inſtanced, as well known amongſt the Jews; and uſed to bee ridden on. Ad Evag. Epiſt. 10.

Which have no underſtanding] And yet the horſe knoweth his owner, &c. Strange things are reported of Bucephalus, and Julius Cæſars great horſe. Of the Egyptian Mamalukes horſes it is reported, that they were ſo docible, that at certain ſignes or ſpeeches of the rider, they would with their teeth reach him up from the ground a launce, an arrow, or ſuch like thing, and as if they had known the enemy, run upon him with open mouth, and laſh at him with their heeles; and had by nature and cuſtome learned not to be afraid of any thing. Turk. hiſt. 529.

Whoſe mouth muſt be held in with bit and bridle] Leſt they kick and bite thee. Such is the mad Worlds wages and uſage of the moſt faithfull Preachers. B. Ridley lamented it in his time, the great ones ſputned privily againſt thoſe that went about moſt buſily and wholſomely to cure their ſore backs. As for Latimer, Lever, Bradford, Knox (ſaith he) their tongues were ſo ſharp, they ripped in ſo deep to their galled backs, to let out the filthy matter, that they could never abide them. Thus He, and much more concerning King Edward the ſixth his Courtiers. The words may be read thus, whoſe mouth, except it be held with bit and bridle, they will not come nigh unto thee, that is, thou wilt not be able to rule them. It is a good obſervation of a modern Divine, Not the unruly colt only, but the horſe that is broken, hath a bitt and bridle alſo. So even the godly need the bridle of the Law, ne ſpiritum ſeſſorem excutiant, leſt they caſt their rider. Ne mordeas nocueris tibi Jun. Act. & Mon. 1616.

Verſ. 10. Many ſorrowes ſhall bee to the Wicked] This is Davids Doctrin (his uſe followeth in the next verſe) Many pains, or great ſmarts are for the Wicked, &c. And as Luther ſaith, Let him that can rightly diſtinguiſh betwixt Law and Goſpel, give thanks to God, and know himſelf to bee a good Divine; ſo ſay I, Let him that is firmly perſwaded of this truth here delivered, know himſelf to be a good proficient in Chriſts School; for it is the principle of all holy learning.

Verſ. 11. Bee glad in the Lord] Joy is the juſt mans portion. A pardoned ſinner, as verſ. 1, 2. is here called upon (in an uſe of conſolation) to be as merry as mirth can make him; for what ſhould ayl ſuch an one as wee ſay of a rich man. Viſcount Liſle in Henry the eighths time dyed for joy of an unexpected pardon. But what was that to Gods pardon of all ſins?

PSAL. XXXIII.

VErſ. 1. Rejoyce in the Lord, O yee righteous] That is, O yee upright in heart, as it followeth here, and as Pſal. 32. 11. For as there he exhorted, ſo here he beginneth, calling upon the Saints to be cheerful; and indeed there is hardly any duty more preſſed in the Old and New Teſtament, or leſs practiſed. To quicken them therefore to ſo neceſſary but much neglected a duty, this Pſalm ſeemeth to be added to the former, purpoſely to affect us by many Arguments, to conſecrate our whole lives to the ſinging and ſetting forth of Gods worthy praiſes. In which regard Athanaſius calleth it Bibliorum ſplendidiſſimum, ſaith Zanchy, this is juſtly eſteemed a moſt excellent Pſalm; and if it were well practised we might have a very heaven here: as because it is not, we lose very much of the comfort of our lives. Only that cautionating counsel of Bernard would not be forgotten, Lætissimus, non securus, gaudentes in spiritu sancto, sed tamen cavendo à recidivo; Let us be cheerful, but not secure; and rejoyce in the Holy Ghost, but take heed we let not fall the watch of the Lord. Crede mihi res sera vera est gaudium verum, Believe me, true joy is a severe matter, said Seneca. We may better say so of Spiritual joy, which he never tasted of, neither doth any stranger meddle with. And if Plato could tell the Musicians, Philosophers could tell how to be merry without Musick; much more may Gods people. Quid nobis cum Fabulis, cum risu? saith Bernard, What have we to do with carnal mirth, and jollity, &c? we have Meat to eat, and Musick to our Meat, that the World knoweth not of; let us make us merry with it.

and

Seneca.

For praise is comly for the upright] For them, and for none but them: High words are not fit for a fool, saith Solomon. Laudari ab illaudato, to be praised by a praiseless person, is no praise at all. That State in story would not approve of good words from an evil mouth: no more doth God, Psal. 50. 15, 16. Christ would not suffer the Devil to confess him. Hypocrisie slurrieth all it toucheth. If a man should sing a good Song with his voyce, and play a bad one on his Instrument, it would make but a black sanctis: Such is the praise of the unupright; who had better therefore be silent, unless themselves were better, sith they do not only lose their labour, but commit sin. Displeasing service is double dishonour; and dissembled sanctity, double iniquity.

Vers. 2. Praise the Lord with Harp] Or Cithern, Jubals invention, Gen. 4. 21. much used by David, and others of old under the Jewish Pedagogy, as an help to devotion, as were also other Musical Instruments, here, and elsewhere mentioned. Now it is otherwise: the best melody is to sing Psalms with grace in our hearts; and for other Musick, when Aristotle was asked what he thought of it? he answered, Fovens nec curans, neque ejus harum pulsare; that Jupiter regarded it not.

Vers. 3. Sing unto him a new Song] i.e. upon every new emergent occasion. God renewes his Mercies not only every morning, but every moment; so should we our praises: every breath we draw should praise the Lord, Psal. 150. ult. Doth God give comforts? praise him, and they shall be continued. Doth hee send Crosses? praise him, and they shall be removed, saith a Father; but in every thing give thanks; and that not coldly and cursorily, but ardently, and with utmost attention; for which cause this duty is so reiterated here, and pressed with such forcible arguments in the following verses, as might work upon the very stones almost, much more men, for whose sakes all this fair Fabrick of the World was erected.

Play skilfully (or lustily) with a loud noise] Make good Musick, set all your skill and might a work to magnifie the Lord. It is not an easie matter to praise God aright; it must be done Corde, ore, opere, with the very best of the best. Benefacientes cantando, cantus jubilatione.

Vers. 4. For the Word of the Lord is right] Every Word of God is pure and precious, Prov. 30. 5. his Commandement holy, and just, and good, Rom. 7. 12. but by word here we are to understand Gods Counsel, and Decree concerning the Creation and government of the World, which is unquestionably right, and agreeable to sound reason, and therefore they are too blame that dislike of his doings. If any evil befall them, the Saints confess Gods righteousness, and praise him as Isa. 12. 1. Psa. 10. 1. saith Kimchi here.

And all his works are done in truth] Or, In faith; that is in faithfullnesse, without deceit or fickleness. This is to be understood of the execution of Gods decree, all his doings well and equitable.

Vers. 5. He loveth righteousness and judgment] i.e. How can he do otherwise than righteously, whose nature is such, that he loveth righteousness and [illegible]; that is, probat, probanda, & damnat damnanda.

The earth is full of the goodness of the Lord] So that we cannot doubt any way, but matter of praise presents it self to your view. The whole [illegible] gave them a Being. Or, by his essentiall Word, which is his Son the second person in Trinity, Prov. 8. 27. Joh. 1. 3. Col. 1. 16. Heb. 1. 2. Solo ipsius jussu & nutu.

gyac

And all the hoast of them] These are first mentioned, because the most glorious of all the works of God, so Psal. 19. 1.

By the breath of his mouth] By his word and command. Or rather, by his Holy Spirit, the third person in Trinity, inseparable from the other two, as well in essence, as in operation. See Gen. 1. 1, 2. with the Notes. It hath been else-where noted, that in Thebe, a Town of Ægypt, they worshiped a God whom they acknowledged to be immortall. But how painted they him? In the likenesse of a man blowing an egge out of his mouth; to signify, that hee made the round World by his Word, and by the breath of his mouth, as here. Varro addeth, that in way of thankfullnesse, they dedicated a sheep to him, to be offered in Sacrifice. This Text was commonly urged by the Ancients for the Trinity of persons in the Godhead; which Olymphus an Arrian Bishop denying, was struck with three thunder bolts and killed in a Bath. Plut. de Isid & Osirid. Var. de re rust. l. 2. cap. 1.

Vers. 7. Hee gathereth the waters of the Sea together] Confining them to their concave, to the pit he digged for them. Ecce altera misericordia, saith Kimchi here, Behold another mercy; without the which the earth would be inhabitable, unlesse by fishes only; because the waters would cover the earth.

As an heap] This sheweth that the Sea is higher than the Earth. Saylers observe, that their ships flie faster to the shore than from it, whereof what other reason can be given but the height of the waters above the land?

Hee Layeth up the depth in store-houses] In his treasuries; that is, he secretly hideth them, and limiteth them to a certain place (that they overwhelm not the earth) by his Almighty power, Jer. 5. 22. Job 38. 16. See there.

Vers. 8. Let all the earth fear the Lord] viz. For these stupendious works of his, sufficient to strike an awe, into all creatures, of the divine Majesty; Jer. 5. 22. Tremble thou earth at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the God of Jacob, Psal. 114. 7.

Vers. 9. For he spake, and it was done] So true is that saying, Dei dicere est facere. And a great shame it is to men to disobey the great Creatour; and not rather to follow the example of the unreasonable and insensible creatures.

And it stood fast] The whole order of nature remaineth, as he set it; firm, fast, and unmoveable.

Vers. 10. The Lord bringeth the counsel of the heathen to nought] i. e. He counterworketh the Devill and his imps, who would overturn and destroy the fair order of nature, mingle heaven and earth together as it were, and soon marre all. God frustrateth the counsells and attempts of such tumultuating bouresans and trouble-States; and maugre their malice; preserveth polities, lawes, judgements, and naturall equity; without which mankind could not long subsist. Who then would not fear thee, O King of Nations? for to thee doth it appertain, Jer. 10 7. Rev. 15. 4.

Vers. 11. The counsell of the Lord standeth for ever] That counsell of his, whereby he hath decreed to maintain government amongst men, to relieve the oppressed, to punish the Wicked, to uphold the Church, is firm and inviolable. Divinum consilium dum devitatur, impletur; humana sapientia dum reluctatur, comprehenditur, saith Gregory. There is a councell in Heaven will dash the mould of all contrary counsells upon earth.

Vers. 12. Blessed is the Nation whose God is the Lord] viz. By speciall favour and covenant. The preservation of the Church (which hath so few friends on earth, and so many enemies in earth and hell) is justly brought as an evident argument of the divine providence, Christ standeth upon Mount-Zion, and that mountain shall bee exalted above all mountaines. The Church, as it is highest in the favour of God, so it shall be set above all the World; and her enemies shall be in that place that is fittest for them, the lowest, the footstool of Christ.

The people whom he hath chosen] Some read it, The people which hath chosen Him for their inheritance. It cometh all to one. See Deut. 26. 17, 18, 19.

Vers. 13. The Lord looketh from Heaven] Ita respicit universos quasi singulos, ita singulos quasi solos. And this Doctrin of Gods particular providence is, first nation- num quarum Deus eſt Dominus, ſaith Kimchi, taught in the Church only.

Verſ. 14. From the place of his habitation he beholdeth] And this is a very great condeſcenſion, ſith he humbleth himſelf to behold things in Heaven, Pſal. 113. 6. to look out of himſelf upon the Saints and Angels; how much more upon the inhabitants of the earth?

Unum pariter ac aliud. Kimchi. Verſ. 15. He faſhioneth their hearts alike] i. e. Ones as well as anothers. The Arabick hath it, Format ſigillatim he faſhioneth them ſeverally one after another; and not all ſoules together, as the Origeniſts, and ſome Jew-doctors held.

He conſidereth all their works] Their hearts are not hid from him (ſith he made them, as is ſaid before) much leſſe their works. Theſe God conſidereth, and therefore men had need conſider them, and turn their feet to his Teſtimonies, Pſal. 119. 59.

Verſ. 16. There is no King ſaved by the multitude of an hoaſt] Witneſſe Sennacherib, Xerxes, Bajazet. Away then with Creature-confidence; it will be the ruine of all that reſt in it; whether it be in men, or means that they truſt. See Pſal. 62. 9, 10. with the Notes.

A mighty man] Or, A Giant, Goliah for inſtance. As the moſt skilfull ſwimmers are often drowned; So here.

Pauſan. Verſ. 17. An Horſe is a vain thing] And yet a warlike creature, full of terrour (See the Note on Pſal. 32. 9.) and ſo ſwift in ſervice, that the Perſians dedicated him to the Sun. See Job 41. 20. Prov. 21. 31. With the Notes.

Verſ. 18. Behold the eye of the Lord is on them that fear him] Hee looketh upon ſuch with ſingular delight; not without ſweet intimations of his ſingular kindneſſe, and care of their good.

Upon them that hope in his mercy] Here we have a deſcription of that true Church which God will never forſake; ſc. It is a company of ſuch as truly ſerve God, and boaſt not of their merits; but poſſeſſing their ſoules in hope and ſilence, wait for his mercy.

Verſ. 19. To deliver their ſoul] Freedom from troubles He promiſeth not; but deliverance in due time he aſſureth them; and ſupport in the mean while, to keep them alive in famine.

Verſ. 20. Our ſoul waiteth for the Lord] i, e. Patiently tarrieth the Lords leiſure. We can both wait and want for a need.

Verſ. 21. Our heart ſhall rejoyce in him] We ſhall be ſure of an happy iſſue and event; but yet ſo as that we pray for it, as in the next words.

Verſ. 22. Let thy mercy O Lord be upon us, according as we hope in thee] Not that we would have no more mercy than we have truſt; but we would ſhew that our truſt is bottomed upon thy promiſes, and that we humbly expect the full accompliſhment of the ſame, in due time.

PSAL. XXXIV.

Semper in Eccleſia his Pſalmus piis fuit commendatiſſimus. Moſter, Lib. 3. Od. 11. VErſ. 1. A Pſalm of David] An Alphabeticall Pſalm, which David (newly delivered from the Philiſtines, who had taken him priſoner, and preſented him to their King as a ſpeciall prize) compoſed with ſingular art; as fit to be committed to memory by all godly people, who may here meet with many excellent leſſons, and cordiall comforts.

When he changed his behaviour] Heb. guſtum, hoc eſt geſtum. This he did (being put to his ſhifts) but not without ſin, for he was ſplendide mendax (as Horace ſaith of Hypermneſtra) at the beſt; neither can this diſſimulation or officious lye of his be excuſed; as ſome have by diſtinctions indeavoured it, but in vain.

Before Abimelech] Or, Achiſh, King of Gath, 1 Sam. 21. for he was binominis, ſaith Aben-Ezra; or elſe Abimelech, that is, Father-King was his title of honour. As Auguſtus would be ſtiled Pater Patriæ, the Father of his Country. R. Salomon ſaith that Abimelech was a common name to all the Philiſtin-Kings, as Pharaoh to the Egyptian.

Who caſt him out] For a mad man, 1 Sam. 21. 15. wherein there was a ſweet providence of God, who can order our diſorders to his own glory, and our good; like as an Artificer with a crooked tool can make ſtraight work; or as an Apothecary of a poyſonfull Viper can make a wholeſome triacle.

And he departed] Into ſome parts of Judea, where he might repent of his ſin firſt (as Peter did when got into a corner) and then compile this Pſalm of thankſgiving to God, who had ſo graciouſly delivered him out of that hard and hazardous condition, not only above, but againſt his deſert.

Verſ. 1. I will bleſſe the Lord at all times] As not ſatisfied with any thing I can do herein, at any time. The Saints have large hearts; and could bet eem the Lord a great deal more ſervice than they are able to perform. A certain Martyr ſaid at the ſtake, I am ſory that I am going to a place, where I ſhall be ever receiving wages, and do no more work.

His praiſe ſhall continually be in my mouth] For this remarkable mercy eſpecially, which I will ſtill be telling of, and ſpeaking good of Gods name to as many as I can poſſibly extend unto. This thankfull man was worth his weight in the gold of Ophir.

Verſ. 2. My ſoul ſhall make her boaſt in the Lord] This holy gloriation is a Chriſtians duty not to be neglected. The Church in the Canticles is much in it; and ſo is St. Paul. It ſheweth an heart full of joyes unſpeakable, and full of glory, 1 Pet. 1. 8. And beſides, God is thereby greatly glorified, Jer. 9. 23, 24.

The humble ſhall hear thereof, and be glad] Not for my ſake only, but their own; as conceiving good hope of like deliverance. But then they muſt be as I am, not only humbled, but humble; low, but lowly.

Verſ. 3. O magnify the Lord with mee] As not ſufficient to do ſo great a work himſelf, he calleth in the help of others. We read of a Monſter rather than a man, who lying on his death-bed, not only himſelf ſwore as faſt and as furiouſly as hee could, but deſperately deſired the ſtanders by to help him with oaths, and to ſwear for him. I knew the man, ſaith mine Author. And ſhould not wee much more call upon others to joyn their forces with ours in magnifying the Lord? Birds, when they come to a full heap of corn, will chirp and call in for their fellows. Charity is no churl; goodneſſe is diffuſive. Boltons. Aſſize-ſerm.

And let us exalt his name together] And ſo begin Heaven afore-hand. Aben-Ezra gloſſeth thus, Quaſi diceret, Nos omnes ſimul ad laudandum Deum ſumus imbecilles, we are all too weak for this work, though we ſhould all do our utmoſt at it.

Verſ. 4. I ſought the Lord] Even when I was in the enemies hands, and playing my pranks as a mad man amongſt them; I prayed ſecretly and inwardly, I ſent up ſome ejaculations (as Nehem. 2. 4.) and was heard, though unworthy.

And delivered mee out of all my fears] Which were not a few, 1 Sam. 21. 13, beſides his inward terrours upon his unwarrantable practices, to ſave his life. Senſe fights ſore againſt faith, when it is upon its own dunghill (in a ſenſible danger I mean) to the great diſturbance of the conſcience afterwards. George Marſh (afterwards a Martyr in Queen Maryes dayes) being examined before the Earl of Derby, kept himſelf cloſe in the Sacrament of the Altar, as they called it. But afterward, thus he writeth to a friend; I departed much more troubled in my ſpirit than before; becauſe I had not with more boldneſſe confeſſed Chriſt, but in ſuch ſort as mine adverſaries thereby thought they ſhould prevail againſt mee; whereat I was much grieved; for hitherto I went about as much as in mee lay, to rid my ſelf out of their hands, if by any means without open denying of Chriſt and his word, that could be done, &c. Thus He; but no reſt he had in his mind, till hee had better declared himſelf, though to the loſſe of his life. A man had better offend all the World, than his own conſcience. David, not without much ado, recovered his peace, for which he here heartily bleſſeth God. Act. & Mon. fol. 1419.

Verſ. 5. They looked unto him, and were lightened] They, that is, my ſervants and fellow-ſouldiers who accompanied mee firſt to Nob, 1 Sam. 21. 2, 4. Mat. 12. 3, 4. and afterwards to Gath (as it is probable) theſe being in the ſame danger, looked likewiſe unto God by faith, hope, and prayer; and were lightened; that is, comforted, cheared, directed, yea delivered together with David. Or, They flowed together, viz. to God, as Rivers roll to the Sea, or malefactors run to the ſanctuary, Iſa. 2. 2. & 60. 5.

And their faces were not aſhamed] i. e. They were not repulſed, diſappointed, made to hide their heads, as Rev. 6. 15, 16.

Verſ. 6. This poor man cried] Meaning himſelf, to whom it ſeemeth he pointed the finger, or laid his hand on his heart, when he ſaid, This poor man, Hic vilis, et ovium Paſtor, ſaith Theodoret, this mean Shepherd not long ſince; but rather, This miſerable ſinner, who whilome raſhly ran ſuch an hazard, and ſo unworthily deported himſelf in the preſence of King Achiſh; this poor Soul, I ſay, cried, but ſilently and ſecretly, as Moſes did at the red Sea, as Nehemiah did in the preſence of the King of Perſia.

And the Lord] Who might better be called the poor mans King, than was James 4. King of Scotland.

Heard him, and delivered him out of all his troubles] And the like he will do for all that in like caſe, being poor in ſpirit, make their humble addreſſes unto him. It is good to communicate unto others our experiences. See the like done, Pſal. 116. 6. Rom. 8. 2. 1 Tim. 1. 15.

Verſ. 7. The Angel of the Lord encampeth round about, &c.] Not one Guardian-Angel only (as ſome have hence conceited) nor Michael the Arch-Angel only, that Angel of the Covenant, Jeſus Chriſt, as Auguſtine expoundeth this Text, but an Hoſt of created Angels, thoſe miniſtring Spirits, ſent forth to miniſter for them who ſhall be heirs of Salvation, Heb. 1. 14. For although Chriſt the Captain of our Salvation needeth not their help, for the ſafe-guard of his people; yet for our comfort he maketh uſe of the holy Angels, who meet us ſtill, as they did Jacob at Mahanaim (where they made a lane for him, as the Guard doth for their Prince, as the word importeth) Gen. 32. 1. they miniſter many bleſſings to us, though inviſibly; ſtand at our right hands, Luke 1. 11. as ready to releeve us, as the Devils are to miſchief us, Zech. 3. 1. yea they pitch Camp round about us, as here (Oh the dignity and ſafety of a Saint in this reſpect!) fight in battel-array againſt our enemies, Dan. 10. 20. (the Heathens ſpeak much of their Caſtor and Pollux fighting for them; and Heſiod telleth of thirty thouſand demy-gods that were φύλακες μερόπων ἀνθρώπων Keepers of Mankind) and convey them at death, as they did Lazarus, through the enemies Country, the air, into Abrahams boſome, Luke 16.

Sicut hoſtes ſunt in circuitu, Kimchi.

Verſ. 8. O taſte and ſee, &c.] Viz. with the mouth of your minde, and with the eyes of your faith perceive, and experiment the goodneſs of God in chuſing, and uſing ſuch Inſtruments as the Angels, and otherwiſe, in the manifold expreſſions of his love to us; wherein if we take not comfort, the fault is meerly in our ſelves; we being like him who hath pleaſant and nouriſhing meat, but will not make uſe of it. The Saints taſte how good the Lord is, and thence long after him. Optima demonſtratio eſt à ſenſibus; as he that feels Fire hot, or as he that taſteth Hony ſweet, yee need not uſe arguments to perſwade him to beleeve it: So here, let a man but once taſte that the Lord is good, and he will thenceforth, as a new born Babe, deſire the ſincere Milk of the Word, 1 Pet. 2. 2, 3. neither will he take any more content in the Worlds taſtleſs fooleries, than in the white of an Egge, or a dry chip. Guſtato ſpiritu deſipit omnis caro, ſaith Gerſon, All fleſh is ſavourleſs to him that hath taſted of the Spirit. Paul, after his Rapture, looked with ſcorn and pity on all the Worlds glittering Poverty. His mouth doth not water after homely proviſions, who hath lately taſted of delicate ſuſtenance. O let us get Spiritual ſenſes, habitually exerciſed to diſcern good and evil, Heb. 5. ult. It is the Spirit that quickneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing, ſaith our Saviour to the Jews, q. d. yee accept not my words, becauſe yee have not the Spirit, yee have but fleſh, that is, a common knowledge, no ſound taſte; and therefore it is that my words reliſh not with you.

D. 4. dom.

Bleſſed is the man, &c.] See Pſal. 2. 12. with the Notes.

Verſ. 9. O fear the Lord yee his Saints] Yee that having taſted of Gods ſweetneſs, are ſeparated from the World, with its luſts, and can live with a little; Fear the Lord, and then you ſhall not need to fear want of any thing; for he is All-ſufficient to thoſe who are altogether his, and with-draw not from him by miſtruſt, or miſdoing.

Ἅγιοι quaſi ἀγεῖοι,

For there is no want to them that fear him] Habent omnia, qui habent habentem omnia. David, when captive among the Philiſtines, wanted not. Paul had nothing, and yet poſſeſſed all things. Contrarily, the wicked, in the fulneſs of his ſufficiency is in ſtraights, Job 20. 22.

Verſ. 10.

Verſ. 10. The young Lions do lack and ſuffer hunger] And yet they will have it, if it be to be had: Haec eſt ſceleratorum imago, ſaith Beza. Lion-like wicked oppreſſors, rich Cormorants (as the Septuagint render it) who live on the ſpoil of poor people, and are never ſatisfied, do yet periſh with famine (as Eliphaz ſaith of the old Lion, Job 4. 11.) and come oft to great poverty; ſo that they pine away, and miſerably periſh. Donec mil rabeſcant. Beza.

But they that ſeek the Lord] That, content with his bleſſing alone, ſeek not their nouriſhment any other way but from his hand, and will rather lye in the duſt, than riſe by evil Principles; theſe have an autarkie, a ſelf-ſufficiency, ſuch as godlineſs is never without, 1 Tim. 6. 6. Some Rabbins ſay, that the ſervants of Achiſh had almoſt famiſhed David (under pretence haply of reducing him to his right mind) but God ſuſtained him by Miracle, as he did Elias, 1 King. 17. Aben-Ezra Loc.

Shall not want any good thing] Want they may, this or that, which they may think would be good for them: but God knoweth it to be otherwiſe; or elſe they ſhould be ſure of it. Of good nothing followeth of it ſelf but good, but if by accident any evil followeth, yet it is turned into good to ſuch as ſeek the Lord in ſincerity.

Verſ. 11. Come yee children, hearken unto me] Yee that are little, and low in your own eyes, as ſeeing your want of holy Learning.

I will teach you the fear of the Lord] That beſt Trade, whereby you ſhall be ſure to be kept from want; for by humility and the fear of the Lord are riches, and honour, and life, Prov. 22. 4. He then who ſhall teach this fear ſhould be honoured, and reſpected as a Father. The Jews at this day account a mans Maſter, or Tutor worthy of more reſpect than his Father: for he hath given him only his being, the other his wel-being. Leo Modenſis

Verſ. 12. What man is he that deſireth life] This is Davids Doctrin; and to draw company about him, he proclaimeth and promiſeth that which he well knew every man coveteth, happy life, many days, and a comfortable enjoyment of all. Now, who is it that would have theſe, ſaith he? Auſtine bringeth in all ſorts, ſaying, Ego & ego, I would, and I would. But as all men deſire health, but few take a right courſe to get it, and keep it; ſo all would be happy, but few hearken to this wholſome counſel, for the compaſſing of true happineſs.

Verſ. 13. Keep thy tongue from evil, &c.] This is an hard ſaying, think the moſt; who will therefore rather venture it than yeeld to be ſo tied up. The Tongue is an unruly member, and can hardly be hampered. But who would not temper his tongue, and bind it to the good abearance, for true bleſſedneſs? Who would not rather bite it off, and ſpit it out (as that ancient Martyr did his, into the face of the Tyrant, who ſolicited him to deny Chriſt) than miſs of Heaven? Ficinus after his Tracts De ſanitate tuenda, of keeping good health; and another, of recovering health; and a third, of prolonging life; becauſe all will not do, wiſely addeth a fourth; Of laying hold on eternal life; which cannot be done, but by mortifying this earthly member, a looſe and lewd tongue. For by thy words thou ſhalt be juſtified, and by thy words thou ſhalt be condemned, ſaith the Judge himſelf, Mat. 12. 37. Compare Gen. 49. 21. with Deut. 33. 23. and it will appear that good words ingratiate with God and Men.

Verſ. 14. Depart from evil, and do good] For negative goodneſs helpeth not. A man muſt ſo abſtain from evil, as that he do good, or he doth nothing. It is ſaid of Ithacius, that the hatred of the Priſcillian Hereſie was the beſt that could bee ſaid of him; this was but a ſlender commendation.

Seek peace and purſue it] As Hunters do the prey. If it fly from thee, make after it; it will pay thee for thy pains. It is ſaid of Frederick the Third, Emperour, that by putting up many injuries, he reigned quietly fifty and three years, and five months. He had need be patient that would be at peace. Vt habeas quietum tempus, perde aliquid, was a Proverb at Carthage; not unlike that of ours, Do any thing for a quiet life. Concedamus de jure ut careamus lite. And if, in this purſute of peace, thou meet with many rubs and remoraes, yet be not diſcouraged, conſidering what follows in the two next verſes. Val. Max. Chriſtian. 3. Auguſtin.

Verſ. 15. The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous] He ſeeth and weigheth the wrongs they ſuſtain for peace ſake, and they ſhall be no loſers thereby; provided that that their purſute of peace proceed from the filiall fear of God, which David here profeſſeth to teach, Verſ. 11. Gods eyes are intent, his ears attent to theſe righteous ones. Palàm, clàm (as Aben-Ezra here) openly, ſecretly, he will right them and recompenſe them. Should not God ſee, as well as hear (ſaith another) his children ſhould want many things. Wee apprehend not all our own wants, and ſo cannot pray for relief of all. Hee (of his own accord without any monitor) is wont to aid us.

And his ears are open to their cry] Heb. Are to their cry. Or, (as St. Peter hath it) His ears are into their prayers; to ſhew, that though their prayers are ſo faint and feeble that they cannot enter into the ears of the Lord of Hoaſts, yet that he will bow down and incline his ears unto, nay into their prayers, their breathings, Lam. 3. 56. 1 Pet. 3.

Verſ. 16. The face of the Lord is againſt them that do evill] Let not ſuch dream of a long and happy life, as Verſ. 12. This they are apt to do; but ſhall be carried from a fooles Paradiſe to a true priſon. For that people may not imagin God to be μονόφθαλμον, and ſo made up of mercy, as to forget his judgements, the Wicked are here aſſured, that the face of the Lord is againſt them, that he beholdeth them from Heaven with a terrible countenance, that he is grievouſly angry with them, and will ſurely and ſeverely puniſh them; and theirs after them.

To cut off the remembrance of them from the earth] And ſo to croſſe them in the thing that they moſt coveted, viz. to renown themſelves amongſt men. God writeth them in the earth (in oppoſition to thoſe, whoſe names are written in Heaven, Luk. 10.) becauſe they forſook the Lord the fountain of living waters, Jer. 17. 13.

Verſ. 17. The Righteous cry, &c.] This is often inculcated for our better aſſurance; becauſe we are apt to doubt, if delayed. See verſ. 6.

Verſ. 18. The Lord is nigh unto them, &c.] More nigh than the bark is to the Tree, for he is with them, and in them continually; pouring the oyl of his grace into theſe broken veſſells, quorum corda peccata eorum non amplius retinent, ſed, ut vas fractum, effundunt, ſaith Aben-Ezra here, whoſe hearts retain not their ſins any longer, but poure them out as water before the Lord.

And ſaveth ſuch as bee of a contrite ſpirit] Such as are ground to pouder, as it were, with ſenſe of ſin, and fear of wrath; yet not without good hope of mercy. Theſe God delivereth out of their dangers; and in fine bringeth them to eternall bleſſedneſſe.

Verſ. 19. Many are the troubles, &c.] Dei ſunt nuntii, theſe are Gods meſſengers, ſaith Kimchi, and they ſeldome come ſingle. See Jam. 1. 2. with the Note. Sent they are alſo to the Wicked, Pſal. 32. 10. but on another errand, and for another end. The Righteous per anguſta ad auguſtum, per ſpinas ad roſas, per motum ad quietem, per procellas ad portum, per crucem ad cœlum contendunt, through many tribulations they enter into Gods Kingdome. Not ſo the Wicked; their croſſes are but a typicall Hell.

But the Lord delivereth him out of them all] No Country hath more venemous Creatures, none more Antidotes than Egypt; ſo godlineſſe hath many troubles, and as many helps againſt trouble.

Verſ. 20. He keepeth all his bones] Which are very many. Perhaps (ſaith Aben-Ezra here) David had been ſcourged by the Philiſtines, but his bones were not broken; nor were our Saviours, Joh. 19. 36.

Verſ. 21. Evill ſhall ſlay the Wicked] For lack of ſuch deliverance, as verſ. 19. malum jugulat authorem mali. Their malice ſhall prove their miſchief. The Arabick hath it (but not right) mors impii peſſima. Aben-Ezra better ſenſeth it thus, One affliction killeth the Wicked; when out of many, God delivereth the Righteous.

Verſ. 22. The Lord redeemeth the ſoules of his ſervants] Though to themſelves and others they may ſeem helpleſſe and hopeleſſe, yet they ſhall not periſh in their ſins, and for their ſins, as do the Wicked.

PSAL. XXXV.

VErſ. 1. Plead my cauſe, O Lord] We may ſafely pray the ſame, when oppreſſed with calumnies, and falſe accuſations, as now David was by Sauls Sycophants, phants, or (as others think) when he was in great heavineſſe, and even heart-ſick, after that Ammon had defiled Tamar, and Abſolom had ſlain Ammon; his diſaffected ſubjects, ſuch as Shimei, inſulted over him, and ſaid, it was juſt upon him for the matter of Uriah, and other miſcarriages; which they wrongfully charged him with. See a promiſe in this caſe, Iſa. 49. 21.

Fight againſt them, &c.] Or, devoure them that devoure mee; for in Niphal only it ſignifieth to fight.

Verſ. 2. Take hold of ſhield and buckler] Jehovah is a man of war, Exod. 15. 5. and ſo he is here ſtirred up to harneſs himſelf: Not that he needeth weapons defenſive, as here, or offenſive, as verſ. 3. for he can deſtroy his enemies, ſolo nutu ac flatu, with a nod, or a blaſt: But this is ſpoken after the manner of men, and for our better apprehenſion of Gods readineſſe to relieve his diſtreſſed ones.

Verſ. 3. Draw out alſo the ſpear] viz. That thy contending and appearing for mee, may appear to be ſufficient and glorious.

And ſtop the way] Heb. And ſtop, viz. the doores, as Gen. 19. 6, 10. & 2 King. 6. 32. leſt the malecontents come in and kill mee. Or, ſhut mee up from my perſecutors, that they find mee not; like as afterwards, God hid Jeremy and Baruch, when ſought for to the ſlaughter.

Say unto my ſoul I am thy ſalvation] Facito ut hæc animula te ſibi teſtantem audiat, &c. Inwardly perſwade my heart to firm affiance in thee, amidſt all mine afflictions.

Verſ. 4. Let them be confounded and put to ſhame] Here David begiuneth his imprecations; which yet non maledicens dixit, ſed vaticinantis more prædixit, ſaith Theodoret, he doth not utter as curſing, but as propheſying rather. If we ſhall at any time take upon us thus to imprecate (as we may in ſome caſes) we muſt ſee to it, firſt that our cauſe be good. Secondly, that we do it not out of private revenge; but meerly for the glory of God. Thirdly, ut ne voculam quidem niſi nobis præeunte Dei, non carnis, ſpiritu effundamus, that we utter not a ſyllable this way, but by the guidance of Gods good Spirit.

Verſ. 5. Let them be as chaffe] Facti ſint à corde ſuo fugitivi, Let them flye before their own conſciences, reſtleſſe and uncertain whither to turn themſelves.

And let the Angel of the Lord chaſe them] It may be underſtood both of the evill Angels, and of the good; ready at Gods command to do execution upon his enemies. Chaffe driven before the wind may reſt againſt a wall; but where ſhall they reſt who are chaſed by an Angel? where ſhall the ungodly and the ſinner appear, 1 Pet. 4. 18? Surely no where.

Verſ. 6. Let their way be dark and ſlippery] Heb. Darkneſſe and ſlipperineſſe. If a man have neither light, nor firm footing, and a feirce enemy at his heeles, what ſhift can he make for himſelf? The word rendred ſlippery is of a double form (like that libbi ſecharchar, my heart panteth or beateth about, throbbeth, Pſal. 38. 10.) to increaſe the ſignification. The ſoul of a wicked man is as in a ſling, 1 Sam. 25. 29. violently toſſed about. See Jer. 23. 1.

Verſ. 7. For without cauſe have they hid for mee, &c.] The Wicked are ſo acted and agitated by the Devill their task-maſter, that though they have no cauſe to work miſchief to the Saints, yet they muſt do it; the old enmity, Gen. 3. ſtill worketh: But this rendreth their deſtruction certiorem & celeriorem, more ſure and more ſwift.

Verſ. 8. Let deſtruction come upon him at unawars] i. e. Upon the whole rabble of them, as if they were all but one man. Or, elſe he ſtriketh at ſome chieftain amongſt them. Let his deſtruction be as ſuddain as ſignal.

Verſ. 9. And my ſoul ſhall be joyfull in the Lord] This was that he aimed at in his foregoing imprecations, viz. the glory and praiſe of God, and not his own reaking his teen upon his enemies.

Verſ. 10. All my bones ſhall ſay Lord, who is like unto thee?] Not my ſoul only, but my body alſo ſhall joyn in this joyfull acclamation; yea my bones ſhall ſay, &c. that is, whatſoever ſtrength and vigour is in mee, it ſhall be ſpent in celebrating thy praiſes. Or, although I have nothing left mee but skin and bones, ſo poor am I grown, yet I will not be wanting to the work.

Verſ. 11. Falſe witneſſes did riſe up] So they did afterward againſt the Lord Chriſt

Alſted. Chronol. Act. & Mon. Chriſt, and ſundry of his faithfull ſervants, as St. Paul, Athanaſius, Euſtathius Biſhop of Antioch, (falſely accuſed of Adultery, and depoſed, about the end of Conſtantine the great's reign) Cranmer charged with Adultery, hereſy and treaſon; Philpot with paricide; Latimer with ſedition; whereof he was ſo innocent, that he feared not to ſay in a Sermon before the King, as for ſedition, for ought that I know, methinks I ſhould not need Chriſt, if I may ſo ſay.

They laid to my charge things that I knew not] Such as whereof I was not only innocent, but ignorant alſo. The Hebrew is, They asked mee, and ſo would have, by cunningly contrived queſtions, made mee mine own accuſer.

Verſ. 12. They rewarded mee evill for good] To render good for evill is divine; good for good is humane; evill for evill is brutiſh; but evill for good is deviliſh.

Intentant eædem. Kimchi. To the ſpoyling of my ſoul] i. e. To the depriving mee of that life which I have ſo often hazarded, to ſave theirs. Or, this their deviliſh dealing with mee, erat mihi quaſi mors amarum, was as bitter as death to mee.

Verſ. 13. But as for mee, when they were ſick] i. e. Any way afflicted, when they ayled any thing.

My cloathing was ſackcloath] I put my ſelf in mourners habit; Incedebam atratus, to teſtifie my good affection toward them.

Kimchi. De Elia & jejunio cap. 8. I humbled my ſoul with faſting] In die deſignato, in a ſolemn day ſet apart for the purpoſe; as the ב with a pathach ſheweth. Jejunium eſt humilitatis mentis, miſerationis expenſa, charitatis illecebra, allevamentum infirmitatis, alimentum ſalutis, ſaith Ambroſe, Faſting is the affliction of the ſoul, the coſt of compaſſion, &c.

2 Sam. 1. 22. And my prayer returned into mine own boſome] i. e. Though they had no benefit by it, yet my ſelf had; for no faithfull prayer is ineffectuall; like Jonathans bow, it never returneth empty. I received the fruit of my prayers for them upon my boſome.

Verſ. 14. I behaved my ſelf as though he had been, &c.] My Brother a thouſand times. This was much to do to an enemy; but poſſibly all this might be before they fell out.

Kimchi. I bowed down heavily, as one that mourneth, &c.] The Mother is uſually moſt dearly-beloved, and not without cauſe; as having been ante partum oneroſa, in partu doloroſa, poſt partum laborioſa. Or, as a ſuckling cryeth in the loſſe of his Nurſe.

Morbus eſt ſic dictus quia incedere nequit niſi cum dolore quaſi claudicando. Aben-Ezra. Dum illum rideo, pene factus ſum ille. Epiſt. 9. lib. 2. Verſ. 15. But in mine adverſity] Heb. In my halting; when through weakneſſe I could not but halt before my beſt friends, as we ſay.

Yea the abjects gathered themſelves together] Claudi congregati ſunt, & ſecundum claudicationem meam claudicabant, ut me deriderent, So the Syriack ſenſeth it. They halted as I did, by way of deriſion; but they ſhould have known, firſt, that mocking is catching, as we ſay; Tully confeſſeth, that whiles he laughed at one Hircus a very ridiculous man, he became as bad almoſt himſelf. Secondly, That ſuch cruell mockings, are grievous ſins, and ſuch as God ſeverely puniſheth. Some render it the Smiters, that is, the tongue-ſmiters, as Jer. 18. 18. Others, the ſmitten, that is, the abjects, the vile perſons; the baſeſt can mock, as did Tobiah the Servant, Neh. 2. 19. and thoſe Peſts, Pſal. 1. 1.

And I knew it not] Or, Such as I knew not, took no notice of, they were ſo baſe; See the like, Job 30. 8.

Menſarii ſcurræ. They did tear mee] ſc. With their tongues, as doggs toſſe and tear carrion with their teeth, Scindunt illud quod reparare nequeunt, non per pœnitentiam, ſaith Kimchi. They tear that which they cannot make good again, no not by repentance, viz. my good name. Or. they rent, ſc. their garments, as if they had been very ſorry for mee, as Gen. 37. 34. Job 2. 12. This they did, as Auſtin ſpeaketh, ſimulatione miſeriæ, non compaſſione miſericordiæ, out of deep diſſimulation.

Verſ. 16. With Hypocriticall mockers in feaſts] Cum ſannionibus placentæ vel cibi, with hypocriticall mockers for a cake, or dainties; there is an elegancy in the originall (which ſheweth it to be proverbiall) and cannot be engliſhed. R. Solomon telleth us here, that they who delighted in flatteries, gave their flatterers cakes baked with honey, to make them the more to flatter them. Solomon telleth of ſome that will tranſgreſſe for a peece or bread, Prov. 28. 21. So thoſe paraſiticall Prophets, Ezek. 13. 19. Or, I am made their table-talk, as Hoſ. 7. 8. ſcornfully deriding mee at their feaſts, and in their cups.

Verſ.

Verſ. 17. Lord how long wilt thou look on] i. e. carry thy ſelf as a Spectator of my miſeries, and a tolerator of mine enemies, thoſe architects of mine afflictions.

Reſcue my ſoul from their deſtructions] i. e. Their ſnares and ambuſhes, whereby they ſeek to deſtroy me.

My darling from the Lions] See the Note on Pſal. 22. 20.

Verſ. 18. I will give thee thanks in the great Congregation] For examples ſake to others; for Magnates magnetes. Acts 18. 8. when Criſpus the chief Ruler of the Synagogue beleeved, many of the Corinthians beleeved alſo. Great men are the Looking-glaſſes of the Country, according to which moſt men dreſs themſelves: many eyes are upon them; they had need therefore to be exact, for they are ſure to be exemplary.

Verſ. 19. Neither let them wink with the eye] Which is the geſture of a malicious Scoffer, Prov. 6. 13. & 10. 10. Ne amarulenter Ludificentur me. Trem.

Verſ. 20. For they ſpeak not peace] Which yet God doth to his people, Pſa. 85. 9. and that is their comfort; I am for peace, ſaith David elſewhere, but when I ſpeak of it, they are for war, Pſal. 120. 7.

Againſt the quiet of the Land] i. e. Againſt my ſelf, and ſuch as I am, who ſtudy to be quiet, and to do our own buſineſs, 1 Theſ. 4. 11. affecting rather quietneſs from the World, than acquaintance with it.

Verſ. 21. They opened their mouth] As if the very banks of blaſphemy had been broken down.

Our eye hath ſeen] Eye for eyes, unleſs we would ſay that all the wicked are ſo conjoyned, that they may ſeem to have but one Eye, Heart, Head, &c. and then they ſay as Hannibal did, when he ſaw a ditch full of mans bloud, O formoſum ſpectaculum! O gallant ſight! O rem regiam, as Valeſius ſaid, when he had ſlain three hundred Proteſtants.

Verſ. 22. This thou haſt ſeen, O Lord] This anſwereth to that before, verſ. 21. Our eye hath ſeen it, as Aben-Ezra obſerveth. So doth Keep not ſilence] To that, they opened their mouth wide againſt me. Ibid.

Verſ. 23. Stir up thy ſelf, and awake] This is the ſame in effect with the beginning of the Pſalm; to ſhew his ardour and intention of affection.

Verſ. 24. According to thy righteouſneſs] i. e. for the honour of thy Juſtice, wherein elſe thou art likely to ſuffer.

And let them not rejoyce over me] For I quarter Armes, as I may ſo ſay, with thee, Lord; and my diſgrace will reflect upon thee.

Verſ. 25. Ah, ſo would we have it] Heb. Ah, ah, our ſoul; that is, our deſire: we are voti compotes.

We have ſwallowed him up] As Swine do ſwill, or ravenous beaſts their prey.

Verſ. 26. Let them be aſhamed, &c.] They ſhall ſo: and this prayer againſt the Churches enemies ſhall ſtill ſpeak effectually.

Verſ. 27. Let them ſhout for joy, &c.] He concludeth with hearty prayer for the Church, as he doth in divers other Pſalms.

That favour my righteous cauſe] Though perhaps they dare do no more than inwardly favour it, and by their prayers to God promote it.

Let them ſay continually, &c.] Let them have continual cauſe to praiſe God for this ſweet property, that he delighteth in his peoples proſperity, and afflicteth them not from his heart, nor grieveth the Children of men, but for their greateſt good, Lam. 3. 35.

Verſ. 28. And my tongue, &c.] I do ſolemnly promiſe that thy praiſes ſhall never dye on my hand, &c.

PSAL. XXXVI.

A Pſalm of David the Servant of the Lord] See Pſal. 18. title. Then hee had well-nigh finiſhed his Ruledom, here he is about to begin it, and therefore aſſumeth this title. Servus eſt nomen officii, Servant is a name of Office or Duty. Tertullian ſaith of Auguſtus (we may better of David) Gratum ei fuit nomen pietatis, quam poteſtatis, he took more pleaſure in names of duty than of dignity; ſo thoſe heavenly Courtiers rejoyce rather to be ſtiled Angels, that is, Meſſengers, and Miniſtring Spirits, than Thrones, Principalities, Powers, &c.

Hieron. Vulgata. Verſ. 1. The tranſgreſſion of the wicked ſaith within my heart] Some ſay tis libbi for libbo, Jod for Vau, and render it within (or in the midſt of) his own heart; and ſo make it the ſame in ſenſe with Pſal. 14. 1. but theſe make too bold with the text. David, that zealous Servant of God, was fully perſwaded of, and deeply affected with, the profligate wickedneſs of ſome graceleſs perſons (ſuch as were Saul, and his bloud-ſucking Sycophants) that they were ſtark Atheiſts, and had not the leaſt ſpark of common goodneſs left in them; that they had neither the fear of God, nor ſhame of the World to reign them in from any outrage. This is mine opinion of them, ſaith David, I am ſtrongly ſo conceited, and I will give you my grounds. I ſpeak as to wiſe men: judge yee what I ſay.

Verſ. 2. For he flattereth himſelf in his own eyes] This is the firſt proof of the foregoing charge, and the fountain of all the following exorbitancies. See the like, 2 Tim. 3. 2. there ſelf-love brings all out of order: here ſelf-flattery. Sibi palpum obtrudit, he ſtroketh himſelf on the head, and ſaith, I ſhall have peace, though I walk in the ſtubbornneſs of mine heart, to adde drunkenneſs to thirſt; and rebellion to ſin, Deut. 29. 19. Thus he ſootheth and ſmootheth up himſelf, neither ſhall any one perſwade him but that his penny is as good ſilver as the beſt of them all. Thus he calleth evil good, and good evil; and proudly bolſtering of himſelf in his ſinful practices, he maketh a bridge of his own ſhadow, and ſo falleth into the ditch of deſtruction.

Until his iniquity be found to be hateful] Till God by his Judgements uncaſe him, and men out of utter hatred of his execrable practices, tell him his own to his teeth. Thus Stephen Gardiner being charged of cruelty by Mr. Bradford, anſwered in open Court, I for my part have been challenged for being too gentle often times, which thing Bonner confirmed, and ſo did almoſt all the audience, that he had ever been too mild and moderate. Act. & Mon. 1461. But Doctor Taylour told him another tale, when he ſaid to him, How dare you for ſhame look me or any Chriſtian man Ibid. 1380. in the face, ſeeing you have forſaken the truth, denied our Saviour Chriſt, done contrary to your Oath? &c. So Bonner, They report me, ſaid he, to the Lord Mayor, to ſeek bloud, and call me Bloudy Bonner; whereas God knows I never ſought any mans bloud in all my life. To whom Mr. Smith the Martyr anſwered, Ibid. 1537. Why my Lord, do you put on this fair viſor before my Lord Mayor, to make him beleeve that you ſeek not my bloud, to cloak your Murthers through my ſtoutneſs, as you call it? Have you not had my brother Tomkins before you, whoſe hand when you had burnt moſt cruelly, you burnt his whole body: and not only of him, but of a great many of Chriſts Members, &c? So upon the Martyrdom of Maſter Philpot, a certain unknown good woman in a Letter to Bonner wrote thus; Indeed you are called the common Cut-throat, and general ſlaughter-ſlave to all the Biſhops of England; and therefore it is wiſdom for me and all other ſimple ſheep of the Lord to keep us out of your butcherly ſtall, as long as we can, eſpecially ſince you have ſuch ſtore already that you are not able to drink all their bloud, leſt you ſhould break your belly; and therefore you let them lye ſtill, and dye for hunger, &c. And ſoon after, you have broken a Pot indeed (Mr. Philpot) Ib. d. 1672. but the precious Word contained therein is ſo notably therewithall ſhed abroad, that the ſweet ſavour thereof hath wonderfully well refreſhed all the true Houſehold, or Congregation of Chriſt, that they cannot abide any more the ſtinking ſavour of your filthy ware, that came from the dunghil of Rome, though your Lordſhips Judaſſes ſet them to ſale every where to fill up your Baggs, &c. Thus theſe bloud-ſuckers ſtunk above ground, and it is probable that the Saints ſhall look upon ſuch in the next World, throughout all eternity, with execrable and everlaſting deteſtation.

Verſ. 3. The words of his mouth are iniquity and deceit] That is, ſaith Calvin, he hath ſomething to ſay to excuſe and juſtifie himſelf, to the hardening of his heart, and haſtening of his deſtruction; as there is no Wool ſo coarſe but will take ſome colour. But God will one day waſh off his varniſh with rivers of Brimſtone; hee can skill of none other Language but that of Hell; the words of his mouth are, deſiderium & dolus; there is no truth, and as little truſt to be put in any thing that he ſpeaketh. And why? there is no fear of God before his eyes. See a like Text, Rom. 3. 13, 14, 15.

He hath left off to be wiſe, and to do good] That little light he once had, he hath loſt, and caſt off ſuch good practices as once in hypocriſie he performed; neither will he learn to do better. Dicit reprobos fugitare rationem bene agendi, ne vitam ſuam in melius corrigere cogantur, ſaith Vatablus.

Verſ. 4. He deviſeth miſchief upon his bed] He bendeth his wits and beateth his braines, perdius & pernox, breaking his ſleep to plot and plow, to contrive and effect miſchief. Vanity, or villany is his whole ſtudy. He is alwaies either weaving ſpiders webs, or hatching Cockatrices eggs.

He ſetteth himſelf in a way that is not good] And there meaneth to keep him, as the word importeth; ſet he is, and he will not be removed, being every whit as good as ever he meaneth to be. Statuit ſe; there you left him, and there you may find him, for he is no changeling; and that's a peece of his ſilly glory.

He abhorreth not evill] Sed ſtudioſiſſime amplectitur, but doth wickedly with hands earneſtly, and taketh long ſtrides towards Hell (which is but a little before him) as if he feared it would be full ere he came thither. If he do abſtain from any wickedneſs, yet hee abhorreth it not. It is for the evill conſequents of ſin (viz. ſhame, loſs, puniſhment) that he forbeareth it; and not becauſe it is offenſivum Dei, & averſivum à Deo, an offence againſt God, and a turning away from God; that's no argument at all to him, ſed fertur laxis habenis in quavis flagitia, but he is hurried headlong into all wickedneſſes, as Vultures flye ſwiftly to the moſt ſtinking carcaſes. Jun.

Verſ. 5. Thy mercy O Lord, is in the Heavens,] Yea farre above them, Pſal. 108. 4. and over all thy good and mens bad works. Otherwiſe thou couldeſt never endure ſuch provocations of the profane rout; who yet live upon thee, and ſhare in thy generall goodneſſe. Admiratur David incredibilem Dei patientiam, &c. Vat.

And thy truth unto the cloudes] Gods mercy goeth uſually yoaked with his truth and bounded by it; leſt any ſhould preſume upon it, conſidering that God is faithfull as well as mercifull; faithfull, I ſay, to fulfill both his promiſes and his menaces too. And as he hath mercy unmeaſurable, and truth unfailable for his Saints; ſo he hath Righteouſneſſe and Judgements for the Wicked, as it followeth.

Verſ. 6. Thy Righteouſneſs is like the great mountaines] Heb. Mountaines of God, pro more linguæ, quæ quando magnificat aliquid, addit nomen Dei, ut Jon. 3. 3. Gen. 30. 5. Rev. 15. 2. Pſal. 80. 11. & 68. 16. ſaith R. David, that is, after the manner of the Hebrew tongue, which when it would magnifie any thing, addeth the name of God; becauſe as any thing is nearer to God, the more excellent it is. The like is to be found alſo in Heathen-Authors. David meaneth that as Gods mercy is matchleſſe, ſo his Juſtice is unmoveable; and we are to give him the glory of the one, as well as of the other, ſith they are both alike in him; for whatſoever is in God, is God. Sic Διὸς κολπος, Arat. in Diosem. ἀντὶ τοῦ μεγάλου.

Thy Judgements are a great deep] A fathomleſſe abyſſe, in quam dejicis impios, & nunquam evadunt, ſaith Kimchi; wherein the Wicked ſink irrecoverably. Thy providentiall diſpenſations alſo are paſt finding out, Rom. 11. 33. They are to Reaſon as the Sea is to Shallows; and therefore we muſt do by them as the Romanes did by a certain lake of unknown depth, they dedicated it to Victory.

O Lord, thou preſerveſt man and beaſt] Such is thy beneficence, anſwerable to thy patience afore celebrated. Thou not only beareſt with mens evill manners, even to admiration; but abundantly provideſt for their being, and well-being; of ſuch I mean, as walk about the World with hearts as full as Hell of all kind of wickedneſſe. Howbeit bonitas tua ad Atheum eſt ſicut illa ad beſtiam, ſaith Kimchi, here thou doſt but for the Atheiſt, as thou doſt for the Beaſt, and by that courſe of common preſervation and kindneſſe which runneth toward all; that none need doubt of a Providence.

Verſ. 7. How excellent (Heb. precious) is thy loving-kindneſſe?] That ſpeciall love and favour that thou vouchſafeſt to thine own elect only. Oh this is incomparable, and inexpreſſible. It maketh a vaſt difference betwixt the Righteous and the wicked ed, though the blind World obſerveth it not.

Therefore the Children of men] Who are alſo the Children of God, by a better birth, Joh. 1. 12, 13. and that's their greateſt preferment, 1 Joh. 3. 1. Ludovicus ſirnamed the Saint, King of France, would needs be called Ludovicus de Piſſiaco, rather than take greater titles; becauſe there he became a Chriſtian. He thought no birth to a new birth in Chriſt, no Parentage to that of God to his Father.

Put their truſt under the ſhaddow of thy wings] As chickens (in a ſtorm, or when the Puttock threatneth) hover and cover under the Henne. See Pſal. 91. Matth. 23.

Verſ. 8. They ſhal be abundantly ſatisfied] Heb. watered, inebriated. They ſhall be plentifully provided for, as the Domeſticks; they ſhall have a confluence of all comforts and contentments for this life and a better; for godlineſſe hath the promiſes of both. Hic locus eſt conſolationis pleniſſimus, ſaith One.

And thou ſhalt make them drink of the river of thy pleaſure] And ſo utterly quench their thirſt after the World and ſin.

Cliterio quicunq; ſitim de fonte levarit,
Vina fugit.

Verſ. 9. For with thee is the fountain of life] Vena vitæ, vera vitæ ſcaturigo. A fountain communicateth its water, and yet is not exhauſted. Fontium perennitas, is one of the wonders in nature; what ſhall we ſay of this divine fountain of life, temporall, ſpirituall, and eternall, over-flowing and ever-flowing?

In thy light ſhall we ſee light] viz. Of knowledge, and comfort; what's the air without light? or any thing elſe without God? Abſq; Deo omnis copia eſt egeſtas, ſaith Bernard. In the former compariſon, with thee is the fountain (or vein) of lives, the Prophet alludeth either to waters, as is aforeſaid, or to metalls; to ſhew that as the veines of gold, ſilver, and the like, do lye in bank in the boſome and bowels of the earth; ſo doth life in God. Or, to the veines of the body, which as ſo many rivets or rivolets derive their blood from that red Sea, the liver. Certain it is, that man hath neither life nor light in himſelf, till it be communicated unto him from God.

Verſ. 10. O continue thy loving kindneſſe] Heb. Draw it out at full length, extend and exerciſe it, lengthen and perpetuate it. Thus the godly greatly taken with the ſweetneſſe of Gods houſe, and rapt in the admiration of his tranſcendent goodneſs towards them, pray for a continuance thereof; Intimating alſo by the manner of expreſſion, that Gods peculiar mercies to his are a continued ſeries, there is a connection between them, yea a concatenation. And as in a chain, one link draweth on another, ſo doth one mercy another; unleſſe we break the chain by our unthankfullneſſe.

Unto them that know thee -- to the upright in heart] Here we have a juſt deſcription of the heirs of Gods promiſes, and of the partakers of his peculiar mercies. Firſt, They muſt be knowing perſons; know they muſt God and his will, themſelves and their duties. Secondly, They muſt be upright in heart; for knowledge without practice is like Rachel, beautifull, but barren; or like rain in the middle region, where it doth no good. A good underſtanding have all they that do his Precepts, Pſal. 111. 10. and ſuch only are upright in heart.

Terent. Verſ. 11. Let not the foot of pride come againſt me] The Wicked do manibus pedibuq; obnixe omnia facere, that they may ruine the Righteous; but God can divert them, manacle them, ſhackle them that they ſhall neither march againſt his people, nor meddle to unſettle their faith. Nevertheleſſe hee looketh to be ſought unto for theſe things, Ezek. 36. 37. Dan. 10. 12. I came forth for thy word, ſaith the Angel, that is, upon thy prayer.

Verſ. 12. There are the workers of iniquity fallen] There where they plotted or practiſed the downfall of the Righteous; as Henry the third of France was ſtabbed in the ſame Chamber where hee and others had contrived the Pariſian Maſſacre. God taketh notice of the very place where ſin is committed, to puniſh accordingly; as he did Abimelech, Ahab, the Jews, that cryed Crucifie him, crucifie him, &c.

They are caſt down] With a force; the Angel of God chaſing them according to my prayer; which now methinks I ſee to be graciouſly anſwered. It muſt needs go ill with the Wicked, when the Saints ſhall turn them over to God to be tamed, and taken an order with.

And ſhall not be able to riſe] Becauſe laid for dead by an Almighty hand. The Righteous falleth ſeven times in a day, and riſeth again; not ſo the workers of iniquity.

PSAL. XXXVII.

VErſ. 1. Fret not thy ſelf becauſe of evill doers] Who proſper in the World, when better men ſuffer many times. This made good David ſick of the Fret, as himſelf teſtifieth, Pſal. 73. till better informed and ſetled, by repairing to the Sanctuary, Verſ. 17. he wrote this thirty ſeventh Pſalm for the good of Gods people; leſt they being ſcandalized in like manner, and ſtumbling at the ſame ſtone that he had done, ſhould want direction, and ſo fall into inconvenience, temptation and a ſnare. David was old when he wrote this Pſalm (as appeareth Verſ. 25. I have been young, and now am old) therefore ſhould his counſel here given be the more acceptable. He might as well ſay to mens tumultuating paſſions, as once Auguſtus did to his mutinous ſouldiers, and thereby quieted them, Audite ſenem juvenes, quem juvenem ſenes audierunt. Fret not your ſelves, Fret not your ſelves, I ſay, to do evill. Be not angry at God, as Jonah was; or aggrieved, as Jeremy, chap. 12. 1. and Habbakkuk, chap. 1. 13. as if the divine providence did not juſtly divide to every man his due demenſe, and do him right; But have patience a while, yea let patience have line and rope, her perfect work, as St. James hath it; and quiet your boyling ſpirits with that word, wherewith Chriſt becalmed the raging ſea, Peace, be ſtill. God will unriddle his providences ere long; and then men ſhall ſee the reaſon of all occurrences, and that all was done in ſingular wiſdome. Pompey beaten out of the field by Ceſar, complained that there was a miſt over the eye of providence; when as indeed all the fault was in the ſoreneſſe or dimneſſe of his own eyes, and the twinkling light of Natures ruſh-candle. Seneca ſaw as farre, and ſaid as much to this matter as a Heathen could, in his Tract, Cur malis bene ſit, &c. But it is the Sanctuary alone that can afford ſound ſatisfaction to a ſoul thus puzzled; as for Philoſophicall comforts and counſells in this caſe, Cicero ſaid well of them, Neſcio quomodo imbecillior eſt medicina quam morbus, However it cometh to paſs, the diſeaſe is too hard for the medicine.

Neither be thou envious againſt, &c.] Their proſperity is their portion, all they are like to have, Pſal. 17. 14. and what is it more than a ſmall annuity for term of life, in the utmoſt part of that large Lord-ſhip, whereof thou art the heir, and ſhalt ſhortly be the poſſeſſour? Queen Elizabeth envyed the Milkmaid, when ſhe was in priſon. But if ſhe had known what a glorious reign ſhe ſhould have had afterwards for forty four years, ſhe would not have envyed her. And as little needeth a godly man, though in miſery, to envy a wicked man in the ruffe of all his proſperity and jollity, conſidering what he hath in hand, much more what hee hath in hope.

Verſ. 2. For they ſhall ſoon be cut down like the graſs] Fanûm quadam felicitate temporaliter florent, as Auſtin phraſeth it, but their felicity is ſhort-liv'd; this proud graſſe ſhall be mowed down ere long, Pſal. 92. 7. if not ſooner, yet at death howſoever, which unto them is but a trap-door to Hell. Envy mee not my grapes, ſaid that ſouldier; I muſt dye for them. So may wicked men ſay of their preſent proſperity, which is but like Hamans banquet before execution.

Verſ. 3. Truſt in the Lord, and do good] Theſe, and the following are excellent means and medicines againſt the Fret. True faith will truſt in God, where it cannot trace him; it will alſo work by love, and by doing good approve it ſelf to be right; as it appeared by the fruits that it was a good Land; and as it appeared by the coats, that Dorcas was a good woman.

So ſhalt thou dwell in the Land] Heb. Dwell thou in the Land, viz. bee content with thy lot, not looking at the larger allowances of wicked rich men; who the more they have of the fat of the earth, the more they will fry and blaze in Hell. Do thou abide in thy ſtation, and ſerve Gods providence in thy particular calling.

And

And verily thou ſhalt be fed] Fed like a Sheep, under the conduct and keeping of a good Shepherd, as the word ſignifieth. Kimchi readeth it, Paſce in veritate, Feed others with the truth; as the lips of the righteous feed many. Tremellius rendreth it, Paſcere fide, feed on faith; that is, nourish thy ſelf, and live by it, according to that of Habbakkuk, chap. 2. 4. The juſt ſhall live by his faith. Some render it, Paſce fidem, feed Faith, ſc. by pondering the Promiſes of God, which are, Pabulum fidei, the food of Faith. Others, Paſcere fideliter, get thy living faithfully, and honeſtly by thy true labour.

Verſ. 4. Delight thy ſelf alſo in the Lord] Whilſt others delight in riches and pleaſures; as if there were no other happineſs but to have, and to hold, no ſport unleſs men may have the Devil their Play-fellow. The like counſel hereunto giveth Saint Paul to his Son Timothy, 1 Epiſt. 6. 12. whilſt others lay hold as with tooth and nayl on riches, &c. lay thou hold on eternal life; make God thy portion and thou art made for ever.

And he ſhall give thee the deſires of thy heart] It ſhall be unto thee even as thou wilt. It is ſaid of Luther, that he could have what he would of Almighty God. What may not a Favourite, who hath the royalty of his Princes eare, obtain of him? It is ſaid of Seianus, that in all his deſigns he found in Tiberius the Emperour ſo great facility and affection to his deſires, that he needed only to ask and give thanks.

Verſ. 5. Commit thy way unto the Lord] Heb. Roll thy way, &c. That is, depend wholly upon him for direction and ſucceſs in all thine undertakings and affairs; caſing thy minde to him by prayer, and caſting thy ſelf by faith upon his care and conduct; Caſt thy burden upon the Lord, ſaith David elſewhere.

Volve, i. e. omnem neceſſitatem in eum exoneres. Kimchi.

Truſt alſo in him] Things are therefore repeated in this Pſalm, that they may take the better impreſſion, and beget incouragement.

And he ſhall bring it to paſs] It, that is, whatſoever thou committeſt to him.

Verſ. 6. And he ſhall bring forth thy righteouſneſs as the light] God will ſo oyl thy good name that infamy ſhall not ſtick to it. Dirt will ſtick upon a Mud-wall, not ſo upon Marble. But ſay thou be aſperſed, and denigrated by calumnies, and contumelies caſt upon thee, and thou lye under them for a time, as the earth doth under the darkneſs of the night; yet as the morning ſuddenly ariſing driveth away that darkneſs, ſo ſhall God clear up thy wronged innocency; and as the Moon wadeth out of a Cloud, ſo ſhalt thou get over all thy troubles in this kind, or any other; it ſhall be with thee as it was once with Cato (whom Seneca calleth, the lively picture of Vertues) who was thirty two times accuſed in open Court, and as many times cleared and abſolved.

And thy judgements as the noon-day] At the Day of Judgement howſoever, if not ſooner; then there will be a Reſurrection as well of names as bodies.

Verſ. 7. Reſt in the Lord] Heb. Be ſilent to the Lord; Digito compeſce labellum, lay thine hand upon thy mouth when chafing ripe, when ready to let fly at thoſe that wrong thee. The more ſilent the Patient is, the more ſhrill the Wrong will be, as Numb. 12. 2. while Moſes is dumb, God ſpeaks; deaf, God hears and ſtirs; the leſs he ſaid and did, the more God ſtruck in for him; and the leſs any man ſtriveth for himſelf, the more is God his Champion; ſo he do it to the Lord, that is, in obedience to him, and not for a name, as ſome Heathens did.

And wait patiently for him] Or, put thy ſelf to pain for him; that is, though it go againſt the hair with thee, and thou finde it hard to ſuffer evil, and to wait patiently for better, yet do it for his ſake, and therein thou ſhalt do thy ſelf no diſſervice at all.

Who bringeth wicked devices to paſs] And pleaſeth himſelf in them, becauſe for preſent he proſpereth; as Dionyſius did in his Sacriledge, becauſe no harm to him followed upon it. Seculi latitia, eſt impunita nequitia, ſaith Auſtin.

Verſ. 8. Ceaſe from anger and forſake wrath] Repetitio eſt, ut magis inculcet, ſaith Vatablus; This precept is doubled and redoubled, that we may the better retain and practiſe it. Angry a man may be, and muſt be at evil-doers, in as much as they break Gods Law, Pſal. 119. 135. pollute his Name. Ezek. 36. 20. 23. Rom. 2. 23, 24. procure the Judgements of God upon others alſo, Joſh. 22. 18. pull down down ſwift deſtruction upon themſelves, 2 Pet. 2. 1. Romans 2. 5. Thus Moſes was angry, Exod. 32. 19. and our Saviour, Mark 3. 5. yet not ſo angry but that they could at ſome time pity thoſe they were diſpleaſed with, and pray for them too. This they that cannot do, are inordinately and ſinfully angry, and muſt at any rate ſuppreſs ſuch paſſionate diſtempers.

Fret not thy ſelf in any miſe to do evil] And he ſhall have much ado not to over-do, not to do amiſs, that bridleth not his paſſions, for theſe, like heavie bodies down ſteep hills, once in motion, move themſelves, and ſeldom know any ground but the bottom. Ne igitur accendaris irâ ſaltem ad malefaciendum. Kimchi rendreth it, Ne miſceas teipſum, Come not in company with the ungodly, at leaſt to do evil; to do as they do. So to thoſe words in the firſt verſe, Fret not thy ſelf becauſe of evil-doers, the Chaldee addeth, to be like unto them.

Verſ. 9. For evil-doers ſhall be cut off] Yea, they ſhall ſoon be cut off, verſ. 10. and ſo ſhall all ſuch, as having a while fretted at them, do at length revolt to them; as David was ready to do, once at leaſt, Pſal. 73. 12, 13, 14. and as ſome others did out and out, as they ſay, verſ. 10. therefore his people return hither to their temporal undoing at leaſt.

But thoſe that wait upon the Lord] For deliverance in due ſeaſon, and for accompliſhment of the Promiſes. All good people are ſuch Expectants, and ſhould they dye in a waiting condition (for comfort, I mean) yet are they bleſſed, becauſe God hath ſaid, Bleſſed are all they that wait for him, Iſa. 3. 18.

They ſhall inherit the earth] Having a right to all, as Heirs of the World together with faithful Abraham, Rom. 4. and although it be detained from them for a while, as the promiſed Land was from the Iſraelites, by the Amorites, till their ſins were full, Gen. 15. 16. yet the Saints ſhall one day have power over all things; and mean while they are ſure of a ſufficiency, if not a ſuperfluity. An Heir during his Minority is many times held to ſtraight allowance, and forced to borrow of Servants: ſo tis with the Saints.

Verſ. 10. For yet a little while and the wicked, &c.] Tantillum, tantillum, adhuc pauxillum; wait therefore, and fret not. See verſ. 9. the ſame in effect with this and the next; for more certainty of the matter, and to correct our ſhort-ſpiritedneſs, who would have things done ſtrait upon't, or not at all.

Yea thou ſhalt diligently conſider his place] There is neither root nor branch to be found, tale nor tidings to be heard of him, he is utterly vaniſhed, and baniſhed out of the world.

Verſ. 11. But the meek ſhall inherit the earth] Our Saviour (and probably from hence) ſaith the ſame, Matth. 5. 5. See the Notes there, and above, on verſ. 9. of this Pſalm.

And ſhall delight themſelves in the abundance of peace] becauſe cured of the Fret, and well content with their preſent portion; hence that εὐθυμία, rectitude of mind, the mother of all true mirth; when the wicked are in a perpetual inquietude, σαθρὰ ἕξει γὰρ ἁπάντων ἡ ψυχή, they are never at reſt.

Verſ. 12. The wicked plotteth againſt the juſt] Plotteth and practiſeth, being ſet on by that old Man-ſlayer, who lendeth the wicked man his ſeven Heads to plot, and his ten Horns to puſh.

And gnaſheth upon him with his teeth] Saying unto him, when he hath laid hold on him, Nunc inveni te, as Kimchi Paraphraſeth. Now I have found you, and ſhall be even with you. Art thou come, thou Villain, ſaid Stephen Gardiner to Doctor Taylour, Martyr, when he firſt appeared before him? How dareſt thou look me in the face for ſhame? Knoweſt thou not who I am? Thus that proud Prelate, gnaſhing his teeth, and boaſting great matters with his tongue, and he was bravely anſwered, as hath been before related. Act. and Mon.

Verſ. 13. The Lord will laugh at him] See Pſal. 2. 4. the righteous alſo ſhall have a time to laugh at him, Pſal. 52. 6. and mean while comforteth himſelf with this, that God laugheth at him, and that therefore himſelf hath no great cauſe to cry, ſith ridendo irritos reddit, by laughing at them, he blaſteth all their deſigns, and that with diſgrace: men love not to be laughed at.

For he ſeeth that his day is coming] His diſmal day, his Deaths-day (which will alſo be his Doomſ-day) that day wherein God hath determined to ſlay them with their own own ſword, and to ſave the Righteous; as it is in the two next verſes. But eſpecially that laſt and great day of the World, wherein Dicetur reprobis Ite, Venite probis.

Verſ. 14. The Wicked have drawn out the ſword, and have bent their bow] That they may aſſault the Righteous, both cominus, nearer hand, and eminus, at a diſtance; for which purpoſe they come againſt him (like a walking Armorie) with ſword, bow, and other inſtruments of death; as reſolved to kill and ſlay. We are counted as ſheep to the ſlaughter, Rom. 8.

Verſ. 15. Their ſword ſhall enter into their own heart] As did Sauls, and his armour-bearers, 1 Sam. 31. See Pſal. 7. 16.

Per quod quis peccat, per idem punitur & ipſe.

And their bows ſhall be broken] Neither their bowes only, but their armes alſo, Verſ. 17. They ſhall utterly be diſarmed and diſabled, when once God takes them to do; which is commonly when they are at the ſtrongeſt, and moſt confident.

Verſ. 16. A little that the Righteous man hath, &c.] Whereas it was ſaid before, The meek ſhall inherit the earth, ſome man might object that ſuch are commonly poor enough; and that's no ſmall affliction, as the Heathens (Menander, Euripides, Alcæus, &c.) have affirmed; and experience aſſureth it. Hereunto is anſwered, that a little that the Righteous man hath is better, &c. as a box of pearles is more worth than many loads of pibbles. And as a bird with a little eye, and the advantage of a wing to ſoar with, may ſee farre wider than an Ox with a greater; ſo the Righteous with a little eſtate, joyned with faith, tranquillity and devotion, may have more pleaſure, feel more comfort, ſee more of Gods bounty, than one of vaſt poſſeſſions, whoſe heart cannot lift it ſelf above the earth, as One well obſerveth. Some render it thus, Better is the little of one Righteous man, than the plentious Mammon of many Wicked. The Bee is as well (if not better) content with feeding on the dew, or ſucking from a flower, as Behemoth that grazeth on the Mountaines. Here the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, ſaith Vatablus, of the ſecret bleſſing of God; Quia etſi in diem vivit item, & calotamen non ſecus ac Manna paſcuntur; for although they have but from hand to mouth, yet they are fed from Heaven, as it were with Manna.

Verſ. 17. For the armes of the wicked ſhall be broken] i. e. His power, valour, all that wherein they think their ſtrength and help ſtandeth. See verſ. 15. the ſtrongeſt ſinew in the arm of fleſh cracks.

But the Lord upholdeth the Righteous.] Though ſeemingly never ſo weak and wealthleſſe.

Verſ. 18. The Lord knoweth the dayes of the upright] In bonum novit, Pſal. 1. 6. id eſt prolongat, ſaith Kimchi; he knoweth, that is, he acknowledgeth, approveth, hath a gracious regard unto their dayes, and the events thereof; he hath decreed to a minute how long they ſhall ſuffer; and what happineſſe ſhall ſucceed their ſufferings.

And their inheritance ſhall be for ever] Here, long; and hereafter, eternal. What they want here, ſhall be there made up abundantly.

Verſ. 19. They ſhall not be aſhamed, &c.] They ſhall hold up their heads, when others droop; neither ſhall they be without comfort in times of common calamity, as Noah was — media tranquillus in unda.

And in the dayes of famin they ſhall be ſatisfied] God will work wonders rather than they ſhall want any thing that is good for them; as he fed the Iſraelites in the Wilderneſſe, Eliah by the Ravens, Jeremy by a ſpecial providence in the ſiege. As Rochel was relieved by an extraordinary ſhoal of fiſh caſt in upon them by divine providence. And as Leiden beſiedged by the Duke of Alva, and forced for their ſuſtenance to ſearch and ſcrape dunghills, to boil old leather, &c. was reſcued by the turning of the Winds, and ſwelling of the Tide, which forced the Duke to raiſe the ſiege and be gone.

Verſ. 20. But the Wicked ſhall periſh] In the midſt of their wealth, and greateſt abundance; their mony ſhall periſh with them.

And the enemies of the Lord] Theſe are worſe than thoſe Wicked aforementioned, ned, ſaith Theodoret; they are ſuch as go on ſtill in their treſpaſſes, Pſal. 68. 21.

Shall be as the fat of Lambes] which in ſacrifices was wholly to be burnt and conſumed, Levit. 3. 15, 16, 17.

Into ſmoak ſhall they conſume away] Smoak, the higher it aſcendeth, the ſooner it vaniſheth. Quanto fuerit globus ille grandior, tanto vanior, ſaith Auſtin. They ſhall be conſumed in the ſmoak of Gehenna, or Hell, ſaith the Chaldee here.

Verſ. 21. The Wicked borroweth, and payeth not again] Either becauſe he cannot, he is ſo unable; or becauſe he cares not, he is ſo unconſcionable. But in the midſt of his wealth, he is many times wanting; in the fullneſſe of his ſufficiency, he is in ſtraits; and to ſupply his neceſſities, ſticketh long in the Uſurers furnace, which leaveth him at laſt neither metall, nor matter. Non ſunt dendo.

But the Righteous ſheweth mercy and giveth] Of that which is his own; to which end he hath a great care to pay his debts. When Archb. Cranmer diſcerned the ſtorm which after fell upon him in Queen Maries dayes, he took expreſſe order for the payment of all his debts, which when it was done, a moſt joyfull man was hee. How hoſpitable he was and liberall, Tremelius teſtifieth in his Epiſtle before his comment on Hoſea.

Verſ. 22. For ſuch as be bleſſed of him, &c.] See Verſ. 9. & 11.

Shall be cut off] In hoc ſæculo & futuro, ſaith Kimchi. Or this verſe may be taken as a reaſon of the former, viz. why are Wicked rich men ſo neceſſitated, and Righteous men ſo enabled, enlarged? God curſeth the one, but bleſſeth the other, and that is it which maketh the odds betwixt them.

Verſ. 23. The ſteps of a good man are ordered by the Lord] Heb. The ſteps of a man; for good men only are reckoned of by God, Jer. 5. 1. ſo a wife is put for a good wife, Prov. 18. 22. A bad wife is but (according to Lamechs ſecond wives name) Zillah, that is, the ſhaddow of a wife. Now as God choſe out the Iſraelites way for them all along the wildernesſe; ſo he doth ſtill for thoſe that are good, not alwaies the ſhorteſt way, but the ſafeſt; nor alwaies the ſtreighteſt way, but that which moſt conduceth to their journeys end. As therefore Iſrael in the Wilderneſſe, ſo muſt we follow God, though hee ſeem to lead us in and out, backward and forward, as if we were treading a maze.

And he delighteth in his way] His way it is called, for encouragement ſake, though it be God alone who chuſeth and chalketh out his way, yea cauſeth him to keep his Commandements, Ezek. 36. Certum eſt nos facere quod facimus; ſed Ille facit ut faciamus. God doth all our works for us.

Verſ. 24. Though hee fall, hee ſhall not be utterly caſt down] See Prov. 24. 16. If he fall, yet he falleth forward; and if he be caſt down, yet he continueth not, So 2 Cor. 4. 9. as do the wicked, Ezek. 32. 4. whom God caſteth into the briars, and there leaveth them. Quum ruit non corruit. Vat.

For the Lord upholdeth him with his hand] Gods hand is ſtill under his; and his goodneſſe lower than they can fall. His ſupporting grace preſerveth them from utter recidivation; His Almighty power from utter deſtruction.

Verſ. 25. I have been young, &c.] Here he recordeth an experiment of his (ſuch as whereof, Pſal. 119. is moſtly made up) and if other mens experiences agree not altogether with his, it is no wonder; Kings uſe not to mind beggars. Or he might only mean Vagrants; according to that; Let their children bee Vagabonds, and beg their bread. Good men may be compelled to crave their bread, as David himſelf did of Ahimelech the High-Prieſt; as Eliah did of the widdow of Sarepta; as thoſe pauperes de Lugduno, and many others have lived upon almes. But ſeldome or never have good people needed to crave relief of the ungodly.

Yet have I not ſeen the Righteous forſaken] Leſt he may be for a time (as the Lion leaveth his whelps till they are almoſt famiſhed, and have wel-nigh killed themſelves with roaring, to make them more hardy and valiant) but never forſaken, no though he beg his bread; becauſe God hath ſaid, I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee. The Righteous is never forſaken, nor his ſeed too, ſaid Mr. Perkins. God may caſt godly Parents into want, but their godly Children ſhall ſurely be bleſſed. Others underſtand by Righteous here, merciſull men, who give almes for the love of God, and therefore come not to poverty, Pſal. 112. 5, 9. Prov. 11. 24, 25. Pſal. 41. 1. See Mr. Bradfords ſweet letter to Mr. John Hall and his Wife, Priſoners for the Goſpell. Act. and Mon. 1495.

Verſ. 26. He is ever mercifull, and lendeth] Heb. Every day, according to others neceſſitie, and his own ability; for to ſtretch beyond the ſtaple, were to marre all. But he is ever ready to diſtribute, willing to communicate, 1 Tim. 6. 17. as Mr. Wiſeheart, the Scotch Martyr, whoſe charity had never an end, night, day, nor noon, ſaith Mr. Fox; and Thomas Tomkins, an Engliſh Martyr, very forward to lend, looking for nothing again.

Act. & Mon. 1155. Ib. 1344.

And his ſeed is bleſſed] Heb. Is in the bleſſing, that is, receiveth grace, and communication of all true goodneſſe from God; and praiſes, good-will, and good wiſhes from men.

Diod.

Verſ. 27. Depart from evill, and do good] See Pſal. 34. 14.

And dwel for evermore] Sine indigentia, ſaith Kimchi, without ſuch indigency and poverty as may drive thee abroad, and make thee beg thy bread. Univerſall Righteouſneſſe ſecureth a man from ſuch ſtraights.

Verſ. 28. For the Lord loveth Judgement] See Pſal. 11. 7.

But the ſeed of the Wicked ſhall be cut off] See Job 18. 19. with the Note.

Verſ. 29. The Righteous ſhall inherit, &c.] This verſe hath been expounded before, and is here repeated for more aſſurance, Verba toties inculcata viva ſunt, vera ſunt, ſana ſunt, plana ſunt.

Verſ. 30. The mouth of the righteous ſpeaketh wiſdome] Having ſpoken of the priviledges of the Righteous, he now deſcribeth them; Tales autem ſunt non quicunque nomen Juſtorum prætexunt, &c. Such are not all they that pretend to Righteouſneſſe, or can talk of it; but that can ſpeak of it fruitfully, feelingly, and from an inward Principle: And as he talketh, ſo he walketh, ne dicta factis erubeſcant, as Tertullian hath it; leſt his life ſhould ſeem to give the lye to his lips.

Verſ. 31. The law of his God is in his heart] He hath a Bible in his head, and another in his heart; he hath a good treaſure within, and therehence bringeth good things; he ſpeaketh not by rote, and as a bungler, or as a Philoſopher only; but by proof, and as one that can ſay, I beleeved, I have felt it, and therefore have I ſpoken.

None of his ſteps ſhall ſlide] How ſhould they, when they walk ſo exactly, and by ſuch a rule? Jeremy holding to it, durſt ſay, Lord if I am deceived, thou haſt deceived mee.

Verſ. 32. The wicked watcheth the righteous] See Pſal. 10. 8, 9, 10. with the Notes. Speculatur, he accurately obſerveth; looking this way and that, as a watchman in a watch-Tower. Thus Saul eyed David, and laid out for him. Thus Jeroboam watched thoſe of the ten Tribes that went to Jeruſalem to worſhip, he watched them, and waylaid them, Hoſ. 5. 1.

And ſeeketh to ſlay him] All malice is bloody, and there want not thoſe ſtill that carry about Cains bloody club, hating to the death that goodneſſe in another, that they neglect in themſelves.

Verſ. 33. The Lord will not leave him in his hands] For he knoweth how to deliver his, 2 Pet. 3. 9. as that Apoſtle could ſay by good experience, Act. 12. when he was inter ſaxum & ſacrum, as they ſay.

Nor condemn him, when he is judged] Heb. condem him for wicked; but clear and acquit him, when falſely accuſed, yea when wrongfully condemned.

Verſ. 34. Wait on the Lord] Bind him not to a day, wake not the Beloved, til he pleaſe.

Keep his way] For out of Gods precincts, out of his protection,

When the Wicked are cut off, thou ſhalt ſee it] See and ſmile, look and laugh, Pſal. 52. 6, 7. See the Note there.

Verſ. 35. I have ſeen the wicked in great power] Or, Formidable to others; firſt, a terrour, and ſhortly after, a ſcorn.

And ſpreading himſelf like a green Bay tree] Or, Cedars of Lebanon, as the Greek hath it, i. e. priding himſelf in his great proſperity.

Verſ. 36. Yet he paſſed away, &c.] The Greek and Latine have it, I paſſed by. See verſ. 10. how ſoon and utterly withered and waſted the Fig-tree, Chriſt curſed? ſo forcible is his curſe.

Verſ. 37. Mark the perfect man, &c.] As we muſt treaſure up experiences our ſelves; selves: so we must stir up others to do the like. There is a wo to such as consider not the operation of Gods hands, Isa. 5. 12.

For the end of that man is peace] Though his beginning and middle may be troublesome, yet his end (his after-end at least) shall be peace. He shall by death enter into peace, rest in his bed, Isa. 57. 2.

Vers. 38. But the transgressors, &c. Here the end is worse than the beginning. Sin ever ends tragically.

The end of the wicked shall be cut off] Their end is not death, but destruction; they are killed with death, Rev. 2. 23. life and hope end together.

Vers. 39. But the salvation of the righteous, &c.] Ejusdem ut paucis utamur tribuitur & hæc, their salvation temporal and eternal is of the Lord: so is also the destruction of the wicked, as is here necessarily implied.

He is their strength, &c.] That they faint not, sink not under the heaviest burden of their light afflictions, which are but for a moment.

Vers. 40. And the Lord shall help them, &c.] He shall, He shall, He shall. Oh the Rhetorick of God! the safety of the Saints! the certainty of the Promises!

PSAL. XXXVIII.

A Psalm of David to bring to remembrance] Made purposely for a memorial, both of what he had suffered, and from what he had been delivered. See 1 Chron. 16. 4. Exod. 30. 16. Lev. 2. 2. & 6. 15. Recordatio autem intelligitur miseriæ ex misericordia, Psal. 132. Isa. 62. 6. & 63. 7. It is probable that David had so laid to heart the Rape of his Daughter Tamar, the Murther of his eldest Son Ammon, the flight of his next Son Absolom, and other troubles that befell him; (Basil thinks Absolomi conspiracy, Ahitophels perfidy, Shimeies insolency, &c.) that it cost him a great fit of sickness; out of which hardly recovering, he penned this and some other Psalms (as the 39. 39, 40.) but this especially for a Memorial, to imminde him of his own late misery, and Gods never-failing mercy to him. Both these we are wondrous apt to forget, and so both to lose the fruit of our afflictions, by falling afresh to our evil practices (as Children soon forget a whipping) and to rob God our Deliverer of his due praises: like as with Children, eaten bread is soon forgotten. Both these mischiefs, to prevent, both in himself and others (for we are bound not only to observe Gods Law, but also to preserve it as much as may be from being broken) David composed this Psalm, for to record, or to cause remembrance (See the like title, Psal. 70.) and for a form for a sick man to pray by, as Kimchi noteth; not to be sung for those in Purgatory, as some Papists have dreamed.

Vers. 1. O Lord rebuke me not in thy wrath] He beginneth and endeth the Psalm with Petitions, filleth it up with sad complaints; wherein we shall finde him groaning, but not grumbling; mourning, but not murmuring; for that is not the guise of Gods people. He beginneth with Ebun Jehova non recuso corrigi & castigari; Correct me O Lord, but with Judgement, not in anger, lest thou bring me to nothing, Jer. 10. 24. See Psal. 6. 1. with the Notes.

Vers. 2. For thine arrows stick fast in me] i. e. Sicknesses of body, and troubles of minde, Job 6. 4. Psal. 18. 14. the Jew-Doctors say, that he had a Leprosie for six Months; and that the Divine presence was taken away from him; so that he complained not without cause. But these were sagittæ salutis, saith Chrysostom, Arrows of Salvation, Love-tokens from the Lord, not unlike Jonathans arrows, 1 Sam. 20. 36. and he had been fore-warned of them by Nathan the Prophet, 1 Sam. 12. and so bore them the better. Prævisa jacula minus feriunt, Darts fore-seen are in a manner dintless,

And thine hand presseth me sore] Heb. Thou lettest down thy hand upon me. Now Gods hand is a mighty hand, 1 Pet. 5. 6. and the weight of it is importable, but that Una redemptæ manus, &c.

R. Obadiah. Deus amat quos sagittat. Aug.

Vers. 3. There is no soundness in my flesh because of thine anger] This was the immediate cause of Davids misery, it came from love displeased; penal sores seldom scape better. But blessed be our Almighty Physitian, who bringeth health health out of ſickneſs, by bringing thereby the body of death into a Conſumption.

Neither is there any reſt in my bones] Non requiescit, more lugentium. He ſaith the ſame thing twice, as Mourners uſe to do, but with an aggravation of his pain, reaching to his very bones.

Becauſe of my ſin] This was the remoot cauſe of his preſent ſufferings, and is the true Mother of all mans miſerie. Now when theſe two (Gods wrath, and mans ſin) meet in the ſoul, as phyſick and ſickneſs in the ſtomack, there muſt needs be much unreſt, till they be vomited up by confeſſion. Tis as natural for guilt to breed diſquiet, as for putrid matter to breed vermin. Let God therefore be juſtified, and every mouth ſtopped.

Sicut aquæ prævalentes in quibus erat abſorptus. Kimchi

Verſ. 4. For mine iniquities are gone over my head] So that I am even overwhelmed by them, and almoſt drowned in perdition and deſtruction. The Goſpel is poſt naufragium tabula, and aſſureth us that God hath caſt all our ſins into the bottom of the Sea, and this keepeth the head of a ſinking ſoul above water.

As an heavy burden] How light ſoever ſin ſeemeth in the committing, it will be full heavy, even as a Talent of lead, Zach. 5. 7. or as an huge Mountain, Heb. 12. 1. when once we come to a ſight and ſenſe of it, when Gods wrath and mans ſin ſhall face one another, as the former verſe hath it, according to the originall.

A facie iræ tuæ. A facie peccati mei. A facie ſtultitiæ meæ.

Verſ. 5. My wounds ſtink, and are corrupt] What his grief or diſeaſe was, we read not, ſome ſay the Leproſy; ſome take all this allegorically, the word rendred wounds, ſignifieth ſtripes, ſcarres, wailes, mattery ſoarts, running ulcers, the effects of the envenomed arrowes of the Almighty. Could we but foreſee what ſin will coſt us, we durſt not but be innocent. That we do not, is extream fooliſhneſſe, as David here acknowledgeth.

Livores vibices tumices.

Becauſe of my fooliſhneſſe] In not conſidering aforehand the hainouſneſſe of my ſin, nor the heavineſſe of the divine diſpleaſure. The word ſignifieth unadviſedneſſe, Prov. 14. 17. and tis probable he meaneth his great ſin with Bathſheba, wherein he was miſcarried by his luſts to his coſt. See Pſal. 107. 17. 18. Becauſe of my fooliſhneſſe, i. e. Quia non præveni Nathanem confeſſione, ſaith R. Obadiah, becauſe I prevented not Nathans comming, by a voluntary confeſſion of my ſin unto the Lord.

Verſ. 6. I am troubled (Heb. wryed) I am bowed down &c.] Incurvus et proſtratus obſtipus, atroque vultu ſqualidus, vix corpus trahe, I am a pittifull poor creature, and in a moſt heavy Condition, as appeareth by my gate, my geſture, my looks, and habit. See Pſal. 35. 14.

Fæmora mea proſus occupat ardens ulcus. Var. In quibus eſt concupiſcentia, Theodoret.

Verſ. 7. For my loyns are filled with a loathſome diſeaſe] The loins, thoſe ſeats of luſt, are now grievouſly inflamed and pained with ſome impoſtumated matter, or peſtilentiall carbuncle: Morbo viliſſimo, quem nominare dedecet, ſaith Abin-Ezra. God oft puniſheth ſinne in kind, and ſpeaketh to the Conſcience in its own Language, that ſuch a ſickneſſe was the fruit of ſuch a ſin.

And there is no ſoundneſſe in my fleſh]

Principium dulce eſt, ſed finis Amoris amarus,
Læta venire Venus, triſtis abire ſolet.

Sinne is as the poyſon of Aſpes, which firſt tickleth him that is ſtung, and maketh him laugh: till by little and little, it gets to the heart, and then puts him to intollerable torture.

Verſ. 8. I am feeble and ſore broken] Through the length and nature of my diſtemper, Iſai. 38. 10, 11. The ſame Hebrew word ſignifieth pining ſickneſſe, and a thrave, becauſe of the thinneſſe and weakneſſe of it.

I have roared] But not repined: this nature prompteth to, when we are in extremity, and grace is not againſt it.

Verſ. 9. Lord all my deſire is before thee] Confuſed deſires, broken requeſts, if from a broken ſpirit are upon the file of heaven, and ſtand before God till they may have an anſwer.

And my groaning is not hid from thee] No, not my breathing, Lam. 3. 56. God muſt needs hearken to the groanings of his people, go to his heart.

Verſ. 10. My heart panteth] Heb. runneth about, or is toſſed too and fro, circuivit capivit cor meum, inordinatè movetur, et non quieſcit, ſaith Hugo Etherius. The Hebrew word ſignifieth ſuch a kind of motion as that of Mariners, who runne up and down from one Countrey to another. Alſo the two laſt Radicals are doubled, to note, that it is more than an ordinary ſtirring and motion of the ſpirits, becauſe it is not come to its reſt. All earthly things to the ſoul are but as the air to the ſtone; can give it no ſtay till it come to God the center. As the circle is the perfectſt figure, becauſe it begineth and endeth the points do meet together. (as Mathematicians give the reaſon) the laſt point meeteth in the firſt, from whence it came. So ſhall wee never come to perfection or ſatisfaction (ſaith a Reverend man) till our ſouls come to God, till God make the circle meet, &c. The Wicked walk the round from one creature to another, Pſal. 12.9. but they come not at God: and hence they are ſo diſ-ſatisfied. Return unto thy reſt (Heb. Reſts) ſaith David to his ſoul, that is to God, to whom hee here maketh his moan. Miſer animus in varias ſubinde partes abreptus me deſerit.

As for the light of mine eyes] that lumen oculorum of mine eyes is almoſt quite benighted.

Verſ. 11. My lovers and my friends ſtand aloof from my ſore] Heb. my ſtroke, which therefore ſome Jew-Doctors will have to bee the Leproſy; which was noyſome and contagious: and therefore by the Law of God none were to come neer ſuch. So among the Perſians, none might come neer a Piſuga (ſo they called a Leper) and therefore Megabyſus having offended Artaxerxes, kept himſelf five years from Court pretending himſelf a Leper, and in that ſpace made his peace with the King. But in Davids friends, who deale thus with him, it was not ſo much fear of danger, as pride and perfidy, that made them deny him all duty and friendſhip, Pſal. 31.11. Job was ſo uſed, Chap. 6.15. and our Saviour when hee hung naked on the Croſſe, Luk. 23.49. and St. Paul, when hee made his defence before Nero, 2 Tim. 4.16. So was not Oreſtes by his friend Pylades, nor Damon by his Pythias, nor Achilles by Patroclus, which made Alexander cry out O felicem juvenem! Trouble tryeth who are friends, who traytors.

Verſ. 12. They alſo that ſeek after my life] That ſeek and would ſuck my bloud. As his friends were ſlack to help him, ſo his foes were active to hurt him. This David relateth before the Lord, that hee may pitty him. and be ſo much the more ingaged to him; for hee knew that where humane help faileth, divine begineth.

Speak miſchievous things] Exitialia, ſuch things as wring from mee that lamentable voice, Woe and Alaſſe, woefull evills.

And imagine deceits] Or, Murmure.

Verſ. 13. But I as a deaf man heard not] But poſſeſſed my ſoul in patience, in quietneſſe and confidence was my ſtrength, Iſa. 30.15. As they were Maſters of their tongues, ſo was I of mine ears. Hee that cannot bear calumnies reproaches and injuries, cannot live, ſaith Chyſtræus, let him even make up his pack, and get him out of the World. Vitus Theodorus ſends to adviſe with Melanchthon what to do when Oſiander preached againſt him? Melanchthon deſired him for Gods ſake to make no reply, but to behave himſelf as a deaf man that heard not. Vitus writeth back that this was very hard; yet he would obey. Another bravely anſwered one that railed upon him, Facile eſt in me dicere, cum non ſim reſponſurus, Thou maieſt ſpeak what thou wilt; but I will hear no more than I liſt, and punish thee with ſilence, or rather with a merry contempt. Princes uſe not to chide, when Embaſſadours offer them indecencies, but to deny them audience. That man certainly enjoyeth a brave compoſedneſſe, who ſeateth himſelf above the flight of the injurious claw.

And I was as a dumb man, &c.] He anſwered them by ſilence and taciturnity; which is the beſt anſwer to words of ſcorn and petulancy. Thus Iſaac anſwered his Brother Iſmael; and our Saviour, Pilat, Herod, and Caiaphas; and Gilas of Bruſſels, when the barking Fryers reviled him, held his peace continually; inſomuch that thoſe blaſphemers would ſay abroad, that he had a dumb Devil in him. This is a great victory, not to render evill for evill, or railing for railing, 1 Pet. 3.9. Nihil fortius, nihil magis egregium quam audire nevia, et non reſpondere maledicta, ſaith Caſſiodore. Nothing is more [illegible] and return no anſwer. As on the contrary, [illegible]

he goes by the worst that hath the better, saith Basil. And, Silet, & funestum dedisse plagam, saith Chrysostome. Say nothing in such a case, and thou thereby givest thine adversary a deadly blow.

Vers. 14. Thou wast like a man that heareth not] He doubleth his speech, to shew his holy pertinacy in a prudent and patient silence, though greatly provoked. David was, as it is reported of Severus the Emperour, Imperator strenuus, careful of what was to be done by him, but careless of what was said of him by others. As Augustus, he did but laugh at the Satyrs and Buffooneries published against him. He knew that as Physical pils must not be chewed, but swallowed whole; so must many injuries and indignities. Convitia prorsus contemnenda.

Vers. 15. For in thee, O Lord, do I hope] This was the ground of his patience, and differenceth it from that of Heathens, which was rather pertinacy than patience, and came not from a right principle.

Thou wilt hear] Or answer; and therefore what need is there of my answer.

Vers. 16. For I said, hear me, lest otherwise, &c.] He spread their vile speeches before the Lord, as afterwards good Hezekiah did Rabshekah's Letter; and as it was said of Charls 5. that he spake more to God than to men; so did David. His former silence therefore was not either from stupidity (a Sheep bitten by a Dog is as sensible thereof as a Swine, though he make not so great a noyse) nor from inability to make his own defence, if it had been to any purpose, for he was both innocent and eloquent: but he thought it farre better to sustain himself in faith and patience, and meekly to commit himself to God in well-doing, as unto a faithfull Creator. Besides, he feared, lest if he spake at all in this case, he should speak unadvisedly with his lips (as it is very easie to exceed) and so give occasion to the enemy to triumph, as the Papists did over Luther, for his hot and hasty speeches.

When my foot slippeth] Or, when my tongue ent-lasheth in the least, they desire no other sport, but lay it in my dish as a foul disgrace. My Motto therefore shall be, (and my practice according) Taceo, Fero, Spero, I say nothing, but suffer, and hope for better.

Vers. 17. For I am ready to halt] i. e. to miss-behave my self, and so to marre a good cause by ill managing it, and then what will become of thy great Name? This is a very forcible motive to prevail with a jealous and just God.

And my sorrow is continually before me] That is, my sin, as Eccles. 11. 10. Or, my sorrow, but much more my sin the cause of it.

Vers. 18. For I will declare mine iniquity] To them that visit me in this disease, saith Aben-Ezra, that they may pray for me, according to Jam. 5. 16. or rather to God, that he may pardon me, and ease me. Or thus, when I decline, &c. Then Vers. 19. Mine enemies are lively, &c.] q. d. It is nuts to them, and they soon compose Comedies out of my Tragedies, growing more insolent by mine afflictions, and upbraiding me with my sins.

Vers. 20. They also that render evil for good] Whilst they rejoyce at my misery, who fasted for them in their adversity, Psal. 35. 15.

Are mine adversaries] Heb. They Satanically hate me, as if they were transformed into so many breathing Devils.

Because I follow the thing that good is] This was Devil-like indeed: this was to hate and persecute God in David. Thus Cain the Devils Patriarch hated his brother Abel, and slew him: And why? Because his own works were evil, and his brothers righteous, 1 Joh. 3. 12. For like cause Adonibezek fretted at Israel, Numb. 22. 3, 4 and the Courtiers at Daniel, chap. 6. 5. Tertul.

Vers. 21. Forsake me not, O God] This was that he most of all feared. Spiritual desertion. So Jeremy, Be not thou a terrour unto me, O God; and then I care not what else can befall me.

O my God, be not thou farre from me] Though my friends stand aloof, vers. 11. yet be thou ever at hand to help me.

Vers. 22. Make haste to help me] Non mora sed fraena etiam forsan; God oft delayeth when he gives his people cause to cry out of his delays, he beseecheth us in requesting, that he may commend his blessings to us.

That I ſin not with my tongue] An hard task, a long leſſon, as Pambus in the Eccleſiaſticall hiſtory, found it by experience; and after many years tryall, could not take it out. For the tongue is an unruly Member: And if any man offend not in word, the ſame is a perfect man, and able alſo to bridle the whole body, Jam. 3. 2. David reſolved to temper his tongue, and to keep a bridle or a muzzle for his mouth, whiles he was in extremity of pain, and in the preſence of the Wicked, who lay at the catch, and would ſoon exclaim; but his heart deceived him, for he quickly after brake his word, verſ. 3. and made a raſh requeſt, verſ. 4. ſo great need is there that the beſt pray to God to keep the door, as Pſal. 141. 3.

Verſ. 2. I was dumb with ſilence] As not willing either to open the mouthes of thoſe dead dogs; or to caſt pearles before thoſe ſenſuall ſwine.

I held my peace even from good] That good which I might have ſpoken in mine own defence, and their reproof, ne miſcerem illud cum malo, ſaith One, leſt ſome evill ſhould be mingled with it; as mud and gravell is with the clear water that runs down a current.

Hanc frænis, hanc tu compeſce catenis.

Verſ. 3. My heart was hot within me] It was almoſt ſuffocated for want of vent. By heat of heart, and fire kindled, ſaith One, the Prophet meaneth, not only the greatneſs of his grief, as they that are grievouſly ſick feel great force and power of heat; but he meaneth alſo ſome motions that he had to impatiency and fretting; to which fault they are very much ſubject, that are hot, and given to heat, Thus He. This diſtemper to prevent, God and Nature have placed the heart neer unto the lungs, ut cum irâ accenditur, pulmonis humore temperetur, that when it is heated with wrath, it may bee cooled and qualified by the allay of the lungs.

While I was muſing, the fire burnt] This ſheweth that thoughts and affections are the mutuall cauſes one of another; ſo that thoughts kindle affections, and theſe cauſe thoughts to boil. And hence it is, ſaith a Reverend man, that new-converts, having new and ſtrong affections, can with more pleaſure think of God, than any.

D. Goodw.

Then ſpake I with my tongue] But better he had held his tongue, according to his firſt reſolution. The Greeks have a ſaying, Let a man either keep ſilence, or ſpeak that which is better than ſilence. Auſtin paraphraſeth thus; when I refrained ſo from ſpeaking, for fear of ſpeaking evill, that I ſpake no good. I was troubled at this my ſilence; leſt my ſin ſhould be counted greater for this ſilence, than my vertue in refraining from ſpeaking evill.

Verſ. 4. Lord, make mee to know mine end] This Auſtin expoundeth of Heaven the end of all his troubles, which he now ſighed after. But Vatablus, Calvin, and moſt modern Interpreters conceive that David doth here ingenuouſly confeſſe that he grudged againſt God; conſidering the greatneſſe of his grief, and the ſhortneſſe of his life.

And the meaſure of my dayes] An admalorum quæ perfero compenſationem ſufficiant, whether they are likely to be enow to make mee amends for my grievous ſufferings. This hee ſeemeth to ſpeak either out of impatiency, or curioſity at leaſt.

That I may know how frail I am] How ſoon-ceaſing, and ſhort liv'd. Vatablus hath it, quam mundanus ſim, how long I am like to be a man of this World, this vale of miſery, and valley of tears.

Verſ. 5. Behold, thou haſt made my dayes as an handbreadth] i. e. Four fingers broad, (which is one of the leaſt Geometricall meaſures, or a ſpan-long) as ſome interpret it.

it. Now to ſpend the ſpan of this tranſitory life, after the wayes of a mans own heart, is to bereave himſelf of a room in that City of Pearl, and to periſh for ever. Or take it for an handbreadth; ſhould a man, having his lands divided into four parts (anſwerable to thoſe four fingers breadth) leave three of them untilled? ſhould he not make the beſt of that little time that he hath? that he be not taken with his task undone? Themiſtocles dyed about an hundred and ſeven years of age; and when he was to dye, he was grieved upon this ground; Now I am to dye ſaith he, when I begin to be wiſe. But Stultus ſemper incipit vivere, ſaith Seneca; and ſuch complaints are bootleſſe. O live quickly, live apace, and learn of the Devil at leaſt to be moſt buſy as knowing that our time is ſhort, Rev. 12. 12. To complain of the miſeries of life, and to wiſh for death, as David here ſeemeth to do (and as did Job, chap. 3. 19. & 6. 9. & 7. 15. and Moſes, Num. 11. 11, 15. Elias, 1 King. 19. 4. Jeremy, chap. 20. 14. Jonas 4. 3.) is a ſign of a prevailing temptation, and of a ſpirit fainting under it. We muſt fight againſt ſuch impatiency; and learn to do the like by life, as we do by a leaſe, wherein if our time be but ſhort, we rip up the grounds, eat up the graſſe, cut down the copſes, and take all the liberty the leaſe will afford.

Mine age is as nothing] Heb. My World, that is my time of aboad in the World is but a magnum Nihil, as one ſaith of honour; Punctum eſt quod vivimus, & puncto minus, a meer Salve vale, a non-entity.

Profecto omnimoda vanitas omnis homo eſt quantumvis conſtitutus maxime. Tremel. Kimchi.

Verily every man at his beſt eſtate] When hee is beſt conſtituted and underlaid, ſet to live, as one would think, firmus & fixus, ſetled on his beſt bottom, yet even then he is all over vanity; All Adam is all Abel, as the originall runs elegantly, alluding to thoſe two proper names, like as Pſal. 144. 3, 4. Adam is Abels mate, or man is like to a ſoon-vaniſhing vapour, ſuch as is the breath of ones mouth. See Jam. 4. 14. a feeble flaſh, a curious picture of Nothing.

Verſ. 6. Surely every man walketh in a vain ſhew] Heb. In an image, or, in a ſhadow, as Job 14. 2. in the ſhadow of death as ſome ſenſe it; his life is like a picture drawn upon the water, ſaith Theodoret; it paſſeth away as an haſty, headlong torrent. Verily, ſurely, ſurely, it is ſo; Selah, you may ſeal to it.

Surely they are diſquieted in vain] Heb. They keep a ſtirre, and trouble the World, as did great Alexander; who ſurfetting of his exceſſive fortunes, from the darling of Heaven, came to be the diſdain of the Earth, which hee had ſo oft diſquieted. So the Emperour Adrian, who troubling himſelf and others to little good purpoſe, dyed with this ſaying in his mouth, Omnia fui, & nihil profuit, I have tryed all concluſions, but got nothing. And ſaith not Salomon as much in his Eccleſiaſtes?

Two fits of an ague could ſhake great Tamerlan to death.

Hee heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who ſhall gather them] i. e. Enjoy them. See Eccleſ. 2. 18, 19. and be moderate. Think when you lock up your mony in your cheſt (ſaith One) who ſhall ſhortly lock you up in your coffin. Think how that this very night thy ſoul may be required of thee; and then whoſe ſhall thoſe things be which thou haſt provided. Luk. 12. 20?

Verſ. 7. And now Lord, what wait I for?] q. d. Abſit ergo ut de iſtis quiſquiliis ſim anxius, Farre be it from mee to trouble my ſelf about theſe tranſitory trifles; I am bent to depend on thee alone, to wait for thy favour, and deſire it above all earthly felicity; to place all my hope on thee alone, who being my Lord, wilt not, canſt not caſt off thy poor ſervant, who deſireth to fear thy Name.

Verſ. 8. Deliver mee from all my tranſgreſſions] But eſpecially from that of impatiently deſiring to dye out of diſcontent, verſ. 4. God giveth the penitent generall diſcharges; neither calleth he any to an after-reckoning.

Make mee not the reproach of the fooliſh] Let not any Wicked one (for ſuch are all fooles in Gods dictionary) lay this folly in my diſh, that I ſo fooliſhly deſired death in a pet.

Verſ. 9. I was dumb, I opened not my mouth] Or, Better thus, I ſhould have been dumb, and not have opened my mouth, according to my firſt reſolution I ſhould not have reaſoned, or rather wrangled with thee, as verſ. 4. but have kiſſed thy rod in an humble ſubmiſſion, and have known that the rod of Aaron, and pot of Manna muſt go together. Macrobius writeth that the image of Angeronia among the old Romans was placed on the Altar of Volupia, with the mouth cloſed and ſealed up; to ſignifie, that ſuch as patiently and ſilently bear their griefs, do thereby attain to greateſt pleaſures.

Becauſe thou didſt it] This is indeed a quieting conſideration, and will notably quell and kill unruly paſſions. Set but God before them, when they are tumultuating, and all will be ſoon huſht. This made Jacob ſo patient in the rape of his Daughter Dinah; Job, in the loſſe of his goods by the Sabean ſpoylers; David, in the barkings of that dead dog Shimei; that noble Lord of Pleſſis, in the loſſe of his only ſon, a Gentleman of marvellous great hopes, ſlain in the wars of the Low-Countries. Eſt ſenſus ejuſdem cum duobus prioribus. Kabuenat.

VErſ. 1. I waited patiently for the Lord] Heb. In waiting I waited; Diutiſſimè quidem, ſed optimo ſucceſſu; I prayed and waited, I waited and prayed again; perſevering in prayer, and begging audience, as Pſal. 39. 12. with which Baſil maketh this Pſalm to cohere, and well he may, for it ſeemeth to be of the ſame time and argument with the two former. R. Obadiah ſaith, that David compoſed this Pſalm after that he was recovered of his Leproſie, Pſal. 38. 7.

And he inclined unto me] i. e. he began at length to ſhew favour; for he waiteth to be gracious, and well knoweth that deſideria dilatione treſcant, & cito data vileſcant: nothing is loſt, by holding his people long in requeſt.

Verſ. 2. He brought me up alſo out of an horrible pit] è puteo ſonitus, ut Iſa. 17. 12. out of a noyſe-full pit, where there is a continual hurry by the great fall of waters into it; He meaneth, out of dreadful dangers, out of a deſperate diſeaſe, ſaith R. Obadiah; who alſo by rock here underſtandeth perfect health, Sanitatem in corpore, ſanctitatem in corde.

Out of the miry clay] E luto, luto, ſaith Kimchi, for here are two words uſed, of one and the ſame ſenſe; to ſhew, that as a bemired beaſt he was in a periſhing condition, till God puld him out, and ſet him on firm ground.

And eſtabliſhed my goings] That I might not relapſe into the ſame, or fall into another malady or miſchief.

Verſ. 3. And he hath put a new ſong in my mouth] i. e. new matter, which I ſhall ſoon contrive into a new ſong, by the help of his holy Spirit: for I cannot breath out a deſire after him, except he firſt imbreath me therewith, and ſo put a new ſong in my mouth.

Even praiſe unto our God] i. e. Unto Chriſt, ſaith Junius, to whom, and of whom the Church ſingeth, ſaith he, in the following verſes.

Many ſhall ſee it, and fear, and truſt in the Lord] Their eye ſhall affect their heart, both with fear of, and faith in the Lord, that bringeth greateſt things to paſs, and is fearful in praiſes, doing wonders, Exod. 15.

Verſ. 4. Bleſſed is that man, &c.] See Pſal. 2. 12.

And reſpecteth not the proud.] Who are ſet in oppoſition to Beleevers, as they are alſo, Hab. 2. 4. Self juſtiaries eſpecially, and Merit-mongers: faith is an humbling grace.

Nor ſuch as turn aſide to lies] As do Hereticks and Idolaters. Theſe, the true beleever, out of the greatneſs of his ſpirit, ſlighteth, how great ſoever they be: Animo magno nihil magnum.

Verſ. 5. Many O Lord my God are thy Works which thou haſt done] Many and great and all for them that truſt in thee: Who therefore muſt needs be bleſſed, as verſ. 4.

And thy thoughts which are to us-ward] Thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give us an expected end, Jer. 29. 11.

They cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee] No, nor yet out of order; and yet we muſt be reckoning and relating them as we are able, to God, and men, by ſpeaking good of his name; and at this David was old excellent, as we ſay.

If I would declare and ſpeak of them] By whole-ſale we muſt do it, though wee cannot ſo well by retale; particulars alſo muſt bee inſtanced, as Moſes doth to Jethro, Exod. 22. and for that end Catalogues muſt bee kept; See one Judg. 10. 11, 12.

Verſ. 6. Sacrifice and offering thou didſt not deſire] Comparatively to the obedience of faith, 1 Sam. 15. 22. without which when Hypocrites thought to bribe God by cold Ceremonies, they were rejected. Chriſt is the end of the Law to all that beleeve; that Lamb of God ſlain from the beginning of the world is the only Expiatory Sacrifice, and the foundation of that fore-mentioned bleſſedneſs, ver. 4. Now ſince Chriſt ſuffered, the Levitical Sacrifices being aboliſhed, we have none to offer but ſuch as are gratulatory: to ſhew our thankfulneſs for ſuch a Redeemer, whoſe perfect obedience, with the fruit of it, is here, and in the following Verſes both deſcribed, and ſet forth for an abſolute pattern to us of performing our duty toward God, for this inexplicable mercy. Confer Heb. 10. 5, 6, &c. Here wee have in Christ for our instruction, and in David also (his Type) for our example; 1. A firm purpose of obedience, in a bored ear, and a yielding heart. 2. A ready performance thereof, Lo I come. 3. A careful observance of the Word written, In the volume of thy Book it is written of me, verſ. 7. 4. An hearty delight in that obſervance, verſ. 8. 5. A publick profeſſion and communication of Gods goodneſs to others, verſ. 9, 10. Now, we ſhould labour to expreſs Chriſt to the world, to walk as he walked, 1 Joh. 2. 6. our lives ſhould be in ſome ſenſe parallel with his life, as the tranſcript with the original: He left us a Copy to write by, ſaith Saint Peter, 1 Epiſt. 2. 21.

Mine ears hast thou opened] Heb. digged, bored: an hearing ear haſt thou beſtowed upon me, which is a ſingular favour; for life entreth by the ear, Iſa. 55. 3. as did death at firſt, Gen. 3. O pray, that God would make the bore wide enough, that the inward ears being drawn up to the outward, one ſound may peirce both at once.

Verſ. 7. Then ſaid I, Lo I come] Chriſt became obedient even to the death, yea that of the Croſs, Phil. 2. 8. Chriſts people alſo are a willing people, Pſal. 110. 3. their obedience is prompt, and preſent, ready, and ſpeedy, without delays and conſults, Pſal. 119. 60. without cavilation and ſecurity, Iſa. 56. 6.

In the volume of thy book] In libro plicatili, in thy Law which was anciently, (and is till this day amongſt the Jews) written in Paper, or Parchment rolled up; becauſe it will laſt longer rolled than folded.

It is written of me] Of Chriſt, in many places: for He is both Author, Object, Matter, and Mark of both Teſtaments. Of David alſo, and all Gods people, doth the Law ſpeak with fruit and efficacy; and they do uſe to read their own names, written as it were in every precept, promiſe, threatning. Look how men read the Statute-book of the Land, as holding themſelves highly concerned therein, ſo here.

Verſ. 8. I delight to do thy will, O my God] To Chriſt it was his meat and drink, Joh. 4. he ſet his face to do it, and to ſuffer it, Luke 9. 51. yea he was ſtraightned, pained till it was done, Luk. 12. 50. And the ſame minde is alſo in the Saints that was in Chriſt Jeſus, Phil. 2. 5. They delight in the Law of God after the inward man, Rom. 7. 22. they prefer it before their neceſſary food, Job 23. 12.

Yea thy Law is within my heart] Heb. In the midſt of my bowels; there is the counterpane, the duplicate of the Law written, yea printed, Jer. 31. 33. 2 Cor. 3. 3. Rip up my heart (ſaid Queen Mary) when I am dead, and there ſhall you finde Gallice, the lots whereof (tis thought) killed her. Rip up the moſt mens hearts, and there you ſhall finde written, The god of this preſent world. But Gods Law is in good mens hearts, to live and to dye with it. O beata Apocalypſis (ſaid that Martyr, catching up the Revelation caſt into the ſame fire with him to be burnt) O bleſſed Revelation, how happy am I to be burned with thee in my hands!

Verſ. 9. I have preached righteouſneſs in the great congregation] David did this, but Chriſt much more by the everlaſting Goſpel, ſent the whole world throughout; great was the company of Preachers, and large was their commiſſion. See a draught of it, Acts 26. 18.

I have declared thy faithfulneſs, and thy ſalvation] Righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed, faithfulneſs of God in fulfilling his Promiſes, Salvation the end of faith, loving kindneſs and truth the ground of all the former, Gods loving kindneſs, or mercy moving him to promiſe, and his truth binding him to perform; theſe are thoſe Pearls that Chriſt by his Preachers caſteth before people, if they bee but as forward to take them, as he is to tender them: How beautiful ſhould the feet be of thoſe that bring ſuch glad tidings? and how heavie will the duſt of ſuch feet bee, ſhaken off againſt deſpiſers?

O Lord thou knoweſt] Iſa. That I have herein done mine utmoſt, and with an upright heart.

Verſ. 10. I have not hid thy righteouſneſs within my heart] Or, if he did, as Pſal. 119. 11. it was, that having wrought it firſt on his own affections, he might afterwards utter it a corde ad cor, from the heart to the heart, and ſo be able to ſave himſelf and thoſe that heard him.

Nunc in luto adhuc hæreas & cum residuo calamitatum afflictionis precatur Deum.

I have declared thy faithfulness, &c.] See verſ. 9.

Verſ. 11. Withhold not thou thy tender mercies, &c.] Whereas, while the Saints are on earth there will be a perpetual interchange of comforts and croſſes, prayers muſt be joyned with praiſes, and care taken, that confirmed by former experiences, the preſent depend upon God.

Let thy loving kindneſs and thy truth continually preſerve me] Tuæ illi tribuas mihi ac in æternum. Let thoſe two Attributes of thine be mine Angels Guardians at all times. See the Note on Pſal. 25. 10.

Verſ. 12. For innumerable evils have compaſſed me] Heb. Have muſtered upon me. Many (or Millions) are the troubles of the righteous; none out of Hell ever ſuffered more than they: an elegant exaggeration of their afflictions we have in this verſe, and ſuch as cannot well be underſtood by any, but thoſe that have been well-beaten Porters to the Croſs of Chriſt.

Mine iniquities have taken hold upon me] i. e. The puniſhment of mine iniquities, Gen. 4. 13. my ſin hath found me out. If this be taken of Chriſt, he is, Maximus peccatorum, the greateſt of ſinners by imputation, 2 Cor. 5. 20. Iſa. 53. 6. for our ſins (which here he calleth his) he ſuffered; and here his bitter Agony in the Garden is Graphically deſcribed; neither is it abſurd to ſay, that as he bore our ſins in his own Body upon the Tree, he was firſt redeemed by himſelf, and afterwards we.

Therefore my heart faileth me] i. e. my wit, courage, counſel is waſted by earneſt thinking upon them. Scientia mea ita numerandis defecit, as Kimchi gloſſeth.

εὐδοκία. Verſ. 13. Be pleaſed, O Lord, to deliver me] Do it of thy free grace, and meer mercy, of thy good will, and gracious liking (as the word ſignifieth) beſide the conſideration of my woful miſery laid forth, verſ. 12. as an object of thy mercy.

Verſ. 14. Let them be aſhamed and confounded together, &c.] Theſe and the like imprecations muſt be looked upon as Prophecies. Beſides, David looked upon them not as his enemies only, but Gods as well: and ſuch alſo as were deſperate, and irrecoverable. So Paul prayed againſt the Copper-ſmith; the Church againſt Julian, &c.

Let them be driven backward, &c.] A Chriſtian may without ſin be ſenſible of indignities, only it muſt be the mourning of Doves, and not the roaring of Bears.

Verſ. 15. Let them be deſolate for a reward] A poor reward: but ſuch as ſin payeth to her ſervants, the wages of ſin is death. Sin payeth all her ſervants in black money. See Pſal. 35. 21. The word here rendred reward, ſignifieth an heir. It is, as if the Prophet ſhould ſay, Let one deſolation tread upon the heels of another, till they be utterly undone.

Verſ. 16. Let all thoſe that ſeek thee rejoyce] viz. When they hear of my deliverance. The Saints have both their joyes and griefs in common with their fellow-members, as being in the body, Heb. 13. 3. both in the body of Chriſt, and in the body of fleſh and frailty.

Verſ. 17. But I am poor and needy] A ſtark begger; neither will I hide from my Lord (as once Joſephs Brethren ſaid to him, when they came for corn) mine extream indigency, my neceſſitous condition, I am one that gets my living by begging.

Yet the Lord thinketh upon me] Here is the poor mans King, as hath been ſaid, and Chriſt is cum Patre datur, tuetur, ſervat, as Auguſtine hath it; that is, he gives with the Father, and at ſame time prayes with the ſuter, who muſt therefore needs ſpeed.

Thou art my help and my deliverer, make no tarrying] Deliver me ſpeedily, leſt I periſh utterly. God, ſaith One, is ſometimes troubled with too much help, but never with too little, we are ſometimes too ſoon, but he is never too late.

PSAL.

PSALME XLI.

A Psalm of David] Of the same sense with the four former Psalmes, saith Kimchi.

Vers. 1. Blessed is he that considereth the poor] Heb. That wiseth by, considereth concerning the poor; The poor weakling, whose health is impaired, whose wealth is wasted. Aben Ezra rendreth it, Qui præcipua curam gerit, He that preventeth the request of the poor begger; wisely considering his case, and not staying till he crave, which possibly out of modesty hee may bee loth to do. The most interpret it of a charitable Judgement passed upon the poor afflicted, not holding him therefore hated of God, because heavily afflicted, as Jobs friends did. At vobis bene sit qui de me quamprimis calamitoso rectius judicatis, so Beza here paraphraseth, Well may you fare, my friends, who censure better of me, though full of misery, and deal more kindly with mee. The word maschil signifieth both a prudent Judgement, and a desire to do all good offices, saith One. It signifieth to give comfort and instruction to the weak, saith Another, wisely weighing his case, and ready to draw out, not his sheat only, but his soul to the hungry, Isa. 58. 10. This is a blessed man, presupposing him to be a Beleever, and so to do it from a right Principle, viz. Charity out of a pure heart, of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned, 1 Tim. 1. 5. In Psal. 10.

The Lord will deliver him] i. e. The poor weakling, and the other also that dealeth so mercifully with him, both shall be delivered, according to that of our Saviour, Matth. 10. 41. Delivered I say he shall be in due time, supported in the mean while, a good use, and a good Issue he shall be sure of. Some make it Davids prayer, The Lord deliver him, &c. Others, the mercifull mans prayer for the poor-afflicted. Kimchi.

Vers. 2. The Lord will preserve him, and keep him alive] Life in any sense, is a singular mercy, Why is a living man sorrowfull, Lam. 3. 39? if he be alive, though afflicted, he hath cause to be thankfull; how much more if alive to Righteousness? The Arabick here interpreteth it, dabit illi filios in quibus post mortem vivat, he will give him Children, in whom he may live after his death.

And he shall be blessed upon the earth] With wealth, and other accommodations; so that the World shall look upon him as every way blessed.

And thou wilt not deliver him into the hands of his enemies] Heb. Do not thou deliver him] This maketh Kimchi conclude, that all this is but oratio visitantis consolatoria, the prayer of him that visiteth the sick man, for his comfort.

Vers. 3. The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing] Whether through sickness of body, as Isa. 38. 2. or sorrow of heart, for in such case also men cast themselves upon their beds, 1 Kin. 21. 4. This God (and not the Physicians) will do for the sick man, die septimo on the seventh day, saith R. Solomon, when he is at sickest.

Thou wilt make all his bed] Heb. Thou wilt turn, thou wilt turne up Pillows under him, that he may lye at ease, and this by the hand of those poor whom he had considered. Or, Thou wilt turne all his bed, That is, his whole body from sickness to health, as Kabvonahi senseth it.

Vers. 4. I said, Lord be mercifull unto me, heal] Heal mee in mercy, and begin at the inside first. Heal my soul of sin, and then my body of sickness; Heal me every whit. These to the end, are the sick mans words, saith Kimchi. And this is the Character of the Lords poor man, to whom the foresaid comfortes do belong, saith Another.

For I have sinned against thee] He cryeth peccavi, not perii. Summa ionem à capite orditur, he beginneth at the right end.

Vers. 5. Mine enemies speak evill of me] Notwithstanding my piety and devotion; that's no target against persecution. Davids integrity and the severity of his discipline displeased these yokelesse Belialists, they were sick of his strict government, and longed for a new King who would favour their wicked practices, such as was Absolom, whom they shortly after set up. Davids they could not indure, because he did Justice and Judgement to all the people. These Libertines were of the Egyptian mould, loquaces & ingeniosi in præfectorum maledictum, in ut qui viderit eum Senec.

pum, infamiam non effugiat, ſuch as loved to ſpeak evill of dignities; and could not give their governours (how blameleſſe ſoever) a good word.

When ſhall he dye, and his name periſh?] Nothing leſſe would ſatisfie their malice, than utter extermination. But David recovereth, and his name ſurviveth, when they lie wrapt up in the ſheet of ſhame.

Verſ. 6. And if he come to ſee me] That is, Achitophel, or ſome ſuch hollow-hearted Heliphanta.

Plaut. Ore pro mea ſanitate orant ſed corde quærunt malum. Midraſh Tillim.

He ſpeaketh vanity] Pretending that he is very ſorry to ſee mee ſo ill at eaſe, and letting fall ſome Crocodiles tears perhaps.

His heart gathereth iniquity to it ſelf] As Toads and Serpents gather venom to vomit at you.

When he goeth abroad, he telleth it] Boaſting to his treacherous Brotherhood, of his baſe behaviour.

Verſ. 7. All that hate mee, whiſper together againſt mee] Heb. Muſſitant, they mutter as Charmers uſe to do. Theſe whiſperers are dangerous fellows, Eccl. 1. 28. like the wind that creepeth in by chinks in a wall, or cracks in a window. A vento percolato, & inimico reconciliato, libera nos Domine, ſaith the Italian.

Againſt mee do they deviſe] Cogitant quaſi coagitant.

Verſ. 8. An evill diſeaſe, ſay they, cleaveth faſt unto him] Heb. A thing of Belial, a vengeance hath befallen him; God for his foul offence hath put him over to the Devill to be tormented by a peſtilentiall diſeaſe, that will ſurely make an end of him. So Genebrard (that mad dog) in the fourth book of his Chronology, Anno Dom. 1564. reckoning up thoſe diverſe diſeaſes whereof Calvin dyed, (all which was well known to be falſe) addeth, An Herodes terribilius animam Satanæ reddiderit, equidem neſcio, whether Herod yeelded up his ſoul to the Devill in a more horrible manner, I know not. With as little charity did Evagrius ſay of Juſtinian the great Law-giver, ad ſupplicia juſto Dei judicio apud inferos luenda profectus eſt, he went to hell-torments, when he dyed by Gods juſt Judgement. And Luther of Oecolampadius, ſe credere Oecolampadium ignitis Satanæ telis & haſtis confoſſum ſubitanea morte periiſſe. ... tantæne animis cœleſtibus iræ? This falſe conceit is ſufficiently confuted by the hiſtory of his life and death ſet forth by Simon Grynæus, as alſo is that concerning Calvin, by his life written by Beza, and others.

Omnes impietates quas perpetravit. R. Solom.

Lib. 5. cap. 1.

Lib. de Miſſa privata. Anno 1533.

Verſ. 9. Yea mine own familiar friend] Heb. The man of my peace. This was a great cut to David, τιγὰς μεῖζον ἕλκος ἢ φίλος ἀδικῶν, ſaith Sophocles, what greater wound can there be than a treacherous friend? ſuch as was Ahitophel to David, Judas to our Saviour, Brutus to Julius Cæſar (who was ſlain in the Senat-houſe with three and twenty wounds, given for moſt part by them whoſe lives he had preſerved) Magnentius to Conſtans the Emperour, who had formerly ſaved his life from the Souldiers fury; Michael Balbus to the Emperour Leo Armenius, whom he ſlew the ſame night that he had pardoned and releaſed him. This evil dealing made Socrates cry out, φίλοι ὄλεις φίλος, Friends, there is hardly a friend to bee found; and Queen Elizabeth complain, that in truſt ſhe had found Treaſon; and King Antigonus pray to God to preſerve him from his friends; and King Alphonſus to complain of the ingratitude of his Favourites.

Ann Dom. 337

In whom I truſted] So did not our Saviour in Judas, for hee knew him better than ſo, and therefore this clauſe is left out, Joh. 13. 18. where hee applieth this ſaying to himſelf. Hierom and ſome others apply the whole Pſalm to Chriſt, and for that end they render theſe words actively, Cui credidi, to whom I entruſted or committed my miniſtery.

Who did eat of my bread] My fellow-commoner, with whom I had eaten little leſs than a buſhel of Salt. A mans enemies are many times thoſe of his own houſe, the Birds of his own boſom. Judas dipt in the ſame diſh with Jeſus, betrayed him with a kiſs. Cavent ne oſculum Iſcarioticum.

Hath lift up his heel againſt me] Heb. Hath magnified the heel, or the ſoot-ſole, ſc. to ſupplant me, or to trample upon me, or to ſpurn againſt me. Metaphora ab equis calcitrosibus, ſaith Vatablus, a Metaphor from unruly and refractory Horſes. See Judg. 15. 8. it importeth contempt, deſpite, and cruelty.

Verſ. 10. But thou, O Lord, be merciful unto me] As ſtorms beat a Ship into the harbour; ſo did mens miſuſages drive David to God; and as Children meeting meeting with hard measure abroad, hye home to their Parents, so here.

And raise mee up] From off this bed of weakneſſe, and from under their feet of inſolency and cruelty.

That I may requite them] Not in a way of private revenge (for that was utterly unlawfull, and would not bear a prayer) but of Juſtice, as I am a King, and a lawfull Magiſtrate. The fear of this might happily make Ahitophel (foreſeeing that all would be naught on Abſolems ſide) to ſave the hangman a labour.

Verſ. 11. By this I know that thou favourest mee] This is the triumph of truſt, and the fruit of faithfull prayer; ever anſwered, ſometimes before it is uttered, ſometimes in, and ſometimes after the act; but we may be ſure of an un-miſcarrying return, if we pray and not faint, Luk. 18. 1. even ſuch as ſhall bring us word, that God favoureth our perſons.

Verſ. 12. And as for mee, thou upholdest mee in mine integrity] Which earth and hell had conſpired to rob mee of, but in vain, through thy help. My ſhield is yet in ſafety. My faith faileth mee not, nor yet mine innocency in regard of men, or the Righteouſneſſe of my cauſe.

And ſettest mee before thy face for ever] So that being never out of thy ſight, I cannot poſſibly be out of thy mind. Confer 1 King. 17. 1.

Verſ. 13. Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael] Thus he ſweetly ſhutteth up this firſt book of the Pſalmes (as ſome diſtinguiſh) with a patheticall doxology, redoubling his Amen, Fiat, Fiat, to ſhew his fervency, and moſt earneſt deſire that God ſhould be bleſſed by his whole Iſrael. This was the cuſtome of the Scribes to do, ſaith Kimchi, when they had finiſhed any book. The other four books of Pſalmes (as they are reckoned) end in like manner.

From everlaſting to everlaſting] i. e. From the beginning of the World, to the end of it; or, as the Chaldee hath it, from this World, unto the World to come.

Amen and Amen] So be it, and ſo it ſhall bee. Dictio eſt acclamationis, approbationis, & confirmationis. The Rabbines ſay, that our Amen in the cloſe of our prayers muſt not be firſt, huſty, but with conſideration, 1 Cor. 14. 16. Secondly, not maimed or defective; wee muſt ſtretch out our hearts after it, and be ſwallowed up in God. Thirdly, not alone, or an Orphan; that is, without faith, love, and holy confidence. The ſpirits of the whole prayer are contracted into it, and ſo ſhould the ſpirit of him that prayeth.

PSAL. XLII.

Maſchil for the ſons of Korah] Korah and his complices were ſwallowed up quick by the earth in the Wilderneſſe for their gain-ſaying, Num. 16. but ſome of his ſons diſliking his practice, eſcaped, and of them came Heman (the Nephew of Samuel) a chief ſinger, 1 Chron. 6. 23. Now to him, and his Brethren, was this and ſome other of Davids Pſalms committed, both to be kept as a treaſure, and to be ſung in the Sanctuary, for comfort and inſtruction under affliction, according to the ſignification of the word Maſchil; whereof See Pſal. 32. title.

Verſ. 1. As the Heart panteth after the water-brooks] Heb. As the Hind. Greek, ἡ ἔλαφος, for in females the paſſions are ſtronger, ſaith an Interpreter here, qui quid volunt, valde volunt. This Creature is naturally hot and dry, about Autumn eſpecially (as Ariſtotle teſtifieth)) but when hunted, extream thirſty. Chryſoſtom and Baſill ſay, that ſhe eateth Serpents, and ſo is further inflamed by their poyſon. Now as the hunted and heated Hind glocitat, breatheth and brayeth after the water-brooks,

De nat. anim. l. 6. cap. 2

So panteth my ſoul after Thee, O God] He ſaith, not after my former dignity and greatneſſe, before Abſolom diſturbed mee, and drove mee out (though he could not but be ſenſible of ſuch a loſſe; we know what miſerable moans Cicero made, when ſent into baniſhment; how impatient Cato and many others were in like caſe, ſo that they became their own deathſmen) but after Thee Lord, and the enjoyment of thy publick ordinances; from which I am now alaſſe hunted and hindred. After that Gods holy Spirit hath once touched a ſoul, it will never be quiet untill it ſtands pointed God-ward.

Verſ. 2. My Soul thirſteth for God] More than ever it did once for the water of the Well of Bethelem; and that, becauſe he is the living God, the fountain of living waters, that only can cooll and quench my deſires, Jer. 2. 13. & 17. 13. ſo as I ſhall never thirſt again, Joh. 4. 14. whereas of all things elſe we may ſay

the

Ovid. Quo plus ſunt potа, plus ſitiuntur aquа.

Kimchi. Aben-Ezra. The Rabbines note here, that David ſaith not ſo hungreth, but ſo thirſteth my ſoul; becauſe men are more impatient of thirſt, than of hunger; they can go diverſe dayes without meat, but not without drink.

Curt. ex Diodoro. Alexander loſt a great part of his army marching through the Wilderneſſe of the Suſitans by want of water.

When ſhall I come and appear before God?] Heb. And ſee the face of God? viz. in his Tabernacle. Eheu igitur quando tandem mihi miſerrimo dabitur, ut te in ade tua conſpiciam? Theſe earneſt pantings, inquietations, and unſatisfiable deſires after God and his ordinances, are ſure ſignes of true grace. But woe to our worſhipſcorners, &c.

Verſ. 3. My tears have been my meat day and night] Hunters ſay, the Hart ſheddeth tears, or ſomething like tears, when he is purſued, and not able to eſcape. Hereunto David might allude. Sure it is, that as Hinds by calving, ſo men by weeping, caſt out their ſorrowes, Job 39. 3.

Act. and Mon. 1457. And, Affert ſolatium lugentibus ſuſpiriorum ſocietas ſaith Baſil, ſighs are an eaſe of ſorrow. Of Mr. Bradford the Martyr it is reported, that in the midſt of dinner he uſed oft to muſe, having his hat over his eyes, from whence came commonly plenty of tears dropping on his trencher. — ἀγαθοὶ δ' ἀριδάκρυες ἄνθρες, The better any are, the more inclined to weeping; as David than Jonathan, 1 Sam. 20. Here we

So Pſal. 80. 5. have him telling us that his tears were his meat, or his bread, as Gregory readeth it; and he giveth this reaſon, that like as the more bread wee eat, the dryer we are, and the more thirſty; ſo the more tears of godly ſorrow we let fall, the more we thirſt after that living fountain ſpringing from above. Davids greateſt grief was, that he was baniſhed from the Sanctuary; and next to that, the reproachfull blaſphemy of his enemies hitting him in the teeth with his God, as if not able or not willing to relieve him now in his neceſſity, and bitterly upbraiding him with his hopes as altogether vain.

Whiles they continually ſay unto mee, Where is thy God?] Violenti certe impetus, ſaith Vatablus here; theſe were violent ſhocks indeed; and ſuch as wherewith Davids faith might have been utterly overthrown, had it not been the better rooted, and withall upheld by the ſpeciall power of the Spirit of grace. Other of Gods ſuffering Saints have met with the like meaſure. At Orleance in France, as the bloody Papiſts murthered the Proteſtants, they cryed out, where is now your God? what is become of all your prayers and Pſalms now? Let your God that you called upMr. Clarks' Gen. Martyrol. p. 316. on ſave you if he can. Others ſang in ſcorn, Judge and revenge my cauſe O Lord; Others, Have mercy on us Lord, &c. The Queen Mother of Scotland having received aid from France, forced the Proteſtants for a while to retire to the Highlands, whereupon ſhe ſcoffingly ſaid, where is now John Knox his God? My God is now ſtronger than his, yea even in Fife; but her braggs laſted not long; for with-

Mr. Knox his life by Mr. Clark. in a few dayes, ſix hundred Proteſtants beat above four thouſand French and Scots &c. Gods Servants fare the better for the inſolencies of their enemies; who when they ſay where is now their God? might as well ſay betwixt the ſpace of the new, and old Moon, where is now the Moon? when as it is never nearer the Sun, than at that time.

Verſ. 4. When I remember theſe things] viz. My preſent preſſures compared with my former happineſs, Miſerum ſanè eſt, fuiſſe felicem. The Epicures held (but I beleeve they did not beleeve themſelves therein) that a man might be cheerful amidſt

Cic. de Fin. l. 2. Sen. de ben. l. 4. c. 22. the moſt exquiſite torments, Ex præteritarum voluptatum recordatione, by the remembrance of his former pleaſures and delights. David found this here but a ſlight and ſorry comfort, though he better knew how than any of them to make the beſt of it; and his delights had been farre more ſolid and cordial.

I pour out my ſoul] See Job 30. 16. with the Note.

For I had gone with a multitude] Heb. A thick croud, or throng of good people, frequenting the publick Ordinances, and David in the head of them. One rendreth rendreth it, In umbra vel umbrella, ſicut mos eſt Orientalium ambulare umbrellis contra ardorem ſolis accommodatis.

I went with them to the houſe of God] Lente Itabam, I went with a gentle pace, Greſſu grallatorio. He ſpeaketh, ſaith Vatablus, of the order obſerved by the faithful when they went to the Sanctuary, viz. in comely equipage, ſinging praiſe to God, and confeſſing his goodneſs. Kimchi in Il Radic.

Verſ. 5. Why art thou caſt down, O my ſoul?] Here David ſeemeth to be Homo diviſus in duas partes, ſaith Vatablus, a man divided into two parts, as indeed every new man is two men: and what is to be ſeen in the Shulamite, but as it were the company of two Armies? Cant. 6. 13. David chideth David out of his dumps. So did Alice Benden the Martyr, rehearſing theſe very words (when ſhe had been kept in the Biſhops priſon all alone, nine weeks with bread and water) and received comfort by them in the midſt of her miſeries. Act. & Mon. 1797.

And why art thou diſquieted in me?] A good mans work lieth moſt within doors; he hath more ado with himſelf than with all the world beſides; he prayeth oft with that Ancient, Libera me Domine à malo homine meipſo, Deliver me, Lord, from that naughty man my ſelf. How oft do we puniſh our ſelves by our paſſions, as the Lion, that beateth himſelf with his own tail? Grief is like Lead to the ſoul, heavie and cold, ſinking it downward, taking off the wheels of it, and diſabling it for duty; like as a Limb that is out of joynt, can do nothing without deformity and pain. Keep up thy ſpirit therefore, and watch againſt dejection, whatſoever befalls thee, yea againſt all diſtempers; ſith they hinder comfortable intercourſe with God, and that Spiritual compoſedneſs, that Sabbath of ſpirit that we muſt enjoy, or elſe we cannot keep that continual Holy-day, 1 Cor. 5. 8. How many are there who through unneceſſary ſadneſs, come to Heaven before they are aware? ἐωρτάζωμεν.

Hope thou in God] Faith quieteth the ſoul firſt or laſt (ſaith a Reverend man on theſe words) there will be ſtirring at the firſt: As in a pair of Ballance, there will be a little ſtirring when the weight is put in, till it come to a poiſe; ſo in the ſoul, it comes not to a quiet conſiſtency till there be ſome victory of faith, till it reſt and ſtay the ſoul. Dr. Sibbes.

For I ſhall yet praiſe him for the help of his countenance] Heb. The health of his countenance, Adhuc confitebor ei ſalutes vultus ejus. Chryſoſtom bringeth in a man loaden with troubles coming into the Church, where when he heard this paſſage read, Why art thou caſt down? hope in God, &c. he preſently recovered. Homil. in Geneſ.

Verſ. 6. O my God, my ſoul is caſt down within me] Though before he had ſchooled himſelf out of his diſtempers, yet now he is troubled again: ſuch are the viciſſitudes and interchanges of joy, and ſorrow, that the Saints are here ſubject unto: as ſoon as the Spirit gets the better, as ſoon the Fleſh; ſometimes good affections prevail, ſometimes unruly paſſions. Affections are the wind of the ſoul, paſſions the ſtorm. The ſoul is well carried, when neither ſo becalmed that it moves not when it ſhould, nor yet toſſed with tempeſts to move diſorderly.

Therefore will I remember thee from the Land of Jordan] That is, ſaith one, I will call to mind former experiments there, and take comfort. Or, I will remember thee, as I may, here at Mahanaim beyond Jordan, under the mount Hermon, and that other little Hill (where I have found thee, in my meditations, and prayers, propitious unto me) though I cannot now worſhip thee in the beauty of holineſs, being driven out by my ungracious Son Abſolom, from the place where thine honour dwelleth.

Verſ. 7. Deep calleth unto deep] Vorago voraginem advocat, i. e. one calamity inviteth another: Aliud ex alio malum, they come thick and three-fold, the Clouds return after the rain, Eccleſ. 12. 2. as one ſhower is unburthened, another is brewed. One affliction followeth and occaſioneth another, without ceaſing, or intermiſſion; ſo that they are grown as it were to an infiniteneſs, as Pſalm 40. 12. Gurges gurgitem excipit. Beza.

At the noyſe of thy water-ſpouts] i. e. Thy Clouds pouring down amain, in a ſtorm at Sea eſpecially, by a Cataclyſm of waters falling at once out of the Clouds, ſometimes to the overwhelming and breaking of a ſhip. This, Mariners call a ſtont, Pſal. 18. 4. The ſtouds of Belial made me afraid.

Propter peccata noſtra à te immiſſa. Kimchi.

All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me] Fluctum fluctum trudit; yet not, without the Lord: the enemies and the evils that befell him are called Gods waves or breakings.

Verſ. 8. Yet the Lord will command his loving kindneſs] He will after all this miſery ſend forth a Commiſſion, and a command to ſet me free: and his Mandamus will do it at any time.

And in the night his Song ſhall be with me] When others that are without God in the World have reſtleſs nights, the gnats of cares and griefs moleſting them, a Saint can ſing away care, and call his ſoul to reſt, as Pſal. 116. 7. being filled with peace, and joy through beleeving; ſuch as ſetteth him a ſinging to Gods glory.

And my prayer unto the God of my life] i. e. My praiſes, which are a chief part of prayer, 1 Tim. 26. 1. Thank-ſgiving is an artificial begging, Gratiarum actio eſt adplus dandum invitatio.

Verſ. 9. I will ſay unto my God, my Rock, why haſt thou forgotten me?] Tenè verò mei immemorem eſſe? Thus I will in a familiar manner expoſtulate with him, and lay my caſe open unto him, as to a friend. The fleſh ſuggeſteth that he is forgotten, but faith holdeth its own, faſtning on the Rock of ages.

Why go I mourning] Heb. Black, as one that is in mourning weeds: or, that had lain among the pots.

Verſ. 10. As with a ſword in my bones] Heb. A murthering weapon, which when thruſt into the bones cauſeth moſt exquiſite pain: ſo deeply was good David affected with the diſhonour done to God by his blaſphemous enemies; it went to the very heart of him as a dagger.

While they ſay daily] See the Note on verſ. 3.

Verſ. 11. Why art thou caſt down] See verſ. 5.

Who is the health of my countenance] i. e. The Author of my manifold, preſent and apparent ſafety: ſuch as ſhall make me look blithe and beautiful, cheery, and chirp:

PSAL. XLIII.

VErſ. 1. Judge me O God] This Pſalm is as it were an Epitome, or an Appendix to the former, and little differing in words or matter.

Plead my cauſe] See Pſal. 35. 1.

Againſt an ungodly Nation] Heb. A Nation not mild, or merciful: ſo he calleth Abſolons Complices, who ſought and would have ſucked his bloud. Such are a people of Gods wrath, and of his curſe.

O deliver me, &c.] From Abſolom, or Ahitophel, or the whole Faction.

Verſ. 2. For thou art the God of my ſtrength] As being in Covenant with me both offenſive and defenſive: In the Lord Jehovah is a Rock of ages, or everlaſting ſtrength, Iſa. 26. 4. for God of my ſtrength, Pſa. 42. 9. is my Rock.

Why go I mourning] See Pſal. 42. 9.

Lux & veritas piorum comites.

Verſ. 3. O ſend out thy light] i. e. thy comforting grace, oppoſed to that verſ. 2. I go mourning, or in black.

And thy truth] i. e. Thy faithfulneſs, oppoſed to the deceitful man, verſ. 1. The Rabbines interpret Light and Truth, by Chriſt and Elias; the Arabick maketh it a prayer for the Jews converſion.

Let them bring me unto thy holy hill] Zion, the place of holy aſſemblies for Gods ſervice. Iterum commendatur hic dignitas miniſterii publici: Væ igitur illis qui caducorum bonorum uſum redimunt ſacri, miniſterii jacturâ, qui conciones ſacras & Sacramenta ultro negligunt, &c.

And to thy Tabernacles] So called, either becauſe it was ſet up at ſundry times in ſundry places, whilſt it was tranſportative; or elſe becauſe it was parted by veiles into ſeveral rooms, Heb. 9. 2, 3.

Verſ. 4. Then will I go unto the Altar of God] Not without ſtore of Sacrifices. Gods ſervice is now nothing ſo coſtly, and ſhould therefore be more cheagfully performed. Heathens had their Altars, &c. all ſave the Perſians.

Verſ. 5. Why art thou bowed down, &c.] See Pſal. 42. 5. & 11.

PSAL. XLIV.

Maſchil] i. e. Making wiſe, or giving inſtruction; for which purpoſe this Pſalm was compoſed by David (as it is moſt probable) or ſome other excellent Prophet, for the uſe of the Church, which is hæres crucis, the heir of the Croſſe, as Luther ſpeaketh; and is here inſtructed how to carry her ſelf under it, and to get benefit by it.

Verſ. 1. We have heard with our ears] i. e. We have both heard and heeded it, with utmoſt attention and affection. It is not a Pleonaſmus; but an Emphaſis that is here uſed.

Our Fathers have told us] According to that they were commanded, Deut. 6. and elſewhere, to whet good things upon their young Children, and to propagate the memory of Gods noble acts to all poſterity, Exod. 12. 26. & 13. 14. Joſh. 4. 6, 7. See Pſal. 78. 4, 6. Hear this ſaith Baſil, and bluſh yee Fathers, that neglect to teach your Children. They made their mouths as it were Books, wherein the noble acts of the Lord might be read to his praiſe, and to the drawing of their Childrens hearts unto him. In loc.

What work thou didſt] All which they faithfully related, and carefully recorded for the uſe of after-ages, Pſal. 102. 18. This ſhall bee written for the generation to come; and the people that ſhall be created, ſhall praiſe the Lord.

Verſ. 2. How thou didſt drive out the Heathen] i. e. The Canaanites. Theſe, God the great Proprietary of all ſupplanted, after that they had for a long time grown there as trees; and abounded with all kind of ſenſual delights, till they had filled the Land from one end to the other with their uncleanneſſe, Ezra 9. 11.

How thou didſt afflict (or break in peeces) the people and caſt them out] Or, cauſe them (the Iſraelites) to ſpread and propagate. (So Mollerus readeth it) as the Vine ſendeth out her branches.

Verſ. 3. For they got not the Land in poſſeſſion by their own ſword, &c.] Men are apt to arrogate to themſelves, and ſay as Luther hath it, Hoc ego feci. Seſoſtris King of Egypt, when he had conquered any Country, was wont to ſet up pillars, and thereupon to engrave theſe words, This Land I got in poſſeſſion by mine own power. He was afterwards ſlain by his own ſervants. Herod. lib. 2

But thy right hand] Quia per eam prælia & opera facta ſunt, ſaith Kimchi. God is the great Doer in all atchievements.

And the light of thy countenance] i. e. Illuſtris præſentia tua qua præiviſti & præluxiſti eis, thy gracious preſence and conduct. Junius.

Becauſe thou hadſt a favour unto them] Free grace was the fundamentall cauſe of all their felicity. God loved them becauſe he loved them, Deut. 7. 7. He choſe them of his love, and then loved them for his choice.

Verſ. 4. Thou art my King O God] Heb. Thou art he my King. Gr. Thou art the ſame my King. i. e. the ſame that thou waſt to thoſe of old; Oh ſee to thy ſubjects, as ever thou haſt done.

Command deliverances for Jacob] A Mandamus from thee will do it; He ſpake the word, and it was done. Some read it, command deliverances O Jacob, that is, O God of Jacob, as Pſal. 24. 6.

Verſ. 5. Through thee will we puſh down our enemies] Cornu-p temus, a metaphor from horned creatures, as Deut. 33. 17. This we ſhall ſoon do, if thou do but only give the word of command; for together with thy word goeth forth a power.

Through thy name] Tuo nomine & numine, auſpicio & ductu.

Verſ. 6. For I will not truſt in my bow] To truſt in men or means, is the ready rode to utter ruine. Idas one of the Argonauts is brought in by the Poet, bragging that he truſted not in the gods, but in his own arm, and armes.

Ἄλλε μ' ὀφέλλει
Ζεὺς τόσον ὀλίγιον περ ἐμὸν σθένος.

What need we to fear the Turks (ſaid Sigiſmund the young King of Hungary in his pride and jollity) who need not at all to fear the falling of the heavens, which if they ſhould fall, yet were we able with our ſpears and halberds to hold them up Turk. hiſt. 1 for falling upon us? He, ſhortly after this, received a notable overthrow. Carnall confidence endeth in confuſion.

Verſ. 7. But thou haſt ſaved us] Thou haſt wrought and fought for us againſt thoſe that ſought to deſtroy us. Thou haſt, and therefore thou wilt, for thou art the ſame my King, verſ. 4.

Verſ. 8. In God we boaſt all the day long] The Spaniards are ſaid to be great boaſters in the very loweſt ebbe of fortune. A godly man may be, and muſt be ſo by an holy gloriation; he muſt make his boaſts of ſuch a King immortal, inviſible, &c. The three Children did ſo: Our God can deliver us, &c.

And praiſe thy Name] Thou alone ſhalt have the praiſe of all our proſperity.

Verſ. 9. But thou haſt caſt off, and put us to ſhame] Here's a ſudden change, and a ſad complaint, but handſomly brought in, the better to inſinuate, the ſooner to prevail for redreſs. Only this, it ſhould have been remembred that the Lords hand was not ſhortned --- but their iniquities had ſeparated between them and their God, Iſa. 59. 1, 2. That noble General Trajan told Valens the Arrian Emperour, that by warring againſt God, hee had abandoned the Victory, and ſent it to the enemies.

Niceph. l. 11. c. 40.

Verſ. 10. Thou makeſt us to turn back from the enemy] By expectorating our faith and courage, and leaving us to a fearful faint-heartedneſs, that flieth at the ſound of a ſhaken leaf. God ſtrengtheneth or weakneth the arm of either Army, Ezek. 30. 24.

Verſ. 11. Thou haſt given us like ſheep appointed for meat] Aliqui occiſi, diſperſi alii, & venundati gratis, Some of us are ſlain, others ſcattered here and there, and ſold for nought.

Aben-Ezra.

And haſt ſcattered us, &c.] O the many miſeries of ſuch a baniſhment! The Poet thus expreſſeth it.

Eſt miſerum, patria amiſſa laribuſq; vagare:
Mendica & timida voce rogare cibos.
Cum natiſq; errare ſuis, & conjuge maſta,
Et cum matre pia, cumq; parente ſene.

Tyrtæus.

Verſ. 12. Thou ſelleſt thy people for nought] Thirty for a penny the Jews were ſold by the Romans, ſaith Joſephus, at the laſt devaſtation.

And doſt not increaſe thy wealth by their price] Thou takeſt thy firſt Chapman (as the Pope gave England, in Hen. 8. his time, Primo occupanti, to him that could firſt ſeize it) and haſt not made thy beſt of them; but given them away, for whom thou waſt wont to give great Nations, Iſa. 43. 3. All the comfort in this caſe was, that yet they were dear to God as his Sons, though ſold for ſlaves to the enemies, as may be ſeen Iſa. 50. 1. & 52. 3.

Verſ. 13. Thou makeſt us a reproach to our neighbours] This to a generous ſpirit is very grievous. The Cappadocians were noted for a ſervile people; and Tiberius ſaid of his Romans, that they were homines ad ſervitutem parati. The Jews at this day hear ill among all Nations, for a naſty and ſordid people. O Marcomanni, O Quadi, O Sarmatæ, tandem alios vobis deteriores inveni, ſaid that Emperour, O Marcomans, O Quades, O Sarmatians, I have at length found a more odious and contemptible people than you are any; meaning the Jews, with whoſe ſtench he was much annoyed.

Verſ. 14. Thou makeſt us a by-word among the Heathen] Who uſe to ſay, As baſe as a Jew, as wretched as an Iſraelite, &c. The Turks at this day ſay, Judæus ſim ſi fallam, If I be not as good as my word, count me a very Jew. We uſe to ſay, As hard-hearted as a Jew. Thus is fulfilled that which was threatned, Deut. 28. 37. 1 King. 9. 7. Jer. 24. 9.

Verſ. 15. My confuſion is continually before me] Heb. All the day long, or every day; ſo as that there is neither hope of better, nor place of worſe.

Verſ. 16. For the voyce of him that reproacheth and blaſphemeth] Reproacheth Religion, blaſphemeth God and his people, as if hee cared not what became of them; and his diſpenſation ſeemeth to ſay as much: this reflecteth upon the Saints, and maketh them cry out ---

---Pudet

——Pudet hæc opprobria nobis,
Et dici potuisse, & non potuisse refelli.

Vers. 17. All this is come upon us, yet] This they alledge, viz. their constancy, as an argument of their sincerity, and a motive to pitty; apply this with Hebræus, to Christians, and then it is the voyce of Martyrs.

Neither have we dealt falsly in thy Covenant] i. e. We have not relinquished the true Religion, or revolted to dumb Idols: but held us close to thy sincere service. And therefore if that Heathen Emperour going against his enemy could say, Non sic Deos coluimus ut ille nos vinceret, We have not so served the gods that they should serve us no better, than to suffer us to be worsted; How much more may Gods faithful Servants be confident of his help, and say, All people will walk every one in the name of his god; and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever? Mic. 4. 5. Antoni. Philosoph.

Vers. 18. Our heart is not turned back] Metaphora à studio, saith Vatablus, As those that run a race stand not at a stay, much less turn back again; so neither have we either stepped or stepped backward, but advanced still toward the mark, having Nondum metam (We have not yet attained) for our Motto, as Saint Paul had; Phil. 3. 12. being in nothing terrified by our adversaries, not afraid with any amazement. Phil. 1. 28. 1 Pet. 3. 6.

Neither have our steps declined] We have watched over every particular action; Gods people are best when at worst.

Vers. 19. Though thou hast sore broken us in the place of Dragons] i. e. In Desarts haunted by Dragons. (See Isa. 34. 13. & 35. 7.) Whereinto we are driven in banishment, and there hast crushed us, and covered us with the shadow of death, i. e. deadly calamity. Grumald. Ors.

Vers. 20. If we have forgotten the name of our God] i. e. forgone our Religion, as Renegadoes, denying the Lord that bought us. In the time of the Maccabees, many revolted to Paganism; Damas forsaking Paul, became an Idolatrous Priest at Thessalonica, saith Dorotheus; Julian turned Pagan; Damascen Mahometan, as some write; Harding an obstinate Papist. In the Palatinate, when, not forty years since, taken by the Spaniard, scarce one man in twenty stood out, but fell to Popery, as fast as leaves fall in Autumn.

Or stretched out our hands to a strange God] This, Ignatius, Laurentius, and thousands of those Primitive Christians would dye, rather than be drawn to do. So the three Children, the seven Brethren, &c. Origen, for yeelding a little, was excommunicated.

Vers. 21. Shall not God search this out?] What pretences or excuses soever bee used for the colouring, and covering of the same.

For he knoweth, &c.] See Mat. 10. 26. with the Note.

Vers. 22. Yea for thy sake are we killed, &c. q. d. Thou knowest that for thy sake, (and not for vain glory, or out of pertinacy, &c.) we are killed. Tis the cause, and not the punishment, that maketh the Martyr. Some suffer as Malefactors rather. Potes videre hominem morte affici quare mortificetur nescis. Aug.

We are counted as sheep for the slaughter] As those Christians in Calabria, Anno 1560. thrust up in one house together, as in a Sheep-fold, and butchered severally. See Rom. 8. 36. besides those many, whose names being written in red Letters of bloud in the Churches Calender, are written in golden Letters in Christs Register in the book of life, as Prudentius hath it. Act. & Mon.

Vers. 23. Awake, why sleepest thou?] Considering all the premises, stir up thy self, and come and save us; carest thou not that we perish?

Vers. 24. Wherefore hidest thou thy face?] God sometimes concealeth his love, as Joseph did, out of increasement of love: he retireth, but saith fetcheth him out; as the Woman of Canaan did, Mark 7. 24, 25.

Vers. 25. For our soul, &c.] Soul and Belly (or body) both are oppressed, and lye suppliant at Gods feet; resolved there to live and dye together.

Vers. 26. Arise for our help] Heb. A help for us, a sufficient help, proportionable to our necessities. The Hebrew hath a letter more than ordinary.

I ſpeak of the things which I have made touching the King] Or, I will ſpeak in my works, that is in this Pſalm, *concerning the King, viz. My tongue is the pen of a ready writer] i. e. I will roudly and readily relate what I have ſo well ruminated; and dexterouſly deliver my moſt mature meditations concerning the myſtical marriage of Chriſt and his Church. This is a good preſident for Preachers. Demoſthenes would have ſuch a one branded for a pernicious man to the Common-wealth, who durſt propoſe any thing publickly, which hee had not before-hand ſeriouſly pondered. And Ariſtides being preſſed to ſpeak to ſomething propounded ex tempore, anſwered; propound to day, and I will anſwer to morrow; for we are not of thoſe that ſpit or ſpue up things, &c.

Verſ. 2. Thou art fairer than the Children of men] Heb. Thou art double-fairer; the Hebrew word is doubled, ad corroborandum, ſaith Kimchi. It may very well be, that Salomon was, for his beauty, another Nireus; and for his eloquence, another Neſtor; wiſdom might make his face to ſhine. Of Chriſt we are ſure, that his body being of the fineſt temperament, and no way diſeaſed, could not be but very beautifull. The Roman regiſter reporteth him to have been of a reverend countenance, his ſtature ſomewhat tall, his hair after the colour of the ripe hazel-nut, his forehead ſmooth and plain, his face without wrinkle, mixt with moderate red, his eyes gray, various, and clear, &c. Surely if Stephens face was as the face of an Angel, and if with his bodily eyes he could peirce the heavens, and ſee there what he would; How much more could the Lord Chriſt, whoſe very manhood came the neareſt unto God of any that ever was or could be? His very countenance did expreſſe presse a divinity in him. And what if to the Jews, who esteemed him but man, but maligned him, and crucified him, he had neither form nor beauty, Isa. 53. 2? what if he were so broken at thirty three years of age, with continuall paines and grief for them, that they judged him well-nigh fifty, Joh. 8. 57? yet he was every way compleat and comely above all the Children of men, yea above all the Angells in heaven: for in him the Godhead dwels bodily, Col. 2. 9. and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, Joh. 1. 14. His soul was like a rich pearl in a rough shell, like the Tabernacle, Goats-hair without, but gold within; or as Brutus his staff, cujus intus solidum aurum cornea vellabatur cortice. He was all glorious within; had a fulness of grace above that of Adam, Joh. 1. 16. as much as a Creature was capable of; and more near familiarity with the Godhead, than any creature. Plutarch.

Grace is poured into thy lips] So that thou canst gracefully deliver thy self in a set speech. Solomon could, no doubt, as another Phocion or Pericles; in whose lips, τὸ πιθανὸν ἐκάθητο (said Eupolis) sat a strange perswasive facultty; so that he could prevail with the people at his pleasure. Jesus Christ could much more do so, together with his words there went forth a power; he spoke as never man spake he spoke with authority, and not as the Scribes; all that heard him wondred at the words of grace that proceeded out of his mouth, Luk. 4. 22. Isa. 50. 4.

Therefore God hath blessed thee] Or better, because that God hath blessed thee, and endowed thee with such gifts and graces.

Vers. 3. Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, O most mighty] This is one of Christs titles, Isa. 9. 6. the Giant, or the mighty strong God, the valliant Champion of his Church. And his sword is the word of his mouth, Rev. 1. 16. Heb. 4. 12. Isa. 49. 2. All the wars in the conquest of Canaan were types of the spirituall wars under the Gospel, whereby the Nations were subdued to the obedience of the faith, 2 Cor. 10. 4. Ephes. 6. 11. Christ hath his sword then, a two-edged sword; and he is here called upon to gird it to his thigh (after the manner of those Easterlings, as we do our skeans, hangers, woodknives) that is, to take unto him his authority, and to exercise it for the conversion of his people, and confusion of his enemies. Additur ei gladius quem non ostentet velut ἐπίδοτον, sed quem etiam destringat. A sword hee hath, not for shew, but for service; whence it is added, with thy glory and thy Majesty. O Heros!

Vers. 4. And in thy Majesty ride prosperously] Heb. Prosper thou, ride thou upon the Word of truth, of meekness and of Righteousness. q. d. Ride thou in thy triumphant Charret, as it were drawn by those three glorious graces, Truth, Meekness, and Righteousness; and governed by the Word, as by the Charret-man; Cui divinissima allegoriæ explicandæ pro rei gravitate ac dignitate integro volumine opus esset, saith Beza, For the explaining of which most divine allegory, according to the worth of it, a whole volume might well be full written. The Kings of the earth for most part have their Charrets drawn by other horses, viz. Pride, Ambition, Cruelty, &c. as Sesostris King of Egypt, Equita super verbum veritatis.

Qui Pharios currus regum cervicibus egit.

And thy right hand shall teach thee terrible things] i. e. Shall inable thee to perform them. Christ riding on his white horse (his Apostles and Preachers) went forth conquering, and to conquer, Rev. 6. 2. Salomon was no such sword-man as was Jesus Christ.

Ἀμφότερος βασιλεὺς τ' ἀγαθὸς, κρατερός τ' ἀιχμήτης.

Vers. 5. Thine arrows are sharp, &c.] Peters converts were pricks in heart; and Stephens hearers were cut to the heart; Christ can reach in his rebells afarre off; he hath arrowes as well as a sword, to wound them; that men may either bend or break, yeeld, or become his foot-stool; One way or other he will surely have the better of them. Act. 2. Act. 7. 54.

Vers. 6. Thy throne, O God] Here the Prophet directeth his speech not to Solomon (who never took upon him the name of God, as did Sesostris King of Ægypt, Antiochus, θεὸς, Caligula, and some other proud Princes) but to Christ, Heb. 1. 8. who is God, blessed for ever, Amen, not so called by an excellency only, as the Angels are, Psal. 8. 5. with Heb. 2. nor by Office and Title only, as Magistrates ſtrates are gods, Pſ. 82. 1, 6. not Catachreſtically and Ironically ſo called, as the Heathen gods, nor a diminutive god, inferiour to the Father, as Arrius held, but God by nature, every way Co-eſſential, Co-eternal, and Co-equal with the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt, Joh. 1. 1. Phil. 2. 6. 1 Joh. 5. 20. Hold this faſt; for it is the Rock, Mat. 16. 16. it is of the very foundation: ſo that if we beleeve it not, there is no heaven to be had, 1 Joh. 5. 20. As for his Kingly Office here deſcribed, it belongeth to him as Mediator, and what is here ſpoken of him is to be underſtood of his whole perſon, for ſo is the Head of the Church, and King of Iſrael, for ever.

The ſceptre of thy Kingdom, &c.] Thy government is not with rigour, but with righteouſneſs, thou cameſt rightly by it, caſting out Satan the Uſurper, Mat. 12. 29. Heb. 2. 14. and doſt moſt righteouſly adminiſter it, Deut. 4. 8.

Hæc verè heroica eſt nemeſis.

Verſ. 7. Thou loveſt righteouſneſs; and hateſt wickedneſs] Salomon did ſo for a great while (nay Nero's firſt five years were ſuch, that Trajan was wont to ſay, that none ever attained to the perfection of them) but Chriſt continually; neither can hee do otherwiſe. See Matth. 3. 10, 11, 12. Joh. 5. 30. Matth. 12. 18, 19, 20.

Therefore God thy God hath anoynted] i. e. For which purpoſe God hath anoynted thee his Meſſiah, or Chriſt, Pſal. 2. 2.

With the oyl of gladneſs] Quia totus mundus in unctione Chriſti & ejus miſſione lætabitur, ſaith Kimchi; ſo called, becauſe the whole World ſhould bee cheared up by the Unction and Miſſion of Meſſiah; he received the Spirit without meaſure, that of his fulneſs we might all receive and grace for grace, righteouſneſs and peace, and joy in the holy Ghoſt.

Beza.

Above thy fellows] i. e. Ex reliquorum regum numero eximendus, above all earthly Potentates; the beſt whereof (as David, Joſiah) had their faults, and flaws; or rather above thy Saints, thy fellow-brethren by grace, and Co-heirs of glory; they have Plenitudinem Vaſis, but thou, Fontis; neither only art thou anointed Præ conſortibus, above thy fellows, but Pro conſortibus, for thoſe thy fellows, as ſome render it, and it is very comfortable.

Dioſcor. l. 1. c. 67. & l. 3. c. 82. & lib. 1. 12 Lib. 1. Antidot.

Verſ. 8. All thy garments ſmell of myrrhe, aloes, and caſſia] Things not only of good ſavour, but of great price. Myrrhe ſome take to be Musk, Aloes Amber, Caſſia, a kind of Cinnamon, which in Galens time was very rare and hard to bee found, except in the ſtore-houſes of great Princes. And Pliny reporteth, that a pound of Cinnamon was worth a thouſand Denarii, that is, an hundred and fifty Crowns of our money. This deſcription then of Chriſts cloathing, doth allegorically ſet forth the ſweetneſs and pleaſure that the Father findeth in him (ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα, Mat. 3. 17.) and that we alſo finde, whilſt he is made unto us of God, Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification, and Redemption, 1 Cor. 1. 30. (Confer 2 Cor. 2. 14.) and that out of his Ivory palaces, i. e. his heavenly habitation, from which he beholdeth us, and raineth down righteouſneſs upon us.

Whereby they have made thee glad] i. e. Servi & ſodales tui, thy fellow friends and ſervants, who ſtand and hear the Bridegroom, and rejoyce greatly by reaſon of his voyce, Joh. 3. 29. yea make him glad by their ready obedience, ſetting the Crown upon his head, and adorning him as it were with all his bravery in the day of his eſpouſals. Cant. 3. 11. and making him ſay, How fair, how pleaſant art thou, O love, for delights! Cant. 7. 6.

Verſ. 9 Kings daughters were among thine honourable women] Thy Ladies of honour attending upon thy royal Conſort (for after the deſcription of Chriſt, the Bridegroom, followeth another of the Queen, his Bride, and of the royal Nuptials) Or, Kings daughters are in thy precious ſort, that is, in thy comlineſs that thou haſt put upon them, Ezek. 16. 14. for all the Churches bravery is borrowed, and all her Daughters, i. e. Members, are adorned not with their own proper attire, Sed regio mundo & ornatu, out of the King Chriſts Wardrobe; this is the righteouſneſs of the Saints, Rev. 19. 8. viz. imputed, and imparted.

Upon thy right hand] Which is a place of Dignity and Safety. As Chriſt is at the Fathers right hand; ſo the Church is at Chriſts right hand; where, as his wife, ſhe ſhineth with her Husbands beams. This is very comfortable.

Auguſtin.

Did ſtand the Queen] Heb. the wife, adſtitorium illi ſimile reſpondeni, as Gen. 2. 18. ſaith Auguſtine. Other Queens the third, the Chronicler ſaith, that hee was happy in his wife, a Lady of excellent vertue, who drew evenly with him in all the courſes of honour that appertained to her ſide; and ſeemed a peece ſo juſt cut for him, as anſwered him rightly in every joynt. Daniels hiſt.

was

Verſ. 10. Hearken O Daughter, and conſider, incline thine ear] The Prophets, or rather Chriſts Counſell to the Church, and each Member thereof, wholly to deny ungodlineſſe and wordly luſts, and to live ſoberly, righteouſly and godly in this preſent World; to leave all, and to cleave to Chriſt. This, becauſe it is ſoon ſaid, but not ſo ſoon done, He preſſeth in many words all to one purpoſe, Hearken, ſee, incline thine ear. Self-denyall is a moſt difficult duty, and yet ſo neceſſary, that if it be not done, we ſhall be undone. Tit. 3. 12.

Forget alſo thine own people, &c.] All evill opinions muſt be unlearned, and all evill practices abandoned, and all our love transferred, and transfuſed upon Chriſt; or we cannot be a fit Spouſe for him. Chriſts Spouſe muſt (as Deut. 21. 11, 12, 13.) ſhave her head, pare her nails, and bewail her Father and Mother, that is, her naturall inbred evills and corruptions.

Verſ. 11. So ſhall the King greatly deſire thy beauty] If thou deny thy ſelf and forgo all others to pleaſe him alone, he ſhall ſet his whole heart upon thee, and be raviſhed with thy love, as Prov. 5. 19. How could that Perſian Ladies Husband do leſſe than love her, who having been at Cyrus his wedding, and asked how ſhe liked the Bridegroom? Like him, ſaid ſhe? I know not how I like him; for I looked upon no man there, but mine own Husband. Aſpaſia Mileſia was very dear to Cyrus, becauſe ſhe was καλὴ καὶ σοφὴ, Fair, and withall Wiſe. Ælian.

For he is thy Lord] And therefore not to be ſlighted by thee, for his great love, as many of the Perſian Monarchs were (Ahaſhuerosh for inſtance) but reverenced and obeyed, as Auguſtus was by his wife Livia.

Verſ. 12. And the Daughter of Tyre ſhall be there With a gift] Iſa. 23. 18. The Tyrians, that wealthy people, when once converted (think the ſame of other Nations) ſhall leave hoarding and heaping; and find another manner of Merchandiſe and imployment of their ſubſtance, viz. to feed and cloath Gods Saints, and maintain his Miniſters.

Verſ. 13. The Kings Daughter is all glorious within] In the Inner-man, Epheſ. 3. 16. the hidden man of the heart, 1 Pet. 3. 4. Great is the glory of the new Creature; but not diſcerned by the World, through which the Saints muſt be content to paſſe as concealed perſons; and not think much to have the greater part of their ware in the inner part of their ſhop, and not all on the board or ſtall.

Her cloathing is of wrought gold] ex veſtibus auro ocellatis. Cloathed ſhe is with humility, and other golden graces; as with that party-coloured garment, whereby Kings Daughters, as Tamar, were anciently diſtinguiſhed from others.

Verſ. 14. She ſhall be brought] See the Note on verſ. 13. ſhe ſhall be preſented to Chriſt a glorious Church, not having ſpot, wrinkle, or any ſuch thing, Epheſ. 5. 27. Rev. 21. 2.

Verſ. 15. With gladneſſe and rejoycing] As at marriages is uſuall. Sampſons wife, ſolecized in weeping at ſuch a feaſt. Oh the joy! the joy! ſaid that dying Saint. But what in the mean-while?

Verſ. 16. Inſtead of thy Fathers, &c.] The Church ſhall ſtill bring forth Children to her Husband Chriſt, and there ſhall bee a ſucceſſion of his name, Pſal. 72. 17.

Whom thou maieſt make Princes] The Saints are Kings in Righteouſneſſe, though ſomewhat obſcure ones as was Melchiſedech.

Verſ. 17. I will make thy name, &c.] This is a ſecond benefit promiſed to the Church, viz. everlaſting renown, with higheſt eſtimation and imitation, to the Worlds end.

PSAL. XLVI.

V*Pon Alamoth*] i. e. Upon the Virginals. Virgins with their ſhril treble tune 1 Chron. 15. 20. uſed (belike) to ſing this triumphant Pſalm, and to play it on the Inſtrument; and their hearts were ſomewhat ſuitable to it. The pen-man ſome think to have been David, upon occaſion of thoſe notable victories, 2 Sam. 8.

Others, Solomon; for the Virgins to ſing and play at his wedding, Pſal. 45. 8, 9. with Cant. 1. 2. Verſ. 1. God is our refuge and ſtrength] Deus nobis eſt receptus, & robur. All Creatures, when in diſtreſſe, run to their refuges, Prov. 30. 26. Pſal. 104. 18. Prov. 18. 11. Dan. 4. 10, 11. Judg. 9. 50, 51. So do the Saints to God Almighty, for the ſafe-guarding of their perſons, as here, and Iſa. 25. 4. Luther, when in greateſt diſtreſſe, was wont to call for this Pſalm; ſaying, Let us ſing the forty ſixth Pſalm in conſort; and then let the Devill do his worſt.

Joh. Manlii loc. com.

A very preſent help in trouble] Or, We have abundantly found him an help in tribulation. God, as he is not farre off his people at ſuch a time, ſo he needeth not much intreaty; but when we are neareſt danger, he is neareſt to deliver, as in the Gun-powder-plot prevented eight or nine houres before it ſhould have been acted; Maſſes were ſung in Rome, for the proſpering of it; but no prayers particularly made in England, for the preventing, nor could be. Here God was, if ever, auxilium præſentiſſimum.

Verſ. 2. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth, &c.] No not in the greateſt concuſſions of States, and revolutions in nature. Earthquakes are very dreadfull, and lay whole Cities on heaps ſometimes (as Antioch often, which was therehence called Θεόπολις) but though not ſome part only, but the whole earth ſhould be turned topſy-turvy, as a man wipeth a diſh, wiping it, and turning it upſide down, 2 King. 21. 13. yea though heaven and earth ſhould be mingled, Heb. 12. 26. in this alſo the Beleever would be confident, becauſe God is with him (Pſal. 23. 4. & 27. 1.) whoſe praiſe and promiſe is, to ſee to his Servants ſafety in the greateſt dangers, and to ſet them out of the gunſhot.

Verſ. 3. Though the waters thereof roar and bee troubled] Heb. Be mudded; yet we will not fear, viz. with a baſe diſtruſtfull fear. Tanti eſt experiri iam ſenſum q; auxilii divini habere. The tempeſtuous riſing and roaring of the Sea is ſo terrible, that Ariſtotle ſaith, whoſoever feareth it not, is either mad, or ſenſeleſſe. Fear not, ſaith the Angell to St. Paul himſelf in that dreadfull ſtorm, Act. 27. 24. which implyeth, that he was afraid with a naturall fear; and he might be ſo without ſin. An awefull fear of God is conſiſtent with faith; neither is any Beleever guilty of a Stoical apathie. The very Devills beleeve and tremble, Jam. 2. 19. The Apoſtles word there implieth, that they roar as the Sea roareth, and ſhrieke horribly.

Though the Mountains ſhake, &c.] As ſometimes Promontories fall with the force, and impetuous beating of the Sea upon them. Admit all this, and more (whether in a ſenſe literall, or allegoricall; ſet forth it is in a ſtrain high and hyperbolicall) yet wee will bear up, and bee bold to beleeve, that all ſhall go well with us.

Id quod Prophetæ miris verborum figuris additis illuſtrat. Beza.

Verſ. 4. There is a River, &c.] Interea civitas Dei, amidſt all theſe garboiles and hurly-burlies abroad, the Church ſhall be helped with a little help, as Dan. 11. 34. that through weaker means, ſhe may ſee Gods greater ſtrength. That contemptible brook Cedron (whereof read Joh. 18. 1. compaſſing ſome part only of the City Jeruſalem; or paſſing thorough the middle of it, as ſome write) together with the rivorets Siloe and others that run into it, ſhall be able, through God, to ſave her from the power and greatneſſe of her enemies. Confer Iſa. 8. 6. and this place ſhall be the better underſtood.

The holy place of the Tabernacles] This was the beauty and bulwark of Jeruſalem, viz. the Temple, the continued ſincere ſervice of God: this was the Tower of the flock, and the ſtrong hold of the Daughter of Gods people, Mic. 4. 8. See Iſa. 26. 1, 2. And theſe Rivers of the Sanctuary, theſe waters of life, drawn with joy out of the the wells of Salvation; the precious Promiſes, made glad the City of God, the Conſciences of Beleevers; and cauſed them to triumph over all troubles.

Verſ. 5. God is in the midſt of her] Hence the Church is called Jehovah Shammah, the Lord is there, Ezek. 48. 35. there he hath ſet him upa Mercy-ſeat, a Throne of Grace, and paved his people a new and living way thereunto with the Bloud of his Son, ſo that they may come boldly, obtain mercy, and finde grace to help in time of need, Heb. 4. 14.

She ſhall not be moved] Or, not greatly moved, Pſal. 62. 2. in thoſe great commotions abroad the world, verſ. 2, 3. Verſ. 6. The Heathen raged] Among themſelves, and againſt the Church (Chriſt myſtical, as Pſal. 2. 1, 2.) with great force and fury: Quia ab aſcenſore ſuo Daemone ſurgentur, as Bernard giveth the reaſon, becauſe the Devil rideth them, and ſpurreth them on.

The Kingdoms were moved] to remove and root out the Church, but that will not be; becauſe in the thing wherein they deal proudly, God is above them. See thoſe three ſweet ſimilitudes, Zech. 12. 2, 3, 6.

He uttered his voyce] Thunder-ſtruck the enemies, and ſaved his people by a Miracle of his mercy, Pſal. 18. 6, 7.

The earth melted] Contra naturam ſuam, quia eſt arida, ſaith Aben-Ezra; againſt the nature thereof, for it is dry. By the earth ſome underſtand the enemies, who had almoſt filled the whole Land with their multitudes.

Verſ. 7. The Lord of Hoſts is with us] Even the Lord who commandeth far other Hoſts and Armies than the enemy hath any; and this they ſhall ſee by our Spiritual ſecurity.

The God of Jacob is our refuge] Heb. Our high tower, ſuch as our enemies cannot come at. When he calleth him the God of Jacob, hee hath reſpect to the Promiſes, ſaith Vatablus; Gods Power and Goodneſs are the Churches Jachin and Boaz.

Ver. 8. Come, behold the Works of the Lord] Venite, videte. God looks that his Works ſhould bee well obſerved, and eſpecially when he hath wrought any great deliverance for his people. Of all things, hee cannot abide to bee forgotten.

What deſolations he hath made in the earth] How he hath dunged his Vineyard with the dead Carcaſſes of thoſe wild Boars out of the Forreſt, that had infeſted it. Thoſe four mighty Monarchies had their times and their turns, their riſe and their ruine; but the Church remains for ever.

Verſ. 9. He maketh Warres to ceaſe] As the Lord putteth the Sword in Commiſſion, bathing it in Heaven; ſo he can quiet it, and command it up at his pleaſure. He did ſo when Siſera was ſlain, and when Sennacherib. The Church hath her Halcyons.

He breaketh the bow, &c.] No weapon formed againſt thee ſhall proſper, Iſa. 54. 17. The Spaniſh Armada was ſet forth with infinite labour and expence; but ſoon diſperſed and defeated.

He burneth the Chariots] In quibus inſtrumenta bellica, vel victualia pro militibus circumgeſtant, ſaith Aben-Ezra, i. e. their carriages for ammunition, and proviſions.

Verſ. 10. Be ſtill, and know, &c.] q. d. As you muſt come and ſee, verſ. 8. ſo come and hear what the Lord ſaith to thoſe enemies of yours, Ceſſate, & ſcitote, Be ſtill, &c. and know, Ex veſtris ſaltem malis diſcite, learn by what yee have felt, that there is no contending with omnipotency. I will be exalted, asking you no leave, &c.

PSAL. XLVII.

A Pſalm for the Sons of Korah] Carmen triumphale, ſaith Mollerus; a Panegyrical Oration, ſaith Beza, written by David, when top-full of moſt ardent zeal, and ſung by the Korites in that ſtately ſolemnity, whereat he brought at length the Lords holy Ark into the City of David: which gallant Hiſtory is lively ſet forth, 2 Sam. 6. & 1 Chron. 15. And the uſe that David doth here make of it, viz. concerning Chriſts Kingdom, and the benefits thereby, concerneth us as much, or rather more, than that ancient people. The Rabbins with one conſent ſay, that this Pſalm is to be underſtood De diebus Chriſti, of the days of the Meſſiah, who was prefigured by the Ark, and ſhould be the joy of all Nations.

Verſ. 1. O clap your hands all yee people] As they uſed to do at their Kings Coronation, 2 King. 11. 12. ſhew your joy for, and intereſt in Chriſt your King, by manifeſting your righteouſneſs, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt. Other joys are mixt, and dear-bought, but this is ſincere and gratuitous, as the Prophet Iſaiah ſetteth forth elegantly, chap. 9. 3, 5, 6, 7.

Shout unto God, with the voyce of triumph] Heb. Of ſhrilling. Gods praiſes are to be celebrated with all manner of chearfulneſs; and we are to be vexed at the vile dulneſs of our hearts, that are no more affected and enlarged hereunto; ſeeing all cauſes of joy are found eminently in God, and he is ſo well worthy to be praiſed, Pſal. 18. 3. Jews and Gentiles are here joyntly called upon, joyfully to praiſe their Redeemer.

Verſ. 2. For the Lord moſt high is terrible] Amiable to his own, terrible to his rebels. This Son, if not kiſſed, will be angry, Pſal. 2. This Lamb, for a need, can ſhew himſelf a Lion: as he is the Father of Mercies, ſo the God of Recompences, &c. and being moſt high hee can eaſily overtop and ſubdue the ſtouteſt of his enemies.

He is a great King over all the earth] As having taken poſſeſſion by his wonderful Aſcenſion, of the univerſal Kingdom given him by his Father, and gathered himſelf a Church out of all Mankind, which he wonderfully ruleth, and defendeth againſt the rage of Earth, and of Hell.

Verſ. 3. He ſhall ſubdue the people under us] This was typified in the Government of the Iſraelites, then aſcendent in Davids days, but fulfilled when Chriſt rode abroad on his white Horſe, the Apoſtles, Conquering and to conquer; Rev. 6. Quando Britannorum inacceſſa Romanis loca Chriſto patuerint, as Tertullian hath it. Chriſt ſubdued the Britans and others, whom the victorious Romans could never come at. The Chaldee hath it, he ſhall kill the people under us, ſc. with the ſword of the Spirit, the Word; when the Law came, ſin revived, and I dyed, Rom. 7. 9. The Hebrew is, He ſhall ſpeak the people under us; that is, he ſhall by the preaching of the Goſpel, powerfully perſwade Japhet to dwell in the tents of Shem, Gen. 9. 27. Tremellius rendreth it, Cogit in caulam populos, he gathereth the people into the fold, viz. that there may be one Sheep-fold, and one Shepherd, as Joh. 10. 16. Eph. 2. 14.

Jun. ex Aben-Ezra, & R. Judah.

And the Nations under our feet] Hence the Jews to this day dream (as did alſo the Diſciples, ſowred with their leaven) of an earthly Kingdom, wherein the Meſſiah at his coming ſhall ſubdue the Nations, and diſtribute their Provinces and wealth among his Jews. But Chriſts Kingdom is of another nature, and the Nations are already ſubdued to the Church, which remaineth one and the ſame, although the Jews be as branches broken off, and others ſet in their place, Rom. 11. 24. Beſides, by the Nations under the Jews feet is meant (ſay ſome) that the Gentiles ſhould be Scholars, and the Jews School-maſters, as it were, unto them: for ſo ſitting under the feet, or at the feet, ſignifieth in Scripture, Acts 22. 3. Luke 10. 39. 2 King. 4. 5. The teacher was called Joſhebh, or Sitter; the Scholar Mithabbek, or one that lieth along in the duſt, in token of his humble ſubjection. And in this ſenſe Seneca ſomewhere ſaith, that the baſeſt of people (meaning the Jews) gave Laws unto all the world.

Verſ. 4. He ſhall chuſe our inheritance for us] Or, He hath choſen. Of his free grace grace, he espied out the Land of Canaan for his people Israel, flowing with Milk and Honey, and such as was the glory of all Lands, Ezek. 20. 6. and as much, yea much more hath he done for the whole Israel of God, both of Jews and Gentiles, by electing them to an inheritance immortal, undefiled, reserved in Heaven for them, 1 Pet. 1. 4.

The excellency (or high-glory) of Jacob whom he loved] i.e. All those high and honourable Priviledges wherein Jacob once, and now all the faithful may well glory and rejoyce. See Rom. 9. 4, 5. having as great both abundance and assurance of Gods grace and goodness, as Jacob ever had.

Vers. 5. God is gone up with a shout] The Ark is here called God, as also Psa. 132. 8. and the face of God, Ps. 105. 4. because from the Ark, in the midst of the Cherubims, God spake to his people, and they by looking towards it had a sure symbol of the Divine presence. The bringing of it up with pomp and solemnity into Mount Zion, was a type of Christs wonderful ascension into Heaven, triumphing over all his and our enemies, Col. 2. 15. Eph. 4. 8. and joyfully entertained by Saints and Angels in Heaven. The Jews, ever apt to work themselves (as one saith of them) into the fools paradise of a sublime dotage) understand this passage of the future reduction of the Ark into the Sanctuary, where it was once: and for the which they most earnestly pray still, as Buxtorf. writeth.

With the sound of a trumpet] Concrepantibus tubis: and in like sort he shall return; Acts 1. 11. with 1 Thes. 4. 16. De Synag. Jud. c. 13

Vers. 6. Sing praises to God, sing praises] Do it with all alacrity, and assiduity, being of that Martyrs mind who said, Should I do nothing else all the days of my life, yea as long as the days of Heaven shall last, but kneel upon my knees, and repeat over Davids Psalms to the glory and praise of God, yet should I fall infinitely short of what is my duty to do.

Vers. 7. For God is King of all the earth] q. d. Our King, said I? it is too little; he is King of all the earth. A title vainly taken by some proud Princes, as Sesostris King of Ægypt, who would needs be called κοσμοκράτωρ, Lord of the whole world. So, a Decree went out from Augustus Cæsar, that all the World should be taxed, Luk. 2. 1. The great Turk Amurath the third stiled himself, God of the earth, Governour of the whole world, &c. but these were but bubbles of words, as Saint Peter hath it, God is the sole Monarch of the whole Earth, παμβασιλεὺς. Turk. Hist. 92

Sing yee praises with understanding] Non bacchantium more, but prudently, and with a well composed minde, saith Vatablus; Psalma Didascalico, saith Tremellius, with such a Psalm or Song, as whereby yee may rightly inform one another concerning his Kingdom, and your own duty. Heb. Sing yee Maschil, that is, one of the Psalms that bear that title, as some sense it: or, every one of you that hath skill in Songs, as others. Quotquot sapientes intelligentes & periti estis psallendi

Vers. 8. God reigneth over the Heathen] This is his universal Kingdom, whereof before, vers. 7. and yet never can too much be said of it.

God sitteth upon the throne of his holiness] He is in a special manner King of his Church (as Ahasuerosh was of his Hesten) called his throne, Exod. 17. 16 (because the hand upon the throne of the Lord, that is, Amaleks hand upon the Church, as some interpret it) His throne of glory, Jer. 4. 21. and here the throne of his holiness, because Christ (who is called God so many times in this Psalm) loved the Church, and gave himself for it, that he might sanctifie and cleanse it, and so present it to himself a glorious Church, Eph. 5. 25, 26, 27.

Vers. 9. The Princes of the people are gathered together] Or, the voluntary of the people: The great ones disdain not to meet with the meanest at the publick Assemblies, for performance of holy duties; but thither they fly one with another, as the Doves do to their windows, Isa. 60. 8. glorying in this, that they are Christs Vassals, as did Constantine, Valentinian, and Theodosius, those three great Emperours, casting their Crowns at his feet, and willing to come under the common yoke of his obedience, with the rest of the people of the God of Abraham, the common sort of Christians. Socrates.

For the shields of the earth belong to God] That is, those Princes and Magistrates also, Hos. 4. 18. Psal. 89. 18. belong to the covenant of election, though not many mighty, not many noble are called, 1 Cor. 1. 26. and it was grown to a

Others thus; the ſhields of the Earth belong to the Lord, that is, the Militia of the World is his; he hath and can quickly raiſe the Poſſe comitatus of all Countries.

He is greatly exalted] How ſhould he be otherwiſe who hath ſo great a command, and uſeth it for the defence of his people? Eſpecially if the Grandees of the earth become Religious, and draw on others by their example, and liberality? Magnates Magnetes.

PSAL. XLVIII.

A Pſalm, a ſong for the ſons of Korah] When and by whom compiled, we certainly know not. If by David, probably it was upon occaſion of the Philiſtines comming up to ſeek him, but were ſent away back with ſhame and loſſe, 2 Sam. 5. 7, 9. If upon the ſlaughter of Sennacheribs army by an Angel, Iſaiah or ſome other Prophet of thoſe times (as there were many) might be the Pen-man. It ſeemeth to be of the ſame time and occaſion with Pſal. 76.

Verſ. 1. Great is the Lord] Greater, Job 33. 12. Greateſt of all, Pſal. 95. 3. Greatneſſe it ſelf, Pſal. 145. 3. A degree he is above the ſuperlative.

And greatly to be praiſed] No mean praiſes can be meet for ſo great a Majeſty. It muſt be modus ſine modo. Bern.

In the City of our God] i. e. In the Church; for others will not, cannot do it to divine acceptation. Galen, amazed at the wonderfull frame of mans body, ſang an hymn to the Maker thereof, but yet he lived and dyed a Pagan. Lib. 3. de uſu part.

Verſ. 2. Beautifull for ſituation] A beautifull Nymph, ſo R. Solomon. Or, beautifull for the branch that droppeth balſam, ſaith Moller; that is, for the Ark there ſeated. Or, for the tract and climat, as Joſh. 12. 23. ſituat on the Northſide of Jeruſalem, as Iſa. 14. 13. in a cold, drie and clear air, as Job 37. 22. Sanantur illi, qui illic infirmi conveniunt, ſaith Kimchi, they which come thither weak, are made well. Pulcher ſurculo.

The joy of the whole earth] Not only of the whole Land, becauſe thither three times a year the Tribes went up, the Tribes of the Lord unto the Teſtimony of Iſrael, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord, Pſal. 122. 4. nor only of the Eaſt, whereof Jeruſalem was held and call'd the Queen, Urbium totius Orientis clariſſima, ſaith Pliny, ſee Lam. 1. 1. but alſo of the whole earth, Sumen totius orbis, as one calleth it, and Rabſhakeh himſelf (in that, more ingenuous than Strabo) confeſſeth Judaa to be a Land of Corn and Wine, of bread and Vineyards, Iſa. 36. 17. Hence it is called the excellency of Jacob, Pſal. 47. 4. the goodneſs of the Lord for Wheat and for Wine, and for Oyl, and for the young of the flock, and of the Herd; for all which men ſhould come and ſing in the height of Zion Jer. 31. 12. but eſpecially for ſpirituall bleſſings, that their ſouls might be as watered gardens, and they not ſorrow any more at all, ib. but come to Zion with ſongs and everlaſting joy upon their heads, Iſa. 35. 10. for the grace of God that bringeth ſalvation to all men, therebence appearing, Tit. 2. 11. Iſa. 2. 3, 4. If Plutarch could ſay of Rome in Numa's time, that the Neighbour Villages ſucking in the air of that City, breathed Righteouſneſſe; how much better might the ſame be ſaid of this City of the great King, where God himſelf was reſiant, and his ſincere ſervice was eſtabliſhed, Pſal. 132. 13?

Verſ. 3. God is known in her Palaces for a refuge] As the City was an ornament to the whole Country, ſo was God to the City, as being a common refuge to both; and as having his holy Temple there, not a profeſſed Sanctuary for impiety, as Florus ſpitefully ſtiled it, but farre better deſerving than Numa's new Temple in Rome did, to be called, πίστεως καὶ εἰρήνης ἱερὸν, the Sacrary of Faith, and Peace, where the true God was truly worſhiped, and found to be a very preſent help in trouble, the beſt bulwark.

Verſ. 4. For lo the Kings were aſſembled] The Princes of the Philiſtines, 2 Sam. 5.

5. Or, Sennacherib's Princes, which were all Kings, Iſa. 10. 8. Oecolampadius upon Iſa. 13. 19. ſaith, that there were twenty and two Kingdomes in Aſſyria; theſe all came with combined forces to lay Jeruſalem deſolate, but could not effect it.

They paſſed by together] They could do this City (dear to God, and ſecured by him, the Athenians boaſted that they were θεοφιλεῖς, beloved of God, the Hieroſolymitans were ſurely ſo) no more harm, than as if they had been ſo many wayfaring men that had paſſed by it, with their ſtaves in their hands.

Verſ. 5. They ſaw it, and ſo they marvelled] None of them could ſay as Ceſar, Veni, vidi, vici, but the contrary; they no ſooner ſaw this Heaven-guarded City, but their hearts miſ-gave them; and they were ready to ſay as that Duke of Saxony did, who intending to make war upon the Biſhop of Magdeburg, and underſtanding that he made no great preparation for defence of himſelf, and his territories, but ſought help from Heaven by faſting and prayer, Inſanit alius, ſaid he, God bleſſe mee from ſuch a madneſſe, as to meddle with a man who confideth in God, and committeth himſelf wholly to his protection.

They were troubled and haſted away] Heb. they fled with an haſty or head-long flight, being ſmitten with a ſuddain terrour, ſuch as was that of the Egyptians, when their Charret wheels were taken off; of the Philiſtines, when for haſte they left their Gods behind them, 2 Sam. 5. of the Syrians, 2 King. 7. when they left all and ran for their lives, of the Aſſyrians, when the Angel had ſlain an hundred eighty five thouſand in their camp, &c.

Verſ. 6. Fear took hold upon them there] By So in the former verſe, and There in this, the ſhamefull flight of theſe enemies is lively deciphered, and as it were pointed at with the finger. So Pſal. 14. 5. There were they in great fear; for God is in the Generation of the Righteous.

And pain as of a Woman in Travel] Their grief was no leſs than their fear: and it came upon them, Certo, cito, ſubito, ſuddainly, ſorely, irreſiſtably, inevitably.

Verſ. 7. Thou breakeſt the ſhips of Tarſhiſh] i. e. Of the Ocean, or of the Mediterranean Sea, Iſa. 2. 16. & 23. 1, 6, 10, 14. The meaning is, like as thou O God with thine Eaſt-wind that Euroclydon eſpecially, which Pliny calleth Navigantium Peſtem (the Mariners miſchief) art wont to daſh and drown the talleſt ſhips at thy pleaſure; ſo thou both canſt, and wilt deal by thy Churches enemies: To whom therefore this Text ſhould be as thoſe knuckles of a mans hand were to Belſhazzer, to write them their deſtiny; or as Daniel was to him, to read it unto them.

Verſ. 8. As we have heard] viz. by the relation of our Fore-Fathers, Pſal. 44. 1. or rather by the promiſes contained in the Holy Scriptures, which now we ſee verified and exemplified in our ſignall deliverances. Hieruſalems conſtant protection then is here aſſevered and aſſured, per comparationem promiſſionis & experientiæ ſimul, & ſimiliter eam teſtantium. See the like, Job 42. 5. with the Note.

In the City of our God] The Church is the City of the living God, Heb. 12. 22. a City that breedeth men, yea Conquerours, as Herodotus ſaith of Ecbatana the Metropolis of the Medes, and as Pindarus of another place,

Θρέψαι Φῶτα μαχατὰν δυνατὸς, &c. Herod. Clio. Nemeis, Od. 2

God will eſtabliſh it for ever] There ſhall be a Church till the Worlds end, maugre all her enemies.

Verſ. 9 We have thought upon thy loving kindneſſe] Heb. We have ſilently muſed or minded, as being amazed, or rather amated thereat, not able to ſpeak for a while, we were ſo tranſported when we met in thy Temple for the purpoſe to praiſe thee, as for thy loving kindneſſe towards us, ſo for thy power and Juſtice exerciſed on our enemies.

Verſ. 10. According to thy Name O God, ſo is thy praiſe] i. e. It is infinite and inexpreſſible, Pſal. 148. 1. Pſal. 145. 3. Gods Name is exalted above all bleſſing and praiſe, as thoſe holy Levites acknowledge, Neh. 9. 5. The diſtance betwixt God and us is infinite, and we ſhould labour to fill up that diſtance, if poſſible, with our praiſes.

Thy right hand is full of righteouſneſs] i. e. of noble Acts, which thou haſt done for us according to thy promiſe, Pſal. 25. 10.

Verſ. 11. Let Mount-Zion rejoyce, let the Daughters, &c.] Let the Church Catholick, Catholick, and each particular Member thereof give God the glory of his Juſtice, and ſee that their joy be ſpirituall.

Verſ. 12. Walk about Sion, and tell the Towers thereof] q. d. Are they not ſtill the ſame, and as many as they were before the approach of the enemy? is any thing diminiſhed or defaced by the late ſiege, or aſſault? Therefore thus ſaith the Lord concerning the King of Aſſyria, He ſhall not come into this City, nor ſhoot an arrow there, &c. Iſa. 37. 33.

Verſ. 13. Mark ye well her Bulwarks] Not at all impaired. The great Turk could never have gotten the Rhodes, but by treachery, notwithſtanding his long and mighty batteries made upon that place day and night. How he raged at the laſt aſſault of Scodra, and blaſphemed, ſee Turk. hiſt. page four hundred twenty three.

Verſ. 14. For this God is our God] To draw them up to this conſideration it was, that the Prophet ſo calls upon people to view Sion, &c. and to take notice that ſhe might well have written upon her gates (as that City Hippocrates writeth of, had) Intacta manet, the Daughter of Sion is a Maid ſtill, through the proweſſe of her Champion.

Even unto death] And after too; for this is not to be taken exclusive, He will never leave us, nor forſake us.

PSAL. XLIX.

VErſ. 1. Hear this all ye people] This that is of ſo great conſequence, and univerſall concernment, viz. that the Saints ſhould not be frighted nor perplexed at the preſent proſperity of graceleſſe perſons; but conſider that death at utmoſt ſhall render them extreamly miſerable, and at the day of Judgement men ſhall return and diſcern a manifeſt difference betwixt the Righteous and the Wicked, betwixt him that ſerveth God, and him that ſerveth him not, Mal. 3. ult.

Give ear all ye Inhabitants of the World] Hear and give ear, be not proud, for the Lord hath ſpoken it, Jer. 13. 15. The Inhabitants of the World (Heb. of the tranſitory World) are like men in a Mill, through hurry of buſineſſe; or as one that is running a race, to whom though never ſo good counſell be given, he cannot ſtay to hear it. Of ſuch we uſe to ſay, that they hear with their harveſt-ears (harveſt it is a time of great pleaſure, and of great buſineſſe) and hence it is that we have ſo ill a ſeed-time for the Word. Wee had need to wiſh (as Harding once did) that wee could cry out againſt ſin as loud, as the bells of Oſeney; yea as thoſe Catholick Preachers, whoſe voice is heard in all ſpeeches, and languages, Pſal. 19. 3.

Verſ. 2. Both low and high, rich and poor together] Heb. Both ſons of Adam, or earthy-man, and ſons of Iſh, or noble-man

Diogenes once made a like out-cry at Athens, Ἀνώσατε ἄνδρες, Hear O ye men; and when a company came about him expecting what he would ſay to them, he looked upon them and ſaid, Ἀνδρὰς ἐκάλεσα & κανθάρους, I called for men, and not for Varlets.

Verſ. 3. My mouth ſhall ſpeak wiſdome] Heb. Wiſdomes and underſtandings; and yet the matter of this Pſalm was nothing extraordinary for the main of it; ſo that a profane perſon would have come out with his

Quid dignum tanto tulit hic promiſſor hiatu?

But good points are not therefore to be ſlighted, becauſe commonly handled; but therefore the better to be heeded, and proof to be made by practice, what that good and holy and acceptable will of God is, that is ſo much preſſed upon, as Rom. 12. 2.

Verſ. 4. I will incline mine ear to a parable] q. d. I deſire you to do no more than I will do my ſelf. I believed, therefore have I ſpoken, I have wrought my Doctrin ſtrin upon mine own affections firſt, and ſhalt digge it out of mine own boſome for your benefit. It is a Parable I muſt tell you, or a Maſter-ſentence, yea it is a Myſtery, a Riddle, as the other word here ſignifieth.

I will open my dark ſayings] The doctrine of Life Eternal, and the Judgement to come, here more clearly deliv ered than any where elſe almoſt in the Old Teſtament, is a myſtery.

Verſ. 5. Wherefore ſhould I fear in the days of evil?] All the days of the afflicted are evil, Prov. 15. 15. But why ſhould either I, or any other afflicted Servant of God be over-much troubled, as if ſome ſtrange thing had befaln us; or ſtaggered at the better condition of worſe men, all things conſidered?

When the iniquity of my heels] Or, of my Supplanters, mine enemies, thoſe naughty men (called here iniquity in the abſtract) who ſeek to trip up my heels, and do ſurround me with their ſnares for that purpoſe. See Pſal. 56. 7. Or thus, When the iniquity of my heels, &c. That is, as ſome will have it, when my ſins come to my remembrance, or are chaſtened upon me. Every mans heel hath ſome iniquity. As we ſhall have ſome dirt cleaving to our heels whiles we walk in a dirty world: ſo there is ſome defilement upon all our actions, which wee may call the iniquity of our heels. He that is waſhed, ſaith our Saviour to Peter, needeth not ſave to waſh his feet, but is clean every whit, Joh. 13. 10. The compariſon ſeems to be taken from thoſe that waſh in Bathes; for although their whole bodies are thereby made clean, yet going forth they touch the earth with their feet, and ſo are fain to waſh again: ſemblably the Saints, though bathed in that bleſſed Fountain opened for ſin, and for uncleanneſs, Zech. 13. 1. and thereby freed from the ſtain and reign of ſin; yet their feet or heels have ſome filth on them, ſome reliques of corruption do ſtill cleave to them, and cauſe them ſome ſorrow; yet ought they not to fear, or be diſmayed, but by the practice of mortification purge themſelves daily from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſs in the fear of God, 2 Cor. 7. 1.

Verſ. 6. They that truſt in their wealth] which was never yet true to thoſe that truſted in it: And yet it is wondrous hard to have wealth, and not in ſome meaſure to truſt in it; that is, to think our ſelves ſimply the better, and the ſafer for it, as our Saviour ſheweth, and this Diſciples after ſome wonderment, at length underſtood him; ſo Mark 10. 23, 24. Hence that ſtrict charge, 1 Tim. 6. 17.

And boaſt themſelves in the multitude of their riches] Contrary to Jer. 9. 23. This Pſalm ſets forth the better gloriation of a Beleever in the grace of God, and in his bleſſed condition, wherein he is lifted up above the greateſt Worldlings.

Verſ. 7. None of them can by any means redeem his brother] And therefore all Mony that hath been given for Maſſes, Dirigies, Trentals, &c. hath been caſt away: ſeeing Chriſt is the only Redeemer, and in the other World Mony beareth no Maſtery, neither can a man buy off death, though hee would give never ſo much. Death will not regard any Ranſome, neither will he reſt content though thou giveſt many gifts, as Solomon ſaith in another caſe, Prov. 6. 35. Fye quoth that great Cardinal Beauford, will not Death be hired? Will Mony do nothing? Wherefore ſhould I dye, being ſo rich? If the whole Realm would ſave my life, I am able either by policy to get it, or by riches to buy it, &c. Lewis the Eleventh would not hear of death all the time of his laſt Sickneſs, but when he ſaw there was no remedy, he ſent for the Holy Water from Rhemes, together with Aarons rod, as they called it, and other holy Reliques, thinking therewith to ſtop Deaths mouth, and to ſtave him off; but it would not be. O Miſer (ſaith one thereupon) hoc aſſidue times quod ſemel faciendum eſt? Hoc times quod in tua manu eſt ne timeas? Pietatem aſſume, ſuperſtitionem emitte; mors tua vita erit, & quidem beata atq; æterna.

Act. & Mon. in H. 6.

Epit. Hiſt. Gall. Balth. Exner. Val. Max. Chriſt. p. 391.

Verſ. 8. For the redemption of their ſoul is precious] i. e. the price of life is greater than that any man, how wealthy ſoever, can compaſs it. Mony is the Monarch of this World, but not of the next.

And it ceaſeth for ever] i. e. The purchaſe of a longer life ceaſeth, there is no ſuch thing, beleeve it, Job 36. 18, 19. Deut. 23. 22. Zech. 11. 12. To blame then were the Agrigentines, who did eat, build, plant, &c. as though they ſhould live for ever.

Verſ. 9. That he ſhould ſtill live for ever] As every wicked man would, if it might might be had for mony; for he knoweth no happineſs but to Have, and to Hold; on the tother ſide the Grave, he looketh for no good; whereas a godly man holdeth mortality a Mercy, as Phil. 1. 23. he hath, Mortem in deſiderio & vitam in patientia, as Fulgentius ſaith, he deſireth to dye, and yet is content to live: accepting of life, rather than affecting it, enduring it, rather than deſiring it.

And not ſee corruption] Heb. The pit of corruption. The Chaldee underſtandeth it of Hell: to the which the wicked mans death is as a trap-door.

Verſ. 10. For he ſeeth that wiſe men dye, likewiſe the fool] This to be a truth, etiam muta clamant cadavera, the dead Corpſes of both do preach and proclaim, by a dumb kinde of eloquence. Death maketh no difference: Pallida mors æquo, &c. It
Απόκειται. is appointed for all men once to dye. It lieth as a mans Lot, as the word ſignifieth; Heb. 9. 27. and all men can ſay, We are all mortal; but alas, we ſay it for moſt part, Magis uſu quam ſenſu, more of cuſtom than feeling; for we live as if our lives were rivetted upon Eternity, and we ſhould never come to a reckoning.

Hen vivunt homines tanquam mors nulla ſequatur,
Aut velut infernus fabula vana foret.

And the bruitiſh perſon periſh] His life and his hopes ending together. But it ὠκύμοροι οἱ would be conſidered, that wiſe men dye as well as fools, good men dye as well as θεοφιλεῖς. bad, yea good men oft before the bad, Iſa. 57. 1. Jeroboams beſt Son dyed before the reſt, becauſe there was ſome good found in him.

And leave their wealth to others] Nec aliis ſolùm, ſed & alienis, to meer ſtrangers: this Solomon ſets forth as a great vanity. It was therefore a good ſpeech of a holy man once to a great Lord, who had ſhewed him his ſtately Houſe, and pleaſant Gardens; You had need make ſure of Heaven, or elſe when you dye, you will be a very great loſer.

Verſ. 11. Their inward thought is, that their houſes, &c.] Some joyn this verſe to the former, and read the words thus; Whereas each of them ſeeth that wiſe men dye, likewiſe the fool, &c. yet their inward thought is, &c. they have a ſecret fond conceit of their own immortality, they would fain beleeve that they ſhall dwell here for ever. The Hebrew runneth thus, Their inwards are their houſes for ever; as if their houſes were got within them, as the Phariſees goods were, Luke 11. 14. τὰ ἔνοσσα. So here, Internum vel interiora; not the thoughts only, but the very inmoſt of the thoughts of wicked Worldlings, the moſt retired thoughts and receſſes of their ſouls are about theſe earthly things: theſe lye neareſt to their hearts; as Queen Mary ſaid when ſhe dyed, Open me, and you ſhall find Calice at my heart. It was a pittiful caſe, that a rotten town lay where Chriſt ſhould, and yet it is ordinary.

They call their Lands after their own names] So to make them famous and to immortalize them at once. Thus Cain called his new-built City, Enoch, after the name of his Son, whom he would thereby have to be called Lord Enoch of Enoch. This is the ambition ſtill of many, that take little care to know that their names are written in Heaven; but ſtrive to propagate them, as they are able, upon Earth, Nimrod by his Tower, Abſolom by his Pillar, Alexander by his Alexandria, Adrian by his Adrianople, &c. But the name of the wicked ſhall rot, Prov. 10. 7. and thoſe that depart from God ſhall be written in the earth, Jer. 17. 13, &c.

Verſ. 12. Nevertheleſs man being in honour abideth not] Howſoever he think to eternalize himſelf, and be grown never ſo great, dye he muſt, whether Lord or Loſel; and dye like a beaſt, a carrion beaſt (unleſs he be the better man) but only for his pillow and bolſter. At one end of the Library at Dublin was a Globe, at the other a Skeliton; to ſhew, that though a man was Lord of all the World, yet hee muſt dye, his honour muſt be laid in the duſt. The mortal Sythe (ſaith one) is maſter of the royal Scepter, and it moweth down the Lillies of the Crown, as well as the Graſs of the field. Perperam accommodatur hic verſiculus, ſaith another: this verſe is not well interpreted of the firſt man Adam, to prove that he ſinned the ſame day wherein he was Created, and lodged not one night in Paradiſe.

He is like the beaſts that periſh] Pecoribus, morticinis, ſaith Junius, the Beaſts that dye of the Murren, and ſo become Carrion, and are good for nothing.

Verſ. 13. This their way is their folly] This their fond conceit of an immortality is an egregious folly, fully confuted by every days experience; for the longeſt liver dieth at laſt, as did (beſide the Antediluvian Patriarches) Jonnes de

Tempo-

Temporibus, Armour-bearer to Charls the Great, who dyed Anno Dom. 1139. aged three hundred ſixty one years. So the old man of Bengala in the Eaſt-Indies, who was three hundred thirty five years old when he came to the Portugals, from whom for his miraculous age, he received a yearly ſtipend till he dyed. He that lived in our days till one hundred and fifty years, or thereabouts, yeelded at length to Nature; and yet men doat and dream ſtill of an immortality. The firſt doom that ever was denounced was Death, Thou ſhalt ſurely dye; and the firſt doubt that ever was made was concerning Death, ye ſhall not ſurely dye; ever ſince which time there is ſomething of the ſpawn of that old Serpent left in our natures, prompting us to doubt of that whereof there is the greateſt certainty; and although every man granteth that he ſhall dye, yet there is ſcarſe any man that futureth not his death, and thinketh that he may live yet, and yet, and ſo long: this is folly in an high degree, and we ſhould be ſenſible of it, labouring to become neither fond of Life, nor afraid of Death.

Aſted's Chronol. 475. Naucler. Purchas. Pil. p. 481.

Yet their poſterity approve their ſayings, Selah] Heb. Delight in their mouth, are as wiſe as their Anceſtors, tread in their tract, take up their inward thoughts, ver. 11. obſerve the ſame lying vanities, and ſo forſake their own Mercies, Jon. 2. 8. Selah, q. d. O wonderful, for, ſee the iſſue of their folly.

Verſ. 14. Like ſheep they are laid in the Grave] Theſe fatlings of the World, theſe brainleſs yonkers, that will not be warned by other mens harms, but walk on in the ſame dark and dangerous ways, whatever cometh of it, theſe chop into the grave (as a man that walketh in the Snow may do ſuddenly into a Marl-pit, and there be ſmothered) or rather are there pent up, as Sheep are thruſt up in a ſtall, or ſtable, to be ſlaughtered there (and in Hell their ſouls) they lye as Grapes in a Wine-preſs, pickled Herring in a Barrel, Stones in a Lime-furnace, Tiles in a Brick-kiln, &c. Tanquam pecudes, like ſheep, ſaith the Pſalmiſt here; and Junius his Note is, Morticinas puta in cloacis, exquiliis vel puticulis projectas; like ſheep, that dying of the Murrain, are thereupon caſt into Ditches, Jakes, Boggs.

Death ſhall feed on them] They ſhall be meat for Worms, yea they ſhall be killed with death, Rev. 2. 23. which is worſe than all the reſt: ſin, as an heavy graveſtone, preſſeth them to death, &c.

And the upright ſhall have dominion over them in the morning] i. e. at the Reſurrection, when the Saints ſhall ſhare with Chriſt in his Kingdom (when the wicked ſhall be his foot-ſtool) and ſhall judge the World, yea the Angels. Others, by morning underſtand ſuddenly, or ſeaſonably, as Pſal. 46. 5.

And their beauty ſhall conſume in the Grave] All their pomp and bravery wherein they came abroad whiles alive (as Agrippa, and Bernice came to the Tribunal with a great deal of phancy, Acts 25. 23.) and with which they affect to be buried in ſtate;

Sic tranſit gloria mundi, 1 Cor. 7. 31.

From their dwelling] Whence they are carried to the Grave, that dark houſe of all living, Job 30. 23. Some render the text thus, Infernus habitaculum ipſis, Hell ſhall be their habitation. Tremellius thus, Et formam eorum conſumat infernus receptam ex habitaculo ejus, and Hell conſume their ſhape (that is, their bodies now re-united to their ſouls) received out of its Houſe, that is, out of the Grave.

Verſ. 15. But God will redeem my ſoul from the power of the grave] Heb. From the hand of Hell, q. d. I am, and ſhall be in far better condition both in life, at death, and after death, than any of the Worlds darlings: why then ſhould I fear, as verſ. 51. why ſhould I envie their ſeeming happineſs, which will have ſo ſad a Cataſtrophe, as verſ. 14? I ſhall have heaven, and that is more worth than all.

Spe bona Do ab indoctis d ferunt, dixi Chilo.

For he ſhall receive me, Selah] A notable Text indeed, and well worthy of a Selah: a clear teſtimony for the immortality of the ſoul, and for a better life after this, as is well obſerved. Ha ſunt parabola, & hæc ſunt ænigmata, ſaith a good Interpreter. Theſe are thoſe Parables, and theſe are thoſe dark ſayings, mentioned verſ. 4. riddles to the wicked, but cordials to the faithful.

Verſ. 16. Be not thou afraid] David was comforted, and ſo he would have others to be: for as it was ſaid of a certain Biſhop of Lincoln, that he held nothing his own but what he had beſtowed upon others, Hoc habeo quodcunq; dedi: ſo the Saints think their comforts nothing ſo comfortable, unleſs others may ſhare in them, and fare the better by them.

When the glory of his houſe is increaſed] viz. By a numerous Off-ſpring, ſtately building, gay furniture, great rents and revenues; for as they ſay of the metal they make glaſs of, it is neareſt melting when it ſhineth brighteſt; ſo are the wicked neareſt deſtruction when at greateſt luſtre.

Verſ. 17. For when he dyeth he ſhall carry nothing away] Nothing but a Shrowd, as that great Emperour cauſed to be proclamed at his Funeral. He was a fool that on his Death-bed clapt a peece of Gold into his mouth, and ſaid, Some wiſer than ſome; I will take this with me. See Job 1. 21. 1 Tim. 6. 7. with the Notes there.

His glory ſhall not deſcend after him] No, nor be able to breath one cold blaſt upon him, when he is burning in Hell. O that wicked rich men would think of this, before the cold Grave hold their bodies, and hot Hell hold their ſouls.

Verſ. 18. Though whilſt he lived he bleſſed his ſoul] As that rich fool did, Luk. 12. and that King of France, who puffed up with the Marriage of his Siſter to the King of Spain, called himſelf by a new title, Treſ-heureuſe Roy, the thrice happy King; but was ſoon after accidentally ſlain by the Captain of his Guard running at Tilt with him, at the ſolemnizing of that ſame Marriage, in the very beginning of his ſuppoſed happineſs.

And men will praiſe thee when thou doeſt well to thy ſelf] Feathering thine own Neſt, and pampering thine own Carcaſs; thou ſhalt bee ſure of Paraſites, and Trencher-flies, who will highly commend thee, though againſt their own Conſciences, Rom. 1. ult. The world generally admireth the happineſs of ſuch as live at full, and ask what ſhould ſuch a one ayl? The Iriſh ask what they meant to dye?

Verſ. 19. He ſhall go to the generation of his fathers] i. e. To the grave, or albeit he come to the age of his Fathers, that is, live here very long,

They ſhall never ſee light] Either have any ſound comfort at death, or any part in Gods Kingdom.

Verſ. 20. Man that is in honour and underſtandeth not] Verſus amabæus. See ver. 12. there is but little difference: Stultitiam patiuntur opes. The more a man hath of worldly wealth, and the leſs of Spiritual, and heavenly underſtanding therewith, the more beſtial he is, and ſhall be more miſerable. Caligula called his Father-in-law Marcus Silanus, χρυσῦν πρόβατον, a golden brute, Quid cervo ingentia cornua, cum deſit animus?

Vel mihi da clavem, vel mihi tolle ſeram.

PSAL. L.

A Pſalm of Aſaph] Who was both a Muſick-maſter, 1 Chron. 25. 2. and a Pſalm-compoſer, 2 Chron. 29. 30. The moſt are of opinion, that this Pſalm was made by David, and committed to Aſaph to be ſung, after that Iſrael had been afflicted with three years Famine, and three days Peſtilence, and the Angel had appeared to David, and ſet out the place where the Temple ſhould be built, 2 Sam. 21. & 24. 1 Chron. 21. 18. & 22. 4.

Verſ. 1. The mighty God, even the Lord] Heb. The God of gods, whether they be ſo deputed, as Angels, Magiſtrates; or reputed only, as Heathen-deities, 1 Cor. 8. 5. Jehovah, or Eſſentiator is Gods proper Name. Some ſay God is here thrice named, to note the Trinity in Unity.

Hath ſpoken] ſc. By the mouth of his holy Prophets, which have been ſince the world began; Henoch the ſeventh from Adam ſpoke much like, Jude 14. The Rabbines ſay, that this Pſalm is, De die judicii futuro, of the Day of Judgement. Others, that it is the Lords judging of his Church, drawn according to the model of the great and laſt Judgement, whereunto it ſerveth as a preparation, or a warning-peece.

And

And called the earth from the riſing, &c.] The habitable part of Gods earth, the ſons of men, Prov. 8. 31. with Mal. 1. 11. Theſe are all called to atteſt the equity of Gods proceedings againſt an hypocriticall Nation; Children that were corrupters. For God hath thus farre inſtructed all men, that He is to be honoured of all, with all manner of obſervance, Rom. 1. 20. Let this be preſſed upon all ſorts, ſaid Zaleucus the Locrian Law-giver, in the preface to his Laws, 1. That there is a God. 2. That this God is to be duely worſhiped.

Verſ. 2. Out of Sion the perfection of beauty] Heb. The whole Perfection, or the Univerſality of beauty; becauſe there eſpecially was Gods glory ſet forth in his holy ordinances, and more clearly manifeſted than in all his handy-work beſides. See Pſal. 48. 2. Perfectiſſima pulchritudinis locus. Trem.

God hath ſhined] Like the Sun in his ſtrength, ſometimes for the comfort of his people, as Pſal. 80. 1. ſometimes for the terrour of evill-doers, as Pſal. 94. 1. and here. But evermore God is terrible out of his holy places, Pſal. 68. 35. & 89. 7.

Verſ. 3. Our God ſhall come, and ſhall not keep ſilence] He doth daily come and ſit upon the tribunall in his Church by the Miniſtery of his Servants, Mat. 18. 17. who muſt reprove ſinners with all authority, and ſhew themſelves ſons of thunder, that they may ſave ſome at leaſt with fear, ſnatching them out of the fire, Jude 23. as Peter, Act. 2. 40. and Paul, 2 Cor. 5. 11. but eſpecially when, to work upon the Proconſul Paulus Sergius, he ſet his eyes upon Elymas the ſorcerer, as if he would have looked thorough him: After which lightening, followed that terrible thunder-crack, O thou full of all ſubtlety, and all miſchief, thou child of the Devill, thou enemy of all Righteouſneſs, wilt thou not ceaſe to pervert the ſtreight wayes of the Lord? Act. 13. 9, 10.

A fire ſhall devour before him] As he gave his law in fire, ſo in fire ſhall he require it.

And it ſhall bee very tempeſtuous round about him] Not before him only, but round about him; leſt the Wicked ſhould hope to eſcape by creeping behind him. That was a terrible tempeſt, that befell Alexander the great, and his army marching into the Country of Gabaza; when by reaſon of continuall thundering and lightening, with hailſtones and light-bolts, the army was diſ-ranked and wandred any way; many durſt not ſtirre out of the place, &c. Tremellius rendreth it wiſhwiſe, but in a parentheſis, Let our Lord come, and let him not be ſilent. The Saints know that they ſhall bee ſafe, when others ſhall ſmoak for it; becauſe God is their God. Curtius lib. 8. ex Diodor.

Verſ. 4. Hee ſhall call to the Heavens from above, and to the earth] That theſe dumb Creatures may be as ſo many ſpeaking evidences againſt an unworthy people, and witneſſes of Gods righteous dealings againſt them. See Deut. 32. 1. Iſa. 1. 2. Mic. 6. 2. The Chaldee thus paraphraſeth, He will call the high Angels from above; and the juſt of the earth from beneath.

Verſ. 5. Gather my Saints together unto mee] This ſeemeth to be ſpoken to the Angels, thoſe active Inſtruments and executioners of Gods Judgements. By Saints here, underſtand profeſſors at large, all that live in the boſome of the Church viſible, and partake of the externall priviledges only; ſuch as are in the Vine, but bear no fruit, Joh. 15. 2. have a name to live, but are dead, Rev. 3. ſuch as whoſe ſanctity conſiſteth only in covenanting by ſacrifice. Baſil ſaith, that ſuch are called Saints to aggravate their ſins; as a man that hath an honourable title, but hath done wickedly; and is therefore the rather to be condemned. When one pleaded once with a Judge for his life, that he might not be hanged, becauſe he was a Gentleman; hee told him that therefore he ſhould have the Gallows made higher for him.

Thoſe that have made a Covenant with mee by Sacrifice] But were never brought by mee into the bond of the Covenant; for then the rebels would have been purged out from among them, as it is, Ezek. 20. 37, 38.

Verſ. 6. And the Heavens ſhall declare his Righteouſneſſe] Thoſe Catholick Preachers, whoſe voice goeth out aloud to the end of the World, Pſal. 19. 4. See verſ. 4.

For God is Judge himſelf] And from him is no appeal; every tranſgreſſion and diſobedience, from him ſhall receive a juſt recompence of reward, Heb. 2. 2. even thoſe

thoſe corruptions that are moſt inward, and lye up in the heart of the Country, as it were; thoſe pollutions not of fleſh only (i. e. worldly luſts, and groſſe evills) but of ſpirit alſo, 2 Cor. 7. 1. more ſpirituall luſts, as pride, preſumption, formality, ſelf-flattery, carnall confidence in externall legall worſhips, the ſin principally taxed in this Jewiſh people here in the next verſes.

Verſ. 7. Hear, O my people, and I will ſpeak, &c.] What ſweet and winning language is here for a preface! Gods proceedings againſt ſinners, whom he might confound with his terrours, is with meekneſſe and much mildneſſe. Gen. 3. 9, 11. & 4. 9. Mat. 26. 50. & 22. 11. Be we herein followers of God as dear Children, Joſh. 7. 19. Gal. 6. 1. 2 Tim. 2. 29.

O Iſrael, I will teſtifie againſt thee] i. e. I will expoſtulate with thee, and convince thee. This is a mercy which the Lord vouchſafed our firſt Parents when they had ſinned; the Serpent he would not ſo much as examine, but doomed him preſently.

I am God] And ſhould therefore have been better obeyed.

Even thy God] And therefore thou of all others ſhouldeſt have had more care, and not have deſpited mee with ſeeming honours, by preſenting mee with out-ſide ſervices.

Verſ. 8. I will not reprove thee for thy Sacrifices] i. e. For thy neglect of them, but for thy reſting in them, ſticking in the bark, bringing mee the bare ſhell without the kernel, not referring thy Sacrifices to the right end and uſe; but ſatisfying thy ſelf in the work done. This was afterwards the ſin of the Phariſees, is ſtill of the Papiſts, and of too many carnall Goſpellers, who think they have ſerved God, for they have been at Church, done their devoir, for they have ſaid their prayers, &c. Yea many of the better ſort amongſt us hold only a certain ſtint of daily duties, as Malt-horſes their pace, or Mill-horſes their round (that move much, remove little) out of cuſtome, or form. Yea the beſt find it hard enough to be in duty in reſpect of performance, and out of duty in reſpect of dependance; to do all Righteouſneſs, and yet to reſt in none but Chriſts.

Or thy burnt-offerings to have been continually before mee] Heb. Thy burnt-offerings have been continually before mee; ſo that I am ſated with the very ſight of them, Iſa. 1. there, God complained that all his ſenſes were wearied, and his ſoul vexed, by the abundance of their outward ceremonies, but want of morrall ſervice.

Verſ. 9. I will take no Bullock out of thy houſe, &c.] q. d. Keep them to thy ſelf, I need them not; thou ſetteſt an high price upon them, and thinkeſt to ingratiate with mee by them, I value them not, nay I loath them. Sordit in conſpectu Judicis quod fulget in conſpectu operantis. That which is highly eſteemed amongſt men, is abomination in the ſight of God, Luk. 16. 15. Diſpleaſing ſervice is double diſhonour.

Verſ. 10. For every Beaſt of the Foreſt is mine] God is the great Proprietary; and all is his by primitive right. It is but of his own therefore that any man giveth him ought; as David freely acknowledgeth, 1 Chron. 29. 14, and that great Emperor, who dedicating his rich Communion-table to Jeſus Chriſt, wrote upon it τὰ σὰ ἐκ τῶν σῶν σοὶ προσφέρομεν. Thine own, and of thine own Lord preſent we unto thee, &c. And yet vain man is apt to conceit that God is obliged unto him, when he offereth unto God any part of his goods.

Juſtinian apud Cedren.

And the Cattel upon a thouſand Hills] Or, Upon the Hills of a thouſand owners.

Verſ. 11. I know all the fowles of the Mountaines] i. e. in numerato habeo, ſaith Vatablus, they are alwaies before mee ready at my ſervice.

And the wild Beaſts of the Field] R. Solomon interpreteth it Reptile, the creeping things of the Field; others, copiam volucrum in vallibus, the abundance of birds that are up and down the Fields and Vallies.

Verſ. 12. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee] I would not employ thee to cater or purvey for mee. But it befalls not God to be hungry, as not only Heathens held, and therefore ſaid that their Jove was gone into Æthiopia to be feaſted, &c. but ſome carnal Jews alſo, who conceived that a fat Sacrifice was as acceptable to God as a fat dinner was to themſelves.

Homer. Lucian.

For the World is mine, and the fulneſs thereof] Quicquid avium volitat, quicquid piſcium natat, quicquid ferarum diſcurrit, as Seneca hath it; all is the Lords, hee made all, maintaineth all, and may therefore at his pleaſure make uſe of any; he needeth needeth not bee beholden; but the truth is, he needeth not any ſuch broken ſupports. See Pſal. 24. 7.

Verſ. 13. Will I eat the fleſh of Bulls? &c.] q. d. Are you ſo thick-brained, as to think ſo?

Vervecum in patria, craſſoq; ſub aere nati?

No; He that killeth an Oxe (unleſſe he kill his corruptions too) is as if he ſlew a man; he that ſacrificeth a Lamb (unleſſe he ſee his own guilt, and be carried out to the immaculate Lamb of God, who taketh away the ſins of the World) is as if he cut off a dogs neck: He that offereth an oblation (unleſſe therewith he offer up himſelf for a whole burnt Sacrifice, Rom. 12. 1.) is as if he offered Swines blood; he that burneth incenſe (unleſſe he lift up holy hands in prayer without wrath, and without doubting, 1 Tim. 2. 8.) is as if he bleſſed an Idol, Iſa. 66. 3.

Verſ. 14. Offer unto God thankſgiving] That pith of your peace-offerings, that Sacrifice more acceptable to God than an Oxe that hath horns and hoofs, Pſal. 69. 31. Oh cover Gods Altar with the calves of your lips, giving thanks to his name, Heb. 13. 15.

And pay thy vows unto the Moſt High] Say not God a thank only, but do him thanks; the life of thankſgiving is the good life of the thankſgiver. Our praiſes ſhould be reall and ſubſtantiall: Vow and perform to the Lord your God, Pſal. 76. 11.

Verſ. 15. And call upon mee] Theſe two, praiſing God for what we have, and praying for what we want, do take up the whole duty of man; a holy trade is hereby driven betwixt heaven and earth, and ſweet intercourſe maintained betwixt God and man.

In the day of trouble] At any time, but then eſpecially; the time of affliction being the time of ſupplication; for then we are fitteſt to call, and then God is readieſt to give anſwer, then we may have any thing, Zech. 13. ult.

I will deliver thee] It is but ask and have; and ſurely he is deſervedly miſerable who will not make himſelf happy by asking. When there was a ſpeech among ſome holy men what was the beſt trade? One anſwered Beggery; It is the hardeſt and richeſt trade. Common beggery is indeed the eaſieſt and pooreſt trade; but prayer he meant. It is like the Ring given a Noble-man in this Land by Queen Elizabeth, with this promiſe, that if he ſent that Ring to her at any time when he was in diſtreſſe, ſhe would remember and deliver him. He ſent it, but it never came to her hands; but prayer never miſ-carrieth, &c. D. Preſton.

And thou ſhalt glorifie mee] Servati ſumus, ut ſerviamus, Luk. 1. 74. And yet it is ten to one that any returneth with the Leper, to give God the glory of a deliverance. Plerique, ut accipiant importuni, donec acceperint inquieti, ubi acceperint ingrati, ſaith Bernard truly; Moſt men are importunate, that they may receive good at Gods hands, reſtleſſe till they have it, and are careleſſe to return thanks afterward. Out upon ſuch an ingratitude, hatefull even amongſt Heathens. De Conſid. l. 2.

Verſ. 16. But unto the Wicked God ſaith] To the fair profeſſor, but foul ſinner, to the Hypocrites in Sion, Iſa. 33. 14. to the ſacrificing Sodomites, Iſa. 1. 10, 11. thoſe that take upon them to be Teachers of others, eſpecially, Rom. 2. 20. 21. Origen, after his foul fall, opening the book and lighting upon this Text, was not able to preach, but brake out into abundance of tears. לו מדים Kimchi.

What haſt thou to do to declare my ſtatutes?] Sith they are holy, and ought to be handled by ſuch as are holy, Iſa. 52. 11. elſe they are diſhonoured, 1 Sam. 2. 17. Gods name blaſphemed, Rom. 2. 23, 24. foul ſinners hardened, Matt. 23. 15. Quid verbum audiam cum factum videam, ſay ſuch? dicta factis erubeſcunt, ſaith Tertullian, their practice ſhameth their profeſſion. And therefore to ſuch we may ſay as great Alexander did to one Alexander a ſouldier of his, but a coward; Either leave off thy name, or be a ſouldier; ſo may we ſay to ſuch profligate profeſſours. Or as Archidamus the Lacedemonian ſaid to his Son, raſhly conflicting with the Athenians, Aut viribus adde, aut animis adime. So here, Either add practice, or lay away Profeſſion. Ore loqueri de illis, ſed corde odiſti. Syr. Interp.

Or that thou ſhouldeſt take my Covenant in thy mouth] boaſting thy ſelf to be one of mine, and blurting our good words, when the root of the matter is not in thee. If that State in ſtory would not hear a good motion from an ill mouth, much leſſe will God.

that

Verſ. 17. Seeing thou hateſt inſtruction] Or, Diſcipline, thou wil not be brought to live ſtrictly, to exerciſe godlineſs; thou refuſeſt to bee reformed, hateſt to bee healed. Bucer and Melanchthon framed a form of Reformation, with approbation of the Peers and States; but the Clergy of Cullen rejected it with ſlander, and ſaid, that they would rather live under the great Turk, than under a Magiſtrate that ſhould ſeek to ſettle ſuch a reformation.

Melch. Adam in vit. Bucer.

And caſteſt my words behind thee] They are neer in thy mouth, but far from thy reins, Jer. 12. 2. denying in thy life what thou profeſteſt with thy lips: Æthiopian-like, being white in the mouth only; or as Lillies, white but unſavoury. The Jews at this day ſhew very great reſpect to the Law, which no man may touch but with the right hand, and with a kiſs of reverence: No man may carry it behind him, but muſt lay it next to his heart in his travel, &c. They are enjoyned to take up any paper which they ſee lying on the ground: and the reaſon is, leſt haply the name of God be written in the paper, and ignorantly trodden under foot. Chriſtians, though free from ſuch Superſtitious curioſity, yet full of religious care, ſhould obſerve every tittle in Gods Word, leſt they ſhould trample upon any. And when corruption boyleth (ſaith a Reverend man) think the Goſpel of Chriſt profeſſed by you lyeth proſtrate before you: and will yee trample upon that Goſpel? will yee tread under foot the bloud of the Covenant, as if it were a prophane thing?

Schickard.

Heb. 10. 29.

Ver. 18. When thou ſaweſt a Thief, then thou conſentedſt with him] Mala opera hic memorata ſunt in ſecreto, ſaith Kimchi. Theſe evils hereafter mentioned, are ſecretly acted by thoſe that pretended to better things. See Epheſ. 5. 12. and therefore Heaven and Earth are called to witneſs againſt them, verſ. 4. See Jer. 20. 27. -- Servi ut taceant jumenta loquentur, the very Beaſts have a Verdict to paſs upon ſecret ſinners, as the Aſſe upon Balaam, and thoſe Horſes upon Cardinal Angelot, who was ſo baſely covetous, that by a private way he uſed to go into his own Stable, and ſteal the Oates from them.

Pontan. lib. de Prin.

And haſt been partaker with the Adulterers] 1. In thy deſire, ſuppoſing thy ſelf with them. 2. In thy filthy acts, though cloſely carried; as the Popiſh Prieſts, whoſe rule is, Si non caſtè, tamen cautè.

Verſ. 19. Thou giveſt thy mouth to evil] Heb. Thou ſendeſt, the Devil borroweth thy mouth, and thou letſt him have it.

And thy tongue frameth deceit] Heb. Joyneth, knitteth, compacteth.

Verſ. 20. Thou ſitteſt] In the ſeat of the ſcornful, on the Ale-bench, &c.

And ſpeakeſt againſt thy brother] Thy ſlanderous tongue, like a mad Dogge, biteth all it meeteth with; not thy near allies excepted: ſo inhuman are Hypocrites.

Verſ. 21. Theſe things haſt thou done, and I kept ſilence] I ſuffered them, ſeemed to wink at them, bearing with thine evil manners.

Thou thoughteſt that I was altogether ſuch a one as thy ſelf] A good-fellow, an approver, an abetter of thy lewd pranks and practices. Cogitabas quod Ehieh erat ſicut tu, ſo Kimchi reads it. This is the evil uſe that wicked men make of Gods patience, they transform him into an Idol after their own fancy, they have baſe and bald conceits of him.

But I will reprove thee, and ſet them in an order before thee] Thou ſhalt ſee them once in their ugly hue, to thy converſion or confuſion: Mens actions are in print in Heaven, and unleſs they make their peace with the Judge in his privie Chamber of Mercy, and ſo ſtop his open judicial proceedings in Court, he will one day read them aloud in the ears of all the World. Mean-while God looketh upon old ſins, (which he ſeemed to wink at) as now preſently committed (for as there is no beginning of eternity, ſo no ſucceſſion) and whatſoever he hath threatned, whatever arrows are in the Bow-ſtring, will one day fly and hit, and ſtrike deep. Wo be to men, when God ſhall break up that filthy ſink of ſin that is in them, ſurely they will then be as little able to bear the ſtench thereof, as Judas was, who ſought help of an Halter.

Verſ. 22. Now conſider this, yee that forget God] That caſt him and his Counſels behind behind your backs, before he awaken your drowsie Consciences, and rouse up the Lion that lyeth sleeping in your bosoms, like Cains Dogge, Gen. 4. 7. with his Dogge-sleep: and before you come to answer for all, with flames about your ears.

Lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you] From the Woolf a Shepherd may rescue his Lamb, not so from the hungry Lion. Amos 3. Isa. 31. 4. Gods power is irresistible, his punishments unavoydable.

Vers. 23. Who so offereth praise glorifieth me] So his praise be cordial, oral, real, with Recognition of my benefits, Estimation, Retribution; this is the best sacrifice he can bring me.

And to him that ordereth his conversation aright] That walketh accurately and exactly: walketh as in a frame, treading gingerly, stepping warily, not lifting up one foot till he find sure footing for the other.

I will shew the salvation of God] i. e. Give him a prospect of Heaven here, and hereafter a full fruition of it.

PSAL. LI.

A Psalm of David] who was not ashamed to do open penance here in a white Sheet, as it were: so did Theodosius the Emperour, at the reprehension of Ambrose, after the slaughter at Thessalonica; he spent eight months, (saith Theodoret, in weeping and lamentation: he fell down on his face in the place of the Penitents, and said, My soul is glued to the earth, &c. Henry the Fourth (then King of Navarre only, afterwards of France also) having abused the Daughter of a Gentleman in Rochel, by whom he had a Son, was perswaded by Monnsieur du-Plessis, to make a publick acknowledgement of his fault in the Church, which also he did before all the Nobility of his Army. This counsel being thought by some to be too rigorous, Du-Plessis made this answer, That as a man could not be too courageous before men: so he could not be too humble in the presence of God. Life of Phil. de Morn. by Mr. Clerk.

When Nathan the Prophet came unto him] Rousing him out of a long Lethargy, into which Sin and Sathan had cast him. See here the necessity of a faithful Ministery, to be to us as the Pilot was to Jonas, as the Cock to Peter, &c. as also of a friendly admonitour, such as David had prayed for, Psal. 141. 5. and here he is answered. David had lain long in sin without repentance to any purpose; some remorse he had felt, Psal. 32. 3. but it amounted not to a godly sorrow, till Nathan came, and in private, dealing plainly with him, more prevailed than all the Lectures of the Law, or other means had done, all that while.

After he had gone in to Bathsheba] This was the Devils Nest-egge that caused many sins to be laid one to, and upon another. See the woful chain of Davids lust, 2 Sam. 11. & 12. and beware.

Vers. 1. Have mercy upon me, O God] Twas wont to be, O my God, but David had now sinned away his assurance, wiped off his comfortables: he dares not plead propriety in God, nor relation to him, as having forfeited both. At another time, when he had greatly offended God, by numbring the people, God counted him but plain David, Go, and say to David, 2 Sam. 24. 12. whereas before, when hee purposed to build God a Temple, then it was, Go tell my servant David, 2 Sam. 7. 5. Sin doth much impair and weaken our assurance of Gods favour; like as a drop of water falling on a burning Candle, dimmeth the light thereof. The course that David taketh for recovery of this last evil, is confession of sin, and hearty prayer for pardoning and purging grace. In the Courts of men, it is safest (saith Quintilian) to plead Non feci, Not guilty; not so here, but Ego feci, miserere miserrimi peccatoris, misericors Deus. Guilty Lord, have mercy, &c.

Per misereri meis tollitur ira Dei.

According to the multitude of thy tender mercies] They are a multitude of them and David needeth them all, for the pardon of his many and mighty sins; that where sin had abounded, grace might superabound, it may have a super-pleonasme, a 1 Tim. 1. 14.

Blot out my transgressions] Out of thy Debt-book: cross out the black lines of my sins with the red lines of Christs bloud; cancel the Bond, though written in black and bloody Characters.

Vers. 2. Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity] Heb. Multiply, wash me; so Isa. 55. 7. God is said to multiply pardon, as much as we multiply sin. David apprehended his sin so exceeding sinful, his stain so invoterate, so ingrained, that it would hardly be ever gotten out, till the cloath were almost rub'd to peices; that God himself would have somewhat to do to do it. He had been in a deep ditch, Prov. 23. 27. and was pitifully moyled; He therefore begs hard to bee thoroughly rinsed, to be bathed in that blessed fountain of Christs bloud, that is opened for sins, and for uncleanenes, Zach. 13. 1. to be cleansed not only from outward defilements, but from his sinful nature: for though a Swine be washed never so clean, if she retain her nature, she will be ready to wallow in the next guzzle. The time of our being here is ὥραν λαβροφόρος, as Nazianzen calleth it, i. e. our washing time. Wash thy heart, O Jerusalem, that thou maist be clean, Jer. 4. 14. not by thinking to set off with God, and to make amends by thy good deeds for thy bad; this is but lutum luto purgare, to wash off one filth with another, but by the practice of Mortification, and by Faith, in Christs meritorious Passion: for he hath washed us, from our sins In his own bloud, Revel. 1. 5. Other bloud defileth, but his purifieth from all pollutions of flesh and spirit, 1 Joh. 1. 7.

And cleanse me from my sin] In like manner, as the Leper under the Law was cleansed. Leprosie, Frensie, Heresie, and Jealousie, are by men counted uncurable: Sed omni potenti medico nullus insanabilis occurrit morbus, saith Isidore, to an Almighty Physician, no Disease is uncurable. There is indeed a Natural Novatianism in the timorous Consciences of convinced sinners, to doubt and question pardon for sins of Apostacy, and falling after Repentance; but there need bee no such doubting, sith God who hath bidden us to forgive a repenting Brother seventy times seven times in one day, will himself much more. All sins and Blasphemies shall bee forgiven to the sons of men, &c. Mat. 12. 31.

Vers. 3. For I acknowledge my transgressions] And therefore look for pardon, according to thy promise. Homo agnoscit, Deus ignoscit.

And my sin] My twisted sin, and sadly accented; mine accumulative sin, voluminous wickednes, that hath so many sins bound up in it, as Cicero saith of Parricide.

Is ever before me] To my great grief and regret, my Conscience twitteth mee with it, and the Devil layeth it in my dish. This maketh him follow God so close, resolved to give him no rest till he hath regiltred, and enrolled the remission of his sins in the Book of Life, with the bloudy lines of Christs soul-saving sufferings, and golden Characters of his own eternal love.

Vers. 4. Against thee, thee only have I sinned] This he spake in respect of the secrecie of his sins, say some: whence also it followeth, And done this evil in thy sight; David sent for Bathsheba by his Servants, but they knew not wherefore he sent for her, saith Kimchi; neither knew any one why Letters were sent to Joab to kill Uriah: but because hee refused to obey the King, bidding him go home to his house, &c. Others thus, Against thee only, that is, thee mainly; for every sin is a violation of Gods Law, the trespass may be against man, but the transgression is ever against God. Others again thus, Against thee, &c. that is, Against thee so good a God have I thus hainously offended, giving thereby thine enemies occasion to blaspheme thee. This, I take it, is the true meaning.

And done this evil in thy sight] Which was to despise thee, 2 Sam. 12. 10. not caring though thou lookedst on.

That thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, &c.] i. e. declared to be just, whatever thou hast denounced against me, or shalt inflict upon me. The unrighteousnes of man commendeth the righteousnes of God, Rom. 3. 4, 5. To thee, O Lord God, belongeth righteousnes, but unto us confusion of face, saith Daniel chap. 9.

Vers. 5. Behold I was shapen in iniquity] This he alledgeth, viz. his original pravity, not as an excuse, but as an aggravation of his actual abominations, which he saith were committed out of the vile viciousnes of his nature. See Psal. 58. 3, 4.

The

The Maſorites here obſerve, that the word rendred iniquity is full, written with a double Vau; to ſignifie the fulneſs of his ſin; whole evil being in every man by nature, and whole evil in man; which when the Saints confeſs, they are full in the mouth, as I may ſo ſay, they begin with the root of ſin (not at the fingers ends as Adonibezek did) ſtabbing the old man at the heart firſt, and laying the main weight upon original corruption, that in-dwelling ſin, as the Apoſtle calleth it, Rom. 7. 14. that ſin of evil concupiſcence, as the Chaldee here: that peccatum peccans, as the Schools. Tully belike had heard ſomewhat of this, when he ſaid, Cum primum naſcimur, in omni continuo pravitate verſamur, Aſſoon as ever we are born, we are forth-with in all wickedneſs. Auguſtine ſaith, Damnatus homo antequam natus, Man is condemned as ſoon as conceived.

And in ſin did my mother conceive me] Heb. Warm me; This Aben-Ezra interpreteth to be our great Grand-mother Eve, Quæ non parturiebat antequam peccabat. David meant it doubtleſs of his immediate mother, and ſpake of that poyſon where-with ſhe had warmed him in her wombe, before the ſoul was infuſed. Corruption is conveyed by the impurity of the ſeed, Job 14. 4. Joh. 3. 6. & 31. Sin may be ſaid to be in the ſeed incoative & diſpoſitive, as fire is in the Flint. Let us therefore go with Eliſha to the Fountain, and caſt ſalt into thoſe rotten and ſtinking waters. And for our Children, let us labour to mend that by education which we have marred by propagation.

Verſ. 6. Behold, thou deſireſt truth in the inward parts] Quam tamen mihi defuiſſe res ipſa demonſtrat; but this truth hath not been found in me, when I acted my ſin in that ſort, and did mine utmoſt to hide it from the world. I have ſhewed little truth in the inward parts, but have groſly diſſembled in my dealings, with Vriah eſpecially, whom I ſo plied at firſt with counterfeit kindneſs, and then baſely betrayed him to the ſword of the enemy. Siniſterity is fully oppoſite to ſincerity, treachery to truth.

And in the hidden parts thou ſhalt make me to know wiſdom] Thus, by faith, ſaith one, he riſeth out of his ſin, being taught wiſdom of God. Others read it, Thou haſt made me to know, &c. And yet have I ſinned againſt the light of mine own knowledge and Conſcience; although thou haſt taught me wiſdom privately, Et eheu quam familiariter, as one of thine own Domeſticks, or Diſciples. Some make it a prayer, Cauſe me to know wiſdom, &c.

Verſ. 7. Purge me with Hyſſop and I ſhall be clean] Sprinkle me with the bloud of Chriſt by the Hyſſop-bunch of faith, not only taking away thereby the ſting and ſtink of ſin, but conferring upon me the ſweet ſavour of Chriſts righteouſneſs imputed unto me. See Heb. 9. 13, 14, 19. where he calleth it Hyſſop; of which ſee Dioſcorides, lib. 3. chap. 26. 28. David multiplieth his ſute for pardon, not only in plain terms, but by many metaphors.

Waſh me, and I ſhall be whiter than ſnow] So we cannot be by any waſhings of our own, though with Snow-water, Iſa. 6. 46. The Brides Garments are made white in the Lambs bloud, Rev. 1. 14. the fouleſt ſinners waſhed in this Fountain become white as the ſnow in Salmon, Iſa. 1. 18. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Eph. 5. 27. Peccata non redeunt.

Verſ. 8. Make me hear joy and gladneſs] God will ſpeak peace unto his people, he createth the fruit of the lips to be peace, Iſa. 57. 19. &c. No ſuch joyful tidings to a condemned perſon as that of a Pardon. Be of good cheer, thy ſins are forgiven thee. Feri, feri Domine, nam à peccatis abſolutus ſum, ſaid Luther. Davids Adultery and Murther had weakned his Spiritual condition, and wiped off all his comfortables: but now he begs to be reſtored by ſome good Sermon, or ſweet promiſe ſet home to his poor ſoul.

That the bones which thou haſt broken may rejoyce] By leaping over Gods pale he had broke his bones; and fain he would be ſet right again, by a renewed righteouſneſs, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt, by his former feelings of Gods favour.

Verſ. 9. Hide thy face from my ſins] We are not able to indure Gods preſence, much leſs his Juſtice for our ſins; nor can there be any ſound peace of Conſcience whiles he frowneth. His favour is better than life, but his diſpleaſure more bitter than death it ſelf, See 2 Sam. 14. 32.

And blot out all mine iniquities] See how one ſin calleth to mind many thouſands; which though they lye aſleep a long time, like a ſleeping debt, yet wee know not how ſoon they may be reckoned for. Make ſure of a generall pardon, and take heed of adding new ſins to the old.

Verſ. 10. Create in mee a clean heart, O God] His heart was woefully ſoiled with the filth of ſin, and the work of grace interrupted; he therefore prayeth God to interpoſe and begin it again, to ſet him up once more, to re-inkindle thoſe ſparks of the ſpirit that lay almoſt quite ſmothered; to put forth his almighty power for that purpoſe, to farm that Augean ſtable of his heart; to ſanctify him throughout in ſpirit, ſoul, and body; and to keep him blameleſſe unto the comming of his ſon, 1 Theſ. 5. 23.

And renew a right ſpirit within mee] Or, a firm ſpirit, firm for God, able to reſiſt the Devill, ſtedfaſt in the faith, and to abide conſtant in the way that is called holy.

Verſ. 11. Caſt mee not away from thy preſence] Deprive mee not of communion with thee, and comfort from thee; for that's a peece of Hell torments, 2 Theſ. 1. 9. Cains puniſhment, which poſſibly David might here mind, as being guilty of murther. And Sauls loſſe of the Kingly Spirit, 1 Sam. 15. 15. might make him pray on

And take not thine holy Spirit from mee] David knew that he had done enough to make the holy Spirit loath his lodging; he might alſo think that the Spirit had utterly withdrawn himſelf, and others might think as much, beholding his Croſſes, Jer. 30. 17. But the gifts and callings of God are without repentance; and where the Spirit once inhabiteth, there he abideth for ever, Joh. 14. 16. an interruption there may bee of his work, but not an interciſion; and a Saint falling into a groſſe ſin may loſe his jus aptitudinale ad calum, but not his jus hereditarium; his fitneſſe, but not his right to Heaven, that holy place.

Verſ. 12. Reſtore unto mee the joy of thy ſalvation] He had grieved that holy thing, that Spirit of God whereby he was ſealed to the day of redemption, Epheſ. 4. 30. and is therefore at a loſſe for comfort; he had vilipended that patent of his pardon which God had paſſed under his hand and ſeal: God therefore calleth for it home again into the pardon-office, as it were; that he may know the worth by the want. A man may ſin away, not only the ſenſe and comfort of his pardon, but the evidence and knowledge of it, as that place of Peter ſeemeth to imply, 2 Pet. 1. 9. Mountebanks, who wound their fleſh to try concluſions upon their own bodies how ſoveraign the ſalve is, do oft feel the ſmart of their preſumption, by long and deſperate wounds: So God will let his Davids ſee what it is to make wounds in their conſciences, to try the preciouſneſſe of his ballam; ſuch may go mourning to their graves. And though with much ado they get aſſurance of pardon, yet their conſciences will be ſtill trembling, till God at length ſpeak further peace; even as the waters of the Sea after a ſtorm are not preſently ſtill, but move and tremble a good while after the ſtorm is over.

D. Sibbes Souls conſl.

And upholdeſt mee with thy free Spirit] Heb. firmly ſuſtain mee with thy noble or Princely Spirit, that may make mee ſteddy and ready to come off roundly in thy ſervice. Sin againſt conſcience diſableth for duty, taketh away freedom to it, and ſtability in it. David therefore prayes God to fix his quick-ſilver, to ballance his lightneſſe, to ſettle and fill that vain and empty heart of his, with ſomething that may ſtay and ſtabliſh it, that may alſo free and enlarge it (for where the Spirit of God is, there is liberty, 2 Cor. 3. 17.) that he might yeeld prompt and preſent obedience to God in all things; and withall might be apt and able to teach tranſgreſſors, as he promiſeth to do in the next words.

Verſ. 13. Then will I teach tranſgreſſors thy wayes] Inſtrumur non Raptus tum docentes, tum diſcentes, ſaith Auguſtine. Two wayes the Saints teach us. Firſt, By their Doctrin. Secondly, By their Falles and Failings. David had taught men this laſt way to his coſt, that it is triſte mortalitatis privilegium licere aliquando peccare. Now he promiſeth by his example and inſtruction to teach tranſgreſſours, thoſe that are in the very bonds and hands of the Devill, Gods wayes of mercy to the penitent, and that they muſt either turn to God, or burn forever in Hell.

And ſinners ſhall be converted unto thee] They ſhall give not the halfe, but the whole tains, and it ſhall appear by them. The turning of a ſinner from evill to good, is like the turning of a Bell from one ſide to another; you cannot turn it, but it will make a ſound, and report its own motion.

Verſ. 14. Deliver mee from blood-guiltineſſe O God] Heb. From bloods; in every drop whereof is a tongue crying for vengeance. Beſides, if Davids adultery was a ſin of infirmity (he was preoccupated, as Gal. 6. 1.) yet his murthering of Uriah, and many others that fell together with him, was a ſin of preſumption, a deliberate prepenſed evill, done in cold blood, and therefore lay very heavy upon his conſcience. Howbeit he gat pardon of this great ſin alſo; ſo that it never troubled him on his death-bed, as ſome other did, though not ſo great, whereof he had not ſo throughly repented, 1 King. 2.

Thou God of my ſalvation] By making choice of this ſo fit an Atribute, he ſtirreth up himſelf to take better hold.

And my tongue ſhall ſing aloud of thy Righteouſneſs] That is, of thy faithfulneſſe in performing thy promiſe of pardon to the penitent. As Aarons golden bells ſounded, ſo ſhould our tongues ſound Gods praiſes, and ſing them aloud, ſhrill them out.

Verſ. 15. O Lord open thou my lips] Which now I find ſtopt and ſealed up, as it were, with the ſin that doth ſo eaſily beſet mee; ſo that whereas I promiſed before to ſing aloud of thy Righteouſneſſe; this I ſhall never be able to do without thy ſpeciall furtherance, niſi verba ſuppeditet & tanquam praeat, unleſſe thou pleaſe to ſupply mee both with affections and expreſſions, as well as with matter of praiſe.

And my mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy praiſe] David had not been dumb till now, all the while he lay in his ſin, but all he did was but lip-labour, and therefore loſt-labour. Daniel confeſſeth the like of himſelf and his people, chap. 9. 13. All this evill is come upon us; yet made we not our prayer before the Lord our God; that we might turn from our iniquities, and underſtand thy truth. Prayed they had, but becauſe they turned not from their iniquities, they got nothing by their prayers or praiſes. God is a Fountain, and if he meet with a fit pipe (as is an ordinance rightly performed) there he uſually conveyeth his grace; but if he meet with a foul pipe and obſtructed, there he doth not conferre a bleſſing. The Phariſees were not a button the better for all their long prayers, becauſe rotten at heart.

Verſ. 16. For thou deſireſt not ſacrifice] This is the reaſon why David reſtipulateth Praiſe, if God will pardon his great ſin, verſ. 14. viz. becauſe he well underſtood that God preferred praiſe before all ſacrifices whatſoever; provided that is came from a broken ſpirit, Verſ. 17. rightly humbled for ſin, and thankfully accepting of pardon. See Pſal. 50. 14, 15, 23.

Thou delighteſt not in burnt-offering] viz. Comparatively; and indeed not at all without a contrite heart.

Una Dei eſt, purum, gratiſſima victima, pectus. Nazianz.

Much leſſe then doth God reſpect the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, that hath no footing or warrant in the word. A certain Sorboniſt finding it written at the end of St. Pauls Epiſtles Miſſa eſt, &c. bragg'd he had found the Maſſe in his Bible. And another reading Joh. 1. 44. Invenimus Meſſiam, made the ſame concluſion. Some of them, as Bellarmine for one, would fain ground it upon Mal. 1. 11. Others fetch the name Miſſa from the Hebrew Maſs for tribute; which comes from Maſas to melt (becauſe it many times melteth away mens eſtates) Recte quidem, ſaith Rivet; per Miſſam ſcilicet pietas omnis liquefacta eſt & diſſoluta. Bee-hive cap. 3. fol. 93, 94. Buxtorf.

Verſ. 17. The ſacrifices of God are a broken ſpirit] i. e. Such an heart as lyeth low, and heareth all that God ſaith, ſuch a ſacrifice or ſervice as is laid on the low altar of a contrite heart, which ſanctifieth the Sacrifice, ſuch a perſon as with a ſelf-condemning, ſelf-crucifying, and ſin-mortifying heart, humbly, and yet beleevingly maketh out for mercy and pardon in the blood of Chriſt, this, this is the man that God expects, accepts, and makes great account of. Mr. Abbot.

A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not deſpiſe] This is great comfort to thoſe that droop under ſenſe of ſin, and fear of wrath, being at next door to deſpair. Bring but a broken heart and God will receive you graciouſly, pouring the oyl of his grace into your broken Veſſels. This comforted Bernard on his death-bed, he

A Pſalm of David] Of the ſame time and argument, likely with Pſal. 58.

Maſchil] Or, to teach, that the end of the Wicked is evill; Redarguit pravos mores, ſaith the Syriack.

When Doeg the Edomite] When Abiathar eſcaping the ſlaughter-ſlave, the bloodhound (as Edomite may ſignifie) came and told David what was befaln the Prieſts, and their City. This was no ſmall affliction to David, the rather becauſe by telling the Prieſt a lye, himſelf had occaſioned that Maſſacre. Hereupon for the comfort of himſelf and other good people who were ſtartled at this ſad accident, and might be deterred thereby from ſuccouring David, he penned this Pſalm.

When Doeg the Edomite came and told Saul, &c.] Doeg is a fit name for a courtier; for it ſignifieth a ſolicitous or buſy-headed fellow, a catch-poll, a progging-companion, an informer, one that liſteneth after rumours, and carrieth tales to curry favour. An Edomite he was by Nation; but a Proſelyte in pretence at leaſt, and one that was at that time detained before the Lord, either by vertue of ſome vow, or becauſe it was the Sabbath-day, and he would not travel on it, or to perform ſome other religious ſervice, 1 Sam. 21. 7. this diſſembled ſanctity was double iniquity; and he became a type of Judas, as ſome make him.

He came and told Saul] Like a Paraſite and a pick-thank, as he was; when as he ſhould rather have told Ahimelech, that David was out of Sauls favour, and ſought for to the ſlaughter, as Kimchi here noteth on verſ. 3. but he concealed that, that he might accuſe Ahimelech, and ſo ſlew three at once (ſaith another Rabbine) viz. himſelf, Saul and Ahimeleck, calumniatorem, calumniatum & calumniam andientem.

Verba Doegi erant pauci, ſed multum nocuit. Kimchi. Middraſh Tillin,

And ſaid, David is come to the houſe of Ahimeleck] Few words, but full of poyſon; leviter volant non leviter vulnerant. See the ſtory more at large, 1 Sam. 22 9. &c. The Rabbines ſay (from Levit. 14. where the ſame word is uſed of the Leprous houſe, that is here, verſ. 5. of Doegs doom) that he was for this fact ſmitten with leproſy; and afterwards ſent to Hell, which they gather from Pſal. 120. 4.

Verſ. 1. Why boaſteſt thou thy ſelf in miſchief, thou mighty man] Or, Thou Giant; for ſo he ſeemed to himſelf when he had ſlain tot inermes nec repugnantes, ſo many naked men, not making any reſiſtance, though they were the Prieſts of Jehovah; and afterward had ſmitten the innocent inhabitants of the City of Nob, together with the women, the infants and the Cattel; like another Ajax flagellifer or Herculeus furens, and now vaunted himſelf in that miſchievous proweſſe.

Egregiam

Egregiam verò laudem, &c.

The Hebrew Word for boasting here, signifieth also madness, when it is taken in the worse sence, as Jer. 46. 9. See Prov. 2. 14. and to boast of his hearts desire is the note of an Atheist, Psal. 10. 3.

The goodness of God endureth continually] Maligne thy spitefulness, God is good to Israel, to the pure in heart, and will be so. The Rabbins make this the sense, If Abimelech had not relieved me, God would have stirred up some other to have done it. Some others understand it thus, The goodness of God towards thee a wicked wretch endureth all the day. This should lead thee to repentance. But thou after thy hardness, &c. Rom. 2. 4. R. Solomon. Kabuenaki. Midrash Tillin.

Vers. 2. Thy tongue deviseth mischiefs] i. e. venteth the mischievous devices of thy minde, being an interpreter and an instrument fit for such a purpose. Such another Doeg was Nicholas Saunders, Priest, the Fire-brand of Earl Desmonds Rebellion in Ireland, Anno 1580. a restless and wretched man, whose foul mouth was at length stopped with famine, that had been ever open to stir up rebellions against the State; that had uttered so many Blasphemies against God, and his holy Truth, and invented so many loud and lewd lyes against men. Cogitat, id est eructat.

Like a sharp razor, working deceitfully] That instead of shaving the hair, launcheth the flesh; or missing the beard, cutteth the throat. Confusio aberrat singulum pervi: whence Dionysius the Tyrant would not trust any Barber (no not his own Daughters) to shave him: but singed off his own hair with hot coals. The slanderers Tongue, as sharp as a razor, or as the quills of a Porcupine, flatheth, and gatheth the good names of others, and that many ways, viz. both by denying, disguising, lessening, concealing, misconstruing things of good report; and also by forging, increasing, aggravating, or unclarifiable spreading things of evil report: not for any love to the truth, nor for respect to justice, nor yet for the bettering of the Hearer, or the Delinquent: but only to prejudice the one, and to incense the other. This was Doegs sin, and denominateth him a Lyer, vers. 3. though hee had spake but the truth. Exscindit carnem cum crinibus. R. Solom.

Vers. 3. Thou lovest evil more than good] Indeed evil only, and not at all good, whatever thou pretendest. Thy heart is naught, and thence it is that thy tongue is so mischievous; as stinking breath cometh from corrupt inwards.

And lying, rather than to speak righteousness] For thou hast cunningly insinuated, for thine own base ends, and against thine own Conscience, that those innocent and faithful Priests were of the combination; and so hast built thy self upon their ruines, thou false Sycophant, artifex doli. Selah.

Vers. 4. Thou lovest all devouring words] Verba devoratoria, the Greek hath it, καταποντισμὸς, that devoure and swallow up, so as the Sea doth things cast into it. So elsewhere, their throat is an open sepulchre, which devoureth all bodies but rendreth none without a Miracle. Some render it, Verba voraginis, the words of a Whirlpool, which first turns men round, and then sucks them in. Others, Verba absorptionis, in reference to that use of the tongue, which is to sup up dish-meats; Sic lingua attrahit homines ut ad absorbeantur, saith Vatablus. The vulgar hath it, Verba præcipitationis, words that hurl one down headlong, Ex vasto cohnus vel ripibus, as Hilary hath it, from the top of houses, or high rocks.

O thou deceitful tongue] Because although it were for most part truth that hee spake, yet he did it maliciously, and by dissimulation passed over that which might have made for Abimelech, viz. that he relieved David in the simplicity of his heart, as thinking him to be high in the Kings favour, and employed by him. Egesippus saith of Pilate, that he was Vir æquum, & parvi facientis mendacium, a naughty man, and one that made no bones of a Lye; such another was Doeg. D. excid. Jerus. l. 2. c. 5.

Vers. 5. God shall likewise destroy thee] Here are quot verba tot tonitrua, so many words, so many thunderclaps. As thou hast destroyed the Lords Priests and their whole City, razing and harassing it: so God will demolish and destroy thee utterly, as an house pulled down to the ground, so that one stone is not left upon another, Lev. 14. 45. So shall God pull down Doeg from that high preferment, which he by Sycophancy hath got at Court. Judicium ipsum lethale describitur.

He shall take thee away] As a coal of fire is taken with the Tongs, Isa. 30. 4. that it do no further mischief: some render it, He shall burn thee, R. Gaon; He shall terrifie thee. Exuret te. Vatab.

And

And pluck thee out of thy dwelling place] Or, shall sweep thee out of thy tabernacle; R. Gabin interpreteth it, Beth hamidrash, the Lords Tabernacle, wherein no Doeg may set his foot as farre as a David, but God will pluck him thence.

And root thee out of the land of the living] Everret & everteat te cum tota familia, He shall utterly ruinate thee and thine, leaving thee neither root nor branch, chick nor childe.

Selah] i. e. Veritas est, saith Aben-Ezra; It is even so: think not that these things are spoken only in terrorem, for a Scarebug, for they shall all be surely fulfilled upon thee.

Vers. 6. The righteous also shall see and fear] With a reverential fear, from which shall spring sincere service, Aliorum perditio tua sit cautio; let other mens perdition be our caution; let us wash our feet in the blood of the wicked. There is an elegancy in the original that cannot be englished.

And shall laugh at him] With an holy laughter: not that of irrision, but of exultation in God, for his righteous executions.

Vers. 7. Lo, this is the man] Or rather, now the Monster to be pointed at; once so mighty, now so miserable; O quantum hæc Niobe, &c. what a strange change is here! &c. As the true Israelite is pointed out with a Behold for imitation, Joh. 1. 47. so is this counterfeit Israelite for detestation.

That made not God his strength] But carried the matter as if hee had been some petty-god within himself.

But trusted in the abundance, &c.] Never true to those that trusted them.

And strengthened himself in his wickedness] Heb. In his woful evil, in his putting many poor Creatures to their Wo is me.

Vers. 8. But I am like a green Olive-tree, &c.] Thus, when Doeg blasted David, David blesseth himself. Let him flourish in the Court, I shall much more in the House of God. My name shall be precious among the Saints, when he stinketh above ground; hee shall wither, when I shall bee fresh, flourishing, and fruitfull.

I trust in the mercy of God] Not in riches, as Doeg: and this faith is the root of my fruitfulness, cheerfulness, &c. Gul. Parisiensis reporteth of true Chrystal, that by touching only it reviveth the decayed vertue of other precious stones: sure it is, that faith reviveth the vertue of other precious graces.

Vers. 9. I will praise thee for ever, because thou hast done it] Hast delivered mee from Doeg, and others. Quod non perierim centies. Or, thou hast done execution upon Doeg: i. e. Thou wilt undoubtedly do it.

And I will wait on thy name] i. e. Depend upon thy Promises and Providence.

PSAL. LIII.

Maschil, a Psalm of David] Purposely set down here the second time, (See Psal. 14.) to instruct what every man is by nature, and that hee who is scholar to his own carnal reason, is sure to have a fool to his master. The Heathens are very obstinate in propugning mans nature, witness Cicero, and both the Senecaes, saying, that if men would but follow the pont of their own natures, they could not do amiss. And we have much ado to perswade people that their Natures are so foul, their ways so wicked, &c. twice therefore is this Psalm recorded, that all may be convinced, that there is no safety in such a condition, nothing better than to hasten out of it.

Vers. 1, 2. The Fool, &c.] See the Notes on Psal. 14. 1, 2.

Vers. 3. Every one of them is gone back] Diogenes in a great assembly going backward of purpose, and seeing every one laughing him to scorn, asked them aloud, if they were not ashamed so to do? Sith he went backward but once, they did so all the days of their life.

Vers. 4. Have the workers of iniquity no knowledge?] Etiam sciunt in fine, & dolebunt, saith one, Know they shall to their sorrow in the end, that they have eaten that on earth which they must disgest in hel.

Vers. 5. There were they in great fear] Heb. They feared a fear. God they feared not,

not, of men they were greatly feared, and yet here they feared a fear where no fear was, viz. without themſelves; only facti ſunt à corde ſuo fugitivi, they feared and fled before their own conſciences, their own trembling heart, Deut. 28. 65. the ſound of fear that is in their ears, Job 15. 21. the ſound of a leaf chaſeth them, Levit. 26. 36. they flee when none purſueth, Prov. 28. 1. Naturaliſts tell us of a certain little bird, qua fertur metuens ne in ipſam cœlum ruat, imponere ſibi ſemper dormienti alterum pedem, which for fear leſt the Skie ſhould fall on her head, ſleepeth ſtill with one foot laid upon her head. The Gaules that dwelt neer the Adriatick Sea, being asked by Alexander the Great, what they moſt feared? anſwered, ne ſupra ſe cœlum corruat, leſt the Skie ſhould fall upon them. Galen writeth of a certain Melancholick fellow, who hearing that Atlas ſupported Heaven with his ſhoulders, was therefore ſore afraid leſt he ſhould faint under the burthen; and therefore carried his arm before him to ſave his head. Heraclides out of Anacreon telleth of one Artemon a timorous man, who kept home as much as might be, having ever a couple of ſervants to hold a brazen buckler over his head, leſt any thing ſhould fall upon him from above. And if he were at any time neceſſitated to go abroad, he was carried in a horſe-litter that touched the ground almoſt; and was thereupon called Peripheretus. Plut. in Pericle

For thou haſt ſcattered the bones] i. e. The ſtrength, the ſtrong troops ſaith the Chaldee; they want decent burial, as Jer. 22. ſaith the Syriack.

Thou haſt put them to ſhame] viz. The poor afflicted, Pſal. 14. 5. becauſe God hath deſpiſed them] i. e. Subjected them to the contempt of the wicked.

Verſ. 6. O that the ſalvation] Heb. Salvations; Indicat plenam ſalutem, ſaith Kimchi.

PSAL. LIV.

Maſchil] Inſtructing us, ſaith One, to draw neer to God, as dangers draw neerer to us,

When the Ziphims] Which ſignifieth Flouriſhing; they might have flouriſhing eſtates, but they had withered ſouls; elſe they would never have ſought twice over to have betrayed good David into the hand of Saul, 1 Sam. 23. & 26. Erant autem Ziphæi ex ſtirpe Caleb. 1. Chron. 2. ult. & Nabal, ſed degeneres;

Came and ſaid to Saul] If a Ruler hearken to lyes, all his ſervants are wicked, Prov. 29. 12. See the Note there.

Doth not David hide himſelf with us?] viz. In the wood and wildernesſe neer unto our City? But what if he did, ſhould they therefore diſcover him, and ſo pull the vengeance of God upon themſelves and their City? George Eagles (alias Trudgeover the World) hid himſelf in a corn-field, was deſcryed by Ralph Lurdain for mony, and burnt at Chelmsford; where afterward the ſame Lurdain was hanged for ſtealing an horſe; and confeſt it was juſt in God upon him, for bewraying that innocent man. Act. & Mon.

Verſ. 1. Save mee, O God, by thy name] i. e. By thy ſelf, and eſpecially by thy goodneſs, whereby thou art nominatiſſimus in Eccleſia, well known in thy Church, as a main peece of thy name, Exod. 34. 6, 7.

Verſ. 2. Hear my prayer, O God] He runs to God by moſt earneſt prayer, for our inſtance and inſtruction in like caſe; for we muſt prepare for the like trialls; nec de cruce diſputandum eſt. otioſe & velut in umbra, &c.

Ver. 3. For ſtrangers are riſen up againſt mee] He meaneth not foreiners, but home-dwellers; Saul, Doeg, Ziphims, &c. ſtrangers to Religion, reaſon, common humanity, Jews outwardly, but not inwardly; Heathens upon the matter, Pſal. 59. 5. Rev. 11. 2. Am. 9. 7. The Pope ſhewed himſelf no better in delivering up for mony Zemes the great Turks Brother, who fled to him for ſafeguard of his life, wrongfully ſought after. Nothi & ſpurii.

Oppreſſours ſeek after my ſoul] i. e. My life at leaſt; my ſoul alſo they would deſtroy, if it lay in their power, as the Papiſts delivered up John Hus to the Devil when they burnt him; and would not allow Hierom of Prague a Confeſſour, though he requeſted it. So the Monſter of Millain that made his enemy firſt curſe Chriſt in hope of life, and then ſtabbed him to death, ſaying, Now go ſoul and body to the Devil. So he that for ſpite procuring a man to be hanged, and ſeeing him penitent Bodin. de rep.

penitent, ſaid, I am afraid the rogue will go to Heaven.

They have not ſet God before them] This was the root of all their outrages, they made no reckoning of God, prout eſt judex & vindex mali, as he is a ſevere Judge, and a ſharp revenger of ſin and wickedneſſe.

Verſ. 4. Behold, God is mine helper] And that mine enemies might have ſeen, had they ſet God before them. The Dutch have a proverb, where God hath a mind to deſtroy a man, he firſt putteth out his eyes.

The Lord is with them that uphold my ſoul] That favour my righteous cauſe, and wiſh my wel-fare, as doth Jonathan, and the reſt that fear God; who although they be but few and feeble in compariſon, yet they have God with them, and for them, (non interfuit modo, ſed etiam præſuit) and how many do you reckon him for? as Antigonus once ſaid. David was invironed, and in great danger to be ſurprized; but God reſcued him by an invaſion of the Philiſtines, 1 Sam. 23. 27, 28. The Lord knoweth how to deliver his, 2 Pet. 2. R. Moſes expoundeth it, God is loco omnium, & ſuper omnes, in ſtead of all, and above all.

Verſ. 5. He ſhall reward evill unto mine enemies] Or, Mine obſervers, that watch mee a miſchief. I ſhall eſcape out of trouble, and they ſhall come in my ſtead, Prov. 11. 8.

Cut them off in thy truth] i. e. According as thou haſt pronounced againſt ſuch as ſeek and ſuck innocent blood.

Verſ. 6. I will freely ſacrifice unto thee] Or, Liberally, not with an ill will and pinchingly. The Arabick rendreth it, Laudabo te obediens. Praiſe is the beſt ſacrifice, and obedience is the beſt praiſe.

I will praiſe thy name, O Lord, for it is good] Thy name is good, and it is a good thing to praiſe it; for thereby men do thee right, help thee to thine own, ſecure to themſelves former favours, and procure future.

Verſ. 7. For he hath delivered mee] i. e. He ſurely will: this is the language of faith; this is the triumph of Truſt.

And mine eye hath ſeen my deſire upon mine enemies] This was not an evill eye of envy or private revenge; ſuch as was that of him, who when he ſaw a pit full of mans blood, cryed out, O formoſum ſpectaculum! O brave ſight! or that of Antichriſt who hath oft glutted his eyes with many ſuch goodly bloody fights; as when he cauſed the Maſſacre of Paris to be painted in his Palace, and had the Admirals head ſent him for a preſent: But as admiring Gods juſtice on his enemies, and love toward his people, he was well pleaſed with ſuch a providence, and beheld it with comfort. The Arabick rendreth it, Oculus meus requievit. Tremellius, Mine eye beholdeth mine enemies; I dare now boldly look them in the face, being ſtrengthened with thy might, &c. Thuan.

PSAL. LV.

A Pſalm of David] Whether made upon occaſion of his flight from Keilah, 1 Sam. 23. or from Abſalom, 2 Sam. 15, & 16. Idem eſt argumentum, & idem uſus hujus Pſalmi atq; ſuperioris, ſaith Beza; this and the former Pſalm are of the ſame argument, and for the ſame uſe. It is moſt probable that this Pſalm was written when Abſalom was up, and Huſhai related unto Zadock the troubled ſtate of the City, 2 Sam. 17. 15. with which compare, verſ. 9, 10, 12. of this Pſalm. For thereupon David, put into a great perturbation, as verſ. 4, 5. wiſhed for the wings of a Dove, not the pinnions of a Dragon, that he might flye farre away.

Verſ. 1. Give ear to my prayer, O God] Davids danger was preſent, his prayer therefore is preſſing; being not the labour of his lips, but the travell of his heart. The breath that commeth from the lips is cold, not that which commeth from the lungs.

Hide not thy ſelf] As men when they are not willing to be ſued unto, will not be ſeen.

Verſ. 2. Attend unto mee, and hear mee] Heb. Anſwer mee, that is, grant mee deliverance from this death which threatneth mee. This is his ſenſe, as appeareth by the ſequel, though at preſent he could not inſtance, but only beggeth audience.

I mourn in my complaint] Heb. I caſt (this way and that way), I am ſo much troubled, bled, ut meipſum lamentando huc & illuc verſare, & mire agitare cogar.

Præ dolore moveo me nunc huc nunc illuc. Campenſis.

And make a noiſe] Plango, & perſtrepo; Of our Saviour it is ſaid, that being in an agony, he prayed more earneſtly; He bent, as it were, all his nerves, and ſet up his note, Luk. 22. 44.

Verſ. 3. Becauſe of the voice of the enemy] He may very well intend Shimeies bitter revilings, 2 Sam. 16. 5. &c.

For they caſt iniquity upon mee] They tumble it on mee, as men do ſtones or any thing elſe upon their beſiedgers, to endammage them; ſo did theſe, ſin, ſhame, any thing, upon innocent David, to make him odious.

And in wrath they hate mee] Heb. They ſatanically hate mee.

Verſ. 4. My heart is ſore pained within mee] No otherwiſe than a woman is pained in travel; cordicitus doleo.

And the terrours of death are fallen upon mee] Cauſed doubtleſſe by the deep ſenſe and conſcience of his late grievous ſins.

Verſ. 5. Fearfulneſs and trembling are come upon mee] Fearfulneſs of heart, and trembling of body; which laſt falleth out, when as the Spirits flying back to the heart, to relieve it, leave the outward parts deſtitute.

Timor cordis tremor corporis.

And horrour hath over-whelmed mee] This was Davids infirmity; for he ſhould have better fortified his heart againſt that cowardly paſſion of fear: the Devill alſo had a finger in it. At another time David could better reſolve and ſay, What time I am afraid, I will truſt in thee.

Verſ. 6. And I ſaid, O that I had wings like a Dove] Ut citiſſime & longiſſime fugerem, that I might ſwiftly fly far off from Abſoloms purſuers; as the Dove ſaveth her ſelf by flight, and not by fight, ſcoureth away to the Rocks and deſerts, Jer. 48. 28. Many fouls are ſwifter of flight than Doves; but theſe hold out better. R. Jonah ſaith, that whereas other birds when they are wearied with flying, do reſt them upon rocks or trees, and are taken; the Dove doth not ſo, but letteth down one wing, and flyeth with the other, and thereby eſcapeth the purſuer.

R. Jonah apud Kimchi.

For then would I flee away] But whither, he ſaith not, becauſe he knew not. The Church in the Revelation fled into the wilderneſs, Rev. 12. God provided a Pella for thoſe primitive Chriſtians. Luther being asked where he would be at quiet from his enemies? anſwered, Sub cælo, ſome where God would ſecure him.

Verſ. 7. Lo then would I wander farre off] Farre from the force and fury of theſe breathing Devills. Jeremy wiſheth the like; as being tired out by the ungodly practices of his countrymen, chap. 9. 2. And many a dear Child of God forced to be in bad company cryes, O that I had the wings &c. Or if that O will not ſet him at liberty, he takes up that Woe, to expreſſe his miſery. Woe is mee that I ſojourn in Meſhech, &c.

And remain in the Wilderneſſe] Among wild beaſts; which were better than to abide with theſe Lycanthropi, men more cruel, ſavage, and bloody than any beaſts.

Verſ. 8. I would haſten my eſcape from the windy ſtorm, &c.] I would thruſt my ſhip into any creek in the whole World, go as farre as my leggs, nay wings could carry mee. Of the ſwiftneſſe of the Doves flight, ſee Plin. l. 10. c. 37. and how David haſtened his flight from Abſolom, ſee 2 Sam. 15. 14.

Verſ. 9. Deſtroy O Lord, and divide their tongues] Heb. Swallow them up, O Lord, and divide their tongues; by an alluſion, as ſome conceive, to thoſe two famous Judgements of God upon Dathan and Abiram, firſt, Numb. 16. and then, ſecondly, upon the Babel-builders, Gen. 11. both which were thrown out for examples, to all ſucceeding ages, (as St. Jude ſaith of the Sodomites, Jud. 7.) and are to be conſidered of by the Saints, as here in their prayers againſt their enemies. How God anſwered this prayer of David, ſee 2 Sam. 17. 1. &c.

For I have ſeen violence and ſtrife in the City] i. e. In Jeruſalem, ſomething I have ſeen, but more outrages I have heard of, ſince Abſolom with his army came into it. The rude ſouldiers plunder the poor Citizens at pleaſure; and cannot agree among themſelves in dividing the ſpoil.

Verſ. 10. Day and night they go about it upon the walls thereof] The ruffianly ſouldiers do, as in garriſons is uſuall: Or Violence and Strife do; ſo that in no place are good men in ſafety, from rapines and robberies.

Miſchief alſo and ſorrow are in the midſt of it] What work may be thought make the common ſouldiers, among the women eſpecially, when Abſolom openly defileth his Fathers concubines in the ſight of all Iſrael, 2 Sam. 16. 22? when Tilly took Magdeburg in the late German wars, beſides many other outrages, the Ladies, Gentlewomen, and others, like beaſts and dogs they yoked and coupled together, leading them into the woods to raviſh them. Such as reſiſted they ſtripped naked, whipt them, cropt their ears, and ſo ſent them home again.

Verſ. 11. Wickedneſſe is in the midſt thereof] As if it were no longer as once Theopolis, but Poneropolis, for all kind of naughtineſſe there.

Deceit and guile depart not from her ſtreets] The Vulgar hath it, Uſura & dolus, Uſury and guile; and Theodorets note here is, Notandum eſt, non modo Novi Teſtamenti perfectionem, ſed Legis ſtatum fœnus damnare, that Uſury is condemned in both old and new Teſtament.

ἀδὲν μεῖζον ἕλκος ἢ φίλος ἀδλιῶν. Soph.

Verſ. 12. For it was not mine enemy that reproached mee] Achitophels perfidy and villany troubled David more than all the reſt; there not being any wound worſe, as Sophocles ſaith, than the treachery of a friend; he being ſuch a kind of enemy, quem neq; fugere, neq; fugare poſſumus, as Bernard hath it, whom we cannot eaſily prevent. See Pſal. 41. 9.

Then I could have born it] Though as a burden; but nothing ſo grievous; I ſhould not have much mattered it.

Verſ. 13. But it was thou a man, mine equall] Heb. According to my rank, my compeer, my collegue, mine Alter-ego, my boſome-friend, one that ſtood even with mee, and upon the ſame ground as it were.

My guide] In all mine affaires and actions; ſo that I thought nothing well done, that I did not by his advice and counſel, my Duke, my Doctor, my Rabbi Davidis, as Rabby David hath it, out of Kabuenaki.

Religio a religando.

Verſ. 14. We took ſweet counſell together] It was my great delight to conferre and conſult with him, eſpecially about the things of God, and the exerciſes of Religion; which is or ſhould be ſacratiſſimum inter homines vinculum, the ſtraiteſt tye of all.

Il Mercurio Italico, Introd.

And walked unto the houſe of God in company] But ſo do thoſe falſe Italians, who carry a pocket-Church-book with a piſtol hid in the binding, which turning to ſuch a page diſchargeth; a plot to intrap him whom they hate, even while they are in their devotions together, when there's leſt ſuſpicion.

Verſ. 15. Let death ſeize upon them] Irruat ſuper illos mors, as a mercileſſe Land-Lord, as a cruel creditor, or as he in the Goſpel who took his fellow by the throat and ſaid, Pay that thou oweſt mee. A ſad time it muſt needs be with the wicked, when death ſhall come upon them with a writ of Habeas corpus, and the Devil with another of Habeas animam. Capiat illos mors, ſo Aben-Ezra rendreth it, Exigat mors in eos, ſo Kimchi, a תפשׂם Pſal. 89. 23. Here it is written ſaith he, without an Aleph, as it were with a ſwift hand; and as if death and ſeize were all one word; to note the ſudden ſtroak of death, and that it will ſoon diſpatch them: To which ſenſe alſo ſome render it, Decipiat eos mors, Let death deceive them; be too nimble for them.

And let them go down quick into Hell] As did Dathan and his complices, Numb. 16. See on verſe 9. According to this imprecation, Ahitophel and Judas hanging themſelves, went to Hell alive, that is, hail and well; not infeebled by ſickneſſe firſt. Auguſtine ſaith, that Hereticks do the like, falling with open eyes, and ſelf-condemned.

For wickedneſſe is in their dwellings, and among them] Heb. In their ſojourning-place (for here we are but gueſts or ſojourners) and in the middle of them, that is, in their hearts and houſes both, undiq; circumſtruunt malitia & maleficia, they are as naught as need to be.

Verſ. 16. As for mee, I will call upon God] Or, I have called upon God, ſc. for good to bee done to my ſelf, verſe 1. &c. and for evill to mine enemies, verſe 9. &c. (of which ſort of imprecations, ſee the Note on Pſal. 35. 4.)

And he hath heard mee] I know he hath, both for my ſelf, verſ. 17, 18. and againſt them, 19, 20, 21. for why? firſt, they fear not God, 19. ſecondly, they break covenant, 20. thirdly they uſe deceit, 21. Theſe courſes will work their ruth and ruine.

Verſ. 17. Evening and morning, and at noon will I pray] So Daniel prayed three times times a day, chap. 6. 10. and in the Temple they prayed at the third, ſixth, and ninth hour of the day. The Saints ſet themſelves certain hours to pray in (beſides extraordinary occaſions putting them upon that daily ſacrifice) the better to arrouſe their ſpirits, and to keep conſtant intercourſe with God. Papiſts have their ſet times; and Mahometans, what occaſion ſoever they have, either by profit or pleaſure, to divert them, will pray five times every day. This they do of form and cuſtome, not of conſcience; take we heed of thoſe ordinary marre-goods, formality, and cuſtomarineſſe: it hath been bewailed before, that many hold only a certain ſtint of daily duties (as malt-horſes their pace, or mil-horſes their round) and reſt upon them when they have done, uſing the means as Mediators; and ſo fall ſhort of Chriſt.

And cry aloud] Rouſing up my ſelf, and wreſtling with God, not in a cuſtomary, frigid, bedulling way; but with all intention of ſpirit, and contention of ſpeech.

And he ſhall hear my voice] How ſhould he do otherwiſe, I comming upon him with ſuch earneſtneſſe? Preces fundimus, calum tundimus, miſericordias extorquemus, ſaid thoſe Primitive Chriſtians whoſe prayers came before God as the noiſe of many waters, Rev. 14. 2.

Verſ. 18. Hee hath delivered my ſoul in peace from the battel] This he ſpeaketh upon his prayer, by the force of his faith; as being aſſured of victory before the battel was fought, or ſtroak ſtruck, as they ſay.

For there were many with mee] i.e. Gods holy Angels, as 2 King. 6. 16, 17. Vel multi ex Iſraele orantes pro Davide, ſic Aben-Ezra.

Verſ. 19. God ſhall hear] ſc. My prayers which are on the file before him, and as Sollicitours with him. Mittamus preces & lachrymas, cordis legatos, ſaith Cyprian: Up go prayers, down come deliverances.

And afflict them] Ludit ambiguitate verbi; The ſame word ſignifieth to afflict, and to anſwer, q. d. he ſhall anſwer mee, but afflict them; anſwer them with blows, with bitter anſwers.

Even he that abideth of old] And is therefore no changeling; the Eternity of Iſrael cannot lye, nor repent; for he is not a man, that he ſhould repent, 1 Sam. 15. 29. neither can mine enemies hide themſelves from him in any ſtarting-holes. Sedet Deus ad judicandum, & ſurgit ad puniendum. Aug.

Selah] Id eſt, modo honorabili, ſaith R. Gaon. Or, So be it, O Lord. It is ſet in the middle of the verſe, as reſpecting both parts of it.

Becauſe they have no changes, therefore they fear not God] Changed they are not by repentance (which is ſuch a change of the heart, as bringeth forth a reformed life) but continue obſtinate and obdurate; neither have they any alterations in their outward eſtate; they are not powred from veſſell to veſſell, have a conſtant proſperity (ſuch as Demetrius called mare mortuum, a dead Sea) and do therefore ſettle upon their lees, caſt away all care of God and his ſervice.

Verſ. 20. He hath put forth his hands, &c.] That wicked Ahitophel hath. The Fathers underſtand it of God, and his Judgements.

He hath broken his Covenant] His oath of allegiance, and a particular oath when he was ſworn of Davids counſel. The Scythians were ſtrict covenant-keepers; and the Carthaginians infamous for the contrary; as now the Turks are. Herod. Melp.

Verſ. 21. The words of his mouth were ſmoother than butter] Full finely he could ſooth and ſmooth mee up, whiles he was my counſellor, with his Pithanologie.

Mel in ore, verba lactis:
Fel in corde, fraus in factis.

But war was in his heart] Heb. His heart was war; ſo in another Pſalm David ſaith of himſelf, I am peace; but when I ſpeak of it, they are for war.

His words were ſofter than oyl] So were Joabs to Amaſa, Judaſſes to Chriſt; Cambyſes's to his Brother whom he ſlew; Andronicus's to his Nobles, put to death by him, whiles he wept over them, as if he had been the ſorrowfulleſt man alive. Whereupon the Hiſtorian cryeth out, O deep diſſimulation, and Crocodiles tears. &c! The wiſer ſort deemed Andronicus his prayſings to be the beginnings of a mans diſgrace, his bounty, his undoing, and his kindneſſe, his death. Cteſias. Turk. Hiſt. fol. 50.

Verſ. 22. Caſt thy burden upon the Lord] Dare tuum, vel Donum tuum, that is, whatſoever thou wouldeſt have the Lord beſtow upon thee, caſt it firſt by faith Agedum igitur animula mea cur te diutius Ecrucias? De-upon him in prayer; even all thy cares, buſineſſes, travels, and troubles. This, David ſpeaketh firſt to himſelf, and then to others. R. Solomon maketh this Gods anſwer to Davids prayer, Spiritus ſanctus ſic reſpondit, ſaith he.

Thou ſhalt have thy σιτομέτριον thy demenſum, thy due allowance.

And he ſhall ſuſtain thee] Or, victual thee, nouriſh thee as a Foſter-father; as Joſeph did his father and brethren, chepi tappam, according to the mouthes of their little ones, Gen. 47. 12. as Barzillai at this time nouriſhed David at Mahanaim, 2 Sam. 17. 27. & 19. 32.

He ſhall never ſuffer the righteous to be moved] Or if moved, yet not greatly moved, Pſal. 62. 2. not removed. Hee will eſtabliſh the juſt, Pſal. 7. 9.

Verſ. 23. But thou O God ſhalt bring them down into the pit of deſtruction] Into the deep Gehenna, ſaith the Chaldee; thou ſhalt hurl them into Hell, from their lofty tops here.

Bloudy and deceitful men ſhall not live out half their days] Heb. Shall not half their days; that is, ſhall be ſoon cut off, dye in the flower of their age, come to an untimely end; either the Sword in Battel, or the Sword of Juſtice ſhall cut them off; or ſome treachery of men, or their own intemperance, or Gods immediat hand ſhall make an end of them betimes, and before they come to the full age of a man, or before they have effected their evil deſigns (Luther rendreth it, Non dimidiabunt negotia) or before they are in fit caſe to dye, Tempore non ſuo, Eccleſ. 7. 17. then when it were better for them to do any thing than to dye. Our Richard 3. and Queen Mary, reigned the ſhorteſt while of any other ſince the Conqueſt. Charls the Ninth of France, that bloudy Prince, dyed young, of a bloudy Diſeaſe, &c. Abſolom and Ahitophel came to Tragical and unhappy ends; ſo did all the Primitive Perſecutors, thoſe cruel-crafties.

Ad generam Cereris, &c.

But I will truſt in thee] For ſafety here, and for Salvation hereafter.

PSAL. LVI.

Farua columba. Hoſ. 7. 11.

Upon Jonath Elem Rechokim] Meaning himſelf, who had wiſhed before the wings of a Dove, Pſal. 55. 6. and was now the Dove of dumbneſs among Foreiners, Philiſtines, thoſe ravenous Hawks that were ready to ſeize and tear him. Dumb he was fain to feign himſelf, and worſe amongſt them. See Pſal. 34. the title, 1 Sam. 21. 17. &c. and therein was more of the Serpent than of the Dove.

Michtam of David] Davidi inſigne aureolum, Davids Jewel, or golden ingot. See Pſal. 16. title. This Michtam he made likely (as alſo Pſal. 34.) when gotten away from Gath, he came into the Cave of Adullam, 1 Sam. 22. 1.

Carmina ſeceſſum ſcribentis & otia quarunt.

Verſ. 1. Be mercifull unto me, O God: for man would ſwallow me up] Soop me up (as the Hebrew word ſoundeth) make but one draught of mee, or ſuck mee in as a Whirlpool, ſwallow mee up as a ravenous wild Beaſt. The Devil is ſaid to ſeek whom he may ſwallow down (1 Pet. 5. 8.) at a gulp, as it were; and his Imps are as greedy, but that they are gagg'd by God. The man here mentioned is Iſhbibenob the brother of Goliah, ſaith the Chaldee: but they do better, who underſtand it of Saul, and his complices.

He fighting daily oppreſſeth me] Pliny ſaith of the Scorpion, that there is not one minute, wherein it doth not put forth the ſting: The like do Satan and his Inſtruments.

Verſ. 2. Mine enemies (or obſervers) would daily ſwallow me up] Anhelant obſervatores mei. To ſet forth the indignity of the thing, he repeateth the ſame ſentence again in the plural number; noting, that there were not a few of them bitterly bent by might and main to miſchief him, a poor forlorn friendleſs man.

For there be many that fight againſt me, O thou moſt High] Or, though there be many that fight for me from on high, that is the Angels, as Aben-Ezra rendreth and enſenſeth the Text.

Verſ. 3. What time I am afraid, I will truſt in thee.] This was bravely reſolved; Quid timet hominem homo in ſinu Dei poſitus? Faith quelleth and killeth diſtructful fear; but awful dread, it breedeth, feedeth, foſtereth, and cheriſheth.

Verſ. 4. In God I will praiſe his Word] Having placed my confidence in God, I will will take his bare word for my ſecurity. He hath promiſed to make mee King, 1 Sam. 16. 13. and he will not ſuffer his faithfulneſs to fail, or alter the thing that is gone out of his mouth, Pſal. 89. 33. the Word of God cannot bee broken, John 5. 35. David once doubted of it, but hee ſoon took himſelf up for halting, Pſal. 116. 11.

I will not fear what fleſh can do unto me] Fleſh is terminus diminuens: what can proud fleſh do againſt the God of the ſpirits of all fleſh? Man is but deſpicable fleſh at the beſt.

Verſ. 5. Every day they wreſt my words] Or, my matters; they diſtort and pervert every thing I ſay, or do, from the true intention, and all to make a Traitour of me. That I carried my ſelf wiſely in the Court, valiantly in the Field, faithfully toward Jonathan, cautelouſly for the ſafe-guard of mine own life, ſhifting as I could from one place to another; all this they ſay was done out of affectation of the Kingdom, and as ſeeking Sauls death. So they dealt by our Saviour in the Goſpel, taking that with the left hand, which he tendered with the right, and many times marring a good Text by an ill Gloſs put upon it. So Simon the Leper ſerved that good Woman, who made an Ewer of her eyes, and a Towel of her hair, Luke 7. 34. Men ſhould interpret every thing the beſt way, and not as Logicians do, Sequi partem deteriorem.

All their thoughts, &c.] See the Note on verſ. 1.

Verſ. 6. They gather themſelves together] They convene and combine to do me miſchief: and ſhould not Gods people meet often together to counterplot ſuch Malignants, and to pray them down? Cum boni, cum probi coeunt, cum pii, cum caſti congregantur, nave eſt factio dicenda, ſed curia: Et è contrario, illis nomen factionis accommodandum eſt, qui in odium bonorum & proborum conſpirant, ſaith Tertullian. Apol. adverſ. gentes, cap. 39. Num. 520.

They mark my ſteps] They ſpy and pry into my practices, that they may take any advantage: this calls for carefull and exact walking, 1 Pet. 2. 21. Heb. 12. 13.

Verſ. 7. Shall they eſcape by iniquity?] q. d. No, let them never think it, their ſin will ſurely finde them out, as cunning as they are, and ſith they are ſo fool-hardy, as to walk upon iniquities Fire-works, let them look to bee blown up; and they ſhall have my prayers to that purpoſe.

In thine anger caſt down, &c.] It is Prophetical, as well as Optative.

Verſ. 8. Thou telleſt my wanderings] Or, thou ciphereſt up my flittings, and haſt them in numerato, ready told up; my vagaries whilſt hunted up and down like a Partridge, and huſhed out of every buſh, ſo that I have not where to ſettle. Saint Paul was at the ſame paſs, ἀστατοῦμεν ſaith he, we have no certain abode, 1 Corin. 4. 11. and ſo were ſundry of the holy Martyrs and Confeſſors, who wandred about in Sheep-ſkins, and Goat-ſkins, &c. driven from poſt to pillar, from one Country to another, God all the while noting, and numbring all their flittings, yea all their footings, Bottleing up their tears, booking down their ſighs, as here, and Mal. 3. 16. See Mat. 10. 30. The Septuagint for my wandrings, or flittings have my life; to teach us, ſaith one, that our life is but a flitting. ζωὴν.

Put thou my tears into thy Bottle] Heb. My tear, that is, every tear of mine; let not one of them be loſt, but kept ſafe with thee, as ſo much ſweet water. It is a witty obſervation of one, That God is ſaid in Scripture to have a Bag and a Bottle, a Bag for our ſins, a Bottle for our tears; and that wee ſhould help to fill this, as we have that. There is an alluſion here in the Original, that cannot bee Engliſhed.

Are they not in thy Book?] ſc. Of Providence, where they cannot be blotted out by any time, or tyrants.

Verſ. 9. When I cry unto thee, then ſhall mine enemies turn back] For how ſhould they ſtand before ſo mighty a God? Of the power of Prayer, for the beating back of enemies, beſides the Scripture, Hiſtories are full; that famous Victoria Hallelujatica for inſtance.

Verſ. 10. In God will I praiſe his word] The Jew-Doctours obſerve that Elohim, God, is a Name importing Juſtice; and that Jehovah, Lord, holdeth out mercy, according to that Exod. 34. 6. Jehovah, Jehovah Merciful, Gracious, &c. But if God ſhould ſeem neither to ſhow his Mercy upon us, nor his Juſtice upon our enemies, mies, we must nevertheless adhere to his Word, or Promise, and patiently wait his performance; which will be as sure as he is God and Lord. See the Note on vers. 4.

Vers. 11. In God have I put my trust, I will not be afraid, &c.] When news came to Luther, that both the Emperour and Pope had threatned his ruine, he bravely answered, Contemptus est à me Romanus & favor & furor; I care for neither of them, I know whom I have trusted. See vers. 4.

Sunt tua post. quam Vovi. Arab.

Vers. 12. Thy Vows are upon me, O God] I am a Votary ever since I was at Gath, there and then I vowed, that if the Lord would vouchsafe to bring me out of that brake, I would do as became a thankful man every way. And now I am Damnatus votorum, as the Latine expression is; Vow I must, and pay to the Lord my God, Ecce ego Domine, Lord I am ready, do thou but set me up an Altar, and I will offer a Sacrifice; restore me to thy Sanctuary, and I will do it exactly, in the Ceremonies and Formalities thereof: Mean while, mine heart and lips shall not be wanting to give thee praise in spirit and truth, I will render praises unto thee.

Vers. 13. For thou hast delivered my soul from death] Which was the very thing I begged of thee when I was at worst, viz. that thou wouldest save my life, which then lay at stake; I also then solemnly took upon me such and such ingagements, which lye upon me as so many debts, and I am in pain till I have paid them. This if I shall do effectually,

Wilt not thou deliver my feet from falling?] Yea, I know thou wilt, Lord, for every former favour of thine is a pledge of a future;

That I may walk before God in the light of the living] Called elsewhere the Land of the living; that is in this present life, spending the span of it in thy fear, and labouring to be every whit as good as I vowed to be when I was in great distress and danger. Pliny in an Epistle of his to one that desired rules from him how to order his life aright, I will, saith he, give you one rule that shall be instead of a thousand, Ut tales esse perseveremus sani, quales nos futuros esse profitemur infirmi; i. e. That you hold out to bee such when well, as you promised to bee when weak and sick, &c.

PSAL. LVII.

Al taschith] i. e. Destroy not; David being in an imminent danger of destruction in the Cave, might send up this short request as it were in a fright, before he uttered this insuing prayer. Al taschith in such an exigent might well be an effectual prayer; as was the Woman of Canaans, Lord help me, and the sick mans, Ah Father; or these might now be his words (to Abishai, or some other of his Servants, whose fingers even itched to bee doing with Saul) as afterwards they were upon a like occasion, 1 Sam. 26. 9. Destroy not Saul. See thou do it not.

Michtam of David] See Psal. 16. title.

When he fled from Saul in the Cave] 1 Sam. 24. 1. Or, into the Cave for shelter; and where when he might have cut Sauls throat, he cut his Coat only, and was inwardly checked for it; nevertheless the Spirit came upon him, which was no small comfort, as Aben-Ezra here observeth, and he said Vers. 1. Be merciful unto me, O God, be merciful] q. d. Now or never help at a dead lift. Bis pro more regentium, ad terribrandum, saith Kimchi. Other Jew-Doctors give this reason of the repetition of his petition, Be merciful, &c. lest either I fall into Sauls hands, or Saul into mine; lest desire of revenge prick me on to kill him. Or, Have mercy on me, that I sin not; or if I do sin, that I may repent.

Midr. Tilli.

For my soul trusteth in thee] An excellent argument, so it comes from the soul, so it be heart-sprung.

Yea in the shadow of thy wings, &c.] As the little Chicken in danger of the Kite hovereth, and covereth under the Hen.

Until these calamities be over-past] For long they will not continue; Nubecula est, sito transibit, said Athanasius of the Arrian Persecutions, which for present were very sharp. So Master Jewel about the beginning of Queen Maries reign, perswading many to patience, ſaid often, Hac non durabunt ætatem, this ſharp ſhower will ſoon over.

Verſ. 2. I will cry unto God moſt high] Who can eaſily over-top Saul, as high as he is, and all his complices; againſt whom I have this comfort, that in the thing wherein they deal proudly, God is above them, Exod. 18. 11.

Unto God that performeth all things for mee] And in mee; Iſa. 26. 12. doth not his work to the halves, but is both author and finiſher of my faith, and other affairs, Heb. 12. 2. Phil. 1. 6. Pſal. 138. 8. Here are the two props of Davids prayer, Firſt, Gods ſufficiency, he is the Moſt High. Secondly, his efficiency, he perfectly accompliſheth all things for mee.

Verſ. 3. He ſhall ſend from Heaven and ſave mee] Rather than fail, I ſhall have an Angel to reſcue mee; for although the Lord uſually worketh by means, yet he can work by miracles, and will do it, if there be a juſt occaſion: howſoever, his mercy and his truth he will be ſure to ſend, and that's enough. He will be ſeen in the Mount, he will repent for his ſervants when he ſeeth their power is gone, Deut. 32. 36. when there is dignus vindice nodus, an extremity fit for divine power to interpoſe.

Verſ. 4. My ſoul is among Lions] And ſo is a lively picture of the Church in all ages. Would any man take the Churches picture, ſaith Luther? then let him paint a ſilly poor maid ſitting in a wood or wilderneſs, compaſſed about with hungry Lions, Wolves, Boars, and Bears, &c. Talis eſt Eccleſia in hac vita, ſicut & in hiſtoria Danielis pingitur.

And I lie even among them that are ſet on fire] ſc. With rage and helliſh hatred: Others expound it actively, of thoſe Ardelliones aulici, thoſe Court-Incendiaries, who enraged Saul and the Nobles againſt David, as a traitour and Peſt. See 1 Sam. 24. 10.

Even the ſons of men] i. e. Carnall men, that being in their pure naturalls, have no goodneſſe at all in them.

Whoſe teeth are ſpears and arrows] Such was Doeg that dead dog, and others void of the Spirit, which is, neq; mendax, neq; mordax.

Verſ. 5. Be thou exalted O God above the Heavens] That is, ſaith the Chaldee, above the Angels.

And let thy glory be above all the Earth] That is, above the inhabitants of the earth. There are, ſaith Kimchi, that think thou either wilt not, or elſe canſt not ſave: O let thy power appear for the conviction of all ſuch who now lift up themſelves, and ſeem at leaſt to touch the Heaven with one finger.

Verſ. 6. They have prepared a net for my ſteps] So that I can hardly keep foot out of ſnare: I dare not lift up one foot till I find ſure footing for the other; and that's hard to do. See Sauls charge to the Ziphites, 1 Sam. 23. 22.

My ſoul is bowed down] I am glad to ſhrink in my ſelf (as fearfull people uſe to do) that I may ſhun thoſe gins and ſnares that they have ſet to maim and miſchieve mee.

They have digged a pit, &c.] They have forced mee into this ſubterranean cave; and behold Saul himſelf is caſt into mine hands, in this mine hiding-hole.

οἱ αὐτῷ κακὰ τεύχει ἀνὴρ, ἄλλῳ κακὰ τεύχων.

Verſ. 7. My heart is fixed O God] I am both ready and reſolute: I doubt not of deliverance, and am well prepared to praiſe God. It is fit he ſhould have the fruit of his own planting, and that of the beſt too: Otherwiſe, it is no better than the refreſhing of him that ſtandeth by a good fire; and ſaith Aha, I am warm.

Verſ. 8. Awake up my glory] He rouſeth himſelf out of his natural drouſineſſe, as Sampſon once went forth and ſhook himſelf.

I my ſelf will awake early] Or, I will awaken the morning, as the Cock by his early crowing, is ſaid to do.

Non vigil ales ibi criſtati cantibus oris
Evocat auroram— Ovid. Metam. lib. 11.

Verſ. 9. I will praiſe thee O Lord — among the Nations] This was done by Chriſt calling the Gentiles, Pſal. 18. 49. Rom. 15. 9.

Verſ. 10. For thy mercy is great, &c.] Gods mercy is ordinarily in the Pſalms bounded by his truth; that none may either presume him more mercifull than he hath declared himself in his word; or else despair of finding mercie gratis, according to his promise.

Vers. 11. Be thou exalted, &c.] Versus amabam, see vers. 5. only that's in way of prayer; this, of praise.

PSAL. LVIII.

Una ligati, ut Gen. 37. 7. vel. ab ⊏ן Mutus quia congregatio ante oratorem est quasi mutus. Aben-Ezra.

VErs. 1. Do yee indeed speak righteousnesse O Congregation?] Or, O Councell; you that are gathered together on a knot, under a pretence of doing justice, and promoting the publick good by giving faithfull advice to the King. Colloquitur Abnero & reliquis, saith Kimchi, David here talketh to Abner and the rest, who to please Saul pronounced David a rebel, and condemned him absent for an enemy to the State. And for as much as there is no greater injury than that which passeth under the name of right, he sharply debateth the matter with them whom he knew of old to be very corrupt; painting them out in their colours, and denouncing Gods heavy judgements against them for their unjust dealings with him. The word rendred Congregation is not found elsewhere in that sense. It signifieth dumbnesse; and is by the Spanish translators rendred, O audiencia, by Antiphrasis, ut lucus, quia non lucet.

Do ye judge uprightly, O yee sons of men?] i. e. O ye carnall profane persons that savour not the things of the Spirit, q. d. ye are fit persons to make Counsellors of State. Sedes prima & vita ima agree not. Dignitas in indigno est ornamentum in luto, saith Salvian. You do much mis-become your places.

Vers. 2. Yea in heart you work wickednesse] There the Devill worketh it as in a forge; ye are alwaies plotting and plowing mischief, and that not so much for fear of Saul, or to please him, as out of the naughtinesse of your own hearts; and all this you know in your consciences to be true. Kimchi saith, that the word Aph or yea importeth, that their hearts were made for a better purpose; and therefore their sin was the greater. Corruptio optimi pessima.

Manus vestræ concinnant iniquitatem. Vul.

You weigh the violence of your hands in the earth] i. e. Your bribes, saith Kimchi; these ye weigh or poise, quasi essent recta, as if there were no hurt in them; so Demosthenes weighed Harpalus his goblet, to the great danger of his Country, and his own indeleble infamy. The Arabick rendreth it, Manus vestræ in tenebris immersæ sunt, your hands are drowned in darknesse; you seem to do all according to law and Justice (pictured with a pair of balances in her hand) when indeed you weigh out wrong for right, and do things κατὰ πρόσκλισιν, by partiality, 1 Tim. 5. 21. by tilting the balance o' t' one side.

Trutina justitior. Prov. Ζυγὸν μὴ παραβαίνειν. Pythag. Symb.

Vers. 3. The wicked are estranged from the womb] q. d. These enemies of mine are old sinners; hardened and habituated in wickednesse from the very womb; it hath also grown up with them, and quite turned away their hearts from God and goodnesse, whereunto they stand utterly across, and have an innate Antipathy, they are not only averse thereto, but adverse also; yea to their sinews of Iron they have added brows of brass, Isa. 48. 4. sinfull indeed we are all by nature, and a birth-blot we bring into the World with us, making us strangers to, and strayers from God. But some God sanctifieth even from the womb, as he did Jeremy; and some by the light of nature, not altogether extinct, and by Gods restraining grace are reigned in from notorious outrage in sin. Whereas others cast off by God, and suffered to walk after their own hearts lusts, in pejus indies proficiunt, wax every day worse and worse, as the Apostle speaketh, till their iniquity be full, and so wrath come upon them to the utmost. But as young Nettles sting strait, and young Crabfishes go backward, and young Urchins are rough: so naughty nature soon appeareth in little ones. Va'ezatha the youngest of Hamans sons, is by the Hebrews said to be the most malicious; and hath therefore one letter in his name bigger than the rest.

They go astray assoon as they be born] Heb. From the belly, Partus sequitur ventrem, no sooner could they do any thing but they were doing evill. Lisping out lyes and slanders betimes.

Vers. 4. Their poyson is like the poyson of a Serpent] Their inbred corruption (the spawn spawn of that old Serpent, Gen. 3.) is strong, and full of infection, able to kill both the party in whom it is, and the other also upon whom it is cast. Malice drinketh up the most part of its own Venome, but some it spetteth out upon others; for it is not like the Maid whom Avicen mentioneth, who feeding upon Poyson was her self healthy, yet infected others with her venemous breath. Hot poyson have they, like as the Hot poyson of a Serpent (so some render it) yea of the worst sort of Serpents, the Asp (for Serpentum quot colores tot dolores, saith Isidore) the venome whereof is incurable, saith Pliny; unless the members touched therewith bee immediatly cut off. Deut. 32. 33. Lib. 8. c. 3.

They are like the deaf Adder (or Asp) that stoppeth her ear] So that their naughtiness is not natural only, but habitual, acquired, wilful; they refuse to bee reformed, they hate to be healed, and must therefore be turned over to God with a Noluerunt incantari, they would not be reclaimed, they are uncounselable, unperswadeable. The Adder or Asp here hath her name Pethen from perswadeableness; but it is by Antiphrasis. Wicked men are likewise said to bee exules, unperswaded, or disobedient, Tit. 1. 16. and children of disobedience, Ephes. 2. 2. such as whom Non persuadebis etiamsi persuaseris, speak you never so perswasively, yee shall never perswade. Nay, but we will have a King, said they of old, when they had nothing else to say. So Pharaoh, when clearly convinced, sent for the Sorcerers.

Vers. 5. Which will not hearken to the voyce of Charmers] Such there are, the Devils spel-men. Eccles. 10. 8. that can inchant some kind of Serpents, and some they cannot, as Jerem. 8. 17. That the Serpent here spoken of, when she beginneth to feel the Charmer, clappeth one of her ears close to the ground, and stoppeth the other with her tayl, is affirmed by Hierom, Austin, and Cassiodore. And that shee doth this, although by harkening to the Charmer provoking her to spet out her poyson, she might renew her age, is affirmed by others; semblably, pervarse people will not be perswaded to live happily, reign everlastingly. Vide Plin. lib. 8. c. 7. & l. 8. c. 3. Quum caperet incantatorem suum pati, alid it unam aurem terræ & cauda obturat alteram. Aug. in loc. Horat. Epist. 2

Vers. 6. Break their teeth, O God] Disarm, and disable them from doing mee mischief. See Psal. 3. 7. & 10. 15. & 57. 4. to which last hee seemeth here to referre.

Vers. 7. Let them melt away as waters] As Snow-waters before the Sun-beams, quickly melted, and soon drunk in by the dry earth, Job 24. 19. In Peru, they say, there is a River called the Diurnal-river, or the Day-river, because it falleth with a mighty current in the day, but in the Night is dry, because it is not fed by a Spring, but caused meerly by the melting of the Snow, which lyeth on the Mountains thereabouts.

When he bendeth his bow] i. e. Let him be utterly frustrated, let all his mischievous designs and endeavours be blasted, and come to nothing. In that famous Battel betwixt Theodosius and Maximus, Milites nobis qui aderant restiterunt, saith Augustine, exorta sibi esse de manibus quacunq; jaculabantur; cum à Theodosii partibus in adversarios vehemens ventus iret; & non solum quacunq; in eos jaciebantur concitatissime reperet verum etiam ipsorum tela in eorum corpora retorqueret, the Souldiers told us, that their Darts thrown against the Christians, were by a violent wind brought back upon themselves. Accordingly some render this Hemistick thus; When he bendeth, &c. let him be as they that cut off themselves. De civ. Dei l. 5. c. 26. Iakmalalu reciprocum habet significationem. Ex hoc Sanct. conjic.

Vers. 8. As a snail which melteth] The Psalmist heapeth up many very fit Similitudes agreeable to these mens avarice and ambition, which was to raise themselves and their posterity to great estates: but all should come to nothing suddenly.

Vers. 9. Before your pots can feel the thorns, &c.] Of this Text we may say as one doth of another, it had been easie had not Commentatours made it so knotty. I am for that of Drusius, Tractum à somierudis carnibus olla extrahitur priusquam ignis calorem senserint; 'Tis a comparison taken from raw flesh, taken out of the pot before it hath felt the full force of the fire. Proverb. class 2. l. 2. Prov. 30.

Both living, and in his wrath] i. e. When they are most vigorous and vivacious, to see to, his wrath shall sweep them away.

Vers. 10. The righteous shall rejoyce, &c.] giving God the glory of his justice against his enemies, and care of his poor people. See Exod. 15. 1. Rev. 15. 3. Psal. 7. 10. & 8. & 9. Prov. 11. 10.

He shall wash his feet in the blood of the wicked] A speech borrowed from great Conquerours, wading up to the anckles in the blood of their enemies; or as some think, from those that tread the Wine-press with joy. Some make this the sense, the righteous seeing the ruine of the wicked shall become more cautious: according to that, Alterius perditio tua sit cautio.

Vers. 11. So that a man shall say, verily there is a reward] Not the religious only, but the rational, Passim & palam hoc duo profitebuntur, shall every where, and all abroad say, as here,

There is a reward] See my Righteous mans recompence.

Verily he is a God that judgeth the earth] Sitteth not idle in Heaven, letting things run here at sixes and sevens, as Fate or blinde Fortune will. Curiosus est, plenusq; negotii Deus, saith Cicero.

PSAL. LIX.

AL taschith] Destroy not, preserve me from this Ambuscado. See Psal. 57. title.

When Saul sent, and they watched the house] But were disappointed by Michal shifting him out of the way, preferring an Husband before a Father, though she had otherwise no great goodness in her. The glory of this deliverance David wholly ascribeth to God, and seeketh help of him.

Vers. 1. Deliver me from mine enemies, O God] This Psalm is the same in substance with those afore-going, viz. Davids desire to be delivered from Sauls craft and cruelty.

Defend me from them] Heb. Set me on high, farre out of their reach.

Vers. 2. Deliver me from the workers of iniquity] Sauls Assassines, and Bloud-hounds, hired to dispatch me.

R. Obad. Gaon in loc. Vers. 3. The mighty are gathered against me] The seven sons of Saul (say the Rabbines) who were afterwards hang'd, 2 Sam. 21. with a company of cut-throats attending them.

Vers. 4. They run and prepare themselves] At Sauls command, never inquiring into the cause, right or wrong, but taking his will for warrant good enough.

Awake to help me] Heb. to meet me, &c. in mercy, Ut occurras & succurras mihi, or, at my calling, as some render it.

And behold] See the Note on Psal. 34. 15.

Vers. 5. Awake to visit all the Heathen] These Paganish Israelites, who might have some Heathens also amongst them, Sauls Slaughtermen, men flesht in bloud.

Be not merciful to any wicked transgressors] Heb. That treacherously work iniquity, that do it Consulto & data opera. Desperadoes, Reprobates, destined to eternal destruction.

Vers. 6. They return at evening] sc. To mine house at Gibeah of Saul, hoping to finde me then at home again; as if like the hunted Hare, I must needs return to my old fourm.

They make a noyse like a Dogge] When coming the second night also they missed of David, they barked and howled like mad Doggs, ready to take every one they met by the throat.

And go round about the City] Ferretting, and searching after him in all places, and perhaps surrounding the City to sut prise him.

Vers. 7. Behold they belch out with their mouth] Calling me Traitor where-ever they come, and seeking to double murther him, viz. by detraction, and by deadly practice. As a fountain casteth out waters, so do graceless men wickedness, Jer. 6. 7.

Swords are in their lips] Or, To their lips they adde swords, they word it not only, but are armed and well appointed. But it is well that they blurt out their bloody bloody purpoſes, and ſo give warning. Hunc tibi pugionem mittit Senatus detexit facinus ſuum, & non implevit.

For who, ſay they, doth hear? i. e. Who, that we need care for? David's friends they thought durſt not utter their diſcontent, and for God, they took no great thought, Pſal. 10. 3. & 53. 2.

Verſ. 8. But thou, O Lord, ſhalt laugh at them] q. d. Thou not only heareſt, but jeereſt at their rage and miſſe, and wilt bring all their purpoſes to nought with little adoe, and as it were playing and ſporting. See Pſal. 2. 4.

Verſ. 9. Becauſe of thy ſtrength will I wait on thee] The ſtronger Saul is, the more will I adhere to thee. Or thus, His ſtrength will I reſerve to thee, that is, I will turn him over to thee, who art far ſtronger, to take an order with him, to put a hook into his noſe, and a bridle into his jaws, and to bring me at length to the Kingdome.

For God is my defence] Heb. My high place; therefore what need I fear him, or his Emiſſaries.

Verſ. 10. The God of my mercy ſhall prevent me] Or, God will prevent me with his mercy, ſc. before I aſk, or think, howſoever, in the opportunity of time, he will not fail me.

God ſhall let me ſee, &c.] See Pſal. 54. 7.

Verſ. 11. Slay them not, leſt my people forget] Marcet ſine adverſario virtus, the natural heat decayeth if it have not wherewith to wraſtle; Carthage was not to be deſtroyed, that Rome might not want an adverſary. The Saints have the reliques of corruption left in them for exercile of their graces. Slay them not, ſaith David, and the Chaldee addeth, ſtatim, forthwith, or outright, but by degrees rather; leſt my people, my followers and fellow-ſouldiers, forget their skill in armes, or thy judgements on the enemies.

Scatter them by thy power] That they may wander as Cain did, and be reſtleſſe. Or, ſhake them to and fro as meal is ſhaken in a ſieve; let them be diſſipated, and by degrees waſted; that they may be as ſo many ſtanding monuments of the divine Juſtice, ut eo ſint illuſtriora & teſtatiora tua judicia, as the diſperſed people of the Jews are at this day.

Verſ. 12. For the ſin of their mouth, &c.] The Arabians have this proverb, Take heed leſt thy tongue cut thy throat. Many a mans mouth is a purgatory to the Maſter. Hard words muſt bee reckoned for, Jude 15. the Jews find it ſo, and will do.

And for curſing, &c.] Curſing men are curſed men.

Verſ. 13. Conſume them in wrath, &c.] But by degrees, as verſ. 11. ſlowly, but ſurely and ſeverely; that they may feel themſelves waſted. There may be much poyſon in little drops.

And let them know] Know to their coſt. Or, let men know.

Verſ. 14. And at evening let them return, &c.] Let theſe back-ſliders in heart be filled with their own wayes; run about for hunger, as before they did for malice, verſ. 6. Here the Prophet mindeth to mock them, ſaith an Interpreter.

Verſ. 15. Let them wander up and down for meat] Sicut mendici de oſtio ad oſtium faciunt, as Beggers do from door to door, ſaith Kimchi.

And grudge if they be not ſatisfied] Murmure againſt God and men, howling againſt Heaven as hungry Woolfs, Iſa. 8. 21. Others underſtand it thus, Let them run to and fro for meat, that is, to devour mee, as Pſal. 27. 2. but ſurely they ſhall not be ſatisfied (but miſſe of their deſign) though they tarry all night, watching for mee.

Verſ. 16. In the morning] That time wherein they thought to have ſurpriſed mee, 1 Sam. 19. 11. but thou haſt ſecured mee. See Iſa. 65. 14.

Verſ. 17. O my ſtrength] All David's ſtrength was derivative; in himſelf he was weak as water.

PSAL. LX.

Upon Shuſhan Eduth] An Inſtrument ſo called, or to the tune of ſome ſong ſo called. The words ſignifie the Lilly of the Teſtimony, or of high eminency; whereof Pauſatim ſeu gradatim & in fine penitus corruunt. Kimchi.

Revertantur famelici. Vat. Sit pœna eorum ſicut peccatum. Kimchi.

whereof many make manyfold conſtructions, but they are all conjecturall. ſhould

Pſalmo doctrinal. Hiſp.

Michtam of David, to teach] The Hebrews have a proverb, Litmod talmamed. Men muſt therefore learn that they may teach. David here imparteth what he had learned of Gods goodneſſe, and would teach others, eſpecially when they go to war, as (Judg. 3. 2. & 2 Sam. 1. 18) to call upon God, and to lean upon his promiſes, as himſelf had done with ſingular ſucceſſe.

When he ſtrove with Aram Naharaim] Cum iniarctaret, comminaretur Meſopotamia, called here Aram Naharaim, lay between thoſe two famous rivers, Euphrates and Tigris, and ſo ſeemeth to have been a part of that earthly paradiſe, Gen. 2. whereof ſince Adams Fall, and Noahs Flood, cecidit roſa, ſpinis ſtetit, ſaith One; the roſe is gone, the thorn only remaineth. A Country fruitfull beyond beleef, as Herodotus hath it; but inhabited by ſuch as here joyned with the Ammonites and other enemies of the Church; and were therefore fought by David, and at length vanquiſhed. See 1 Chron. 19.

And with Aram Zobah] Or, Caleſyria, whereof Damaſcus was the Metropolis.

When Joab returned] ſc. From the ſlaughter of the Syrians.

And ſmot of Edom] That is, of the Edomites, who had ſet upon Iſrael in the South, when Joab with the army was fighting againſt the Syrians in the Eaſt. Joab therefore at his return took them to do; and ſlew twelve thouſand, after that Abiſhai had firſt ſlain ſix thouſand of them, all which eighteen thouſand are ſaid to have been ſlain by David, as being Rex & Radix victoriæ, ſaith Kimchi, the King and Root of the victory, 2 Sam. 8. 13.

In the Valley of ſalt] Where Abraham had once fought with the four victorious Kings, Gen. 14. and afterwards Amaziah with the Edomites, likewiſe ſlaying ten thouſand, 2 King. 14. 7. In the midſt of theſe conflicts and buſtles, David is thought to have written this Pſalm, together with Pſal. 44. & 108.

Aben-Ezra.

Verſ. 1. O God thou haſt caſt us off] Some gather from this ſad complaint, that David was ſometimes worſted in theſe wars; though it be not particularly ſo recorded in the Scriptures. Dubia eſt Martis alea, Κοινὸς ἐνυάλιος, 2 Sam. 11. 25. the beſt cauſe hath not alwaies the beſt ſucceſſe, Jud. 20. 21, 25. Others think that the Pſalmiſt here complaineth of the ſad condition of the Iſraelites after that Saul was ſlain in Mount Gilboah, and the Philiſtines tyrannized at their pleaſure, 1 Sam. 31. 7. Whereupon alſo followed thoſe civill diſſentions and ſeditions, whilſt ſome of the Tribes ſet up Iſhboſheth, and others went after David. Theſe miſeries he here mentioneth the rather, that Gods goodneſſe in the preſent ſettlement of the Kingdome might the better appear. Hence moſt Interpreters read the words in the preter pluperfect, Thou hadſt caſt us off, thou hadſt ſcattered us, &c. but now 'tis well with us for the preſent; and better yet it will be.

Verſ. 2. Thou haſt made the earth to tremble] By ſundry fearfull and diſmall fractions and concuſſions in our ſtate.

Thou haſt broken it] In alluſion to Earthquakes.

Heal the breaches thereof] Remedy the diſorders, and cure the diſeaſes, like a good Phyſician. The Greeks call a King ἄνακ ab ἄκος Medela, from his healing-office. God is Jehovah the Phyſician, the ſun of Righteouſneſſe hath healing under his wings.

For it ſhaketh] Nutat ac mox ruitura videtur, it will ſurely down, if not timely ſhored up.

Verſ. 3. Thou haſt ſhewed thy people hard things] God will be ſure to plow his own ground, whatſoever becommeth of the waſte; and to weed his own garden, though the reſt of the World ſhould be let alone to grow wild.

Thou haſt made us to drink the wine of aſtoniſhment] Vinum vacillationis, we are intoxicated with our afflictions, according to that Deut. 28. 28, 34. we are drunk with them, or rather mad, and put quite beſides all faith and hope in a manner.

Fuimus obſtupefacti tanquam veneficâ potione.

Verſ. 4. Thou haſt given a banner] All the forementioned had formerly befaln them, but now it began to be better, and ſcene to be altered, banners erected, and diſplayed in token of victory, and for a ſingular ſign of Gods favour, in that juncture of time and deplored condition of theirs.

Because of the truth. Selah] Heb. From the face of the truth, that is, with reference reuce with thy promiſes, which thou faileſt not to fulfill.

Verſ. 5. That thy beloved may be delivered] Heb. Thy darlings, thoſe that fear thee, verſ. 4. for, for their ſakes it is, that God doth good to a people; to all others he ſeemeth to ſay, as Eliſha once did to Jehoram that wicked King of Iſrael, what have I to do with thee, &c? Were it not that I regarded ſuch and ſuch people, I would not look toward thee, nor ſee thee, 2 King. 3. 13. 14.

Save with thy right hand] Heb. ſave thy right hand, which ſeemeth to be afflicted together with us; becauſe the enemies ſay, he cannot ſave us; thus Kimchi expoundeth it.

Verſ. 6. God hath ſpoken in his holineſs] He hath aſſured mee all theſe following places; therefore I looked upon them long ſince, as already mine, and now I am Maſter of them.

I will rejoyce] As having peaceable poſſeſſion of all; though I have come hardly by it. Now I ſee that whatſoever God by his ſervant Samuel aſſured me of, was true, and to bee truſted; albeit I ſometimes doubted of it, Pſal. 116. 11. 1 Sam. 27. 1.

I will divide Shechem, and meaſure out the valley of Succoth] Which places though they longeſt held out againſt mee under Iſhboſheth, yet now that they are come in, they ſhall have civill uſage under mee, and be better dealt with than thoſe outland-enemies, Moab, Edom, &c. now brought under my ſubjection.

Verſ. 7. Gilead is mine and Manaſſeh] Theſe Countries on the other ſide of Jordan the Syrians happily had gotten, and now David had recovered them.

Ephraim alſo is the ſtrength of my head] Becauſe a populous and potent Tribe. Junius thinks David here alludeth to that of Moſes in his bleſſing of this Tribe, Deut. 33. 17. As in the next words to that of Jacob, Gen. 49. 10.

Judah is my law-giver] There, viz. at Jeruſalem, ſitteth the Synedrion, Numb. 11. 16. and there is my ſoveraign-court of Juſtice, Pſal. 122. 5. and of that Tribe, Chriſt the great law-giver of his Church ſhall ſpring.

Verſ. 8. Moab is my waſh-pot] A pot wherein to waſh my feet, a veſſel of diſhonour, ſuch as at my pleaſure, I will break in peeces, Pſal. 2. 9. and ſuch as I reſerve of them alive, ſh all be my ſcullions and underlings, glad to do my drudgery.

Non vis coquendi carnes, ſed lavandi pedes. Kimchi.

Over Edom I will caſt out my ſhooe] i. e. Walk through their Countrie as a Conquerour; Or, I will tread them under my feet; Or, I will throw my ſhooe at the heads of them, and make them to take it up; Or, I will make no more of ſubduing them, than of caſting my ſhooe over them.

Exuros mihi calceos & in ipſorum caput projectos attollere jubebo. Beza.

Philiſtia triumph thou becauſe of mee] i. e. Cry me up for thy King; Si velis, & videas quid in extremum eveniet, ſaith Kimchi. Or, triumph thou over mee (by an ironie) as thou lately didſt over Saul and his ſons in Mount Gilboah; and as ſince that time thou cameſt forth to ſeek mee; but wenteſt home again by weeping-croſſe.

Verſ. 9. Who will bring mee into the ſtrong City?] Into Rabbah of the Ammonites, which at length he got, 2 Sam. 12. and now wiſheth for. Kimchi readeth it in the preter-tenſe, who hath led mee into the ſtrong Cities? who hath brought mee into Edom? Haſt not thou O God, &c?

Verſ. 10. Wilt not thou O God?] Or, haſt not thou, &c. The glory of all victories is to be given to God in ſolidum. Strong Cities are nothing, when he will have them ſubdued, and ſacked.

Which hadſt caſt us off] See Pſal. 44. 9. The Churches proſperity, like checker-work, is intermingled with adverſity.

Verſ. 11. Give us help from trouble] Give it us whenſoever we need it; as hitherto thou very graciouſly haſt done.

For vain is the help of man] As they had lately experimented in Saul a King of their own chuſing, but not able to ſave them from thoſe proud Philiſtines. No more could the Romans the Britans, oppreſſed by their Northern enemies. They ſent to Ætius the Roman Praefect of Gaul, and thus complained to him: The barbarous enemy beateth us to the Sea, the Sea beateth us back to the enemy; between theſe two kind of deaths we are either murthered or drowned, &c. But their imploration prevailed not: For Ætius at that time had enough to do to keep his own head, and Valentinian, the Empire. The Saints comfort is, that where humane help help faileth, divine beginneth, as Philo told his Country-men, when rejected by Caius the Emperour.

Verſ. 12. Through God we ſhall do valiantly] Faciemus militiam, ſome render it, and it is true of the Spiritual warfare alſo; we ſhall be more than Conquerours, even Triumphers, 2 Cor. 2. 14. Meminiſſe oportet iſta nunc eſſe ad ſpirituales Eccleſiæ hoſtes potius quam adverſus armatas ferro copias referenda, ſaith Beza, in his argument and uſe of this Pſalm.

He it is that ſhall tread down our enemies] Corporal and Spiritual; this is a part of Chriſts Kingly Office, to the which he will not be wanting. Pſalmus hic eſt de Meſſia imperante, ſicut David, ſaith Kimchi, out of Deraſh Rabboth. This Pſalm is concerning Meſſiah reigning, as David did.

PSAL. LXI.

Vatab. TO the chief Muſician upon Neginah, &c.] Vincenti in melodiis Davidis. It is probable that he made this Pſalm, when driven out of his Kingdom by his Son Abſolom, he took up at Mahanaim beyond Jordan, 2 Sam. 17. 24. and therehence prayed from the ends of the earth, or rather of the land, verſ. 2. Howbeit R. Obadiah ſaith, that this Pſalm is De pugna cum Aram in confinibus Iſrael, concerning the battle with the Syrians in the borders of the Land. See 2 Sam. 10. 14. &c. and 1 Chron. 19. 16, &c.

Verſ. 1. Hear my cry, O God] Heb. My ſhouting, my ſad out-cry; for he was in great extremity, verſ. 2. and ſeeks eaſe by prayer. This is the way, Job 22. 21. Philip. 4. 6, 7. walk in it. Prayer hath Virtutem pacativam; it doth ſweetly ſettle the Soul, and lodge a bleſſed ſecurity in it.

Verſ. 2. From the end of the earth] Or, of the Land. In all places men may lift up holy hands, 1 Tim. 2. 8. Joh. 4. 21. and ſpeed. A deſert may be a goodly Oratory.

Sic dicit reſpectu arcæ à qua exulabat longe in bello contra hoſtes. R. Sol.

When my heart is overwhelmed] Or, covered over, Vt ſit in deliquiis & lipothimiis, as is uſual in ſwoones. See a like expreſſion, Pſal. 102. title, & Lam. 3. 65. where the word rendred ſorrow of heart, ſignifieth ſuch a covering like a ſhield, ſuch a lid put over the heart, that is ſuffocated, as in the Cardica paſſio. Davids Harp was not more out of tune, than his heart ſometimes: He prayeth, and is helped.

Lead me to the rock that is higher than I] i. e. Do for me that I cannot do for my ſelf; ſet me in ſafety.

Verſ. 3. For thou haſt been a ſhelter for me] Thou haſt, and therefore thou wilt, is an ordinary Scripture-medium, and well it may: for God is unchangeable, and his Decree for preſerving his people is (as the Poet ſaith well) παλινάγρετον irrevocable.

Verſ. 4. I will abide in thy tabernacle] Et ſcribam mirabilia tua in memoriale, ſaith R. Obadiah by way of gloſs; And I will there regiſter up thy wonderful works. Or, I ſhall there worſhip thee, and do thee acceptable ſervice again, though for preſent I am baniſhed, or buſied abroad. He ſaith not, I ſhall abide in my Palace, but in thy tabernacle, which he more highly eſteemed. Some render it, I ſhall dwell in thy Tent, or Pavilion Royal, making it a metaphor from warfare, where thoſe that are in the Kings own Tent muſt needs be in greateſt ſafety. And this ſenſe ſuiteth well with the following words, I will truſt in the covert of thy wings.

Hinc Græci precationem dicunt προσευχήν.

Verſ. 5. For thou O God haſt heard my vows] i. e. My prayers, which had vows of thankfulneſs annexed unto them.

Thou haſt given me the heritage] Even the ſure mercies of David, grace and glory; and inheritance in the World to come, as the Chaldee hath it; beſides what we have here.

Verſ. 6. Thou wilt prolong the Kings life] The King Chriſt, ſaith the Chaldee, who ſhall ſee his ſeed, he ſhall prolong his days, and the pleaſure of the Lord ſhall proſper in his hand. Iſa. 53. 10. David himſelf alſo lived, and reigned longer than moſt Kings do, being old and full of days.

And his years as many generations] ſc. In his ſons and ſucceſſors. So Pſa. 72. 17.

Filia-

Filiabitur nomini ejus. The name of Chriſt ſhall indure for ever, it ſhall be begotten as one generation is begotten of another, there ſhall bee a ſucceſſion of Chriſts name.

Verſ. 7. He ſhall abide before God for ever] Or, He ſhall ſit, viz. upon the Throne a long while in his perſon; but for ever in his Son Chriſt, Luke 1. 32. and this affordeth ſweet and ſingular comfort to the whole Church, and each Member thereof; for as much as the dignity of a King cannot ſtand, unleſs his Subjects bee in ſafety.

O prepare mercy and truth which may preſerve him] Hos duos cuſtodes adhibe quibus unis innitatur. Let theſe two (thy Mercy and thy Truth) be the ſupporters of his Throne, let them be of his Life-guard, let them be his due, and prepared portion, as the Hebrew word Man here uſed ſignifieth. Some underſtand the words thus, Furniſh the King with theſe two Vertues, Clemency and Truth, that thereby his Throne may be eſtabliſhed. See Prov. 20. 28. & 29. 14. Junius

Verſ. 8. So will I ſing praiſe unto thy name for ever] Concluſio votiva. Praiſe is ſo pleaſing a ſervice to God, that he indenteth with his people for it, Pſal. 50. 15. and they knowing his minde therein, do uſually reſtipulate that they will perform it; as holding it the leaſt that they in conſcience can do, and knowing it the moſt that they are able to do. They preſent it therefore to God, as that Grecian did his ſmall gift to Auguſtus, ſaying, Ει πλέον εἶχον πλέον ἐδίδουν. If I had a better thing I could well beteem it thee.

That I may daily perform my vows] Which till they be paid, a true-hearted Votary is in pain: for he accounteth them due debts to God.

PSAL. LXII.

A Pſalm of David] Who being well aſſured that his prayers in the former Pſalm were heard, and ſhould be anſwered, breaketh forth into this triumphant profeſſion of his faith. Lo here the happy fruit of faithful and fervent prayer.

Verſ. 1. Truly my ſoul waiteth upon God] Waiting is nothing elſe but Hope and Truſt lengthened; and hereof David giveth us an excellent example in his own perſon, Idque tantâ tamq; vegetâ cum magnitudine animi, cui ipſa quoq; ſententia & voces reſpondent, and that with ſo good a courage ſet forth in ſuitable expreſſions, that he who hath this Pſalm by heart, and hath laid it to his heart, cannot but be transformed into the ſame Image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord, 2 Cor. 3. 18.

From him cometh my ſalvation] Take it in the full extent, not only as it ſignifieth the privative part of mans happineſs, but the poſitive part alſo, and preſervation therein.

Verſ. 2. He only is my rock, &c.] See Pſal. 18. 2, 3.

I ſhall not be greatly moved] Non labaſcam multo lapſu, for the Lord putteth under his hand. I ſhall not be moved greatly, or into the great abyſſe (as Aben-Ezra hath it) into Hell (as other Rabbines ſenſe it) I ſhall not be tempted above that I am able, as 1 Cor. 10. 13. perſecuted I may be, but not relinquiſhed; caſt down, but not caſt off, 2 Cor. 4. 9. ſhaken, but for my better ſettlement at laſt. Vatabl. Tchom Rabbi bah.

Verſ. 3. How long will yee imagine miſchief againſt a man?] What though I am but a man, and in your eyes a mean deſpicable creature; yet know yee, that the Lord hath ſet apart him that is godly for himſelf, Pſal. 4. 3. where David beſpeaketh his enemies, with like ſharpneſs as here, for their malice and madneſs againſt him. The Hebrew word rendred imagine is found only here, the Septuagint and Vulgar Latine render it, How long will ye ruſh againſt a man? Auſtin, Quouſq; apponitis ſuper hominem? ſc. Onera & opprobria, how long lay you load of injuries and indignities upon me? ἐπιτίθεσθε, Irruitis.

Yee ſhall be ſlain all of you] Or, Will yee be murthered? Will yee run upon the Pikes? Are you ambitious of your own ruine?

As a bowing wall ſhall yee be] Born down by the weight of your own wickedneſs. As a bulging wall ſtandeth not long, and as a rotten Hedge, if but trod on, breaketh under a man; ſo ſhall yee be ſuddenly deſtroyed, and with little ado.

Thus he threatneth his enemies, the proudeſt of them, being himſelf gotten upon the rock that was higher than he, Pſal. 61. 2.

Verſ. 4. They only conſult to caſt him down from his excellency] Or, yet they conſpire, q. d. Notwithſtanding all that I can ſay, or that God will do to them, they will on in their evil deviſes and indeavours againſt me; there is no reclaiming of them, Deus quos deſtruit dementat.

They delight in lyes] Not only he that maketh a Lye, but he that loveth and delighteth in it when made by another, ſhall bee ſhut out of Heaven, Revel. 22. 15. See Rom. 1. ult.

They bleſs with their mouthes] Heb. With his mouth, that is, every one doth ſo; neither is there ever a better of theſe glavering companions, diſſembling ſcrubs.

Verſ. 5. My ſoul, wait thou only upon God] They truſt not God at all, that is, not alone. He that ſtands with one foot on a Rock, and another foot upon a Quick-ſand, will ſink and periſh, as certainly as he that ſtandeth with both feet on a Quick-ſand. David knew this, and therefore calleth earn and earneſtly upon his Soul, (for his buſineſs lay moſt within doors) to truſt only upon God. See verſ. 1.

For my expectation is from him] If he will not help me, none elſe ſhall; but it is he that ſaith, Look unto me and be ſaved, for I am God, and there is none elſe, Iſa. 45. 22.

Verſ. 6. He only is, &c.] Verſus ambæus, ſee verſ. 2.

I ſhall not be moved] Before it was, I ſhall not be greatly moved; now, upon further exerciſe of his truſt, it is, I ſhall not be moved. Ita in luctu creſcit lux fidei, & fides fit firmior: faith is made ſtronger by trials.

Verſ. 7. In God is my ſalvation, and my glory, &c.] By theſe many Adjuncts and Attributions David helpeth his faith, and quelleth the Commotions of his headſtrong affections. See Pſal. 18. 2.

Verſ. 8. Truſt in him at all times] As well in the tail of outward comforts, as in the abundance of them, truſt him without a pawn; truſt in a killing God, as Job did.

Pour out your hearts before him] ſc. In prayer, 1 Sam. 1. 11. firſt, rent your hearts, ut effundatur peccatum, ſaith Kimchi, and then pour them out as water, Lam. 2. 19. not as Oyl, which ſticks to the ſides of the Veſſel that held it, but as water, that will out every drop: make a plain and full confeſſion of all your ſins in prayer, leſt God ſay to you of your ſins, as Samuel did to Jeſſe of his ſons, Are theſe all? See the practice hereof in thoſe penitent Iſraelites, 1 Sam. 7. 6. and give not over the practice of Mortification, till you feel your hearts fall aſunder in your boſoms like drops of water. If iniquity be harboured there, prayer is obſtructed; and it it do break out, it will have the ſcent and ſavour of that iniquity upon it.

God is a refuge for us] A ſafe and ſure refuge; not as men who are a lye, verſ. 9. and were never true to thoſe that truſted them.

Verſ. 9. Surely men of low degree are vanity] Man is a depending Creature, and like the Vine muſt have ſomewhat to lean upon; apt he is to leave God, and cleave to the Creature, to make either Men, or Means his refuge: David therefore dehorteth from both, in this and the next verſe; ſhewing, that men of what degree ſoever are in no wiſe to be confided in. The word rendred Vanity denoteth a vain light thing, ſuch as is the breath of ones mouth, or a bubble on the water.

Men of high degree are a lye] There is no more truth, nor aſſurance in them, than in a falſe tale; alſo they fruſtrate mens hopes, as a barren Fruit-tree, Habbak. 3. 17.

They are altogether lighter, &c.] Put all Mankind into one bundle, into one ballance and vanity into the other, and it will weigh them down, Ut aſcendant ipſi præ vanitate ſimul.

Verſ. 10. Truſt not in oppreſſion, &c.] In the tail of Perſons, ſome may think that Things may be truſted to, as Wealth, Wit, Power, &c. but eſpecially Wealth, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Truſt not to that, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, whether it be ill or well gotten, unleſs you covet to be deceived: for Firſt, he who getteth riches and not by right ſhall leave them in the middeſt of his days, and in his end be a fool, a poor fool God will make of him, Jer. 17. 11. Male parta male dilabuntur.

If riches increaſe] Though by means lawful and laudable, though they come in

in at the ſtreet door, and not at a poſtern (Non minimum felicitatis argumentum Metello fuit bona multa bono modo invenisse :) yet Policrat. l. 8. c. 4.

Set not your heart upon them] Place not your felicity in them, think not your ſelves ſimply the better, or the ſafer for them. Be not puffed up with outward things, as a bubble with a Childes blaſt in a Walnut-ſhel, when he hath in it a little Sope: Wilt thou cauſe thine eyes to fly upon that which is not? Prov. 23. 5. An Eagle will not catch Flies (that is no Game for her) much leſs will ſhe make a flight at nothing, when there is no Game ſprung at all. He is the true rich man, who loveth his riches poorly, ſaith one.

Verſ. 11. God hath ſpoken once: twice have I heard this] The Septuagint have it thus, Once ſpake God, theſe two things have I heard; that is, ſay ſome, in the Second Commandement, where mention is made of Gods jealouſie and mercy, Exod. 20. 5, 6. Others, Once and again ſpake God, and I have heard it. Or, God ſpake once, I heard him twice, viz. by an after-deliberate meditation upon what I had heard: I preached over the Sermon as it were again to my ſelf, and ſo heard it a ſecond time.

That power belongeth unto God] He is well able to puniſh the wicked, Ezra 8. 22. See the Note there.

Verſ. 12. Alſo unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy.] viz. To ſet thy Power a work for the good of thy people. And as theſe two, Gods Power, and Gods Mercy, are the two Pillars, the Boaz and the Jachin of every Beleever (hence Job, chap. 42. 2. having ſpoken of his Power, he ſpeaketh of his thoughts of peace toward his people) ſo they are ſufficient proofs of the Doctrines before delivered, and do evince the truth of that which followeth.

For thou rendreſt to every man according to his work] viz. Judgement to the wicked, and Mercy to the righteous; where the Syriack interpreter giveth this good Note, Eſt gratia Dei ut reddat homini ſecundum opera bona, quia merces bonorum operum eſt ex gratia. It is mercy in God to ſet his love on them that keep his Commandements, Exod. 20. 6.

PSAL. LXIII.

When he was in the Wilderneſs of Judah] That is, of Idumea, ſaith Genebrard, which bordered upon the Tribe of Judah. But better underſtand it, either of the Forreſt of Hareth, 1 Sam. 22. 5. or of the Wilderneſs of Ziph, 1 Sam. 23. 14. where David was, In deſerto deſertus exul, & omnis ferè conſolationis inops, not only deſtitute of outward comforts, but in ſome deſertion of ſoul; Et ſic miſerrimus, & calamitoſiſſimus oberravit, ſaith Beza.

Verſ. 1. O God, thou art my God] And that is now mine only comfort; Divini mellis alvearium, the Bee-hive of heavenly honey.

Early will I ſeek thee] Now they who ſeek God early, have a promiſe that they ſhall finde him. Aben-Ezra rendreth it, Cicut mercator gemmas, inquiram te; I will diligently ſeek thee, as a Merchant doth precious Stones. שחר Mercator.

My ſoul thirſteth for thee] Thirſt is Taclith hattaavah ſay the Rabbines, the perfection of deſire. The whole life of a Chriſtian is nothing elſe but Sanctum deſiderium, ſaith Auſtin. How many broken ſpirits ſpend and exhale themſelves in continual Sallies as it were, and egreſſions of affection unto God, thirſting after not only an union, but an unity with him?

My fleſh longeth for thee] Non habet hec vox ſocium, ſaith Aben-Ezra; this word is here only found: It is a notable Metaphor, ſaith another Interpreter, taken from Women with Childe, to expreſs the earneſt affection that hee had to Godward. The Septuagint render it ποσαπλῶς, Quam multipliciter. His ſoul, his fleſh, all was on a light fire, as it were, with ardent affection towards God. R. Solomons Areſcere expönit.

In a dry and thirſty Land] Where I am hardly beſtead, and at a great fault for outward accommodations, but much more for ſweet and Spiritual communion with thee in holy Ordinances, there lieth the pinch of my griefe.

Verſ. 2. To ſee thy power and thy glory] To feel thoſe heart-ravifhing apprehenſions of thine incomparable excellencies from thy ſelf immediatly: who eanſt bee to thy people in their baniſhment as a little Sanctuary, Ezek. 11. 16. and ſupply all their wants out of thine All-sufficiency, who art rich in mercy to all that call upon thy Name.

So as I have seen thee in the Sanctuary] Where were to be seen the house of God, Exod. 25. 8. Deut. 12. 5. the throne of glory from the beginning, Jer. 17. 12. the Ark of the Covenant, Exod. 25. 21. the tables of the Covenant laid up in the Ark, Exod. 28. 21. the Mercy-seat, Exod. 25. 21. the Oracle, 22. Numb. 7. 89. the ceremonies that shewed the estate of the faithfull both by nature and by grace, and indeed were their Gospel, and Christ in figure. These were glorious sights and signals, which therefore David dearly desired, and more bewailed the want of them, then of all outward comforts and contentments.

Acts & Mon. fol. 1459.

Vers. 3. Because thy loving kindnesse is better than life] Mr. Bradford being threatned by Stephen Gardiner (then L. Chancellour) answered, I know to whom I have committed my life, even into his hands which will keep it, so that no man may take it away before it be his pleasure. Therefore his good will be done; life in his displeasure is worse than death, and death in his true favour is true life. This made him and the rest of the holy Martyrs, that they loved not their lives unto the death, Rev. 12. 11. The sight of God, though but in that dark glasse of the ceremonies, would have been better to David than life with the appurtenances, those Bιότυα, riches, honours, pleasures, &c. See Psal. 4. 7, 8.

My lips shall praise thee] Gods love shed abroad in the heart can cause the lips of them that are a sleep to speak, Cant. 7. 9.

Vers. 4. Thus will I bless thee, while I live] I will divide my time betwixt praises and prayers, and so drive an holy trade betwixt heaven and earth. See Psal. 28. 3.

Fretus tuo auxilio.

I will lift up my hands] i. e. pray, as Psal. 141. 2. 1 Tim. 2. 8.

In thy Name] i. e. Cleaving to thy goodnesse and mercy.

Vers. 5. My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatnesse] Heb. As with fatnesse and fatnesse; but, ad corroborandum, saith Aben-Ezra, q. d. I shall be top-full of comfort, animo adipe & medullis sanctissimarum deliciarum tuarum saginar. A soul taken up with Gods praises cannot but over-abound exceedingly with joy, Ita ut inter Dei laudationem & nostram consolationem sit quasi circulus perpetuus & infinitus, saith One; Praises increase joy, and joy causeth perpetuall praises.

Toto gutture laudes tuas personabo.

And my mouth shall praise thee with joyfull lips] Heb. With lips of jubilations or exultations, labiis canoris, as if I were in a rapture or extasie.

Vers. 6. When I remember thee upon my bed] Heb. Beds, in the plural; because he took up his lodging in many places, having Heaven sometimes for his canopy, and well content to break his sleep for Gods service.

In the night watches] The Ancients divided the night into certain watches, Mark. 13. 35.

Vers. 7. Because thou hast been my help] This was the matter of his meditation, and hereby he helped his faith.

Therefore in the shadow of thy wings, &c.] Metaphora à pullis pipientibus sub alis Matrum, saith Junius.

Adhæsit anima mea post te.

Vers. 8. My soul followeth hard after thee] As hard as mine enemies do after me, even hard at heels, as we say; Sic trahit sua quemq; voluptas. A Christians close cleaving to God is the continent cause of all his comfort. This we must beg of God, Jer. 13. 11. sc. that we may cleave to God with full purpose of heart, Act. 11. 23. and if he seem to withdraw, to follow him hot-foot, and presse his foot steps.

Thy right hand upholdeth me] For otherwise I should faint and fall in the pursute of thee; my short leggs and pursie heart would never hold on.

Vers. 9. But those that seek my soul to destroy it] Heb. Ad præcipitium, to hurl it down headlong, shall themselves be laid low enough, even in the same valley where are many already like them, and more (shall come after them) Jer. 21, 51, 52. And this assurance of his enemies down-fall David had gotten by his meditation on God, vers. 6.

Shall go into the lower parts of the earth] i. e. Into the grave at least, if not into Hell: they shall be thrust into Hell, into eternall perdition, saith Diodate.

Vers. 10. They shall fall by the sword] Heb. They shall make him run out (like water) by the hands of the sword. A plain Prophecy of Saul's death, and the manner of it. See a like phrase, Jer. 18. 21. Ezek. 35. 5.

They

They shall be a portion for Foxes] Or for any other beasts of prey, they shall not have the honour of buriall, but lye above ground, to be devoured by beasts and birds. See this fulfilled upon Saul's complices, 1. Sam. 31. and the Antichristian rout, Rev. 19. 21.

Verſ. 11. But the King ſhall rejoyce in God] i. e. I ſhall, who am annointed and appointed King after Saul, and therefore doubt not to ſpeak thus of my ſelf, as if I were King already. Wicked men præſumendo ſperant, & ſperando præſumunt, hope groundleſſly, and perish by their preſumption. But true beleevers reſt on God upon his bare word, and that againſt ſenſe in things inviſible, and againſt reaſon in things incredible, and according to their faith, ſo is it unto them.

Every one that ſweareth by him ſhall glory] By whom? not by the King, (though the Egyptians did ſo of old, and the Spaniards at this day in the pride of their Monarches, ſweat by the life of their King) but by God, the ſole and proper object of an oath; for to ſwear by his name in due manner, is a ſpeciall peece of his ſervice, and is here put for the whole. So then, every one that ſincerely ſerveth God ſhall bee glad and thankfull to God that David reigneth; for now πάντα καλῶς ἔχει (as the Raven is ſaid to have croaked from the Capitol when Auguſtus came to the Empire) all ſhall go well with them, according to their own hearts deſires. Dion.

But the mouth of them that ſpeak lyes] A fault whereof Saul's Courtiers were deeply guilty. Some take this for a generall deſcription of all graceleſſe and godleſſe perſons, who are lyars habitually at leaſt; as godly men are right ſwearers, and fearers of Gods name.

Shall be ſtopped] Either with ſhame and confuſion, or with death, as was Saul's and his pick-thanks. Saunders his foul mouth was ſtopped with tarning, (as hath been above noted) that had uttered ſo many blaſphemies againſt God, and ſo many lyes againſt men.

PSAL. LXIV.

A Pſalme of David] Of like argument with the former. The Arabick prefaceth, when Taluth (i. e. Saul) perſecuted him. By this and many the like Pſalmes we may ſee, that David did not complain for nothing; and his ſingular conſtancy under ſo many trials, may well make us reſolve as Hierom did when he had read the life of holy Hilarion, he rolled up the book, and ſaid, Well: Hilarion (David) ſhall be the Champion that I will imitate.

Verſ. 1. Hear my voice, O God, in my prayer] Or, in my meditation. To an effectuall prayer muſt concur meditation, invocation, affection, and beleef of audience, as here.

Preſerve my life] Heb. Lives; ſo uſually called for the many faculties, operations, revolutions, commodities of life.

Verſ. 2. Hide me from the ſecret counſel of the wicked] Or, from the aſſembly of evill-doers, from the Church malignant, that myſtery of iniquity. See the contrary, Pſal. 111. 1.

From the inſurrection, &c.] Heb. From their tumult, their hurricum, their open force, as well as from their ſecret fraud. Let thy protection equal their projects, who turn every ſtone to undoe mee.

Verſ. 3. Who whet their tongue like a ſword] The tongue in its form reſembleth a flaming ſword, and being ſet on fire of Hell it woundeth deeply and dangerouſly. It is ordinary with David to compare aulicas criminationes cum armis exitioſis, court-calumnies with warlike weapons, Pſal. 5. 8. 11. 8. 57. 4. See there.

And bend their bows to ſhoot their arrows] Heb. Bend their arrow, that is, as Pſalm. 11. 2. they bend their bow, they make ready their arrow upon the ſtring, &c. See a like phraſe, Jer. 9. 3.

Even bitter words] Virulent and venemous, quæ leviter volant, non leviter violant: for as Medius in Plutarch ſaith, though the wound they make be haply healed; yet there will be ſtill a ſcarre. A calumniation, though not fully beleeved, leaveth behind it a lowre eſtimation of the party than before.

Verſ. 4. That they may ſhoot in ſecret at the perfect] Innocency and integrity is no target againſt calumny; but every Zeyrus ſhall be ſure of his Zaius, who, right or wrong, will ſhoot him down if hee can. Suddenly Ἀλλ' ἡ μὲν ἴασις τῆς βολῆς ἐστιν· ἡ δὲ τοῦ βεβλημένου δυσχέρεια μένει. Plut. Aliquid falcem gilharch. Machiavel.

Suddenly do they ſhoot at him] As the hunter when he lyeth hid in a buſh, or as when hedges are lined, as they call it, with muskettiers, which gall and kill.

And feare not] They are not at all touched either with reverence toward God, or reſpect to man, but are utterly debauched, they ride on without reigns, &c. There is an elegancy in the originall, that cannot be engliſhed.

Verſ. 5. They encourage themſelves in an evill matter] Thus he riſeth in his complaint, and ſheweth how by the neglect of piety and humanity, they were grown obdurate and obſtinate, yea confident, or rather impudent, in their evill practices.

They commune of laying ſnares privily] viz. To intangle and intrap mee. See Neh. 4. 11. with the Note.

They ſay, who ſhall ſee them?] God who is All-eye ſhall, but they having hid God from themſelves, think they can likewiſe hide themſelves and their ſnares from God. But —ἔχει θεὸς ἐκδίκων δόμα.

Verſ. 6. They ſearch out iniquities] Abſtruſiſſima quæq; exquiſierunt; they ſearch the Devils Skull for new inventions, who is ready enough to lend them his ſeven heads to plot, and his ten horns to puſh at good people. How wittily wicked was Saul to deſtroy David, if he could have done it? See his counſell to the Ziphites, 1 Sam. 23. 22.

They accompliſh a diligent ſearch] Heb. A ſearch ſearched, i. e. They ſeek out all occaſions, they try all tricks, they do all that can be done to undoe mee. Whereunto he fitly ſubjoyneth this Epiphonema by way of exclamation, Adeo intimum viri & cor profundum eſt, So deep is the inward part and heart of man! (for ſo I read it) ſo deep and fathomleſſe, ſo deceitfull, and deſperately wicked.

Verſ. 7. But God ſhall ſhoot at them, &c.] He ſhall overſhoot them in their own bow, pay them home in their own coyn; he will deal with them lege talionis, for he loveth to retaliate, ſee verſe 4. they ſhall find that he can handle his armes a fair deal better againſt them, than they did againſt David.

With an arrow ſuddenly] As was Ahab, and the rich fool, Luk. 12. whiles he ſat pruning himſelf like a bird on a bough, death fetch'd him off ſuddenly by his ſhaft ſhot at him, and down he came tumbling. See 1 Theſ. 5. 3.

Verſ. 8. So they ſhall make their own tongue, &c.] According to Prov. 12. 13. Pſal. 59. 12. See the Notes.

And all that ſee them ſhall flee away] With horrour and aſtoniſhment, Heb. they ſhall wander about in their flight; this is ſpoken of their favourers and abbetters fearing to fall under the like puniſhment, and being agitated by the furies of their own evill conſciences.

Pœna ad paucos, metus ad omnes.

Verſ. 9. And all men ſhall fear] Seeing ſuch and ſuch hanged up in Gibbits, as it were, for a terrour to others.

And ſhall declare the work of God] viz. His power and providence, which ſome doubt of till thus powerfully convinced, as Claudian was by the deſtruction of Ruffinus.

—Abſtulit hunc tandem Ruffini pœna tumultum,
Abſolvitq; deos, & nam jam ad culmina rerum
Iniquos creviſſe queret, tolluntur in altum,
Ut lapſu graviore ruant —

Inde arripient ſanctæ cujuſdam jactantiæ argumentum. Beza.

Verſ. 10. The Righteous ſhall be glad in the Lord] Not my ſelf only, but all the Saints ſhall be comforted, confirmed, and occaſioned to make their boaſt of God with an holy gloriation.

PSAL. LXV.

A Pſalm and ſong of David] Made by him, as it is thought, when the people were delivered from that three-years famine for the ſlaughter of the Gibeonites, 2 Sam. 21. and that three dayes peſtilence for David's ſin, in numbring the people, 2 Sam. 24.

Verſ.

Vers. 1. Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion] Tibi silentium, laus tibi, Deus, in Sion; so Beza rendreth it. There is first a deep silence in Sion, and then due praise; a silence of admiration, a silence of religious awe and devotion, such as was afterwards that in the Christian Church, Revel. 8. 1. or a silence of expectation to receive mercies; and a praise by way of retribution, for mercies received. Or, silence in all other places (not sensible of Gods favours) but praise in the Church, where God is magnified; first, for blessings proper and peculiar to his own people; secondly, for preserving Common-wealths, and thereby providing graciously for Humane society; and thirdly, for giving men all things richly to enjoy, as in the end of this Psalm.

And unto thee shall the vow be performed] That is, solemn thanks shall bee rendred. Thy people stand ready prest with their praises and memorits, as Joseph's Brethren once did with their Presents, against the time that hee shewed himself.

Vers. 2. O thou that hearest prayer] And art thereby known to be the true God, 2 King. 18. 38, 39. and no such dull deity as the Heathens worshipped, Isa. 45. 16, 19. Mic. 7. 17, 18. O happy we that have to deal with such a Prayer-hearing, sin-pardoning God, vers. 3! Basil compareth prayer to a chain, the one end whereof is linked to Gods Ear, and the other to mans Tongue.

Flectitur iratus voce rogante Deus.

Unto thee shall all flesh come] And well they may, sith he keepeth open house, his Mercy-doors are ever wide open, as were the doors of the Ædiles, or City Chamberlains in Rome, that all who had occasion of complaint might have free access unto them at any time. A good house-keeper is seldom without company. Why ply we not the Throne of Grace upon such encouragement? Why, sith wee are not straitned in God, are we straitned in our own bowels? Why make we not our selves happy by asking, sith wee may have but what we will of God, even all that Heaven and his Grace can afford us?

Vers. 3. Iniquities prevail against me] And seek to choke my prayers, they prick me in the foot, as it were, that I cannot come to thee in prayer; or not with that confidence, but that is more than needs, sith

As for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away] So that if wee turn from them, they shall not hinder good things from us. No man was ever rejected by God for his confessed badness, as sundry have been for their supposed goodness: witness the Publican and the Pharisee, Luke 18.

Vers. 4. Blessed is the man whom thou choosest] Whom thou chooseſt for thy love, and then lovest him for thy choyse.

And causest to approach unto thee] i. e. Effectually callest. Here Vocation is fetcht from the Fountain (as is also Justification in the former verse) viz. Gods free election. See that golden chain Rom. 8. 30.

That he may dwell in thy Courts] viz. To hear thy Word, and partake of thine Ordinances. For our Saviour telleth the Jews, Hee that is of God, heareth Gods Words, yee therefore hear him not, because yee are not of God, John 8. 4. our Worship-scorners then have a black brand upon them.

We shall be satisfied] He maketh himself one of the number of Gods elect (as Paul also doth often) and there-hence concludeth to himself, and the rest, a beatifical communion of all good things.

Vers. 5. By terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us] As he did when he gave the Law in Mount Sinai, and ever after in his Oracles, and Ordinances. God loveth at once familiarity and fear; familiarity in our conversation, and fear in his Worships; he loves to be acquainted with men in the walks of their obedience, yet he taketh state upon him in his Ordinances, and will bee trembled at in his Word and Judgements.

Who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, &c.] i. e. of all thine Elect abroad the whole World.

Of them that are afarre off upon the Sea] The Islanders,

Ut penitus toto divisos orbe Britanni.

Venice

Venice is said to be situate six miles distant from any firm Land, and built in the heart of the Adriatick Sea, the waters whereof do flow into the City, and beat upon it, through all the streets thereof. Now it may be hoped, that God hath many souls even in such places; sith there are thought to be no fewer than twenty thousand Protestants in Civil it self, a chief City of Spain. It was long since foreprophesied, that the Isles should wait for Gods Law, Isa. 42. 4. & 51. 5. & 60. 9.

Spec. Europ.

Vers. 6. Which by his strength setteth fast the mountains] Why then should it seem incredible that he will do all manner of good to his Elect, for whose sake hee made all at first, and still upholdeth all by the word of his power? so he doth also States and Kingdoms (oft compared to Mountains in Scripture. See Jer. 51. 25. Isa. 13. 2. Zech. 4. 7.) that the Lord God might dwell among men, viz. in his Church and chosen people.

Being girded with power] With prevailing power, as the word signifieth.

Vers. 7. Which stilleth the noyse of the seas] Making a calm at his pleasure: hee hath the Sea it self, that brutish Creature, at his beck, and check: so hath he also Devils, and masterless men, who seek to subvert Civil Government, and to lay all level. Hence it followeth,

The noyse of their waves, and the tumult of the people] When they are in hurly burly, and contentions among themselves:

Virg. Æne.

----Savitq; animis ignobile vulgus,
Jamq; faces & saxa volant, furor arma ministrat.

Ῥάδιον πόλιν σεῖσαι καὶ τὸ τυχόντος, ἀλλ' ἄνθις καθιζάνει μόνος θεὸς γέρας. Pind.

Now it is God only that can asswage these tumults; others may stir strife, but God only can stint it, saith Pindarus. It is he alone

Qui terram inertem, qui mare temperat
Ventosum, & urbes regnaq; tristia,
Divosq; mortale sq; turbas
Imperio regit unus æquo.

Hor. Od. 4. lib. 3

Vers. 8. They also that dwell in the uttermost parts, &c.] And are therefore Duri, horridi, immanes, latrociniis dediti, omnium denique pessimi; not further distant from the Sun than from all Humanity, except the Sun of Righteousness shine upon them, as he hath done upon us here in England.

Are afraid at thy tokens] Thy notable Works, thine Executions.

Thou makest the out-goings of the morning, &c.] That is, the inhabitants of East and West, or the vicissitudes of day and night, whereby men are occasioned to praise and glorifie God. See Jer. 31. 35. The Jews at this day, as they are bound to say over an hundred Benedictions every day, so these two among the rest; When they go forth in a morning they say, Blessed bee He who hath created the greater Lights: And in the evening they say, Blessed be He, who causeth the darkness of the night.

R. Solom. in loc.

Vers. 9. Thou visitest the earth, &c.] i. e. With a gracious Rain, and so makest it to become an Alma parens to men and beasts.

With the River of God] With thy sweet showers coming out of the Clouds, as out of a great Watering-pot, Psal. 147. 8.

Pluvia de cælo replens flumina. Aben-Ezra.

Thou preparest them Corn] As a good Houle-keeper doth for his Family. How easie were it with God to starve us all?

Vers. 10. Thou waterest the ridges, &c.] The fore-mentioned mercy of God in producing an Harvest, he further amplifieth and explaineth by the parts, that men might be the more sensible; and not like brute Beasts, content themselves with a natural use of the Creature, but taste and see how good the Lord is.

Vers. 11. Thou crownest the year with thy goodness] Whilst each Month produceth its several fruits or commodities; so that the whole is as it were a Crown Royal: but especially a year of extraordinary plenty, such as was the last of Queen Mary, when Wheat was sold for five shillings a Quarter, Malt for four shillings eight-pence, and a bushel of Rye for four-pence.

Mr. Clerks Martyrol.

Thy steps drop] Thy waggon-tracks; the Clouds are Gods Chariot: or, wheresoever thou passest there is plenty.

Vers. 12.

Vers. 12. Rejoyce on every side] Heb. Are girded with joy, which in time of drought seems to be clad in sackcloth.

Vers. 13. The Pastures, &c.] Here is stately Rhetorick all along.

PSAL. LXVI.

VErs. 1. Make a joyful noyse unto God, all yee lands] Heb. All the earth; shout aloud for joy as the people did at the return of the Ark, so that the earth rang again. God shall one day shew himself to be the God not of Jews only, but of Gentiles also; these shall as well cry Christ, as those Jesu; these say, Father, as those Abba. And as there was great joy in Samaria, when the Gospel was there first received, Acts 8. 8. so shall there bee the like in all other parts of the earth.

Vers. 2. Make his praise glorious] Heb. Put glory to his praise; so Josh. 7. 19. Gods glory is as himself, eternal and infinite, no way capable of our addition or detraction: howbeit to try how we prize it, and will exalt it, he declareth that he accounteth himself made more glorious by us, when we receive him into our hearts as King of glory, and praise him accordingly.

Vers. 3. Say unto God] Hereby it appeareth, that this among other Psalms of like nature, was written for the perpetual use of the Church, and to serve for a set form of praising God, as occasion required, either in publick, or private.

Shall thine enemies submit themselves unto thee] Heb. Shall lye unto thee; that is, saith Kimchi, shall deny that they ever did any thing against thee, or thy people. Or rather, they shall perforce acknowledge thy power and prowesse; as Julian the Apostate did in his last Vicisti Galilæe: they shall also yeeld obedience to thee, such as it is, because they can neither will nor chuse; this Virtus nolentium nulla est.

Vers. 4. All the earth shall worship thee] Heb. They shall bow down to thee, stoop to thy Government, submit to the Scepter of thy Kingdom, they shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord Jesus Christ. O dieculam illam! O mora! Christe veni.

Selah] Let that thy Kingdom come; come speedily, come in our days, as the modern Jews pray daily. Bimherah, Beiamenu.

Vers. 5. Come and see] Venite, videte; Hee taketh good people by the hand, as it were, leading them to the sight of Gods stupendious proceedings, which may not be slighted, Isa. 5. 12.

Toward the children of men] For they are his chief care, and about them is his providence principally exercised.

Vers. 6. He turned the sea into dry land] A mercy much celebrated, and not without cause, in all after-ages.

They went thorough the flood on foot] That is, thorough the Riven Jordan, when it had over-flowed the banks; and met with no enemy on the other side, to forbid their landing.

There did we rejoyce in him] We who were then in the loyns of our fore-fathers, and so shared in their joy. See Hos. 12. 4. with the Note.

Vers. 7. He ruleth by his power] As sole Soveraign, universal Monarch, αὐτοκράτως, παντοκράτως. Sesostris King of Egypt would needs bee stiled κοσμοκράτως, Emperour of the whole World; he lived about the time of Samson, and perished by the hands of his own household-servants. Herod. l. 2.

His eyes behold the Nations] For which purpose they run to and fro through the earth, 2 Chron. 16. 9.

Let not the rebellious, &c.] Heb. The off-spring, froward, and refractory persons; these shall soon be repress, and crest-fain.

Vers. 8. O bless our God, yee people] We must not only publish Gods praises, but provoke others also so to do.

Vers. 9. Which holdeth our soul in life] Heb. Putteth, that is, bestoweth life on us, preserveth it, restoreth it. Some think this Psalm was made upon Davids deliverance from the Giant that sought to kill him, 2 Sam. 21. 16.

And ſuffereth not our feet to be moved] David gave back diverſe paces, ſay the Hebrews, but was ſeaſonably reſcued by Abiſhai, who ſlew the Philiſtine.

Verſ. 10. For thou, O God, haſt proved us] Non ut ipſe ſciat ſed ut ſcire nos faciat, ſaith Auſtine. God proveth his people, not thereby to better his own knowledge of them, Joh. 2. 25. & 6. 6. & 21. 17, Acts 1. 24. but to bring them to a better knowledge of their own, both Vices and Graces. It is not known what Corn will yeeld, till it come to the Flail; nor what Grapes, till they come to the Preſs. Grace is hid in Nature, as ſweet water in Roſe-leaves; the fire of affliction fetcheth it out.

Thou haſt tried us as Silver] The wicked alſo are tried, Revel. 3. 10. but they prove reprobate ſilver, Jer. 6. 28. 30. or at beſt, as Alchymy gold, that will not bear the ſeventh fire, as Job did, chap. 23. 10.

Verſ. 11. Thou broughteſt us into the Net] A Metaphor from Hunters, or Fowlers, Vtitur figuris tanquam in pompâ.

Thou layedſt affliction upon our loyns] Contractionem in lumbis; wee are not only hampered, as in a Net, but fettered, as with chains; as if we had been in the Jaylors or Hangmans hands.

Verſ. 12. Thou haſt cauſed men to ride over our heads] Subjected us to the villanies and outrages of the baſeſt perſons, who have uſed us more like beaſts than men.

We went thorough fire, and thorough water] That is, thorough variety of ſharpeſt afflictions, noted out by this Proverbial paſſage; Fire and Water are mercileſs Elements. Ælius Pertinax fortunæ pila pervulgatè dicebatur, quòd variis caſibus exercitus ſuit. It is the true Chriſtians comfort, that nothing befalleth him but by a ſweet providence; and that God goeth along with him into both fire and water, Iſa. 43. 2. to ſee that he take no hurt by either.

But thou broughteſt us out into a wealthy place] Heb. Moyſt, that is, into the air, ſaith Aben-Ezra, (oppoſed to Fire and Water) where wee might draw breath, and live comfortably; In locum irriguum, in refrigerium. It is but winking, ſaid that Martyr at the ſtake, and we ſhall bee in Heaven immediatly. The Arabick hath it, Eduxiſti nos ad requiem. Confer Acts 3. 19.

Verſ. 13. I will go into thine houſe, &c.] I will begin to others in that publick ſolemn Thankſgiving, and not grutch at the coſt, I will be Vir gregis, as the He-Goat before the flocks, Jer. 50. 8.

Verſ. 14. Which my lips have uttered] Heb. Have opened, that is, which I have uttered diductis labiis, with lips wide open. Videmus qualiter vota nuncupari ſoleant, ſaith Vatablus, Here we ſee after what ſort vows uſe to be made, when we are under any preſſing affliction: but when once delivered, how heavily many come off in point of payment.

And my mouth hath ſpoken when I was in trouble] Then, men will promiſe any thing for eaſe and releaſe; But what ſaith the Italian Proverb? Sciapato il morbo, frodato il Santo, when the Diſeaſe is cured, the Saint is defrauded. Horace calleth upon Mecænas (who in his Sickneſs had vowed to build a Temple)

Lib. 2. Od. 17
--- Reddere victimas
Ædemq; votivam memento:
Nos humilem feriemus agnam.

Verſ. 15. I will offer unto thee burnt ſacrifices of fatlings] Heb. Marrow, the very beſt of the beſt: and better I could beteem the Lord, if I had it.

With the Incenſe of Rams] Which being offered in faith, and as Figures of that great Sacrifice to come, ſhall be accepted of God for a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour.

I will offer Bullocks with Goats] Facium boves: this, Eccius alledgeth (but abſurdly) to prove the Popiſh unbloudy ſacrifice of the Maſs; as if Chriſt when he ſaid, This do ye in remembrance of me, had meant, Thou ſacrifice ye.

Verſ. 16. Come and hear] He had ſaid before, Come and ſee, verſ. 5. He held it a greater honour, Prodeſſe quàm præeſſe.

All ye that fear God] For ſuch only will hear to good purpoſe, others either cannot, or care not.

And I will declare, &c.] Communicate unto you my Soul-ſecrets, and experiments; merits. There is no ſmall good to be gotten by ſuch declarations. Bilney perceiving Latimer to bee zealous without knowledge, came to him in his ſtudy, and deſired him for Gods ſake to hear his confeſſion. I did ſo, ſaith Latimer, and to ſay the truth, by his confeſſion, I learned more than afore in many years. So from that time forward I began to ſmell the Word of God, and forſake the School-Doctors, and ſuch fooleries. Act. & Mon.

Verſ. 17. I cryed unto him] I prayed fervently and frequently.

And he was extolled, &c.] My prayers were ſoon turned into praiſes, which I ſilently framed within my ſelf, even while I was praying.

Verſ. 18. If I regard iniquity in mine heart] If I have but a mouths-mind to it, as we ſay; If I caſt but a leering-look towards it, if there be in mee but an irreſolution againſt it; how much more then if I allow it and wallow in it? He who chuſeth to hold faſt ſin, doth, by his own election, forſake mercy, Jon. 2. 8. neither let ſuch a man think that he ſhall receive any thing at the hands of God, Jam. 1. 7. As in a wound, a plaſter prevaileth not, whiles the Iron remaineth within; ſo neither prayer, while ſin rankleth. God will never accept of a good motion from a bad mouth, as that State in ſtory would not. A man may deliver an excellent ſpeech, but becauſe of his ſtinking breath, we may have no pleaſure to hear him: ſo in this caſe. Prayer is a pouring out of the heart, as hath been already obſerved. If iniquity harbour there, prayer is obſtructed, and if it do break out, it will have the ſcent and ſavour of that iniquity upon it, and thereby diſpleaſe. Kimchi maketh this ſtrange ſenſe (quite from the purpoſe, and from the truth) If I regard iniquity only in my heart, ſo that I break not forth into outward act, God will not hear, i. e. ſo hear, as to impute it, or to account it a ſin. Phariſaice.

Verſ. 19. But verily God hath heard mee] As I well perceive by his anſwer full and enlarged as the cloud that riſeth out of the earth in thin and inſenſible vapours, falleth down in great and abundant ſhowers.

Verſ. 20. Bleſſed be God, &c.] This is the concluſion of Davids Syllogiſm, in this and the two former verſes; and herein his Logick is better than Ariſtotles.

PSAL. LXVII.

VErſ. 1. God be mercifull unto us] ſc. In ſending his ſon, and calling his elect, both among Jews and Gentiles, to the participation of that gift, Joh. 4. 10. that Benefit, 1 Tim. 6. 2.

And bleſſe us] Specially with all ſpirituall bleſſings in heavenly things in Chriſt Jeſus, Epheſ. 1. 3.

And cauſe his face to ſhine upon us] Giving us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Cor. 4. 6. who is the brightneſſe (or glittering refulgency) of his Fathers glory, and the expreſſe image of his perſon, Heb. 1. 3. the day-ſpring from on high, Luk. 1 78. In this prayer the Pſalmiſt plainly alludeth to that bleſſing pronounced upon the people by the High-Prieſt, Numb. 6. and ſheweth, that all commeth from Chriſt the true Aaron, the High-Prieſt of the new Covenant. ἀπαύγασμα. Sereno ſuo vultu nos irradiet. Beza.

Verſ. 2. That thy way may be known] Thy way of worſhip, that way that is called holy, the Goſpel, Act. 19. 23. & 18. 25, 26. the way of ſalvation, Act. 16. 17.

Thy ſaving health] That is, thy Chriſt, Luk. 2. 30, 31.

Verſ. 3. Let the people praiſe thee, O God] Enlarge the bounds of thy Church, and bring in the Hallelujahs of the Gentiles alſo. Let them praiſe Thee (that pronoun Thee is emphaticall and excluſive) and not their Gods of gold and ſilver. Let them turn to God from Idols, to ſerve the living and true God, 1 Theſſ. 1. 9.

Verſ. 4. O Let the Nations be glad, &c.] As they cannot but bee upon their ſound converſion, Act. 8. 8. there being no ſuch joy as the joy of faith, and that a mans name is written in Heaven. Beatus Ludovicus, would be called Ludovicus de Piſſiaco, rather than take greater title, becauſe there he became a Chriſtian.

For thou ſhalt judge the people righteouſly, &c.] Not rigorouſly, keeping thy Church in ſafety amidſt the greateſt ruines of the World, and collifions of Empires.

And governe the Nations upon earth. Selah] Heb. Thou ſhalt guidly lead them, as a Shepheard doth his flock, or a Father his child. Lord hasten it.

Vers. 5. Versus annabam. See Ver. 3.

Vers. 6. Then shall the earth yeeld her increase.] Omnia optima ultro erunt prospera. All shall go well with us, and we shall abound with blessings of both lives. The Gospel is a cornucopia; and they that receive it shall have all that heart can wish, or need require, all creatures shall conspire to make them happy. The earth which was cursed for mans sin, and hath lain bed-ridden, as it were, ever since, shall put forth her utmost strength for good peoples use. God will hear the Heavens, and the Heavens shall hear the earth, &c. Hos. 2. 21, 22. when once mens hearts bear fruit to the Lord, Mat. 13. 19, 23. Heb. 6, 7. Hieron interpreteth these words of the Virgin Mary bringing forth the child Jesus, Others thus, Then shall the earth bring forth innumerable servants of God.

In more Nevochim.

Vers. 7. God shall blesse us.] God is thrice named here and in the former verse, to note the Trinity of persons, as Kamban wrote, and had therefore his book burnt by the Jews in France. And whereas it is thrice here said, God shall blesse us, it importeth that the blessings here meant, are more than temporal and bodily blessings.

PSAL. LXVIII.

A Psalm or song of David.] Made at that time, when having overcome his enemies, he brought arcam in arcem, the Ark of God into the Tower of Sion; conferre vers. 1. with Numb. 10. 35. Herein also he treateth of the greatest secrets of Christs Kingdome, and prophesieth of things to come, as Act. 2. 30, 31. witnesse the Apostle, Ephes. 4. 8.

Vers. 1. Let God arise.] He need do no more, that his enemies may be scattered, though never so close united, etiamsi cataphractus incedat Satan, as Luther speaketh; digitum suum tantum moveat, & dissipabuntur hostes, Let the Lord but stirre his finger only, let him but look unto the host of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire, and they shall be troubled, as Exod. 14. 24. fundantur & fugantur cum primum fecerit Deus, as those Philistines, 2 Sam. 5.

Let them also that hate him, flee before him.] Athanasius telleth us that evill spirits may be put to flight by this Psalm; and that Anthony the Hermite fought against the Devill with this verse, and worsted him. This may be done also as well with other texts of Scripture. Luther encountred the Devill with that sentence, Thou hast put all things under his feet; Another Dutch Divine with this, The Son of God came to dissolve the works of the Devil. A third, with those words, The seed of the woman shall break the Serpents head. As the rocks repel the boisterous waves — cuneatis fragore fraguntur, so doth Christ the Rock (the stone cut out of the mountains without hands, Dan. 2. 45.) all his Churches enemies.

Colloq. Mens.

Vers. 2. As smoak is driven away, &c.] Smoak at first sight seemeth formidable; but soon vanisheth, and the higher it ascendeth, the sooner it is dissipated: so here, Guicciardine saith of Charles the eighth of France, that he came into the field like thunder and lightening, but went out like a snuff, more than a man at first, and lesse than a woman at last. Semblably Gods enemies.

As wax melteth before the fire, &c.] Wax is a more solid substance than smoak, but held to the fire, it quickly dissolveth. The Psalmist both prayeth and prophesieth here, that the downfall of the Churches enemies may be praeceps & praecipitatissimus, (as and laddain, as is elegantly set forth by these two similitudes.

Vers. 3. But let the righteous be glad.] When he seeth the vengeance, Psal. 58. 10. (See the Note there) whilst this wise King scattereth the wicked, and bringeth the wheel over them, Prov. 20. 26.

Let them rejoice before God.] Heb. At the presence of God, from which the wicked must flee, vers. 1. See Isa. 33. 14.

Yea let them exceedingly rejoice.] Heb. Rejoice with gladness, over-abound exceedingly with joy, as St. Paul did, 2 Cor. 7. 4. Joy is the just mans portion, which the wicked must not meddle with, Heb. 9. 11.

Vers. 4. Sing unto God, sing praises.] Cantate, Psalite, do it chirly and duly, not in a customary formall heartlesse way. For an help hereunto was this Psalm penned (saith learned Beza) in a lofty and lively stile.

Extoll

Extoll him that rideth upon the Heavens] Exalt him (as when a high way is made up unto a great height. Beza rendreth it, Sternite viam quæ ipsi patet, cast down pave the way for him that rideth in the desert. Conferre Isai. 40. 3, 4. Mal. 3. 1. Matt. 3. 3. The Septuagint render it, ὁδοποιήσατε, Raise up the way, and make it ready (as they use to do before Kings that ride in triumph) that the King of glory may come into your hearts, those deserts indeed.

By his name Jah] the same with Jehovah, that proper and incommunicable name of God. Some of the Heathens called it Jeuo, as Diodorus Siculus, Macrobius, &c. Holy and reverend is this name, Αὐτόθεος, Essentiary, and it is here and elsewhere given to Christ, See it interpreted Rev. 1. 4.

Vers. 5. A Father of the fatherless, &c.] Pupillorum pater, et viduarum vindex, a title that God much glorieth in; and although hee rideth upon the Heavens, and is higher than the highest, yet so low stoopeth he to our meanness, neither will he leave his people orphans or comfortless, Joh. 14. 18. for God is in his holy habitation] Not in Heaven only, but in and with his Church on earth; the Ark and Mercy-seat were never sundred.

Vers. 6. God setteth the solitary in families] i. e. He blesseth them with Issue. See Psal. 113. 9. and so he doth the Church, Isai. 54. 1. in these dayes of the Gospel especially.

He bringeth out those which are bound with chains] As he did Peter, Act. 12. Paul and Silas, Act. 16. Some read it thus, He bringeth out those which are bound, in commodities, into places where they may live commodiously and cheerfully. As on the other side,

The rebellious dwell in a dry land] In locis terridis, aridis, exsiccatis & sitibundis, in dry and desert Countries, where they are destitute of Gods blessing and his soul-refreshing comforts. The Hebrew word signifieth a black or white soil, such as is all Egypt where the Nile ariveth not, Arida, & sitibunda, a thirsty sand, bearing no grass but two little weeds, of which they make glass. Where the river watereth is a black mould, so fruitfull, say travellers, as they do but throw in the seed and have four rich harvests in lesse than four months. Hence Egypt is called The world of Misery.

Vers. 7. O God when thou wentest forth before thy people] Here the former benefits of God to his people are recited, & additâ quasi calcaribus disertæ patriæ quam descripta, and rather depainted out in lively colours, than described. We must stirre up our selves to thankfullness for what God hath done for our forefathers, neither must the memory of his mercies ever grow stale with us.

Vers. 8. The earth shook, the Heavens also dropped] Pulsa tu sudavit solum, as if they had been put into a sweat. In so terrible a manner was the Law given, that Gods fear might fall upon us, Exod. 20. As for the Gospel, it is thus said of liberalities, vers. 9. confirming Gods inheritance, when it is weary.

Even Sinai it self was moved at the presence of God] Some render it, A facie Dei hujus Sinaici, a facie Dei, Dei Israel. These two verses are taken out of Deborahs song, Jud. 5. 4, 5.

Vers. 9. Thou O God didst send a plentiful rain] Heb. Thou shakest out a rain of liberalities. Spiritually this meaneth the Doctrine of the Gospel, Deut. 32. 2. Isai. 45. 8. Hos. 14. 6. and the gifts of the Holy Ghost bestowed freely and plentifully.

Vers. 10. Thy Congregation hath dwelt therein] Pecudes tuæ, thy cattle, so some render it, and interpret it of the flocks and herds, whereby of his goodnesse God prepared for his poor, those creatures being profitable to [illegible]

Deus obtulit occasionem lætandi, ovandi & triumphandi.

Vers. 11. The Lord gave the word] That is, the tydings De victoria, saith Chaldee. How God provided his people of victuals the Psalmist had told us, now of the victory, the good news whereof shall be sung in every ones mouth, like the word in an army, with joyfull acclamations and outcryes.

Great was the company (Heb. army) of those that published it] Such are the Preachers of the Gospel, Rom. 10. 15. an office taken now from the Angels, and given to the Ministers, whereas that Angel named over Germany to Paul for further information, Act. 16. The Hebrew word for Publishers or Preachers here is feminine, not to countenance our Fraticinnias (such as was that of Pope Joan of

New-

Ut imbecillitatem ministrorum Ecclesiæ notet. Moller.

New-England) hath to shew the weakness of the means (fishermen and the like) that God is pleased to use in this great work, for the greater manifestation of his power in the successe, as some conceive.

Vers. 12. Kings of armies did flee apace] Heb. Did flee, did flee. Or, shall flee, shall flee; which one interpreteth of Devils (called Principalities and Powers) formerly using to give Oracles; but after Christs birth ceasing to do so. As also of Iulianus and other tyrants fleeing before Constantine, the first Christian Emperour. See Rev. 9. 11. Antichrist is the King of Locusts, and he fleeth daily before the Evangelists, the New-Gospellers, as he calleth them. Bellarmine complaineth, that ever since we held the Pope to be Antichrist, non modo non crevit ejus imperium, sed semper magis ac magis decrevit, his Kingdome hath not only not increased, but more and more daily decreased.

Lib. 3. de Pont. Rom. cap. 21.

And she that tarried at home divided the spoil] That is, tota congregatio quæ non pugnabat, saith Kimchi. Or the women also (those domi portæ) came forth to pillage. These dayes of the Gospel do abound with many godly matrones and holy Virgins. And it is easie to observe, that the New Testament affordeth more store of good women, than the Old.

Vers. 13. Though ye have lyen among the Pots] Quasi obrutis rori & applicati fuligini & tenebris, black and sooty, as the black guard of an army, or as Skullions in a Kitchin, who lye sometimes all night, like beasts, in a chimney-corner; or as your Fore-Fathers in Egypt, when their shoulders were not yet removed from the burden, nor their hands from the pots, Psal. 81. 6. The meaning is, though ye have been in a low and loathsome condition, yet now ye shall shine and flourish, Verba sunt militarium, saith Kimchi, these are the words of those women, annunciatrices in the eleventh verse. Beza maketh them to be the Psalmists words to those women that divided the spoil, vers. 12. Vinisti inibus quietis, &c. ye have hitherto dwelt at home, and washt pots, &c. but now being enriched by the spoils, yee may come abroad fair and trimme, like white Doves with gilt feathers.

Inter Chytropodas.

Yet shall ye be as the wings of a Dove] Ye shall flye swiftly from the storm of cruel persecution, saith the Syriack Interpreter; yea you shall shine, and make a glorious shew, sicut nivea columba per medium aurum inter volitandum aureum quendam splendorem ejaculantur. See Isa. 54. 11, 12, 13. the Churches bricks made in her bondage shall be turned into Saphires.

Vers. 14. When the Almighty scattered Kings in it] i. e. In the wilderness as they passed; or in Canaan which they possessed, according to vers. 1. Or, scattered Kings for her, that is, for his Church, or for her that tarried at home, vers. 12. a periphrasis of the Church, in the times of primitive persecution especially, till the Almighty scattered those persecuting Princes. Some of the Jew-Doctors understand it of Gog and Magog.

It was white as snow in Salmon] Or, She was white as snow in Salmon; not only as the wings of a Dove, but glorious and glittering as snow on that high hill, Judg. 9. 47, 48. At the top of the Alpes nothing is to bee seen but snow, which hath lain there beyond the memory of man, and as some say, ever since the flood. The same may be as true of Salmon, which some here take for a Noun substantive common, and render it albescet in caligine, thou shalt wax white in darkness. The old Emperour Andronicus lighting upon this verse in his Psalter, and applying it to himself, was much helped and comforted concerning his troubles.

Turk. hist. fol. 164.

Vers. 15. The Hill of God is as the hill of Bashan] Basan was fat and fertile, but Sion was better, because the place where Gods honour dwelled, any relation to whom doth greatly ennoble any place or person: so Gen. 17. 21, 22. Ismael have I blessed, twelve Princes shall he beget, but my covenant will I establish with Isaak. Sion thou hast been precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable, Isa. 43. 4.

Vers. 16. Why leap ye, ye high hills?] Why do ye pride and please your selves in your privileges of nature, to leave above this of Sion? Quare contenditis magnis gibbis &c. some render it, and tell us, that the originall word nasah in Syriack and Arabick to envy, to imitate, to rebuke, or contend with any one.

This is the hill which God desireth to dwell in] This low, little, common hill of Sion and Gods election maketh the difference, as did of Aarons Rod from the rest.

and doth ſtill of the Church from the reſt of the World. The Lamb Chriſt is on Mount Sion, Revel. 14. 1.

Verſ. 17. The Chariots of God are twenty thouſand] Heb. The Chariot, to note the joynt-ſervice of all the Angels, who are here called, Shinan, of their changeableneſs now taken away by Chriſt, ſay ſome: of their precellency above other Creatures, ſay others, as being ſecond or next unto God, the chief Princes, the Nobles of that Court, as Dan. 10. 13. Michael one of the chief Princes. The Seventy render it ἐυφροσύνων, The cheerful ones [ſuch as are in joy and tranquillity, freely ſerving God in all his Warres, carrying the Elect, and marching about them.

The Lord is among them, as in Sinai] i. e. The Angels make Sion as dreadful to all her enemies, as thoſe Angels made Sinai at the delivery of the Law. See Heb. 12. 22.

In the holy place] Holy for the time whilſt God appeared there, ſo 2 Pet. 1. 18. Tabor is called the holy Mount.

Verſ. 18. Thou haſt aſcended on high] As a Conqueror doth on his triumphal Chariot; the Romans aſcended up to the Capitol, leading their Captives bound behind them, and giving gifts unto the people. They might have this cuſtom from David, and theſe words might be the peoples acclamation to David, or as ſome think, both the Kings and peoples acclamation to the Ark, that notable Type of Chriſt, to whom St. Paul applieth it, Epheſ. 4. 8, 9. and teacheth us to underſtand it of his wonderful Aſcenſion. Plut. in Æmyl.

Thou haſt led captivity captive] i. e. Thou haſt captivated thoſe that once held us in captivity: for ſo Gods juſtice required, Iſa. 33. 1. ſo he had fore-promiſed, Iſa. 24. Rev. 13. 10. and ſo Chriſt hath fulfilled, Coloſſ. 2. 15. ſaving his people to the uttermoſt, from Sin, Death, Hell, and the Devil, who had taken them alive captive at his pleaſure, 2 Tim. 2. 26.

Thou haſt received gifts for men] Heb. In man; ſome render it in Adam, Qualia erant in Adamo, talia dat Chriſtus, ſaith Eugubinus, Chriſt gave ſuch gifts to his people (for if he received with one hand, he gave with the other, and the fruits of his Victories are all for his Subjects) as were in Adam. True it is, that hee repaireth Gods once-loſt Image in them, but the gifts here meant are mentioned by the Apoſtle, Epheſ. 4 11. viz. Apoſtles, Prophets, Evangeliſts, Paſtors, Teachers, for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the Miniſtery, for the edifying of the body of Chriſt, &c. Lo theſe were thoſe gifts that Chriſt beſtowed upon his Church at the day of his Coronation, and ſolemn inauguration into his Throne, at the time of his triumphant Aſcenſion. Theſe he received that he might give: and he held it more bleſſed to give than to receive. A like expreſſion wee have, Hoſ. 14. 2. Receive us graciouſly, Heb. Take good, ſc. to beſtow it upon us, as Acts 2. 23. Sed Beth ſervilis non præponitur proprio nomini.

Yea, for the rebellious alſo] Rebellion at firſt till thou haſt given them a better heart. See Rom. 4. 5. & 5. 6. or, if they continue ſo, yet they may ſhare in common gifts, and external priviledges.

That the Lord God might dwell among them] viz. in his religion and true worſhippers, for which end he giveth reſtraining grace to the very rebellious.

Verſ. 19. Bleſſed be the Lord who daily loadeth us] ſc. With bleſſings, or with croſſes turned into bleſſings, as being ſanctified, and having their properties altered; for of themſelves they are fruits of ſin, and a peece of the Curſe. Let us not load him with our iniquities, &c.

Verſ. 20. He that is our God, is the God of Salvation] Or, This God is unto us a God of Salvations, in the Plural, ſo that he can ſave us, and doth, from a thouſand deaths and dangers; and when he hath delivered us to day, he both can and will do it again to morrow: he hath for his people omnimodam ſalutem.

And unto God the Lord belong the iſſues from death.] When we think there is no way but one for us, he appeareth as out of an Engin, and pulleth us out of Deaths jaws. The Lord knoweth how to deliver his, 2 Pet. 2, 9. from the moſt deſperate and deadly dangers. Peter might well ſay it, for he had the experience of it, Act. 12. Chriſt hath the Keys of death, Rev. 1. 18. the ſole dominion and diſpoſal of it. Servat nos à morte, ſicut ipſe primum exiluit à manu mortis.

Verſ. 21. But God ſhall wound the head of his enemies] Crudelitas caput, a wound in the head if deep (and God ſtrikes no ſmall blows) is mortal. Chriſt will break the head of thoſe that bruiſe his heel, that attempt any thing againſt Him, and his. By Head here Diodate underſtandeth the Devil, that Prince of the World, Deut. 32. 42. Pſal. 110. 6. Hab. 3. 13. Evil ſpirits in Scripture are called Shegnirim, ſhag-haired, Levit. 17. 7. Iſa. 13. 21. And they go on in their treſpaſſes; they do infinitely hate God, and ſin that ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt every moment. But the moſt underſtand it of wicked men.

And the hairy ſcalp of ſuch a one as goeth on ſtill, &c.] This is Gods enemy, that by his wilful wickedneſs ſtriketh, and as it were ſhooteth at God, runneth upon him, even upon his neck, and upon the thick boſſes of his Bucklers, Job 15. 25, 26. his hairy ſcalp, ſetting forth his fierceneſs, Job 5. 5. Note this againſt Anti-Roundheads. See Ezek. 44. 20.

Verſ. 22. The Lord ſaid] That is aſſurance good enough.

I will bring again from Baſhan] Og the Giants Country, where Iſrael was in no ſmall diſtreſs, and danger, till that Monſter was taken out of the way, Numb. 21. 33. Deut. 3. 1, 2. q. d. I will, if need require, and as occaſion ſerveth, do as much for mine again, as I did once at Baſhan, and at the red Sea. Some interpret this, and the following Verſes, of the calling of the Jews. The glorious things (ſaith one) which God will effect in their behalf are here reduced to five heads; Firſt, the bringing of them home from moſt extreme difficulties, naming Baſhan, becauſe of the ſlaughter ſpoken of, verſ. 14. and the deep of the Sea, alluding to Exod. 14. 16. peradventure he meaneth the drying up of Euphrates before them. For this firſt Head aimeth at thoſe times, the beginning of the Jews repair unto their Country. The Second Head is, the great and famous Victory that God will give, delivering them out of thoſe difficulties and diſtreſſes, verſ. 22. See Iſa. 63. 1, 2, 3, 4. The Third Head is, the Jews thorough converſion, by occaſion of that ſingular mercy of God, verſ. 23. and the form of a goodly Church (under the Type of the old Synagogue) ſet up among Jacobs poſterity, verſ. 24. the Ten Tribes as well as the Tribe of Judah, which is concluded by acknowledging their ſtrength to come from God, a prayer to perfect his Work begun, and a ſpur to put into theſe Kings of the Eaſt (as they are alſo called, Rev. 16. 12.) to preſent in the Temple at Jeruſalem (in the publick Congregation) teſtimonies of their thankfulneſs, verſ. 25, 26, 27, 28. The Fourth Head is, the taming of their proud enemies, and the forcing them at leaſt to counterfeit a ſubjection, verſ. 29. The Fifth Head is, the general calling of all the Kingdoms of the earth to joyn themſelves unto the Church of Chriſt, which ſhall follow the converſion of the Jews. And this he ſhutteth up with provoking all Nations, to give unto God the praiſes that are due unto him for it: and his own particular thankſgiving, verſ. 30, 31, 32, 33, 34. Thus he.

Verſ. 23. That thy foot may be dipped] Heb. Redded, imbrewed, made gore-bloody; Hereby is implied a very great ſlaughter. Confer Rev. 19. 17, 18, 21.

Diod. Verſ. 24. They have ſeen thy goings, O God] Namely, the holy manner of conducting the Ark with even and proportionable reſtings, and ſettings down. See 2 Sam. 6. 13. The Ark is here and elſewhere called, God, becauſe a ſymbol of his ſpecial preſence. When we are called to hear Gods Word, and pray publickly, though we ſee not God, yet we may ſee his goings: Deus enim ipſe chorum agit, & primas tenet in illo inceſſu. ab.

Of my God, my King] David though he were a King, yet held himſelf but Gods Mandatary, or Subſtitute.

Verſ. 25. The ſingers went before, &c.] Thus they were Marſhalled, when the Ark was conducted to Mount Sion, every thing being done decently and in order. Chriſt aſcending into Heaven, and ſetling his Kingdom, is perpetually praiſed of his Church.

Verſ. 26. Bleſs yee God in the Congregations] i. e. Catervatim ac turmatim, by Troops and Companies.

Even the Lord from the fountain of Iſrael] That is, from the Heart, ſay ſome, which is the true fountain of praiſing God. Others underſtand it of Chriſt, who is the fountain of Iſrael, Rom. 9. 5. there are, that think that the ſtudy of the Hebrew Tongue is here recommended to us. Reuchlin was wont to ſay, that the Latins drank out of Ciſterns, the Greeks out of Ponds, but the Hebrews out of the Foun-

Fountain it ſelf. Calvin, and the moſt Interpreters read the words, Yee that are of the fountain of Iſrael, ſpringing out of his loyns. See Deut. 33. 28. Iſa. 48. 1. & 51. 1.

Verſ. 27. There is little Benjamin, with their Ruler] Though before they had ſtood out for Saul, and his houſe, yet now they bore a part in this ſolemn celebrity, as being next unto the Sanctuary. Of this Tribe was St. Paul, Tricubitalis ille homuncio, ſed inſatiabilis Dei cultor, as Chryſoſtom calleth him, little in ſtature, but in laboure more abundant. The firſt precious ſtone in the foundation of the New Jeruſalem is a Jaſper, Rev. 21. 19. which in Aarons breſt-plate was the laſt, Exod. 28. 20. on which Benjamins name was graven. This intimateth, ſaith one, the laſt now to be firſt, and chief in Chriſtian Churches. Ainſw.

The Princes of Judah, and their Council] Or company, or purple-arrayed ones. Beza rendreth it, Lapidatores eorum, the ſtoners of the enemies. The word is found here only: and Forſterus thinketh that our Saviour alluded to it, when as Mar. 3. he calleth James and John Boanerges.

The Princes of Zebulon] Sic abſolvitur pompa triumphalis. Theſe are mentioned as moſt remote, bringing up the rear. In thoſe Tribes Chriſt walked, and therehence he called ſundry of his Diſciples.

Verſ. 28. Thy God hath commanded thy ſtrength] A brave expreſſion, admired by Longinus a Heathen Rhetorician. See the like Deut. 28. 8. Pſal. 42. 8. & 44. 4. & 33. 9. God both made and ruleth the World without Tool or toyl, he enableth his people to ſubſiſt, and to reſiſt their enemies by his Will only, and by the efficacy of his Word. Suppeditavit tibi Deus tantum robur, nequid ſuperbias, ſaith Vatablus.

Strengthen, O God, that which thou haſt wrought for us] Petamus ut det, quod ut habeamus jubet. Pray to the God of all Grace, to make us the ſame that hee requireth us to be.

Verſ. 29. Becauſe of thy Temple] Or, out of thy Temple at Jeruſalem, q. d. ſtrengthen us out of thy Temple, out of the fulneſs that is in thy Son, thereby typified.

Kings ſhall bring preſents unto thee] See the Note on verſ. 22.

Verſ. 30. Rebuke the company of Spear-men] Or, Launce-men; Heb. The beaſt of the reeds; that is, ſay ſome, voluptuous perſons that wallow in Wealth, plenty, and pleaſure, Job 40. 21. Behemoth lyeth in the Fennes, which Gul. Pariſienſis applieth to the Devil in ſenſual hearts; Reeds grow not but in fat and moyſt places: But they do better, who render it the Reed, or cane of the Cane; that is, men that bear Reeds or Canes, whereof Spears, Arrows, and Launces were wont to bee made: theſe men, or rather beaſts, cruel, ſavage, and bloudy, rebuke, that is, repreſs. Arab. Sicut Pontifices, Cardinales, Epiſcopi & horum ſatellites.

The multitude of the Bulls] The Commanders and Chieftaines.

With the Calves of the people] The common Souldiers.

with pieces of ſilver] With an Homage-penny, as they call it.

That delight in War] That make a ſport of it, as Joab, 2 Sam. 2, 14. as Pyrrhus King of Epirotes, who made a recreation of Warfare. So did not David, though neceſſitated thereunto for the glory of God; hee was a man of Warre from his youth. If we Princes (ſaid our Hen. 7.) ſhould delight in War, or take every occaſion that is offered, the World ſhould never bee quiet, but wearied with continual Wars.

Verſ. 31. Princes ſhall come out of Egypt] The Gentiles ſhall one day be called, and cauſed Deum verum cognoſcere & colere: even Egypt, that Arch-enemy of the Church, and Ethiopia, the Off-ſpring of curſed Cham.

And Ethiopia ſhall ſoon ſtretch out her hands to God] Heb. Shall make her hands to run; whereby is noted her ſpeedineſs in giving, or in receiving the Goſpel: Manibus pedibuſq; ohtinè omnia facit. It is likely that that good Eunuch, Acts 8. preached the Chriſtian verity which himſelf had imbraced, for goodneſs is diffuſive, and Birds, when they come to a full heap of Corn will chirp, and call in for their fellows. The Habaſſines are ſtill a kinde of Chriſtians, the Nubians have forſaken the Faith once delivered, and embraced inſtead of it partly Mahumetaviſm, and partly Idolatry: through lack of Miniſters as Alvarez reporteth. Terent. Hiſt. Æthio. cap. 137.

Verſ. 32. Sing unto God, ye Kingdoms] No ſuch joy as that of the converted, Iſa. 35. 10. the ranſomed of the Lord ſhall return and come to Zion with Songs, and everlaſting joy upon their heads, &c. Bernard, for a certain time after his Converſion, remained as it were deprived of his ſenſes, by the exceſſive conſolations he had from God. The like befell Cyprian, Auſtin, and others.

Verſ. 33. To him that rideth upon the heavens of heavens] i. e. the higheſt heaven, Deut. 10. 14.

Which were of old] And do ſtill remain in the ſame ſtate.

Lo he doth ſend out his voyce] i. e. Thundreth, as Pſal. 29. whenſoever therefore we hear it thunder, Scimus Deum ipſum loqui, hoc eſt ſenſibilem reddi.

ὑψιβρεμέτης. Altitonans. Verſ. 34. Aſcribe ye ſtrength unto God] The High-thunderer; acknowledge your own nothingneſs, ſubmit to his government.

His excellency is over Iſrael, and his ſtrength, &c.] i. e. His glory ſhineth no leſs in Iſrael, than the Thunder roareth in the Clouds.

Verſ. 35. O God, thou art terrible out of thine holy places] So the Sanctuary is called, becauſe divided into three parts; and here hence God was terrible in his manifeſtations to his people, and in his operations to his enemies. See Pſalms 67, 2, 3.

Bleſſed be God] Hereupon ſaith one, God was called in Iſrael, Baruchu, the Bleſſed, as Mark 14. 61. with Mat. 26. 63. See Luke 1. 68.

PSAL. LXIX.

A Pſalm of David] Quando rebellabat Sheba, ſaith the Syriack, made upon occaſion of Sheba's rebellion preſently after Abſolons. Hence he cries out as one almoſt over-whelmed, Verſ. 1. Save mee O God] Thou who delighteſt to ſave ſuch as are forſaken of their hopes. The Fathers generally take this Pſalm to be prophetical touching the paſſions of Chriſt, and his praying then to the Father. David had his troubles which gave occaſion to the penning of this Pſalm, but thoſe were all but as a picture and prelude of Chriſts farre greater ſorrows. Spiritus autem ſanctus manifeſtè ſe prodit in hoc Pſalmo.

For the waters are come in unto my ſoul] Ever after Noahs flood (that diſmal deſtruction) great and grievous afflictions were ſet forth by the ruſhing in of waters, and overwhelming therewith. Gods wrath was poured upon Chriſt as a mighty torrent of waters, and therefore this expreſſion applied to him hath a ſpecial Emphaſis; his ſoul was heavy even to the death. Fluctus fluctum trudebat. One deep called upon another, &c. O the ſoul of ſufferings which his ſoul then ſuffered!

Verſ. 2. I ſink in deep mire] Heb. In the mire of depth, or gulf, as Babylon was afterwards called, Iſa. 44. 27. Here he ſtuck, and under water, and ſo muſt periſh, if he had not preſent help.

Verſ. 3. I am weary of my crying] As a drowning man, whiles he can be heard, cryeth for help.

My throat is dryed] Or, parched: raucitate laborant fauces.

Mine eyes fail] With much weeping, and long looking. This is a peece of the curſe, Levit. 26. 16. Chriſt became a curſe for us, Gal. 3. 13.

Verſ. 4. They that hate me without a cauſe, &c.] Chriſt, beſides his inward fears and griefs cauſed by the ſenſe of his Fathers wrath for our ſins, was ſet againſt and aſſaulted both by men and Devils (in that three hours darkneſs eſpecially) with utmoſt might and malice.

Then I reſtored that which I took not away] Quod non rapui reddebam. David was dealt with as a felon or falſe-dealer. Chriſt alſo was crucified for ſaying that he was the Son of God, Joh. 19. 7. though he held it no robbery to be equall with God, Phil. 2. 6. The Martyrs likewiſe were loaden with many calumnies and falſe criminations, that they might ſeem to ſuffer not as Martyrs, but as Malefactors.

Verſ. 5. O God, thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſs] Secundum dicit, non ſecundum ea quæ vere mihi culpæ ſunt. Thou knoweſt mine innocency, and how falſely I am charged by them, and thoſe foul faults, wherewith they falſely charge me.

Verſ. 6.

Vers. 6. Let not them be ashamed for my sake] Give mee not up to passions of dishonour, to opprobrious practices, whereby religion might be reproached, or good people reviled and abused, much lesse staggered, and set at a stand by my sufferings.

Vers. 7. Because for thy sake I have born reproach] Whatever mine enemies pretend, they strike at thee Lord, through my sides; and for thy sake alone it is that I am so bespattled, that I am even ashamed to look any one in the face. The most innocent may, upon the fulnesse of an aspersion, be put out of countenance.

Vers. 8. I am become a stranger to my Brethren] No otherwise than as if I were a Mamzer (so the Hebrews call a Bastard) that is, a strange blot to the family. Christ came to his own, but they received him not; yea his own brethren beleeved not on him, Joh. 7. This, when the Turks read in our Gospel, they wonder, and the Jews therefore slander his miracles, for not so manifest as we conceive.

Vers. 9. For the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up] Non minus qui non zelat. Davids love to God (much lesse the Lord Christs) would not suffer him to beat with Gods dishonour, and the contempt of his ordinances. And this was it that procured him so much ill will, and such a generall alienation from neerest friends and allyes.

And the reproaches of them that reproached thee] Wicked men essoons set their mouths against Heaven, and fall foul upon God himself. This, David (and the son of David) could not endure, nec aliter amare didicit, as Basil once answered those that blamed him for appearing so farre for his friend, to his own great danger. Chrysost. lib. 2. d. sacerdot.

Vers. 10. When I wept and chastened my soul with fasting] That I might thereby beat down my body, and tame that rebel flesh of mine,

That was to my reproach] They said I did it in hypocrisie, and design. So they dealt by the Baptist that crucifix of mortification, Luk. 7. 33.

Vers. 11. I made sack-cloth also my garment] A fashion at solemn fasts among the Easterlings; as if they thought the courcest cloathing too good for them, and but for shame would have gone stark naked.

I became a proverb to them] Dicterium, They would say with mocking Michal, How glorious was the King of Israel to day, as one of the vain fellows? 2 Sam. 6. 20.

Vers. 12. They that sit in the gate] Men of Authority and Dignity, who should have shewed more grace and gravity. The Saints are sure of enemies of all sorts. David was traduced at publick and private meetings: seriis, & ludicris, sobriis, & ebriis.

And I was the Song of the Drunkards] Heb. Of the drinkers of strong drink: the Ale-stakes made Ballads on their Ale-bench, de musis mea & miseria. These Varlets tear and toss my Name, as Curs do Carrion.

Vers. 13. But as for me, my prayer is unto thee, O Lord] So Saint Paul, Being defamed, saith he, we pray. Christ in like case committed himself to God in well-doing, 1 Pet. 2.

In an acceptable time] Or, there will be an acceptable time.

Flebilis principium melior fortuna sequitur.

Vers. 14. Deliver me out of the mire] i. e. De civitate Gehennæ, saith the Hebrew Scholast, out of that deadly danger whereof he had complained, vers. 2. Alphonsus King of Aragon, by a gracious condescension helped a laden Asse out of the mire with his own hands, and is renowned for it in History. God helpeth his out full often, and takes notice of it. Val. Max. Christ. Alt.

Vers. 15. Let not the water-flood overflow me] See vers. 2.

Let me be pluckt out] Leave me not helpless, and hopeless.

Libera me Domine de profundo lacu, & non de profundo aquæ.

Vers. 16. Hear me, O Lord, for thy loving kindness is good] It is not like the Winter-Sun that lightens, but heateth not; it is like the Summer-Sun, that doth both

Vers.

Vers. 17. And hide not thy face from thy Servant] Who am devoted to thy fear, and do therefore implore and expect thy favour.

For I am in trouble] And so, a fit object of thy pity.

Vers. 18. Draw nigh unto my soul] Who seemest to be afarre off: so the flesh suggesteth when help is any while deferred.

Because of mine enemies] Who else will exceedingly insult.

Vers. 19. Thou hast known my reproach] That is enough for David, that God taketh Cognizance of the injuries and indignities cast upon him: for he will surely right him.

Vers. 20. Reproach hath broken mine heart, &c.] He knew his own innocency, and yet it much grieved him to be so defamed; for he knew that a good man should be as much as might be not only without fault, but without suspicion of a fault; as Augustus Cæsar was wont to say of his house. Howsoever it is happy that a true Christian hath always his cordial by him, 2 Cor. 1. 12. Our rejoycing is this, the testimony of our conscience, &c.

And I looked for some to take pity] Heb. To lament with me, or to shake the head over me, as Mourners use to do, to run to my comfort, and to condole with me. Davids friends failed him in this office also. But that was not all,

Vers. 21. They gave me also gall for my meat] Venenum vel scutam; and so shewed themselves miserable comforters.

And in my thirst they gave me vineger to drink] This befel David in Figure, but Christ in the Letter, Mat. 27. 34. It were happy if the Vineger given him, might melt our adamantine hearts into godly sorrow.

Vers. 22. Let their table become a snare before them] Let them eate their bane, and drink their poyson; whiles all their cates are sauced with the Wrath of God; Quoniam hoc modo curarunt me, saith Kimchi, because they have served me on this sort. By table, saith another Interpreter, we are to understand all means of comfort and refreshing, both of body and soul, which turn to the ruine of the wicked, even an odour of death unto death, 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16.

And that which should have been, &c.] Tremellius rendreth it, Pro retributionibus, laqueo pro tendicula ipsis, for recompenses, for a trap to them, Rom. 11. 9. Others, Pacifica in rete! Others again, Et ubi pacem sperant, illic impingant, Where they hope for peace, let them fall.

Vers. 23. Let their eyes be darkned] Let them be infatuated, and besotted, that they may go hoodwinkt to Hell.

And make their loyns continually to shake] Ne fugiant, saith R. Obadiah Gent, that they may not be able to fly, or otherwise to help themselves: for in the loyns and reins of a man lieth his strength, Deut. 33. 11. The Syriack hath it, Lumbi eorum sint curvi, viz. under their enemies burdens. See Rom. 11. 10. bow down their backs.

Vers. 24. Pour out thine indignation upon them] By Indignation, saith Bull, we are to understand speedy vengeance; by Wrath, durable. This is plain the Nation of the Jews to the utmost, 1 Thess. 2. or to the end, as some render it.

Vers. 25. Let their habitation be desolate] Heb. Their Palace, or Castle, so named of being fair, and high built, in row and order. It is here put not only for their Habitation, but for their Function. See Acts 1. 20.

And let none dwell in their Tents] Lege & lege, saith one, speaking of the ruine of Jerusalem by the Romans, under Titus, and again under Adrian, by whom all Judea was left almost unhabited, the Jews utterly banished, and forbidden upon pain of death to look toward their own Country, viz. this they durst do, not so be found in Jerusalem it self an hundred households of Jews. Behold the severity of God for the contempt of Christ, and his people.

Dio in Adrian. Dicerv. Enquir.

Vers. 26. For they persecute him whom thou hast smitten] Christ was smitten of God, and afflicted, Isa. 53. 4. Him they persecuted to the death, and abused, when he was at the greatest under, with bitter taunts, and sarcasmes; so the Pagans, and Papists dealt by the dying Martyrs, and so profane persons, and [illegible] Dogge that is worried: and as when a Deer is shot, the rest of the Herd [illegible] of their company: so here. Now if it could be said of Mithridates, that he [illegible]red ted such as maliciously persecuted vertue forsaken of Fortune: much more may we think doth God abhor such cruel Caitiffs he ate first spoken of. See Isa. 47. 6. Obad. 1. Zech. 1, 15.

And they talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded.] Never satisfied, they frame discourses to the grief of thy wounded ones, pouring into their wounds not Oyl, or Balsome, but vineger, or salt-water. Heb. They number, or sighs to the grief; that is, saith one, they study and devise new ways of torturing them, so that hee who would speak of them all, must keep a remembrance of their number.

Vers. 27. Adde iniquity unto their iniquity] Punish one sin with another (by giving them up to a reprobate sense, to an incureable hardness) and plague them soundly for their sin. The same Hebrew word signifieth both sin and punishment: these two are tied together with chains of Adamant.

And let them not come into thy righteousness] i. e. Hold them not righteous, nor bestow upon them thy crown of righteousness.

Vers. 28. Let them be blotted out, &c.] Wherein they were never indeed written among those living in Jerusalem, Isa. 4. 3. those first-born whose names are written in Heaven, Heb. 12. 23. but they accounted themselves of that number, and were so esteemed by others. This was a mistake, and the Psalmist prayeth God to make it appear so, Ne videantur in album coronæ vitæ quibus nulla vitæ donum destinasti.

Vers. 29. But I am poor and sorrowful] The Church is usually so, and may sing as here, Vaani gnani, &c. but her comfort is; 1 That Christ saith unto her, as Rev. 2. 9. I know thy sorrow and poverty (but that is nothing) Thou are rich. 2 That her poverty is not penal, but Medicinal; Gods dispensation to fit her for better riches: As a wise Physician purgeth a foul body till he bring it almost to skin and bone; But why? That having made it poor there may bee a spring of better bloud and spirits.

Vers. 30. I will praise the Name of God] i. e. Agnitionis Deum. I will thankfully agnize, and recognize Gods great goodness to me in this deliverance, with mine uttermost zeal and skill.

Vers. 31. This also shall please the Lord better, &c.] True thankfulness is optimum & optimum sacrificium, those calves of our lips. Hos. 14. 3. Heb. 12, 15. These Calves or Bullocks (as in the Text) must 1 Have horns and hoofs, bee young and tender, the very best of the best. 2 They must bee slain, our thanks must proceed from a mortified minde. 3 They must be sacrificed; where is required, 1 An Altar, our praises must be tendred in the mediation of Christ. 2. Fire, our hearts must be enflamed with zeal and ardency. 3. Our hands must be laid on the head of the Bullock, That is, we must in all humility confess our unworthiness, &c. This will surely please the Lord better than an Oxe, or Bullock that hath horns and hoofs.

Vers. 32. The humble shall see this and be glad] Davids great care was for others confirmation and comfort, much more Christs, witness that holy prayer of his, Joh. 17.

Your heart shall live] Which before was all-more. Pray that your joy. David did so often, Psal. 6. &c.

Vers. 33. For the Lord heareth the poor] He is the poor mans King, the wronged mans refuge. Trajan the Emperour is renowned for this, that when he was mounted for a battel, he alighted again to hear the complaint of a poor Woman that cried unto him for Justice; and our Edw. 6. for this, that he would appoint certain hours to sit with the Master of the Requests, only to dispatch the Causes of the poor. God is much more to be magnified. All Spare. Engl. Bliss.

Vers. 34. Let the heaven and earth praise him] As they do in their kind: and have good cause so to do for their restauration by Christ, Rom. 8. 21.

Vers. 35. For God will save Sion] i. e. The Church universal.

And will build the Cities] The particular Churches.

That they may dwell there] viz. The seed of his servants, vers. 36.

And the seed also of his servants shall inherit it] That is, their posterity after them shall be incorporated into the Church, and partake of all good things to all perpetuity.

PSAL.

A Psalm of David] Made, likely, or rather made use of from Psal. 40. 14, 15, &c. when Sheba the Son of Bichri was up in rebellion after Absolom death, 2 Sam. 20. 1. &c. See Psal. 69. title.

To bring to remembrance] Worthy to be remembred, and followed as a pattern of prayer. Some make this Psalm an Appendix to the former, as Psal. 43. is to Psal. 42. Others make it a part of the next Psalm; which is therefore, say they, without a title.

Vers. 1. Make haste, O God, to deliver me] As a Father runs without legges when his childe is hazarded.

Vers. 2. Let them be ashamed] See Psal. 40. 14. & 35. 26, 27.

Vers. 3. Let them be turned back for a reward] Vel sint pernicidia vel supplantationem, more Athletarum, a עקב, Let them be supplanted, defeated.

Thus say, Aha, aha] Augustine rendreth it, Euge, Euge, that is, Well done; and giveth this Note upon it, Plus persequitur lingua adulatoris quam manus interfectoris; The tongue of a Flatterer may mischief a man more than the hand of a Murtherer. The Apostle Heb. 11. 37. ranketh their tempting and flattering promises among their bloudy deeds, their tearing tongues, with their terrifying jaws.

Vers. 4. Let all those that seek thee, &c.] Piorum characteres, saith one, a godly man characterized, by his search after God, his joy in him, his love to him, his praises of him.

Let God be magnified] In illa quicquid ego sibi, non ego, saith Augustine.

Vers. 5. But I am poor and needy] See Psal. 69. 29. with the Note.

PSALM LXXI.

Vers. 1. In thee, O Lord, do I put my trust] See Psal. 31. 1. with the Note. It appeareth by vers. 9. & 18. that this Psalm was written by David in his old age, when Absolom, or Sheba was in rebellion against him, though haply for haste, and in that fright he could not superscribe it as he did the rest. The Greek title, viz. of David, A Psalm of the Sons of Jonadab, and of them that were first captived, hath no footing in the Original Hebrew.

Vers. 2. Deliver me in thy righteousness] Let my deliverance be the fruit of thy promise, and of my prayers: and to it will be much the sweeter.

Vers. 3. Thou hast given Commandement, &c. To thine Angels, and all other thy Creatures: or, thou hast commanded, that is, thou hast promised.

Vers. 4. Out of the hand of the unrighteous] That seeketh by fraud to undermine me, and by force to overturn me.

And cruel man] Qui totus in fermento jacet; foure as leaven, sharp as vinegar.

Vers. 5. For thou art my hope] Helpless I may seem, but hopeless I am not.

Vers. 6. By thee have I been holden up from the womb] As in the Womb I lived upon thee, so from the womb. The same that breeded us, feeded us, that nurtered us, nourisheth the Childe in the Womb, striking up into the breasts, and by a further concoction becoming white is made milk for us.

Thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels] Else I had never been born to live. That a childe is bound, Puer videns, saith Galen, Sed quomodo fiat, admirari desinit, postquam didicerit, ceaseth to admire it. Quae supra mirabilia, omnia mirabilia, the greatest wonder in the World. Surely, if a Childe were born but once in an hundred years space, we should all run to see so strange a work, saith another.

Vers. 7. I am as a wonder unto many] Or, unto the great ones, a Monster to the mighty, Quia credo quod vim videt, ut Augustinus gloseth, because I believe what I yet see not, viz. that this frail childe shall shine, even [and] be rolled in my Throne.

Vers. 8. Let my mouth be filled with thy praise] Minister unto me still fresh matter for my Psalm of work upon, the Church.

Vers.

Verſ. 9. Caſt me not off in the time of old age] For now I have moſt need of thee. The white Roſe is ſooneſt cankered, ſo is the white Head ſooneſt corrupted.

Sæpe nigrum cor eſt, capus album.

Satan maketh a prey of old Salomon, Aſa, Lot, others; whom when young, he could never ſo deceive. The Heathens therefore well warn us to look well to our old age, as that which cometh not alone, but is infeſted with many diſeaſes both of body and minde. This David knew, and therefore prayed, as here, Caſt me not off in the time of old age, forſake me not when my ſtrength faileth. He is a rare old man that can ſay with Caleb, Joſh. 14. 10, 11. Omnia ferè ætas, animum quoque.

Verſ. 10. For mine enemies] Who, rather than their lives, would bereave me of mine; theſe would double murther me, firſt by detraction, and then by deadly practice.

Verſ. 11. God hath forſaken him] For his late ſin againſt Uriah, and as may appear by his preſent diſtreſs, his forlorn proſcribed condition.

Verſ. 12. O God, be not far from me] The inſolency of his enemies ſets an edge upon his prayers; Oratio ſine malis eſt avis ſine alis. Our Saviour in his Agony, prayed the more earneſtly, Luk. 22. 44.

Verſ. 13. Let them be confounded and conſumed] Here he beginneth, Diris devovere, to devote his foes to deſtruction, who ſoon alſo found that theſe were not ignita fulmina, as the Popes Bulls are (wittily compared by one to a fools Dagger, rating and ſnapping without an edge) but that there was an energy in them, though haply not felt for preſent: and that they had better have angered all the Witches in the Country than occaſioned David thus to curſe them in the Name of the Lord.

Verſ. 14. But I will hope continually] I will lengthen out mine hope, as a line drawn out. Tremellius renders it, I am in expectation ſtill of compleating thy praiſe, and will go on therein, viz. when thou ſhalt have compleated my deliverance.

Verſ. 15. My mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy righteouſneſs and thy ſalvation] Lo here a ſweet and comfortable conjunction of Gods Righteouſneſs, and our Salvation. See 2 Theſſ. 1. 6, 7.

For I know not the numbers thereof] Or, Though I know not, &c. by a modeſt correction, ſith they may be celebrated, but not enumerated.

Littora quot conchas, quot amœna roſaria flores,
Quotve ſoporiferum grana papaver habet:
Sylvæ feræ quot alit, quot piſcibus unda natatur,
Et tenuem pennis aëra pulſat avis. Ovid.

So many, and ten thouſand times more are Gods loving kindneſſes. The Pſalmiſt elſewhere venteth himſelf by an Exclamation, Pſal. 31. 19. See the Note there.

Verſ. 16. I will go in the ſtrength of the Lord God] Ingrediar in potentias Domini, I will do what I can, with Gods help, in glorifying his Name, though I cannot do as I would, and as I ought: Narrabo tua inenarrabilia, and then intreat thoſe that hear me to think higher things of God than I am able to utter.

Even of thine only] For that is enough, and more than I can well do; I will not once mention (as profane perſons uſe to do) mine own Wiſdom, valour, &c. alas, they are not worthy to be named in the ſame day with thine.

Verſ. 17. O God, thou haſt taught me] Happy David in ſuch a School-maſter. All the faithful are taught of God; outwardly by his Word and Works, inwardly by his Spirit; Et quando Chriſtus magiſter quam cito diſcitur quod docetur? Noſcit tarda molimina Spiritus ſancti gratia. Aug. Ambroſ.

Verſ. 18. Now alſo when I am old and gray-headed] Now, that the Plumb-tree is full of bloomes, the map of age is figured in my fore-head, the calendar of death appeareth in the furrows of my face: let me do nothing to ſpot my white head. Let me with the Sun give greateſt glimpſe at the going down, and with the Roſe retain my fweetneſs, though I have loſt my colour. See verſ. 9.

And

And thy power to every one that is to come] Mirus ferver Davidis in celebranda bonitate Dei, ſaith Vatablus here. David would propagate Gods praiſe to all poſterity.

Verſ. 19. Thy righteouſneſs alſo, O God, is very high] Farre above the reach of human reaſon; yet for the ſtrengthening of my hope, I will look up after it, though mine eye ſhould be tired in the way.

Verſ. 20. Thou which haſt ſhewed me great and ſore troubles] Angustias magnas & malas, and haſt thereby taught me, verſ. 17, Quæ nocent, docent.

Shalt quicken me again] And this is one ſingular height of thy righteouſneſs, that thou carryeſt thy people thorough ſo many deaths, and cauſeſt them to aſcend from the loweſt ebbe of affliction, to the higheſt pitch of comfort. Stoicks aſcribe ſuch Occurrences to Fate, Epicures to Fortune, but David to God alone.

Verſ. 21. Thou ſhalt increaſe my greatneſs] Meam, id eſt Tuam, quam mihi dediſti, ſaith the Arabick gloſs here; My greatneſs, that is, thy greatneſs which thou haſt given me.

Verſ. 22. I will alſo praiſe thee with the Pſaltery] In Organo natali, with an inſtrument made like a bottle.

O thou holy one of Iſrael] Who ſanctifieſt thine throughout, and art to be ſanctified of thine throughout all eternity, Iſa. 5. 16.

Verſ. 23. And my ſoul which thou haſt redeemed] Heart and lips ſhall concur in this work. The voyce which is made in the mouth, is nothing ſo ſweet as that which cometh from the depth of the breaſt. The deeper and hollower the belly of the Lute, or Viol is, the pleaſanter is the ſound: the fleeter, the more grating and harſh in our ears.

Verſ. 24. My tongue alſo ſhall talk of thy righteouſneſs] Adviſedly talk, and upon due deliberation. What a mad Edict was that of Henry the ſecond of France, that men ſhould not talk at all of Scripture-matters? And that of the Jeſuites at Dola, forbidding any talk of God, either in good ſort, or in bad?

PSAL. LXXII.

A Pſalm for Salomon] Whom his Father David had crowned whilſt yet alive; and now, at point of death, leaveth him this his laſt bequeath as a Baſilicon-doron, a direction in point of Government, and a prediction of a moſt flouriſhing reign thereupon; This laſt he ſo deſcribeth, that by a ſpirit of Prophecy, attributing eternity thereunto, he riſeth up from Salomon to Chriſt, of whom hee was a type; like as alſo the Promiſe made to David concerning Salomon and Chriſt, was conceived in ſuch terms by God himſelf, as if they had been almoſt one and the ſame perſon, 2 Sam. 7. 13, 14. 1 Chron. 22. 10.

Beza.

Verſ. 1. Give the King thy Judgements, O God] i. e. Give me for that little time I have here to live, and reign, skill and will to do it aright, and as thy Law requireth.

And thy righteouſneſs unto the Kings Son] To Salomon, and his Succeſſors: for Davids great care was the welfare of Gods people after his deceaſe, for which end he both prayeth, and principleth his Son Salomon; and herein his great piety to the end appeareth. I could not but love the man (ſaid Theodoſius the Emperour concerning Ambroſe) who, as whiles he lived, he heartily wiſhed that the contentions that were in the Church might be quenched, though it were with his bloud, ſo when he dyed, he was more ſollicitous of the Churches welfare than of his own.

Verſ. 2. He ſhall judge thy people with righteouſneſs] ſc. If thou pleaſe to remember thy promiſe to me, and to anſwer this my prayer of faith founded thereupon.

And thy poor] Or, thine afflicted. The people (the poor afflicted eſpecially) are the Lords, and therefore not to bee tyrannized over, and trampled on by their Governours.

Verſ. 3. The mountains ſhall bring peace] i. e. They ſhall not be ſo peſtered and infeſted by Theeves and Robbers, who uſually harbour themſelves in hilly and hollow places.

By

In righteousness] By right administration of Justice, as it was kept in King Salomon's dayes, when undeserved [illegible] were not to be found for the good behaviour of good other; and he who [illegible] to the Throne of Government. The ancientest of these men were called by a peculiar title [illegible]

Vers. 4. He shall vindicate the cause] Indeed all are alike, without respect of persons in his sight; the meanest and the Outcast as well as a rich more. Under Christs Government shall be no beggars. I know thy poverty, but thou art rich, saith he, Rev. 2. 9. Amongst men both in point of Love, and in Law, Meum & tuum are words. Not so here.

And shall break in pieces the oppressor] The Speakers, saith the Greek; the Slanderer, saith the Latine; the Devil, by name. Over these He shall turn the wheel.

Vers. 5. They shall fear thee] Who but a dissembler, doth not fear a good King; such as maketh it his main care to set up God, where-ever he hath to do.

As long as the Sun and Moon endure] The Jews have generally professed, Messiah filii ejus non cessabunt in generationem & generationem, Messiah's sons shall not cease for ever. Their Sun shall hold on his course, and will never make a League with Error.

Vers. 6. He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass] That is, he shall bee [illegible] and sweet [illegible] to his People. [illegible]

As showers that water the earth] This is closely applied to Christ, who by raising [illegible] Vers. 7. In his days shall the righteous flourish] Ita Targum. [illegible] Gen. 18. 19. [illegible] of righteousness universally, and allowance for ever, Isa. 32. 17. Christs subjects [illegible] where in abomination, grace superabounds; a richer Covenant, more than God will [illegible]

Vers. 8. He shall have dominion also from Sea to Sea] Reaching South, from the Mediterranean Sea, which is the Western Sea, or Indian Ocean in the North.

And from the River unto the ends of the earth] i. e. From Euphrates unto the Northern Countries, to Angus, and the utmost parts of all Africa. This was a Type of Christs universal dominion throughout the whole World, Zech. 9. 9. Mic. 5. 4.

Vers. 9. They that dwell in the wilderness] Wild, barbarous, rude people; such as were the ancient Britans and Progenitors, till Christ the Sun of righteousness shone upon them, till they were brought to the obedience of faith; Tuus enim fortis eventus fortes, quibus contigit imperium, curasti subdere, &c. for thus it was otherwise. Bond in Hosea.

And his enemies shall lick the dust] A Ceremony usual in the Eastern Countries, Prosternere superbissimum, &c. saith Herodotus of the Persians; they worship their betters, by falling on the ground before them; and how Tyridates King of Parthia worshipped Nero, is to be read in Dio Cassius. Christs foes shall all bee made his footstools. Lib. 63.

Vers. 10. The Kings of Tarshish and of the Isles] i. e. All the Kings of the earth, which being compassed about the Ocean, as the Isles by the old Geographers called Insulæ, [illegible] part of the Continent, is called, as Isa. 11. 11. Isa. 66. 19. because separated from other Countries, with whom God would have his people to have [illegible] Vers. 11. All Kings shall fall down before him] i. e. [illegible] chap. 10. 25. perfectly [illegible] Law in Christ. [illegible] saith Kimchi.

Sunt verba scribæ, inquit Aben-Ezra, ex R. Jehudah.

PSAL. LXXIII.

A Psalm of Asaph] Who was not only an excellent Musician, but a Prophet also, an Orator, and a Poet; not unlike (for his stile) to Horace, or Persius. This, and the ten next Psalms, that bear this name in the front, consist of complaints for most part, and sad matters.

Vers. 1. Truly God is good to Israel] Or, Yet God is, &c. Thus the Psalmist beginneth abruptly after a sore Conflict; throwing off the Devil, and his fiery Darts, where-with his heart for a while had been wounded. It is best to break off temptations of corrupt and carnal reasonings, and to silence doubts and disputes, lest wee be foyled. Hee shoots (saith Greenham) with Saran in his own bow, who thinks by disputing and reasoning to put him off.

To such as are of a clean heart] Such as are Israelites indeed, and not Hypocrites and dissemblers. For as for such as turn aside unto their crooked wayes, the Lord shall lead them forth with the workers of iniquity (as malefactours are led forth to execution) but Peace shall be upon Israel, Psal. 125. 5. upon the Israel of God, Gal. 6. 16.

Vers. 2. But as for mee my feet were almost gone] i. e. I was wel-night brought to beleeve, that there was no divine providence: as the Athenians did, when their good General Nicias was worsted and slain in Sicily; as Pompey did, when having the better cause, he was overcome by Cæsar; as Brutus did (that last of the Romans as he was called for his courage) when beaten out of the field by Anthony, he cryed out Ω τλῆμον ἀρετη, Now I see that vertue is nothing, but all things are moderated by Fortun, whom he charged his children therefore to worship, as a goddesse of greatest power. Thucid.

My steps had wel-nigh slipt] Quasi nihil effusi sunt gressus mei, that is, as Kimchi interpreteth it, Status meus erat tantillus quasi nullus esset pro figendo pede locus, I had scarce any fastening for my feet, my heels were gone almost. What wonder then that Heathens have been stounded and staggered?

Cum rapiunt mala fata bonos (ignoscite fasso)
Sollicitor nullos esse putare Deos.

Saith Ovid. And to the same purpose another Poet.

Marmoreo Licinus tumulo jacet, & Cato parvo,
Pompeius nullo; quis putet esse Deos?

Vers. 3. For I was envious at the foolish] Heb. At the Braggadochios, the vain-glorious, the mad-boasters; I emulated, and stomached their prosperity, compared with mine own far-worse condition. Godly men though cured of their spirituall phrenzy, yet play oft many mad tricks; one while fretting at the prosperity of their adversaries, and another while murmuring at their own afflictions, or plotting courses how to conform themselves to the World, &c. Jactabundos

When I saw the prosperity of the Wicked] This hath ever been a pearl in the eyes, not of the Heathens only, but of better men. See Jer. 12. 1, 2. Habbak. 1. 3. Psal. 37. &c. Yet Seneca writeth a treatise of it, and sheweth the reasons, if at least he beleeved himself therein. Erasmus passeth this censure of him; Read him as a Pagan, and he writeth Christian-like; read him as a Christian, and he writeth Pagan-like.

Vers. 4. For there are no bands in their death] Or, No knots and knarles; they dye without long sickness, or much pain, or trouble of mind. If a man dye like a Lamb, and pass out of the World like a bird in a shel, he is certainly saved, think some. The wicked are here said to dye quietly, as if there were no loosening of the band that is betwixt soul and body. Julian the Apostate dyed with these words in his mouth; Vitam reposcenti natura tam quam debitor bonæ fidei reddituræ incolto, that is, I owe a death to Nature, and now that she calleth for it, as a faithfull debtour, I gladly pay it. The Princes of the Angles, when they were drawn forth to death by Alexander the great, cernere non formidarunt, triplicesque gradiens minas efferare asperum, They sang and danced to the place of execution. Ammian. Curt. lib. 7. & Diodor.

But their ſtrength is firm] They are lively and luſty, they are pingues & prævalidi, fat and fair-liking, fat is their fortitude, ſo ſome render it; Others, ſtrong is their parah or Palace.

Verſ. 5. They are not in trouble as other men] But live in a ſerene clime, under a perpetuall calm; as he did of whom it is ſtoried, that he never had any croſſe, but at laſt was nailed to a croſs, Polycrates I mean, King of Egypt. Marullus telleth us, that Ambroſe comming once to a great mans houſe, who boaſted that he had never ſuffered any adverſity, he haſted away thence, and ſaid he did ſo, ne unà cum homine perpetuis proſperitatibus uſo periret, leſt he ſhould periſh with the man, that had been ſo extraordinarily proſperous. And no ſooner was he and his company departed, but the earth opened and ſwallowed up that mans houſe, with all that were in it.

Marul. l. 5. c. 3.

Verſ. 6. Therefore pride compaſſeth them about as a chain] The pride of their hearts breaketh forth in their coſtly habits, whiles they are torquati, & auro ac gemmis amicti, ſetting up their plumes as Peacocks, which have their names in Hebrew from the joy they take in their fair feathers; ſo do theſe glory in their pride, and are puffed up with a fooliſh perſwaſion of their own prudence. Vermis divitiarum eſt ſuperbia. Charge the rich that they be not high-minded, 1 Tim. 6. 17. He is a great rich man, ſaith Auſtin, and greater than his riches, who doth not therefore think himſelf great, becauſe he is rich. Magna cognatio, ſaith Another, ut rei ſic nominis, divitiis & vitiis, He is a rare rich man that is not the worſe for his wealth. The Palm-tree, they ſay, will not grow in a fat ground, but ſalt and aſhes muſt, in that caſe, be caſt at the root, to qualify the ſtrength of the ſoil: So grace will not grow in a fat heart, without the ſalt of mortification, and aſhes of humiliation. Their heart is fat as greaſe, but I delight in thy law.

Pſal. 119. 70.

Violence covereth them as a garment] Violence, or wrong-dealing is the perpetual companion of pride, and covereth them as a garment, finely fitted to their bodies, as was the Harlots habit, Prov. 7. 10. Aben-Ezra rendreth it, obruit eos, Overwhelmeth them; that is, domineereth over them. Some Rabbines render it, Mates eorum violentia tegit.

Verſ. 7. Their eyes ſtand out with fatneſs] The Chaldee hath it, The ſimilitude of their face is changed through fatneſs. See Job 15. 27. The Greek, For the wealth which they have, their eyes are lifted up. The Latine, Their iniquity proceedeth as it were from fatneſs.

They have more than heart could wiſh] Heb. They paſs the thoughts of the heart; Which the Greek rendreth, No man can think how wicked they are, thoſe ſtall-fed Sodomites for inſtance. So Aben-Ezra, Tranſgreſſiones perpetrant quas cogitare nefas eſt, they are more wicked than can be imagined; Others, they covet beyond meaſure, and are inſatiable, thinking to incloſe the whole World in their net, as Timothy the Athenian did Cities and Towns in his toyles. Our tranſlation is not to be diſliked, neither yet are all to be accounted wicked, that have more than heart could wiſh. Bonus Deus Conſtantinum magnum tantis terrenis implevit muneribus, quanta optare nullus auderet, ſaith Auguſtine.

See Jer. 5. 28.

Plut. in Sylla.

De Civ. Dei l. 5. c. 25.

Verſ. 8. They are corrupt and ſpeak wickedly] Their pride before taxed, verſ. 6. budded, and budgeth, Ezek. 7. 10. like a foul ſwelling in the body, it breaketh out into ſores of all ſorts, odious words and deeds, abominable to God and man. Diffluunt & ſegnantur in mollitia rapinam. They melt and are ſpilt in ſenſuall delights and diſſolute practices. Or, they let looſe themſelves, and keep not within compaſs. Or, they fly blow and make to ſtink the good names of others, ſc. while they ſpeak evill of them, and reproach them. Tabifici ſum, ſo Tremellius rendreth it.

They ſpeak loftily] De ſe ſublimia, from aloft, loquuntur, they threaten thunderbolts, throw daggers, haſtas & voces omnes torquent.

Dionyſ. commiſſ. ſacrilegio Deum dicebat ſacrilegis benam navigationem concedere. Act. & Mon. fol. 1417. Turk. hiſt. 423. 568.

Verſ. 9. They ſet their mouth againſt the Heavens] They hold upward, as Wolves, bark at the Moon, as dogs grin againſt the Sun, belch out blaſphemies againſt God as did Pharaoh, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Dioclesian the tyrant, Antiochus Epiphanes, Rex Arabiæ, Pope Julius the third (for inſtance, who would have his geek-meat (ſo he called him in his Epigrams) at leaſt as Deo) The great Turk at the ſiege of Sigeth, and againſt the Queen of Hungary, Maria in Queen Elizabeths time, and the Rosieri in our

And

And their tongue walketh through the earth] Snapping at every one they meet, like a mad dog, and not sparing to speak, or rather to spue out, whatsoever lyeth uppermost. Then shalt not make up mill down as a slanderer, or Pedler with his pack, which he openeth ex foro, and disperseth his wares. Levit. 19. 16. That's a true saying of Seneca, Ut quisq; est dissolutissimæ vitæ, ita est solutissimæ linguæ. As any one is more dissolute in his life, so hee is more heedlesse of his speeches.

Vers. 10. Therefore his people return hither] i. e. Some good men are as wise (or rather as foolish) as I have been, to mis-censure on this manner, and so repent mee of my repentance, or to say, as vers. 11.

How doth God know, &c? because Waters of a full cup are wrung out unto them.] That is, because the wicked drink wine in bowls, their servants wringing the rich ripe grapes thereinto, as Gen. 40. 11. Or, because God sendeth them, (his people) perpetual and extreme afflictions, which is meant, say some, by drinking off a cup, and squeezing all the liquor into it. Others read it, Full Waters are wrung out to them, that is, say they, their thoughts and speeches savouring of infidelity, shall cost them abundance of tears; as Peters fall did him.

Vers. 11. And they say, how doth God know?] Even the godly through infirmity, are drawn sometimes to doubt of Gods providence and government, because of the inequality of events in human affairs. It had like to have cost the Psalmist here a fall, and made him almost cast off all care of Religion. Basil also was in some doubt of the divine providence, under the heat of the Arian persecution. For hath the Lord utterly forsaken his Churches, saith he? is it now the last hour? In the next age Salvian (for the satisfaction of some good people) was forced to write eight books, De gubernatione Dei, & de justa præsentis ejus Judicio, of Gods governing the World, and the righteousnes of his proceedings. Upon a like occasion Austin wrote those twenty two most excellent and elaborate books, De civitate Dei.

Vers. 12. Behold these are the ungodly] q. d. If God do take knowledge of things here below, and ordereth all events, how it is that the ungodly prosper, whilst better men suffer?

Who prosper in the World] An ill character, every thing considered. See Psal. 17. 14. with the Note. Behold these are the ungodly, the fortunate men of the World, to some render it. He that liveth in the height of the Worlds blandishments, is not far from destruction. Periculosa est summè bona corporis valetudo, saith Hippocrates. The height of health is neareſt to sickneſse and death.

They increase in riches] They wallow in wealth; God pouring honey into their hives; but for a vengeance.

Vers. 13. Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain] For all is to little purpose, if the cards play on this fashion, if the good must be thus extremely under, and the bad atop of the wheel. Surely I have troubled my self to no purpose or profit, If it be so, why am I thus? as she said. I read of a prophane souldier, who at the siege of a Town, passing a place of danger, was heard swearing, and when one that stood by warned him, saying, Fellow-souldier, do not swear, the bullets flye, he answered, They that swear come off as well as those that pray; But soon after this, a shot hit him, and down he fell. It is not safe for Saints to symbolize with sinners in such desperate speeches, lest the Lord hear it and be displeased.

Omne trahit sæcum manuinis ire malum. Ovid.

Vers. 14. For all the day long have I been plagued] Gods best beloved are most afflicted; neither have any out of hell ever suffered more than the heirs of heaven. See my treatise called Gods terrors.

And chastened every morning] Singulis matutinis, I am no sooner awake than some new misery seizeth mee, quasi egesset excubias, as if it had laid wait for mee.

Vers. 15. If I say I will speak thus] If I should give way to such a wicked thought, &c. Here the Spirit beginneth to get the upper hand, to gain the ground and the hill of the flesh. The Spirit would always get the house of the flesh, were it upon equal terms. But when the Flesh finds for the foil, as it were all temptations shall shall have wind to drive the smoak upon the face and eyes of the Combatant, that is, to blind him, upon such a disadvantage he may seem to be overcome.

Behold I shall offend against the generation, &c.] As if they were no children, because so sharply chastened; whereas the Saints are unto God as the apple of his eye, that little man in the eye, as the word signifieth. The eye is a tender part; yet when dim and dusky we apply sharp powders, or waters to it, to eat out the web, pearl or blindness, and yet love it never the lesse. No more doth God his Children, though he apply corrosives or caustick to their flesh, if need require.

Vers. 16. When I thought to know this, it was too painfull for me] Heb. It was labour in mine eyes, labour in vain, I could do no good on't, sed labyrinthis & Maeandris inextricabilibus implicabar, I did but tread a Maze, for God's Judgements are unsearchable, and his wayes (of providence) are past finding out, they are farre above the reach of human reason.

Vers. 17. Until I went into the Sanctuary of God] And there consulted with the Scriptures, heard the lectures of the law, prayed, went thorough all the exercises of Gods School.

Then understood I their end] To be such as God pronounceth of them in the Scriptures, and as the effect and common experience sometimes declareth. For some wicked God punisheth here, lest his providence, but not all, lest his patience and promise of Judgement should be called into question, saith Austin. In Psal. 36.

Vers. 18. Surely thou didst set them in slippery places] Where they can have no more certainty than if they went upon the smoothest Ice, or walked upon a mine of gun-powder. The Turks seeing so few of their Visiers to dye in their beds, have taken up this proverb, Hee that is even in the greatest office, is but a straine of glasse.

Thou castedst them down into destruction] Improbos ex magna prosperitate tanquam ex Tarpeia rupe in barathrum perditionis praecipitasti. Haman for instance.

Vers. 19. How are they brought into desolation, &c?] Such as the Psalmist expresseth by an exclamation, caused by an admiration at Gods dreadfull Judgements which his faith beheld as present and unavoidable, and such as astonied the beholders. See it in the literall and mysticall Babylon, Jer. 51. 37, 41, Rev. 18. 10, 17.

They are utterly consumed with terrours] Heb. They are ended, they are consumed with troublesome frights; especially when from their death-beds they behold that three-fold terrible spectacle, Death, Judgement, Hell, and all to be passed thorough by their poor souls.

Vers. 20. As a dream when one awaketh] Such is the wicked mans pomp and bravery, now what are dreams but pleasant follies and delusions, the empty bubbles of the mind, Children and tales of fancy, idle and fruitless notions, meer bawbles? See Isa. 29. 7, 8. The Fisher-man in Theocritus dreamt that he was some demy-god, but when he awaked, all his golden hopes vanished. The Chaldee explaineth it, As the dream of a drunken man, who sleeping on the steep of a rock may think himself a King, and starting for joy may soon break his neck at the bottom. Sic Mycillus apud Lucian.

So, O Lord, when thou awakest thou shalt despise their image] That is, that whereof they dreamt, and whereon they do still doat, viz. their worldly pomp and pride, which is nothing else but magnum nihil, a glorious phancy, a non-entity. Some read it thus, When thou shalt raise up (the dead) thou shalt despise their image, that is, their souls, they shall rise to everlasting shame and contempt, Dan. 12. 2.

Vers. 21. Thus my heart was grieved] Heb. Imbittered and soured, fo. with the greatnesse of godly sorrow, & quasi aceto asperfundebatur, it was steeped as it were in Vinegar. So Peter wept bitterly, waters of Marah flowed from his eyes.

And I was pricked in my reins] Pricked at heart, as those, Act. 2. put to as much pain as those that have the stone in the kidneyes, exceedingly grieved for my misconstruing and mis-censuring of Gods wayes and people.

Vers. 22. So foolish was I and ignorant] By this self-folding, and self-brassing him-self, hee retracteth and bewaileth his former fluctuation and folly, vers. 2, 3. This to the proper fruit of his godly fervour, verſ. 21.

I was as a beaſt before thee] Heb. Behemoth, as a great beaſt, or as many beaſts in one. Thus he aggravateth, and layeth load upon his ſin, and ſo muſt we.

Verſ. 23. Nevertheleſs, I am continually with thee] Oh, ſir, I was always with thee, &c. when at worſt. Infirmities diſcredit us not. The Marriage knot is not diſſolved by every falling out, nor the League between Friends broken by the wrongs done by Pirates.

Thou haſt holden me by my right hand] Thus I ſtood perpetually faſt from there, there was ſtill a ſupporting grace.

Quando non mens vacillabat, Aben-Ezra.

Verſ. 24. Thou ſhalt guide me with thy counſel] We had his repentance, verſ. 21, 22. his faith, 23. and here we have the hope of mercy here, and ſalvation hereafter.

And afterwards receive me] As thou doſt holy Henoch.

Verſ. 25. Whom have I in heaven but thee] I would I were in heaven with thee, ſaith Ambroſe. Even reaſon teacheth it: and ſo the ſame ſenſe, Quem habeo in cœlo, &c. and nihil volui ſuper terram quod non vel cum Domino verſetur.

Verſ. 26. My fleſh faileth, and my heart faileth] Some think that the Pſalmiſt, through egreſſion of affection unto God, having ſpent and exhaled his ſpirits, fell into a ſwooning, out of which he recovered again by the joy of the Lord, which was his ſtrength, even the rock of his heart. The Greek faith, The God of my heart.

Verſ. 27. For lo, they that are farre from thee ſhall periſh] How can they do otherwiſe, when as Salvation is farre from the wicked, Pſal. 119. 155. And upon this ground it is, that I ſo ſtrictly deſire to be with thee; ſaith

That I may declare (or that my tongue may confeſs,) all thoſe that go a whoring from thee] Having their hearts full of Idolatry, as appeareth by their cleaving the Creature.

Verſ. 28. But it is good for me to draw nigh to God] To hang ever upon thee, (in this general defection of others) by the faith of the Goſpel, Heb. 7. 19. by ſtirring my truſt in thee, that I may declare all thy works, and relate my experiences. A circle is the moſt perfect figure, becauſe it beginneth and endeth, the laſt grace-act in the ſaint is the firſt from whence it came. We ſhall never come to perfection or ſatisfaction, till we draw nigh to God, till God make the circle even, &c.

PSAL. LXXIV.

A Pſalm of Aſaph] Concerning the Babylonish Captivity, ſaith Kimchi, which Author was here miſled by Jerom, Aſaph, or inſcribed for another of that name, who lived at that very time, when the Jews groaned under thoſe grievous calamities.

Verſ. 1. O God, why haſt thou caſt us off for ever] The apoſtrophes of their grief and diſtreſſes of their miſery draw from them ſuch expreſſions of diſcontent, as if they were doubtful of their future deliverance.

Why doth thine anger ſmoke againſt the ſheep of thy paſture?] Danger is a fire, and in moſt of other Countries, a houſe is ſooner ſeen to ſmoke of than to flame. Where they are angry, they kindle fire.

Verſ. 2. Remember thy congregation] Thy Church, thy Spouſe, thy Dove, &c. Thus the Church is ſometimes called, as here, for the excellency of it, and the intereſt that God has in it, as in the Goſpel, John 3. 29. Rev. 21. 2. Pſal. 45. 13. as at other times, it is called by the Name of Jeruſalem, Sion, Jacob, Iſrael, Iſhurun, &c. from the Patriarchs, Princes, Prophets, Kings, Cities, &c. of the Old Teſtament, from whence it had its firſt riſe, and from which it is denominated, as to its Original, and Succeſſion, as to its Doctrine, Worſhip, Government, &c. and as to its Glory, and Beauty, in the New Teſtament, as to its Perfection, Purity, Liberty, Extenſion, &c. and as to its Conſummation, and Glory in Heaven, &c. The rod of thine inheritance]

Vers. 11. Why withdrawest thou thy hand?] Some by hand understand the left hand, and so both hands are withdrawn, yea held behind (retrorsum) after the manner of those that have little to do, and lesse to care for.

Out of thy bosom] Another posture to the same purpose. Prov. 19. 24. & 26. 15.

Vers. 12. For God is my King of old] He is the same, yesterday, to day, and for ever. I doubt not therefore but he will see to the safety of his loyall subjects.

Working salvation in the midst of the earth] i. e. Openly, and to the view of all. Jerusalem is in the midst of Judea, and Judea is in the midst of the earth; the very center and navel of the habitable world, say the Fathers; it joyneth those of the East to the West by the Midland-sea, and those of the North to the South by the same Sea, running out as farre as the lake of Maeus, very farre North, and by the red Sea descending very low into the South. This Country therefore God seemeth purposely to have espyed out, as himself speaketh, that thereby he might send abroad salvation into all parts. And hereabout, some gather from Joel 3. 2. Christ will sit to judge the world, at the last day, Psal. 50. 1, 2.

Vers. 13. Thou didst divide the Sea, &c.] Thou in this and the following verses is emphaticall and exclusive, q. d. Thou, and none but Thou.

Thou brakest the heads of the Dragons] Or, Crocodiles. So he calleth Pharaohs chiefains who were Satans servitours, and with him had their heads broke at the red Sea.

Vers. 14. Thou brakest the heads of Leviathan] i. e. Of Pharaoh himself. See Isa. 27. 1. & Ezek. 29. 3. Egypt is situate between two seas; and a great part of it overflowed by the River Nilus. Pharaoh therefore is fitly compared to the Master-fish, and his Captains to Crocodiles.

And gavest him to be meat to the people inhabiting the wilderness] i. e. To the birds and wild-beasts, who fed upon the dead carcasses of the Egyptians cast upon the shore, the Israelites having first taken the spoil of them, whereby they were provided of many necessaries for their voyage toward Canaan.

Vers. 15. Thou didst cleave the fountain and the flood] i. e. Fontium & torrentium scaebras & lacebras, thou didst set the rock abroach once and again, Exod. 17. 6. Numb. 20. 11. naturae legibus.

Thou driedst up mighty rivers] Jordan (wherein some say met two great Rivers, Jor and Dan) whereunto the Chaldee here addeth Arnon and Jabbok, whereof see Numb. 21. 14. Deut. 2. 37.

Vers. 16. The day is thine, the night also is thine] He had argued with God, and strengthened his own faith from Gods extraordinary works; and now he doth the like from his ordinary works in nature, with the alternal course thereof, wherein appeareth a kind of image of the seasonable driving away of calamities, and turning all things into a desired state, Psal. 30. 5. Lam. 3. 23.

Thou hast prepared the light and the Sun] i. e. That first light scattered abroad the heavens, but afterwards gathered into the Sun, as into a vessel. By light some understand here the Moon, that other great luminary; it being the manner of the Hebrews, omnia generis restringere ad speciem deteriorem.

Vers. 17. Thou hast set all the borders of the earth] Securing it from the overflowings of the Sea, and appointing to the several Nations the bounds of their habitations.

Thou hast made summer and winter] Plasmatis id. Now thou that hast done all this, and more for mankind in general, wilt thou be wanting to thy Church?

Vers. 18. Remember this] Forgetfulnesse befalleth not the Lord, nevertheless he giveth us leave to be his Remembrancers, and not to keep silence when he is concerned. Isa. 62. 6.

That the enemy] See vers. 10.

And that the foolish people have blasphemed thy Name] This irketh the Saints worse than their own particular sufferings. The Egyptians, out of their respect to their Mercurius Trismegistus, would not rashly pronounce his name; no more would the Grecians their god Jupiter, no not when they sware by him. Should not we be much more tender and respective of the holy and reverend name of our God, taking it ill when by any it is blasphemed?

Turtur minimus censetur ita columbarum genere, Aristo

Vers. 19. O deliver not the soul of thy Turtle-dove] Turturilla tua, that groaneth unto thee, being not more innocent, chaft, mild, simple and sociable, than weak, shiftlesse, and unable to defend her self from those beasts of prey. Pliny observeth, that no fowl is more preyed upon by Hawks, Kites, &c. than the Dove, yet are there still more Doves than Hawks or Kites for all that. So the Church increaseth, notwithstanding all persecutions.

Unto the multitude] Or, To the beast, the wild company. The same word is put here also immediately for the Congregation or lively flock of Christ.

Vers. 20. Have respect unto thy Covenant] That the Church knew to be her best plea; and therefore she so pleadeth it.

For the dark places of the earth are full of cruelty] That is, saith Kimchi, those places where men are in the darkness of ignorance, not knowing God, are full of ambition and tyranny. Others make this the sense. We can hide our selves no where, but the Persecutors ferret us out.

Vers. 21. O let not the Oppressed, &c.] Confusus non revertatur confusus, let him not take the repulse, be disappointed of his expected help from Heaven.

Vers. 22. Plead thine own cause] For if we miscarry, Thou art sure to suffer among the proud Chaldees, as an impotent God.

Remember how the foolish man, &c.] See vers. 18.

Vers. 23. The tumult of those that rise up against thee increaseth daily] Heb. ascendeth, viz. up to Heaven, as Jon. 1. 2. there is no hoe with them. Mundi laudis est impunita nequitia. If the Lord take them not a link lower, as we say, they will grow intolerably insolent.

PSAL. LXXV

TO the chief Musician Al-taschith] That is, Destroy not; The Chaldee paraphraseth, In the time when David said, Destroy not the people. The Psalm seemeth to have been made either by Asaph in Davids name, or by David himself (and by him committed to Asaph) at such time as the difference depending betwixt him and Isboseth, many were slain on both sides: This drew from David an Al-taschith, not long before he was anointed King over all Israel, 2 Sam. 5. 1, &c.

Vers. 1. Unto thee O God, do we give thanks] Heb. We celebrate thee, O God, we celebrate thee; viz. both for mercies and crosses sanctified, for these also are to be reckoned upon the score of Gods favours.

For that thy Name is near] Nomen, id est numen, Thy Name, that is, thy self are near, ad liberandum invocantem, as Aben-Ezra expoundeth it: to deliver those that call upon thee.

Vers. 2. When I shall receive the Congregation] i. e. The government of all the twelve Tribes, as I believe I shall do shortly, according to Gods promise to me by Samuel.

I will judge uprightly] That a man is in truth, that he is his own particular place and station; that he is really, that he is relatively.

Vers. 3. The earth, and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved] Both Church and Common-wealth here are utterly out of order; I shall indeavour mine utmost to set all to rights, and so to preserve the World from ruine, which subsisteth by and for the sake of Gods Israel. Absq; stationibus non staret mundus.

I bear up the pillars of it] Semen sanctum statumen terræ, Isa. 6. 13. The holy seed upholdeth the State, David did, (as Lucan saith of Cato) sic pondera fortior urget mundi. Jesus Christ much more; he is the true Atlas, upholding all things by the word of his power, Heb. 1. 3.

Vers. 4. I said unto the fools, deal not foolishly] Boast not your selves so proudly and petulantly, but submit to Gods decree, and my government, how much more to Christs?

Lift not up the horn] Metaphora à ruminantibus cornutis.

Vers. 5. Lift not up your horn on high] Against the High God; so Tremellius rendreth it.

Speak not with a stiff neck] Some render it with an old neck, let old things pass, and now speak with a new and humble throat. Hard words and stout speeches proceed from a mind vehemently moved out of its place (as the word here used, used, importeth) shall be one day dearly answered for. Jud. 15. 7.

Vers. 6. For Promotion cometh neither from the East] Dignitas & opulentia ex Oriente. Ambitionists use to look this way and that way how to advance themselves, but all in vain. Hebræus Monarcha Catholicus dicitur Augustinus Steuchus, Eutopia, saith One,

Nor from the South] Where the warm sunshine is.

Vers. 7. But God is the Judge] He sitteth at the stern, and ordereth all human affairs, according to the good pleasure of his will.

He putteth down one, and setteth up another] As was seen in Jews and Persians in the four great Monarchies, in Balaam and Tamerlan, besides many others. Vertue exalteth the meanest, when villany tumbleth down the mightiest. Agathocles the son of a Potter became King of Sicily. Valentinian the son of a Rope-maker became Emperour of Rome. Justinus was first a Swineherd, then an Herdsman, then a Carpenter, a Souldier, and after all, an Emperour. Alexander, to shew his greatnesse, advanced Abdolominus from a poor Gardiner to be King in Sidon. What cannot the Lord do? Tamerlan having overcome Bajazet, asked him whether ever he had given God thanks for making him so great an Emperour? who confessed ingenuously he never thought of it. To whom Tamerlan replyed, that it was no wonder so ungratefull a man should be made a spectacle of misery. For you, said he, being blind of one eye, and I lame of a leg, was there any worth in us, why God should set us over two great Empires of Turks and Tartars, to command many more worthy than our selves?

Vers. 8. For in the hand of the Lord there is a cup] A cup of affliction, whereof all must drink more or lesse. The Chaldee calleth it a cup of curse. Affliction is in it self a fruit of sin, and a peece of the curse.

Prov. 23. 31, 32.

And the wine is red] And so more powerfull, and peircing. That is an affliction, and grievous, that God maketh to be so.

Vitringa archidiaticus.

It is full of mixture] i.e. Ready prepared, as Prov. 23. 30. Rev. 14. 10. of mingled with spices to make the wine more hot and inebriating.

And he poureth out of the same] The Saints sip of the top only, they drink illud solum quod est suavius & limpidius, the sweeter and clearer part of Gods cup, excellently Mr. Bradford Martyr, in a certain letter of his. Drink, saith he, of Gods cup willingly, and at the first when it is fullest, peradventure if we linger, we drink at length of the dregs with the wicked, if at the beginning we drink not with Gods Children.

Act. & Mon. fol. 1487.

But the dregs thereof] The full vialls of divine vengeance.

All the wicked of the earth shall wring them out, and drink them] They shall drink them every drop, yea though it be eternity to the bottom. This shall be worse to them than was that ladle-full of scalding lead poured down the throat of a drunken man, by the command of a Turkish Bashaw.

Vers. 9. But I will declare for ever] viz. Gods great goodness in mine advancement to the Kingdome, and the rest of those wonderfull works.

I will sing praises, &c.] This thankfull man was worth his weight in the gold of Ophir.

Vers. 10. All the horns of the Wicked also will I cut off] By promising the due administration of vindictive and remunerative Justice, hee seeks to insinuate into the peoples affections, who, after Absolom's death, came in to make him King.

But the horns of the Righteous shall be exalted] Dignity shall wait upon desert, which shall cause it again to be waited upon by retinue. Thus it should be in the Courts of all Princes. In Cyrus his Court, though a man should look at it blindfold, he could not passe of a good man, saith Xenophon.

Cyropæd. l. 8.

PSALM LXXVI.

A Psalm or song of Asaph] Or for Asaph. Either made or penned by Asaph himself, or by some other Psalmist who committed it to Asaph to be played and sung. The Hebrews say it is made de bello Gogi & Magog, that is, the Barbarous Western Antichristian Army of Gog and Magog, that is to destroy the Church of God. Of Sennacherib and his host, saith Jerome.

In Hieronym.

is such as very well agreeth with that overthrow. Conf. Psal. 48. 5. 6.

Vers. 1. In Judah is God known] Notus est, Latin Translation; Notior est, saith another Interpreter, i. e. Better known he is now than ever, not by his Word only, which is preached in Judah, but by his wondrous works; this especially of destroying the Assyrians at Lachish, in the Tribe of Judah.

His name is great in Israel] Greater now than ever: God having made himself a glorious name, Isa. 63. 14. Magnus sang of this slaughter of the Assyrians as Herodotus testifieth; so did all other Countries, doubtless.

Vers. 2. In Salem also is his Tabernacle] I. e. In Jerusalem, which was first called Salem, Gen. 14. 18. Heb. 7. 1. Secondly, Jebus, 1 Chron. 11. 4. Josh. 15. 8. 18. 28. Thirdly, Jerusalem, Josh. 15. 63. & 2 Sam. 5. 6. ex quali loco ædificato, urbs Mœnitissima; Salemum Temple (as Hesychius would have it, and hence likely came the appellation Hierusalem) but from that famous Jehovah Jireh, Gen. 22. 14. with 2. which Jireh being added to Salem maketh it Jerusalem, the vision of peace. Here God was pleased to pitch his Tabernacle, moveable, and mean, in respect of Gods greatness, 1 King. 8. 27.

And his dwelling place in Sion] Which therefore he will save and see to, as every man doth to the place of his habitation.

Vers. 3. There brake he the arrows of the bow] There? Where? Surely in Sion, in the holy Assemblies where the Saints were praying: there the Arrow, Shield, Spear, &c. were broken. This made the Queen Mother of Scotland say, that she more feared the prayers of John Knox, than an Army of thirty thousand fighting Souldiers. The King of Sweden, as soon as he set foot in Germany fell down to Prayer, and what great things did he in a little time? Now for the sword of Prayer cryed those great Gallants at Edge-hil fight, and did great exploits. The word here rendred Arrows signifieth fiery Darts, see Eph. 6. 16. a burning coal, Job 5. 7. a light bolt, Psal. 78. 48. the Plague, or Carbuncle, Deut. 32. 24. Habak. 3. 5. Strabo saith, that Orites, Gymnetes, and Ethiopians shot fiery Arrows: so might the Assyrians. Conter Psal. 120. 4.

The shield, and the sword, and the battle] Both the Men, and the Munition. This Herodotus had heard of, but mis-relateth the History, vb. 2.

Vers. 4. Thou art more glorious and excellent] Or, more bright and magnificent. Glorious God was before, but now more glorious by this late deliverance; illuminating his people with his marvellous light.

Than the mountains of prey] Those vast Hosts of Assyrians lying now upon the Mountains round about Jerusalem, and plundering the Country at their pleasure. Thou Lord art farre more illustrious and admirable than all those Grassatores populi, & reges qui insultant Deo; those Robbers and Rovers of Lands and Kingdoms, Cæsar 4. 8. the Kingdoms of this World, enemies to the Church.

Vers. 5. The stout-hearted are spoiled] Heb. have yielded themselves up for a prey: those that escaped the stroke of the Angel, fled as fast as they could for their lives, leaving all behind them. The Rabbines expound it, they are spoyled of their understandings, amazed.

They have slept their sleep] Their long Iron-sleep (as the Poets call it) of Death. The destroying Angel hath laid them full enough, and safe enough.

And none of the men of might have found their hands] Viri Divitiarum, the vulgar rendreth it, Men of riches, but not of might & power: their main of their hands could not make their hands, when God's Angel took away their breath.

Vers. 6. At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob] I. e. With thy mighty word of Command, and without any more ado. God can find meet to destroy his Psal. 68. 20. and throw them into Hel, Job 4. 9. rebuke them to death, as here: do it with as much ease as he that sweareth stretcheth forth his hand to heaven, Isa. 65. 12.

The Chariot and the Horse] The Chieftains of the Army, is Gods Wrath revealed plainly and powerfully, Rom. 1. 18. and therefore he oft appeareth for his people, as out of an ambush.

The earth feared] All was hush, as when Thunder claps.

Vers. 9. When God arose to judgment] Being stirred upon it with, by the prayers of his people, as vers. 2, 3.

To save all the meek of the earth] Who cease not to seek the Lord, to find righteousness and judgement, Zeph. 2. 3.

Vers. 10. Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee] As when Semacherib the enemy was destroyed, the Israelites sang praise, yea the Egyptians built Altars to Isis, &c. God by his wisdom ordereth, and draweth the blinde and brute motions of the worst Creatures unto his own honour; as the Hunts-man doth the rage of the Dogges to his pleasure, or the Mariner the blowing of the Winds to his voyage; or the Artist the heat of the fire to his Work; or the Physician the blood-thirstinesse of the Leech to a Cure, saith a Reverend man.

The remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain] Heb. Thou girdest, that is, curbest and keepest within compass. The Greek hath it, It shall keep holy days to thee, that is, cease from working, or acting outwardly, how restless soever it be within. ἑορτάζειν σοὶ

Vers. 11. Vow and pay to the Lord] A plain precept, and yet Tertullian saith, Vovere nefarium est praeceptum. As for vowing to Saints, he granteth, that when the Scriptures were written, the Church had no such custom. Saint-worship then is but new worship. Lib. 2. de Monarch. cap. 17 De cult. Sanctor. cap. 9.

Let all that be round about him] All the neighbouring Nations; and so they did, after Ashurs overthrow, 2 Chron. 32. 21, 23.

To him that ought to be feared] Heb. To fear, that is, to God the proper object of fear, called therefore Fear, by an appellative property.

Vers. 12. He shall cut off the spirit of Princes] Vindemiabit, he shall slip them off as one would do a bunch of Grapes, or a Flower between ones fingers: easily, suddenly, as he deals by Sennacherib's Princes. Auferet de vita, ut de vitibus uvas.

He is terrible to Kings] Enemies to his Church, as most Kings are.

PSAL. LXXVII.

A Psalm of Asaph] Or, for Asaph, Davids melancholy Psalm some call it; made by him when he was in grievous affliction and desertion. Out of which he seeketh to wind by earnest Prayer, by deep Meditation upon Gods former favours, and unchangeable nature; and lastly, by calling to minde Gods wondrous works of old, both in proving, and in preserving his Church and chosen.

Vers. 1. I cried unto God with my voice, &c.] I prayed instantly and constantly, and sped accordingly. No faithful prayer is ineffectual.

Vers. 2. In the day of my trouble] The time of affliction is the time of supplication, Psal. 50. 15.

My sore ran in the night] Heb. My hand was poured out; that is, shredded out in prayer; or was with continual weeping. Non fuit remissa, nec remisit se lubens.

And ceased not] Or, was not staid; in allusion, belike to Moses his hands held up against Amalek; though

My soul refused to be comforted] I prayed on, though I had little heart to do it, (as David afterwards did in the Kings work, though he were sick) or though with much infirmity, whilst I rather wrangled with God, by cavilling objections, than wrestled with him, as I ought to have done, by importune prayer.

Vers. 3. I remembered God, and was troubled] Tumultuor, I stormed, perplexed how I should get God restored to be mercy, and to cast out my prayers; this made me mourn, and little less than murmur.

My spirit was overwhelmed] With fears of Sin, and fear of Wrath. This was a very grievous and dangerous temptation, such as we must pray not to be led into, or at least not to be left under, lest we utterly despair.

Vers. 4. Thou holdest mine eyes waking] The

Thou

That I cannot speak.] Curta locutio lamentantis, & ejus qui stupet.

Vers. 5. I have considered the days of old] What thou didst for Adam, Abraham, Israel, in Ægypt, &c. all which was written purposely, that we through patience, and comfort of the Scriptures, might have hope. See Deut. 32. 7.

Vers. 6. I call to remembrance my Song in the night] i. e. My former feelings and experiences, being glad in this scarcity of comfort, to live upon the old store, as Bees do in winter.

I communie with mine own heart] Psal. 4. 4. see there.

And my spirit made diligent search] For the cause, and cure of my present distempers.

Vers. 7. Will the Lord cast off for ever?] No, not at all, though the extremity and length of the Psalmists grief put him upon these sad interrogatories, with some diffidence, touching the Nature, and Promise of God.

Will he be favourable no more?] So the Devil, and carnal reason would have perswaded him; and did haply for a time. But this very questioning the matter sheweth, he yet lay languishing at Hope Hospital, waiting for comfort. The Soul may successively doubt and yet believe.

Vers. 8. Is his mercy clean gone for ever?] They that go down into the pit (of Despair) cannot hope for Gods truth, Isa. 38. 18. but so doth not any Saint in his deepest desertions.

Doth his promise fail for evermore?] Hath he retracted his Promises, recalled his Oracles confirmed with Oath, Seal? No, he will not suffer his faithfulness to fail, nor alter the thing that is gone out of his mouth, Psal. 89. 33.

Vers. 9. Hath God forgotten to be gracious?] So it seemeth sometimes to those that are long afflicted, and short-spirited. But what saith the Prophet? Can a Woman forget her sucking childe, that she should not have compassion on the Son of her Womb, yea they may forget (they may prove unnatural, and grow out of kind, as Medea, and those Suevian women, who threw their young Children at the Romanes (under the conduct of Drusus Son in Law to Augustus) instead of Darts) yet God will not forget his people, Isa. 49. 15. Indeed he can as soon forget himself, and change his nature.

Hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies?] These things the Psalmist speaketh not as utterly despairing, but as one courageously wrastling against an old Man-slayer, and a misgiving heart of his own. Homines vero securi, & voluptatibus ebrii, nihil horum intelligunt. This is little understood by profane Sensualists, who therefore reap no great benefit by the reading of these Psalms.

Vers. 10. And I said, this is my infirmity] My frailty, and folly. Here he begins to recollect, and recall himself, as every good soul will, after its extravagancies and out-bursts. Vatablus rendreth it, Mors mea est, This is my death; Beza, Cædes mea hæc, This is my Deaths-wound, sc. whereof I should surely dye, were it not for the change of Gods hand upon me.

But I will remember, &c.] This is supplied out of the following verse. Some make no such supply, but render the text thus, The right hand of the most High can change these things. Others, This is the change of the right hand of the most High, and is therefore to be taken patiently; Shall we receive good at Gods hands, and not evil, Job 2. 10? I am not utterly deserted, but only the case is a little altered, the right hand of the most High alternated.

I will remember the works, &c.] Remember, and, commemorate, as the Hebrew (by a double reading) importeth.

I will remember thy Wonders] God is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working, Isa. 28. fult. and as we behold the Sun in the waters, so God in his works. See Lavater Theatrum, the World is a glass or theatre, but specially the Church, wherein God setteth forth his wonders to the view of all.

Vers. 11. And meditate upon all of all thy works, &c.] See the Note on Psal. 63. 3d or 4th verse from the end.

Vers. 13. Thy way O God is in the Sanctuary] There is no true, lasting satisfaction about the providences, Psal. 73. 17. There [illegible] shall thou [illegible] and all the matter, and holy skill [illegible] Consider this text, Thy way O God is [illegible] ven-

vers. 19. Thy way is in Heaven, farre above mans reach.] Who is so great a God as our God?] And therefore no wonder his wayes are so incomprehensible.

Vers. 14. Thou art the God that doest wonders] In the daily defence and government of thy Church. Thou art the great Thaumaturgus, or wonder-worker.

Thou hast declared thy strength among the peoples] As among the Egyptians, Canaanites, Philistines, &c. Vere magnus est Deus Christianorum, said one Calocerius, an Heathen.

Vers. 15. Thou hast with thine arm redeemed thy people] viz. Out of the bondage of Egypt, that memorable mercy; but nothing to that of ours and theirs from sins thraldome.

The sons of Jacob, and Joseph] Joseph is instanced, quia nobilis inter fratres, vel in malis quæ pendit, vel in bonis quæ rependit, as Austin hath it. De Doct. Christ. lib. 4. c. 7.

Vers. 16. The waters saw thee, O God — they were afraid] This is check to such as will not see to fear so mighty a God. Lord, saith the Prophet, when thy hand is lifted up they will not see; but they shall see and be ashamed for their envy at the people, yea the fire of thine enemies shall devour them, Isa. 26. 11.

Vers. 17. The clouds poured out water, the skies, &c.] Calvin taketh this to be a description of that hideous tempest, Exod. 9. the seventh Plague of Egypt. But others with more probability hold, that the Prophet here hath respect to that very time mentioned in the former verse, when the Lord looked unto the hoast of the Egyptians out of the fiery and cloudy pillar, and so troubled and turmoiled them with stormy tempests, that their Charret wheels fell off, and themselves sank as lead in the mighty waters, Exod. 14. 24, 25. & 15. 10. Of these terrible tempests mention is made also by Justin.

Vers. 18. The voice of thy thunder was in the Heaven] Heb. In the Sphere or round-orb of the air. Of the thunder in the air, see Job 37. 2 — 5. Psal. 29. This made the Egyptians say, Let us fly, for God fighteth for Israel against us.

The lightenings lightened the world] Such flakes of fire there were with flashes of lightening, as darkened the Sun, and made the whole Heavens seem to be on a light fire.

Vers. 19. Thy way is in the Sea, &c.] A way of thine own miraculous making. God usually goeth a way by himself.

And thy footsteps are not known] Not so much as is the way of an Eagle in the air, the way of a Serpent upon a rock, or the way of a ship in the midst of the Sea, Prov. 30. 19. Let God alone with his own work, commit we our selves to him in well-doing, and it shall go well with us, no question of it. Pii viam desperatæ salutis, impii foveam insperatæ mortis intrant. Oros.

Vers. 20. Thou leddest thy people like a flock] And so he still leadeth his Church with much love and care, by good Magistrates and Ministers, who are as his undershepheards.

PSAL. LXXVIII.

Maschil of Asaph] Ode didascalica Asaphi. The six first verses are proœmial, wooing attention from the dignity, difficulty, antiquity, certainty, &c. of the matter in this Psalm discoursed on, containing an abstract of the whole Pentateuch, and acquainting us with the ancient way of preaching, which was an historicall narration of the miraculous mercies that God had from time to time conferred upon his people, their hatefull abuse of his benefits, and their punishments thereupon. This is to be seen in sundry Psalmes, in St. Stephens Sermon, Act. 7. and St. Pauls, Act. 13. & est sane valde venerandum istud tam antiquitatis monumentum. This is a very venerable monument of holy antiquity, and teacheth us the right use of history, quæ dicta est παρὰ τὸ ἱστάναι τὸν βίον saith Plato.

Vers. 1. Give ear O my people to my Law] i. e. To my Doctrin, which hath its name in Hebrew from darting it into the soul; and these are the Psalmists words in Gods name, calling for utmost attention.

Incline your ears, &c.] Lay them close to my lips, that no parcel of this sacred language fall to the ground by your default. ἐνωτίζεσθαι, auribus haurire, Receive ceive it into your ears, yea draw up the ears of your mind to the ears of your bodies, that one ſound may pierce both, Act. 2. 14. Iſa. 55. 3. Hear and give ear, be not proud, for the Lord hath ſpoken it, Jer. 13. 15.

Verſ. 2. I will open my mouth in a parable] I will ſpeak freely and plainly (I will open my mouth, Mat. 5. 2. Act. 10. 34.) and yet acutely and accurately. See Pſal. 49. 4. with the Note.

I will utter dark ſayings of old] Heb. I will mel-out (as from a ſpring or fountain) dark or ſharp ſayings, tranſacted and recorded of old, but of good uſe for ever. Difficulty doth not diſcourage, but rather whet on heroick ſpirits to a more diligent inquiry. Aben-Ezra noteth here, that verſe 9. The children of Ephraim, &c. is a parable, and verſe 25. Man did eat Angels food, is a riddle, or dark ſaying.

Verſ. 3. Which we have heard and known] Hearing and ſeeing are the two learned ſenſes, whereby knowledge, yea life, entreth into the ſoul, Prov. 2. 2, 10. Iſa. 55. 3.

And our Fathers have told us] Have delivered down to us from hand to hand, whetting upon us the written word, Deut. 6. 7. and adding thereunto, for explication, many other things fit to be known.

Verſ. 4. We will not hide them from their children] The manifeſtation of the ſpirit is given to every man to profit withall, 1 Cor. 12. 7. neither is any one born, (much leſs born again) for himſelf; but muſt be as uſefull as may be in his Generation.

Hor. Pastum ſepulta diſtat in pertia
Celata virtus.

The praiſes of the Lord] The praiſe-worthy acts of God for his people, and againſt their enemies, for theſe two are not ſundred, Phil. 1. 28.

Verſ. 5. For he eſtabliſhed a teſtimony in Jacob, &c.] Leſt any ſhould attribute too much to ancient traditions, and to ſhew that Antiquity muſt have no more authority than what it can maintain; the Pſalmiſt here (as afterwards the Prophet Eſay) calleth them, to the Law, and to the Teſtimonies; for if any ſpeak not according to this word, it is becauſe there is no light in them, Iſa. 8. 26.

Verſ. 6. Who ſhall ariſe and declare them] i. e. Succeed their Parents both in their place and office of teaching their poſterity; not ſuffering the truth which is after godlineſs, (Tit. 1. 1.) to fall and fall in the ſtreets, Iſa. 59. 14, 15. or if it do, raiſing it up again, and reſtoring it to their utmoſt.

Verſ. 7. That they might ſet their hope in God] Summa legis divinæ & ſcopus, this is a brief of the Bible, viz. to beleeve in God and obey his law; both which men ſhall the better do, if they forget not his works.

Verſ. 8. And might not be as their Fathers] Fathers are not alwaies to be followed, Ezek. 20. 18, 19. He zealouſly affected his Fathers, but not well, who ſaid, I will follow them ſicut bos armentum, etiamſi ruant, though I fall with them.

Cicero Epiſt.

A ſtubborn and rebellious Generation] Averſatrix & irritatrix.

A Generation that ſet not, &c.] Double-minded men, unſtable in all their wayes, Jam. 1. 8. having religionem ephemeram, as Beza ſaid of Baldwin, that Ecebolius the ſecond.

And whoſe ſpirit was not ſtedfaſt with God] As was that Martyrs who ſaid, Though you may pluck the heart out of my body, yet you ſhall never pluck the truth out of my heart. The Heavens ſhall ſooner fall, ſaid Another, than I will forſake the Truth I have once received.

Verſ. 9. The children of Ephraim being armed, &c.] This the Rabbines interpret of eight thouſand Ephraimites, who would needs break priſon, as it were, out of Egypt (before the time that God had ſet for their deliverance thence) and ſeize upon Paleſtina the promiſed Land: but with evill ſucceſſe, for they were ſlain by the men of Gath, to the great grief of their Father Ephraim, 1 Chron. 7. 21, 22, 23 and to the increaſe of their ſervitude in Egypt, Exod. 1. This is hiſteria Cabalica. See R. Solomon on thoſe words, Exod. 15. 14. the people ſhall hear and be afraid: ſorrow ſhall take hold on the inhabitants of Paleſtina, who remembring what a ſlaughter they once made of theſe Ephraimites, ſhall fear the juſt revenge of that cruelty. Others interpret this text by Judg. 1. 29. and ſome by 2 King. 17. with Hoſ.

Hoſ. 10. 6, 7, 8, &c. but this to mee ſeemeth likelieſt. Theſe are ancient things, and of ſuch the Pſalmiſt promiſeth to treat, verſ. 2, 3.

Being armed and carrying bowes] Truſting to their own ſtrength, and warlike preparations; and chuſing rather to be counted temerarious than timorous.

Turned back in the day of battel] Carnal confidence ſeldome comes home, otherwiſe than weeping.

Verſ. 10. They kept not the Covenant, &c.] And ſo betrayed themſelves into the hands of divine juſtice, they were worthily worſted. See 2 Chron. 15. 2.

And refuſed to walk in the law] They were ſet upon it, and would not be ruled by their Father Ephraim, or any other that counſelled them to the contrary; and haply ſaid the like to them that Archidamus did to his over-daring ſon, Aut viribus adde, aut animis adime, Either adde to thy forces, or abate of thy courage.

Verſ. 11. And forgat his works and his wonders] Forgetfulneſs is a grave; & ingrato quicquid donatur, deperditur, all is loſt that is conferred on an ungratefull perſon.

Verſ. 12. Marvellous things did he, &c.] Whereof they were eye-witneſſes; and therefore could not plead ignorance, or exciſe. The Hebrew hath it, a marvel, or a miracle, collectivè.

In the field of Zoan] Corruptly called afterward Tan and Tanis; a populous and principall City of Egypt even in Iſaiahs time, chap. 19. one hundred and eighty furlongs from Memphis, ſaith Joſephus; there Moſes wrought his miracles. Ptolom. Strabo.

Verſ. 13. He divided the Sea] Making it fordable for them, and fixing thoſe fluid waters, like ſtone walls on each hand of them, whiles they paſſed thorough with eaſe and ſafety. Every main affliction is our Red-ſea; which while it threats to ſwallow, preſerveth us.

Verſ. 14. In the day-time alſo he led them with a cloud] This cloud not only conducted them, but alſo compaſſed them in on every ſide, both to keep them from the parching heat of the Sun, and to ſave them from the ſight and violence of their enemies, Exod. 13. 21. A figure of Gods guidance of his Church, and protection over the ſame, Iſa. 4. 5. Neh. 9. 9.

Verſ. 15. Hee clave the rocks] And ſet them abroach, both that in Rephidim, Exod. 17. and the other in Cadeſh, Num. 20. Moſes Nehemides, on Exod. 17. ſaith, that the old Jew-doctors held that the Rock of Rephidim not only yeelded waters like a river all thoſe forty years wherein they were in the wilderneſs, but followed them alſo there whitherſoever they went. This agreeth well with that of the Apoſtle St. Paul, 1 Cor. 10. 4. who ſweetly allegorizeth this hiſtory.

As out of the great deeps] i. e. In great abundance. Rocks ſooner yeeld fire than water; but what cannot God do? Ad (quicquid) uſque.

Verſ. 16. He brought ſtreams alſo out of the Rock] Idem enuntiat per Epexegeſi, ad miraculi magnitudinem oſtendendam. The ſame again, to ſet forth the greatneſs of the miracle. This was a ſtanding miracle, as was alſo the pillar of cloud, the pillar of fire, and the Manna.

Verſ. 17. And they ſinned yet more againſt him] The better he was to them, the worſe were they toward him; as if God had hired them to be wicked; and this was ordinary with them, and is ſtill amongſt us. Oh the divine patience!

By provoking the moſt High in the wilderneſs] In terra aridâ ubi Deo indies indigebant, ibi peccabant, ſaith Aben-Ezra here. This was another aggravation of their ſin.

Verſ. 18. And they tempted God in their hearts] In their hearts firſt, but afterwards alſo with their lips. The Pſalmiſt here ſtriketh at the root of their wickedneſs.

By asking meat for their luſt] Not for their neceſſity (that had been more excuſable, Prov. 6. 30.) but to ſatisfie their inordinate appetite, to gratify their licoriſh palat.

Verſ. 19. Yea they ſpake againſt God] Their villanous and foul thoughts bluſtered and brake out at their lips.

Can God furniſh a table?] This was a blaſphemous queſtion. God can do more than he will; but whatſoever he will do, that ſhall be done, and nothing can hinder it. Lord, if thou wilt, thou canſt make mee clean, ſaid he in the Goſpel. And thus was better than that of the other, who ſaid, If thou canſt do any thing, help us, Mar. 9.

Verſ. 20. Behold he ſmote the Rock, &c.] And ſo ſhewed his power; we cannot deny it, but now for his will.

Can he give bread alſo, &c?] They ſhould have ſaid, will he ſerve our luſts? but that they were aſhamed to ſay.

Can he provide fleſh for his people?] i.e. Dainty and delicate fleſh, ſuch as is that of Quailes, meat for a King; for they carryed their cattle out of Egypt with them; and ſo they could not be without ordinary fleſh, too good for ſuch unthankful miſcreants.

Verſ. 21. Therefore the Lord heard this, and was wroth] Efferbuit, excanduit. Anger is a kind of fire, a boyling of the blood about the heart, thorough deſire of revenge. But fury is not in me, ſaith God, Iſa. 27. 4. If anger be aſcribed unto him, as here, it is an expreſſion fitted to our apprehenſion, becauſe he doeth that which angry men uſe to do, viz. chide, and ſmite for ſin; but all in a way of juſtice, and without the leaſt perturbation.

So a fire was kindled] It began to ſmoak and burn.

And anger alſo came up] Aſcended, i.e. Flamed, for anger beginneth at the heart, and then commeth up into the brain, face, noſtrils.

Verſ. 22. Becauſe they believed not in God] As faith is a radicall and complexive grace, ſo is unbeleef a radicall ſin, a teeming vice, Heb. 3. 12. a wel-ſpring of wickedneſs. Many ſins are bound up in it, as Cicero ſaith of Parricide.

And truſted not in his [ſalvation] i.e. In his ſaving promiſes.

Verſ. 23. Though he had commanded the clouds] Though he had ſerved them as never Prince was ſerved in his greateſt ſtate, yet all ſerved not turn.

And opened the doors of heaven] Rupturas nubium raining down upon them plenty of Manna, ſo that it was not hunger, but humour that ſet them a luſting.

Verſ. 24. And had rained down Manna upon them] Manna ſignifieth, what's this? whereunto in the Allegory anſwereth, This is my body. Or, according to others, it ſignifieth a prepared portion, prepared by God, ſo that they might preſently eat of it, though they might grinde, or pun, or bake, or boil it alſo, they might do any thing with it, as they might with meal; whence it is here called the corn of heaven, that is, a feed which was unto them in ſtead of corn.

Pan de nobles Hiſpan.

Verſ. 25. Man did eat Angels food] Heb. the bread of the mighty. (Angells are called mighties, Iſa. 10. 34. Rev. 18. 21.) ſuch delicate bread as might beſeem Angels to eat, if they did eat any at all; ſuch as the Poets faign to be their Nectar, and Ambroſia. Or, the bread of the mighty, ſc. that mightily ſtrengthened them.

He ſent them meat to the full] Heb. Meat taken in hunting; ſo called, becauſe dainty as venſon, or, quia ſemper ambulabant, & in via quaſi eam venabantur, ſc. Joſh. 1. 11.

Aben-Ezra.

Verſ. 26. He cauſed an Eaſt-wind to blow] Pergere, to go, to paſs away, and to give place to the South-wind.

And by his power he brought in the South-wind] That it might bring in the Quails. Now Pliny writeth, that Quails, though they love to flye with the wind becauſe of their heavy bodies and ſmall ſtrength, yet not with the Southwind, becauſe it is moiſt and ſo more heavy than the Northwind, which therefore they rather delight in. And if this be true, here's another miracle, ſaith an Expoſitour, that theſe Quailes were brought in by that wind, which when it bloweth, they commonly reſt and hide themſelves.

Lib. 10. c. 23.

Verſ. 27. He rained fleſh alſo upon them as duſt] Dapibus illos compluit. This he had done once afore for them. See Exod. 16. with Numb. 11. their unbeleef therefore and impatiency this ſecond time was the more hainous.

Verſ. 28. And he let it fall in the midſt of their camp] A dayes journey on each ſide, and about two cubits above the earth, Num. 11. 31. in ſuch abundance, that Moſes could not beleeve it were poſſible to be done, though all the fiſh in the Sea ſhould be gathered together, and turned into fleſh. Ib.

Verſ. 30. So they did eat and were filled] But better they had faſted. Many eat that breaketh, which they muſt digeſt in hell; theſe here were murthering morſels.

He gave them their own desire] They were heard, ad voluntatem, non ad utilitatem. Deus sæpe dat irato quod negat propitio. Gods gifts to a graceless man are giftless gifts; and he had better a great deal be without them.

Vers. 30. They were not estranged from their lust] Satiated they were, but not satisfied. It is as easie to quench the fire of Ætna, as the thoughts set on fire by lust.

Vers. 31. The wrath of God came upon them] Heb. Ascended, as a flame, which the bigger it groweth, the higher it getteth.

And slew the fattest of them] Those that had glutted and stuffed themselves like a wool-pack, being mitida & bene curata cute pingues, fat and fair-liking.

And smote down the chosen men of Israel] Or, The young men, who by a hasty Testament bequeathed that new name Kibroth hattaavah, that is, the graves of lust, to the place they lay buried in.

Vers. 32. For all this they sinned still] They utterly lost the fruit of their calamities; which godly men hold a very great loss.

And believed not] Neither mercies nor crosses duly affected them.

Vers. 33. Therefore their dayes did he consume in vanity] So that they never saw the promised land, for the which they came out of Egypt; but their carkasses fell in the wilderness. Who knoweth, saith a Reverend man, whether God purpose not to wear out this present Generation that hath been defiled with the superstition of the land, that we may not see the good that he will bring upon this Church?

And their years in trouble] Or, in terrour, for they were in continuall fear of Gods wrath, of their enemies round about; of wild beasts, fiery Serpents, &c.

Vers. 34. When he slew them, then they sought him] Fictis scilicet, quibusdam & fucatis pœnitentiæ motibus, with a few dissembled devotions. So many now, when deadly sick, will be wondrous good. Nuper me amici cujusdem languor admonuit, optimos esse nos dum infirmi sumus. As Iron is very soft and malleable whiles in the fire, but soon after returneth to its former hardness; so many, whilst afflicted seem very well affected, but afterwards soon shew what they are. William Rufus in a fit of sickness at Glocester vowed upon his recovery to see all vacancies in the Church furnished; which he did, but with so great adoo, as shewed that having escaped the danger, he would willingly have deceived the Saint, saith the Chronicler. In the sweating-sickness here in England, so long as the ferventness of the Plague lasted, there was crying, Peccavi, peccavi, the Ministers were sought for in every corner; You must come to my Lord, you must come to my Lady, &c. but this lasted with many little longer than the disease; so deceitfull is mans heart, and desperately wicked. Most men are nailed to the earth (saith One well) as Sisera was by Jael; and will not so much as lift up their eyes to Heaven, unless it be as Hogs do, who go nodling down; and rooting in the earth all their life, and never look upward, till being ready to be killed, they are laid flat upon their back and forced; so these, till wrastling with the pangs of death, they are fastened to their sick beds, &c.

Plin. Ep. 16. l. 7.

Dan. Hist. fol. 58.

And they returned] but they gave but the half-turn, they turned not even unto God with all their heart, as Joel 2. 12.

And enquired early after God] Heb. Manicabant sive aurorizabant Deum, aurora velut anticipata; they were up and at it by peep of day.

Vers. 35. And they remembred] Misery is the best art of memory. But this remembrance of God was but as letters written in the sand, or as a picture drawn on the Ice, that long continueth not; 'twas but a flash, and while they were in a good mood; 'twas but as Nebuchadnezzars dream, which he had soon forgotten. They remembred God, lingua non corde, with the tongue, but not with the heart, as Aben-Ezra here glosseth. They gave God a messe of fair words, calling him Rock, Redeemer, &c. but he is not to be so courted and complemented, Goats may be fed with leaves, but God is not mocked.

Vers. 36. Nevertheless they did flatter him with their mouth] They looked piteously, as the Fox caught in a gin doth, but it is only to get out; they spake God fair, as the Devil in the Gospel did our Saviour, but it was only to be rid of him. They worshiped him, as the Indians do the Devil, that he may do them no hurt. The Latine word Colo, to worship, is by some derived of the Greek word κολακεύειν to flatter, and the English word flatter, from the Greek λατρεύειν to worship.

worſhip. Sure it is that many mens devotion is meer diſſimulation.

And they lied unto him] ſc. While they called him Rock, Redeemer, and all was but from the teeth outward; which how much God abhorreth as a ludibrious devotion, ſee Jer. 3. 4, 5. And here is ſaid to be the middle of the Pſalter; for hitherto the Hebrews reckon one thouſand two hundred ſixty and three verſes; and as many they note to be yet left in the Second part.

Verſ. 37. For their heart was not right with him] It was ſtill the old heart, without any ſincere change; and that can never hold out the hardſhip of Holineſs, but will deviate and falſifie: The Rack may make it roar, the Rod flutter, but all is in Hypocriſie. An Hypocrite would couſen God of Heaven if he could tell how.

Neither were they ſtedfaſt,] See verſ. 8.

Verſ. 38. But he being full of compaſſion] Not ſtanding upon terms, not taking advantages; a ſin-pardoning God, whoſe Mercy rejoyceth againſt (or glorieth over) Judgement, Jam. 2. 13. it is of his mercy that we are not conſumed, Lam. 3. 22. if he ſhould deal with us in ſtrict juſtice, Et delicta noſtra ad calculos vocare, there were no abiding by it, Pſal. 130. & 143.

Yea many a time turned he his anger away] With patience and pity, he overcame their provocations, although they tempted him ten times, that is very often, Numb. 14. 20.

And did not ſtir up all his wrath] Heb. he multiplied to turn away his wrath, Strenue curavit ut cohiberet iram ſuam, he let fall ſome drops of his wrath, but would not ſhed the whole ſhower of it.

Verſ. 39. For he remembred that they were but fleſh] i. e. Frail and feeble, full of ſin and miſery, (See Gen. 6. 3.) altogether unable to grapple with Gods wrath.

A wind that paſſeth away, &c.] Et in ſuis reciprocationibus evaneſcens. For Winds neither return thither whence they blow, nor yet paſs from one coaſt to another, but are waſted in the middle of the World, by the force of the Sun, and by their own motion, as Ariſtotle concludeth in his Diſcourſe concerning Meteors. Now, what is man (ſaith Nazianzen) but ſoul and ſoyl, breath and body; a puffe of Wind the one, a pile of Duſt the other, no ſolidity in either?

Exclamatio pathetica.

Verſ. 40. How oft did they provoke him in the Wilderneſs?] Ten times at leaſt in the firſt two years, Num. 14. & 19. What then in all the reſt? Quis fando poſſit enarrare tot rebelliones. From the very day they came out of Ægypt, they were alway contending againſt the Lord, as Moſes telleth them, when he was taking his leave of them, Deut. 31.

And grieve him in the Deſart] Where they were at his mercy, and at his immediate finding.

Verſ. 41. Yea they turned back and tempted God] They did it afreſh, and after ſome reſolutions and ſhort-winded wiſhes of doing better.

And limited the holy one] Deſignarunt, they preſcribed to him, and ſet him his bounds which he muſt not paſs; as Popilius the Roman Embaſſadour drew a Circle round about King Antiochus, and bade him give anſwer ere he ſtirred out of it, for he would be put off no longer. Now God is limited, when as either his power is queſtioned, as verſ. 20. or his will circumſcribed, as if he were bound to ſerve mens luſts, or means appointed him whereby hee muſt work, and not otherwiſe.

Verſ. 42. They remembred not his hand] Forgetfulneſs is the root of rebellion and of all vice, as the Geneviſts well note here. Eaten bread is ſoon forgotten, Nihil citius ſeneſcit quam gratia. Seneca.

Nor the day when he delivered them] viz. From Pharaoh, but ſo ſoon as they had ſucked the Honey, they deſpiſed the flower.

Verſ. 43. How he had wrought his ſigns in Ægypt] That Stage of Wonders. See verſ. 12.

In the field of Zoan] A great City in Ægypt; whereof read Eſ. 19. 11. 13. & 30. 4. Ezek. 30. 14. Joſephus Antiq. lib. 1. cap. 9. See verſ. 12.

Verſ. 44. And had turned their rivers into blood, &c.] Seven of thoſe Ten Plagues of Ægypt are here inſtanced, to aggravate the forgetfulneſs and perfidy of the Iſraelites. Good-turns aggravate unkindneſſes, and our offences are increaſed by our obligations.

And

And their ſtands that they could not drink] Tiſq; valor ut aqua potabiles torum, aliorum ſtagnantium Ægyptum, deficerent. The Rabbines ſay (but who told them, I know not) that out of the ſame veſſel an Ægyptian drank bloud, and an Iſraelite water. Midras Tehilling.

Verſ. 45. He ſent divers ſorts of Flies amongſt them] Miſcellam muſcarum venenatarum, venemous Flies, and flying Serpents, whoſe poyſon and ſting did even corrupt the Land, Exod. 8. 24. The Greek rendreth it κυνομυῖαν, the Dog-fly.

Verſ. 46. He gave alſo their increaſe unto the Caterpiller] Together with the Graſhopper, Exod. 9. Gods great army, Joel 2.

And their labour] i. e. The fruits of the earth, which they had laboured for; they loſt both their Husbandry, and their Harveſt.

Verſ. 47. He deſtroyed their Vines with hail] Heb. He killed. Quia planta habet animam quæ et arum, ut Job 14. 8. ſaith Kimchi.

And their Sycamore trees with froſt] Or, with great hailſtones mingled with fire, running along, and catching, Exod. 9. 24. Confer Rev. 16. 21.

Verſ. 48. He gave up their Cattel alſo to the Hail] Moſes ſaith men alſo, who were brained and burned by it.

Verſ. 49. By ſending evil Angels amongſt them] i. e. Some meſſengers of his wrath and diſpleaſure, whether good or evil Angels it skills not.

Verſ. 50. He made a way to his anger] Heb. He weighed a path, recompenſing their unjuſt ſtifneſs with his juſt Judgements, and proceeding in his anger from lighter plagues to that heavieſt of all the reſt, the ſlaying of all the flower of Ægypt in one night, verſ. 51.

Verſ. 51. And ſmote all the firſt-born in Egypt] Certo peſtis genere perniciciſſimo & acutiſſimo. The Rabbins ſay, that in each houſe was a dead corps, viz. the Chieftain of the Family, whether there were a firſt-born in it or not, Exod. 12. 30.

In the Tabernacle of Ham] Who was the Father of Mizraim, the founder of the Ægyptians, Gen. 10. who vainly boaſted that they were αὐτόχθονες, as ancient as their Land. Herodotus the Author of that Story, tels us alſo of a certain great Town in Ægypt called Chemmim, from Cham likely. Her. lib. 2.

Verſ. 52. But made his own people to go forth like ſheep] i. e. Tuto & lente, ſoftly and ſafely, as Gen. 33. 13. tending them with all tenderneſs, and providing for their neceſſities.

Verſ. 53. And he led them on ſafely, ſo that they feared not] Or, if they did, it was without cauſe; Cur enim metuat bovinem homo in ſinu Dei poſitus.

Verſ. 54. And he brought them to the border of his Sanctuary] i. e. Of Judæa, which Country he had conſecrated to himſelf for the place and chief ſeat of religion: whence it is called, the holy Land. It had been a loathſome Land, Ezra 9. 11. filled with filthineſs from corner to corner, but now otherwiſe. How it was afterwards again polluted, ſee Iſa. 1. 21, 22, 23.

Even to this mountain] Moriah, whereon ſtood the Temple: or, to this mountainous Country of Judæa.

Which his right hand, &c.] See Pſal. 44. 3.

Verſ. 55. He caſt out the Heathen alſo before them] i. e. In their ſight, and for their ſake.

He divided them an inheritance by line] Not a material Line, but Mathematical, ſaith an Interpreter; whereby we may perceive that the way of making Maps was anciently in uſe among the Hebrews. Geneb.

And made the Tribes of Iſrael, &c.] Notwithſtanding all their former provocations. See that none render evil for evil to any man, but ever follow (by Gods example) that which is good, both amongſt your ſelves, and toward all men, 1 Theſ. 5. 15.

Verſ. 56. Yet they tempted and provoked, &c.] Neither Gods Judgements on their enemies, nor his Mercies to themſelves, could keep them within the bounds of obedience; but in a Land of uprightneſs they would deal unjuſtly, and not behold the Majeſty of the Lord, Iſa. 26. 10.

Verſ. 57. But turned back, &c.] They had a kind of willingneſs and velleity, a kinde of wambling, as one ſpeaketh, but it boyled not up to the full height of reſolution for God.

They were turned aside like a deceitful bow] Non ſemper ferit quodcunq; minabitur arcus, but a deceitful bow, that turneth back into belly, as we ſay, will be ſure to deceive the Archer, though he level his eye and his arrow never ſo directly to the Mark, and think with himſelf to hit it. Lo, ſuch a falſe rotten bow is mans deceitful heart; and hence the arrows of his purpoſes and promiſes vaniſh oft in the air as ſmoke.

Verſ. 58. For they provoked him to anger with their high places] After the manner of the Heathens; yet with a good intention as they called it; becauſe God is to be every where worſhiped. But this was againſt an expreſs law, Deut. 14. Exod. 20.

Verſ. 59. When God heard this] Sin cryeth aloud in Gods ears, though it be never ſo cloſely and cunningly carried.

And greatly abhorred Iſrael] As appeareth all along the book of Judges, whereof this verſe is a ſummary.

Verſ. 60. So that he forſook the Tabernacle of Shiloh] Whither it had been brought from Gilgal, and where it had reſted a long while, but was forſaken of God when once idoliſed, 1 Sam. 4.

The Tent which he placed amongſt men] Which was a very great condeſcenſion, Iſa. 66. 1. Confer Job. 1. 14. Pro. 8. 31.

Verſ. 61. And delivered his ſtrength . . his glory, &c.] i. e. His Ark which is elſewhere called the ſtrength of God, 1 Chron. 16. 11. 2 Chron. 6. 41. and the glory of God, Pſal. 26. 8. & 63. 3. becauſe out of it he was wont to declare his power and glory, and to make himſelf viſible after a ſort.

Verſ. 62. He gave his people alſo unto the ſword] ſc. Of the Philiſtines, who ſlew thirty thouſand of them in one battel, 1 Sam. 4. they loſt him and themſelves too; the Ark having been a far better defence to them than the Palladium to the Trojans.

Verſ. 63. The fire conſumed] The fire of warlike force, which quickly licketh up all, and layeth waſte.

And their Maidens were not given in marriage] Heb. Praiſed, as they wont to be at their weddings with nuptiall ſongs, and Epithalamia's, which the Hebrews call Hillulim, and the bride-chamber, Beth-hululah, the houſe of praiſe.

Verſ. 64. Their Prieſts fell by the ſword] Hophni and Phineas did, 1 Sam. 4. 11. both in one day, as had been foretold, 1 Sam. 2. 34.

And their Widdows made no lamentation] As being themſelves either kild with grief, as Phineas his wife, or carryed captive. Here were ingentia, beneficia, flagitia, ſupplicia.

Verſ. 65. The Lord awaked, as one out of ſleep] Humanitus dictum, the Philiſtines haply had ſuch bald conceits of him, that either hee ſlept; or if awake, that he was overcome with wine.

Verſ. 66. And he ſmote his enemies in the hinder parts] viz. With emrods, 1 Sam. 5. 6, 9, 12. infami podicis ignominia affecit illos, he puniſhed them, as we do puny-boyes on their poſteriours.

Verſ. 67. Moreover he refuſed, &c.] He would dwell no longer at Shiloh, which was in the Tribe of Ephraim.

Verſ. 68. But choſe the Tribe of Judah] He choſe it for his love, and then loved it for his choice. The word Tribe we borrow from the Romans, who at firſt divided the multitudes into three parts, called thereof Tribes. The Hebrew name ſignifieth a rod or ſceptor, and fitly agreeth to Judah.

Verſ. 69. Like high palaces] Not places, as ſome books abſurdly have it. Like the earth, There ſhall be a Church to the Worlds end.

Verſ. 70. He choſe David alſo] God chuſeth not as man doth, 1 Cor. 1. 26. yet Alexander the great advanced Abdolominus a poor Gardiner to be King in Sidon.

And took him from the ſheep-folds] The art of feeding cattle, and the art of ruling men are ſiſters, ſaith Baſil.

Verſ. 71. From following the Ewes] So Saul from ſeeking Aſſes, Agathocles from making pots, Valentinian ſuper, &c. Placilla called upon her husband Theodoſius the Emperour, to remember from what mean eſtate God had called him to the higheſt honours, ἐξ ἄλων, εἰς ἅλα.

Verſ. 72. So he fed them, &c.] See verſ. 70. He was not malus vir bonus fuit cæpit (as is ſaid of our Richard the third) but every way accompliſhed, and active for the good of his ſubjects.

A Pſalm] Of like ſubject, with Pſalm 74. bewayling the ſame calamity of the Jews, whether under Nebuchadnezzar or Antiochus is uncertain: but foreſeen by Aſaph, or deſcribed by ſome other Prophet, and committed to ſome of Aſaphs ſucceſſours to be ſung. Cantant juſti etiam in adverſis; as birds in the Spring tune moſt ſweetly, when it raineth moſt ſadly.

Verſ. 1. O God, the Heathen] Ex abrupto orditur: q. d. canſt thou endure it? Is it not high time for thee to ſet in? Lo they have filled the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel, Iſa. 8. 8. that is, O thou who art God with us, who giveſt with the Father, who prayeſt with the ſuitor, and who in all our afflictions art afflicted.

Verſ. 2. The dead bodies of thy Servants] Either they denyed them the honour of buriall (which is reckoned among the τὰ νομιζόμενα. the dues of the dead) or elſe they mangled their dead bodies, and exerciſed their rage upon them, as the Papiſts did upon Huſſe, and Zuinglius, and many of the Engliſh Martyrs. A barbarous practice, as Pauſanias judged it in Herodot. Calliope.

νεκρῶν λυμαίνεσθαι πρέπει μᾶλλον βαρβαροῖσιν, &c.

The fleſh of thy Saints, &c.] Of thy beneficiaries, whoſe ſouls are with thee in Heaven; theſe have not ſo much as a burying-place on earth, but lye like common carrion Morticina, like cattle that dye of the murrain, and are moſt ignominiouſly dealt withall: And yet theſe are Gods Saints, and in ſome ſenſe, Martyrs.

Verſ. 3. Their blood have they ſhed like water] They made no more reckoning of it, than of ditch-water; and were ready to ſay as Hannibal did when he ſaw a ditch full of mens blood, O formoſum ſpectaculum! O beautifull ſight!

Contemptim vel abjecte.

And there was none to bury them] Either none to bury them at all: which the Jews accounted worſe than death, Eccleſ. 6. and the Romans extreme cruelty: Or none to bury them, cum ritibus with the accuſtomed rites and ceremonies, as Jacob was buried, Gen. 50. but not Jeconiah, Jer. 22. 18.

Immanitatis eſt Scythicæ non ſepelire mortuos. Sen. ad Martiam.

Verſ. 4. We are become a reproach to our neighbours] To the Edomites, Philiſtines, Syrians, Tyrians, &c. who do now compoſe comedies out of our tragedies.

A ſcorn and derſion to them that are round about us] Quorum opprobriis, ludibriis, & contumeliis ſumus expoſiti. This was more grievous to them than ſtripes or wounds, ſaith Chryſoſtom; becauſe theſe being inflicted upon the body, are divided after a ſort betwixt ſoul and body; but ſcorns and reproaches do wound the ſoul only. Habet quendam aculeum contumelia, they leave a ſting behind them, as Cicero obſerveth.

Act. 5. in Verr.

Verſ. 5. How long wilt thou be angry, &c?] Or, How long? wilt thou be angry for ever? The Pſalmiſt knew that the enemies were but Gods executioners; and that if he were but once pacified, they ſhould ſoon be put out of office.

Shall thy jealouſy] viz. For our Idolatry, Exod. 20.

Verſ. 6. Pour out thy wrath, &c.] Even the full vials of it.

That have not known thee] More than by the book of the Creatures, wherein there is indeed a τὸ γνωστὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, ſomething of God manifeſted, Rom. 1. 19, 20. even his eternal power and God-head, rendring men without excuſe, but nothing of his goodneſs and patience leading them to repentance, chap. 2. 4.

That have not called upon thy Name] A note of prophaneneſs, Pſal. 14. 4.

Verſ. 7. For they have devoured Jacob] As Wolves, and other ravenous creatures do the ſimple ſheep.

ſaith the Arabick here, an ounce whereof is in all our ſufferings to this day, ſay the Jews. Alexander ſlew the Brambidæ, and utterly deſtroyed their City, becauſe their Fore-fathers had long before indeavoured to betray Greece into the hands of Xerxes.

Speedily prevent us] Leſt they come too late; for we are at laſt gaſp.

Verſ. 9. Help us -- for the glory of thy Name] A ſpeeding argument. God will do much for his own glory, his wife as it were.

Purge away our ſins] Which nothing can do, but tender mercy.

Verſ. 10. Where is their God?] See Pſal. 42. 3. So Turks at this day (when they have the better of Chriſtians) cry, where is the Chriſtians God? We are the right Muſalmans, &c.

By the revenging of the blood of thy Servants, &c.] For the which make thou inquiſition, and do juſtice.

Verſ. 11. Let the ſighing of the priſoner, &c.] It was lately in many places of this land a like difficult thing, to find a wicked man in the enemies priſons, or a godly man out of them. The ſighs of ſuch were ſhril in Gods ears.

Preſerve thou thoſe that are appointed to dye] Heb. The children of death, thoſe that being deſtined to deſtruction ſeem to be as much in deaths power, as children are in their Parents. The Arabick rendreth it, Redime filios occiſorum, Redeem the children of thoſe who are ſlain, leſt the name of their Parents be blotted out.

Verſ. 13. So wee thy people -- will give thee praiſe] A ſervice which the Saints know to be ſo acceptable to God, that they commonly promiſe it, and accordingly perform it, Hoſ. 14. 2. ingaging alſo their children, as here, to do the like.

Verſ. 1. Give ear, O Shepheard of Iſrael] Thou that feedeſt thy people, watcheſt over them, defendeſt, redeemeſt, reduceſt them; Thou that handleſt them, cureſt them, waſheſt them, driveſt them as they are able to go, carryeſt them in thy boſome, doeſt all the offices of a good Shepheard for them. In calling upon God, it is wiſdome to make choice of fit appellations and attributes, ſuch as may ſtrengthen our faith, and increaſe our fervour.

Thou that leadeſt Joſeph] Joſeph is named quia nobilis inter fratres, ſaith Auſtin, the firſt-birth-right was taken from Reuben, and given to Joſeph, 1 Chron. 5. hence he is put for the whole people.

Thou that dwelleſt between (or ſitteſt upon) the Cherubims] Thoſe winged creatures that covered the mercy-ſeat, the Ark, and the two Tables of the Law within it; And all, to ſet forth Chriſt covering the curſes of the Law, and graciouſly dwelling with the ſons of men, to the admiration of Angels.

Shine forth] Shew thy power in ſaving thy people, and puniſhing their enemies. Shine as the Sun doth in his ſtrength.

Verſ. 2. Before Ephraim Benjamin and Manaſſeh] Theſe three Tribes went next after the Ark, when it removed, Num 2. & 10.

Stir up thy ſtrength] Which ſeemeth at preſent to lye, dormant.

Verſ. 4. O Lord God of Hoſts] Jehova belliporens Deus. God hath his upper and nether forces, as his horſe and foot ready preſt, ſay the Rabbines.

How long wilt thou be angry?] Heb. Wilt thou ſmoak? As angry people ſeem to ſend out ſmoak at their noſtrils.

Againſt the prayer of thy people] This is a ſore affliction to the Saints, that their prayers ſeem to be ineffectuall.

Verſ. 5. Thou feedeſt them with the bread of tears] Panibus fletu intinctis. It is as ordinary with them to weep, as it is with men to eat and drink. Chald. Kimchi.

And giveſt them tears to drink in great meaſure] Trientales they are Tricongii in a ſenſe, to their ſorrow. They are afflicted even to utmoſt ſatiety. See Pſal. 42. 3. Holy Bradford oft mused at his meat, having his hat over his eyes, from whence came commonly plenty of tears dropping on his trencher. Act. & Mon. 1457.

Verſ. 6. Thou makeſt us a ſtrife unto our neighbours] We have as many enemies as neighbours, all ſtriving to enſlave us. We are cruſht betwixt them as corn is betwixt milſtones.

And our enemies laugh among themſelves] Make them merry in our miſery, revel in our ruines.

Verſ. 7. Turn us again O God of Hoaſts] See verſ. 3. and obſerve that there it was only, Turn us again, O God, here O God of Hoaſts, and verſe 19. O Lord God of Hoaſts. As the bird by much waving gathereth wind under the wing, and mounteth higher; ſo doth faith in prayer, vireſq; acquirit eundo.

Verſ. 8. Thou haſt brought a vine out of Egypt] The Church is oft ſet forth by this ſimilitude. The Rabbins ſay, that Solomon made a vine of gold in the Temple. Athenæus telleth us, that the Kings of Perſia ſat under a golden vine having bunches of ſmaragds and other ſtately ſtones. All this was nothing to Gods Vine that plant of renown, brought out of Egypt (where it got no good, Ezek. 20. 8) and ſet in a better ſoil. Lib. 12.

Verſ. 9. Thou preparedſt room for it] Eſpying out a fit place to plant it in, Ezek. 20. 6. and making clean work before it, as ſome render the words, by pulling up thoſe bad and barren weeds the Canaanites, that might have hindred its growth. Expurgaſti coram ea.

And didſt cauſe it to take deep root] viz. by thy digging, dreſſing, watering and mounding it; as of all poſſeſſions, none requireth greater care than that of Vineyards, ſaith Cato; and there is a peculiar affection in men toward the Vine above all trees, as another obſerveth.

Verſ. 10. The hills were covered, &c.] The Iſraelites grew amain in wealth, Power and multitude of men; witneſſe their huge armies, and valiant acts, though the Country was not above two hundred miles long, and fifty miles broad.

Verſ. 11. She ſent out her boughs unto the Sea] The midland Sea.

And her branches unto the river] Euphrates. This was firſt done in Davids dayes.

Verſ. 12. Why haſt thou then broken down her hedges?] i. e. Taken away thy mighty hand hitherto held over her. This befell not till they degenerated into a ſtrange Vine, Jer. 2. and brought forth wild grapes. Iſa. 5.

Verſ. 13. The Boar out of the Wood] All Swine (but wild ones eſpecially) are vitibus inimici, ſaith Theodoret, deſtructions to Vines. And Melanchon thinks that therefore God forbad the Jews to eat Swines fleſh. Eo quod ſues omnia ſurſum deorſum vertant vaſtentq;, becauſe they turn up all, rooting things up by the roots, as the word here ſignifieth. Auſtin underſtands it of Veſpaſian, others of Antiochus, or Antichriſt. Man. Loc. com. Exvineavit. ἐλυμήναντο αὐτήν, Sept. Luk. 1. 78.

Upon Gittith] An Inſtrument brought from Gath, or uſed by Obed-Edom the Gittite; or a Pſalm to be ſung at the Vintages, i. e. at the Feaſt of Tabernacles. It containeth a ſolemn Thankſgiving (for which cauſe alſo that Feaſt was inſtituted) with ſo great joy, that Plutarch took occaſion there-hence to write (but falſly) ὠχοφόρια In sympos. gaudium cantu agendum. that the Jews did then keep a Feast, or Holy-day to Bacchus.

Vers. 1. Sing aloud unto God] Be loud and large in his praises, set them forth cheerfully, and courageously. God loveth zeal in all his services.

Vers. 2. Bring hither the Timbrel] These Instruments then used in Gods Service (as a part of the Jewish pedagogy) were types of that Spiritual joy which we should express in holy duties, no less than if we heard the most exquisite Musick. There should be continual Musick (habitual joy) in the Temple of the Holy Ghost.

Vers. 3. Blow up the Trumpet in the new Moon] And the like at other solemn Feasts, three whereof (all in the seventh Month to be kept) Beza thinketh to be here plainly and distinctly noted. These Feasts were a shadow of things to come, but the body is in Christ, Col. 2. 16, 17.

Vers. 4. For this was a statute] The keeping of it therefore is not arbitrary, but necessary: Aut faciendum aut patiendum.

And a Law] Which was to be kept as the apple of the eye, Prov. 7. 2.

Vers. 5. This he ordained in Joseph] Put for all Israel, as Psal. 80. 1. though the Chaldee understandeth it of Joseph in person, and the next words of his going through the Land of Ægypt to gather Corn in the seven plentiful years, and that at his first coming into Ægypt, he understood not their Language.

Isa. 19. 18. Where I heard a Language] Idolatrous Language, say some, contrary to the Language of Canaan: this God knew not, that is, liked not; Or, rather a strange forrein Language, which is no small grievance, Jer. 5. 15. Ezek. 2. 6. 1 Corinth. 14. 11. to those especially, who understand no otherwise than by blows, as Beasts do men.

Sordidissimo ministerio. Vers. 6. I removed his shoulder from the burden] From the woful slavery of Ægyptian Tyrants and Task-masters.

His hands passed away from the pots] Or, Baskets, wherein was carried earth for brick-clamping, and Pot-making, &c. whereunto they were so close tied that they might not stir a foot from their daily work, till God delivered them. Some say, that the Pyramides were built by them.

Vers. 7. Thou calledst in trouble] Their trouble called, though themselves had been silent; I have seen, I have seen the afflictions of my people, &c. but they cried to the Lord at the red Sea, Exod. 14. 10, 15. and were delivered.

I answered thee in the secret place of thunder] i. e. In the Pillar of Cloud, that stood betwixt the two Armies, and thundred against the Ægyptians, Exod. 14. 24. Confer Lam. 3. 44.

I proved thee at the waters of Meribah] When thou hadst but newly foot out of snare; and yet there, and then thou shewedst thy self. O thine ungratefulness! &c. this hath been thy manner from thy youth.

Vers. 8. Hear O my people, &c.] Notwithstanding thy many and mighty provocations at Meribah, and elsewhere, I made a Covenant with thee at Mount Sinai, and gave thee right Judgements, and true Laws, good Statutes, and Commandements, Neh. 9. 13.

Vers. 9. There shall no strange god] This is the first and chief Commandement, wherein all the rest are contained, saith Luther.

Vers. 10. Open thy mouth wide, &c.] If thou be straitned tis not in me, but in thine own bowels; he secretly taxeth them for their ὀλιγοπιστία and their ὀλιγοψυχία in prayer, their faithlesness and faint-heartedness, whereby they do deny as it were their own prayers: Ask largely, and speed accordingly.

Vers. 11. But my people would not hearken] Here beginneth the Second part of the Psalm which is objurgatory, and very suitable to the season of the year at that Feast, that if it were a fruitful year, the Israelites might see and acknowledge Gods goodness therein; as if otherwise, they might accuse themselves, and not the Lord.

Perplexis cogitationibus. Vat. Israel would none] Heb. acquiesced not in mee, was not well affected to mee, but had hearts full of harlotry.

Pœna rebellionis maxima. Vers. 12. So I gave them up] I left them as a ship without a rudder, as an horse without reigns to go whither they would, and do what they would. This is a fearfull Judgement, Hos. 4. 14. Rom. 1. 28. 2 Thes. 2. 11, 12.

And

And they walked in their own counſels] To their own ruine, becauſe they took counſel but not of God, and covered with a covering, but not of his Spirit, that they might adde ſin to ſin, Iſa. 30. 1.

Verſ. 13. O that my people had hearkened unto mee] A wiſh after the manner of men; to ſet forth Gods great deſire of our welfare, which he here uttereth as it were, with a ſigh and a groan.

Verſ. 14. I ſhould ſoon have ſubdued] I would have turned the ſcales, and made them as much over-weight to their enemies, as they were to them.

And turned my hand, &c.] God, with a turn of his hand can overturn his enemies, and relieve his little ones, Zach. 13. 7. If he but ſpread forth his hands as a ſwimmer ſpreadeth forth his hands to ſwim, he ſhall bring down the pride of oppreſſors together, Iſa. 25. 11.

Verſ. 15. The haters of the Lord ſhould have ſubmitted] Heb. Lyed, that is, yeelded feigned obedience, as Pſal. 18. 44.

But their time ſhould have endured for ever] i. e. Their ſtrength, ſaith the Chaldee; their tranquillity and proſperity, ſay others. Theodoret referreth it to the enemies thus, The time of their calamity ſhall endure for ever, they ſhall be eternally miſerable.

Verſ. 16. With the fineſt of the wheat] Heb. With the fat or marrow of wheat, with the choiceſt of picked nouriſhment.

And with honey, &c.] Hyperbole incomparabilis felicitatis & fecunditatis. See Deut. 32. 13. ſhadowing out the ſweetneſs of the Word and Sacraments.

PSAL. LXXXII

VErſ. 1. God ſtandeth in the Congregation of the Mighty] There God is preſent and preſident by a particular providence, as Lord Paramount, and chief Magiſtrate, higher than the higheſt, Eccleſ. 5. 8. Job 31. 14. Epheſ. 6. 9. The Ethiopian Judges, they ſay, do ever leave the chief ſeat of Judicature empty for him; and Solomon, for like reaſon, calleth that ſeat The holy place, Eccleſ. 8. 10. There Elohim (that is, the Judge and Avenger) ſtandeth, or ſetteth himſelf, to behold the actions and affections of Judges, and to paſs a cenſure upon their ſentences. Good therefore was the counſel of Jehoſaphat to his Judges when to ride circuit, 2 Chron. 19. 6. Take heed what ye do, for ye judge not for man, but for the Lord who is with you in the Judgement. Wherefore now let the fear of the Lord your God be upon you; take heed and do it, &c. Judges ſhould ſit in as great (though not ſo ſlaviſh) a fear of offending, as Olaus in the hiſtory did upon the flayd skin of his Father Silaunes nailed by Cambyſes on the tribunal, or as a Ruſſian Judge, that feareth the boyling caldron, or open bartocking; or the Turkiſh Senate, when they think the great Turk to ſtand behind the Arras at the dangerous doot.

Ut præſes Synodi. Locus orat. dicitur eſt medius locus in cœtibus.

Turk. hiſt. 718.

He judgeth among the Gods] i. e. Among the Magiſtrates (as our Saviour interpreteth it, Joh. 10. 34, 35.) who are called gods. Firſt, By analogie tanquam Deum imitantes, ſaith Theodoret, as reſembling God by having the power of life and death. Secondly, By participation, tanquam lumina illuminata, ſaith Auſtin, as ſtars participate their light from the Sun, ſo do Rulers their authority from the ſupreme Majeſty. Thirdly, By deputation from God, whoſe vicegerents they are, and to whom they muſt be accountable for their mal-adminiſtration.

Verſ. 2. How long will ye judge unjuſtly?] viz. Thorough a cyclopicall contempt of Gods ſenerity.

Ne pecces, Deus ipſe videt.

Will ye repreſent and expreſſe God to the World as a corrupt, crooked, and unrighteous Judge?

And accept the perſons of the wicked?] Heb. Lift up their faces, and ſhew them more favour than others that are much honeſter? Barrabbas oft is releaſed, and Chriſt crucified; Alter habet æquum, ſed alter habebit æquum, ſaid that partiall Emperour. This man hath the right on his ſide, but the other ſhall carry the cauſe, for all that.

Verſ. 3. Defend the poor and Fatherleſs] Theſe are Gods clients, and this is Gods counsell worthy to be written with letters of gold on the walls of all Judicatories, as having in it better direction for a Statesman than all Lipsius his Bee-hive, or Machiavels Spider-wed. These two Latine verses are said to be written over the Judgement-seat in Xant.

Hic locus odit amat, punit, conservat, honorat,
Nequitiam, pacem, crimina, jura, bonos.

Vers. 4. Rid them out of the hand of the wicked] Heb. Of the turbulent, who make a do, as the Devil doth, and vex others.

Vers. 5. They know not, neither will they understand] q. d. There's no good to be done upon these uncircumcised vice-gods, as they may in the worst sense be best stiled; 'tis bootless to advise them to better, for they are set; they are as good every whit as ever they mean to be; and as for their duty, nec cogitant, nec curant, they neither know it, nor care to know it, but blunder on in the dark, and are led blindling by their base lusts, which so they may satisfy, they pass not what becomes of the weal publick, but oppose with crest and brest whatsoever crosseth their sinfull designs. Hereby they cause mighty concussions, and draw down heavy judgements, Isa. 24. 18, 19.

Pessimi dantur, & ruunt omnia.

Vers. 6. I have said ye are Gods] As verse 1. but doubly so, if good too; if they excell both in vertue and power, as Aristotle joyneth them; I have said, is vox potestatis constituentis, whence that of the Apostle, All power is of God, Rom. 13. 2.

κατ' ἀρετὴν καὶ τὴν πολιτικὴν δύναμιν. Arist. Polit. l. 3. c. 13. Niceph. l. 18. scribit Sultanum principem gentis Turcicæ dictum fuisse Taisan i. e. filium Dei.

And all of you are children of the most High] Invested (as Princes sons and heirs are oft) with part of my power, and intrusted with the administration of mine earthly Kingdome by the exercise of vindictive and remunerative Justice. The Chaldee paraphraseth, As the Angels of the High; and Kimchi, As the Stars; which have dominion over these inferiour bodies, Confer Job 38. 7.

Vers. 7. But ye shall dye like men] Yea, if wicked, like beasts; but only for their pillow and bolster. Super cubilia forsan in honore morientur, quo a bestiis differunt, sed non in morte, saith Kimchi. God who had so highly advanced such, will lay them low enough; even in the slimy valley (if not in hell) where are many already like them, and more shall come after them. Job 21. 31, 32. Our Henry the eight was told on his death-bed that he should go to the place of Princes; which was no great comfort, if the old Proverb be true, that Hell is payed with the Crowns of Princes, and helmets of souldiers. The Spanish Frier used to say, there were but few Princes in hell; for why? there were but few in all.

And fall like one of the Princes] Of the Heathen Tyrants, which are oft slain by the People, as most of the Cesars before Constantine were. Ad generum Cereris, &c. Some of the Fathers, Arnobius, Chrysostom, Theodoret, &c. understand it of Beelzebub and his fellows, qui acerbissimis & exquisitissimis tormentis cruciantur, who are most tormented in hell, 2 Pet. 2. Potentes potenter torquebuntur. Some read it, And ye, O Princes, shall fall as one, i. e. as others do. A necessary consideration for great ones, who are apt to dream of an immortality, or at least to drive off the thoughts of death.

Vers. 8. Arise O God, judge the earth] Take the matter into thine own hand, for it is but time, all things here being so ill ordered by thy substitutes; nam alioqui pro judiciorum constupratione terra tota videtur collapsura, all will bee naught else.

For thou shalt inherit all Nations] Thou Lord Jesus shalt, Psal. 2. 8. Heb. 1. 2. Rev. 11. 15. Come therefore, yea come quickly.

PSAL. LXXXIII.

VErs. 1. Keep not thou silence O God] Ter idem dicit ad vehementiam, He saith the same thing thrice to shew his earnestness. The Hebrew is, Be not silent to thee, that is, in thine own cause, as verse 5. The Septuagint and Vulgar have it, O God, who is like unto thee?

Concurrant magno impetu, connexu, & ardore.

Vers. 2. For lo thine enemies make a tumult] Thine, because ours: for there is a league offensive, and defensive between God and his people; the Church must therefore needs bee invincible, because God is so.

Have

Have lift up the head] Being insolent and confident, they bear their noses high in the air, uttering loud and lofty language, as did Rabshakeh, sent by Sennacherib, 2 King. 18. to which times some referre this Psalm, as others to those of Jehosaphat, 2 Chron. 20. Kimchi.

Vers. 3. They have taken crafty counsel, &c.] They have negotiated this league with much subtilty and solicitation, conferunt & captant consilia, they are cruel-crafties. Malignaverunt consilium, saith the Vulgar.

And consulted against thy hidden ones] Hidden under the hollow of thy hand, under the shaddow of thy wing; and therefore safe from strife of tongues or force of hands, Psal. 27. 5. & 31. 21. Commodum instituto epitheton. The Greek rendreth it, Thy Saints, such as whose life is hid with Christ in God, Col. 3. 3. 1 John 3. 2. The same Hebrew word is used for the inward oracle of the Temple, Ezek. 7. 22. a type of Heaven, the Saints Country.

Vers. 4. They have said come, &c.] The wicked have their Come, Prov. 1. 11. as well as the Saints, Isa. 2. 3, 5. Zach. 8. 21. but for a worse purpose.

Let us cut them off] Them, by way of contempt, as not worth naming, they were so base. The Devill and his Imps would utterly root out the Church, but that cannot bee, Jer. 31. 36. Mat. 16. 18.

That the name of Israel, &c.] But Israel hath still a name, when Moab, Ammon, Edom, &c. live but by fame only. See Jer. 48. 2.

Vers. 5. They have consulted together with one consent] Heb. With one heart, concordi-ter, as if they had all but one heart. This was not unity but conspiracie, such as is that of Papists, Rev. 17. 13, 14.

They are confederate against thee] Heb. They have stricken a Covenant, viz. with oaths and solemn ceremonies, cutting the Sacrifice in twain, and passing between the parts thereof, as Jer. 34. 18. Virg. Æneid. 8.

-- cæsa jungebant fœdera porca.

Vers. 6. The Tabernacles of Edom, and the Ishmaelites, &c.] Exercitus ex variis gentibus conflatus, at odds amongst themselves, and yet well agreed for a mischief to the Church, who might ever well say as the Hare in Martial.

In me omnis terreq; avimq; manus; rapina est;
Forsitan & cali, si cane astra ferat.

As Dogs fighting and intertearing one another, can give over and joyn together to follow the harmlesse Hare that passeth by them; so here? If Manasseh be against Ephraim, and Ephraim against Manasseh, yet they will be both against Judah.

And the Hagarens] Who came also of Hagar, as well as the Ismaelites, but were a distinct people, and would be called Saracens, from Sarah the free woman, for honour sake, as if the Promises made to Abraham and Sarah had belonged to them. Ptolomy maketh mention of the Saracens, and placeth in Arabia the seat of the Hagarens; where there is also a City called Agra, of Hagar, likely. Aben-Ezra saith they came of Agar, by another husband. The Chaldee calleth them Hungarians. Saracens in Arabick is Theeves.

Vers. 7. Gebal and Ammon and Amalec] Sic enarrat & enumerat inimicos decem conglobatos. Answerable whereunto were the ten Kings of Christendome, who gave their power to the beast. Gebal might be the inhabitants of Gebal, a City of Phenicia saith Stephanus, or of Syria, saith Strabo, which Volaterran saith was called Gibel, in his time, but anciently Biblis. See Josh. 13. 5. Ezek. 27. 9.

Vers. 8. Assur also is joyned with them] The Chaldee paraphraseth Sennacherib, also the King of Assur, &c. So doth the Turk, with the Churches enemies: howbeit Italy is the mark he shooteth at, and the Protestants have the happiness (as also America) to be further out of his way, and no part of his present aim, for the greatest part of them.

Vers. 9. Do unto them as unto the Midianites] And how that was, see Judg. 7. & 8. & Judg. 4. Preces sunt bombardæ & instrumenta bellica Christianorum, saith Luther.

Vers. 10. Who perished at Endor] A place in the Tribe of Manasseh neat unto that ancient River, the River Kison, Judg. 4. 7. 1 Sam. 28.

They became as dung] They lay unburied, rotted above ground, and were spred as compost upon soil.

Vers. 11. Make their Nobles like Oreb and like Zeeb] ערב signifieth a Crow, Zeeb

Zeeb a Wolf, Zebah a cut-throat, Zalmunna a forbidder of shadow, or quiet to his subjects, fit names for Tyrants, and persecuters of Gods people.

Vers. 12. Let us take to our selves the houses of God] Covetous Impropriatours and Oppressours have learned this language. Possidebant Papistæ, possident Papistæ, saith One wittily.

Capita carduorum.

Vers. 13. O my God, make them like a wheel] Heb. Like a rouling thing, such as is thistle-down, saith K. Solomon. Gr. like a top, Torq; illos in modum trochi, whirle them about as boyes do their tops.

As the stubble] As before he had brought examples, so here similitudes to shew what he would have done to the enemy.

Vers. 14. As the fire burneth a wood] Maximè quando à vento flabellatur, when blown up by a fierce wind it soon turneth a wood into a waste.

And as the flame setteth the mountains on fire] Those sulphury mountains, such as Ætna, Vesuvius, Petra malu, a mountain in the highest part of the Apennines, which perpetually burneth, say travellers.

Il Mercurio Italico 178.

Vers. 15. So persecute them with thy tempest] Turbina eos, that they may stand or stay no where.

And make them afraid, &c.] So fright them with thy heavy judgements, that all their wit and courage wherewith they should help themselves, may bee expectorated.

Vers. 16. Fill their faces with shame] By confounding their confidences, and blasting their designs. They promised themselves a triumph, but let them have the canvals.

That they may seek thy name O Lord] Ut in viti cognoscant quàm sit tam potens Jehovah regitare, that they may even in despight of their heads, be compelled to inquire after thee. It is storied of Sennacherib, that after the destruction of his huge army at Jerusalem, demanding of some about him what might be the reason that the unresistable God of Heaven so favoured the Jewish Nation as he had found by sad experience? answer was given that Abraham from whom they descended, sacrificed unto him his only Son, which purchased this Protection to his posterity. If that will win him, saith Hee, I will spare him two of my sons, to procure him to be on my side, which Sharezer and Adrammelech his sons hearing of, prevented their own deaths by his.

Bib. Castal, Tabul.

Vers. 17. Let them be confounded, &c.] This and the following verse, are an exposition of the former verse. The Rabbines have a saying nulla est objectio in Lege, quæ non habeat solutionem in Lege. The Scripture is its own interpreter.

Vers. 18. That men may know that thou whose name alone is Jehovah] The Essentiator, Isa. 44. 6. with Act. 17. 25. Rev. 1. 4, 8. The Jews pronounce not this name at all, but use Adonai or Elohim for it. The first among the Christians that pronounced it was Petrus Galatinus, following the pronunciation of the Syriacks and Greeks. Gentbrard will have it pronounced Jahue, and bitterly enveyeth against Beza, and others as prophaners of Gods name, who call God Jova, or Jehova, vocabulo novo, saith he, barbaro, fictitio, irreligioso & Jovem Gentilium redolente. It is very likely that of this holy and reverend name of God, the Gentiles called their greatest God Jove and Jupiter, that is, Jah-pater. Pausanias also telleth us that the Poets thus sang unto him, Ζεὺς ἦν, Ζεὺς ἐστι, Ζεὺς ἔσεται, ὦ μεγαλε Ζεῦ. And Varro the learnedst of the Romans thought Jove to be the God of the Jews. But he and all men should have known, as here, that Jehovah is God alone; and so have sought to the Jews (of whom alone was salvation, Joh. 4. 22.) for better understanding in the things of Gods Kingdome, acknowledging him to be the most High above all the earth, and contemning simulacra, ifos deos modo Jovem sui proritus haberet, as another Heathen said.

Aug. de consens. Evang. l. 1. c. 22.

PSAL. LXXXIV.

A Psalm] Of the same subject with the forty second, and made when David was banished either by Saul or Absalom, or else when buried abroad in his wars, 2 Sam. 8. and so, debarred from the use of Gods publick ordinances.

Vers. 1. How amiable are thy Tabernacles] viz. For thy Words sake that is there preached preached, and thy worships there performed. The Protestants at Lions in France called their place for publick meetings to serve God, Paradise, Chrysostom calleth it the place of Angels and Archangels, the Kingdome of God, yea Heaven it self. Another calleth it, The heavenly Exchange betwixt God and his people; they present duty, he conferres mercy. Luther saith, he would not live in Paradise without the Ordinances; as with them he could frame to live in Hell it self: And a small village with a godly Pastor, and a good people in it, is an earthly Paradise, saith He. If that Italian Martyr could date his letter From the delectable Orchard of the Leonine prison, what may we think of the free use of the ordinances? what of Heaven? nam facile Hierusalem transferunt ad Spiritum. Hom. 36. ad 1 Cor. 14.

Vers. 2. My soul longeth] As she did, who said, Give mee Children or else I dye. His soul once longed for the waters of the well of Bethlehem, but not so earnestly as now to draw waters with joy out of those wells of salvation.

My heart and my flesh] Ut sit sanctitas in corde, & sanitas in corpore. And for obtaining of this, whole David cryeth aloud, as a child when hungry cryeth every whit of him, hands, feet, face, all cry; and then the Mother flings by all, then she flyes and out-runs her self: So here; The desires of the Righteous shall be satisfied, Prov. 10. 24.

Vers. 3. Yea the sparrow] Avis communissima, haunteth about houses, buildeth about windows, and there chirpeth. The Heb word ken for a nest hath the first letter bigger than the rest, to note Gods providence in teaching birds to build. Exclamatio pathetica ex abrupto. Trem.

And the Swallow a nest for her self, &c.] She hath her name in Hebrew from her liberty to flye boldly, and to nestle in mens chimneyes, Prov. 26. 2.

Even thine Altars] Or, Oh thine Altars! (so some read it) by a passionate exclamation, importing strongest desires after them. The want of Gods Ordinances should pinch us to the heart.

Vers. 4. Blessed are they that dwell in thy house] viz. Those Menial-servants of thine, the Priests and Levites, who have their lodgings near thee, and their imployment about thee. This is still the happiness of Gods Ministers, whose holy function and calling (both in the preparation to it, and execution of it) leadeth them to God, and holdeth them with him.

They will be still praising thee] As having hearts full of Heaven, and consciences full of comfort. There cannot but be musick in the Temple of the holy Ghost.

Vers. 5. Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee] i. e. Who is enabled by thee, both in body and mind, to come from the place of his aboad to the solemn feasts.

In whose heart are the wayes of them] Here the old translation, In whose heart are thy wayes, is far better. i. e. As he bringeth his body to the Ordinances, so he hath thy wayes or laws ingraven in his heart.

Vers. 6. Who passing thorough the valley of Baca] That is, of tears, say some, of Mulberry-trees say others; the one are moist, the other use to grow in more dry places. Betwixt them both, they may serve, saith One, to make up a more compleat emblem of this miserable World, made up of woes and wants. In hoc exilio saith Bernard, in hoc ergastulo, in hac peregrinatione, in hac valle lachrymarum, &c. ἐν τῇ φάραγγι τοῦ κλαυθμῶνος. Sept.

Make it a Well] They are as chearfull in their travel to Gods house, as if they had plenty of water all the way. Finis edulcat media, the joy of the Lord is their strength, whereby they are carried on an end, as they say, to their journeys end, the joyfull preconceit of appearing before God in Zion; allaying their great thirst.

Vers. 7. They go from strength to strength] i. e. Lustily and constantly, turma turmæ subinde sese adjungente, one company comming this way, and another that, out of their several parishes, and so they grow stronger, and go more comfortably on together. Some render it, de doctrina in doctrinam, vel de academia in academiam; they grow til they come to a perfect knowledge of God. Pergunt turmatim. Beza

Every one of them in Zion appeareth before God] And then think their pains though never so great, well bestowed, though then they saw Gods face, but obscurely in the dark glass of the ceremonies. Popish pilgrims though used hardly, and loose much of their estates, yet satisfie themselves in this. I have that I came for, viz. the sight of a dumb Idol. What then should not we then suffer to see God in his ordinances, &c?

Vers. 8.

Vers. 8. O Lord God of Hosts hear my prayer] Satisfie mine earnings, pantings, and inquietations of mind after the liberty of thy Sanctuary, vers. 2. These very desires he calleth prayers.

Vers. 9. Behold] Not only Hear, see Psal. 34. 15. with the Note.

Look upon the face of thine anointed] Christi, cujus festinus adventus, saith Kimchi: do me good for Christs sake.

Vers. 10. For a day in thy Courts] Every Flower hath its sweetness; so hath every holy duty its comfort.

I had rather be a Door-keeper] As the Korites were, to whom this Psalm was committed; and for whose incouragement this might be spoken. A Door-keeper is first in, last out; so would David be in holy assemblies. Tardy hearers would be loath to beg this office out of his hand.

In the tents of wickedness] Tentoriis vexationis, Kimchi.

Vers. 11. For the Lord God is a Sun and Shield] An universal All-sufficient and satisfactory good, proportionate to our necessities.

The Lord will give grace and glory] One would think that were enough, yea but then here is more than enough, No good thing will he with-hold, &c. and thence is Davids desire, so to be about him.

Vers. 12. O Lord of Hosts, &c.] Conclusio Epiphonematica.

PSAL. LXXXV.

Vers. 1. Lord, thou hast been favourable, &c.] Gods free grace and favour is fitly premised, as the Fountain and Mother of all the following Mercies. This is that other Book, Rev. 20 12. that hath our names in it, and our pardon.

Thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob] Of old from Egypt, and alate from the Philistines; who after Sauls death miserably tyrannized over Israel, till David delivered them. Some hold that this Psalm was composed at the end of the Babylonish Captivity. Others conceive it may be a prayer for the conversion of the Gentiles, who are brought in speaking, the whole Psalm throughout.

Vers. 2. Thou hast forgiven the iniquity, &c.] This is worthily mentioned as a main mercy, as a chief fruit of Free-grace.

Thou hast covered all their sin] That, that filthy thing may be no longer an eye-sore unto thee. In the Original there are Six Homoioteleuta, which is an elegancy not to be englished.

Vers. 3. Thou hast taken away all thy wrath] Heb. Thou hast gathered it, thou hast recollected it, that we might not bear it; when Sin is once remitted, Wrath is soon removed.

Thou hast turned thy self from the fierceness, &c.] Here are six Hasts drawing in the next Turn, vers. 4. God hath, and therefore God will, is a strong Medium of hope, if not a demonstration of Scripture-Logicks. See 2 Cor. 1. 10.

Vers. 4. Turn us, O God of our salvation] Turn us, and we shall be turned; do as thou ever hast done, for thou art Jehovah, thou changest not, but art yesterday, to day, and the same for ever.

And cause thine anger, &c.] Labefactatio iram tuam ergo nos.

Vers. 5. Wilt thou be angry with us for ever?] Dilata Christo tuo vel tuo adventu? Such expostulations mixt with faith are Vis Deo grata, as saith Tertullian, such as God is well pleased with.

Vers. 6. Wilt thou not revive us again?] Who for present are all amort, as it were, free among the dead? free of that company?

That thy people may rejoyce in thee] A joyless life is a lifeless life, Mortis habet vices qua trahitur vita gemitibus.

Vers. 7. Shew us thy mercy, O Lord] Thy fatherly mercy, στοργήν.

And grant us thy salvation] Thy Christ, and our Jesus, Luke 2. 30.

Vers. 8. I will hear what God the Lord will speak] I will not repine, but listen what answer God giveth to my prayer, and patiently wait a good issue of my troubles.

For he will speak peace unto his people] viz. by his Promises, and by his Providences.

And to his Saints] For all Gods people are righteous ones, Isa. 60. 21. justified and sanctified, 1 Cor. 6. 11.

But

Bow down thine ear, &c.] Let me be the object of thy pity, and of external relief, let every member have part of thy favour.

Vers. 9. All nations whom thou hast made, &c.] Though many are in darkness with errors, that they cannot see the way to heaven, yet many have a desire after looking for it, Isaiah 60.

Thou great one, &c.] The Father both by salvation and glorification.

Vers. 10. For thou art great, &c.] And God (like a loving parent) is very tender of his children, and will not suffer them to be oppressed by others, but will be sure to punish the oppressors of God's people, as the Kingdom of Babylon, &c. Isaiah 14. Revel. 18.

Teach me thy way, O Lord, &c.] Make me thoroughly to know by experience to the practice of the Christian Religion, John 17. 3. Phil. 3. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 22. 1 John 2. 3.

Vers. 11. Unite my heart to fear thy name.] i. e. Heavenly and Gracious, both of truth and righteousness. Hearts undisposed and unprepared for Christ, Isa. 57. 15. Others concerning the extraordinary Glory of all good things.

Vers. 12. For thou shalt give the saints a gift.] The Gift of all gifts, the holy Spirit (Luke 11. 13. with Matthew 7. 11.) with a largess of outward comforts.

Vers. 13. Righteousness shall go before him.] Men shall walk before God in holiness and righteousness all the days of their lives, Luke 1. 75. they shall not rest in outward blessings, vers. 12. or be satisfied with such low things, but be led up thereby to the care of higher.

And shall set us in the way of his steps.] So that we shall go an upper (or rather a better) way, Prov. 15. 24. having our feet where others must tread over us; and so departing from Hell beneath, which here gapeth for the unrighteous.

PSALM LXXXVI.

A Prayer.] Left for a form, for a help to devotion, as most also. Psal. 90. 1. Title.

Vers. 1. Bow down thine ear, O Lord.] As the cordial Physician doth to his feeble Patient: to Deaf gladsomeness.

For I am poor, and needy.] Having nothing to live on but what my friends privily send me, or what I can get by hour-looking from the Lords suitors, 1 Sam. 30. 28.

Vers. 2. Preserve my soul, for I am holy.] Or, a Saint, a Saint-like, a Saint-like man, such an one as upon which from the tender mercies of the Almighty, Paul speaks changedly, de Saints in common Phrase. David took the Penitent Nazarite, and fled into him, for was holy, as God is holy; and sanctified, as God is sanctified (in quality though not in equality) but all of free grace; and this he pleads for his own safety.

Save thy servant.] Serva servum tuum, thy devoted Servant, and not thy beneficiary only.

Vers. 3. Be merciful unto me.] Left my friends by the former grants (I confidently) suspect him to be a merciful Master, for he grants many, with readiness and constancy of remark.

Vers. 4. Rejoice the soul of thy servant.] True and solid joy cometh sensibly by the doors of heavenly prayer.

I lift up my soul.] [illegible]

carrying [illegible]

Vers. 5. For thou, Lord, &c.] [illegible] God by prayer.

Vers. 6. Give ear, O Lord, &c.] The hearing of our [illegible] and reckoned among our chiefest mercies.

Vers. 7. In the day of my trouble, &c.] Gods Penitents muſt pray and believe and believe and pray unto him. David had said before, God is infinite in mercy to all that call upon him: Hope he affureth, and concludeth, he shall find mercy of my trouble will call upon him, therefore he will answer me.

Jam ſiles & pax, & honeſt pudorq; Prifci: & hæc ſeclis reditre virtus Audet; apparetq; beata pleno Copia cornu, Horat. Iren. Aug.

Vers. 8. Among the Gods] Whether deputed or reputed.

There is none like unto thee] Either in essence, or in operation, see Exod. 15. 11. Rev. 4. ult. 'tis to be hoped they shall, Ezek. 11. 16, 17, 20, not by change of place, but of affection, translation, and becoming unto Christ the essence of faith. Some understand this of that general harmony at the last day.

Vers. 10. For thou art great] Great is the Lord without quantity, good without quality, everlasting without time, omnipresent without place, containing all things without extent, within all things, and contained of nothing without all things, and following of nothing, &c. Now the least glimpse of this knowledge is worth all the dreams of human wisdome.

Thou doest wondrous things] The Gentiles have laid down a threefold way of knowing God; First, Negation or Imperfections. Secondly, Affirmation of Perfections. Thirdly, Contemplation of great works.

Vers. 11. Teach me thy way] David knew much of God, and yet he desireth to be taught more; delivering himself up to Gods discipline, and saying as one Solus did Unite my heart to fear thy name] i. e. To serve thee with simplicity and godly sincerity, Col. 3. 22, desiring to thee with full purpose of heart, Act. 11. 23, and attending upon thee without distraction, 1 Cor. 7. 35. As thou art God alone (verse 10.) so let my heart be toward thee alone. Behold I find it divided, disjointed, and so disabled for duty (for animus dispersa fit minor) Oh do thou unite it I beseech thee, giving me that one heart thou hast promised, until we all come unto that oneness of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man, &c. Ephes. 4. 13.

Vers. 12. I will praise thee] While he prayed, he found his prayer answered, and therefore thus breaketh forth into praises.

Vers. 13. Thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell] That is, from deadly and desperate dangers. Some understand it of the damnation of hell which David had deserved by his sins. The Rabbines gloss is, Ab eo qui est in profundo.

Vers. 14. O God, the proud] Zedim strangers some read it (by the change of a letter in the original) who are commonly cruel.

And the assemblies of violent men] Arisim, some render it, sturdy varlets, seipsos

Vers. 15. But thou O Lord art a God full, &c.] These are part of those thirteen attributes of almighty God let down and proclaimed by himself, Exod. 34. 6. 7. which the Hebrews call them, that is, Properties.

Vers. 16. O turn unto me] Or, Look toward me, the life of a believer consisteth in the light of Gods countenance.

Give thy strength unto thy servant] Master, may lend me your hand, saith the (creature to his Maker, wherein we want.

And save the son of thine handmaid] A. 1. I was born in my house, came of religious Parents, &c. therefore do unto good for their sakes at least, as Hezekiah was Vers. 17. Shew me a token for good] Make this thy promised, that they may be convinced of their malice and madness. At the death of some [illegible] dead so full, that he was forced to look [illegible]

PSAL. LXXXVII.

A Pſalm or ſong] Made, likely, by David, after that he had ſetled the Ark in Mount Sion, 2 Sam. 6. and underſtood that the Temple ſhould be built in Mount Moriah. In which two mountains (or rather one mountain with two tops) the Rabbines ſay that this Pſalm was compoſed; and thereunto they draw the next words, His foundation, or the argument of this Pſalm, is in and of thoſe holy Mountains. But this ſeemeth not to be the ſenſe.

Verſ. 1. His foundation is in the holy Mountains] Which cannot be removed, but abide for ever, Pſal. 125. 1. Some read it, The foundation thereof, viz. of the Temple, but eſpecially of the Church univerſall that ſpirituall Temple (built of living ſtones by God the beſt Architect, Chriſt himſelf being the chief corner-ſtone) is in the holy Mountains: For out of Zion went forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jeruſalem; which is therefore called the Mother-Church, and τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν μητρόπολις, the chief Church, the root of the Gentile-Churches, Rom. 11. the converſion whereof is here foretold, verſe 4. and perpetuall happineſſe promiſed. Damaſc. l. 4. c. 13.

Verſ. 2. The Lord loveth the gates of Zion] Nothing but his meer love moved him to make choice of it, above all other places there to declare his power, preſence, and goodneſs. He firſt choſe it for his love, and then loved it for his choice; and ſo he doth his Church.

Verſ. 3. Glorious things are ſpoken of thee] Dicta & praedicta, told and foretold of thee, Heb. in thee, ſc. by the holy Prophets, eſpecially concerning the Chriſtian Church. See Iſa. 40. to the end of that Prophecy. Nihil honorificum non praedicatur de te; & nihil praedicatur de te quin ſit honorificentiſſimum. Jun.

Thou City of God] The God of glory, Act. 7. 1. the great King, Mat. 5. 35. the only potentate, 1 Tim. 6. 15. who maketh his Church the place of his reſidence, &c.

Selah] O rem dignam perpetua admiratione, O wonderfull!

Verſ. 4. I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon] Rahab is Egypt, and ſo called for its ſtrength, and pride. Babel the chief City of the Babylonians. Theſe were deadly enemies to Jeruſalem, which was ground betwixt them as betwixt a pair of Milſtones, but they ſhall be reckoned hereafter, ſaith God, among my domeſticks, among thoſe that know mee, or rather are known of mee. See Iſa. 19. 19, 21, 25. 1 Pet. 5. 13.

Behold Philiſtia] The Philiſtines were ever bitter enemies to the Iſraelites, but ſhall be converted and become children of the Church. See Iſa. 54. 1. & 44. 5.

And Tyre] Which ſhall leave heaping and hoarding, and imploy her Merchandiſe to feed and cloath Gods Saints. Iſa. 23. 18. Act. 21. 3, 4.

With Æthiopia] Heb. Cuſh, of Cuſh, the ſon of Ham, their Father and founder, Gen. 10. 6. Æthiopians they were called from their burnt faces. The Eunuch received the Goſpel, and publiſhed it, Act. 8. the Chriſtian faith was profeſſed among them, as 'tis thought, from the Apoſtles time; though now, for above an hundred years, they have again forſaken it.

This man was born there] Natus, id eſt renatus in illa. The men of theſe ſeveral and other Countries were born, that is, born a new, and ſo made free-deniſons of the new Jeruſalem, fellow-citizens with the Saints, and of the houſe-hold of God, Epheſ. 2. 19.

Verſ. 5. And of Zion it ſhall be ſaid, This and that man was born in her] i. e. Converted; and ſo a daily acceſſion made to the Church of Chriſt, as was by Peters ſermon, &c. and now ſo many Nations; Behold the World is gone after him, ſaid thoſe envious Phariſees, Joh. 12. 19. and the Papiſts grudge as much at the late glorious Reformation begun by Luther, wherein ſo many rejoyce, and ſhall do to all eternity. Bucholcerus bleſſeth God that he was born in the dayes, and was bred under the diſcipline of holy Melanchon Luthers colleague,

Diviſa his opera, ſed mens fuit unica; pavit
Ore Lutherum ovet, ſtore Melanthon apes.

Beatus Ludovicus would be called Ludovicus de Piſſiaco, rather than take greater titles, becauſe there hee became a Chriſtian. Hee thought no birth to a new birth in Chriſt; no parenta ge to that of God to his Father, the Church to his Mother, Chriſt to his elder Brother, &c. Some apply this text to the places of holy mens birth, and tell us, that he loves the very ground his ſervants tread on, the very air they firſt breath in, their walls are continually before him, Iſa. 49. 16. he thinks the better of the houſes where they dwell.

And the higheſt himſelf ſhall eſtabliſh her] So that the gates of Hell ſhall not unſettle her. Other States and Polities have their times and their turns, their riſe and their ruine, not ſo the Church.

Verſ. 6. The Lord ſhall count when he writeth up the people.] When he maketh his Cenſe-book (called the writing of the houſe of Iſrael, Ezek. 13. 9. the Lords book of remembrance, Mal. 3. 16. the Regiſter of the living in Jeruſalem. Iſa. 4. 3.) he ſhall muſter them in the roll of his ſouldiers, number them in the catalogue of his Citizens, call them in the nomenclatura of his Diſciples, &c. A glorious priviledge ſurely.

As well the ſingers as the players, &c.] There ſhall be an exuberancy of joy in the holy Ghoſt, the only comfortable ſoul-raviſhing muſick, far beyond that of the materiall Temple.

Calvin. R. Solomon. All my ſprings are in thee] i. e. All my thoughts run upon thee, with greateſt delight; My eyes are wholly fixt upon thee, ſo ſome read it: Others, My bowels are in thee, making theſe to be the words of the Pſalmiſt. But methinks they do better that make them to be the words of God, promiſing plenty of grace and comfort to his people, as from ever-flowing over-flowing fountains.

PSAL. LXXXVIII.

A Song or Pſalm] Pſalmus totus luctuoſus, a dolefull ditty beginning and ending with complaints; and therefore ſung in the primitive times, among other penitentiall Pſalms, at the publick confeſſion of perſons excommunicated.

Upon Mahalath Leannoth] A muſicall inſtrument ſounding heavily as a ſhaulm doth; and therefore called Infirmity, for humbling, or for Antiphonies. A fit title.

Maſchil of Heman the Ezrahite] i. e. The inſtruction of Heman, who was a very wiſe man, 1 King. 4. 31. deſcended of Zerah the ſon of Judah, 1 Chron. 2. 4. and thence called the Ezrahite, Brother to Ethan who penned the next Pſalm. 1 Chron. 2. 6. Nobile par fratrum.

Verſ. 1. O Lord God of my ſalvation] This is the only one expreſſion of his faith found in this whole Pſalm; and it muſt be underſtood that he thus beleeved and prayed, as here, and verſe 2, when he was at worſt, and moſt deſpairingly complained.

I have cryed day and night before thee] Though in ſuch a ſtate as they were. Act. 27. 20. when neither Sun nor Star appeared, yet he caſt anchor, and prayed ſtill for day.

Verſ. 2. Let my prayer come before thee] He did not caſt out bruiſh and wild complaints and moans in miſery, as 'tis naturall for people to do, but poured forth his ſoul into Gods bleſſed boſome, and now prayeth an anſwer.

Verſ. 3. For my ſoul is full of trouble] Hypotypoſis hominis inſtar poſſimi affecti. Here we have the lively picture of a man under bitter affliction. Extraordinary wiſe he was, and extraordinary troubles he had. None out of hell ſuffer more than Gods deareſt children. This good man felt himſelf in the ſuburbs of hell, as it were.

And my life draweth nigh unto the grave] Or, Unto hell. The ſame word ſignifieth both, becauſe death is hells harbinger, and would be ſo to the cleſt, but for Chriſt.

Verſ. 4. I am counted with them, &c.] I am looked upon as irrecoverable, given up for deſperate. Concluſum eſt.

I am as a man that hath no ſtrength] A man no man; weak as water, σὺ ἂνερ ἄνθρωπος.

Verſ. 5.

Vers. 5. Free among the dead] Free of that company, one of the Many among the Manes, or Ghosts; a free denizon of that society, of that moiety of mankind that are dead. Yea, I am mortuorum minimus, as R. Jonah rendreth it, according to the Arabick. A mundo maximis missus.

Like the slain that lye in the grave] That are thrown on heaps into a pit, as after a field fought. R. David.

Whom thou remembrest no more] As to this present world, and as it may seem to others, with whom out of sight, out of mind, dead folk are soon forgotten. Varro thinks Lethum death, hath its name ἀπὸ τῆς λήθης, from forgetfulness; because they which have now forgotten all the world, should soon be forgotten of the world.

And they are cut off from thine hand] Thy providence over them in matters belonging to life is at an end.

Vers. 6. Thou hast laid me in the lowest pit] In cisterna inferiorum, in the deepest dungeon, in lutoso lacu, such as Jeremy was cast into, chap. 37.

In the deeps] In voraginibus, out of which none escapeth, nothing can be hoyed up, as they call it.

Vers. 7. Thy wrath lyeth hard upon me] So it did upon David, Psal. 32. 3. but especially upon the Son of David, the Lord Christ, of whose sufferings these were but types, or as chips of his cross.

And thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves] But all this while it is thy doing, and that carrieth comfort in it.

Vers. 8. Thou hast put away mine acquaintance, &c.] Job and David complain of the like misery. Optimum solatium sodalitium, but woe to him that is alone.

I am shut up] Miserably inclaved in this forlorn comfortless condition, a perpetual prisoner.

Vers. 9. Lord, I have called daily upon thee] Which he would not have done, if he had cast away his confidence; for how shall they call upon him, on whom they have not beleeved, Rom. 10? The Saints when they want the Sun, yet they have the day-star in their hearts.

Vers. 10. Wilt thou shew wonders to the dead?] Wilt thou delay to deliver me till I am dead, and then raise me again by a miracle, that I may praise thee? But he should have considered, that God neither needeth our poor praises, nor can his help ever come too late.

Shall the dead arise] Heb. The Giants, that is, those that are swallowed up of death, as the Giants were of the deluge.

Vers. 11. Shall thy loving kindness, &c.] The same again, and verse 12. a third time, pro more dolentium. See Psal. 6. 5. & 30. 9.

Vers. 12. In the land of forgetfulness] So the state and place of the dead is called, and why, see the Note on verse 5.

Vers. 13. But unto thee have I cryed] O condescend to thy poor crying creature in extremity.

In the morning] See the Note on Psal. 5. 3.

Vers. 14. Lord why castest thou off, &c.] Luther saith of himself, that after his conversion he lay three days in desperation. And afterwards, he sometimes suffered such desertions, ut nec calor, nec sanguis, nec sensus, nec vox supersesset, saith an eye-witnesse. Just. Jon. Ep. ad Melan.

Vers. 15. I am afflicted, &c.] He was brought up in the School of temptations, and kept in this form from his youth. He was put soon to't, and to deep lessons had he set him, that he had like to have lost his wits. I am distracted, saith hee, I am held upon the wheel.

Vers. 16. Thy fierce wrath, &c.] As rivers of brimstone.

Have cut me off] Multis exitiosis, ideoq; duplicatur Tau.

Vers. 17. They compassed me about] As the water compasseth the earth like a girdle.

Vers. 18. Lover and friend, &c.] See verse 8. and mark how mournfully he concludeth; as doth also the Church, Lam. 3. ult.

PSAL.

PSAL. LXXXIX.

Maschil of Ethan the Ezrahite] Who having out-lived Salomon, and seen both the defection of the Ten Tribes from the House of David, and the woful work made by Shishack King of Ægypt in the Kingdom of Judah, 2 Chron. 12. composed this Psalm (as it may seem) and left it for an eruditive, or instruction to all succeeding Ages what to do in such dismal changes and concussions. That Jew-Doctor mentioned by Aben-Ezra was more nice than wise, who would neither read nor hear this Psalm, Quia videtur dura de Deo proferre, because it seemeth to speak hardly of God, vers. 39.

Vers. 1. I will sing of the mercies of the Lord] Gods Mercies moved him to promise, his faithfulness bindeth him to perform; Ethan promiseth to celebrate both, were the times never so bad, their case never so calamitous.

I will make known thy faithfulness] Which yet I am sometimes moved to make question of. Thus the Psalmist insinuateth before he complaineth, Vt faciendum docent Rhetores in causis invidiosis; wherein he sheweth himself a right Rhetorician.

Vers. 2. For I have said] I believed, therefore have I spoken it, I dare say it shall be so, because thou hast said it (so the Greek here hath it) what God saith we may write upon it, because all the words of his mouth are in righteousness, neither is there any thing froward or perverse in them, Prov. 8. 8.

Mercy shall be built up for ever] Till the top-stone be laid, and judgement bee brought forth into victory, Mat. 12. 20. the sure mercies of David fail not.

Thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the heavens] Or, with the very heavens; that is, so sure as they are established. If that Martyr could say, The Heavens shall sooner fall than I will forsake the truth I have learned; how much more may we say so of Gods unfaileable faithfulness? See vers. 33.

Vers. 3. I have made a Covenant with my chosen] i. e. With Christ (who is Gods elect one, Isa. 42. 1.) and in him with all his people, Ephes. 1. 4.

I have sworn unto David] The Father and Figure of Christ, who is frequently called David, and is here chiefly to be understood. O happy we, for whose sake God hath sworn, saith Tertullian! and O most wretched, if we beleeve him not thus swearing!

Vers. 4. Thy Seed will I establish for ever] Davids for a long time; but Christs for ever and aye.

And build up thy throne to all generations] Christs Kingdom hath no end, Isa. 9. 7. Luke 1. 33. This is very comfortable. The Jews understanding this promise of Davids Kingdom, have oft attempted the restauration of it; but in vain, and to the ruine of their Nation.

Vers. 5. And the heavens shall praise thy Wonders] Heb. Thy Miracle, viz. in their circumgyration (which sheweth a first mover) in their embroidery, influences, &c. yeelding matter and occasion of praise. And thus, All thy Works praise thee, O Lord, but thy Saints bless thee, Psa. 145. 10. and so by Heavens here we may understand the Angels of Heaven (as they are called, Mat. 24. 36.) as by the Congregation of Saints, the Church universal in heaven and earth, by whom God is highly praised for the Covenant of Grace.

Vers. 6. For who in the heaven can be compared, &c.] Thou farre transcendest the brightest Cherub, all whose excellency is but derivative, a drop of thine Ocean, a spark of thy flame.

Who among the Sons of the mighty] Inter eheros Angelorum, saith the Chaldee; What Angel, what Man?

Vers. 7. God is greatly to be feared in the assembly, &c.] Heb. Daunting terrible in the secret of the Saints very much. The holy Angels make their addresses unto him with greatest reverence and self-abasements; for they know that he humbleth himself to behold things in heaven, Psal. 113. How much more then should we set our selves to serve him with reverence and godly fear, sith our God is a consuming fire? Heb. 12. 28, 29.

Vers. 8. Who is a strong Lord, like unto thee] Heb. Who is like thee, mighty Jah?

This

This is a mighty effect, whereat [ ] get above all Creatures in their conceptions of him.

Quickly shall I slay] Or, I shall slay, the word signifies both, and thou art full of faithfulness.

Thou dividest the sea] That is, as was noted above, the work of Gods Power is often celebrated as wrought many, all things confirm it.

Verf. 10. Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces] i. e. Egypt, which is called Rahab, for its strength and pride.] Or, as read doubly, wounded, or feeble as newly born, dispatche, to here.

Vo; Hilal vel-nerarum lectualium designat.

Thou hast scattered, &c.] See Isa. 25. 11 with the Notes.

Verf. 11. The heavens are thine] Thou made them by thy Power, and thou maintainest them by thy Providence, and thou governest them as thou wilt in both, Psal. 115. 3.

As for the World, &c.] See Psalm 24. 1.

Verf. 12. Tabor and Hermon] The one West, and the other East, but are here for the West and East of the World; Jordan was the West of the World, as Abana, the river of Damascus, was East. Salem the Expositor adds, Abana, the river of Damascus, was East.

Verf. 13. Thou hast a mighty arm] Men should therefore tremble before God, and trust in him, 1 Pet. 2. 6.

Strong is thy hand] Even thy left hand, q. d. in potest utraq; manu, thou hast both hands alike powerful.

Verf. 14. Justice and Judgement are the habitation (or basis) of thy throne] these are the supporters, and pillars.

Mercy and Truth, &c.] These seem to be Guardians or Satellites. I should much fear Justice and Judgement, if faith assured me not that Mercy and Truth comfort me. Grata and Veritas vocantur a Justitia, Lactantius.

Verf. 15. Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound] Jubilum, the sound of thy Word, the free use of thine Ordinances; serving thee with cheerfulness, and giving thee thanks with exultation of heart, and rejoicing in thee. Quod quasi vocabulum nos posse fieri Latinum arbitrati sumus, ut dicamus Jubilum, sicut Hinnitum dicimus equorum, Rugitum leonum, Balatum ovium, Ululatum luporum, Mugitum boum, Cubitum columbarum, Gemitum columbarum, Cantum gallorum, Vagitum infantium, quo significatur illa vox quæ de gaudio exprimitur, non quæ de quolibet affectu, saith Austin. Jubilum est vox quæ significat animum intus aliquid magnum gaudens eructare, cum præ magnitudine gaudii non potest verbis explicare quod concipit, saith Cyprian, writing to Donatus, concerning the joy of his Conversion.

They shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance] In the fear of the Lord, and in the comforts of the holy Ghost.

Verf. 16. And in thy name shall they rejoice all the day] Or, many day. Exhilarasper festum, saith Pagninus, Vox apta ad festa celebrata, saith Vatablus, God crowneth the Kalender of good mens lives with many festivals.

Verf. 17. For thou art the glory of their strength] And hence it is that they are filled to full with comfort, and do over-abound exceedingly with joy in all their tribulations, 2 Cor. 7. 4.

Verf. 18. For the Lord is our defence] Heb. our shield, the holy nature being wounded, but through the [ ] and the holy host of Israel our King] How then can any [ ] cry shame? Micah 7.

Verf. 19. Then thou spakest in vision to thy holy one] [ ] I have found David my servant, with my holy oil have I anointed him] I have called David to the Kingdom, and qualified [ ] to say [ ] of forgiveness [ ] vulgar.

With my holy oil have I anointed him] Heb. Chrisma, [ ] and in many [ ] I have found David my servant, with my holy oil have I anointed him] I [ ] my power [ ]

Vers. 22. The enemy shall not exact upon him] I will overthrow and carry him thorough all conditions with constancy. See Psal. 18. 32. with the Note.

Nor the son of wickedness afflict him] I.e. the wicked one, Satan, shall not prevail more strength than the hand.

Vers. 23. The enemy shall not exact upon him] Or shall profit nothing, do prosper at all, as the Christian and Church have it.

Nor the son of wickedness] Heb. Of iniquities with, one that is set upon mischief, as above [that people troubled for sin, Psal. 78. 33.]

Vers. 23. And I will beat down his foes, &c.] Victory encouragement is to the Lord. He may venture by confidence on small Moments, One will put to flight whom I take part with, is sure to prevail.

That hate him] That secretly malign him, though they cannot hurt his person, to promote, and my power [which Psal. 2. 9. breaketh all to shivers, shall guard his heart and mind in Christ, Phil. 4. 7.

Shall his horn be exalted] He shall be victorious and triumphant.

Vers. 24. And with his horn shall he push the nations, &c.] Heb. Even Vice-gods, Dan. 11. 7. Here Note. 3. How Christ is [exalted above all Kings, &c.] Psal. 72. 9. Isa. 49. 23. Persians earth and water, in token of subjection to Darius their King. Christ is the true responder, a noble ancient by stamped by Sesostris King of Egypt. Her. in Erat.

Qui Pharios emensus regnum est vitabus ogti.

Vers. 26. He shall cry unto me, Thou art my Father] This was a royalty above all the rest. Job 1. 12. 2 Job 2. 6. and beyond to Christ the only-begotten son of God; it sets him above all the Angels, Heb. 1.

My God] This is the Peculiarity of heavenly honor.

Vers. 27. Also I will make him my first-born] Christ is the first-born of every Creature, and in all things hath the pre-eminence. Crowns all to shall be the highest Priest on earth, highest and supremest [Governour] of them. Rev. 1. 5. Psal. 72. 11. Dan. 7. &c.

Vers. 28. My mercy will I keep for him] He shall be ready at all times for his relief, even like [the mercies of David, Isa. 55. 3.] never will I merely take it from him, as I did from Saul.

And my Covenant shall stand fast with him] Faster than the mountains, Isa. 54. 10. firmer than the courses of Sun and Moon, day and night, Jer. 31. 35. 36. &c. 33. 20, 21.

Vers. 29. His seed also, &c.] This is the everlasting covenant of Christ and his Kingdom.

And his throne as the days of heaven] Like the Kingdom of Heaven, eternall; for the as the Hebrew Phrase.

Vers. 30. If his children forsake my law, &c.] If they fall into sins of commission.

And walk not in my judgments] If they fall into sins of omission.

Vers. 31. If they break my statutes] If they fall into sins of omission, and shoot short. And commission) recovereth a lost recovenant, [Psal. 51. 12.] even commission

Vers. 32. Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, &c.] If they break [their sins never to remember, will forgive them, though I take vengeance [compare 3. 18. Ezek. 3. 2. Sam. 7. 14.

Vers. 33. Nevertheless my loving kindness will I not utterly take from him, &c.] the Saints. with the rod of men, &c.

Vers.

Verſ. 34. My Covenant I will not break] Heb. I will not prophane my Covenant, though they have prophaned my ſtatutes verſ. 31.

Nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips] But will pardon their failings, and cauſe them to keep my Commandements.

Verſ. 35. Once have I ſworn by mine Holineſſe] Which is as deep an oath as I know how to take; for my holineſſe is my ſelf, who am moſt holy, and the fountain of all holineſs. By this I have ſworn once, that is, once for all, immobiliter, immutabiliter.

Verſ. 36. His ſeed ſhall endure for ever] Chriſt ſhall ſee his ſeed, he ſhall prolong his dayes, and the pleaſure of the Lord ſhall proſper in his hands, Iſa. 53. 10. filiabitur nomine ejus, Pſal. 72. 17. See there.

Verſ. 37. It ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever, as the Moon] If his ſons be good, they ſhall ſhine as the Sun in his ſtrength (ſaith Kimchi) as, if they be not, yet they ſhall be as the Moon that ſhineth, though for a time obſcured or eclipſed. A fit reſemblance (ſaith another Expoſitor) of the throne or Church of Chriſt; which hath not alwaies one face or appearance in the World, though it be perpetuall. The Papiſts would have this Moon alwaies in the full; and if ſhe ſhew but little light to us, they will not yeeld ſhe is the Moon. And yet (except in the Eclipſe) Aſtronomers demonſtrate that the Moon hath at all times as much light as ſhe hath in the full; but oftentimes a great part of the bright ſide is turned to Heaven, and a leſſer part to the earth: And ſo the Church is ever conſpicuous to Gods eye, though it appear not alwaies ſo to us. Ainſw.

And as a faithfull witneſs in Heaven] As oft then as we ſee the Sun and Moon in Heaven, let us think of the conſtancy of Gods Covenant, and the perpetuity of Chriſts Kingdome. By this faithfull witneſſe, ſome underſtand the Rainbow, Gen. 9. 13, &c.

Verſ. 38. But thou haſt caſt off, and abhorred] So it ſeemed to the Pſalmiſt through infirmity of the fleſh (though his faith did ubiq; micare, appear ever and anon amidſt his complaints) and ſo the enemies reported and inſulted.

Thou haſt been wroth with thine anointed] ſc. Out of love diſpleaſed. And here, as likewiſe in the verſes following, omnia ſunt Aſyndeta, ad vehementiam

Verſ. 39. Thou haſt made void the Covenant] This paſſage a certain Spaniſh Rabbi ſtumbled at (as hath been noted on the title of this Pſalm) but without cauſe; for all theſe things are ſpoken κατὰ δόξαν, and not κατ' ἀλήθειαν, according to opinion, and not according to the truth of things. And therefore Kimchi ſaith well here, Many wonder at this Pſalmiſt, and I do as much wonder at their wondring, &c.

Thou haſt prophaned his Crown] By rendring his regal dignity contemptible. The Greek rendreth it, his Sanctuary. ἁγίασμα αὐτοῦ.

Verſ. 40. Thou haſt broken down all his hedges] Or walls. The walls of Sparta were their Militia, of England are their ſhips, of all lands their Laws, Eccleſ. 10. 8.

Thou haſt brought his ſtrong-holds to ruine] Or to conſternation, and deadly fright.

Signa movet gelidâ formidine concutit arcem. Buchanan.

Verſ. 41. All that paſs by the way ſpoil him] They rob and riffle him; ſuch havock was made by Shiſhak, and is ſtill by the Churches enemies, Heb. 10. 34.

He is a reproach to his neighbours] Who now look upon him as a King of Clouts, and ask, where is his invincible Majeſty?

Verſ. 42. Thou haſt ſet up] Thou ſeemeſt to be on their ſide.

Thou haſt made all his enemies] To revell in his ruines.

Verſ. 43. Thou haſt turned the edge] Diſarmed and diſabled him.

And haſt not made him, &c.] but turned his courage into cowardiſe.

Verſ. 44. Thou haſt made his glory to ceaſe] Heb. his brightneſſe, the ſplendent glory and dignity of the Kingdome: Some underſtand it of the Prieſthood, and the following words of the Kingdome.

Verſ. 45. The dayes of his youth haſt thou ſhortened] Thou haſt nipped him in the bud, ſnatcht him away by an untimely end, as a young man is ſometimes in his prime and pride.

Thou haſt covered him with ſhame. Selah] Thou haſt wrapped him up in the winding-ſheet of ſhame. Lord, this is true.

Verſ. 46. How long, Lord, &c.] Here faith prevaileth againſt fleſh, and falleth a praying, and at length a praiſing God.

Verſ. 47. Remember how ſhort] See Pſal. 39. 5.

Wherefore haſt thou, &c.] As thou mayeſt ſeem to have done, unleſſe they may chearfully ſerve thee, and enjoy thee.

Verſ. 48. What man is he that liveth, &c?] q. d. Sith dye we muſt, let us live while we may, to ſome good purpoſe.

Selah] q. d. Mark it, and meditate well and oft on this ſavoury ſubject.

Verſ. 49. Lord where are, &c.] q. d. Thou ſeemeſt to have loſt them, and we would fain find them again for thee.

Verſ. 50. Remember Lord] Thou ſeemeſt to have forgotten us and our ſufferings, and we would fain remind thee.

Verſ. 51. The footſteps of thine anointed] Heb. The heels or foot-ſoles, that is, his doings and ſufferings. The Chaldee and others render it, tarditates, moras Chriſti tui, the delayes of thy Chriſt in comming, whom therefore they twit us with, velut tardigradum vel loripedem & claudum, and ſay, where is the promiſed Meſſiah?

Verſ. 52. Bleſſed be the Lord, &c.] ſc. For a Chriſt; or for adverſity as well as for proſperity; and this, not formally and ſlightly, but earneſtly, and with utmoſt affection, Amen, and Amen.

PSAL. XC.

A Prayer of Moſes] Made by him, belike, when he ſaw the carkaſſes of the people fall ſo faſt in the wilderneſſe; committed to writing for the inſtruction of thoſe that were left alive, but ſentenced to death, Numb. 14. and here fitly placed, as an illuſtration of that which was ſaid in the precedent Pſalm, Verſ. 48. What man is he that liveth, and ſhall not ſee death? Shall he deliver his ſoul from the hand of the grave? Selah.

Verſ. 1. Lord, thou haſt been our dwelling place] In all our troubles and travels thorough this wilderneſſe, and before, we have not been houſeleſſe and harbourleſſe, for Thou haſt been our dwelling-place, our habitacle of refuge, as ſome render it. We uſe to ſay A mans houſe is his caſtle. The civile-law ſaith, De domo ſua nemo extrahi debet, aut in jus vocari, quia domus tutiſſimum cuiq; refugium atq; receptaculum, No man ought to be drawn out of his houſe at the ſute of another; becauſe his houſe is his ſafeſt refuge and receptacle. He that dwelleth in God cannot bee unhouſed, becauſe God is ſtronger than all; neither can any one take another out of his hands, Joh. 10. Here then it is beſt for us to take up as in our manſion-houſe, and to ſeek a ſupply of all our wants in God alone. It was a witty ſaying of that learned Picus Mirandula, God created the Earth for beaſts to inhabit, the Sea for fiſhes, the Air for fouls, the Heaven for Angels and ſtars. Man therefore hath no place to dwell and abide in, but the Lord alone. See Ezek. 11. 16. 2 Cor. 6. 8, 9, 10.

Maon. habitaculum tutum.

Verſ. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth] And they were made at the creation, not caſt up by the Flood, as ſome have held. Moſes firſt celebrateth Gods eternity, and then fetteth forth mans mortality, that the one being ſet over against the other (as Solomon ſpeaketh in another caſe) God may be glorified, and man comforted, which is the main end of the holy Scriptures, Rom. 15. 4. and far beyond thoſe conſolatiuncula Philoſophica.

Eccleſ. 7. 14.

Verſ. 3. Thou turneſt man to deſtruction] Ad minutiſſimum quiddam, ſo Beza rendreth it, to a very ſmall buſineſſe, to duſt and powder. Others, ad contritionem vel confuſionem; by turning looſe upon him diverſe diſeaſes and diſtreſſes, thou turneſt him out of the World, Eccleſ. 1, 13. And generally, thou ſayeſt of all and ſingular ſons of men. Return ye] Your bodies to the earth, according to the decree Gen. 3. 17, 18, 19. your ſouls to God that gave them, Eccleſ. 12. 7. And here the courſe of mans life is compared (ſaith One) to a race in a Tilt or Turney, where we ſoon run to the end of the race as it were, and then return back again. Intelligit Moſes vitam humanam ſimilem eſſe gyro, ſaith Another. Mans life is compared to a ring or round, we walk a ſhort round; and then God gathers us in to himſelf. One being aſked what

what Life was? made an anſwer anſwerleſs, for he preſently turned his back and went his way. We fetch here but a turn, and God ſaith; Return yee Children of men. This ſome make to be an irony; as if God ſhould ſay, Live again, if yee can. Some apply it to the Reſurrection, others to Mortification, and Vivification.

Verſ. 4. For a thouſand years in thy ſight, &c.] q. d. Live men a longer or ſhorter ſpace, Serius aut citius, thou endeſt their days; and in compariſon of thine Eternity, Punctum eſt quod vivimus & puncto minus, it is a ſmall ſpace of time that the longeſt liver hath upon earth, 2 Pet. 3. 8. Pſal. 39. 5. Non multum ſane abeſt à nihilo. Some would hence inferre, that the Day of Judgement ſhall laſt a thouſand years; fides ſit penes authores.

When it is paſſed] We judge better of the ſhortneſs of time, when it is paſt.

And as a watch in the night] Which is but three hours ſpace; for Souldiers divide the Night into four Watches, and our life is full of the darkneſs of errour and terrour.

Verſ. 5. Thou carryeſt them away as with a flood] Suddenly, violently, irreſiſtibly, by particular Judgements, beſides that general neceſſity of dying once, Heb. 9. 27. This is ſet forth by a treble compariſon, of Floods, Sleep, and Flowers here; and indeed the vanity and miſery of mans life is ſuch, as cannot ſufficiently be ſet forth by any ſimilitudes. See verſ. 9, 10.

They are like a ſleep] Or dream; the dream of a ſhadow, ſaith Pindarus; the ſhadow of ſmoke, ſaith another. σκιᾶς ὄναρ.

They are as graſs] An ordinary compariſon, Iſa. 40. 6. Jam. 1.

Verſ. 6. In the morning it flouriſheth] So doth man in his prime and vigour, his bones full of marrow, his breſts of milk.

In the evening it is cut down] So is man by Deaths mortal Sythe, which moweth down the Lillies of the Crown, as well as the Graſs of the Field. In the evening graſs will cut better, and the Mowers can better work at it.

Verſ. 7. For we are conſumed by thine anger] Juſtly conceived for our ſins, ver. 8. this is a cauſe of death that Philoſophy diſcovereth not, as being blinde, and not able to ſee farre off, and therefore cannot preſcribe any ſufficient remedy againſt the fear of death, ſuch as is here ſet down, verſ. 12. but ſuch as made Tully complain, that the Diſeaſe was too hard for the Medicine, and ſuch as left men either doubtful (Socrates, for inſtance) or deſperate, and devoyd of ſenſe, as Petronius in Tacitus, Qui in ipſis atriis mortis delicias quæſivit, ſolaced himſelf with ſinging ſuch light Sonnets as this;

Vivamus mea Lesbia atq; amemus,
Rumoreſq; ſenum ſeveriorum
Omnes unius æſtimemus aſſis.

And by thy wrath are we troubled] Conſternati ſumus, Death ſtings us and ſticks us; the motion and mention of it is terrible to us, through ſenſe of ſin, and fear of wrath, Heb. 2. 15. Symmachus & Aquila tranſtulerant acceleravimus.

Verſ. 8. Thou haſt ſet our iniquities before thee] As a Judge doth the miſdeeds of a Malefactor, together with the proofs and evidences.

Our ſecret ſins] Which we either never took notice of, or had utterly forgotten (the ſins of our youth, ſome render it, but not ſo well) thoſe ſins which we had hoped to have ſecreted, ſuch was our hypocriſie.

In the light of thy countenance] This light thou haſt made uſe of for the diſcovery of our inmoſt evils, thoſe that lye moſt up in the heart of the Country, as it were, as the murmurings, and misbeleef of our hearts, &c. theſe thy pure eyes, more clear and radiant than the Sun it ſelf, have plainly diſcerned. Nature teacheth us, that the fiery eye needeth no outward light, but ſeeth extramittendo, by ſending out a ray, &c.

Verſ. 9. For all our days are paſſed away] Heb. Do turn away the face. See verſ. 3.

We ſpend our years as a tale that is told] The grace whereof is brevity. Some render it, as a thought, that ariſeth and paſſeth. To this ſence the Greek Poet; q. d. dicto citius.

Αἶλα γὰρ ὥστε νόημα παρέρχεται ἀγλαὸς ἥβη.

The Chaldee hath it, Ut flatus oris in Hyeme, as the breath of ones mouth in Winter. See Jam. 4. 14.

Verſ. 10. The days of our years are threeſcore, &c.] So Solon in Laertius ſaith, the term of mans life is ſeventy years; this few exceed, and fewer attain to. To the ſame ſenſe ſpeaketh Macrobius alſo, ſaying, Septies deni anni à Phyſicis creditur meta vivendi, & hoc vitæ humanæ perfectum ſpacium terminatur, &c. The Fathers lived longer; but as mens wickedneſs increaſed, ſo their days decreaſed; and now their lives are daily ſhortned, the Generations diſpatcht away, that the World may the ſooner come to an end. If Moſes and Aaron of old, and Johannes de temporibus, and ſome few others of latter time live longer, even to an hundred or more, theſe are ſingular examples, and it is of the generality that the Pſalmiſt here ſpeaketh.

Lib. 1. Som. cap. 6.

D. Maior. And if by reaſon of ſtrength, &c.] One readeth it thus; And if by fortitude fourſcore years, even their latitude is labour and ſorrow; that is, this inlarging of the time bringeth nothing but labour and miſery, becauſe now the body is diſeaſed, &c.

For it is ſoon cut off] As a Web, or as Graſs.

And we flee away] As a Bird upon the wing, or as an hour of the day:

Qui neſcit quo vita modo volat, audiat horas;
Quam ſit vita fugax, nos docet iſte ſonus.

Enchirid. I am not eternity, ſaid Epictetus, but a man; that is, a ſmall part of the whole, as the hour is of the day; I muſt therefore come and go away as the hour doth.

Verſ. 11. Who knoweth the power of thine anger?] None doth, ſith it is ſuch as no man can either avoyd or abide; and ſuch is mens ſtupidity, that few will beleeve till they feel it; no though their lives be ſo ſhort, and uncertain.

Even according to thy fear, ſo is thy wrath] Ira tua non eſt minor timore noſtro; let a man fear thee never ſo much, he is ſure to feel thee much more, if once he fall into thy fingers.

Verſ. 12. So teach us to number our days] The Philoſopher affirms, that man is therefore the wiſeſt of Creatures, becauſe he alone can number. But in this Divine Arithmetick of numbring our days (to the which all other is not to be compared, no though we could, as Archimedes boaſted, number the Stars of Heaven, or the Sands by the Sea ſhore) God himſelf muſt be our Teacher, or wee ſhall never do it to purpoſe. R. Solomon obſerveth, that the word כֵּן rendred So, here, if taken as numeral letters, maketh Seventy, and the yeers of our life are ſeventy; out of which, ſay other Rabbines, if we deduct the time of Childe-hood and Youth, which is vanity, the time of ſleep, repoſe, repaſt, and recreation (which is more than the one half) and the time of affliction and grief which we enjoy not, what a poor pittance will life be reduced unto?

Brutа non numerant.

That we may apply our hearts] Heb. That we may cauſe them to come; for naturally they hang off, and make ſtrange.

Unto Wiſdom] To the true fear of God, and mortification of ſin, which is the ſting of death, and makes it a trap-door to hell. This is hard to do, but muſt bee done; or men are undone for ever. To live with dying thoughts, is the way to dye with living comforts.

Verſ. 13. Let it repent thee] Or, comfort thou thy ſervants.

Verſ. 14. O ſatisfie us early] As thou didſt our Fathers with Manna.

Verſ. 15. Make us glad according] Let us have a proportion at leaſt.

Verſ. 16. Let thy work appear] Thy proper work, which is to ſhew mercy; for to do Juſtice is thy work, thy ſtrange work, Iſa. 28. 21.

And thy glory unto their children] That they at leaſt may enter into the Land of Canaan, according to Numb. 14. 31.

Verſ. 17. And let the beauty of the Lord, &c.] i. e. The bounty; the Italian rendreth it, La Giocondita, jucunditas Domini ſit in nos.

And eſtabliſh thou the work, &c.] Thus we had all need to pray; for,

Nullius

Nullius est felix conatus et utilis unquam,
Consiliam si non det q; juvetq; Deus.

PSAL. XCI.

VErs. 1. He that dwelleth in the secret place, &c.] The safety of a Saint is in this whole Psalm (Quo nihil neq; solidius neq; splendidius dici potest) set forth to the life, Verbis vivis, animatis sententiis & spiritus fervore flagrantissimis.

Shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty] Under the pleasant and assured defence of God; he shall lodge under the shadow of Shaddai, and there sing away care, and fear.

Vers. 2. I will say of the Lord] I dare say it is so as I have said, said the Psalmist, (whom the Jews make to be Moses) and I will presently make proof of it in my self; Non verbis solum prædicans, sed exemplis. Some conceive that the Beleever having heard the former Proposition, vers. 1. is here brought in professing his faith, and saying to the Psalmist, Behold, I dwell in the secret place of the most High, and shall I abide under the shadow of the Almighty? The Answer follows.

Vers. 3. Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the Fowler] i. e. Of the Devil, and his Emissaries, 2 Tim. 2. 26. who by force and fraud seek to insnare the Saints. Gratiæ privativæ multò plures sunt quam positivæ, saith Gerson. God daily delivereth his from innumerable deaths and dangers. By Fowler here, some understand the punishing Angel, 2 Sam. 24. and conceive that this Psalm was penned upon occasion of that great Plague that followed upon Davids numbring the people; for then, if ever, both Prince and People stood in need of special comfort, and here they have it. Divine consolations are therefore sweet, because seasonable and suitable.

And from the noysome Pestilence] That uncomfortable and contagious disease. The vulgar rendreth it, and from rough words. In Hebrew Dabhar signifieth a word, Debher, a Pest; an evil tongue hath the Pestilence in it. Ab excidio etiorum.

Vers. 4. He shall cover thee with his feathers] As the Hen doth her Chickens; Fides est qua te pullastrum, Christum gallinam facit, ut sub pennis ejus speres; nam salus in pennis ejus, saith Luther: It is Faith which maketh thee the little Chicken, and Christ the Hen; that thou maist hide, and hope, hover, and cover under his wings; for there is health in his wings.

And under his wings shalt thou trust] For without Faith what use is there to us of the Promises. Non de se debet sperare Christianus; si vult esse firmus vapore materno nutriatur, ut pullus gallinaceus, saith Austin; Let no man hope for safety or strength, but under Christs wings graciously stretcht out over him.

Vers. 5. Thou shalt not be afraid for the terrour by night] Thou shalt be freed, if not from the common destruction, yet from the common distraction.

Impavidum ferient ruinæ.

Nor for the arrow that flyeth by day] Sudden ill occurrences quæ nec prævident nec præcavent fideles, the arrows of Death shall come whisking by thine ears, and not hit.

Quid quisq; vitet unquam homini sat is Cautum est in horas. — Improvisa lethi
Vis rapuit, rapietq; gentes. Hor. lib. 2. Od. 13.

True Faith is a Target, and saveth a man, if not from the smart, yet from the hurt of evil accidents.

Vers. 6. Nor for the Pestilence] Called before Terrour, and Arrow, as some conceive. Hippocrates calleth it τὸ θεῖον, the Divine Disease, because sent more immediately from God, as an evil Messenger. Not but that a good man may dye of the Plague, as did Oecolampadius, and many others; Hezechiah is thought to have had it, so had reverend Beza (his Family was four several times visited here-with) who was much comforted under that and other heavy afflictions by this ſweet Pſalm, which therefore he hugg'd and held moſt dear all the dayes of his life, as himſelf witneſſeth in his argument, and uſe of this Pſalm.

was

Nor for the deſtruction that waſteth at noon-day] For the noon-day-Devil (ſo the Vulgar rendreth it after the Sept.) as, for Peſtilence walking in darkneſs, one old Engliſh Manuſcript hath Goblin. The Chaldee here expounds it, the company of Devils. As, in the next verſe, A thouſand ſhall fall at thy ſide, and ten thouſand, &c. R. Solomon expoundeth, A thouſand Devils ſhall pitch their tents on thy right hand, and on thy left; but ſhall not hurt thee; becauſe the good Angels ſhall counterguard thee againſt them. But it is better to underſtand all (as before) of the Peſtilence, though I doubt not but the Devil that old man-ſlayer hath a hand in this, and other common calamities; yet not without the Lords over-ruling power limiting him.

Verſ. 7. A thouſand ſhall fall, &c.] This deadly diſeaſe layes heaps upon heaps, (as we have had lamentable experience) and ſcarce leaveth living enow to bury the dead, as in the dayes of Decius the Emperour.

But it ſhall not come nigh thee] Thou ſhalt be antidoted, and priviledged; ſc. if God ſee it good for thee. See verſ. 6. and thou be carefull to ſerve his providence. The Turks ſhun not the company of thoſe that have the plague; but pointing upon their foreheads, ſay, It was written there at their birth when they ſhall dye. Thus to do, is not to truſt God, but to tempt him.

Verſ. 8. Only with thine eyes ſhalt thou behold] And ſay, O the ſeverity of divine juſtice! O the venemous and miſchievous nature and effects of mens ſin! Behold the goodneſſe and ſeverity of God; on them which fell ſeverity, but toward mee goodneſſe, if I continue in his goodneſſe; otherwiſe I ſhall alſo be cut off, Rom. 11. 22.

And ſee the reward of the wicked] Thy ſelf being as it were ſhot-free; thy ſincerity prevailing for thy ſafety.

Verſ. 9. Becauſe thou haſt made the Lord which is my refuge, &c.] Becauſe thou haſt done, as I do, thou ſhalt ſpeed as I have ſped; for God is rich in mercy to all his.

Even the Moſt High thy habitation] See Pſal. 90. 1.

Verſ. 10. There ſhall no evill befall thee] No devoratory evill, as Tertullian expreſſeth it; nothing that tendeth ad exitium, but only ad exercitium, and ſuch as ſhall end in thy good.

Neither ſhall any plague] What a wonderfull ſeparation made the Lord betwixt the houſes of the Iſraelites and the Egyptians, Exod. 11. 7? See Job 5. and take theſe places, as verſe 6. For it may befall a Saint to ſhare in a common calamity; as the good Corn and weeds are cut down together, but for a different end and purpoſe,

-- Non te tua plurima, Penthen,
Labentem texit pietas --

Verſ. 11. For he ſhall give his Angels charge over thee] This guard of Angels, many Angels, yea all, if need be, to ſecure every poor beleever, how meanly ſoever he thinks of himſelf, or is eſteemed by others, is no ſmall priviledge. See Mat. 4. 6. with the Note.

To keep thee in all thy wayes] In all thy lawfull and Chriſtian undertakings; for no further doth God or his holy Angels take charge of thee. If we keep not within Gods precincts, we cannot look for his protection. Wefts and ſtrayes fall to the Lord of the ſoil. The State ſecureth none that are abroad at undue hours, that travell not betwixt Sun and Sun. Divines obſerve, that the Devil, citing this Text, Mat. 4. 6. left out theſe words on purpoſe, as not for his purpoſe; yet doth not our Saviour ſo much as upbraid him with this mutilation, nor yet tell him of that which followeth, verſe 13. Thou ſhalt tread upon the Lyon and Adder, &c. to teach us, in dealing with an adverſary, not to lye at the catch, but anſwer to the thing, &c.

Verſ. 12. They ſhall bear thee up in their hands] See the Note on Mat. 4. 6. and be ſenſible of the many good offices done us by the bleſſed Angels, not once looking for our thanks.

Verſ. 13.

Vers. 13. Thou shalt tread upon the Lion, &c.] No Creature shall harm thee, so as to hinder thine eternal happinesse. See Isa. 11. 6, 7, 8. Hos. 2. 18. Job 5. 23. Mar. 16. 18. this Text was shamefully abused by Pope Alexander, Anno 1159. when at Venice he trod upon the neck of the Emperour Frederick Barbarossa, and said, as here, super leonem & aspidem ambulabis, &c.

Vers. 14. Because he hath set his love upon mee, &c.] Because he cleaveth unto mee, and acquiesceth in mee. Thus God is brought in speaking toward the close of all, for greater assurance. Aben-Ezra saith, that it is the speech of God to his Angels. Ardet me, amplexus est me.

I will set him on high, because he hath known my name] And hence it is, that his heart is so set upon mee. They that know Gods name will surely trust in him, Psal. 9. 10. Thy name is as an ointment powred out, therefore do the Virgins love thee, Cant. 1. 3. But unkent unkist, as the Northern Proverb hath it; men therefore care not for God, because they know not his excellencies.

Vers. 15. He shall call upon mee] This is an indispensable duty, and will be chearfully performed by those that know and love the Lord.

I will deliver him, &c.] As he did Davia, Joseph, Daniel, and others.

Vers. 16. With long life, &c.] he shall have enough of this life present even to a satiety, and Heaven in the end. The Hebrews call this Psalm Canticum de actidentibus. When Beza came first to the reformed Church, hee found them singing this Psalm, and was greatly encouraged.

PSAL. XCII.

A Psalm or song for the Sabbath day] The Sabbath in the Hebrew hath its name from resting, and is near allied to two other words, the first whereof signifieth to sit still, and the second to worship and give praise. On this day they met for works of Piety (as sacrificing, reading and expounding the Scriptures, praying, singing, as here, &c.) and of mercy, Matth. 12. 2-7, 8, 11, 12. And this Psalm treating of Gods great Works, was purposely set for a Canon of sanctifying that day called by the Jews the Queen of dayes; in praise whereof, before and after meat, they daily say certain verses. שִׁבַּת יְשַׁבֵּת שַׁבָּת

Vers. 1. It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord] And the Sabbath-day is a good time to do it in; for then (as Kimchi here noteth) men are at leisure and liberty to do it most solemnly, the better day, the better deed.

And to sing praises unto thy name] The Psalmist commends it, and presently sets upon the doing of it. So Psal. 122. 6, 7. he no sooner bids pray for the Peace of Jerusalem, but himself prayes, Peace be within thy walls, &c.

Vers. 2 To shew forth thy loving kindness in the morning] Every morning, that God may have the first fruits of the day, but especially on the Sabbath-morning, when we awake and rise, ad quietem & ad delicias animæ & corporis, as Kimchi here hath it. The Jews blesse God at the Sabbaths comming in, and going out.

And thy faithfulnesse in the night] Breaking our sleep for that purpose; yea we must be in the fear of the Lord all the day long, Prov. 23. 17. how much more on the Sabbath-day? then our whole work must be to be ravished in spirit, doing no work, but such as whereby we either blesse God, or look to receive a blessing from God, none but such as wherein we would the Lord should find us at his comming, which Lactantius saith will be on the Sabbath-day.

Vers. 3. Upon an instrument of ten strings, &c.] This was part of the Jewish pedagogy; and teacheth us to use all lawfull means to inforce our selves to that, whereunto we are so dull and backward.

Vers. 4. For thou Lord hast made mee glad, &c.] And I will improve this chearfulnesse to thankfulnesse, Jam. 5. 13. On the Sabbath we ought solummodo spiritualibus gaudiis repleri, to be filled with spirituall joyes only, saith the Councill of Paris held Anno 820.

I will triumph in the works of thy hands] i.e. The works of Creation, Administration, but especially of Redemption.

Vers. 5. O Lord, how great are thy works?] Surely so great, that I cannot utter them, and must therefore thus vent my self by an exclamation.

Expleri

Virgil. Expleri mentem nequeo, ardeſcoq; tuendo.

And thy thoughts are very deep] Here then we muſt do as thoſe Romans did, whowhen they found a Lake, the depth whereof was unknown, they dedicated it to Victory. Cry, O the depth, and there reſt us.

Verſ. 6. A brutiſh man knows not] A ſottiſh ſenſualiſt who hath his ſoul for ſalt only, to keep his body from putrifying (as we ſay of ſwine) he takes no knowledge of Gods great works, but grunts and goes his wayes; contenting himſelf with a naturall uſe of the Creatures, as beaſts do.

Verſ. 7. When the wicked ſpring as the graſs, &c.] This the fool admireth, calling the proud happy, &c. Mal. 3. 15. and not conſidering that that proud graſs ſhall be mown down, and that flouriſh ſhall ſoon periſh.

It is that they ſhall bee deſtroyed for ever] Not grow again, as mown graſſe doth: Exoriuntur ut exurantur. It is but as Hamans banquet before execution.

Verſ. 8. But thou Lord art moſt high, &c.] q. d. Flouriſh the wicked never ſo much, ſhoot they up never ſo high, thou art higher, and in the thing wherein they deal proudly, thou art above them, Exod. 18. 11.

Verſ. 9. For loe thine enemies, &c.] The Pſalmiſt by this demonſtrative particle Loe, points to it as it were with the Finger, as a thing moſt evident and undoubted.

Shall be ſcattered] Diſparant ſe, diſſiliunt, diſpart themſelves.

Verſ. 10. Like the horn of an Unicorn] Which is very fair, hard, and well lifted up. See Numb. 23. 26. I am in good plight.

I ſhall be anointed] Tis well for the preſent, and it will be better hereafter.

Verſ. 11. Mine eye alſo ſhall ſee my deſire on mine enemies] Or, on mine obſervers, who watch for my halting.

Verſ. 12. The Righteous ſhall flouriſh like the Palm] A tree that groweth not in theſe cold climats, but where it doth, is noted for tall, conſtantly green, long-lived, ſweet, firm, ſtraight, &c.

ἐμπεδόφυλλος. Theoph.

Alciat. Emblem.

Nititur in pondus palma & conſurgit in altum;
Quo magis & premitur, hoc magis tollit onus.

Though it hath many waights at the top, and many ſnakes at the bottom, yet it ſtill ſaith, Nec premor, nec perimor.

Like a Cedar] Not like graſſe, as the wicked do, verſe 7.

Verſ. 13. Thoſe that be planted] Having taken deep root there; Hypocrites are only thruſt in, as a ſtake, into the earth. Mnaſon was an old Diſciple, Andronicus and Junia were in Chriſt before Paul, and therefore of note among the Apoſtles for well rooted and fruited.

Rom. 16. 7.

In the Courts of our God] In Chriſt, and under the ordinances.

Verſ. 14. They ſhall ſtill bring forth fruit in old age] Quantumvis veteres, non veteraſcent, though old, yet they ſhall retain their former vigour and verdure; and be like that Perſian tree in Theophraſtus, that at the ſame time doth bud, bloſſom, and bear fruit, pullulantes & ſuccolentæ.

Buchole. They ſhall be fat and flouriſhing] Vividi & vegeti, not as the Brabanti or Flemmings, qui quo magis ſeneſcunt, eo magis ſtulteſcunt, ſaith Eraſmus, the elder, the fooliſher; not as Trapezuntius, who outlived all his learning; but as Moſes, whoſe ſight failed not, his heat abated not; as Wine, the older the better; as the Sun which ſhineth moſt amiably toward the deſcent.

Verſ. 15. To ſhew that, &c.] This is one of their principall fruits, to give God a teſtimonial, ſuch as good old Moſes doth, Deut. 32 4.

PSAL. XCIII.

VErſ. 1. The Lord reigneth] i. e. The Lord Chriſt. Kimchi here noteth that all the following Pſalms till the hundred and firſt are de diebus Chriſti, of the dayes of Chriſt. Here wee have his Empire and regality aſſerted, firſt, by his works, ſecondly, by his word, verſ. 5. See the like. Pſal. 19. 1, 2. — 7, 8. &c. and that manifeſtation of himſelf by his word far preferred.

He is clothed with Majeſty] He hath now put off his armes, and put on his robes, robes, hee will henceforth rule all wiſely and righteouſly.

The Lord is cloathed with ſtrength] For the battel; in caſe his enemies ſtir, to attempt againſt him, Ezra. 8. 22.

The World alſo is eſtabliſhed] The earth, though it hang like a ball in the air, without a baſis, Ponderibus librata ſuis, yet is unmoveable; how much more the Church?

Verſ. 2. Thy throne is eſtabliſhed of old] Chriſt ſhall reign, utcunq; fremant ſceleratí, & omnia quantum in ſe eſt conturbent, rage the wicked never ſo; for he is Jehovah, verſ. 1. the eternal, here;

-- Firmâ æternus qui conſidet arce.

Verſ. 3. The floods have lifted up, O Lord] Armies of enemies have attempted great matters, but thou haſt ſoon queld and quaſht them. Immota manet, may well be the Churches motto. Hypotypoſis.

Aura tonet, ſonet unda maris, fremat orbis & orcus;
Tu tamen infertos nos tibi, Chriſte, tegis.

The floods lift up their waves] The Word for waves hath its name from daſhing or breaking; the enemies do but beat themſelves into foam and froth againſt Chriſt the Rock, qui inſtar rupis quæ in mari vadoſo, horridi Jovis, & irati, ut ita dicam, Neptuni fervidis aſſultibus undique verberata, non cedit aut minuitur, ſed obtundit aſſuetum fluctibus latus; & firmâ duritie tumentis undæ impetum ſuſtinet ac frangit. Anaphora. Woverius.

Verſ. 4. The Lord on high is mightier] He overtops Tyrants and perſecutors, be they never ſo terrible for noiſe and number. If he but thunder they are huſht, and glad to wriggle, as worms, into their holes.

Verſ. 5. Thy Teſtimonies are very ſure] Thy promiſes infallible; and therefore rage the World never ſo, thou ſhalt ſtill have an holy Catholick Church, ſuch as whoſe principles, practices, and aimes are divine and ſupernaturall; ſuch as walk worthy of God in all well-pleaſing, and inaſmuch as they have theſe rich promiſes, do cleanſe themſelves from all filthineſſe of fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſſe in the fear of God, 2 Cor. 7. 1.

Holineſſe becommeth thine houſe] God looks to be ſerved like himſelf; he will be ſanctified of all thoſe that draw near unto him in holy duties, Levit. 10. 3. This the Heathens were not altogether ignorant of, and therefore at their ſacrifices the Prieſts cryed out τὶς τῇδε, who is here? whereunto the people that were preſent anſwered, πολλοὶ τ' ἀγαθοὶ τὲ πάρεισι, here are many, and thoſe good men all. Eraſm. Præf. in Adag.

-- Procul hinc procul eſte profani.

PSAL. XCIV.

VErſ. 1. O Lord God to whom vengeance belongeth] Heb. Jehovah God of revenges; ſo Jer. 51. 56. The Lord God of recompences. Vengeance is mine ſaith He, I will repay, Deut. 32. 35. And it is beſt he ſhould; for he returneth a juſt recompence of reward, Heb. 2. 2. whereas men ſeek oft an unequall revenge, as a ſtab for the lye given; and beſides, in ſeeking the lives of others, they ſometimes loſe their own. Heb. 10. 30.

Shew thy ſelf] Heb. Shine forth, appear for thy poor wronged ſervant. David knew the Law, and ſubmitted to it; he turneth over his enemies to God to bee ordered by him; neither did he himſelf herein any diſ-ſervice. I ſeek not mine own glory (ſo mine own revenge) ſaith Chriſt; but there is one that ſeeketh it. God never faileth to do it, to be their Champion, who ſtrive not for themſelves, only they muſt wait his leiſure, and not preoccupate his executions.

Verſ. 2. Lift up thy ſelf thou Judge of the earth] Judges as they aſcend the Tribunal, ſo when to paſſe ſentence they uſually ſtand up. And hereunto the Pſalmiſt alludeth. See Iſa. 33. 10.

Verſ. 3. Lord, how long ſhall the wicked, how long?] Bis, quia de die in diem gloriæ auctus, ſaith Aben-Ezra. Twice he ſaith it, becauſe the wicked boaſt day after day, with ſuch inſolency and outrage, as if they were above controul.

Verſ. 4. How long ſhall they utter] Heb. They will bluſter (or well-out as a fountain) they will ſpeak hard things (ſpeak milſtones, throw daggers) they will boaſt themſelves (talk largely of their good parts and practices) all this is expreſſed by an elegant Aſyndeton, to ſhew that they did all this ordinarily, and inceſſantly.

Eurip. Ἀκόλαστον ἔχοντες γλῶσαν, ἀιχίσεν νόσων.

Verſ. 5. They break in peeces thy people] They make potſheards of them. And this is the beſt uſe they make of thy patience; break it off therefore.

Verſ. 6. They ſlay the widow and the ſtranger] Thoſe ſacred perſons, thy proper clients; to ſuch an height of hard-heartedneſſe are they grown, that they pitty not them whom nature and curteſy would ſhew compaſſion to.

Nulla fides, pietaſq; viris qui caſtra ſequuntur.

Let us bleſſe our ſelves out of the bloody fingers of barbarous and brutiſh men, skilful to deſtroy.

Verſ. 7. Yet they ſay, The Lord ſhall not ſee] To all other their enormities they
Lib. 2. c. 7. added this, that they denyed a divine providence, and profeſſed prophaneneſſe. Irridendum vero, curam agere rerum humanarum illud quicquid eſt ſummum, ſaith Pliny, delivering the ſenſe of all other Atheiſts.

Verſ. 8. Underſtand O ye bruiſh] Ye that are ringleaders to the reſt, but no wiſer than the reaſonleſſe creatures; yea, therefore worſe, becauſe ye ought to be better. Polybius complaineth of mans folly above that of other Creatures, in theſe words, Cætera animantes ubi ſemel offenderint, cavent; non vulpes ad laqueum, lupus ad foveam, canis ad fuſtem temere redibunt; Solus homo ab ævo ad ævum peccat fere in iiſdem.

Verſ. 9. He that planted the ear, ſhall he not hear?] Shall the Author of theſe ſenſes be ſenſeleſſe? Our God is not as that Jupiter of Creet, who was pictured without ears, and could not be at leiſure to attend upon ſmall matters. He is ὃς & νὸς; he is alſo ὁλόφθαλμος, all eye, all ear. We read of a people called Panotii, God only is ſo, to ſpeak properly.

He that formed the eye, ſhall he not ſee?] He ſaith formeth, becauſe there are many formes or ſpecies in the eye continually; and as the optick vertue in the eye ſeeth all, and is ſeen of none, ſo doth God much more. All Davids wayes were in Gods ſight, all Gods lawes in Davids ſight, Pſal. 119. 168.

Verſ. 10. He that chaſtiſeth the Heathen, ſhall not he correct?] Qui totis gentibus non parcit, vos non redarguet? He that puniſheth prophane Nations that know him not, ſhall he ſpare you, Amos 3. 2? Shall not tribulation and anguiſh be upon the Jew firſt, Rom. 2. 9? The Chaldee thus paraphraſeth, He that gave a law to his people, ſhall he not puniſh them when they tranſgreſſe it?

He that teacheth man knowledge] Shall not he know? is to be ſupplied to make ſenſe. The Pſalmiſt ſeemeth ſo diſpleaſed at mens doubting or denying of this, that he could not perfect his ſentence, through paſſion of mind. Some cauſes indeed do give that which themſelves have not; as the lifeleſſe heaven inliveneth; the dull whetſtone ſharpeneth. But here it is far otherwiſe, and woe be to ſuch as act not accordingly, Iſa. 29. 15.

Verſ. 11. The Lord knoweth the thoughts of man that they are vanity] Or worſe; that they are ever weaving ſpiders webs, or elſe hatching Cockatrice eggs, Iſa. 59. 5. This ſentence St. Paul allegeth againſt the Worlds wizzards, 1 Cor. 3. 20. who the wiſer they were, the vainer they were, Rom. 1. 21. As Auſtin writing to a man of great parts, ſaith, Ornari abs te Diabolus quærit, the Devill would fain bee tricked up by thee.

Verſ. 12. Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſteneſt, &c.] And thereby effecteſt, that his vain thoughts lodge not within him, Jer. 4. 14. but that the wicked forſake his wayes, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and return to thee, &c. Iſa. 55. 7. Feri Domine, feri, ſaid Luther, ſtrike whiles thou pleaſeſt, Lord; only to thy correction adde inſtruction, Ut quod noceat, doceat. See my Love-tokens.

And teacheſt him out of thy law] Laſhing him, but withall leſſoning him, ut reſipiſcat, & ſerviat tibi corde perfecto, ſaith Kimchi here, that he may repent and ſerve thee.

thee with an upright heart; for which purpoſe affliction ſanctified is of ſingular uſe. Crux voluntatis Dei ſchola, morum diſciplina, felicitatis meditatorium, gaudii Spiritus ſancti officina, breviter bonorum omnium theſaurus, ſaith Brentius on Job 33. 16.

Verſ. 13. That thou mayeſt give him reſt] Here uſually, but hereafter certainly. Mors erumnarum requies, was Chaucers Motto; thoſe that dye in the Lord ſhall reſt from their labours. Mean-while they are chaſtened of the Lord, that they may not be condemned with the World, 1 Cor. 11. 32.

Untill the pit be digged for the wicked] Untill the cold grave hold his body, and hot Hell hold his ſoul.

Verſ. 14. For the Lord will not caſt off his people] Though he caſt them into the furnace of affliction. The wicked he bringeth into miſery, and there leaveth them, to come off as they can, Ezek. 22. 20. & 29. 5. Not ſo the Saints, Zach. 13. 9. Iſa. 43. 2. Heb. 13. 5.

Nor forſake his inheritance] Becauſe His. Patriam quivis amat, non quia pulchram, ſed quia ſuam. Senecâ. All love their own.

Verſ. 15. But judgement ſhall return unto Righteouſneſs] All ſhall be ſet to rights, and every one have his due, according to Rom. 2. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. if not ſooner, yet at the day of judgement without fail. Some give this ſenſe, ſeverity ſhall be changed into mercy, the rigour of the law to the clemency of the Goſpel. Others thus, judgement ſhall return to Righteouſneſs, that is, to its own place; licet defertur judicium non aufertur.

And all the upright in heart ſhall follow it] viz. In their affections; they are carried out after it, earneſtly deſiring that dear day when God will unriddle his providences, and clear up his proceedings with the ſons of men. Some read, ſhall follow him, that is, God; being brought home to him by their afflictions, they ſhall follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. Not ſo every looſe ungirt Chriſtian or profligate profeſſor.

Verſ. 16. Who will riſe up for mee?] q. d. But a very few faſt friends find I at Court, Jonathan excepted. Some there are that will ſprinkle mee with Court-holy-water (as they ſay) give glozing ſpeeches; but 'tis little that they will do, and yet leſſe that they will ſuffer for mee. Faithfull friends, ſaith One, are gone on pilgrimage, and their return is uncertain.

Verſ. 17. Except the Lord had been my help] He loveth to help at a pinch; he uſually reſerveth his hand for a dead liſt. See 2 Tim. 4. 16, 17.

My ſoul had almoſt dwelt in ſilence] i. e. In the dark cloiſters of death. The Greek and Latin Tranſlators render it, In Hell.

Verſ. 18. When I ſaid my foot ſlippeth] I ſtand on a precipice, and ſhall be down. Hypotypoſis eſt.

Thy mercy O Lord held mee] I have ſubſiſted meerly by a miracle of thy mercy, by a prop of thine extraordinary pitty and patience.

Verſ. 19. In the multitude of my thoughts within mee] My perplexed, intricated, inſnarled, intertwined (as the branches of a tree) cogitations and ploddings upon my daily ſufferings; when I know not what to think, or which way to take to.

Thy comforts delight my ſoul] The Beleever is never without his cordiall; he hath comforts that the World wots not of. The good Lantgrave of Heſſen being held priſoner for a long time together by Charles the fift Emperour, ſaid, that he could never have held it out ſo, but that he felt the divine conſolations of the Martyrs. Martyr etiam in catena gaudet, &c. ſaith Auſtin; Crux inuncta eſt, ſaith Bernard. Godlineſſe hath many croſſes, and as many comforts; like as Egypt hath many venemous Creatures, but withall many Antidotes againſt them. Auguſt.

Verſ. 20. Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowſhip with thee?] Shall Tyrants and Oppreſſours (who do exerciſe regiment without righteouſneſs) intitle thee to their wicked proceedings, and go unpuniſhed? See Iſa. 36. 10. with 37. 36. the Throne or Tribunal is called, The holy place, Eccleſ. 8. 10. wo then to thoſe that pollute it.

Which frameth miſchief by a Law] As did the Primitive Perſecutors, with their bloudy Edicts againſt Chriſtians; and the Popiſh Biſhops, of whoſe Laws that of Politian was verified, Inventum

Inventum Attia dicuntur jura Draconis:
Vera eſt fama nimis, nil niſi virus habent.

Some render it, Prater, vel contra legem, beſide or againſt Law.

Verſ. 21. They gather together] Heb. Run by troops, as Theeves do.

Againſt the ſoul] Which they would gladly deſtroy, if it lay in their power. This the Popiſh perſecutors oft attempted, but God hath better provided, Mat. 10. 28.

Verſ. 22. But the Lord is my defence] Heb. My high place, where I am ſet out of their reach.

Verſ. 23. And he ſhall bring upon them, &c.] See Pſal. 7. 15, 16.

PSAL. XCV.

VErſ. 1. O come, let us ſing unto the Lord] It is thought by this beginning, that this Pſalm was not penned by David for private uſe, but for publick Aſſemblies, to be ſung by the Congregation on the Sabbath, and ſuch like times. It may very well be that they began their morning Sacrifice with this Pſalm, as the Latine Church alſo afterwards did their Mattens, or Morning Service.

Let us make a joyful noyſe] With a clear and loud voyce, as of a Trumpet; ſinging with grace in our hearts unto the Lord.

Verſ. 2. Let us come before his preſence] Heb. Prevent his face, be there with the firſt. Let us go ſpeedily -- I will go alſo, Zech. 8. 21. Let praiſe wait for God in Sion, Pſal. 65. 1. Rabbi Gaon, Præveniamus & ante diem judicii, Let us make haſte, ſaith he, to do it, before the Day of Judgement; and leſt we be taken with our task undone. Others, let us anticipate his face, that is, prepare our hearts at home, before we come into the publick; or, let us give thanks for mercies already received, that we may make way for more.

With Pſalmes] Oratione proſâ & verſâ.

Verſ. 3. For the Lord is a great God] Underſtand it of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle alſo doth, Heb. 3. & 4. 1 Cor. 10.

Above all Gods] Whether reputed ſo, or deputed, as Kings.

Verſ. 4. In his hand are the deep places] Heb. Searching, that is, much ſearched after, but found to be unſearchable.

A עוף volucris volans in altum. R. Solom.

The ſtrength of the hills] Heb. The heights, ſuch as will ſport a bird to get to the top of them. Depths and heights are his.

Verſ. 5. The Sea is his, &c.] Canutus confuted his Flatterers (who told him that all things in his Dominions were at his beck and check) by laying his command on the Sea, to come up no higher into his Land, but it obeyed him not.

Hen. Huntington.

And his hands formed the dry land] Worſhip him therefore, Rev. 4.

Kimchi.

Verſ. 6. O come, let us worſhip, and fall down] With our whole bodies proſtrate on the ground, our hands and feet ſtretcht out. The Jews geſture of adoration at this day is the bowing forward of their bodies, for kneeling they uſe none (no more do the Gracians) neither ſtir they their Bonnets in their Synagogues to any man, but remain ſtill covered.

Spec. Eur.

The Lord our Maker] Who hath not only created us, but advanced us, as hee did Moſes and Aaron, 1 Sam. 12. 6.

Verſ. 7. The people of his paſture] Whom he turns not out into Commons and Fallows, but feeds among Lillies, Cant. 2. 16.

And the ſheep of his hand] His Cades brought up at hand, eating of his meat, and drinking of his cup, and lying in his boſome, as Uriahs Ewe-Lamb did, 2 Sam. 12. 3.

To day if ye will hear his voyce] i. e. Whiles the day of grace laſteth, which is not long, 2 Cor. 6. 2. Qui pœnitenti veniam ſpopondit, peccanti craſtinum non promiſit, ſaith Gregory.

Verſ. 8. Harden not your hearts] by unbeleef, and the deceitfulneſs of ſin, Heb. 3. 12, 13. which gradually obfirmeth the heart againſt God.

As in the provocation] As your fathers did at Maſſah and Meribah: be not you as good at reſiſting the Holy Ghoſt as they were, Act. 7. 51.

Verſ. 9.

Verſ. 9. When your Fathers tempted me] Ten times, all along the wilderneſſe, though Num. 14. 2

They ſaw my works] Both mercies and judgements, Pſal. 98. 8. yet they were refractory and unmalleable.

Verſ. 10. Was I grieved] Litigavi, vel cum tadio perſtuli.

That do erre in their hearts] Wandering, though not ſo wide, as to miſſe of Hell.

They have not known] viz. practically and ſavingly.

Verſ. 11. Unto whom I ſware] When put paſt all patience. Patientia laſa fit furor.

If they enter, &c.] Thus God ſweareth cum reticentia, to ſhew how greatly hee was incenſed.

PSAL. XCVI.

VErſ. 1. O ſing unto the Lord a new ſong] For this new mercy of the Ark now brought into Jeruſalem from the houſe of Obed-Edom, 1 Chron. 16. 23. but eſpecially of Chriſt (typified by the Ark) who ſhould bee preached unto the Gentiles, beleeved on in the World, received up to glory. 1 Tim. 3. 16

Sing unto the Lord all the earth] Which they could not do aright, till they had heard, beleeved, and were ſealed, Epheſ. 1. 13. Unbeleevers can have no true notion of God, but as of an enemy; and therefore all their verball praiſes are but a blacke ſanctus, ſuitable to ſuch Saints.

Verſ. 2. Sing unto the Lord, &c.] David was at this time full of affection, and exultation of Spirit (inſomuch as Michal mocked him for it, 1 Chron. 15. 29.) and thence this heap of holy expreſſions to the ſame purpoſe. Out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth ſpeaketh.

Shew forth his ſalvation] Evangelize, Preach the Goſpel of ſalvation by Chriſt; ſee Pſal. 40. 10. 2 Sam. 18. 18. Iſa. 61. 1. where the ſame word is uſed.

From day to day] Other news delights us only at firſt hearing; but the good news of our redemption is ſweet from day to day, ac ſi in eodem die redemptio fuiſſet operata, ſaith Kimchi here, as if it were done but to day. Tam recens mihi nunc Chriſtus eſt, ſaith Luther, ac ſi hac horâ fudiſſet ſanguinem, Chriſt is now as freſh unto mee as if he had ſhed his blood but this very hour.

Verſ. 3. Declare his glory] Heb. Sipher it up in the particulars; that God be no loſer by you.

His wonders among all people] There is a world of wonders in the work of mans redemption by Chriſt; and all other mercies meet in this, as the lines in the center, ſtreams in the fountain.

Verſ. 4. For the Lord is great] Vere magnus eſt Chriſtianorum Deus, ſaid Caloceirius an Heathen; he is omni laude major, & merito mirandus, ſaith David here, and elſewhere often. Sound out therefore and ſend abroad his worthy praiſes, that others may hear and fear.

Verſ. 5. For all the Gods, &c.] Deunculi, deaſtri, Thoſe petty Gods, thoſe dunghill-deities of the Heathens, are nullities; indeed they are Devils, and thoſe Idolls were their receptacles, and as it were their bodies, from whence in ſome places they gave oracles; but were ſilenced at Chriſts comming in the fleſh, to the great amazement of their ſuperſtitious worſhipers.

But the Lord made the Heavens] With ſingular artifice, Heb. 11. 10. uſing πάσῃ σοφίας μηχανῇ every engine of wiſdome. Clem. Alex. Paid. l. 1. c.

Verſ. 6. Honour and Majeſty are before him] Theſe are his Harbingers, and they go often coupled, as Pſal. 21. 45. 111. 145. Job 40. &c. By the former ſeemeth to be meant outward port and ſplendour; by the latter, inward reverence and reſpect following thereupon.

Strength and beauty are in his ſanctuary] Gods glory ſhineth more in his Church, than in all the World beſides.

Verſ. 7. Give unto the Lord] See Pſal. 29. 1, 2. One rendreth it Tribuite ponderoſe, unde כבד onus, pondus portate: to ſhew, that our praiſes of God ſhould bee ponderous and ſubſtantiall.

Verſ. 8. Give unto the Lord the glory, &c.] It was hard for the Heathens to forgo go their ſuperſtitions (Tully reſolved he would never do it, &c.) therefore they are here ſo preſſed to it. See Rev. 14. 6, 7. with the Notes there. One Expoſitor geiveth this note here, Ternarius numerus eſt ſacer ob myſterium Triadis; ideoenim eo ſcriptura gaudet. The Scripture oft preſſeth or expreſſeth things thrice over, in reference to the myſtery of the holy Trinity.

Geneb. Bring an offering] Reaſonable ſervice, Rom. 12. 1. ſpirituall ſacrifices acceptable by Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Pet. 2. 5.

Verſ. 9. O worſhip the Lord, &c.] Supplicate proni, fall flat on your faces. See Pſal. 95. 6.

In the beauty of holineſſe] i. e. In his courts, as verſe 8. or in holy beauty, as ſome render it; that is, in true faith, and with good affections.

Fear before him] Rejoyce before him with trembling, Pſal. 2.

Verſ. 10. Say among the Heathen] Proclamate undiq; præcones, &c. Make proclamation every where, that now the Lord Chriſt reigneth; and that there ſhall bee a generall Jubilee.

The World alſo ſhall be eſtabliſhed] There is no true ſtability, but where Chriſt reigneth; he will ſettle peace and good order, which the Devil, that turbulent ſpirit, and his agents, deſire to diſturb, and to ſet all on an hurry-comb.

Verſ. 11. Let the Heavens rejoyce, &c.] Let there be a general joy for the general renovation by the comming of Chriſt, Rom. 8. 22. after which the whole creation groaneth alſo. Baſil and others by Heaven, Earth, &c. underſtand Angels, men of all ſorts, as Iſlanders, ſeamen, fieldmen, woodlanders, &c. Vel eſt ſimilitudo ad denotandam in mundo pacem, ſaith Kimchi, Or it is a ſimilitude to note peace all over the World. And ſurely when Chriſt came there was an univerſal aut pax aut pactio (ſaith Florus) peace or truce under the government of Auguſtus.

p Let the Sea roar] Heb. Thunder. Externo fragore & bombo teſtetur internam animi lætitiam; let it teſtify its joy, perſtrependo & reboando by roaring its utmoſt.

Verſ. 12. Let the field be joyfull, &c.] And ſo give check to the hardneſſe of mans heart, not at all affected with thoſe benefits by Chriſt, wherein they are far more concerned than theſe inſenſible creatures; which yet have lain bed-ridden as it were, ever ſince mans fall, and earneſtly wait for the manifeſtation of the Sons of God, Rom. 8. 19.

Verſ. 13. Before the Lord, for he commeth, for he commeth] Certainly, ſuddainly, happily, &c. for this is the ſumme of all the good news in the World, that Chriſt commeth and commeth; that is, ſaith Baſil, once to ſhew the World how they ſhall be ſaved; and a ſecond time to judge the World, for neglecting ſo great ſalvation, &c.

PSAL. XCVII.

VErſ. 1. The Lord reigneth] This is matter of greateſt joy to the Righteous. Gaudeo quod Chriſtus Dominus eſt, alioqui totus deſperaſſem, I am glad that Chriſt is Lord of all; for otherwiſe I ſhould utterly have been out of hope, ſaith Miconius in an Epiſtle to Calvin, upon the view of the Churches enemies.

Let the multitude of Iſles be glad] As more happy herein than any of thoſe called Turk. Hiſt. the Fortunate Iſlands, or than Cyprus anciently called Macaria, that is, The bleſſed Iſle, for her abundance of commodities.

Verſ. 2. Clouds and darkneſſe are round about him] As once at the delivering of the Law; ſo now in the publiſhing Goſpel, he is no leſſe terrible, having vengeance in ſtore for the diſobedient, 2 Cor. 10. 6. It is a ſavour of death to unbeleevers. Chriſt came to ſend fire on the earth, Luk. 12. 49.

Righteouſneſſe and judgement, &c.] Mercy Chriſt hath for the penitent; judgement for the rebellious, who ſeek to dethrone him. Woe to thoſe Goſpel-ſinners.

Verſ. 3. A fire goeth before him] For even our God is a conſuming fire, Heb. 12. 29. (and not the God of the Jews only) as ſhall well appear at the laſt day, 2 Theſſ. 1. 8. See the Note on verſe 2.

Verſ. 4. His Lightenings enlightened the World] His Apoſtles, thoſe fulmina Eccleſiaſtica, ſhall ſpread Goſpel-light and amaze people; the Lord working with them, and confirming their word with ſignes following, Mar. 16. 20.

Verſ.

Verſ. 5. The hills melted like wax] Nothing ſhall be ſo ſtout and ſteady as to be able to ſtand before them.

Before the Lord] Adoni, Dominator, The Maker and Maſter of all, the rightfull Proprietary and Paramount. The Latine tranſlation hath it, All the earth is before the face of the Lord.

Verſ. 6. The Heavens declare his Righteouſneſſe] As ſo many Catholick Preachers, Pſal. 19. 1. & 50. 4. 6. By Heavens ſome underſtand Angels, concurring with men to glorifie God. Others, the heavenly bodies pleading Gods cauſe againſt Atheiſts and Idolaters. They that worſhipped the Sun were Atheiſts by night; and they that worſhipped the Moon were Atheiſts by day, as Cyrill wittily.

Verſ. 7. Confounded be all they that ſerve graven images] Thoſe Inſtruments of Idolatry, and lurking-places of Devils, diabolicis inſtinctoris & inſtinctus particeps. Such and their Servants we may lawfully pray againſt.

That boaſt themſelves of Idols] As did that Idolatrous Micah, Judg. 17. Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. 3. Julian called therefore Idolian, the Papiſts at this day. See D. Rainolds de Idololatria Romana.

Worſhip him all ye Gods] i. e. All ye Angels, ſaith the Greek and Arabick; and the Apoſtle ſaith the ſame, Heb. 1. 6. proving Chriſt to be God-man. This Pſalm ſaith Beza is highly to be prized of all Chriſts, as containing a moſt divine Epitome of all Goſpel-myſteries.

Verſ. 8. Sion heard and was glad] Heard what? the downfall of the Devills Kingdom, and the erecting of Chriſts ſcepter; this was good news to the Church, and her Children. Bern was the firſt Town that after the Reformation burnt their images. Zurich followed on an Aſhwenſday, which they obſerve and celebrate every year to this day, with all mirth, playes and paſtimes, as an Aſhwedneſday of Gods own making. Act. & Mon.

Verſ. 9. For thou, Lord, art high above all the earth] Declared now to be ſo with power, as Rom. 1. 4. and the World convinced of ſingulatr ſottiſhneſſe in fancying other divinities.

Thou art exalted far above all gods] Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this World, but alſo in that which is to come, Epheſ. 1. 21. Here then we have the ſuperexaltation of Chriſts perſon; and the Apoſtle manifeſtly alludeth to it, Epheſians 4. 10. Phil. 2. 9.

Verſ. 10. Ye that love the Lord] As having taſted of Chriſts ſweetneſſe, being juſtified by his merit, and ſanctified by his Spirit, 1 Pet. 2. 4 1 Cor. 6. 11. carried after him with ſtrength of Deſire, Pſal. 42. 1. and Delight, Pſal. 73. 25. Such as theſe only are Chriſts true ſubjects; others will pretend to him, but they are but Hangbies, unleſſe the love of Chriſt conſtrain them to hate evill, to hate it as Hell, Rom. 12. 9. Sin ſeemeth to have its name of Sana to hate (the word here uſed) becauſe it is moſt of all to be hated, as the greateſt evil, as that which ſetteth us furtheſt from God the greateſt good. This none can do but thoſe that love the Lord Chriſt in ſincerity; for all hatred comes from love. A naturall man may be angry with his ſin, as a man is ſometimes with his wife or friend for ſome preſent vexation; but hate it hee cannot; yea he may leave it (for the ill conſequents of ſin) but not loathe it. If he did, he would loathe all, as well as any; for hatred is ever againſt the whole kind of a thing, ſaith Ariſtole. ἀποστυγοῦντες נאי

Verſ. 11. Light is ſown for the Righteous] The Righteous is hæres crucis the Heir of the Croſſe; and many are his troubles. A Child of light may walk in darkneſſe and have no light, Iſa 50. 10. yet Chriſt will not leave him comfortleſſe, Joh. 14. Light is ſown for him, 'tis yet ſeeding-time, and that is uſually wet and dropping; and the ſeed muſt have a time to lye, and then to grow, ere a crop can be expected; there muſt be alſo weeding and elodding, &c. behold the Husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it. Be ye alſo patient, ſtabliſh your hearts, &c. Jam. 5. 7, 8. We look not to ſow and reap in a day, as He ſaith of the Hyperborean people far North, that they ſow ſhortly after the Sun-riſing with them, and reap before the Sun-ſet, ſc. becauſe the whole half year is one continuall day with them. Deliverance will come in Gods good time, and as before the morning-light is the thickeſt darkneſſe, as the ſeed that lyeth longeſt under ground, Τὸ μίσος πρὸς τὰ γένη. Rhetor. lib. 2 Heresbach de re ruſt.

ground, commeth up at length with greateſt increaſe, ſo here. Semen modicum, ſed meſſis fecunda, ſaith Aben-Ezra on the Text.

And gladneſſe for the upright] This clauſe expoundeth the former.

Verſ. 12. Rejoyce in the Lord] See Pſal. 32. ult. with the Note.

At the remembrance of his holineſſe] That is, of himſelf; for whatſoever is in God is God; as alſo of his works and benefits, whereby he giveth you ſo good occaſion to remember him.

PSAL. XCVIII.

A Pſalm] The Greek addeth, of David; A man might think it were rather of John Baptiſt pointing out Chriſt, and his Kingdom, as if already come, with the great good thereby accrewing to the Saints.

Verſ. 1. O ſing unto the Lord a new ſong] See Pſal. 96. 1. and obſerve how the compiler of the Pſalms hath hereabout ſet together ſundry Pſalms of the ſame ſubject.

His right hand and his holy arm] His is emphatical, and excluſive, q. d. Chriſt alone hath done the deed, he is our ſole Saviour, Iſa. 59. 16. & 63. 5. In the juſtification of a ſinner, Chriſt and faith are alone, ſaith Luther, Tanquam ſponſus & ſponſa in thalamo. As Wax and Water cannot meet together, ſo neither can Chriſt and any thing elſe in this work. Away then with that deviliſh Doctrin of the Saints Merits, Quibuſcunq; tandem pigmentis illita obtrudatur. If any commend or go after any other way to Salvation beſides Chriſt, hee doth according to the Greek Proverb, draw miſchiefs to himſelf; as the Wind Caecias doth Clouds.

Καπὰ ἑαυτὸν ἕλκει ὡς ὁ Καικίας νέφος. Ariſtot. in Meteor.

Verſ. 2. The Lord hath made known his ſalvation] His way of ſaving his people by his Son Chriſt, Mat. 1. 21. this Myſtery, ſo long kept ſecret, is now made known to all Nations for the obedience of faith, Rom. 16. 25, 26.

His Righteouſneſs] Made ours by imputation; this, the Jews to this day deride, and the Papiſts call it putative, in a jeer.

Verſ. 3. He hath remembred his mercy, and his truth] His Mercy moving him to promiſe, and his Truth binding him to perform, 2 Sam. 7. 18, 21. and hence all our happineſs.

Verſ. 4. Make a joyful noyſe] Bleſs God for a Chriſt. The Argives when delivered by the Romans from the tyranny of the Macedonians and Spartans, Quae gaudia, quae vociferationes fuerunt? quid florum in Conſulem profuderunt? what great joys expreſſed they? what loud out-crys made they? the very Birds that flew over them fell to the ground, aſtonied with their noyſes. The Cryer at the Nemean Games was forced to pronounce the word Liberty Iterumq; iterumq; again, and again.

Plut. in Flamin.

Verſ. 5. Sing unto the Lord with the Harp] Tum cithararum tum vocum mutuis vicibus; do your utmoſt in the ſuperlativeſt manner you can deviſe.

Verſ. 6. Make a joyful noyſe] By the repeating, and inculcating of this exhortation is intimated our dulneſs, and backwardneſs to a buſineſs of this nature; the neceſſity of the duty, and the excellency of the mercy that can never be ſufficiently celebrated.

Verſ. 7, 8, 9. See the Notes on Pſal. 96. 11, 12, 13.

PSAL. XCIX.

VErſ. 1. The Lord reigneth] Even the Lord Chriſt, as Pſal. 97. 1.

Let the people tremble] Let them ſerve the Lord with fear, and rejoyce with trembling; by the People ſome underſtand the Jews, and by the Earth all other Nations; let there bee a general ſubjection yeelded to the Scepter of his Kingdom.

Verſ. 2. The Lord is great in Zion] In his Church he giveth many great teſtimonies of his power and preſence, and is therefore magnified by his people.

And he is high above all people] In the things wherein they deal proudly he is above them, Exod. 18. 11.

Verſ. 3. Let them praiſe thy great and terrible Name] Nomen illud Majeſtativum;

ſome

Some hereby understand the name Jehovah, of which Josh.7. What wilt thou do to thy great Name? And Jer.44. I have sworn by my great Name. But Gods Name is usually put for Gods self.

For it is Holy] And therefore to be sanctified in righteousness, Isa.5.16.

Vers.4. The Kings strength also loveth judgement] i.e. abest à Tyrannide. God abuseth not his Kingly power to Tyranny, but joyneth it with his Justice and Uprightness. Regiment without Righteousness is but robbery with authority. The Arabick hath it, Magnificentia Regis est, ut diligat æquitatem.

Vers.5. Exalt the Lord our God] Have high apprehensions of him, and answerable expressions: Set him up, and set him forth to the utmost.

And worship at his footstool] i.e. At his Temple, saith the Chaldee: At the Ark of the Covenant, say the Rabbins. Austin interpreteth it of Christs humanity; which although of it self, it is not to be adored, because it is a creature, yet as it is received into unity of person with the Divinity; and hath a Partner-agency with the God-head according to its measure in the works of Redemption and Mediation, 1 *Tim.*2.5. it is to be worshipped. But how hard driven was that second Synod of Nice, when they abused this Text, among many others, to prove the worshipping of Images and Pictures?

Vers.6. Moses and Aaron among his Priests] or chief Officers, as 1 *Chron.*18.17. Moses was, if not a Priest, yet a continual Intercessor for the people, and a type of Christ the great Mediator of his Church. Aben-Ezra calleth him Coben hacohanim, the Priest of Priests; And Philo writing his life, concludeth, This was the life and death of Moses the King, the Lawgiver, the Prophet, and the chief Priest.

And Samuel] A man that could do much with God likewise, Jer 15.1. and is therefore (as some conceive) called Petitot, that is, a perswader of God, *Josh.*1.1. Alsted.

Vers.7. They kept his testimonies] And so shewed that they called upon God with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, *Heb.*10.22.

Vers.8. Thou wast a God, &c.] A sin-pardoning God, *Neh.*9.17. So thou wast to them under the Law, so thou wilt be to those under the Gospel.

Though thou tookest, &c.] Though Moses might not enter for his unbelief, and Samuel smarted for indulging his sons.

Vers.9. Exalt the Lord] Versus ut clausa. See Vers.5.

PSAL. C.

A Psalm of praise] Suavis & gravis, short and sweet; appointed likely to be sung at the Thank-offerings, quando pacifica erant offerenda, say the Italian, and Spanish Annotators. See vers.4. Enter with Thanks-giving, or with Thank-sacrifice. Levit.7.12.

Vers.1. All ye lands] Both Jews and Gentiles, Rom.15.10,11. for your common salvation.

Vers.2. Serve the Lord with gladness] The Cabbalists have a Proverb, The Holy Ghost singeth not, but out of a glad heart. Cheerfulness is much called for in both Testaments, God loveth a cheerful server.

Vers.3. Know ye that the Lord he is God] Be convinced of it, ye Heathens whose fantasies have forged false gods; and ye Jews, acknowledge the true God to be Three in One, and One in Three.

It is he that hath made us] And new made us; for we are his workmanship (a second time) created in Christ Jesus unto good works, Eph.2.10. The word signifieth, saith Kimchi, Ornare beneficiis, afficere donis, gratiis cumulare (conser 1 *Sam.*12.6.) and so is distinguished from Bara to create, and Jatsar to form. William of Malmsbury telleth of a certain Emperor of Germany, who coming by chance into a Church on the Sabbath day, found there a most mis-shapen Priest, penè portentum naturæ, insomuch as the Emperor much scorned and contemned him: But when he heard him read those words in the Service, For it is he that hath made us, and not we our selves, the Emperor checkt his own proud thoughts, and made inquiry into the quality and conditions of the man, and finding, upon examination, that he was a very learned and devout man, he made him Archbishop of Colen, which place he discharged with much commendations.

We are his people, and the sheep] See *Psal.*95.7. This is a priviledge proper to the Communion of Saints.

Vers. 4. Enter into his gates, &c.] As sheep into his sheepfolds, frequent his publick Ordinances, wait at the posts of the gates of Wisdome; there, as at an heavenly Exchange, the Saints present duty, and God confers mercy.

Vers. 5. For the Lord is good] Though we be evil, he giveth us all these good things freely; and although we provoke him daily to punish us, yet his mercy is everlasting; like a fountain, it runneth after it hath run; And as the Sun which shineth after it hath shined. See Zach. 13. 1. Joh. 1. 27.

And his truth endureth to all generations] Heb. to Generation and Generation. He saith, not for ever, saith an Interpreter, because his promises are true, but under a condition, which perhaps the following Generations will not observe; The condition is to the promise as an Oar in a Boat, or stern of a Ship, which turns it another way.

PSAL. CI.

A Psalm of David] Wherein he promiseth and pre-ingageth, that whenever he came to the Kingdome, he will be a singular example both as a Prince, and as a Master of a Family: In which respect this Psalm should be often read and ruminated by such, that their houses may be as the house of David, Zach. 12. 8. and as the Palace of George Prince of Anhalt, which was, saith Melanthon, Ecclesia, Academia, Curia, a Church, an Academy, and a Court. Bishop Ridley read, and expounded this Psalm oftentimes to his houshold, hiring them with money to learn it, and other select Scriptures by heart. A good Governour is like that Noble-man who had for his Impress two bundle of ripe Millet bound together, with this Motto, Servare & Servari meum est; for the nature of the Millet is both to guard it self from all corruption, and also those things that lye near it. That is a rare commendation that is given the late Reverend and Religious Dr. Chaderton, that he was an house-keeper three and fifty years, and yet in all that time, he never kept any of his servants from Church to dress his meat, saying, That he desired as much to have his servants know God, as himself.

Acts & Mon. fol. 1559.

His life by Mr. Clark.

Vers. 1. I will sing of Mercy and Judgement] David's Ditty was composed of discords. Mercy and Justice are the brightest stars in the sphere of Majesty; the main supporters of a Throne Royal: Howbeit there should be a preheminence to Mercy, as one well observeth from Micah 6. 8. Mercy must be loved, and not shewn onely; Justice must be done, and no more. The sword of Justice, must be bathed in the oyl of Mercy; A well-tempered mixture of both, preserveth the Commonwealth, Rom. 13. 3, 4.

Unto thee, O Lord, will I sing] Acknowledge thee alone, the bestower of these graces, and thy glory as the end. These are matters that Philosophers and Politicians mind not.

Vers. 2. I will behave my self wisely] I will begin the intended reformation at my self, and then set things to rights in my family, which while Augustus did not, he was worthily blamed by his subjects, and told, that publick persons must carefully observe,

Ædibus in propriis quæ recta esse putavit, præstet.

Plut.

Else find, that he could pardon all men faults, but his own. But Cato the wise, wanted the wisdome from above, and was therefore short of David, who promiseth here to be merry, I will sing; and wise, I will behave my self wisely in a perfect way; that is, in an upright conversation, and in a faithful discharge of the great trust committed unto me.

O when wilt thou come unto me?] In the performance of thy promise concerning the Kingdom? For I am resolved not to intercept thee, but to wait thy coming; Est suspirium ejus ad me ex abrupto, like that of David, I have waited, O Lord, for thy salvation, Gen. 49. 18. Or, when wilt thou come, viz. to reckon with me? For come thou will.

I will walk within my house with a perfect heart] viz. although my house not so with God, 2 Sam. 23. 5. yet this is my desire (and shall be mine endeavour) although he make it not to grow, ib. I will walk unceasingly, walk in the midst of mine house; sine ostentatione, as Jehoiada walked before the King, 2 King. 4. 25. and elsewhere. In the integrity of mine heart; for that a man is in truth, that he is at home. Follow [illegible] home to their houses, and there you shall see what they are. Look upon Stage-players, and you may see them act the parts of Kings and honest men; but follow them to their tyring-houses, and there they are but base Varlets.

Vers.3. I will set no wicked thing (Heb. thing of Belial) before mine eyes] that is, in my thoughts, saith Kimchi; for the thinking-faculty is in the fore-part of the brain, as are also the eyes. I will not gaze upon forbidden objects, nor venture upon a temptation to, or an occasion of sin. I will also be wise and wary in the choice of my servants, and under-officers. Theodosius his Court was virtutum officina, non vitiorum sentina, saith One. And Archbishop Cranmer's house was Schola vel palæstra pietatis & literarum, saith another. See above on the title of this Psalm. Pareus. Tremellius.

I hate the work of them that turn aside] Of treacherous men and Apostates; such as Constantius Chlorus, the Father of Constantine the Great found (by proof made) some of his Counsellors and Courtiers to be, and therefore turned them off, saying, He cannot be faithful to me, who is unfaithful to God: Pietate sublata fides tollitur. Euseb.

It shall not cleave to me] He none of them, neither shall any such wickedness hang at my heels, to hinder my progress in piety and good government.

Vers.4. A froward heart shall depart from me] i.e. say some, I will endeavour to put off the old man with the lusts thereof, *Eph.*4.22. the old crooked frame shall be dissolved, and a better erected. I will not know evil, that is, regard, or allow it, *Psal.*1.6. Others understand the Text of rotten-hearted, and wicked Counsellors, whom David would abhor and abandon.

Vers.5. Whoso privily slandereth his neighbour] Heb. Him that in secret; tongue-smiteth his fellow-friend, will I suppress. This David purposed to do, but this hee did not so throughly in the case of poor Mephibosheth, belyed by false Ziba; his resolution was Maledicos & malefices à se depellere, to drive away from him sycophants, back-byters, flatterers; but there is a great sympathy betwixt Princes, and such Pests, those Harpyes, and gaping Crows of Courts, as one calleth them. David promiseth fair to purge and disempester his house and Court of such, and to cut them off, secundum leges regni, according to the Laws of the Kingdome, as Aben-Ezra glosseth. Sordes & tineas palatii appellabat Constan. Mag.

Him that hath an high look] Pride will sit and shew it self in the eyes as soon as any where. A man is seen what he is, in studiis, in potibus, in bellis, say the Rabbins. See *Prov.*6.17.

And a proud heart] Heb. a wide, or broad heart, that thinketh great things of himself, and seeketh great things for himself.

I will not suffer] Heb. I will not, sc. away with, or endure at any hand. The Greeks, and after them others read, I will not eat with them; and by large of heart, they understand belly-gods, men of large appetites, such as were the two sons of Eli, Belialists, and Helliones. Legunt edal pro uel.

Vers.6. Mine eyes shall be upon the faithful of the land] i.e. Let them live where they will, I will hearken them out, and find them out. The Rabbins say, that here David repenteth him of taking into his service and mission those indebted and discontented persons, men of broken fortunes, and loose manners, 1 *Sam.*22.1,2. and resolveth to be better advised in the chusing and using of his retinue, when he cometh to the Kingdom, that his Court might be like that of Cyrus, whereof Xenophon saith, that though a man should seek or chuse blindfold, he could not miss of a good man. Zonaras mainly commendeth Valentinian the first, and Leo Armenius, Emperours, for their good choice of both Civil and Military Officers. He condemneth as much Maximus for the contrary. Cyrop. l.8

He shall serve me] λειτουργήσει μοι, he shall be of honourable imployment about me, as Joseph was to Pharaoh, Cromwel to *Hen.*8. his Vicar General.

Vers.7. He that worketh deceit shall not dwell in my house] If I may know him to be such an one, I shall soon cashiere him, and serve him as Philip of Macedon afterwards did two of his evil servants; the one whereof he compelled to run out of his Country, and the other to drive him. David was not guarded and surrounded, as many Princes are now adayes, Magis cinctus [Alemon, Neptun, Garamon, Pelphum; Gaulonum, Balatronum.

He that telleth lyes shall not tarry in my sight] Liars are frequent in Courts; as in Spain, and do much mischief. The good Emperour Aurelius was much abused by them. Lewis the eleventh of France complained that he had plenty of all things, but of only h one: And being asked of what? Of truth, quoth he. Augustus took on exceedingly, when Varus was slain in battel, and gave this for a reason, Quod non esset à quo verum audiret, because he had not now a friend from whom he could hear the truth of things.

Indefinenter regnum, regi-nem Ecclesiamque purgabo à malo. Trem.

Vers. 8. I will early destroy all the wicked of the land] All, without partiality, and forthwith, in Manuscripts, without delay, making it my morning work to do justice; for then was judgement executed, Jer. 21.12. Or, I will do it daily, and as duly as the house is swept. See Lam. 3.23.

That I may cut off all wicked doers from the City of God] All the notorious Delinquents from the Church; that I may weed out those wicked ones, those Trouble-townes, those Desperadoes, the botches of humane society. And here David describeth the utmost and chief end of Civil Government (that which the Philosophers never dreamed of) viz. That God may be purely and sincerely served in his City, that is, in his Church.

PSAL. CII.

A Prayer of the afflicted] Or, for the afflicted, made by Daniel, or some other Prophet, not long before the return out of Babylon, where they suffered much, but prayed little, as Daniel confesseth, Chap. 9.13. Here therefore they are taught to take unto them words, and say, Hear my prayer, O Lord, &c. In greatest afflictions there is place left for prayer, Psal. 130.1. and something God will yield to it, when most bitterly bent against a people, Mat. 24.20, 21.

When he is overwhelmed] Pressed out of measure above strength, 2 Cor. 1.8. ad deliquium animæ, till heart faint, and faith seem to fail, bowing down through weight of grief, ac si pars una corporis alia esset operta; for so the word here used signifieth, saith Kimchi, as if one part of the body were overcovered with another. Eſque pulchre collatio in verbis quæ ab ipſo & ſupplice quo naturam ſibi depingunt, saith Mollerus: Faith may be under a cloud for a season; but it will recover, and pour out its complaint before the Lord.

Vers. 1. Hear my prayer, O Lord] O Lord Christ, for so this Psalm is to be understood, as the Apostle sheweth, Heb. 1.

And let my cry] Which is, that thou wouldest be pleased to bring us poor exiles back to our own Country; and so this prayer is answerable to that of Daniel, Chap. 9.

Vers. 2. Hide not thy face from me] For this would be worse than all the rest. See Jer. 16.13. I will cast you out of this land, and I will shew you no favour: This last was a cutting speech, and far worse than their captivity; and yet, Non eam cur à dictum esse Deo.

Answer me speedily] Festina, responde: In our earnest prayers we may press for expedition in general, not tying God to any particular time, as those Bethulians did in the book of Judith.

Vers. 3. For my dayes are consumed like smoak] Which the higher it mounteth, the sooner it vanisheth. Some read it, in the smoak: So Psal. 119.83. I am become like a bottle in the smoak, dryed and withered, ſiccatus & exaruit.

Vulnl ſtrangu-latus Arab.

And my bones are burnt as an hearth] Æſtuant quaſi frixi cuticulorum, My strength is gone. Here, to the twelfth verse, is a most lively picture of a dejected person, such as can hardly be paralleld; teaching us to be deeply affected with the Churches afflictions.

Vers. 4. My heart is smitten] Blasted with this indignation, that exutus ursus & vacuus.

So that I forget to eat my bread] I am stomachless, through want of that heat that my heart should supply.

Vers. 5. By reason of the voyce of my groaning] A broken spirit drieth the bones, Prov. 17.22. and by drinking up the marrow and radical moisture, causeth all into a consumption.

Vers. 6. I am like a Pelican] Or Bittern, which liveth in lonely places, and crieth out dolefully.

I am like the Owl of the Desert] Avis lucifuga, a Night-bird, a Night-raven, the Vulgar hath it; others, a Bat, a Cuckow, but most an Owl, that nocte monstrum, as Pliny speaketh of her; nec tantum aliquo vocalem sed genitam, hated of all other fouls, which never come near her, but to keep a wondering at her. Lib. 10. cap.

Vers. 7. I watch] I can as little sleep as eat, vers. 4. That nurse of nature, and sweet Par embolus of mens griefs and cares, sleep departeth from me, Nec membris dat cura quietem.

And am as a sparrow] That hath lost his mate, so have I mine associates, which is a sore loss; for optimum solatium sodalitium.

Vers. 8. Mine enemies reproach me all the day] This is an evil that mans nature is most impatient of. See Psal. 137.

And they that are mad against me] That let flye at me; or, that once praised me, flattered me: So the Sept.

Are sworn against me] Have sworn my death, or do swear and curse by me, as the Turks do at this day, when to confirm a truth they say, Judeus sim si falsum, I would I were a Jew, it is so. See Zach. 8. 13. Isa. 6. 15. Jer. 29. 22. God make thee as Ahab, and as Zedechiah, &c.

Vers. 9. For I have eaten ashes like bread] Being cast on the ground as a mourner, I know not whether I eat bread or dust; this relisheth to me as well as that, my mouth is so out of taste.

And mingled my drink with weeping] I forbare not to weep, no not while I drank; sorrow is dry, and wine driveth away sorrow we say: Not so from me. Wine is called by Simonides in Athenæus ἀμίντως δυσφροσυνάων, an expeller of sadness. De cœlo in terram. R. Solom.

Vers. 10. Because of thine indignation] This lay heavier upon the good mans heart than all the rest, God was displeased.

For thou hast lifted me up, and cast me down] That is, that I might fall with the greater poise. Significatur gravissima collisio. Here the Prophet accuseth not God of cruelty, but bewayleth his own misery: Miserum est fuisse felicem, It is no small unhappiness to have been happy.

Vers. 11. My dayes are like a shadow that declineth] As at Sun-set, the shadows are at longest, but not long lasting.

And I am withered like grass] Mown down, and laid a drying.

Vers. 12. But thou, O Lord, shalt indure for ever] And therefore wee thy Covenanters shall be restored, Lam. 5. 19.

And thy remembrance] Which thou hast of us, and we of thee.

Vers. 13. Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Sion] This hee speaketh with as much confidence, as if he had been in Gods bosome; for hee knew the promise of deliverance, after seventy years captivity. See the like Hab. 3. 18.

For the time to favour her, &c.] This he understood by books, as Dan. 9. 2. and therefore presseth God to a speedy performance. God loveth to be burdened with his own word, to be sued upon his own bond, &c. But besides the promise, the Psalmist had another ground of his confidence, and that is in the next.

Vers. 14. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones] They pity her, and wish her welfare, much more then doth shee. Hee argueth from that sweet, tender, melting frame of spirit that was found in the faithful, which is but a reflex of that far sweeter that is in God.

And favour the dust thereof] The ruines and the rubbish, heartily desiring, and expecting a re-edification, and restauration, whereof they had a sweet promise, Ezek. 9. 8. and for the spiritual Temple to be built of Jews and Gentiles, they had many more. See all that followeth.

Vers. 15. So the heathen shall fear, &c.] By the restauration of Jerusalem when the Messias was to be born and manifested, the everlasting Gospel shall be preached, and the Gentiles converted to the faith.

And all the Kings of the earth] Caught by those Fishermen, and their successors in the Ministry.

Vers. 16. When the Lord shall build up Sion] Isaiah had foretold that the second Temple should be more glorious than the first, Isa. 54. 11. and 60. 17. the stones whereof, were types of those living stones whereof that spiritual Temple was to be built; 1 Pet. 2. 5. and wherein God would manifest more of his glory than ever he had done in all the world besides.

Vers.

Humiliesque Mysticæ. Virg.

Verſ.17. He will regard the prayer of the deſtitute] Heb. Of the poor ſcrub, that is in the wilderneſs trod upon by beaſts, unregarded, worthleſs: Heath, Juniper, Wild Tamarisk; Tremellius rendreth it Nudatiſſimi; Others Exeritantis ſe, the prayer of one that ſtirreth up himſelf to take hold of God, and thereby prevaileth with him. I came for thy prayer, ſaith the Angel to Daniel, chap. 10. 12.

Verſ.18. This ſhall be written for the generation to come] This, that the poor ſcrub hath ſped ſo well in prayer; together with all other the particulars of this Pſalm, and indeed the whole Scripture, Rom. 15. 4. So little truth is there in that aſſertion of the Jeſuits, that the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles were intended onely for the uſe of thoſe Churches, or perſons, to whom they were firſt written.

Iſa.51.16. And the people which ſhall be created] Created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, Eph. 2. 10. his regenerated people; For God planteth the heavens, and layeth the foundations of the earth, that he may ſay to Zion, Thou art my people.

Verſ.19. For he hath looked down from the height, &c.] This is no ſmall condeſcention; ſuch he abaſeth himſelf to look upon things in heaven, Pſal. 113. 6.

From heaven did the Lord behold the earth] That is, his poor deſpiſed ſervants, that are in themſelves no better than the earth they tread on.

Verſ.20. To hear the groaning of the priſoner] Thoſe priſoners of hope held ſo long captive in Babylon, the cruelty whereof is graphically deſcribed, Jer. 51. 34.

Verſ.21. To declare the Name of the Lord in Zion] This ſhall bee the buſineſs of the converted Gentiles, to make up one Catholick Church with the Chriſtian Jews, and to bear a part in ſetting forth Gods worthy prayſes. See verſ. 18.

Verſ.22. When the people are gathered together] ſc. to the Lord Chriſt; For to Shiloh ſhall be the gathering of the people, Gen. 49. 10.

And the Kingdoms to ſerve the Lord] As they did under Conſtantine the Great, Valentinian, Theodoſius, which three Emperors called themſelves, Vaſallos Chriſti (as Socrates reporteth) the Vaſſals of Chriſt: And the like may be ſaid of other Chriſtian Kings and Princes ſince, who have yeelded profeſſed ſubjection to the Goſpel, and caſt their Crowns at Chriſts feet.

Verſ.23. He weakned my ſtrength in the way] This is the complaint of the poor captives yet undelivered, In via, hoc eſt in vita, quia hic ſumus viatores, in cœlo comprehenſores, here wee are but on our way to heaven, and wee meet with many diſcouragements.

He ſhortned my dayes] viz. According to my account; For otherwiſe in reſpect of God, our dayes are numbred.

Stat ſua cuique dies.

Verſ.24. Take me not away in the midſt of my dayes] Heb. Make me not to aſcend, Serus in cœlum redeam. Fain I would live to ſee thoſe golden dayes of Redemption. Abraham deſired to ſee the day of Chriſt, Joh. 8. Simeon did, and then ſang out his ſoul. All the Saints after the Captivity, looked hard for the conſolation of Iſrael.

Thy years are throughout all generations] And that's the comfort of thy poor Covenanters, who are ſure to participate of all thy goods.

Verſ.25. Of old thou haſt laid the foundation, &c.] Here is a clear proof of Chriſts eternity, Heb. 1. 10. becauſe he was before the creation of the world, and ſhall continue after the conſummation thereof, verſ. 26, 27. So the Saints a parte poſt, 1 Joh. 2. 17. The world paſſeth away, and the luſts thereof; but he that doth the will of God abideth for ever.

Verſ.26. They ſhall periſh] i.e. They ſhall change form and ſtate, being diſſolved by the laſt fire, 2 Pet. 3. 7, 10.

But thou ſhalt endure] Heb. Stand, and with thee thy Church, Mat. 22. 32.

Yea all of them ſhall waxold as a garment] Which weareth in the wearing; ſo do the viſible heavens and the earth, what ever ſome write, de conſtantia naturæ, Iſaiah ſaith, It rotteth as a book (that is veterando rubigine) and waſteth away as ſmoak, chap. 65. 17. and 66. 22.

ἀλλάξεις. ἀλλάξεις. Tu es immutabilis.

As a veſture ſhalt thou change them] The Greek hath roul them, confer Iſa 34. 4.

Verſ.27. But thou art the ſame] Therefore immutable, becauſe Eternall, in nihil tibi poſſit accedere vel decidere.

Verſ.28. The children of thy ſervants ſhall continue] By vertue of the Covenant, and that union with thee which is the ground of communion. If it could be ſaid of Ceſar, that he held nothing to be his own that he did not communicate to his friends, how much more of Chriſt? Propterea bene ſemper ſperandum, etiamſi omnia ruant, the Church is immortal, and immutable.

PSAL. CIII.

[A Pſalm of David] Which he wrote when carried out of himſelf, as far as heaven, ſaith Beza; and therefore calleth not upon his own ſoul onely, but upon all creatures from the higheſt Angel, to the loweſt worm, to ſet forth Gods praiſes.

Verſ. 1. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul] Agedum animula mi, & intima mea viſcera. A good mans work lyeth moſt within doors; he is more taken up with his own heart, than with all the world beſides; neither can he ever be alone ſo long as he hath God and his own ſoul to converſe with. Davids Harp was not oftner out of tune, than his heart, which here he is ſetting right, that he may the better make melody to the Lord. Muſick is ſweet, but the ſetting of the ſtrings in tune is unpleaſing; ſo is it harſh to ſet our hearts in order, which yet muſt be done, and throughly done, as here.

And all that is within me] All my faculties and ſenſes. The whole ſoul and body muſt be ſet a work in this ſervice; the judgement to ſet a right eſtimate upon mercies; the memory to recognize and retain them, *Deut.*6 11,12. and 8.14. the Will which is the proper ſeat of thankfulneſs; the affections, love, deſire, joy, confidence, all muſt bee actuated, that our praiſes may be cordial, vocal, vital. In peace-offerings God called for the fat and inwards.

Verſ. 2. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul] David found ſome dulneſs and drowſineſs; hence he ſo oft puts the thorn to the breaſt; hence he ſo impetuouſly inſtigateth his ſoul, as One here phraſeth it.

And forget not all his benefits] Forgetfulneſs is a grave; look to it: Eaten bread is ſoon forgotten with us, as it is with children; neither periſheth any thing ſo ſoon with many as a good turn. Alphonſus King of Arragon profeſſed that hee wondred not ſo much at his Courtiers ingratitude to him (who had raiſed many of them from meaner, to great eſtates, which they little remembred) as at his own to God. Ἀμνάμονες οἱ βρότοι. Pinda.

Verſ. 3. Who forgiveth all thine iniquities] David not only taketh upon him with an holy imperiouſneſs, laying Gods charge upon his ſoul to be thankful; but intending to ſhew himſelf good cauſe why to be ſo, he worthily beginneth with remiſſion of ſin, as a complexive mercy, and ſuch as comprehendeth all the reſt. He had a Crown of pure gold ſet upon his head, *Pſal.*21. But here hee bleſſeth God for a better Crown, verſ. 4. Who crowneth thee with loving kindneſs, &c. And how was this Crown ſet on his head, but by forgiving all his iniquities?

Who healeth all thy diſeaſes] Corporal and ſpiritual. Quod ſanitas in corpore, id ſanctitas in corde: Jehovah Rophe, or the Lord the Phyſician, as he is called *Exod.*15.26.) cureth his people on both ſides, maketh them whole every whit. See *Iſa.*19.22. *Matth.*8.17. He bore our diſeaſes.

Verſ. 4. Who redeemeth thy life from deſtruction] From hell, ſaith the Chaldee, from a thouſand deaths and dangers every day. All this Chriſt our kind kinſman doth for us, dying virtually as oft as we offend.

Who crowneth thee with loving kindneſs, &c.] Incircleth and ſurroundeth thee with benefits, ſo that which way ſoever thou turneſt thee, thou canſt not look beſide a bleſſing. See the Note on verſ. 3.

Verſ. 5. Who ſatisfieth thy mouth] Heb. Thy jaw, ſo that thou art top full, eating as long as eating is good: God alloweth thee an honeſt affluence of outward comforts; Open thy mouth wide, and he will fill it. *Pſal.*81.10.

So that thy youth is renewed like the Eagles] The Eagle is of all birds the moſt vegetous and vivacious, renewing her youth and health, they ſay, at every ten years end, by caſting her old feathers, and growing new, till ſhe be an hundred years old. Auguſtine obſerveth that when her bill is overgrown that ſhe cannot take in her meat, ſhe beateth it againſt a rock, and ſo exeunte malo vitio, ſhe ſtriketh off the cumberſome part of her bill, and thereby recovereth her eating. That which hindereth our renovation, ſaith he, the Rock Chriſt taketh away, &c. See *Iſa.*40.31. Aquilæ ſenectus. Prov.

Verſ. 6. The Lord executeth, &c.] The words are both plural to ſhew that God will execute omnimodam justitiam & judicium, all, and all manner of justice and judgement, relieving the oppressed, and punishing the oppressor to the full.

Vers. 7. He made known his wayes unto Moses] Even right Judgements, true Lawes, good Statutes, and Commandments, Neh. 9. 13, 14. The Rabbins by wayes here understand Gods Attributes and Properties (Middoth they call them) those thirteen proclaimed, Exod. 34. after that Moses had prayed, Exod. 33. Shew me thy wayes; and the next words favour this interpretation.

Vers. 8. The Lord is merciful and gracious] These are Moses his very expressions, Exod. 34. 7. Theodoret calleth him worthily, The great Ocean of Divinity, &c.

His acts to the children] His miracles in Egypt, and all along the wilderness, where they fed upon Sacraments.

Vers. 9. He will not always chide] His still revenges are terrible, Gen. 6. 3. with 1 Pet. 3. 19. but God being appeased towards the penitent people, will not shew his anger so much as in words, Isa. 57. 16.

Neither will he keep his anger for ever] Much less must we, Levit. 19. 18. Eph. 4. 26. though against his enemies God is expressly said to keep it, Nah. 1. 2.

Vers. 10. He hath not dealt with us after our sins] Heb. Our errors, our involuntary and unavoidable infirmities.

According to our iniquities] Heb. perversly committed: for of these evils also the Saints are not free; but God beareth with more than small faults, especially if not scandalous.

Vers. 11. For as the heaven is high above the earth] How high the third heaven is cannot be conjectured. But for the middlemost heaven (wherein the Sun, Moon, and Stars are placed) how exceeding high it is may be guessed and gathered, in that the Stars (whereof those of the first magnitude, are said to be every one above a hundred and seven times as big again as the whole earth) do yet seem to us but as so many sparks or spangles. See Prov. 25. 3. Eph. 4. 10.

So great is his mercy] The heavens are exceeding high above the earth, but Gods mercy to his is above the heavens, Psal. 108. 4. The original word Gabber here used, is the same with that Gen. 7. 20. used for the prevailing of the waters above the mountains.

Vers. 12. As far as the East, &c.] And these we know to be so far asunder, that they shall never come together. The space also and distance of these two is the greatest that can be imagined, Deut. 4. 32. Psal. 113. 3. Isa. 45. 6.

So far hath he removed our transgressions] The guilt of them, whereby a man stands charged with the fault, and is obliged to the punishment due thereunto. See Isa. 43. 25. and 38. 17. Mic. 7. 19. Ezech. 33. 16. Peccata non redeunt. Discharges in Justification, are not repealed, called in again.

Vers. 13. Like as a Father pitieth] There is an ocean of love in a fathers heart. See Luke 15. 20. Gen. 33. 2, 13, 14. and Chap. 43. how hardly, and with what caution Jacob parted with Benjamin. Saxo Gram. maketh mention of a certain Merchant, who offering himself to be put to death for his two sons who were sentenced to dye, and it being granted that one of the two (whom he should chuse) should be upon that condition delivered; the miserable Father, æquali utriusque amore victus, equally affected to them both, could not yeeld that either of them should dye, but remained hovering about both, till both were put to death.

Lib. 7. sub. 24.

So the Lord pitieth &c.] So and ten thousand times more than so. For he is the Father of all mercies, and the Father of all the Father-hoods in heaven and earth, Eph. 3. 15.

Parentela.

Vers. 14. For he knoweth our frame] Our evil constitutions, saith the Chaldee, Figulinam & fragilem constitutionem nostram, saith Junius, that we are nothing better than a compound of dirt and sin.

He remembreth that we are dust] Our bodies are (for our souls are of a spiritual nature, divinæ particulæ auræ) and sooner or later to be turned to dust again.

Vers. 15. As for man, his dayes are as grass] The frailty of mans life, insinuated in the former verse, is here lively painted out under the similitude of grass, as likewise in many other Scriptures. See Psal. 37. 2. and 90. 5, 6. &c.

As a flower of the field, so he flourisheth] Take him in all his gayety, his bravery, and his bravery, he is but as a flower; and that not of the garden, which hath many shelters and better ordering, but of the field; and so more subject to heat, weather, rolling on, or treading down, Isa. 40. 6, 7, 8.

Vers.

Verſ.16. For the wind paſſeth over it, and it is gone] Heb. It is not; that is, it neither continues any longer in being, nor returns any more into being: So here, Job 14.7,8, 9,10,11,12.

And the place thereof ſhall know it no more] Though whilſt it ſtood and flouriſhed, the place of it ſeemed as it were to know nothing but it; the glory and beauty of it drew all eyes to it, &c. Think the fame of men in their flouriſh, ſoon forgotten, as dead men out of mind, *Pſal.*31.12.

Verſ.17. But the mercy of the Lord is from everlaſting] God is from all eternity, and unto all eternity kind to all that fear him, in what age of the world ſoever they live.

And his righteouſneſs unto childrens children] That is, his kindneſs or bounty; for ſo the word Tſedacoah ſhould be taken, according to *Pſal.*112.3,9. 2 *Cor.*9.9.

Verſ.18. To ſuch as keep his Covenant] For elſe they ſhall know Gods breach of promiſe, as it is *Numb.*14.33,34. Neither ſhall it benefit them to have been born of godly parents.

And to thoſe that remember his Commandements] That reſolve to do them, though in many things they fail, Qui faciunt præcepta etiamſi non perficiant, that wiſh well to that which they can never compaſs, *Pſal.*119.4,5. If they cannot open the door, yet if they give a pluck at the bolt, or a lift at the latch, there is comfort.

Verſ.19. The Lord hath prepared] Or fixed, founded, firmed, eſtabliſhed. Here God is further praiſed for his moſt excellent Majeſty, which appeareth firſt, From the loftineſs of his Throne; ſecondly, From the largeneſs of his Dominion.

Verſ.20. Bleſs the Lord, ye his Angels] In ſtirring up the Angels to praiſe God, he awakeneth himſelf; and for this purpoſe, Incipit à ſuperioribus, & finit in infimis, ſaith Kimchi here, he calleth in the help of all the creatures from the higheſt to the loweſt; and after all, concludeth as he began with a ſaying to himſelf.

That excel in ſtrength] Heb. Giants for ſtrength, ſuch as can prevail, and do great exploits, yet is all their ſtrength derivative, they have it from God (who is Hagibbor, the Mighty One, *Deut.*10.17.) and hence the Angel Gabriel hath his name, God is my ſtrength. Labour we to be like unto the Angels, ſtrengthened with all might, &c. Col. 1.11. walking about the world as Conquerors, able to do all things through Chriſt who ſtrengtheneth us, *Philip.*4.13.

That do his Commandements] viz. Cheerfully, ſpeedily, univerſally, humbly, conſtantly. Let us do accordingly, elſe we mock God when we pray, Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

Verſ.21. Bleſs ye the Lord all his hoſts] That is, all his creatures, which are fitly called Gods hoſts, Firſt, For their number; Secondly, For their order; Thirdly, For their obedience.

Ye Miniſters of his] Whether in State or Church. Kings are Gods Miniſters, Rom. 13.4,6. So are Angels, *Heb.*1.14. like as Miniſters are Angels, *Rev.*2.1. they have exchanged names, their office is Angel-like, to wait upon God, to ſtand before him, to ſerve in his preſence, and to bleſs his Name.

Verſ.22. Bleſs the Lord all his works] Whether living or liveleſs; For all thy works praiſe thee, O Lord, and thy Saints bleſs thee, *Pſal.*145.10. Benedicite ter, ad myſterium Triadis, ſaith an Interpreter.

Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul] Whatever others do, let me be doing at it, as *Joſh.*24. 14,15.

PSAL. CIV.

VErſ.1. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul] This was much in Davids mouth, as Deo gratias was in Auſtines. See *Pſal.*103.1. and 22. after which this Pſalm is fitly ſet. There he bleſſeth God for his benefits to himſelf, and the whole Church, here for his works of Creation and Government common to the whole world. The Greek and Latine Tranſlations prefix this title, David de generatione Mundi, Continet opera Bereſhith, ſaith Kimchi. It is of the ſame ſubject with the firſt Chapter of Geneſis, the firſt five dayes works are here after a ſort conſidered, and celebrated, as a mirror wherein Gods Majeſty may be clearly diſcerned. This Pſalm is by ſome called Davids Phyſicks.

ὑπὲρ τῆ κόσμ μις συς ὡς.

Thou art very great] Non multis diſgreſſus, ſed virtutis & rerum geſtarum gloria; Thou haſt made thee a great Name by thy works of wonder.

Thou art cloathed with Honour and Majeſty] i.e. With thy creatures, which are as a garment both to hide thee in one reſpect, and to hold thee forth in another, to bee ſeen.

Verſ. 2. Who coverest thy ſelf with light] That lovely creature that firſt ſhone out of darkneſs, and is chief among all things ſenſible, as coming neareſt to the unapproachable glory of God; like as the robe royal is next unto the King. Herod upon a let day came forth arrayed in royal apparel, in cloath of ſilver, ſaith Joſephus, which being beaten upon by the Sun-beams, dazled the eyes of the people, and drew from them that blaſphemous acclamation, Act. 12.21. God when he made the world, ſhewed himſelf in all his royalty; neither can we aſcribe too much unto him.

Who ſtretcheſt out the heavens like a curtain] The whole expanſe or firmament is as a Canopy over Gods Throne, or rather as a Curtain or Skreen betwixt us and the Divine Majeſty, the ſight whereof we cannot bear.

Verſ. 3. Who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters] God, as he hath founded the ſolid earth upon the fluid waters, Pſal. 24.2. So the higheſt heaven upon thoſe waters above the firmament, Gen. 1.7. Pſal. 18.11. This notably ſets forth the wiſdome and power of this Almighty Architect, ſith Artiſts ſay, In ſolido extruendum, the foundation of a building ſhould be hard and rocky, and experience ſealeth to it.

Who maketh the clouds, &c.] Theſe are his Charriot royal, drawn (or rather driven) by the winds, as his Charriot-horſes.

Verſ. 4. Who maketh his Angels ſpirits] Immaterial ſubſtances, fit to attend upon the Father of ſpirits, and with ſpeed to move ſuddenly and inviſibly into moſt remote parts.

His Miniſters a flaming fire] Seraphims they are called for their burning zeal, like ſo many heavenly Salamanders; as alſo for their irreſtible power; the Angel that deſtroyed Sennacheribs Army is held to have done it by burning them within, although it appeared not outwardly, as ſome have been burnt by lightning.

Verſ. 5. Who laid the foundations of the earth] Heb. He hath founded the earth upon her baſes. See Pſal. 24.2. Job 38.4,6. with the Notes.

That it ſhould not be removed for ever] Neither can it be, by reaſon of its own weightineſs, whereby it remaineth unmoveable in the center of the univerſe. Say it ſhould move any way, it muſt move towards heaven, and ſo aſcend, which is utterly againſt the nature of heavy bodies.

Verſ. 6. Thou covereſt it with the deep as with a garment] Operuerat, Thou hadſt at firſt covered it, till thou for mans ſake hadſt made a diſtinction; for elſe ſuch a garment would this have been to the earth, as the ſhirt made for the murthering of Agamemnon, where he had no iſſue out.

The waters ſtood above the mountains] As the garment, in the proper uſe of it, is above the body; and ſo they would ſtill, did not God for our ſakes ſet them their bounds and borders.

Verſ. 7. At thy rebuke they fled] At thy word of command and angry countenance, overawing that raging and ranging creature; So Chriſt rebuked the winds and waves.

They haſted away] They ran away headlong, as for life.

Verſ. 8. They go up by the mountains] They run any way in poſt haſte, breaking through thick and thin, and no where reſting, till imbodied in the Abyſſe, their elemental place and ſtation. This is check to our dulneſs, and diſobedience. If a man had been preſent, ſaith One, when God thus commanded the ſeas to retreat from the earth, hee might have ſeen both a terrible, and a joyful ſpectacle.

Verſ. 9. Thou haſt ſet a bound, &c.] A certain compaſs and courſe, an argument of Gods ſingular and ſweet power and providence. See Job 38.10, 11. with the Notes.

Verſ. 10. He ſendeth the ſprings into the vallies] God doth this, he by certain iſſues or veins ſendeth forth the waters of the Sea, (which here and there break out in ſprings, leaving their ſaltneſs behind them) that men and other earthly creatures might have that ὕδωρ μὲν ἄριστον (as Pindarus ſaith it) for the ſatisfying of their thirſt, and for other neceſſary uſes. This is Davids Philoſophy, and his ſon Solomon ſaith the ſame, Eccleſ. 1.7. Though Ariſtotle aſſign another cauſe of the generation of the fountains, and rivers.

Verſ.

Verſ. 11. They give drink to every beaſt] A great mercy, as we have lately found in theſe late dry years, 1653, 1654. wherein God hath given us to know the worth of water by the want of it; Bona ſunt à Iove formoſiſſima.

The wild-aſſes] Thoſe hotteſt creatures, Job 39. 8, 9, 10, 11.

Verſ. 12. By them ſhall the fowls of the heaven]

Aſſuetæ ripis volucres, & fluminis alveo. Virg.

Which ſing among the branches] Moſt melodiouſly many of them; therefore it is reckoned as a judgement to loſe them, Jer. 4. 25. and 9, 10.

Verſ. 13. He watereth the hills from his chambers] That is, from his clouds, he giveth water to hills, and high places, where Wells and Rivers are not.

The earth is ſatisfied with the fruit of thy works] i.e. With the rain of thy clouds, dropping fatneſs.

Verſ. 14. He cauſeth the graſs to grow for the cattel] Hee cauſed it to grow at firſt, before cattel were created, Gen. 1. 11, 12. And ſo he doth ſtill, as the firſt cauſe; by rain and dew from heaven, as the ſecond cauſe.

And herb for the ſervice of man] Ad eſum & ad uſum, for food, phyſick, &c. Gen. 1. 29. Green herbs, it ſeemeth, was a great diſh with the Ancients, which therefore they called Holus, ab ὅλον Ariſtippus told his Fellow-Philoſopher who fed upon them, If you can pleaſe Dionyſius, you need not eat green herbs. He preſently replied, If you can eat green herbs, you need not pleaſe Dionyſius, and be his Paraſite.

That he may bring forth food out of the earth] Alma parens Tellus. Labour not for the meat that periſheth, but for the meat, &c. Joh. 6. 27.

Verſ. 15. And wine that maketh glad] That hee may the more cheerfully ſerve his Maker, his heart being lifted up, as Jehoſaphats was, in the wayes of obedience, Judg. 9 13, Prov. 31. 6, 7.

And oyl to make his face to ſhine] The word ſignifieth Oyntments of all ſorts, whereof ſee Pliny lib. 12. and 13. Theſe, man might want and ſubſiſt; But God is bountifull.

And bread which ſtrengtheneth, &c.] In nature, Animantis cujuſque vita eſt fuga; were it not for the repair of nutrition, the natural life would be extinguiſhed. The Latines call bread Panis, of the Greek πάν, becauſe it is the chief nouriſhment.

Verſ. 16. The trees of the Lord are full of ſap] Heb. are ſatisfied, viz. with moiſture ſucked by their roots out of the earth plentifully watered, whereby they are nouriſhed, grow mightily, and ſerve man for meat, drink, medicine, &c.

The Cedars of Lebanon] Theſe are inſtanced as talleſt and moſt durable. Gods Temple at Jeruſalem was built of them; and ſo was the Devils temple at Epheſus, for he will needs be Gods Ape.

Verſ. 17. Where the birds make their neſts] Each, according to their natural inſtinct, with wonderful art.

As for the Stork] That Pietaticultrix, as Petronius calleth her (and her name in Hebrew ſoundeth as much) becauſe ſhe nouriſheth and cheriſheth the old ones whereof ſhe came; whence ἀντιπελαργεῖν. Genetricum ſenectam invicem educant. Plin. Ciconiis pietas eximia ineſt, Solin.

Verſ. 18. The high hills are a refuge] Theſe wild, but weak creatures are ſo wiſe, as to ſecure themſelves from violence, when purſued they run to their refuges, and ſhould not we to God, for the ſecuring of our comforts, and ſafe-guarding of our perſons?

Verſ. 19. He appointed the Moon for ſeaſons] Moſt Nations reckoned the year by the Moon, rather than by the Sun.

The Sun knoweth his going down] As if he were a living and intelligent creature; ſo juſtly doth he obſerve the Law laid upon him by God, and runs through his work. See Job 38. 12.

Verſ. 20. Thou makeſt darkneſs] Which though it be dreadful, yet is it uſeful, and in the viciſſitude of light and darkneſs, much of Gods wiſdome and goodneſs is to bee ſeen. We muſt ſee that we turn not the day into night, nor night into day, without ſome very ſpecial, and urgent occaſion.

Verſ. 21. The young Lions roar] Rouſing themſelves out of their dens by night, and then uſually ſeizing upon what prey God ſendeth them in; for they are at his, and not at their own finding.

And ſeek] Like as the young Ravens cry to him, *Pſal.*147. by implication only. See Joel 1.18,20.

Verſ.22. They gather themſelves together] viz. into their dens and lurking holes, ſmitten with fear of light, and of men. A ſweet providence, but little conſidered.

Verſ.23. Man goeth forth unto his work] His honeſt imployment in his particular place and calling, whether manual or mental; eating his bread in the ſweat either of his brow, or of his brain.

Until the evening] That time of reſt and refreſhment. The Lord Burleigh (William Cecil) when he put off his gown at night, uſed to ſay, Ly there Lord Treaſurer, and bidding adieu to all ſtate affairs, diſpoſed himſelf to his quiet reſt.

Verſ.24. O Lord, how manifold, &c.] q.d. They are ſo many, and ſo great, that I cannot recount or reckon them up, but am even ſwallowed up of wonderment: All that I can ſay, is, that they are Magna & mirifica. In mans body only there are miracles enough, betwixt head and foot, to fill a volume.

The earth is full] It is Gods great purſe, *Pſal.*24.1.

Verſ.25. So is this great and wide ſea] Latum manibus id eſt ſumbus; yet not ſo great and wide as mans heart, wherein is not only that Leviathan ſome ſpecial foul luſts, but creeping things innumerable, crawling bugs and baggage vermine.

Wherein are things creeping innumerable] Far more, and of more kinds than there are on earth.

Verſ.26. There go the ſhips] The uſe whereof was firſt ſhewed by God in Noahs Ark, whence afterwards Audax Iaperi genus, Japhets off-ſpring ſailed, and repleniſhed the Iſlands.

There is that Leviathan] Whereof ſee Job 41. with Notes.

Verſ.27. Theſe wait all upon thee] The great Houſe-keeper of the world, who carveſt them out their meet meaſures of meat, and at fit ſeaſons. Of thee they have it, Per cauſarum concatenationem.

Verſ.28. That thou giveſt them they gather] Neither have they the leaſt morſel of meat, but what thou caſteſt them by thy providence. Turcicum imperium quantum quantum eſt nihil eſt niſi panis mica quam dives pater-familias projicit canibus, ſaith Luther.

Thou openeſt thy hand] By opening the boſome of the earth thou richly provideſt for them, ὁ δοτὴς ἐάων.

Verſ.29. Thou hideſt thy face] i.e. Thou withdraweſt thy favour, thy concurrence, thine influence, they are troubled, or terrified, a cold ſweat fitteth upon their limbs, animam agunt, they ſhortly expire; for in God, we live, move, and have our being, *Act.*17. A frown of Auguſtus Ceſar, proved to be the death of Cornelius Gallus. Sir Chriſtopher Hatton Lord Chancellor of England dyed *Sept.*20.1591. of a flux of his urine, and grief of mind conceived upon ſome angry words given him by Q. Elizabeth. Camden.

Thou takeſt away their breath] Heb. Thou gathereſt it, calleſt for it again, viz. their vital vigour.

Verſ.30 Thou ſendeſt forth thy Spirit] Virtutem vivificam.

They are created] Others of the ſame kind are; and ſo the face of the earth is renued, whiles another generation ſpringeth up. This is matter of praiſe to their maker.

Verſ.31. The glory of the Lord ſhall endure for ever] Or, Let glory be to the Lord for ever, ſc. For his great works of Creation and Conſervation.

The Lord ſhall rejoyce in his works] As he did at the Creation, when he ſaw all to bee good and very good; ſo ſtill, it doth God good as it were, to ſee the poor creatures feed, and men to give him the honour of all.

Verſ.32. He looketh on the earth, and it trembleth] This muſt be conſidered, that God may be as well feared, as loved and praiſed.

He toucheth the hills, and they ſmoak] It therefore ill falling into his hands, who can do ſuch terrible things with his looks and touches.

Verſ.33. I will ſing unto the Lord] Though others be ſlack to do God this right, to help him to his own, to give him the glory due to his Name, yet I will do it, and do it conſtantly, ſo long as I have a breath to draw.

Verſ.34. My meditation of him ſhall be ſweet] Or, Let it be ſweet unto him, let him kindly accept it, (though it be mean and worthleſs) through Chriſts odours powred thereinto.

I will

I will be glad in the Lord] Withdrawing my heart from other vile and vain delights, or at leaſt vexed at mine own dulneſs, for being no more affected with ſuch inexpliable raviſhments.

Verſ. 35. Let the ſinners be conſumed, &c.] Such ſinners againſt their own ſouls, as when they know God, or might know him by his wonderful works, glorifie him not as God, neither are thankful, Rom. 1.21. but pollute and abuſe his good creatures to his diſhonor, fighting againſt him with thoſe lives that he hath given them.

Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul] The worſe others are, the better be thou, kindling thy ſelf from their coldneſs, &c.

PSAL. CV.

VErſ. 1. O give thanks unto the Lord] Some tell us, that this, and the two following Pſalms, were the great Hallelujah ſung at ſolemn times in their aſſemblies. But others ſay better, that the great Hallelujah (as the Hebrews called it) began at Pſal. 113. and held on till Pſal. 119. which they at the Paſſover began to ſing, after that cup of wine they called, Poculum hymni ſeu laudationis.

Call upon his Name] Call upon the Lord, who is worthy to be prayſed, Pſal. 18.3. See the Note there. Our life muſt be divided betwixt praiſes and prayers.

Verſ. 2. Sing unto him, ſing] Both with mouth, and with muſical inſtruments.

See 1 Cor. 1.31. with Jer. 9.23. Non eſt glorioſior populus ſub cœlo quam Judaicus, ſaith One; there is not a more vain-glorious people under heaven than the Jews; But we are the circumciſion which worſhip in ſpirit, and glory in Chriſt Jeſus, and have no confidence in the fleſh, Philip. 3.3. Alſted.

Let the heart of them rejoyce, &c.] All others are forbidden to rejoyce, Heſ. 9.1. and bidden to weep and howl, Jam. 5.1.

Verſ. 4. Seek the Lord and his ſtrength] That is, his Ark, at the remove whereof to Jeruſalem this Pſalm was ſung, 1 Chron. 16.7, 8. &c. Called it is Gods ſtrength, and Gods face here; yea even God himſelf, Pſal. 132.5. It is as if he ſhould ſay, Frequent holy Aſſemblies, as ever you deſire to draw nigh to God, and to have your faith in him confirmed.

Verſ. 5. Remember the marvelous works, &c.] Deeply, and diligently ponder both the works and words of God, comparing the one with the other, that ye may the better conceive of both.

Verſ. 6. O ye ſeed of Abraham, &c.] Do thus, or elſe your pedigree will profit you no more, than it did Dives in the flames, that Abraham called him Son. An empty title, yeeldeth but an empty comfort.

Verſ. 7. For he is the Lord] Jehovah, the Eſſentiator, the promiſe-keeper, therefore praiſe him! He is alſo in Covenant with us, and will we not do him this right?

His judgements are in all the earth] His executions upon the Egyptians and Philiſtims, are far and near notified and diſcourſed.

Verſ. 10. And confirmed the ſame, &c.] So God ſealeth, and ſweareth to us again and again, in every Sacrament, that all doubts of his love may be taken away, and our hearts lifted up (as Jehoſaphat, 2 Chron. 17.6.) in the way of the Lord.

Verſ. 11. Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan] That pleaſanteſt of all lands, Ezek. 20.6. a type and pledge of heaven to the faithful.

Verſ. 12. When they were but a few men in number] Seventy ſouls at their going down into Egypt, which yet (ſay the Hebrews truly) were more worth than the Seventy Nations of the whole world beſides. Howbeit God choſe them not for their worth; or number, but loved them meerly becauſe he loved them, Deut. 7. 7, 8.

Verſ. 13. When they went from one Nation to another] There were ſeven ſeveral Nations in that Land, wherein they ſojourned, flitting from place to place, and having no ſetled habitation, ἀκατοίκητοι, 2 Cor. 4. 11.

Yea he reproved Kings] Gen. 12. 17. and 20. 3. Kings and Queens muſt not think themſelves too good to nurſe Gods little ones, yea to do them homage, licking up the duſt under their feet, Iſa. 49. 23.

Verſ. 15. Touch not mine anointed, &c.] This, God ſpeaketh not of Kings, but to Kings, concerning his people who have an unction from the Father, being ſanctified, and ſet apart for his peculiar. To touch theſe, is to touch the apple of Gods eye, Zach. 2. 8. they are ſacred perſons.

And do my Prophets no harm] The Patriarchs were ſuch, Gen. 20. 7. ſo are ſtill all godly Miniſters, whom they who harm by word or deed, have not ſo much knowledge as Pilats wife had in a dream. See Pſal. 14 4.

Verſ. 16. Moreover he called for a Famine] How eaſie is it with God ſoon to ſtawe us all by denying us an harveſt or two? If he do but call for a Famine it is done.

He brake the whole ſtaff of bread] Either by withdrawing bread, that ſtaff of mans life, or his bleſſing from it; for man liveth not by bread alone (or at all) but by every word, &c. Mat. 4. without which, bread can no more nouriſh us than a clod of clay. In pane concluſus eſt quaſi baculus, qui nos ſuſtinet. See Hag. 1. 6. with the Noter.

He was laid in iron] Heb. His ſoul came into iron, or the iron entred into his ſoul; but ſin entred not into his conſcience. See a like phraſe, Luke 2. 35.

Verſ. 28. He ſent darkneſs] Palpable darkneſs by reaſon of moſt black and thick vapours of the earth, mingling themſelves with the air; ſuch as Aben-Ezra ſaid that hee once felt ſailing upon the Ocean, the groſs vapours there putting out the light of fire and candle, and not ſuffering them to be re-inkindled.

And they rebelled not againſt his word] They, that is, the plagues called for, came immediately, with an Ecce me. Or, They, that is Moſes and Aaron refuſed not to denounce, and inflict thoſe plagues, though Pharaoh threatned to kill them: where a man would wonder at Pharaohs hardneſs and hardineſs; that being in the midſt of that deep and dreadful darkneſs, he could rage againſt God, and threaten with death his ſervant Moſes. The Arabick (reading ו for נ) rendreth it, Et irritarunt ſermonem ejus; And they (the Egyptians) provoked his word, or rebelled againſt it.

Verſ. 30. The land brought forth frogs in abundance] Like graſs that grows upon the ground, or as fiſhes ſpawned in the Sea, as the word ſignifieth, Gen. 1. 20. Some think they were not common frogs, ſed venenatas & horrendas, quales ſunt rubetæ & buſones, but Toads and Lizards; Crocodiles, ſome think, came out of the River, and deſtroyed people. Ab. Ezra.

In the chambers of their Kings] Regiis & regulorum interdum aulis, mediis cuſtodiis: This was the finger of God; as it was likewiſe when a Town in Spain was overturned by Conies, and another in Theſſaly by Moles, a City in France undone by Frogs, and another in Africa by Locuſts, &c. Plin. l. 8. c. 29

Verſ. 31. He ſpake, and there came divers ſorts of Flyes] Heb. a mixture, ſc. of Waſpes Hornets, Dog-flyes (the moſt troubleſome of all other πανοπλίαι) all ſorts of Inſects.

And Lice in all their coaſts] This, the Magicians could not do. Quid tam ſimplex vilius, &c? ſaith Philo, What's baſer than a Louſe? yet hereby God can tame the ſturdieſt of his rebels. Some Kings, and other Grandees have dyed of the louſie diſeaſe; as Herod, Philip of Spain, &c.

Verſ. 32. He gave them Hail for Rain] Rain was geaſon in Egypt; but now they had hail for rain, a giftleſs gift, Heb. He gave their rain hail, Exod. 9. 23.

Verſ. 36. He ſmote alſo all the firſt-born] This he did laſt of all, the next ſpring after the firſt plague inflicted, & non niſi coactus, as that Emperor once ſaid when he ſubſcribed a writ for execution of a certain Malefactor.

The chief of all their ſtrength] Et ubi non erat primogenitus, moritur epitropus, ſay the Hebrews, where was not a firſt-born, there the ſteward died; ſo that there was no houſe in Egypt without a dead corps, as there are few amongſt us, without many dead ſouls.

Verſ. 39. He ſpread a cloud] It muſt needs be a very large one, that could cover ſuch an army from the extraordinary heats there; For the Deſerts of Arabia are extreme hot, both by reaſon of the climate, and alſo of the ſands reflecting the Sun-beams. So ſtill upon all the glory (the Church) ſhall be a covering, Iſa. 4. 5.

And fire to give light, &c.] A fiery pillar againſt the error, terror, and danger of the darkneſs. See Neh. 9. 19.

Verſ. 40. The people asked] Not as ſuppliants, but as male-contents, and therefore had what they asked, with a vengeance.

And ſatisfied them with the bread of heaven] Never was any Prince in his greateſt ſtate ſo ſerved as theſe miſcreants were: and yet we fare better than they in Gods holy Ordinances.

Verſ. 41. He opened the rock] Set it abroach, giving them pluviam eſcatilem, & petram aquatilem, as Tertul. hath it. De patient.

They ran in the dry places] Per deſerta Sinis & Txinis, ſaith Junius. See 1 Cor. 10. 4.

Verſ. 42. For he remembred his holy promiſe] Holy, that is, firm, and inviolable, Heb. The word of his holineſs, that is, his ſacred and gracious ingagement, whereby he had made himſelf a voluntary debtor to Abrahams poſterity.

And Abraham his ſervant] To whom he had paſſed his promiſe four hundred and thirty years before. Nullum tempus occurrit Regi.

Verſ. 43. And he brought forth his people with joy] According to his promiſe made to Abraham; and according to the time they were afflicted, ſo were they comforted, Pſal. 90. 15.

Verſ. 44. And gave them the lands of the heathen] God doth not his work to the halves, he will perfect that which concerneth us, Pſal. 138. 8. and preſerve all his unto his heavenly Kingdome, 2 Tim. 4. 18.

And inherited the labour of the people] Their Cities, Towns, Villages, Fields, Vineyards, all done to the hand of the Iſraelites. We ſhall alſo enter into our Maſters joy, Manſions made ready for us, &c.

Verſ. 45. That they might obſerve his Statutes] Here the Pſalmiſt ſheweth the final cauſe of all the ſervice of God; what ſhould be the reſult, his praiſe.

Praiſe ye the Lord] Loquitur ad prudentes, ſaith Aben-Ezra, This he ſpeaketh to thoſe that are wiſe; For high words become not a fool, ſaith Solomon.

PSAL. CVI.

VErſ. 1. Praiſe ye the Lord] Though ſcattered among the heathen, and in a ſorrowful condition, verſ. 47. In proſperity praiſe the Lord, ſaith Auſtin, and it ſhall increaſe upon thee. In adverſity praiſe him, and it ſhall be better with thee.

O give

O give thanks unto the Lord, &c.] This verſe was, ſay ſome, the foot or tenor of the Song in many ſacred hymns.

For his mercy indureth for ever] Even to thoſe alſo that have ſinned againſt his goodneſs.

Verſ. 2. Who can utter, &c.] i.e. To the juſt worth of them? None can; they are fitter to be admired than poſſible to be uttered. It is enough that we do what we can toward the work. God accepteth according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not, 2 Cor. 8. he taketh it for no ſmall praiſe, when we thus acknowledge him to be above all praiſe.

Who can ſhew forth all his praiſe?] Surely none can; David ſaith he will, Pſal. 9. 1. but ſoon found his utter inability; for according to thy Name, O Lord, ſo is thy praiſe, ſaith he in another Pſalm. The beſt way is, as here in the inſuing verſes, to ſubmit to Gods juſtice, and to implore his mercy, and to ſtudy integrity, verſ. 3, 4, 5, 6. Quis laudo exprimat?

Verſ. 3. Bleſſed are they that keep judgement, &c.] That are of right principles and upright practices; this is real and ſubſtantial praiſing of God. Thankſ-doing is the proof of Thankſ-giving; and the good life of the thankful is the life of thankfulneſs. Thoſe that ſay, God a thank only, and no more, are not only contumelious, but injurious.

And he that doth righteouſneſs] So preaching forth the vertues (or praiſes) of God who hath called him into his marvellous light, 1 Pet. 2. 9. and compoſing his whole courſe, velut ſpectatum aliquod ſimulachrum & documentum laudis ejus conſtans atque perpetuum. Jun.

Verſ. 4. Remember me, O Lord, with the favour, &c.] The Pſalmiſt would have favour, and ſpecial favour, mercies, and ſure mercies proper to Go Is peculiar, and with theſe he would be remembred; grace, he would find ſuch as might help in time of need, Heb. 4. 16. God remembred Noah, Gen. 8. 1. Your heavenly Father knoweth that yee have need of theſe things, Mat. 6. Though our Ark be driven in a tempeſtuous ſea, yet it ſhall neither ſink, nor ſplit, while we ſail in the thoughts of God.

O viſit me with thy ſalvation] A gracious ſpirit will not be ſatisfied with low things, common mercies.

Verſ. 5. That I may ſee the good of thy choſen] Ut videam in bonum, that I may ſee it, and partake of it, have both the viſion and fruition of thy great goodneſs, which thou haſt laid up for them that fear thee, Pſal. 31. 19. giving them a taſte thereof aforehand, as a few grapes of that promiſed Canaan.

Of thy Nation] i.e. By this name Gods elect, are here and elſewhere ſtiled, and therefore the Jews have no reaſon to reproach us, as they do by it; calling us Goi, and Mamzer goi, baſtard heathens.

Verſ. 6. We have ſinned with our Fathers] Adding to their heap, and making up their meaſure, Mat. 23. 32. People think the example of their Fathers a ſufficient excuſe. Jerom once (but not well) deſired leave of Auſtin to erre with ſeven Fathers whom hee found of his opinion. I will follow my forefathers, ſaith Cicero, although I fall together with them. See Jer. 44. 17. But ſo would not theſe good ſouls, as neither Jeremy chap. 3. 25. nor Daniel chap. 9. 5. whoſe confeſſion ſuting and ſymbolizing with this (together with that we read, verſ. 47. maketh ſome think that this Pſalm was penned for the peoples uſe then, when they were captives in Babylon.

We have committed iniquity &c.] Sin muſt bee confeſſed with utmoſt aggravation. Ile hear how full in the mouth theſe are againſt themſelves, laying on load, whilſt their ſins ſwell as ſo many toads in their eyes.

Verſ. 7. Our Fathers underſtood not] i.e. They weighed them not, improved them not, but as the dull earth is ſurrounded by the heavens, yet perceiveth it not; ſo were theſe with miracles and mercies, yet underſtood them not.

Even at the red Sea] Not only whiles they were on the bank they feared to enter, but alſo even when they were paſſing and walking over that dry land made for them by a miracle, they did ſtill continue their murmurings and mutinings.

Verſ. 8. Nevertheleſs he ſaved them for his Names ſake] Here he comes in with a Nonobſtante. So Iſa. 37. 17. Now if God will ſave for his Names ſake, what people is there whom he may not ſave?

That he might make his power to be known] The Lord hath other things to look unto, than preſently to puniſh his people, when they moſt deſerve it.

Vers. 9. He rebuked the red sea also] Ingenia, beneficia, flagitia, supplicia, as appeareth in the subsequent verses.

So he led them through the depths] Inter duas aquarum congeries, betwixt two mountains of waters which stood on each hand of them as a wall, and made a lane. Every main affliction is our red sea; which while it threatneth to swallow us up, preserveth us.

Vers. 10. And he saved them, &c.] From Pharaoh that perfect enemy of theirs, that pursued them with a deadly design, but was happily prevented.

Vers. 11. And the waters covered their enemies] The preservation of the Church is ever accompanied with the destruction of its enemies, that the mercy may appear the greater.

Not one of them was left] Left alive to carry the news.

Vers. 12. Then they believed his words] Then for a flesh, whilst the memory of the mercy was fresh and warm? but ere they were three dayes elder, they murmured again; It proved not so much as a nine dayes wonderment; they were soon at oldward.

They sang his praise] Exod. 15. A tempory faith and joy.

Vers. 13. They soon forgat his works] Heb. They made hasse, they forgat. This is an aggravating circumstance. See Gal. 1. 6. Exod. 32. 8. Deut. 9. 16.

They waited not for his counsel] For the performance of what he had purposed and promised; they were short-spirited and impatient.

Vers. 14. But lusted exceedingly] Heb. Lusted a lust. See Num. 11. they had a sufficiency, but must have superfluities, as belly-gods; not want, but wantonness set them a lusting, and that in the wilderness, where they knew that in an ordinary way it was not to be had.

And tempted God] Whom they should have trusted rather, sith he waiteth to be gracious, and being a God of judgement, knoweth best when to deal forth his favours, Isa. 30. 18 and 49. 8.

Aug. Vers. 15. And he gave them their request] Deus sæpe dat iratus quod negat propitius.

Martial. Munera magna quidem misit, sed missit in hamo.

Quales they had, but to choake them; as afterwards, a King, but to vex them, &c.

But sent leanness into their soul] i. e. Into their bodies, such a loathing as caused leanness, Num. 11. 20. a plague upon their bodies, a curse upon their souls. Many men eat that on earth, which they digest in hell. It is dangerous feeding on sins murthering-morsels.

Vers. 16. They envied Moses also] Korah, and his complices did; and because the people punished them not, they are all accused as guilty of that conspiracy, and looked upon as a rabble of rebels against heaven.

And Aaron the Saint of the Lord] Separated to the Priesthood. The Rabbins tell us that they had chosen Dathan instead of Moses, and Abiram for Aaron.

Vers. 17. The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, &c.] Korah is not here mentioned, haply for his sons sakes, who were famous Prophets and Musick-masters in Davids dayes. As for On the son of Peleth (one of the chief conspirators) the Rabbins say that by the good counsel of his wife he repented, and so escaped.

Vers. 18. And a fire was kindled in their company] It is both a just presage and desert of ruine, not so be warned. Let seditious persons and Schismaticks take heed; for even our God also is a consuming fire, Heb. 12. ult.

The flame burnt up the wicked] And among the rest Korah, as some conceive, Dathan and Abiram are stigmatized for their stubbornness, Num. 26. 9. as was afterwards Abaz, 2 Chron. 28. 22. and before them all Cain, Gen. 4. 15. and Lamech, 23, 24.

Vers. 19. They made a Calf in Horeb] i. e. In the Countrey near to that mountain, where they at same time saw visible tokens of Gods dreadful presence. Well might Aaron say of this people that they were wholly set upon wickedness, Exod. 32. 22. This peece of Idolatry they had learned belike of the Egyptians, who worshipped Apis in such a shape; so catching is sin, and so dangerous is ill company.

Lege Lactant. & Euseb. lib. 1. de mirab. Script. cap. 15.

Vers. 20. Thus they changed their glory] i. e. Their God, Rom. 1. 23. the Creator for a contemptible creature.

Of an Ox that eateth grass] Tam fœtentem regerit, & multum vaginatum, as R. Salomon here glosseth. They pretended not to worship the Calf, but God in the Calf, as did also also Jehu, 2 King. 10. 16. 29. 2 Chron. 11. 15. and as the Idolatrous Papists do at this day. See Exod. 32. 5. yet the text here saith, They worshipped the molten image, they changed their glory into the similitude of an Ox. And although some of the Rabbins would excuse this grosse Idolatry of their fore-fathers, yet others more wise bewail it, and say that there is an ounce of this golden Calf in all their present sufferings.

Vers. 21. They forgat God their Saviour] This is often mentioned as the Mother of all the mis-rule amongst them.

Vers. 22. Wondrous things in the land of Ham] i.e. Among the Egyptians, Hams posterity.

And terrible things at the red Sea] All which were buried, together with the remembrance of God the doer.

Vers. 23. Therefore he said that he would destroy them] Idolatry is a people-desolating sin. God was once in a mind to have destroyed this people utterly, and to have left none but Moses; Exod. 32. 10. 31, &c. promising him a great fortune if he would have suffered it; But he tendring Gods glory, more than his own greatness, refused it: Choice and excellent spirits use to do so.

Had not Moses his chosen] Chosen to represent Christ in his mediatorship.

Stood up in the breach] A metaphor from Military matters. When a strong Hold is besieged, and a breach made, valiant Souldiers use to make up that breach with their own bodies, till the enemy be beaten back. Gods wrath was even breaking in upon the people. Moses prayed instantly and constantly, even the most part of those forty dayes and nights he spent in the Mount; Deut. 9. and at length prevailed. See Ezek. 13. 5. and 22. 30.

Vers. 24. Yea they despised the pleasant land] Heb. The land of desire, flowing with milk and hony, fumen totius terræ, as One calleth it; Egypt they preferred before it, though it were a gage of heaven, as Cardinal Barbon did his part in Paris, before his part in Paradise.

They believed not his word] sc. That he would, or indeed could give them that good land. He that believeth not, maketh God a liar.

Vers. 25. But murmured in their tents] Where they sate discontented (after the report of the Spies) and as we say, Sick of the Sullens, they would not attempt a conquest, but bewayled their hard fortune, and let flye on all hands, keeping a clutter, and a rattle.

Vers. 26. Therefore he lifted up his hand] i.e. He solemnly swore, as Num. 14. 30. or he was fetching his full blow at them.

To overthrow them in the wilderness] Which also befel them according to their own wicked wish: Let men take heed of wishing evil to themselves, lest God say Amen to it.

Vers. 27. To overthrow their seed also among the Nations] This clause of Gods oath is not expressed in Numbers, but drawn there-hence as a fearful consequence, both here by the Psalmist, and also by the Prophet Ezekiel, chap. 20. And R. Solomon note upon this text is, Tunc erat decretum de desolando Templo, ut lachrymas pro re magna, sicut ante pro nihilo effunderent. Then was the desolation of the Temple (though it fell out long after) determined, that those male-contents who cryed for nothing before, might have somewhat to cry for.

Vers. 28. They joyned themselves also unto Baal-peor] Heb. They were unequally yoked, as 2 Cor. 6. 14.

Quam male inæquales vrsimus ad aspera juvenci.

Ab apertione seu nudatione pudendorum.

They separated themselves to that shame, Priapus, Hos. 9. 10. who had his name from shewing all; and his worshippers were most impudent Varlets.

And ate the sacrifices of the dead] i.e. Of Idols opposed to the living God: The beginning of Idolatry some say, was the attributing of divine honours to great persons when they were dead. The heathens shewed the sepulchres of their oldest Deities.

Vers. 29. Thus they provoked him] God cannot brook mans devices in matters of Religion, he will have no other worship than what himself hath appointed.

And the plague brake in upon them] As a Deluge, or as an Army, very impetuously, so the destroying Angel swoop'd three and twenty thousand persons.

Animose surgexit. Vatab.

Verſ. 30. Then ſtood up Phinehas] By a ſecret, heroical and extraordinary motion of Gods Spirit, ſuch as may not be drawn in to example: all things reported and commended in Scripture may not be imitated. One Birchet by example of Phinehas and Ehud, thought he might have killed a great perſonage in this land whom he looked upon as a naughty man, and Gods enemy. A particular example will afford a general inſtruction, when the equity of the thing done is univerſal, and the cauſe common, otherwiſe not, ſaith learned Junius.

And executed judgment] Not tarrying for the ſentence of the Judge. The Chaldee rendreth it, And prayed. Execution of juſtice, is that actual, magiſterial, and majeſtical kind of prayer, that will ſtay the plague, when nothing elſe will.

Verſ. 31. And that was counted unto him for righteouſneſs] God not only condemned him not of raſh zeal, but looked upon what he had done, as a peece of ſingular ſervice, and rewarded it accordingly.

Verſ. 32. They angred him alſo at the waters of ſtrife] Yea he made not the leaſt ſemblance of it to Moſes, but only bad him ſmite the Rock, which if he had then done, and no more, he had done right. God is Bagnal Chemah maſter of his anger, Nah. 1.2. ſo was not meek Moſes at this time. The beſt are miſcarried by their paſſions ſometimes to their coſt.

So that it went ill with Moſes for their ſakes] i. e. By their means he was kept out of Canaan, which was a great croſs to him, and his repentance, as to that favour, came too late, for God was reſolved.

Verſ. 33. Becauſe they provoked his ſpirit] So that he was in a pet to the grieving of Gods good Spirit within him, Eph. 4.30,31. O tantæne animis cœleſtibus iræ?

So that he ſpake unadviſedly] Some render it only, he ſpake, or he pronounced, he ſhould not have ſpoken at all to the people (as having no order from God ſo to do in that tranſaction) but only to the Rock. Whereas he not onely ſmote the Rock, and ſmote it twice, but ſpake to the people, and ſpake raſhly, or idlely (the Greek word βατταλογέω is thought to come from the Hebrew Bitz here uſed) yea bitterly, calling them Rebels, and falling foul upon them, with diſtruſtful interrogations, and miſ-implications. This is called Rebellion, Numb. 20.10,11.24. and ſeverely puniſhed in Gods favourite Moſes.

Et perperam locutus eſt. Contra charitatem, ὐ περπερέυεται 1 Cor. 13.

Verſ. 34. They did not deſtroy the Nations] For which neglect of theirs, pity would be pleaded. But there is a cruel mercy, ſaith One; There is a pious cruelty ſaith another. Curſed is he that doth the Lords work deceitfully, and curſed is he that reſtraineth his ſword from blood, when God biddeth him ſtrike. Saul and Ahab felt the dint of this curſe, and ſo did theſe Iſraelites, for ſparing the Canaanites, whether out of puſillanimity, or fooliſh pity.

Verſ. 35. But were mingled among the heathen] With whom they made leagues, and mariages, Jud. 3. and ſo were ſoon corrupted by them. It is dangerous to converſe with graceleſs people, their very example is a compulſion. See Gal. 2.14. how much more their evil counſel?

Verſ. 36. And they ſerved their Idols] The Devil is φιλοκερδὴς ſaith Byneſius, a lover of Idolatry, and hee ſpeaks through Idolaters as through his trunckes, perſwading people to like practiſe, as did Julian, whom an Ancient therefore called Idolian.

Which were a ſnare unto them] Or a ſnine, as ſome render it; they were firſt drawn in, and then undone by them.

Verſ. 37. Yea they ſacrificed their ſons, &c.] The Devils are here called Shedim Deſtroyers (in oppoſition to Shaddai the Almighty) and worthily; for they make it their work to waſte and ſpoyl people of their deareſt children (as here) of their precious ſouls, with the blood whereof they do daily glut themſelves.

Verſ. 38. And ſhed innocent blood, &c.] This was ſuton Diabolicus; but what may not the Devil do with his drudges, when Gods word cannot obtain the ſmalleſt things of us?

Whom they ſacrificed unto the Idols of Canaan] Prompted thereunto by that old man-ſlayer. This was practiſed by Manaſſeh, and others not a few, Jer. 7.31. Ezek. 16. Hæc proprie & frequenter apud Gentes.

And the land was polluted with blood] Impietas [illegible] critæ. See Ezra 9.11. As an hypocrite is a ſain[illegible] ſo [illegible]

Verſ.

Verſ.39. Thus they were defiled] Great ſins do greatly pollute; neither are men by any thing more diſadvantaged than by doating upon their own devices.

And went a whoring] They followed it earneſtly, and with delight.

Verſ.40. Therefore was the wrath of the Lord kindled] Sin doth as naturally draw and ſuck judgements to it, as the Loadſtone doth iron, or Turpentine fire.

Inſomuch that he abhorred his own inheritance] This was the greateſt of all miſeries, and a peece of hell.

Verſ.41. And he gave them into the hand of the heathen] That they might ſuffer by them with whom they had ſinned, and with whom, by compliance, they hoped to have ingratiated.

Verſ.42. And they were brought into ſubjection] Heb. They were bowed down, or humbled, who would not humble themſelves under the mighty hand of God, that he might exalt them.

Verſ.43. Many times did he deliver them] And as many times told them, Servati eſtis ut mihi ſerviatis, I have therefore ſaved you that ye might ſerve me the better; Sed ſurdo fabulam, but they would not hearken.

Theogn.

ἡ χάρις ἀλλάξαι τὴν φύσιν ὃ δύναται.

Verſ. 44. Nevertheleſs he regarded their affliction] See for proof hereof the whole book of Judges, and take notice of Gods Philanthropie, who heareth mens afflictions as he did Hagars, Gen.16.11. and is oft found of them that ſeek him not, *Iſa.*65.1. See 2 *King.*13.26 27.

When he heard their cry] Heb. Their ſhrill out-cry; not for joy (as the word is moſtly taken) but for grief.

Verſ.45. And he remembred for them his Covenant] Which could not bee vacated or aboliſhed by the wickedneſs of men, but ſtood firm and inviolable, in as much as God is faithful and merciful.

And repented] That is, changed his ſeverity into clemency. Gods repentance is not a change of his will, but of his work, Mutatio rei, non Dei.

Verſ.46. And he made them alſo to be pitied] God can ſoon turn the hearts of Tyrants, and make them of Lions, Lambs, &c.

Verſ.47. Save us O Lord our God] This is the main requeſt of the Pſalm, and the chief thing intended; for, for this cauſe prefaced the Prophet, as verſe 1, 2 &c. and reckoned up the peoples ſins, and Gods deliverances, that he might bring in this, Save us, as thou ever haſt done.

To give thanks unto thy holy Name] Good ends propounded in prayer is a ſpecial means of ſpeeding. Hypocrites do all in themſelves ſo do not the Saints, *Hoſ.*14.8.) and all for themſelves, as *Zech.*7.5. *Hoſ.*10.1. which is not the Saints practice, *Cant.*5.1 they have good aims in their good actions.

Verſ.48. Bleſſed be the Lord] viz. For our return out of captivity, which we foreſee, believe, and give thanks for aforehand.

Praiſe ye the Lord] Thus they ſpeak one to another, by way of excitation ὑμνήσατε μετὰ μόδος τὸν ὅν, ſo Juſtin Martyr rendreth it.

PSAL. CVII.

VErſ.1. O give thanks unto the Lord for he is good] He is good, and doth good, Pſal. 119.68. not to his Iſrael only, as is ſet forth in the two foregoing Pſalms, but to all mankind; which is Divini ingenii cura, as One ſaith, whatever Atheiſts and Epicures ſay to the contrary, denying a divine providence, witneſs that profane Diſtich of theirs.

Nempe nihil poſitum eſt, & ſors incerta vagatur,
Forſque refertque vices, & habent mortalia caſum.

For his mercy endureth for ever] Notwithſtanding mens many and mighty provocations.

Verſ.2. Let the Redeemed of the Lord] Four ſorts of whom are afterwards inſtanced; 1. Exiles, 2 Priſoners, 3 Sick perſons, 4 Sea-men. Theſe, and the like, muſt praiſe him in ſpecial manner for their deliverance.

From the hand of the enemy] Or, of diſtreſs.

Verſ.

Vers. 3. And gathered them out of the lands] He beginneth with wayfaring men, and exiles, because according to Tyrius, Nemo exul non a dicitur esse Deo.

And from the South] Heb. From the Sea, that is (as the Chaldee expounds it) from the Southern Sea, called the Red Sea.

Vers. 4. They wandred in the wilderness, &c.] This is a sad case, Mendicum pavis amissa laribusque vagari.

πλουγχθοσύνης ὀν ἐςὶ πανώλεθρον ἄλλο βροτοῖσι.

And yet this is the case of all Gods Redeemed ones whiles they are here, Heb. 11. 1 Pet. 2. 12.

Per varios casus per tot discrimina rerum
Tendimus in patriam veram vitamque perennem.

Vers. 5. Hungry and thirsty, &c.] The Lords exiles meet many times with the like exigents in the wilderness of this wicked world; but let them be content, and say, We are well for the present, and is will be better with us hereafter.

Melanthon.

Exul erat Christus comites nos exulis hujus
Esse decet, cujus nos quoque membra sumus.

Vers. 6. Then they cryed unto the Lord] Though under a wrong name it may be, as of Jupiter Mercury, &c. and in an uncertain way, as Hecuba did with her, O Jupiter quicquid es sine cœlum hoc, sine mens, quæ vehitur in cœlo, &c. And as those Mariners in Jonah 1. 5. who cryed, Every man to his god, and lest they might all mistake the true God, they awaken Jonah, to call upon HIS God.

And he delivered them out of their distresses] Out of his general goodness, and compassion to the poor creature; Like as he heareth the young Ravens that cry unto him, no otherwise than by implication only, and out of meer necessity, God is the Saviour of all men, but especially of those that believe.

Vers. 7. And he led them forth by the right way] Better than that Dea Vibilia among the Romans, of whom they fancied, that she set them right when out of the way at any time; or Minerva among the Athenians, who, they said, turned all their evil counsels to the best unto them.

That they might go to a City of habitation] Grow to a state of settlement, to Jerusalem, saith the Chaldee, to that City which hath a foundation may we say, whose Maker and Founder is God, Heb. 11. 10.

Vers. 8. O that men would praise the Lord, &c.] Heb. That they would confess it to the Lord, both in secret, and in society. This is all the rent that God requireth; he is content that we have the comfort of his blessings, so he may have the honour of them; This was all the fee Christ looked for, for his cures, Go and tell what God hath done for thee. Words seem to be a poor and slight recompence; but Christ, saith Nazianzen, calleth himself the Word.

Vers. 9. For he satisfieth the longing soul, &c.] This is a recapitulation of the first part, vers. 5, 6, 7. and setteth forth the reason why the Redeemed should praise God out of the sweet experience they have had of his wonderful providence and goodness toward them.

And filleth the hungry soul with good things] This flower the blessed Virgin picketh out of Davids garden (among many others out of other parts of holy Scripture, wherein it appeareth she was singularly well versed) and puts it into her Posie, Luke 1. 53.

Vers. 10. Such as sit in darkness, &c.] Here come in the second sort of Gods redeemed or rescued Ones, viz. captives and prisoners, whose dark and doleful condition is in this verse described.

And in the shadow of death] In dark caves and horrid prisons, where there is Luctus ubique, pavor, & plurima mortis imago. Such was Josephs first prison, Jeremies miry dungeon, Lollards Tower, the Bishop of London's Coal-house, &c.

Being bound in affliction and iron] Or, in poverty and iron, as Manasseh was. Many are the miseries that poor prisoners undergo. Good Saunders had the experience of it, and Tyndall, and the Martyrs, and divers of Gods dear Servants in the like way have.

A certain pious Prince discoursing of the dangers that grow to Arts through [illegible] for for the profeſſion of Religion, ſaid, Nihil ſe magis metuere quam diuturnos carceres, that he feared nothing ſo much as perpetual impriſonment.

Verſ. 11. Becauſe they rebelled againſt the words of God] Sin is at the bottome of all mens miſeries, as the procreant cauſe thereof; For God afflicteth not willingly, nor grieveth the children of men, Lam. 3. 33. but they rebel againſt his words written in the Scriptures, or at leaſt in their hearts; and ſo he is concerned in point of honour to ſubdue them.

And contemned the counſel] A foul fault. See Luke 7. 30.

Verſ. 12. Therefore he brought down their heart] That proud piece of fleſh, Quod erat elatum & verbo Dei contempſit, ſaith Kimchi, which had ſtouted it out with God, and thought to have carried it away with a ſtrong hand; as Manaſſeh that ſturdy Rebel, till God had hampered him, and laid him in cold irons.

Verſ. 13. Then they cryed unto the Lord] See verſ. 6.

And he ſaved them, &c.] This is comfort to the greateſt ſinners; if they can but find a praying heart, God will find a pitying heart, and rebels ſhall be received with all ſweetneſs, if at length they return, though brought in by the croſs.

Verſ. 14. He brought them out of darkneſs] He ſent his Mandamus, as Pſal. 44. 4. and that did the deed, as Act. 5. 19. and 12. 7.

Verſ. 15. Oh that men, &c.] See verſ. 8.

Verſ. 16. For he hath broken the gates of braſs] If Samſon could do ſo, how much more the Almighty, whom nothing can withſtand? Nature may be ſtopped in her courſe, as when the fire burnt not. Men may not be able to do as they would. Angels good or bad may be hindred, becauſe in them there is an eſſence and an executive power, between which God can ſtep at his pleaſure, and interpoſe his Veto; But who, or what ſhall hinder the moſt High?

Verſ. 17. Fools becauſe of their tranſgreſſion] Propter viam defectionis ſuæ, by means of their defection, their departing away from the living God, through an evil heart of unbeleef, Heb. 3. 12.

And becauſe of their iniquities] The flood-gates whereof are ſet open as it were by that their defection from God; For now what ſhould hinder?

Are afflicted] Heb. Do afflict themſelves, procure their own ruthe, if not ruine, and ſo prove ſinners againſt their own ſouls, as thoſe Num. 16.

Verſ. 18. Their ſoul abhorreth] That is, their ſtomach loatheth, is as unſavoury, though it be never ſo dainty; An appetite to our meat is an unconceivable mercy, and as we ſay, A ſign of health.

And they draw neer to the gates of death] Jam ipſum mortis limen pulſant; as till then, little ſenſe of ſin or fear of the wrath to come. See Job 33. 19, 20, 21, 22, 23. with the Notes.

Verſ. 19. Then they cry, &c.] Quando medicus & medicina non proſunt, ſaith Kimchi, when Phyſicians have done their utmoſt. See verſ. 6.

Verſ. 20. He ſent his word and healed them] He commanded deliverance, and it was done; unleſs there be an alluſion to the eſſential Word, who was afterwards to take fleſh, and to heal the diſeaſed.

And delivered them from their deſtructions] Heb. From their corrupting-pits or graves, which do now even gape for them. And he calleth them theirs, quia per peccatum fadarunt eas, ſaith Kimchi, becauſe by their ſin themſelves have digged them.

Verſ. 21. Oh that men, &c.] See verſ. 8.

And for his wonderful works] Men are miſericordiæ & miraculis obſeſſe, and it were no hard matter to find a miracle in moſt of our mercies.

Verſ. 22. And let them ſacrifice, &c.] If they have eſcaped ſickneſs, let them offer a Paſſover; and if they have recovered, a Thank-offering. Heathens in this caſe praiſed their Eſculapius; Papiſts their Sebaſtian, Valentine, Apollonia, &c. Ears of wax they offer to the Saint, who as they ſuppoſe cureth the ears, eyes of wax to the Saint that cureth the eyes, &c. But it is Jehovah only who healeth us.

And declare his works, &c.] Memorize, and magnifie them.

Verſ. 23. They that go down to the Sea in ſhips] Here we have a fourth ſpecimen or inſtance of Gods gracious and wiſe diſpenſations towards men, in their trading or traffiquing by Sea. Theſe are ſaid to go down to Sea, becauſe the banks are above it; but the water is naturally higher than the land, and therefore Seylers obſerve, that their ships flye faster to the shore than from it. But what a bold man, saith the Poet, was he that first put forth to Sea?

ſhips

Horat. Od. lib. 1. 3.

Illi robur, & æs triplex
Circa pectus erat, qui fragilem truci
Commisit pelago ratem
Primus, nec timuit præcipitem Africum, &c.

That do business in great waters] Merchants and Mariners, who fish, and find Almug, or Coral, saith Kimchi, who do export and import commodities of all sorts.

Vers. 24. These see the works of the Lord &c.] In Sea-monsters, as Whales and Whirlpools, and sudden change of weather, and the like, not a few; Ebbs and Flows, Pearls, Islands, &c. These are just wonders, and may fully convince the veriest Atheist that is.

Vers. 25. For he commandeth and raiseth the stormy wind, &c.] Of this Seneca, though an heathen, could say, Inter cætera providentiæ divinæ opera hoc quoque dignum est admiratione, &c. Among other works of the Divine providence, this is admirable, that the winds lye upon the Sea for the furtherance of Navigation, &c.

Vers. 26. They mount up to heaven, they go down &c.] An elegant hypotyposis or description of a storm at Sea; like whereunto is that in Virgil.

Tollimur in cœlum, nunc ima patimus undas.

Tollimur in cœlum curvato gurgite, & iidem
Subducta ad manes imos descendimus undâ.

Their soul is melted because of trouble] They are ready to dye, through fear of death. Junius understandeth it of extreme vomiting, as if they were casting up their very hearts. Anacharses for this cause doubted whether he should reckon Mariners amongst the living or the dead. And another said, that any man will go to Sea at first I wonder not; but to go a second time thither, is little better than madness.

Vers. 27. They reel to and fro, &c.] Nutant nautæ, & vacillant cerebro & pedibus.

And are at their wits end] All their skill and strength faileth them at once; they can do no more for their lives. Heb. All their wisdome is swallowed up; that is, the art of Navigation is now to no use with them.

Vers. 28. Then they cry unto the Lord] Then, if ever: Hence that speech of One, Qui nescit orare, discat navigare, He that cannot pray, let him go to Sea, and there he will learn. See vers. 6.

Vers. 29. He maketh the storm a calm] He, that is God Almighty, whose the Sea is, and he made it, Psal. 100. not the Pagans, Neptune, or the Papagans, St. Nicholas.

So that the waves thereof are still] If therefore the voluptuous humors in our body (which is but as a cup made of the husk of an Acorn in respect of the Sea) will not be pacified, when the Lord saith unto us, Be still; every drop of water in the Sea, will be a witness of our monstrous rebellion and disobedience.

Vers. 30. Then are they glad because they be quiet] All is husht on the sudden, as Mat. 8. 26. both their fears, and the Seas outrages being quickly reduced to a peaceable period.

So he bringeth them to their desired haven] This is more than they then wished for, God is many times better to men than their prayers.

Vers. 31. Oh that men would, &c.] See vers. 8.

Vers. 32. Let them exalt him also in the Congregation, &c.] i. e. In all publick meetings Ecclesiastical and Civil.

Vers. 33. He turneth rivers into a wilderness] Hitherto the Psalmist hath set forth Gods good providence in delivering men from divers deaths and dangers; now he declareth the same in his just and powerful transmutations in nature, whilst according to the good pleasure of his will, he changeth mens condition, either from good to evil, or from evil to good, beyond all expectation; it is even He that doth it, whatsoever a company of dizzy-headed men dream to the contrary, as One phraseth it. It is God who dryeth up those Rivers, whereby the land was made fat and fertile, Isa. 41. 17.

Vers. 34. A fruitful land into barrenness] Heb. Salsuginem. See Luke 14. 34, 35. Deut. 29. 23. Jud. 9. 45. Salt becometh barrenness, by exhaling up the fat and moisture of the the earth. Some think the Psalmist here alludeth to Sodom and her fifters turned into the dead Sea.

For the wickedneſs of them that dwell therein] Hereof Judea is at this day a noble inſtance (beſides many parts of Aſia, and Africa, once very fruitful, now, ſince they became Mahometan, dry and deſert) Judea, ſaith One, hath now onely ſome few parcels of rich ground found in it; that men may gueſs the goodneſs of the cloath by the fineneſs of the ſhreds. Greece which was once Sol & ſal gentium, ſaith Another, terrarum flos, fons literarum, nunc vel Priamo miſeranda manu--nunc in Græcia deſideremus Græciam; 'tis nothing like the place it was once.

Verſ.35. He turneth the wilderneſs, &c.] Some places again, God (to ſhew his power and providence) of ſteril maketh to become fertil; Poloria for inſtance, and other Northern Countries. Germany and France were of old full of Woods and Lakes, as Ceſar and Tacitus teſtifie, now 'tis otherwiſe. So in America at this day. So divers deſert places of Egypt and Ethiopia, when once they became Chriſtian, became fruitfull.

Verſ.36. And there he maketh the hungry to dwell] As our Engliſh, and other Plantations in America, where ſundry poor people get fair eſtates.

That they may prepare a City] The building of Cities is of God, and ſo is their conſervation.

Verſ.37. And ſow the fields, and plant vineyards] Theſe are noble imployments, ſuch as the ancient Patriarchs were much in, and the moſt honorable among the Romans, as Coriolanus, M. Curius, Cato Major, &c. Our forefathers, if they could call any one, Bonum colonum, a good husbandman, they thought it praiſe enough, ſaith Cicero.

Which may yield] The thankful earth yeelding by Gods bleſſing, her gravem onus, full burden to the laborious tiller.

Verſ.38. He bleſſeth them alſo, &c.] See *Prov.*10.12. *Pſal.*127.1. *Jam.*4.15. They are out, that reſt in natural cauſes.

Verſ.39. Again they are miniſhed] Minorati ſunt; This alſo is of the Lord, who hath treaſuries of plagues, and cannot be exhauſted.

Verſ.40. He poureth contempt, &c.] See *Job.*12.21,24. with the Notes. Pœna tyrannorum eſt contemptus, exilium, nex, ſaith Gentbrard. All their policy or King craft cannot ſave them.

Verſ.41. Yet ſetteth he the poor] The godly poor, as he did David.

And maketh him families like a flock] of ſheep, which multiply exceedingly in a ſhort ſpace.

Verſ.42. The righteous ſhall ſee it, and rejoyce] It ſhall cheer them up to ſee that the reigns of Government are in Gods hand; and to behold ſuch love in ſuch providence.

And all iniquity ſhall ſtop her mouth] Shall be down in the mouth, as we uſe to ſay. See Job 5.16. and have her tongue chambered.

Verſ.43. Whoſo is wiſe] Heb. who is wiſe? q.d. not many. Rari quippe boni. None but thoſe that obſerve providences, and lay up experiences; which if men would do, they might have a Divinity of their own, were they but well read in the ſtory of their own lives. Exclamatio querulatoria Piſcat.

Even they ſhall underſtand, &c.] And as for thoſe providences that for preſent he underſtandeth not, rejicit in Dei abyſſos; he believeth there is a reaſon for them, and that they ſhall one day be unriddled.

PSAL. CVIII.

VErſ.1. O God, my heart is fixed] For the five firſt verſes of this Pſalm, ſee the Notes on *Pſal.*57.7,8,9,10,11. And for the eight laſt, ſee the Notes on *Pſal.*60. verſ.5,6,7,8,9,10,11,12.

PSAL. CIX.

A Pſalm of David] Written by him, ſæpe adeo ſtrenuo & horrifico ardore, ſaith Beza, in ſuch terrible terms, as the like is not eaſily found in holy Scripture; wherefore it is to be read and uſed with very great judgement, and not as thoſe miſcreants of whom Esther writeth, Quod more magicis dum execrationibus hunc Psalmum per modum execrationis in eorum hostes, that after a conjuring fashion they muttered out this Psalm, by way of curse upon their enemies.

Vers. 1. Hold not thy peace] But plead my cause, clear mine innocency.

O God of my praise] The object of my praises, or thou that keepest up my credit, as a witness, judge, and avenger of mine integrity.

Vers. 2. For the mouth of the wicked] There is nothing more easie, than to wag a wicked tongue.

They have spoken against me with a lying tongue] But with so much impudence, as if it were a very truth. Socrates in his Apologie, My Lords, said he to the Judges, I know not how you have been affected with mine accusers eloquence, while you heard them speak: For mine own part, I assure you, that I, whom it toucheth most, was almost drawn to believe that all they said, though against my self, was true, when they scarce uttered one word of truth.

Vers. 3. They compassed me about also, &c.] So that I could not find out any way to clear my self, though never so innocent.

And fought against me] So they smote Jeremy with the tongue, and our Saviour suffered the contradiction of sinners, Heb. 12.

Vers. 4. For my love they are mine adversaries] Heb. They Satanically hate me. To render evil for evil is brutish, but to render evil for good, is devilish.

But I give my self to prayer] Heb. But I am prayer, or, a man of prayer, as Psal. 120. 7. But I am peace. So, being defamed we pray, 1 Cor. 4. 12. When our Saviour was wearied out with the peoples obstinacy, he turns him to God by prayer, Mat. 11. 26. and prayed for his Crucifiers, Mat. 27. Send me to my Toads again (in the Dungeon) where I may pray for your Lordships conversion, said Saunders the Martyr to Winchester.

Vers. 5. And they have rewarded me] See vers. 4.

Flectere naturam gratia nulla potest.

Vers. 6. Set thou a wicked man over him] Whose tender mercies may be cruelties; let the Devil be his Task-master. Thus he prayeth against Doeg, or Ahitophel, but certainly Judas, Act. 1. 20. And so the primitive Christians prayed against Julian the Apostate, and afterward against Arius the heretick, whose death was precationis opus non morbi, the effect of prayer, rather than of his disease, saith Socrates. Lib. 1. cap. 15. We are bound to pray daily, Thy Kingdome come, but must be advised how we pray, as David here doth, against particular persons: His curses here and elsewhere are indefinite, or conditional; either he nameth not the man, or intendeth it, if God intend it so, or they are non tam vota quam vaticinia, not so much prayers as prophecies.

And let Satan (or an Adversary) stand at his right hand] To withstand him, and get the better of him, as Zach. 3. 1. Or, to aggravate his fault before an unjust Judge.

Vers. 7. When he shall be judged] Let him be cast in all his Suits, causa excidat.

And let his prayer become sin] Quot apud judicem preces adhibebit tot sibi mala ac accusationes. If he beg favour of the Judge, let it be the worse for him, as it befel Haman, Est. 7. 7, 8.

Vers. 8. Let his dayes be few] Let his execution be hastened, as Haman was. Ahitophel, and Judas were their own death-men. Doeg doubtless came to an ill end; and so did other persecutors. See the book of Martyrs.

And let another take his office] Praefecturam. Officers are oft-times the Churches chiefest enemies; Popish Bishops especially, as here in Q. Maries dayes. Judas was guide to those that took Jesus, Act. 1. 16. 20.

Vers. 9. Let his children be fatherless] Helpless and shiftless. A sore vexation to many on their death-beds, and just enough upon graceless persecutors. But happy are they who when they lye a dying, can say as Luther did, Domine Deus gratias ago tibi quod volueris me esse pauperem, & mendicum, &c. Lord God, I thank thee for my present poverty, but future hopes. I have not an house, lands, possessions, monies, to leave behind me. Thou hast given me wife and children, behold I return them back to thee, and beseech thee to nourish them, teach them, keep them safe, as likewise thou hast done me, O thou Father of the fatherless, and judge of widows.

Vers. 10. Let his children be continually vagabonds] Let them wander, wander, as

Gen. 4. 12. Cains curſe. Let them rogue about,— & timidâ voce rogare cibos. This is many times a token of Gods wrath.

Out of their deſolate places] Or, for that their places are deſolate, and will afford them no ſuccour.

Verſ. 11. Let the extortioner catch all that he hath] As it were in nets and ſnares, that is in bonds, debts, morgages; So Chryſoſtome expoundeth, Pſal. 10. 9. Et ipſum & omnes ejus facultates inexplicabilibus ſuis laqueis immitis fœneratores irretient, let the mercileſs uſurer make a prey of him and his eſtate.

And let the ſtranger, &c.] Who hath no right to it, and will ſhew as little mercy. The Chaldee here hath it, Colligat fiſcus omnia quæ ipſius ſunt. And Quæ non capit Chriſtus, rapit fiſcus, ſaith Bernard.

Verſ. 12. Let there be none to extend mercy to him] Let God in his juſtice ſet off all hearts from him, that had been ſo unreaſonably mercileſs. Thus no man opened his mouth to intercede for Haman; Judas was ſhaken off by the Prieſts, and bid ſee to himſelf, &c.

Neither let there be any to favour his fatherleſs] Pupillis pupillis. Let there be none to plead their Pupils cauſe againſt the griping extortioner, or the ſtranger that violently invadeth their right.

Verſ. 13. Let his poſterity be cut off] Sit ejus exitus excidium, ſo ſome render it, Let his end be deſtruction, but it is better to take it, as we tranſlate, Let his poſterity, &c. Let them be razed and rooted out of remembrance, they and their whole race.

Let their name be blotted out] That they may not live, ſo much as by fame. The Edomites, Moabites, Ammonites, have no memorial but what they have in the Bible, and that is for no good. And the like may be ſaid of Meroz, Judg. 5. 23. which ſeemeth to have been ſome City near the place where the battel was fought; but what it was none can determine, ſith there is no mention elſwhere to be found of it, which ſeemeth to be an effect of that bitter curſe pronounced againſt it. See Prov. 10. 7.

Verſ. 14. Let the iniquity of his fathers, &c.] In whoſe ſinful ſteps he treadeth, be charged upon him.

And let not the ſin of his mother] Who bred him no better, but cockered him in wicked courſes, and gave him no good example, Partus ferè ſequitur ventrem.

Verſ. 15. Let them be before the Lord] Stand ever upon record in his preſence, to provoke him to wrath. A heavy curſe indeed.

Verſ. 16. Becauſe that he remembred not to ſhew mercy] Here the Prophet beginneth to ſhew why he uſeth ſuch doleful imprecations againſt his enemies, viz. not out of a ſpirit of revenge, or a falſe zeal, but as truly ſeeking Gods glory, and his Churches ſafety, which could not otherwiſe be procured, unleſs theſe mercileſs men were devoted to deſtruction. He remembred not, that is, de induſtria oblitus eſt & omiſit, he forgot and neglected it for the nonce.

Verſ. 17. As he loved curſing, &c.] The back-ſlider in heart ſhall be filled with his own wayes, Prov. 14. 14. Curſing men are curſed men, as were eaſie to inſtance in ſundry, as Hacket hanged in Q. Elizabeths Reign, and Sir Jervoſe Elweies Lieutenant of the Tower in K. James his dayes, according to their own wiſhes. See Mr. Clarks Mirror, p. 210 &c. The Jews are ſtill great curſers of Chriſtians, they ſhut up their daily prayers with Maledic Domine Nazaræis, and how it cometh home to them who knoweth not, even wrath to the utmoſt, 1 Theſſ. 2. 16?

Verſ. 18. As he cloathed himſelf with curſing as with his garment] Ut veſtis commenſurata corpori, as the inner garment that ſticks cloſeſt to the body, and is not done off, but with much ado, as he hath wrapped, and truſſed up himſelf in curſing.

So let it come into his bowels like water] Let him have his belly full of it, and his bones full too.

And like oyl] Which eaſily ſoaketh through. See Num. 5. 22.

Verſ. 19. Let it be unto him as a garment] Not as an inner, but outer garment alſo, that men may ſee and ſay, This is an accurſed perſon; the viſible vengeance of God purſueth him. Actio & mercet.

Verſ. 20. Let this be the reward] Opus vel Opera pretium. The ſame Hebrew word ſignifieth Work and Wages, Job 7. 2. Iſa. 49. 4. perſecutors ſhall be ſure of their payment.

Verſ. 21. But do thou for me] Fac mecum, fac mihi à latere, ſtick to me, act on my behalf, and for my behoof.

Vers. 22. For I am poor and needy] As a Lazar sheweth his ulcers to move pity; so doth David his indigency, and aylements.

And my heart is wounded] I have mine inward troubles also; or I am cordicitus vulneratus, almost dead, animam ago.

Vers. 23. I am gone like the shadow] Abii, perii, evanui, I vanish as the long shadows do, so soon as the Sun setteth.

As the Locust] Leapeth from hedge to hedge, so do I from place to place, being tossed from post to pillar, ἐξατέμεν 1 Cor. 4.

Vers. 24. My knees are weak through fasting] Either for lack of meat, or stomach to it; genua labant, my knees buckle under me, the strong men bow themselves, Eccles. 12. 3.

My flesh faileth of fatness] I am lean and low brought. Christ might well cry out, My leanness, my leanness; so busie he was for his Father, and so worn out, that they judged him well nigh fifty, when he was not much above thirty, Joh. 8. 57.

Vers. 25. I became also a reproach] In respect of my leanness.

They shaked their heads] This is threatned as a curse, Deut. 28. but may befall the best, as it did our Saviour, Psal. 22. Mat. 27.

Vers. 26. Help me, O Lord] Prayer, like those arrows of deliverance, must be multiplied, as our trouble is lengthned and lyeth on.

Vers. 27. That they may know] That I am delivered meerly by thy presence and power. It is the ingenuity of the Saints, in all their desired, or expected mercies to study Gods ends more than their own.

Vers. 28. Let them curse, but bless thou] Yea the rather, as 2 Sam. 16. 12. and I wot well that those whom thou blessest shall be blessed, as Isaac once said of his son Jacob, Gen. 27. 33.

When they arise] To plead their own cause, causa excidant.

Vers. 29. As with a mantle] Sicut diploide, saith the Vulgar, as with a double, q.d. Let them be double ashamed; for which purpose also he here doubleth his prayer.

Vers. 30. I will greatly praise the Lord] Diligenter & impense, Gods blessings are binders; and great deliverances call for suitable praises, the neglect hereof is crimen stellionatus, confenage.

Vers. 31. For he shall stand at the right hand] As a faithful and powerful (παρασάτης ἐν ἀπραξίαις) Champion, and not as Satan standeth at the persecutors right hand, vers. 6.

From those that condemn him] Heb. From the judges of his soul, sc. Saul, and his Courtiers, who judged him worthy of death.

PSAL. CX.

ὡς οἱ μεθύοντες Chrysost.

A Psalm of David] Concerning Christ, saith R. Obadiah, and so say Christ himself, Mat. 22. and his Apostles, 1 Cor. 15. Heb. 7. & 10. though some Rabbines maliciously say otherwise, as R. Joseph, cecum qui hic cecutit, to say the best of him, and other Jew Doctors, who stagger here in their expositions, as drunkards.

Vers. 1. The Lord said unto my Lord] In this one verse we have a description of Christs person, his wars and his victory; so that we may say of it (and so indeed of the whole Psalm, which is an Epitome of the Gospel) as Tully did of Brutus his Laconical Epistle; Quàm multa, quàm pauca! How much in a little. See the Note on Mat. 22. 44.

Sit thou at my right hand] Sit thou with me in my Throne, having power over all things in heaven and earth, Matth. 28. Christ, as man, received, what, as God, hee had before.

Until I make thine enemies thy footstool] Foes Christ hath ever had, and shall have to the worlds end; but then they shall be all in a place fittest for them, viz. under Christs feet; even those who now set up their Crosses, face the heavens, and say unto the King, adjutum, fronting it out with him.

Vers. 2. The Lord shall send the Rod of thy strength] That is, the Gospel, that Scepter of Christs Kingdome, that power of God to salvation, unto as many as believe, mighty through Gods own work wonders, 2 Cor. 10. 5. Act. 20. 32. even the preaching of Christs cross.

Out of Sion] For salvation is of the Jews, Joh. 4. Isai. 28. 16. Abideth in Jerusalem still, &c. Act. 1.

Rule

Rule thou in the midſt of thine enemies] Among Jews, Pagans, Turks, Papiſts, thoſe that will not bend, let them break; thoſe that will not ſtoop to thy Government, let them feel thy power, Pſal.45.5.

Verſ.3. Thy people ſhall be willing] All Chriſts ſubjects are Volunteers, free-hearted, like thoſe Iſles that wait for Gods Law, Iſa.42.4. Zech.8.21. They love to be his ſervants, Iſa.56.6. Lex voluntarios quærit, ſaith Ambroſe. In Pſal.1.

In the day of thy power] Copiarum tuarum of thine Army, or of thy Militia, when thou ſhalt lead on thy Church Militant, and be in the head of them, conquering and to conquer, Rev.6.2. Some underſtand it of the Chriſtian Sabbath day.

In the beauties of holineſs] i.e. In Church-aſſemblies, in the beauty of holy Ordinances, at the adminiſtration whereof, Chriſts Birth-dew, that is, the influence of his Spirit and his preſence in thoſe Ordinances is from the womb of the morning, i.e. is of that generating and enlivening vertue, that the dew of the teeming morning is to the ſeeds and plants of the earth. An apt ſimilitude both to expreſs the multitude of Chriſts converts, and the manner of their heavenly generation. See Mic.5.7. with the Note.

Verſ.4. The Lord hath ſworn, &c.] Chriſts Prieſtly Office, as well as his Kingly, is here deſcribed, whereof how many, and how great myſteries there are, ſee Heb.7. with the Notes. The Church is collected and conſerved not onely by Chriſts Kingly power, but alſo by his Prieſtly mediation.

Thou art a Prieſt] 1. To expiate. 2. To intercede.

After the order of Melchiſedeck] Who whether he were Shem, or ſome other, is not eaſie to determine. Melchiſedeck was a King, and a Prieſt. Chriſt was more, a Prieſt, a Prophet, and a King. Theſe Offices have met double in ſome others; as Melchiſedeck was King and Prieſt, Samuel a Prieſt, and a Prophet; David a King, and a Prophet; but never met all three in any, but in Chriſt alone.

Verſ.5. The Lord at thy right hand] Before, Chriſt was at the Fathers right hand; here the Father at his; this is to ſhew the equality of the Father, and the Son, ſaith Hieron. Athanaſius, by Lord here, underſtandeth the Holy Ghoſt. Others by thy right hand, will have the Church to be meant, who is promiſed protection and victory. The Lord Chriſt ſhall ſlay her enemies in battel, verſ.5. compel them to flye and turn their backs, verſ.6. purſue them flying, verſ.7. as Judg.7.23.&c.

Verſ.6. He ſhall judge among the heathen] Do execution upon his enemies, as verſ. 1. whether Kings or Captives.

He ſhall fill the places] The ditches of their own camps.

He ſhall wound the heads] Heb. Heads; contundet caput, whereby ſome underſtand the Roman Empire, with its Image, Antichriſt with his adherents, who are called Heathens, Rev.11.2. Others, Turks and Saracens, reading the next words, Over the land of Rabbah, the chief City of the Ammonites, who were likewiſe Arabians, and ſo they make it an alluſion to Davids victories over the Ammonites, 2 Sam.10.& 12.

Verſ.7. He ſhall drink of the brook in the way] i.e. Of the wrath of the Almighty, pointing to Chriſts ſtate of humiliation, as in the next words to his exaltation; Or, he ſhall content himſelf with a low condition here; ſuch as was that of Elias when he drank of the brook, 1 Kings.17. Or, in the eager purſuit of his enemies, he ſhall drink haſtily of the water next at hand, i.e. as Gideon, and his Souldiers did. Viver propter rem vilem Νέκταρ ἐίον Chryſoſt. Rumnas omnes duriſſimæ militiæ perferet. Bu

Therefore ſhall he lift up the head] Maugre the heads of his enemies, he ſhall riſe again, reign, and triumph, and ſo ſhall all his members, after that through many tribulations they have entred into the Kingdom of heaven. Chriſts and their paſſages are but a drinking of the brook, not a ſpring of water for perpetuity; they are but a dark entry into our Fathers houſe, a dirty lane to a ſtately Palace, ſtat ſol tua gloria, as that Martyr at the ſtake ſaid, and there will be a change immediately. Thus were the Diſciples, after they had taken Chriſt into the ſhip, were preſently at ſhore, after a Tempeſt: So the Saints have no ſooner taken death into their bottome, but they are landed preſently at the key of Canaan, the Kingdome of heaven.

PSAL. CXI.

Hallelu-Prieſe ye the Lord] As the Paſſover ſpecially, for this and the other Hallelujahtical Pſalms that follow (called by the Jews the Great Hallelujah) were ſung at that and other ſolemn feaſts, in praiſe of God for his manifold mercies.

I will

I will praiſe the Lord] Muſicæ hujus Pſalmi inſignis eſt, ſiquis eam conſequi poſſit. The great art uſed in the compoſure of this, and ſome other Pſalms (after the order of the Hebrew Alphabet) ſerveth both to ſet forth their excellency, and for the help of memory.

Verſ. 2. The works the Lord are great]. Magnalia; no ſmall things are done by ſo great a hand. Grandior ſolet eſſe Deus in parvulis quam in magnis; in formicis major anima quam in Elephantis in navis quam in gigantibus.

Sought out of all them] q.d. Great though they be, yet are they ſeriouſly ſought into, and found out by thoſe that delight therein; and the deeper they dive into them, the ſweeter they find them. Baſil diligently deſcribed many creatures; and ſo did Ambroſe after him. Pliny (who was himſelf a very great ſearcher in Natures ſecrets) telleth of one who ſpent eight and fifty years in learning out the nature of the Bee, Et nondum effecutus ſit omnes, and yet could not attain to all. Our Anatomiſts find ſtill new wonders in the body of a man, &c. God hath ſhewed ſingular skill in his works, that men might admire him; But woe to ſuch as regard not his handy-work, Iſa. 5.12.

Verſ. 3. His work is honourable] Heb. Honour and glory, they all come tipt and gilt, with a glory upon them, à centro ad cœlum. This the bruitiſh man knoweth not, Pſal. 92.6.

His righteouſneſs endureth for ever] His judgements are ſometimes ſecret, but alwayes juſt.

Verſ. 4. He hath made his Wonderful, &c.] Memorabilia reddedit mirabilia ſua elemens & miſericors Jehova.

Verſ. 5. He hath given meat] Heb. a prey, Eſcam demenſam; as he did Manna to the Iſraelites to each an Homer; ſo to all his he giveth food convenient for them, Prov. 30.8. Cibum & potum quæ ſunt divitiæ Chriſtianorum. Hieron.

He will ever be mindful of his Covenant] To paſs by his peoples ſins, and to ſupply all their neceſſities: All his pathes to ſuch are not mercy onely, but truth, Pſal. 25.

Verſ. 6. He hath ſhewed his people, &c.] To them it is given to ſee, but not to others who are delivered up to a judiciary blindneſs. Call unto me and I will anſwer thee, and ſhew thee great and hidden things which thou knoweſt not, Jer. 33.3.

That he may give them &c.] Yea power over all Nations, Rev. 2.

Verſ. 7. The works of his hands] They ſpeak him a true and juſt God. Chryſoſtome taketh truth here for mercy, and noteth that God uſually mixeth mercy with juſtice; yet ſometimes he ſendeth an evil, an onely evil, Ez. 14.7.

All his commandements] That is, his promiſes added to his commandements; or they are ſo called, becauſe firm and ſure, as the commandements of an Emperor.

Verſ. 8. They ſtand faſt for ever and ever] The promiſes are infallible, good ſure hold, not yea and nay, but Yea and Amen.

And are done] i.e. Ordained, made, and ratified.

Verſ. 9. He ſent redemption to his people] Once out of Egypt, ever out of Satans thraldome.

He hath commanded his Covenant for ever] Sic cum populo ſuo pactus eſt ut de ipſius pacti obſervatione certis edictis caveret, as he covenanted, ſo he looketh his commandements ſhould be reſpected, which are as binding to us, as his Covenant is to him; and through grace, his Covenant is as binding to him, as thoſe are to us.

Holy and reverend is his Name] Which therefore we ſhould not preſume in a ſudden unmannerly boldneſs to blurt out. The Jews would not pronounce it. The Grecians (as Suidas obſerveth), when they would ſwear by their Jupiter, forbare to mention him. This is check to the profaneneſs common amongſt us. Let thoſe that would have their names reverenced, labour to be holy as God is holy.

Verſ. 10. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wiſdome] Or the principal point and chief perfection. See Prov. 1.7. and Job 28.28. with the Notes.

A good underſtanding have all they] So much a man knoweth in true account, as he doth; Hence underſtanding is here aſcribed to the will; ſo Job 28.28. See Eccleſ. 10.2. ſome render it, Good ſucceſs.

His praiſe endureth for ever] i.e. Gods praiſes; for they that underſtand it of the godly wiſe man, underſtand not the propriety of the Hebrew word Tehillah, ſaith an Interpreter.

PSAL. CXII.

PRaiſe ye the Lord] See Pſal. 111. verſ. 1.

Bleſſed is the man that feareth the Lord] That obedientially feareth him as aforeſaid, Pſal. 111. 10. that feareth the Lord, as Abraham did, Gen. 22. 12. who is the bleſſed man here deſcribed, ſay the Jew-Doctors, becauſe he keeps the whole Law from Aleph to Tau (this Pſalm alſo is Alphabetical as the former) with his whole heart, delighting in Gods commandements, and haſtening to fulfil them; as when he left his Country, circumciſed his family, ſacrificed his ſon. Midrah Tillim in Pſal. 114.

That delighteth greatly in his commandements] And thereby ſhoweth that his fear of God is filial and amicable, not baſe and ſervile, which ever carrieth torment along with it; and he that ſo feareth, is not made perfect in love, 1 Joh. 4. 18. cannot but hate him whom he ſo feareth; for Quem metuunt oderunt.

Verſ. 2. His ſeed ſhall be mighty upon earth] As Abrahams was, and beſides, the reward of his humility and fear of the Lord was riches and honour, and life, Prov. 22. 4. For godlineſs is profitable to all things, having the promiſes of this life, and of that to come, 1 Tim. 4. 8. as in this Pſalm is fully ſet forth.

The generation of the righteous, &c.] Perſonal goodneſs is profitable to poſterity, and the contrary.

Verſ. 3. Wealth and riches] Wealth enough, as the word Hon ſignifieth, a well-contented ſufficiency. His chambers ſhall be filled with all precious and pleaſant riches, Prov. 24. 4.

His righteouſneſs endureth for ever] He is not the worſe for his wealth, nor drawn aſide by the deceitfulneſs of riches; which yet is hard and happy.

Ardua res hæc eſt opibus non tradere mores:
Et cum tot Cræſos viceris, eſſe Numan. Martiall.

Verſ. 4. Unto the upright, there ariſeth light in darkneſs] i. e. Joy in tribulation, as did unto the Martyrs, plenty in penury, as having nothing, and yet poſſeſſing all things, 2 Cor. 6. 10. If they have not an external affluence, yet they have an internal influence of grace and comfort, which is far better and ſweeter, 1 Tim. 6. 6. Some render the words thus, He who is gracious, and full of compaſſion, and righteous (i. e. God) cauſeth light to ariſe in darkneſs upon the upright; who alſo, is, according to his meaſure, and by participation from God, gracious, merciful, and righteous.

Verſ. 5. A good man ſheweth favour and lendeth] A publick-ſpirited man, Rom. 5. 7. maketh his moderation to be known to all men, Philip. 4. 5. and lendeth, looking for nothing again, Luk. 6. 35. Thence it is that to him light ariſeth in darkneſs; the merciful ſhall have mercy, Mat. 5. 7. Some render it, Bene vivit qui miſeratur, Well is the man, or, Well will it be with the man that pitieth and lendeth. The Hebrew hath it, that is pitying and lending, ever in ſuch actions.

He will guide his affairs with diſcretion] Heb. With judgement; neither illiberal nor prodigal, nor withered handed when he ſhould give, nor yet ſtretching beyond the ſtaple; for that were to ſpoyl all. Tremellius rendreth it, Moderatur res ſuas, ex officio.

Verſ. 6. Surely he ſhall not be moved for ever] Non mutabit. The world thinketh liberality to be the ready way to beggary: But it is otherwiſe, Iſa. 32. 8. The liberal man deviſeth liberal things, and by liberal things he ſhall ſtand. Not getting, but giving is the way to wealth.

The righteous ſhall be in everlaſting remembrance] Namely with the righteous. Dimetrius hath good report of all good men, and of the truth it ſelf, 3 Joh. 12. As for wicked men, Calumnias eorum nunquam effugit, there is no eſcaping their cavils and calumnies. Vatab.

Verſ. 7. He ſhall not be afraid of evil tydings] When the miſerly miſcreant is ready to make away himſelf for fear of what evil may follow, this man is undaunted and unappaled. The fear of God ſo ballaſteth his heart, that he ſteereth ſtoutly, and blow what wind it will, he ſaileth ſafe to the port. Fides famem non formidat, Faith feareth no famine, nor any thing elſe, when as a ſound of fear is ever in the wicked mans ears, Job. 15.

His heart is fixed] viz. Upon the promiſes of God, and hence he hath a ſpiritual ſecurity;

ſecurity, a bleſſed Sabbath of Spirit; he is freed, if not from the common deſtruction, yet from the common diſtraction; for he knoweth whom he hath truſted. Præclara eſt æquabilitas in omni vita, & idem ſemper vultus, eademque frons, ſaith Cicero, It is a brave thing to have a well-compoſed ſpirit in all changes, and to look alike however the world goeth. The heathens tell us that C. Lælius was ſuch an one, and Archimedes, and Socrates, who are ſaid to have been far above all fear of, or grief at, any diſaſter. But that could not be, becauſe their hearts were not fixed, truſting in the Lord. And how Socrates (the beſt of them) ſtaggered and faultered when he came to dye, appeareth by his laſt ſpeech, as it is related both by Plato and Cicero.

In Offic.

Ælian. lib. 9.

Verſ. 8. His heart is eſtabliſhed] Heb. Underpropt, ſhored up.

He ſhall not be afraid] Of any adverſe power, Pſal. 3. & 27.

Until he ſee his deſire] Which his faith will once work out.

Verſ. 9. He hath diſperſed] Or, made a ſcatter, yet with diſcretion, giving liberally, but moſt of all where is moſt need, and with a ſpecialty of reſpect to the family of faith, Gal. 6.

His righteouſneſs endureth for ever] The reward of his charity is laſting, or his charity is never at an end; he giveth after that he hath given, as a ſpring runneth after it hath run, as the Sun ſhineth after it hath ſhone. See 2 Cor. 8.

Sic vocat eleemoſynas. Aben-Ezr.

His horn ſhall be exalted] i.e. His head, as 1 Sam. 2. 1, 10.

Verſ. 10. The wicked ſhall ſee it] Vir improbus & reprobus; The covetous Caitiff who ſate a brood upon his bags, and beſool'd the bountiful man, ſhall himſelf come to beggery, which he ſo much feared, and be ready to eat his own nayls through envy at the others proſperity; and becauſe he cannot come at his heart, he feeds upon his own, yea puts himſelf into an hell above ground, both for pain of loſs, and pain of ſenſe, as here.

PSAL. CXIII.

VErſ. 1. Hallelujah] See Pſal. 111. 1.

Praiſe, O ye ſervants of the Lord] None but ſuch can do it, or are fit for it; and for ſuch, praiſe is comely, Pſal. 147. 1. as unthankfulneſs is an ugly ſin, but eſpecially in Miniſters, thoſe ſervants of the Lord, by a ſpecialty.

Praiſe the name of the Lord] Ter repetit, Trinitatem ſubindicando, ſaith One; Others note that by this threefold Praiſe ye, the Pſalmiſt taxeth mens dulneſs, and exciteth their diligence to this divine duty.

Verſ. 2. Bleſſed be the Name of the Lord] Praiſe him with utmoſt intenſion and extenſion of ſpirit and of ſpeech. God is therefore called by an appellative proper, The bleſſed One Baruc-hu, Mark. 14. 61. Luke 1. 68.

From this time, &c.] A nunc & uſque.

Verſ. 3. From the riſing of the Sun] i. e. All the world over, in all places and at all times. North and South are not mentioned (but included) becauſe not ſo well peopled.

Verſ. 4. The Lord is high, &c.] He looketh on the earth as on an Ant-hillock. All Nations to him are but as a drop of a bucket, Iſa. 40. Quamilla ergo es in illius gutta particula?

Aug.

And his glory above the heavens] Theſe are as far beneath him in glory, as in ſituation. Angels underſtand him not fully.

Verſ. 5. Who is like, &c.] See Pſal. 89. 6. He is imparallel.

Who dwelleth on high] Heb. Who exalteth to dwell. Oh that we could flye, a pitch any way proportionable by exalting his Name together, Pſal. 34. 3.

Verſ. 6. Who humbleth himſelf] Lo, it is a condeſcention in God to vouchſafe to look out of himſelf upon the Saints and Angels, how much more upon us? Sith ſin ſe teth us further beneath a worm, than a worm is beneath an Angel.

Verſ. 7. He raiſeth up the poor, &c.] David for inſtance, beſides many others; as Agathocles, Numa, Maximinianus, &c. whom he raiſed from the loweſt ſtair to the very higheſt ſtep of honour and opulency.

Verſ. 8. That he may ſet him with Princes] See 1 Sam. 2. 8. Hannahs ſong, whereof this ſeemeth to be an abridgement.

Verſ. 9. He giveth the barren woman an houſe] Heb. To dwell in an houſe, that is, to have have a houſe full of Children, and ſo to build her husbands houſe, Ruth 4. 11. This is applyed to the Church (which is the theatre of the World, wherein God ſheweth his ſpeciall providence and power) Iſa. 54. 1. Gal. 4. 26, 27.

PSAL. CXIV.

VErſ. 1 When Iſrael went out of Egypt] E medio gentis, ideſt ex viſceribus Ægyptiorum, qui eos quaſi deglutiebant, out of the midſt of that Nation, that is, out of the bowels of the Egyptians, who had as it were devoured them; thus the Jew-doctors gloſſe upon this Text. Midr. Tillim. in Pſa. 114.

From a people of ſtrange language] And yet more eſtranged affections, jearing them, and their Religion, as the word Lognez (which is of affinity with Lognag a ſcoffer) ſeemeth to ſound. Afterwards it was propheciedthat five Cities in the land of Egypt ſhould ſpeak the language (or lip) of Canaan, Iſa. 19. 18. viz. when the Lord ſhould turn to them, a pure language, Zeph. 3. 9.

Verſ. 2. Judah was his ſanctuary] Or Sanctitie, or Sanctification. This was an happy change for them, from their Egyptian Idolatry, Ezek. 23. 19. like as it was from their Egyptian ſervitude, when Iſrael became Gods dominions, dominations and ſignories.

Verſ. 3 The Sea ſaw it and fled] When God will deliver his people, and perform his promiſes unto them, nothing ſhall hinder, but all Creatures ſhall contribute their helps; for they are all his ſervants, Pſal. 119. 91.

Verſ. 4. The Mountains skipped like Rams] ſcil. at the giving of the law, Exod. 19. 18. which alſo cauſeth heart-quakes in beleevers, but the unjuſt knoweth no ſhame, Zeph. 3. 5. is paſt feeling, Epheſ. 4. 19.

Verſ. 5 What ailed thee, O thou Sea] Or, what canſeed thee? can there any naturall reaſon bee given? or was it Gods powerfull preſence only that cauſed you to run retrograde? Atheiſts and unbeevers will ſearch the Devills ſcull to find out ſomething whereby they may elevate Gods great works, and elude his Arguments; as Pharaoh ſat not down under the miracle, but ſent for the Magicians, and hardened his own heart.

Verſ. 6 Ye Mountains that ye skipped, &c.] Theſe two verſes teach us, ſaith One, that wee may many times ask queſtions, and yet neither doubt of the matters, nor bee ignorant in them.

Verſ. 7 Tremble thou Earth, &c.] Heb. Bee in pain as a travelling woman, for if the giving of the law had ſuch dreadfull effects, what ſhould the breaking thereof have?

At the preſence of the God of Jacob] Whom Jacob, that is, Gods covenanted people, knoweth and confideth in amidſt all his auſterities, Iſa. 63. 16. and can boldly ſay, as Hab. 1. 12. Art not thou from everlaſting O Lord my God mine holy one? wee ſhall not dye.

Verſ. 8 which turned the rock into a ſtanding water] Set the Rock of Rephidim abroach, and made it not only a ſtanding water (ſtagnum, as here) but a running river; for the Rock followed them, and that Rock was Chriſt, 1 Cor. 10. 4. with Joh. 4. 14. & 7. 38.

The Flint into a fountain of Waters] Still God worketh for his people, in expeditis mediis (as Luther expreſſeth it) by contrary means, and rather than they ſhall want neceſſaries, hee both can and will work miracles.

PSAL. CXV.

VErſ. 1 Not unto us Lord, not unto us] This is the godly mans motto, and his daily practice. See Gen. 41. 16. Ad. 3. 12. 16. 1 Cor. 15. 10. Luk. 19. 16. Not wee, but thy Talents have gained other five, and other two, &c.

Fabricius fuit hoc in pectore mentis,
Sed quicquid ponis, gloria, Chriſte, tua eſt.

Georg. Fabric. Chemnicenſis vivus de ſeipſo.

There is no merit at all in us, ſaith the Chalder here; the bowles of the Candleſtick had no oyl but that which dropped from the Olive-branches. It is therefore very good counſel that Apelles gave his friend, Sutor ne ſupra crepidam, Let the illi da claritatem, sibi humilitatem. In all thy good deeds give God the glory, and take up lowly thoughts of thy self.

Vers. 2 Wherefore should the Heathen say.] Why should they thus be suffered to be occasioned to blaspheme thee, and twit us with our Religion? Hence some conceive that this Psalm was made in the time of the babylonish captivity by Daniel (saith one Jew-doctor) when hee expounded Nebuchadnezzars dream; by the three Worthies (saith Another) when they were in the fiery furnace. See Psal. 42. 10 & 79. 10.

Vers. 3 But our God is in the Heavens] Where your terrients your fray-bug-mawmets never were; like as one being asked by a Papist, where was your Religion before Luther? answered: In the Bible, where your Religion never was. This but seemeth uttered with indignation. Ἀγανακτεῖ πιστὸς μὲν ἐστιν ὁ βασιλεὺς ἡμῶν, saith Basil, on a like occasion; Our God is no dunghill-deity.

Hee hath done whatsoever hee pleased] Without either help or hinderance of any.

Vers. 4 Their Idols are silver and gold] Take them at the best, they are no better; and what is silver and gold but the guts and garbage of the earth? But some of them might say as Priapus in Horace,

Olim truncus eram ficulnus inutile lignum.

In Euterpe. Herodotus telleth us, that Amasis had a large laver of gold, wherein both hee and his guests used to wash their feet. This Vessel hee brake and made a God of it; which the Egyptians devoutly worshiped. And the like Idolomany is at this day found among Papists; what distinction soever they would fain make betwixt an Idol and an Image, which indeed (as they use them) are all one.

The work of mens hands] And therefore they must needs bee goodly gods, when Act. & Mon. fol. 1340. made by bunglers especially, as was the rood of Cookram, which if it were not good enough to make a God, would make an excellent Devill, as the Maior of Doncaster merrily told the complainants.

Vers. 5 They have mouths, but speak not] Unlesse the Devil haply speak in them, and by them, as at Delphos; or the false Priests, as here in times of Popery.

Eyes have they, but they see not] And yet with wires and other devises they were Act. & Mon. made here once to goggle their eyes, to move their chaps apace, as well apaid when something of worth was presented them, as if otherwise, to look at eyes end, and to hang a lip.

Vers. 6 They have ears, but they hear not] But are as deaf as door-nails, to the prayers of their suppliants. The Cretians pictured their Jupiter without ears; so little hearing or help they hoped for from him. Socrates in contempt of Heathen Gods, swore by an Oak, a Goat, a Dog, as holding these better Gods than those.

Aug. de Civit. Dei. lib. 4. ca. 31. Varro saith, They that first brought in pictures to bee worshiped, Is civitatibus suis & maximum dempserunt, & errorem addiderunt, took away fear, and brought in error.

Noses have they, but they smell not] As the Painter may paint a flower with fresh colours, but not with sweet savour, with this Motto, No further than colours; so the Carver may draw out an image, but not make it draw in the breath, with this Motto, No further than fashion.

Vers. 7 They have hands, but they handle not] Curious and artificiall (for Art is Natures ape) but useless, and for shew only. If Esculapius, or the Lady of Loretto restore the lame or the blind, it is the Devil with his lying wonders, 2 Thes. 2.

Feet have they, but they walk not] As those pictures in Plato made by Dedalus, which if they were not bound, would fly away; or Vulcans three-footed stools in Homer, which are feigned to have run on wheels of their own accord, to the meeting of the Gods; and after that to return in like sort back again. The Tyrians besieged by Alexander chained up their God Hercules, that hee might not go from them in that strait, and yet they were not delivered.

Neither speak they through their throat] They do not so much as chatter like a Crane, or mourn as a Dove; Isa. 38. 14. but are dumb Idols, as the Apostle calleth them. These are things constantly known, but prodigiously unconsidered for the founding of foolish fantasies. Why yet more words, when they will not hear the upon

upon theſe gods of their own making. O vanas hominum mentes, &c. — O the ſpirit of fornication, &c.

Verſ. 8 They that make them, are like unto them] Blind and blockiſh, Vervecum in patria crassoq; ſub aere nati; given up by a juſt God to a judiciary ſtupidity. See Iſa. 44. 9, 10, 11, &c. Rev. 9. 20. their fooliſh hearts were darkened, and they were delivered up to a reprobate ſenſe, to an injudicious mind, Rom. 1. to ſtrong deluſions, vile affections, juſt damnation.

So is every one that truſteth in them] Idols were never true to ſuch as truſted in them; but ſuch deſerve to bee deceived, as being miſerable by their own election, Jon. 2. 8. Sanctus Pagninus.

Verſ. 9 O Iſrael truſt thou in the Lord] Whatever others do, Joſh. 24. 15. and the rather, becauſe others do not, Pſal. 119. the worſe they are, the better bee yee.

Hee is their help, and their ſhield] God is ingaged in point of honour to help and protect thoſe that truſt in him.

Verſ. 10 O houſe of Aaron, truſt in the Lord] Miniſters muſt bee patterns to others of depending upon God, and living by faith; as did Mr. Bradford, Mr. Lancaſter, and many other famous Preachers of latter times, whom God inured to a dependence from day to day upon his Providence for proviſions; and (as a grave man of God ſometimes ſaid, Whereas many others have, and eat their bread ſtale) theſe received their bread, and ate it daily new from his holy hand.

Verſ. 11 Yee that fear the Lord] Peregrini ex omni populo, ſaith Aben-Ezra, devout perſons out of every Nation dwelling among the Jews, though not abſolute Proſelytes, Act. 2. 5. & 10. 2. & 13. 16. Such alſo fearing the Lord are heirs of the promiſes; and therefore may boldly ſay, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man ſhall do unto mee, Heb. 13. 6.

Verſ. 12 The Lord hath been mindfull of us, hee will bleſſe us] God hath, God will, is an ordinary Scripture-Medium, as hath been above noted.

Hee will bleſſe the houſe of Iſrael] Not help and keep them only, but bleſſe them with the bleſſings of both lives; for he is no penny-Father, &c. See Epheſ. 1. 3.

Hee will bleſſe the houſe of Aaron] Miniſters were ever a diſtinct order from the reſt. Note this againſt the Libertines who would gladly make a jumble, affirming the Miniſtry to bee as arrant a juggle as the Papacy it ſelf. Compaſ. Semaſ.

Verſ. 13 Hee will bleſſe] Such ſhall abound with bleſſings, Prov. 28. 20.

Both ſmall and great] Whether in age or degree, Act. 10. 34, 35.

Verſ. 14 The Lord ſhall increaſe you] Or, The Lord increaſe you (derech tephilla, prayer wiſe) as the Rabbines read it.

You and your Children] The care of whoſe welfare prevaileth far with religious Parents, and ſitteth cloſe upon their ſpirits.

Verſ. 15 You are the bleſſed of the Lord, &c.] And therefore ſhall bee bleſſed, as Iſaac ſaid of his ſon Jacob, Gen. 27. 33.

Which made Heaven and Earth] And will rather unmake both again, than you ſhall want help, and comfort.

Verſ. 16 The Heaven, even the heavens are the Lords] As the ſpeciall place of his delight and dwelling; yet not ſo as if hee were there cooped up and concluded, for God is immenſe and omnipreſent, yea totally preſent, whereſoever preſent. The Heavens have a large place, but they have one part here, and another there, Not ſo the Lord; hee is not commenſurable by the place, but every where all-preſent.

But the Earth hath hee given] Or, let out, as to his Tenants at will, for he hath not made them abſolute owners to do therein what they will, and to live as they liſt, Yee have lived in pleaſure on the Earth, and been wanton, Jam. 5. 5. A heavy charge. Calvin tells of a looſe fellow that uſed in his cups to alledge this text.

Verſ. 17 The dead praiſe not] Therefore bee active for God while wee are upon Earth; where for this hee give thus life and livelihood. See Pſal. 6. 6.

Verſ. 18 But wee will bleſſe the Lord] For if hee loſe his praiſe in us, hee will loſe it altogether; and ſo all things will come to nothing; quod abſit.

PSAL. CXVI.

Vers. 1 I love the Lord] Heb. I love: because the Lord hath heard, &c. Vox abrupta & ecliptica, an abrupt concise eclipticall expression, betokening an inexpressible unconceiveable passion, or rather pang of love, such as intercepteth his voice for a time, till recollecting himself, and recovering his speech, hee becometh able to tell us, not only that hee loveth, or is well satisfied, but also why he loveth, and is all on a light flame as it were, viz.

Sar hiheo. Tremel.

Because hee hath heard my voice] Though but an inarticulate incondite voice: Lam. 3. 56. Thou hast heard my voice: hide not thine ear at my breathing, at my cry.

And my supplications] My prayers for grace, when better formed and methodized.

Vers. 2 Because hee hath inclined his ear] As loth to lose any part of my prayer, though never so weakly uttered; therefore hee shall have my custome, Psal. 65. 2. O thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come.

As long as I live] Heb. In my dayes, that is say some, whilst I have a day to live. Others sense it thus, In the time of my affliction (confer Psal. 137. 7. Lam. 1. 21.) which by the word dayes hee noteth to bee of long continuance.

Vers. 3 The sorrows of death compassed mee] See Psal. 18. 4, 5. Pictura poetica ingentium periculorum. Sorrows, or pangs, and those deadly ones, and these compassed mee as a bird in a snare, or a beast in a grin.

The pains of Hell (or the griefs of the grave) gat hold] Heb. Found mee, as Num. 32. 23.

I found trouble and sorrow] Straits inextricable cause sorrows inexplicable. The word signifieth such sorrow as venteth it self by sighing, Isa. 35. 10. & 51. 11.

Vers. 4 Then called I upon the name of the Lord] That strong Tower, whereto the Righteous run and are safe, Prov. 18. 10. Others have other refuges, the witch of Endor, the god of Ekron, the arm of flesh, &c.

Sic & Nau Philem. 20. Rev. 1. 7.

O Lord I beseech thee] Ana, blandientis & deprecantis particula. The Psalmist here hath a sweet way of insinuating, and getting within the Lord, which oh that wee could skill of.

Deliver my soul] q.d. It is my soul, Lord, my precious soul that is sought after; oh deliver my soul from the sword, my darling from the power of the dog, Psal. 18. 20.

Vers. 5 Gracious is the Lord, &c.] Gracious God is said to bee, and mercifull, that wee despair not; Righteous also, that wee presume not. Or, faithfull in performing his promises, as 1 Joh. 1. 9. and this was Davids comfort amidst his sorrows.

Vers. 6 The Lord preserveth the simple] Heb. The perswasible (opposed to the scorner, Prov. 19. 25.) the plain-hearted (opposed to the guilefull, 2 Cor. 1. 12. & 11. 3. Rom. 16. 19.) the destitute of humane help, that committeth himself to God, and patiently resteth on him for support and succour, Psal. 102. 1.-- 17.

I was brought low] Or, drawn dry; I was at a grow under, at a low ebbe; I was exhausted or emptied as a pond, strengthlesse, succourlesse, clean gone in a manner.

And hee helped mee] The knowledge that David had of Gods goodnesse was experimentall. See the like, Rom. 8. 2. A Carnal man knoweth Gods excellencies and will revealed in his word only, as wee know far Countries by Maps, but an experienced Christian, as one that hath himself been long there, 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15, 16.

Vers. 7 Return unto thy rest, O my soul] The Psalmist had been at a great deal of unrest, and much off the hooks, as wee say. Now, having prayed (for prayer hath vim pacativam, a pacifying property) hee calleth his soul to rest, and rouseth it asleep in a spirituall security. O learn this holy art. Acquaint thy self with God, acquiesce in him, and bee at peace, so shall good bee done unto thee, Job 22. 21. Sic Sabbathum Christi. Lush.

For the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee] Of Severus it is said, that hee performed his promises with words only. And of the Emperour Pertinax, that he was magis

magis blandus quam beneficus, rather kind ſpoken than beneficiall to any. Not ſo the Almighty. Hinc dictus χρηστόλογος

Verſ. 8. For thou haſt delivered my Soul, &c.] The better to excite himſelf to more thankfullneſſe, hee entreth into a particular enumeration of Gods benefits. It is not enough that wee acknowledge what God hath done for us in the lump, and by whole-ſale. See Exod. 18. 8. how Moſes brancheth out Gods benefits. So muſt we, rolling them as Sugar, and making our utmoſt of them.

Verſ. 9. I will walk before the Lord] Indefatigatum ambulabo: I will not onely take a turn or two with God, go three or four ſteps with him, &c. but walk conſtantly and in all duties before him, with him, after him. Hypocrites do not walk with God, but halt with him, they follow him as a Dog doth his Maſter, till hee comes by a carrion; they will launch no further out into the maine than they may be ſure to return at pleaſure ſafe again to the ſhore.

In the land] i. e. here in this world, called alſo the light of the living, Pſal. 56. 13. and 52. 5. Job 28. 13.

Verſ. 10. I believed, therefore have I ſpoken] Fundamentum & ſubvectum vitæ ſpiritualis eſt fides viva. Hope is the daughter of faith, but ſuch as is a ſtaff to her aged mother; and will produce a bold and wiſe profeſſion of the truth before men, as alſo earneſt prayer to God. It is as the Cork upon the Net: though the lead on the one ſide ſink it down, yet the Cork on the other keeps it up. Some tranſlate the words thus: I believed, when I ſaid, I am greatly afflicted: I believed when I ſaid in my haſte, all men are Lyars. q. d. Though I have had my fits and my ons, though I have paſſed through ſeveral frames of heart, and tempers of ſoul in my tryals, yet I believed ſtill, I never let go my hold, my gripe of God in any perturbation.

Verſ. 11. I ſaid in my haſte] in my heat, trepidation, concuſſion, out-burſt. Saints may have ſuch, as being but men, ſubjekt to like paſſions; and as meeting with many moleſtations, ſatanical and ſecular; and left ſometimes to themſelves by God, as was good Hezekiah, for their tryal and exerciſe. The Sea is not ſo calm in ſummer, but hath its commotions: the mountain ſo firm, but may bee moved with an Earth-quake. Doggs in a chaſe bark ſometimes at their own maſters; So do men in their paſſions let fly at their beſt friends. When the taſte is vitiated, it miſtaſtes. When there is a ſuffuſion in the eye (as in caſe of the jawndiſe) it apprehends colours like it ſelf: So here. Abraham felt the motion of trepidation; meek Moſes was over-angry at Meribah; ſo was Job, Jonas, Jeremy, &c. Ira comes of Ire, ſay Grammarians: becauſe an angry man goes out of himſelf, off from his reaſon; and when pacified, hee is ſaid, redire ad ſe, to return to himſelf.

All men are Lyars] Prophets and all: Samuel hath deluded mee I doubt, in promiſing mee the Kingdome, which I ſhall never come to, ſee 1 Sam. 27. 1. Some make the meaning to bee thus, what can I hope for, ſeeing every man betrayeth mee, and that I can truſt no body? The truth is, that every man is a lyar, either by impoſture, and ſo in purpoſe, or by impotency, and ſo in the event, deceiving thoſe that rely on him, Pſal. 62. 9.

Verſ. 12. What ſhall I render unto the Lord] This bee ſpeaketh as one in an extaſy, (Amor Dei eſt ecſtaticus) or in a deep demurre what to do beſt for ſo good a God: Such ſelf-deliberations are very uſefull, and acceptable, and thereunto are requiſite. 1 Recognition of Gods favours. 2 Eſtimation. 3 Retribution, as here.

Verſ. 13. I will take the cup of ſalvation] Calicem ſalutaris, vel calicem ſalutis; as in the drink-offerings, or as at the feaſt after the peace-offerings, ſee (1 Chron. 16. 3.) wherein the feaſt-maker was wont to take a feſtival great cup, and in lifting it up to declare the occaſion of that feaſt, and then, in teſtimony of thankfulneſſe, to drink thereof to the gueſts, that they in order might pledge him. This was called a cup of ſalvation, or a health-cup, but not in the Dun-ſcarch ſenſe. To this the Apoſtle ſeemeth to allude, 1 Cor. 10. 17. when hee calleth the ſacramentall cup, the cup of bleſſing. Hieron. rendreth it, calicem ſalutarem accipiam. Vatab. Trem. Vatab.

And call upon the name of the Lord] Pray unto him, and ſo praiſe him. Or I will proclaim, and preach his praiſes, as 2 Pet. 2. 9.

Verſ. 14. I will pay my vows,] This word pay, importeth that vows lawfully made are due debt: and debt, till paid, is a diſquieting thing to an honeſt mind, Rom. 13. 8. The Saints, in diſtreſſe eſpecially, uſed to make their Prayers with vows. Hence prayer is in Greek called εὐχωλὴ, a ſervice with vows. Mr. Philpot Martyr, firſt comming into Smithfield to ſuffer, kneeled down and ſaid, I will pay my vows in thee, O Smithfield.

Acts & Mon.

Verſ. 15. Precious in the ſight of the Lord] Rara, chara. God doth not often ſuffer his Saints to bee ſlain, Pſal. 37. 32, 33. Or if hee do, hee will make inquiſition for every drop of that precious blood, Pſal. 9. 12. See Pſal. 72. 14. with the Note. This David delivereth here as a truth, that hee had experimented.

Verſ. 16. O Lord, truly I am thy ſervant, I am thy ſervant] Euge, O Jehovah, &c. by a real and an heavenly complement; thus hee inſinuateth, and therefore promiſeth praiſe to God, verſ. 17. and ſafety to himſelf, according to that Pſal. 119. 94. I am thine, ſave me.

And the Son of thine handmaid] That is, of Ruth, ſay the Rabbines: or rather of his immediate mother, a good woman, and haply better than his Father, as Monoahs wife had a ſtronger faith than himſelf; and Priſcilla is named before her husband Aquila.

quia religioſior patre. Genebr.

And the Son of thy handmaid] Not born abroad, and bought or brought into thy family: but tuus quaſi vernaculus, et a ventre ad ſerviendum diſpoſitus, born and bred up to thy ſervice, of a child little.

Thou haſt looſed my bonds] Of affliction, of corruption, and made me Chriſts freeman, brought me into the glorious liberty of thine own Children.

Verſ. 17. I will offer to thee, &c.] I will perform to thee not ceremonial ſervice only, but Moral, and ſpiritual; ſuch as thou ſhalt accept through Chriſt, Col. 3. 17. And will call, &c.] ſee verſ. 13.

Verſ. 18. I will pay] See verſ. 14.

Now] Vows were to bee paid without either diminution or delays, Deut. 23. 21, 23. And herein Jacob (who is by the Hebrews called Votorum Pater, the Father of vows) was too ſhort: for it was long ere hee went up to Bethel.

In the preſence of all his people] For good example ſake. This alſo was Princelike, Ezek. 46. 10. the Kings ſeat in the Sanctuary was open, that all might ſee him there. 2 King 11, 14. and 23. 3.

Verſ. 19. In the Courts of the Lords houſe] In cœtu ſacro; in the great Congregation, Pſal. 22. 25. and 66. 13. where there is a more powerful, lively, and effectual working of the Spirit, Pſal. 89. 7. Heb. 4. 1. 1 Cor. 14. 24.

PSAL. CXVII.

VErſ. 1. O praiſe the Lord all yee Nations] viz. For Chriſt that gift, Joh. 4 10. that benefit, 1 Tim. 6. 2. that deſire of all Nations, Hag. 2. 7. that good tidings of great joy to all people, Luk. 2. 10 who are by him received into the glory of God, Rom. 15. 7, 11. where the Apoſtle thus applyeth this Scripture; and the Jew-Doctors confeſſe that this ſhort and ſweet Pſalm, is to bee underſtood de beneficiis Meſſiæ, of Chriſt, and his benefits.

Kimchi.

Praiſe him all yee people] Laudationibus commendate eum, ſo Tremel: rendreth it, praiſe him with a force, and as it were with a violence, with all your might, ye cannot poſſibly over-do.

Verſ. 2. For his merciful kindneſſe is great] Invaluit, hath prevailed over us, breaking through all obſtacles and impediments, whether within us or without us; eating its way through all rocks and remoras; and though wee would put it back, yet it will overcome us: his grace is irreſiſtible, neither can it ever bee taken away.

And the truth of the Lord] As his mercy alone moved him to make promiſe, ſo his Truth bindeth him to perform the ſame. See 2 Sam. 7. 18, 21. The word of promiſe bindeth God, and therefore it may ſeem to bee ſtronger than God. If his merciful kindneſſe prevail over us, as verſ. 2 his truth prevaileth over him. The Jew-doctors obſerve that the word Emeth, here uſed for truth, conſiſteth of Aleph, the firſt letter of the Alphabet, Mem the middlemoſt letter thereof, and Thau the laſt: to ſhew that as God is Alpha and Omega, ſo the truth of God is the All in all of our comfort. Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ: this is the sum of all the good news in the World.

PSAL. CXVIII.

VErs. 1. O give thanks, &c.] See Psal. 106. 1.

Vers. 2. Let Israel now say] All the Israel of God, for only such are fit to praise God: excellent words become not a fool, the Lepers lips are to be covered.

Vers. 3. Let the house of Aaron now say] Ministers are Chieftains, Heb. 13. 7, 17. and should be as the chief Chanters in Gods praises.

Vers. 4. Let them now that fear the Lord say] See Psal. 115. 11. and observe, that the Psalmist beateth upon the now, (as doth also the Apostle 2 Cor. 6. 2.) Now, now, now, saith he; because, for ought we know, 'tis now or never, to day or not at all; the dead praise thee not, Psal. 6. 6.

That his mercy, &c.] This is the fourth time in four verses, as Psal. 136. in every one of those twenty six verses, like as a Bird that having gotten a Nest tooteth it over and over.

Vers. 5. I called upon the Lord in distresse] Heb. out of distresse, q. d. I celebrate not Gods mercy of course, but out of experience.

The Lord answered me] Heb. Jah answered me with a large roometh. See Psal. 4. 2.

Vers. 6. I will not fear, &c.] See Psal. 56. 4, 11.

Vers. 7. The Lord taketh my part with them that help me] Not only as one of my helpers, but instead of all, and more than all. How many reckon yee me at? said that General to his Souldiers, who were afraid of their enemies numbers; Cui adhæret præsit, He whom I take part with must needs prevail.

Vers. 8. It is better to trust in the Lord, &c.] Luther on this text calleth it, Artem artium, & mirificam, ac suam artem, non fidere hominibus, that is, the Art of Arts, and that which he had well studied, not to put confidence in man; as for trust in God, he calleth it, Sacrificium omnium gratissimum & suavissimum, & cultum omnium pulcherrimum, the most pleasant and sweetest of all Sacrifices, the best of all services we perform to God.

Than to put confidence in man] Quia mutatur aut fortuna, aut voluntas, aut vita, saith Genebrard, because either men may dye, or their affections may dye, or their wealth decay.

Vers. 9. Than to put confidence in Princes] In ingenuis. Great mens words, saith one, are like dead mens shoes; he may go bare-foot that waiteth for them. Surely men of high degree are a lye, Psal. 62. 9.

Vers. 10. All Nations compassed me about] This is still the condition of Christs Church in this evil world, to be hated of all, and set against with utmost might and malice. Haud perinde crimine incendii quam odio humani generis convicti sunt, saith Tacitus of those Christians at Rome put to cruel deaths by Nero, who having for his pleasure fired the City fathered it upon them, as people hated of all men.

But in the name of the Lord] i. e. by faith in Gods power and promises. We might also do great exploits against our Spiritual enemies, did we but fight upon them with Gods arms, and with his armour; did we but observe the Apostles rule, Whatsoever you do in word, or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, &c. Col. 3. 17.

Vers. 11. They compassed me about, yea, &c.] They thought to make sure work of me indeed; as Saul and his men, when they hemmed him in at Keilah, 1 Sam. 23. 26. as the Churches enemies, when they had gotten her, as a Bird into the snare of the Fowler, Psal. 124. 7. as when the adventurers said, They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, Num. 25. 30.

But in the name of the Lord I will destroy them] Emmahalam, amidam. The word signifieth, Non ut soleo domiciliorum cumulorum villarumve, sed virorum & pugilum, that is, foiled not his foes without pains and peril. Towns were said to come [illegible] Mollet. Plut. in Syll. their high towers whilest he stephen that was but a [illegible] stoned him.

Verſ. 12. They compaſſed me about like Bees] Like ſo many ſwarms of Bees, which being angred Virgil.

Ariſtot. Bees to be revenged loſe their ſtings, and therewith their lives, or at leaſt they become drones ever after. Wicked men are no leſs ſpiteful; they care not to undoe themſelves, ſo they may wrong the Saints; yea they are not unlike the Scorpion, of which Pliny ſaith, that there is not one minute wherein it doth not put forth the ſting.

They are quenched (or kindled) as the fire of thorns] Which is quickly kindled, and as quickly quenched, leaving no coals behind it. See Eccleſ. 7. 6. The enemies of the Church may make a blaze, but they are but a blaſt.

Ex ſpinis non fiunt carbones Blanchi.

Verſ. 13. Thou haſt thruſt ſore at me] Thou, O Saul, or thou Iſhbibenob, 2 Sam. 21. 16. or thou, O Satan, ſetting ſuch a work.

But the Lord helped mee] Hee ſent from heaven and ſaved mee: hee came in the nick of time, as it were out of an Engine.

Verſ. 14. The Lord is my ſtrength and ſong] i. e. The matter of my ſong, and mean of my joy. Truſt in God ſhall once triumph.

Verſ. 15, The voice of rejoycing, &c.] q. d. Though themſelves are but travellers, and their habitations tabernacles or tents; yet are they not without the joy of their ſalvation, which is unſpeakable, and full of glory; ſo that they go merrily on their way feeding on this hony-comb (as once Samſon) and Gods Statutes are their ſongs in the houſe of their Pilgrimage, Pſal. 119. 54.

The right hand of the Lord, &c.] This and that which followeth is the righteous mans ditty, which hee ſingeth unceſſantly. See on verſ. 4.

Hæc eſt vox Epiniciî.

Verſ. 16 The right hand of the Lord is exalted] By right hand here ſome underſtand the humanity of Chriſt, Gods hand and our handle, whereby wee come to take hold of God.

The right hand of the Lord doth valiantly] Thrice hee celebrateth Gods right hand; to ſet forth his earneſt deſire to ſay the utmoſt; or in reference to the ſacred Trinity, as ſome will have it.

Verſ. 17 I ſhall not dye, but live] This hee was well aſſured of by Faith: as was alſo the Church in Habbakkuk, chap. 1. 12. Art not thou from everlaſting, O Lord my God, mine holy One? we ſhall not dye. Learned Keckermen lying on his death bed, and deſirous (if it had ſo pleaſed God) to have lived a while longer for the finiſhing of thoſe excellent peeces hee had in hand, made uſe of theſe words of the Pſalmiſt, I ſhall not dye, but live, and declare the works of the Lord (hee was then upon his Syſtem of naturall Philoſophy) but God had otherwiſe appointed it, and hee ſubmitted.

Verſ. 18. The Lord hath chaſtened mee ſore] Correpit me ſeria & ſevera caſtigatione; and yet David was his darling.

But hee hath not given mee over to death] It might have been worſe may the afflicted Saint ſay, and it will yet bee better: It is in mercy, and in meaſure that God chaſtiſeth his Children. It is his care that the Spirit fail not before him, nor the ſoules which hee hath made, Iſa. 57. 16. If his Child ſwounds in the whipping, God lets fall the rod, and falls a kiſſing it, to fetch life into it again.

Verſ. 19 Open to mee the gates of Righteouſneſſe] So the gates of the Sanctuary are called, becauſe holineſſe becommeth Gods houſe for ever: to keep out the prophane, Porters were appointed. See 2 Chron. 23. 19. and ſuch were the Oſtiarii in the primitive Church; their word was Canes foras, Dogs out of doors. See Rev. 22. 15.

Proſper.

Verſ. 20. This gate of the Lord] Some make the former verſe the requeſt of the people, and this to bee Gods anſwer thereunto. Others make that to bee Davids ſpeech to the Levites, and this their anſwer, q. d. This beautifull gate is fit to bee opened to the Lord alone: if others enter, they muſt bee righteous ones only, and that to praiſe him.

Into which the Righteous ſhall enter] ſcil. With Gods good leave and liking. Others may boldly thruſt into the Church, but then God will ſay, Friend how cameſt thou thou in hither? who required these things at your hands? who sent for you? O Generation of Vipers who hath forewarned you to flye from the wrath to come? The Sacrifice of the wicked is abomination: how much more when he bringeth it with a wicked mind? Prov. 21. 27.

Vers. 21 I will praise thee, for thou hast heard me] Luther rendreth it, because thou hast humbled and afflicted me: but withall thou art become my salvation.

Vers. 22 The stone which the builders refused] David, and the son of David were by those, who seemed to bee somewhat laid aside, and sleighted as abjects and refuse ones; but wisdome was ever justified of her Children.

It become the head-stone of the corner] Lapis Angularis sive frontarius, whereby the Church is supported as the sides and weight of a building are by a Principall binding corner-stone, against all blasts.

Vers. 23 This is the Lords doing] That David should ever come to the Kingdome, that Christ should so bee raised from the lowest ebbe of humiliation to the highest tide of exaltation, this is a wonder of wonders, a matchlesse miracle.

And it is marvellous in our eyes] As all Gods works are to those that have spirituall senses habitually exercised: but especially the great work of mans Redemption by Christ.

Vers. 24 This is the day which the Lord hath made] The Queen of dayes, as the Jews call the Sabbath. Lyranus interpreteth this text, of the Christian Sabbath: others, of the day of salvation by Christ exalted to bee the head-corner-stone, in opposition to that dismall day of mans fall.

We will rejoyce] Or, Let us rejoyce. Dull wee are, and heavy to spirituall joy: and are therefore excited thereto.

Vers. 25 Save now I beseech thee] Hosanna, as Mat. 21. 9. an usuall acclamation of the people to their new Kings.

Send now prosperity] God will send it, but his people must pray for it, I come for thy prayers, Dan. 10.

Vers. 26 Blessed bee hee that commeth] Blessed bee Christ. Vivat Christi ejusque insigne, said John Clark of Melda, when for declaring against the Popes indulgences hee was burnt in the forehead with a hot Iron. Scultet. Annal.

Wee have blessed you out of the house of the Lord] Thus say the Priests to the people. Ministers must blesse those that bless Christ, saying, Grace bee with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, Ephes. 6. 24. as if any do not, let him bee Anathema Maranatha, 1 Cor. 16. 22.

Vers. 27 God is the Lord who hath shewed us light] By giving us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. 4. 6. hee hath brought us out of darknesse into his marvellous light, 1 Pet. 2. 9.

Binde the Sacrifice with cords] Make them fast there, till the Priests shall have time to offer them. Spare for no cost in shewing your thankfullness for Christ and his benefits. Some render it Obligate solemnitates in frondosis: Austin hath it, In conspectationibus.

Vers. 28 Thou art my God, and I will praise thee] The people are taught to say this; and the Greek, Arabick, and Latine translations repeat here, vers. 21. I will praise thee, for thou hast heard mee, and are become my salvation. People can never be sufficiently thankfull for their salvation by Christ. It is their duty, and should be their desire.

Vers. 29 O give thanks unto the Lord, &c.] Repete præcuntes pro Epilogo. See vers. 1.

PSALM. CXIX.

Vers. 1 Blessed are the undefiled] Pindarus and other Poets had their Ogdoades, or Octonaries. This Alphabeticall Poem (as Sixtus Senensis calleth it) is Davids doubtlesse (though it hath no title to shew so much) written in the dayes of his banishment under Saul, and far more worthy to bee written in letters of gold than Pindars seventh Ode, which that prophane fellow Politian preferred before every Psalm of David, the sweet singer of Israel. How much better his Countryman Jacobus Fabricius, who translated this Psalm into Greek and Latine verses, did to make Lib. 4. Elliot.

ry Ostomaries; and beginning each verse thereof with the same letter, after the manner of the Hebrew compasture; which is very artificiall, both for the excellency of the matter, and for the help of memory. The Jews are said to teach it their little ones the first thing they learn; wherein they take a very right course, both in regard of the heavenly matter, and plain stile fitted for all capacities. David (in his troubles especially) was a man much in meditation of Gods word, and here bestoweth us in his thoughts of it. When a book is set forth, verses of commendation are oft prefixed. David seemeth to set this divine Psalm as a Poem of commendation before the Book of God; mentioning it in every verse (unlesse it bee one only, verse 122.) under the name of Testimonies, Laws, Statutes, Word, Judgements, Precepts, &c.

Who walk in the Law of the Lord] Who walk towards Heaven in Heavens way; avoiding the corruptions that are in the world through lust, 2 Pet. 1. 4.

Vers. 2 Blessed are they that keep his testimonies] Angels do so, and are blessed, Rev. 22. 9.

And that seek him] Sincere ac sollicitè; That seek not his omnipresence (what need they?) but his gracious presence.

Vers. 3 They also do no iniquity] i. e. No wilfull wickednesse; as do those workers of iniquity, whose whole trade it is, and whose whole life is nothing else but one continued web of wickednesse, spun out and made up by the hands of the Devill and the flesh, an evil spinner, and a worse weaver.

They walk in his wayes] Without cessation or cespitation.

Vers. 4 Thou hast commanded us, &c.] These are verba vivenda, non legenda, words to bee lived, and not read only, as one well saith of this whole Psalm; neither is it enough that wee understand or ponder Gods Precepts, but wee must practice them, if wee would bee happy.

To keep thy Precepts diligently] Nimis, valde, vehementer. Odi nimium diligentes, saith One; but where the businesse is weighty, and the failing dangerous, one can hardly bee too diligent. Let a man here do his utmost, hee shall not overdo.

Vers. 5 O that my wayes were directed, &c.] David can wish well to that perfection which hee cannot attain unto. The whole life of a good Christian is an holy desire, saith Austin; and this is alwayes seconded with indeavour; without the which, Affection is like Rachel, beautifull but barren.

Vers. 6 Then shall I not bee ashamed] i. e. I shall bee highly honoured both by thee, and all thy people, able to look thee and them in the face, free from an evill conscience.

When I have respect unto all thy Commandements] Mine obedience being universal both for subject and object; this is a sure sign of sincerity, such as entitleth a man to true blessednesse, vers. 1. An Hypocrite is funambulus virtutum, as Tertullian phraseth it; hee hath a dispensatory conscience; his obedience is partiall, and such as goeth in a narrow traft, it extendeth not to the compasse of the whole Law, and is therefore lost labour.

Vers. 7 I will praise thee with uprightnesse] David was yet but a learner; and if God would teach him to profit in knowledge and holinesse, hee would lift up many an humble, joyfull and thankfull heart to him.

Lucan. Vers. 8 I will keep thy Statutes] Yea and that very much, or with vehemency, as some read it, usque valde; this hee had said before was Gods command, vers. 4. and hee would do it. Justa sequi tam nolle mihi quam posse necesse est.

O forsake mee not] Or if at all (as thou mayest without breach of promise) yet not very much; not usque valde; not utterly. Christ, saith Greenham, was forsaken for a few hours. David for a few months, and Job for a few years; seven years, saith Suidas, for the triall and exercise of his faith and patience. This might seem to them usque valde, but it was not usque quaque satis for the purpose. Leave them God did to their thinking, but forsake them hee did not; forsake them he did in Orgard of vision, but not in regard of union: non desertis unus fuit, saith Austin.

Vers. 9 Wherewithall shall a young man] Iuvenis, a lad, a stripling, when hath his name in Hebrew of velling or covering, from a downy fleece, Isa. 11. and this same word signifieth wonder and secret, like Ps. 139. 6. under which covering of humility and infirmity, God is pleased to be discovered, when once affections begin to boil within them. The Greek word for a youth, comes from another that signifieth to bee hot, and to boil up, or scald. Such a one therefore had need (if ever hee think to bee blessed, as vers. 1.) to cleanse his wayes by cleaving to the word: sith an impure heart, and an undefiled inheritance, will not stand together.

ἥθεος of ἀιθω, and ἄιθος of ζέω.

Cleanse his way] Mundabit, id est emendabit. The Hebrew word signifieth the cleansing of glasse, which though it bee very clean, yet will it gather filth even in the Sun-beams, and of it self, which noteth the great corruption of this slippery age, and what care must be taken that it may shine as picked glasse, or clearest Chrystall.

By taking heed thereto according to thy word] Which is of a purifying property, Job. 15. 3. & 17. 17. and can cleanse the heart of a young man also, where lusts are strong, stains deep, and will not out without fullers sope. There is a sharpnes in these wholesome (or healing) words, that maketh us sound in the faith, and sincere in practice; as it did Mr. Paul Bains, whose conversation, when hee came first to Cambridge, was so irregular, that his Father being grieved at it before his death, left with a friend forty pounds by the year, desiring that his son might have it if hee amended his manners: else not. Hee did so, and had it, &c. When a Child is come to bee thirteen years and a day old, the Jews account him a man, and call him Bar-mitsuah, a child of the Commandement: because bound to live by the law.

Mr. Clark lives.

Leo Modena of Jew-rites.

Vers. 10. With my whole heart have I sought thee] And that of a child little, being nourished up in the words of faith, and of good Doctrin, 1 Tim. 4. 6. I did all the wills of God, and so became a man after his own heart, Act. 13. 22.

O let mee not wander] As I shall surely, if thou but withdraw thy grace; for I subsist meerly by thy manutension.

Vers. 11 Thy word have I hid in my heart] Ut peculium in Apotheca, as treasure, or as an amulet in a case or Chest; as the pot of Manna in the Ark.

That I might not sin against thee] Set but the commination against the temptation, and it will bee a speciall preservative. Eve held the Precept, but faltered in the threat. The Rabbines have a saying, In cujus corde est lex Dei, imaginatio mala non habet in eum dominium, Hee who hath the law of God in his heart, is armed against evill lusts.

Vers. 12 Blessed art thou (or bee thou) O Lord] viz. For what thou hast already taught mee of thy will, and my duty.

Teach mee thy Statutes] Gratiarum actio est ad plus dandum invitatio. David had never enough, but craveth more: Teach mee thy Statutes, saith he, that I may bless thee better.

Vers. 13 With my lips have I declared] Heb. Have I sipbered up; these have been the matter of my discourse; and out of the good treasure of my heart (vers. 11.) have I brought forth those good things, for the good of others, Mat. 12. 35.

Vers. 14 I have rejoyced] Heb. I have inwardly rejoyced. Pleasures of the mind are unspeakably joyous. Endoxus was content to have been burnt by the Sun presently, might hee but come so near it as to learn the nature of it. Pliny perished by peeping into the fire of Etna. Archimedes lost his life by being too intent upon his Mathematical studies.

As much as in all riches] Heb. In all oppulency and affluence.

ἀδολεσχήσαι Theod. Heracl. p. 18.

Vers. 15 I will meditate] Or, Confabulate, talk freely of them, as worldlings do of their wealth, and wayes to get it.

And have respect unto thy wayes] As an Archer hath to his mark.

Vers. 16. I will delight my self] Deliciabor; the Arabick hath it, Lætitiabo leges tuas, I will oft read over thy laws.

I will not forget] Men do therefore forget the word, because they delight not in it; they seldom forget where they lay their mony.

Vers. 17 Deal bountifully with thy servant] Per indebitam gratiam reviviscam. Of thy free grace confer good upon mee: and that not scantily, or niggardly, but liberally, and like thy self. The word sometimes signifieth to repay, to recompense: but therehence to infer matter of merit, on mans part, is too sandy a foundation for such a lofty Babel.

That I may live] Who am in deaths often: and that I may comfortably subsist in the the feeling of thy favour, as 1 Sam. 25. 6.

Non peto vitam propter delitias mundi. Kimchi.

And keep thy word] For which end only I desire life: See the like, Psal. 118. 17. Non aliter petit vitam, quàm ut præstet fidelem Dei cultorem, saith Arrobius, David doth no otherwise desire life, than for this, that hee may faithfully serve God.

Vers. 18. Open thou mine eyes] Heb. Unveil thou, uncover mine eyes, unfold my eyes, give sight and light, irradiate both organ and object. In spirituals wee are not only dim-sighted, but blind as Beetles, 1 Cor. 2. 14. Oh pray for that precious eye-salve, Rev. 3. 17. for that supernal light, 2 Cor. 4. 6. and whensoever wee open the Bible to read, say as here, open thou mine eyes, &c. as when wee close it up again say, I have seen an end of all perfection: but thy Commandement is exceeding broad, vers. 96.

Wondrous things] Mirabilia magnalia, mysteria, such as none can understand and unriddle, but such as plow with Gods own heifer, 1 Cor. 2. 11.

Vers. 19. I am a stranger in the earth] And therefore apt to lose my way, without a guide: I shall surely else bee wildred, and lost.

Hide not thy Commandements from mee] viz. In the spirituall sense, and effectuall operation of them. Philosophers observe, that lumen est vehiculum influxus, light is the convoy of influence; as it begets the flower in the field, the pearl in the earth, &c. so the foundation of all Renovation is Illumination; Hence David so earnestly beggeth it here, and vers. 17.

Comminuitur, debilior fit.

Vers. 20 My soul breaketh] The Seventy render it, My soul hath desired to desire thy Judgements. How many broken spirits do even spend and exhale themselves in continuall sallies, as it were, and egressions of affection to God and his judgements? The stone will fall down to come to its own place, though it break it self in many peeces: so the good soul.

Vers. 21. Thou hast rebuked the proud, &c.] Thou chidest them, threatenest them, plaguest them, and so fermentest it on, as no creature can take it off. And this is one reason why I love and observe thy laws, ne pariar patribus, lest I should suffer in like sort: sith men must do it, or dye for it.

Vers. 22 Remove from mee reproach and contempt] Cast upon mee by those proud haughty scorners, vers. 21. and that for nothing but because I keep thy Statutes: therefore it is that they despise and defame mee; but do thou, Lord, take an order with them: behold I put them into thine hands, and my self upon thy care to clear mee, and set mee right; for I am well resolved.

Vers. 23 Princes also did sit, &c.] By publick invectives: such as were those of our Henry the eighth, and of Lewis King of Hungary and Bohemia (two very potent Princes) against Luther.

נֹחֲרוּ׃ Denotat continuum clamorem. Kimchi.

Vers. 24 Thy Testimonies are my delight] In medio cruciatus: to them I runn as to my cordiall; they are my pleasure, and paltime.

And my Counsellours] My learned Counsel, by whose advice I do all, here I am sure to find consolationem, & consolationum directionem, counsell and comfort in all my necessities.

Vers. 25 My soul cleaveth unto the dust] Those Princes my Persecutors (Sauls counsellors) have brought mee to deaths-doore, as Psal. 44. 25. & 22. 15. I am in a forlorn condition, as far below hope, as they are above fear. Theodoret expoundeth it of humility: and Theodosius the Emperor used these words, when reproved by Ambrose for the slaughter at Thessalonica, hee lay on the ground and humbly begged pardon.

Theod. Eccles. hist. l. 5. c. 18.

Vers. 26 I have declared my waies] My sins and troubles, those that have vexed, and these thou hast remedied.

Teach mee thy Statutes] Shew mee how I may walk worthy of such a love, and live up to my mercies.

Vers. 27 Make mee to understand, &c.] Give mee a mouth and wisdome, that I may not talk at random of thy word and works, but understandingly and fruitfully.

Vers. 28 My soul melteth] Heb. Dropped away like water: I weep out my life, together with my grief.

Strengthen thou mee according to thy word] Support mee by thy promise.

Vers.

Verſ. 29 Remove from me the way of lying] A ſin that David, through diffidence, fell into frequently. See 1 Sam. 21. 2, 8. where hee roundly relleth three or four lyes: and the like he did, 1 Sam. 27. 8, 10. this evil he ſaw by himſelf, and here prayeth againſt it.

And grant mee thy Law] For a preſervative from this foul ſin: herein gratifie mee, good Lord.

Verſ. 30 I have choſen the way of Truth] I am fully bent againſt lying, and am reſolved to ſpeak truth; though I have done otherwiſe ſometimes, through frailty.

Thy Judgements have I laid before mee] Thereby to bright my conſcience, that I might not ſo much as equivocate. Some render it judicia tua aequiperavi, I have kept pace with thy judgements, ſcil. in the bent and bias of my heart at leaſt.

Verſ. 31 I have ſtuck unto thy Teſtimonies] Hitherto I have done ſo: let mee not now ſhrink from them, or hang looſe to them, leſt I loſe therthings that I have wrought, and ſhame my ſelf for ever by my recidivation.

Verſ. 32 I will run the way] Do thy work with utmoſt diligence and delight, come off roundly and readily therein, take long ſtrides towards heaven.

When thou ſhalt inlarge my heart] By thy free Spirit, and by the joy of faith; when thou ſhalt have oyled my joynts, and nimbled my feet, then ſhall I run and not be weary, walk and not faint, Iſa. 40. 31. our promiſes of obedience muſt be conditional, ſith without Chriſt we can do nothing, Joh. 15. 5.

Verſ. 33. Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy ſtatutes] Which is both hard to hit, and dangerous to miſs: teach mee therefore.

And I ſhall keep it] Lex jubet, gratia juvat. Obeg of God that we may perſeverce, ſith the morning crowneth the day, &c.

Verſ. 34. Give me underſtanding] Wee can neither know, nor do Gods will without Divine light and aid, as appears clearly by this fifth Ocronary, which therefore Auſtin made ſo great uſe of againſt the Pelagians.

Verſ. 35. Make me to go in the path] Which I ſhall ſoon forſake if thou guide me not.

Te duce vera ſequor, te duce falſa fugo.

For therein do I delight] After the inward man, Rom. 7. 22. Thou haſt given me to will, give me alſo to work what is wel-pleaſing in thy ſight.

Verſ. 36. Incline my heart] Through the exerciſes of thy Word, and the working of thy Spirit.

And not to wicked gaineſs] Which draweth away the heart from all Gods teſtimonies, and is the roote of all evil, 1 Tim. 6. 10. Some think it is put here for all other vices. The Chaldee hath it, And not to Mammon, that mammon of iniquity, as Chriſt calleth it, the next odious name to the Devil. Now to good, God inclineth mans heart efficiently (ſay the Schools) but to evil, deficiently, &c. by with-drawing his grace; for he is a free Agent, and not bound to any. David prayeth God to ſuperſede him from this wickedneſs, and Luther ſaith, hee was never tempted to it.

Verſ. 37. Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity] Leſt looking cauſe liking, and luſting, 1 Joh. 2. 16. In Hebrew the ſame word ſignifieth both an Eye, and a Fountain, to ſhew that from the eye, as from a fountain, flowoth much miſchief, and by that window Satan oft windes himſelf into the ſoul. This David found by experience, and therefore prays here, Turn away, tranſfer, make to paſs mine eyes, &c. 2 Sam. 11. 2 He ſtepped one degree further, viz. from a Prayer to a Vow, Chap. 132. 1. yea from a vow to an imprecation, verſ. 7. He knew the danger of irregular glancing, and inordinate gazing.

And quicken thou me in thy way] Who ſhall elſe dye of the wound in the eye. Lovelace called the Perſian Maids, Oculorum dolores; Me vidi, ut perii — The Iſraelites were appointed to make them Fringes with blew Ribbands to look upon, that they might remember all Gods Commandements, and do them, and not ſeek after their own heart, and their own eyes, after which they uſed to go a whoring, Numb. 15. 39.

Verſ. 38. Stabliſh thy word unto thy Servant] i.e. Make good thy promiſe: We muſt by our prayers put the promiſes of God in ſuit, and God will perform them.

Who is devoted to thy fear] And so am an heir of the Promises: Or, which (word) is (given) for the fear of thee, that thou maist be feated.

Vers. 39. Turn away my reproach] Cover it, cure it, suffer it not to break forth to my disgrace amongst men.

For thy judgements are good] But their tender mercies are meer cruelties: if therefore at any time I fall into opprobrious and reproachful practices, Lord, bee thou my Judge, and not they; for thy Judgements are like thy self, good, and righteous, &c.

Vers. 40. Behold, I have longed after thy precepts] This he could boldly and safely say to God, offering himself to his trial for the truth of his desires. See Hebr. 13. 18.

Quicken me in thy righteousness] His desires and affections were not so large and lively, but that he needed to be yet further quickned — Nemo est ex omni parte beatus.

Vers. 41. Let thy mercies come also unto me] Let them come to me, or else I shall never come to them, 1 Pet. 1. 13. Hope to the end, for the grace that is to bee brought unto you. Psal. 23. 6. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me, as the setting Sun doth the wayfaring man, that goes from it. The Arabick rendreth it, Let thy mercies come upon me, or cover me, as a garment. So the Spirit of the Lord cloathed Amasa, 1 Chron. 12. and, yee shall bee cloathed with power from on high, Luke 24. 49.

Even thy Salvation] Safety here, and Salvation hereafter. Austin expoundeth it of Christ.

Vers. 42. So shall I have wherewith to answer] i. e. To stop an open mouth. Verbal Apologies are sometimes necessary, but real always; wee should by a pious conversation put to silence the ignorance of foolish men, who like black Moors despise beauty; like Doggs, bark at the shining of the Moon. We are also to begge deliverance of God, for the confutation of such as say, wee shall never bee delivered.

Ne auferas, id est ut spolium, ut Exod. 12. 36. Aben-Ezra.

Vers. 43. And take not the word of truth utterly] Give me free utterance, that in nothing I be ashamed; but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ may be magnified in my body, &c. Philip. 1. 20. Despoyl me not of my courage in a good cause, let not Satan rob me of that jewel. I have read of a Noble man, who when he came into jearing company of great ones, would begin and own himself one of those they called Puritans, and so prevented them.

Vers. 44. So shall I keep thy Law continually] If thou please to give me to beleeve with the heart, and to confess with the mouth, I shall surely persevere in the profession and practice of the truth.

Vers. 45. And I will walk at liberty] In the full latitude of thy Commandements, and not by wilful wickedness ensnare, and ensnarl my self; as those do who in the fulness of their sufficiency are in streights, and in pursute of their lusts do pierce themselves through with many sorrows. The Italian senseth it, I will walk in peace of conscience.

Vers. 46. I will speak of thy testimonies, &c.] Nullo vel terrore vel splendore mundano impeditus. Kings commonly abound with all things but only Truth, as Alphonsus King of Arragon complained. David would deal plainly with them though never so high; especially when he should come to be of equal level with them, and so to have better opportunity.

Ethic. l. 10

Vers. 47. And I will delight my self] &c. In contemplation of thy Word. Aristotle telleth us, that the principal pleasure is to be found in contemplation.

Utraq; manu expellam

Vers. 48. My hands also will I lift up, &c.] Removing all rubs, and pulling thy Word to me with both hands earnestly, with my whole man, with my whole might; ἐπιτεινόμενος, straining the body, and stretching out the hands to do mine utmost at it, whilst others put it from them with a force, and so judge themselves unworthy of everlasting life, Act. 13. 46.

Vers. 49. Remember thy Word] God is not unrighteous to forget, Heb. 6. 10. yet we must as his remembrancers, Isa. 62. 6. put his Promises in suit, Ezek. 36. 37.

Upon which thou hast caused me to hope] God giveth us to do what he biddeth us to do, Ezek. 36. 27.

Vers. 50

Vers. 50. This is my comfort] The Promises yeeld strong consolations. Philosophical comforts are of little force, as Plato acknowledgeth, and Cicero bewaileth in his Epistle to Octavius. In Axiocho.

For thy Word hath quickned me] When I was at last cast, and drawing my last breath, as it were.

Vers. 51. The proud have had me greatly in derision] Scoffing proceedeth from pride, Prov. 3. 34. with 1 Pet. 5. 5.

Yet have I not, &c.] They cannot flout me out of my zeal.

Vers. 52. I remembred thy judgements of old, O Lord] This was to have an holy memory, well fraught with profitable matter, such as are examples of Gods dealing with his people, and their enemies in all ages.

And was comforted] Some degree of comfort followeth every good action, as heat accompanieth fire, as beams and influences issue from the Sun.

Vers. 53. Horrors hath taken hold upon me] Horripilatio, turbo, vertex, an horrible tempest, Psal. 11. 6. such as surprised holy Habbakkuk, chap. 3. 16.

Because of the wicked] To think of their hainous sins, and horrible punishments, which they dread not, dream not of. See Dan. 4. 19.

Vers. 54. Thy statutes have been my songs] Thy Promises, which bind thee by Grace, as statutes do us by Duty, and are every whit as sure. By these I lopped off my cares, fears, and griefs, as with a pruning or paring knife: I pared them round till none was left. Metaphora a falcibus.

In the house of my pilgrimage] In hoc exilio, in hac regastula, in hac peregrinatione, in hac valle lachrymarum. Travellours sing to deceive the tediousness of the way, so did David: and thereby he solaced himself under that horrour, vers. 53. great is the comfort that cometh in by singing of Psalms with grace in our hearts. Bern.

Vers. 55. I remembred thy name, &c.] breaking my sleep for the purpose, to meditate on thine holy Attributes, Word, and Works.

And have kept thy Law] Which could not have been kept, if not kept in firm and fresh memory. See 1 Cor. 15. 2.

Vers. 56. This I had] This comfort, or this remembrance, or this ability to keep thy Law.

Because I kept thy precepts] A strange reason, I kept it because I kept it; but every new act of obedience fitteth for a following act. Rom. 6. 19. As in Sin so in Grace, Mark 4. 24. acts increase habits, and facilitate the work.

Vers. 57. Thou art my portion, Lord] Whiles other mens portion, Sunt divitiæ vel delicia, nothing short of God can satisfie me.

I have said, &c.] i. e. Purposed, and promised the obedience of faith.

Vers. 58. I have intreated thy favour] Heb. Thy face, that is, thy Christ, saith Ambrose and Hilary: this David did in the sense of his own utter inability, to do as he had promised.

Be merciful unto me, &c.] This was the sum of his Petition, and must bee the main of ours.

Vers. 59. I thought on my ways] At Self-examination beginneth sound conversion. Lam. 3. 39. 40. Hag. 1. 5. 7. 2 Cor. 13. 5.

And turned my feet] Finding all to bee naught, and stark naught, (contrary to what God found in his works upon a review, all good, and very good) set upon a new course.

Vers. 60. I made haste, and delayed not] Heb. I distracted not my self about. Had I wisht, but minded the one thing necessary. Nolite tempora in augiis terere: vel cras, ne ille furia, hodie moriturus pretulerit, saith one. Haste hath halfe delays are dangerous, opportunities are headlong, and once past irrecoverable.

Vers. 61. The bands of the wicked have robbed me] In these late stripping times, many a poor mans whole life gettings were lost in an instant, as at the sack of Ziklag, 1 Sam. 30.

But I have not forgotten thy Law] I have remembred my duty to the Lord my God, &c.

Vers. 62. At midnight will I rise] To speak with a friend. The Primitive Christians had their Nocturni cœtus, saith Pliny, their nocturnal meetings for Prayer and Catechising. And this the Monks affected for the more solemn performance of their services.

Vers.

Because of thy righteous judgements] Gods Word read, and Preached, is a main matter of thankfulnesse: so are his Works.

Vers. 63. I am a companion of all them] Though never so mean, if there be aliquid Christi in them: Grace is of an uniting property, and purgeth out partiality, Jam. 2, 1, 2.

That keep thy precepts] The best proof of true fear of God, Psalm 103. 13, Act. 10. 35.

Vers. 64. The earth, O Lord is full of thy mercy] Thy mercy is over all thy works: This is thy general goodnesse. But Ben-Ezra. Teach me thy statutes] Non peto a te aliam misericordiam: this is that I beg above all, viz., the lively light of thy Law and Word: sound and saving knowledge. A gracious spirit cannot be satisfied with low things.

Vers. 65. Thou hast dealt well with thy servant] Men must bee no lesse praisefull than prayerful. Shall we come to the well of life thirsty, and then turn our backs upon the Rock that followeth us?

According to thy word] sc. Of promise: this sweeteth a blessing.

Vers. 66. Teach me good Judgement] Heb. good taste, for the soul also hath her senses: and as the mouth tasteth meat, so the ear trieth words, the mind relisheth Religion.

For I have believed thy Commandements] But would do yet more, 1 Joh. 5. 13. These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.

Vers. 67. Before I was afflicted I went astray] Especially through high mindedness, and earthly mindedness, which are purged out by affliction, and grace increased; as Fish thrive better in cold, and salt waters, as the Walnut-tree is most fruitful, when most beaten. Master Aschame was a good School-master to Queen Elizabeth: but Affliction was a better, &c. See my Treatise on Rev. 3. 19.

But now I have kept thy word] Now that I have been lashed to it, and have paid for my learning, Vexatio dat intellectum, Smart maketh wit. As the scourging and beating of the garment with a stick beateth out the mothes and dust; so do afflictions corruptions from the heart. Quæ nocent, docent. Corrections of instructions are the way of life, Prov. 6.

Vers. 68. Thou art good, and doest good] Good in thy self (indeed there is none good but thy self) and good to thy Creatures, inexpressibly, bountious, and beneficial.

Teach me thy statutes] And so impart unto mee of thy special goodnesse, that I may resemble thee in being and doing good: full of goodnesse, filled with all knowledge, Rom. 15. 14.

concinnarunt tricisque con- nexerunt. Vers. 69. The proud have forged a lye against me] Heb. They have cunningly and finely aspersed me, Mendacium mendacio assumens, peecing one lye to another, and drawing together iniquity with the cart-ropes of vanity.

But I will keep thy precepts] Notwithstanding their slanders; and the rather.

Vers. 70. Their heart is as fat as grease. Crassa ut greasa, coagulata as Milk or Cheese, say the Septuagint, congealed and baked as it were in their sins: Obrasum & quasi armatum obstupuit: fat things are lesse sensible, and fat-hearted people are noted by Aristotle for dull and stupid.

But I delight in thy Law] Illa me pasco & fugino, therewith I feed and fat my self.

Vers. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted And thereby humbled; for else the fruit of affliction is lost, and they are always impaired that are not improved by their sufferings, as all Gods people are sure to be at length. The Lacedemonians of old (and the same is said of the Hollanders of late) grew rich by war, and were bettered when all other Kingdomes were undone by it. The Saints make benefit of their crosses, which to others are destructive.

That I might learn thy statutes] Luther saith of some of Saint Paul's Epistles, that they can never be understood, but by the cross. *Qui tribulationes, fastus & libertatem ... (saith he in another place) ... fortunæ ... ...

Verſ. 72 The law of thy mouth is better unto mee, &c.] For what is all this trash to that true treaſure, thoſe lively, and life-giving oracles? Dionyſius worthily preferred Plato before Ariſippus, becauſe the one was ever craving money of him: but the other books. It is reported of Plato, that for three choice books hee gave thirty thouſand ſilverlings or florens. Now what were all his books to the Bible? To blame then was that Anabaptiſt, who ſaid in Melanchthons hearing, that hee would not give two pence for all the Bibles in the World. Joh. Manl. lect com. 78.

Verſ. 73 Thy hands have made and faſhioned mee] Plaſmaverunt: which Basil interpreteth of the body curiouſly wrought by God, Pſal. 139. as Aſtudy, of the ſoul, q. d. Thou art my Maker, I would thou ſhouldeſt bee my Maſter. A body haſt thou fitted mee, Heb. 10. 5. a reaſonable ſoul alſo haſt thou given mee capable of ſalvation, I am an underſtanding creature ſtill, neither have I loſt my paſſive capacity of thy renewing grace. Formaverunt. Firmaverunt.

Give mee underſtanding] And thereunto adde ſincere affection, v. 80. that theſe may run parallel in my heart, and mutually tranſfuſe life, and vigour into one another.

Verſ. 74 They that fear thee will bee glad, &c.] As hoping that they ſhall alſo in like ſort bee delivered and advanced.

Becauſe I have hoped in thy word] And have not been diſappointed. The Vulgar rendreth it ſuper ſperavi, I have over-hoped: and Aben-Ezra gloſſeth, I have hoped in all thy decrees, even that of afflicting mee, as in the next verſe.

Verſ. 75 I know, O Lord, that thy Judgements are right] That is, that I ſuffer deſervedly. To thee, O Lord belongeth Righteouſneſs, &c. Dan. 9.

And that thou in faithfulneſſe haſt afflicted mee] That thou mayeſt be true to my ſoul, and not ſuffer mee to run on to my utter ruine. Or, in faithfullneſſe, that is, in meaſure, as 1 Cor. 10. 13.

Verſ. 76 Let, I pray thee, thy mercifull kindneſſe] That I faint not, neither ſink under the heavieſt burden of theſe light afflictions.

According to thy word to thy ſervant] To thy ſervants in generall, and therefore I truſt to mee, who am bold to thruſt in among the reſt, and to put my name in the Writ.

Verſ. 77 Let thy tender mercies come unto mee, &c.] Hee repeateth the ſame thing in other words, and re-enforceth his requeſt; ſhewing that hee could not live without divine comforts.

For thy Law is my delight] Thou haſt my heart and good will; which ſheweth that I am thy workmanſhip in a ſpirituall ſenſe alſo, Epheſ. 2. 10. Oh look upon the wounds of thine hands, and forget not the work of thine hands, as Queen Elizabeth prayed.

Verſ. 78 Let the proud bee aſhamed] Theodoret thinks that David here prayeth not againſt, but for his enemies; quandoquidem confuſio & ignominia ſalutem procreat. But that's not likely.

For they dealt perverſely with mee] Writhing my words and deeds to a wrong ſenſe: Or, they would pervert mee.

But I will meditate in thy Precepts] Or, I will ſpeak of them, and ſo ſtop their mouths, and ſave my ſelf from them.

Verſ. 79 Let thoſe that fear thee] Theſe are fitly oppoſed to thoſe proud ones, as Mal. 3. 13. 16.

Turn unto mee] From whom they have ſhrunk in mine affliction.

And thoſe that have known thy Teſtimonies] Deum cognoſcere & colere, to know and ſerve God is the whole duty of a man, ſaith Lactantius.

Verſ. 80 Let my heart bee ſound] For the main, though I have many failings. Pray wee againſt Hypocriſie.

That I bee not aſhamed] As all diſſemblers once ſhall bee.

Verſ. 81 My ſoul fainteth for thy ſalvation] Saying as thoſe good ſouls, Jer. 8. 20. The Harveſt is paſt, the Summer is ended, and wee are not ſaved. Phyſitians let their patients blood ſometimes uſque ad animæ deliquium, till they ſwoon again, Howbeit they have a care ſtill to maintain nature; ſo doth God the fainting ſpirit of his people by cordialls, Iſa. 57. 16.

But I hope in thy Word] Vitam ſpe vidi quæ mortem vincit.

Verſ. 82 Mine eyes faile] God ſometimes delayeth to help, till men have left looking; looking. Luk. 18. 8. when the Son of man cometh, shall hee find faith? hardly. This hee doth to commend his favours to us, and to set a price on them.

Saying, When wilt thou comfort mee] This is a Prosopopeia, as if Davids eyes had thus, whilst they earnestly expected comfort.

Vers. 83 For I am become like a bottle in the smoke] Shrivelled, wrinkled, withered, dryed up. My body by long suffering is but a bag of bones, and that black and sooty; confer Psal. 32. 3. & 102. 3. My soul in danger of being bereft of all spirituall moysture.

Yet do I not forget thy Statutes] Nay I do the rather remember them, and fetch relief from them.

Vers. 84 How many are the dayes of thy Servant?] i. e. Mine evil dayes. Prov. 15. 15. All the dayes of the afflicted are evill. See Psal. 37. 19. and these soon seem many to us.

When wilt thou execute Judgement, &c.] This is the voice of those Martyrs, Rev. 6. who are thereupon willed to have patience, till the number of their Brethren is fulfilled.

Vers. 85 The proud have digged pits for mee] The pride, cruelty and craftiness of wicked Persecutors, are fore-tokens of their utter destruction. The Greek rendreth it, they have told mee tales, Prov. 16. 27. An ungodly man diggeth up evill.

Which are not after thy Law] Neither they, nor their pits. But what care they for thee or thy law? and shall they thus escape by iniquity, Psal. 56. 7?

Vers. 86. All thy Commandements are faithfull] Heb. Faithfullness, that is, they are true, sure, equall, infallible.

They have persecuted mee wrongfully] For asserting thy truths, and adhering thereunto.

Help thou mee] The more eagerly men molest us, the more earnestly should wee implore the divine help.

Vers. 87 They had almost consumed mee upon earth] In Heaven I shall bee out of their reach. But this is their hour, and the power of darkness, Luk. 22. 53.

But I forsook not thy Precepts] No trouble must pull us from the love of the truth. You may pull my tongue out of my head, but not my faith out of my heart, said that Martyr. The Saints chuse affliction rather than sin.

Vers. 88 Quicken mee after thy loving kindnesse] David under long affliction had his damps, and dulnesses: as the best faith, if long tryed, will flag, and hang the wing. Hee therefore rouseth up himself, and wrestleth with God for quickening grace, which hee promiseth to improve, and not to receive the grace of God in vain, so shall I keep the Testimony of thy mouth.

Vers. 89 For ever O Lord thy word] It is eternall and perpetuall, neither can it bee vacated or abolished by the injurie of time or indeavours of tyrants. The Bible was imprinted at the new Jerusalem by the finger of Jehovah, and shall outlive the dayes of Heaven, run parallel with the life of God, with the line of eternity. The Saints also and Angels in Heaven live by the same law as wee do here, and we pray to bee conformed unto them.

Vers. 90 Thy faithfullnesse is unto all generations] Hee singleth out Gods word of promise, and sheweth it to bee immutable and unmoveable as the earth is in the middle of Heaven, by the word of Gods power. See Jer. 33. 25.

Thou hast established] See Job 26. 7. with the Note.

Vers. 91 They continue this day] God never brake promise with them, Jer. 33. 20, 25. much lesse will hee with his people, for whose use hee made them.

For all are thy servants] All creatures are at Gods beck and check; except evill Angels and men, those great Heteroclites; who yet do Gods will though against their own wills.

Vers. 92 Unlesse thy Law had been my delights] Unless it had been seated in my heart (as well as it is in Heaven) for my singular comfort, I had been crushed.

I should then (ere long) have perished] The Lord Grave of Hessen, told mee at Dresden, (which hee had found true) that it had been impossible for him to have born up under the manifold miseries of so long an imprisonment, nisi habuisset consolationem ex Joh. Mesl. loc. com. 139. verbo divino in suo corde, save the comfort of the Scriptures in his heart.

Vers. 93 I will never forget thy precepts, &c.] That is, thy promises which are as fare and and firm as the commandt of the moſt abſolute Monarch upon earth. And here the Prophet propoſeth his own example for a pattern to others: for as Pliny witneſſeth in his Panegyrick to Theodoſius the Emperour, blandiſſime jubetur exemplo, examples are ſweet Precepts.

For with them thou haſt quickened mee] Thou haſt ſeiſed mee again, when ready to faint, as verſ. 92.

Verſ. 94 I am thine, ſave mee] Every man will ſee to his own, unleſs hee bee worſe than an Infidel: and ſhall not God?

For I have ſought thy Precepts] And can thereby prove my ſelf to bee Thine. Where it is implyed, that all that wee are to ſeek in our obedience, are the Precepts themſelves; the thing eſpecially wee are to aim at, is obedience it ſelf to the Precepts.

Verſ. 95 The wicked have waited] Nothing leſs than deſtruction will ſatisfie Perſecutors: but the Lord knows how to deliver his Peters out of the hands of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews, Act. 12. 11. 2 Pet. 2. 9.

But I will conſider thy Teſtimonies] And therewith hearten and harden my ſelf againſt their inſolencies, and attempts for my hurt.

Verſ. 96 I have ſeen an end of all Perfection] viz. Here below.

Tempora tolla ruunt prætoria. —

Faireſt buildings, ſtrongeſt perſons, goodlieſt Empires have their times and their turns; their riſe and their ruine. Omnis finis finem vidi. Syr. Interp.

Omnia ſunt hominum tenui pendentia filo,
Et ſubito caſu quæ valuere ruunt.
Omnia fortunæ variis ſtant obvia telis
Aut etiam longo tempore victa cadunt.

But thy Commandement is exceeding broad] It is endleſſe, infinite perpetuall, and withall of largeſt extent; witneſs that of Charity, which is the complement of the Law, and the ſupplement of the Goſpel. David, though hee had proceeded further in the diſcovery of divine truths than thoſe before him, verſ. 99. yet hee was ſtill to ſeek of that which might bee known: Like as thoſe great diſcoverers of the new-found land, confeſs ſtill a Plus-ultra.

Verſ. 97 O how love I thy Law] Such a pang of love hee felt, as could not otherwiſe bee vented but by a patheticall Exclamation: and this was wrought in him by the thought of the largeneſs and laſtingneſs of Gods law. Plato prized one book (called Sophron) above all the reſt, whereof hee had many. Richard de Bury Biſh. of Durham, as hee had more Books than all the Biſhops of England beſides, ſo in his Book called Philobiblos, hee ſaith of himſelf, eſt ajsica quoddam librorum amore patenter ſe eſſe abreptum, that he was carried out of himſelf by love to good books, but not ſo much as David was to Gods bleſſed book. Queen Elizabeth at her Coronation received the Bible (preſented unto her) with both her hands, and kiſſing it, laid it to her breaſt, ſaying, that the ſame had ever been her cheifeſt delight, &c. Floruit anno. 1333. Speed.

It is my meditation all the day] Sive locutio, commentatio, occupatio, my daily diſcourſe, ſtudy, or imployment, as love is never idle.

Verſ. 98 Thou through thy Commandements haſt made mee wiſer than mine enemies] So that I outwit them, and mine holy ſimplicity is too hard for their ſinfull ſubtlety. Bee wiſe as Serpents.

For they are ever with mee] Heb. It is ever with mee, that is, every one of thy Commandements; I am expert in them. Or, It is mine, I have made them mine own by meditation: I have turned them in ſuccum & ſanguinem, I have incorporated them, as it were into my ſoul.

Verſ. 99 I have more underſtanding than all my teachers] i. e. I have underſtood by much reading more than they ever taught mee, whilſt I referred all to practiſe, and ſo came to know more of Gods mind than they did. A friend ſaith Chryſoſtome, that is acquainted with his friend, will get out the meaning of a letter or phraſe, which another could not: that is a ſtranger: ſo it is in the Scripture. And here, Indocti rapiunt cœlum: a pious ſwain is better learned than a proud Philoſopher, ſaith a certain devout Dominican. Our King Alfred was held the beſt in all his Kingdome, both for underſtanding and for living, by the holy Scriptures. Ad. à Mon.

For thy Testimonies are my meditation] I do particularly apply the word heard to mine own necessities, and work it upon mine affections by an after-deliberate consideration.

Vers. 100 I understand more than the Ancients] Whom yet Age, Use, and Experience have taught much; but by the practicall study of the Word I out-go them all; with reference to these hoary heads, the seniours of the Synedrion, bee is spoken; Non prolixa facit sapientem barba.

Vers. 101 I have refrained my feet, &c.] I have clapt up my unruly affections close prisoners, and hampered them: abandoning every errour in Judgement, and enormity in practise.

That I may keep thy word] Which I shall never do, but by self-denyall and mortification.

Vers. 102 I have not departed from thy judgements] i. e. From thy Law; which is called Judgements, because God will thereby judge the World.

For thou hast taught mee] scil. To cleave close unto thee with full purpose of heart; and not to bee drawn aside by any either Allurement, or Affrightment.

Vers. 103 How sweet are thy words unto my taste] Heb. To my Palat. Syr. cali gutturis mei, the roof of the mouth resembleth Heaven. Epicurus was worthily blamed by Ennius for that dum palato quid sit optimum judicabat, cæli palatium non suspexerit, whiles hee looked so much to his palate, hee looked not at all to the heavenly palace. David was no Hog of his heard: hee had sweet meats to feed on, that the World was not aware of.

Yea sweeter than hony to my mouth] Mercuries Priests were wont to say when they did eat their figs, γλυκεῖα ἡ ἀλήθεια, Truth is sweet. The Comedian saith, after Solomon, ἥδυ τὸ φῶς, Light is sweet. The pleasures of the mind are far beyond those of the body.

Vers. 104 Through thy Precepts I get understanding] Those are the Statutes of Heaven, and as men by studying the Statute-book, get worldly wisdome; so they may hereby get heavenly.

Therefore I hate every false way] Whether in point of opinion or practise, I shall look upon Auxentius as a Devill, so long as hee is an Arrian. saith Hilary. And I would shun an Heretick, as I would do a Devil; for hee is sent on his errand, saith another.

Vers. 105 Thy word is a lamp unto my feet] Without the direction whereof both for my whole course of life, and for every particular action thereof; I cannot but bee in dreadfull darknesse, and desperate downfalls.

Vers. 106 I have sworn, and I will perform it] A religious vow is nothing else but a solemn promise, or rather oath made to God to use this or that means, either to avoid some evill whereunto hee findeth himself inclined, or to bee set onwards in the performance of some duty, unto which hee finds himself very backward. Thus Nib. 10. they take a new oath, and seal to it. Thus Job chap. 31. 1. and Jacob, Gen. 28. 21, 22. called therefore the Father of vows.

Masora sepes legi, dec mæ divitiis, vota sanctimoniæ, fi sentium sapientiæ. Pirke Aboth.

That I will keep thy Righteous Judgements] Keep them as I am able, and as thou by thy grace shalt enable mee, Psal. 119. 32. Peter was too peremptory, Jephtha too hasty.

Vers. 107 I am afflicted very much] Usque valde, extreamly: If David bee so fully bent to obey God, hee shall have troubles great store, 2 Tim. 3. 12. All that will live godly, and are set upon it, shall suffer persecution. Zeal for Christ draweth troubles to it self, as the wind Caecias doth clouds.

Quicken mee, O Lord, according to thy word] Help mee to keep my promise, to perform mine oath; notwithstanding these troubles growing upon mee. A vow made without prayer is never kept.

Vers. 108 Accept, I beseech thee, the free-will-offerings] My prayers and praises, prayers for thine assistance, and praises for thine enablements. Psal. 50. 14. & 51. 15.

And teach mee thy Judgements] This is a request that David hath never done with.

Vers. 109 My soul (or life) is continually in my hand] i. e. Continually hazarded, and made as brittle as glasse for Righteousnesse sake. I am neither fond of my not afraid of death in this case: I make no more of life than a child doth of his bird which hee carrieth in the palm of his hand held open. See Judg. 12. 3. Job 13. 14.

Yet do I not forget thy Law] Notwithstanding all these dangers, I love it, and like it so much the better, as those Psal. 44. & Rom. 8. and that holy Martyr who caught up the Revelation cast into the flame fire with himself, and cryed, O bona Apocalypsis, &c.

Vers. 110 The wicked have laid a snare for me] Such, as rather than their lives, would have had mine: such as sought and fain would have sucked my blood.

Yet I erred not from thy Precepts] I held the Kings high-way; and leaped not over the hedge to avoid a perce of foul way.

Vers. 111 Thy Testimonies have I taken as an heritage] Perpetuo me negaturum alienandi patrimonii vice, A Patrimony that I prize, and will never part with; sith I hold it from thee as a child of thy grace.

For they are the rejoycing of mine heart] Other heritages have their troubles. Qui habet terras, habet querras, saith the Lawyer; but the just mans joy is unmixed.

Vers. 112 I have inclined mine heart to perform thy Statutes] This is the fruit of my Christian contentation, and spirituall joy, I have inclined my heart: Indeed thou Lord hast done it, for thou art the only heart-maker, and heart-mender; but thou countest and callest it my doing, for mine incouragement in thy service. Certum est nos facere quod facimus, sed Deus facit ut faciamus, saith Austin.

Alway even to the end] For else I shall lose the things that I have wrought, and not receive a full reward. 2 Joh. 8.

Vers. 113 I hate vain thoughts] Which though they may swarm in my head, shall never lodge in my heart. Jer. 4. 14. for there I have entertained a better guest.

Thy Law do I love] All hatred proceedeth from love, and is πρὸς τὸ μενὸς, against the whole kind, as Aristotle speaketh; True love to Gods law enrageth the hearts of Gods people, with an holy hatred of heresies, and perverse devises.

Vers. 114 Thou art my hiding-place and my shield] To defend mee from deadly darts and dangers. See Psal. 18. 2 & 32. 7. God either preserveth his from common calamities; or from the hurt of them.

I hope in thy word] And am content to stay thy time. Hee that believeth, maketh not haste.

Vers. 115 Depart from mee, yee evill-doers] For why? there is no doing my duty in your company; besides a double danger, 1 Infection of sin. 2 Infliction of punishment, Rev. 18. 4.

For I will keep the Commandements] Which it booteth mee not to set about, unless I do first abandon your society, having the garment spotted by the flesh, that is, avoiding evill company (saith Mr. Perkins) that Remora or Pest of true piety. See Levit. 15. 4.

Vers. 116 Uphold mee according to thy word] The promise is the souls supporter. Turn wee the palm, and not the backside of the hand to this staff, leaning upon it, praying hard for the accomplishment of it, and then bee content though wee can say but as that holy man Mr. Paul Bain did; I thank God in Christ, sufficient I have; but sweetness spirituall I taste not any. Bains Letter

And let mee not bee ashamed of my hope] Let mee not bee defeated, disappointed, frustrated. This, David knew hee should not bee (for Spes in terrenis inceptis omnes boni; spes in divinis omnes optimi, Heb. 11. 1. Rom. 5. 5.) but yet thinks fit to seek it by prayer, as Elias foretold abundance of rain, but yet went up to the top of Carmel, and prayed for it. 1 King. 18. 41. 42.

Vers. 117 Hold thou mee up, and I shall bee safe] No longer are wee safe from sin and punishment, than God putteth under his hand: wee subsist meerly by his sustentation: and if hee withdraw his grace never so little, wee are down on all fours, as wee say.

And I will have respect, &c.] Saints shall persevere, because they are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation.

Vers. 118. Thou hast trodden down all them, &c.] Thus as sundry Kings & Conquerors, [illegible] for a time, as Sennacherib did Hezekiah, Nebuchadnezzar the Jews, Xerxes Emperour, and as Tamerlan did Bajazet.

For

For their deceit is falſhood] They think themſelves to bee out of the reach of thy rod; but they will find it ſomewhat otherwiſe.

Verſ. 119 Thou puteſt away all the wicked of the earth like droſs] Conſuming them in the fire of thy wrath, and caſting them out as refuſe. See Iſa. 1. 25. vel quaſi rubiginem exiſtimaſti, thou haſt reckoned them as ruſt; whereas the Saints are preciouſly eſteemed, as the leaſt filings of gold are.

Kimchi.

Therefore I love thy Teſtimonies] Quia purgant a ſcoriis hypocriſeos, & in me eſt ut furia: becauſe they take out the precious from the vile, and make men the ſame within as without.

Verſ. 120 My fleſh trembleth] Horripilatur, Job 4. 15. In the Saints is a mixture of contrary paſſions, fear and great joy: as was in thoſe holy women, Mat. 28. 8. and the one makes way for the other.

Verſ. 121 I have done Judgement and Juſtice] I have lived in all good conſcience before God untill this day, Act. 23. 1. my cauſe is right, and my carriage righteous. But Innocency is no target againſt detraction, and deadly practice; therefore Leave mee not to mine oppreſſours] Or traducers; for they will ſoon exceed their commiſſion, Zach. 1. 15.

Verſ. 122 Bee ſurety for thy ſervant for good] Obi vadimonium; appear for mee, and non-ſuit all accuſations againſt mee: Or, undertake for mee that I ſhall keep thy lawes, as I have ſaid and ſworne to do: Sis fide juſſor meus. Some obſerve that this is the only verſe throughout the whole Pſalm wherein the word is not mentioned under the name of Law, Judgements, Statutes, or the like termes. And they make this Note upon it; where the Law faileth, there Chriſt is a ſurety of a better Teſtament. There are that render the words thus. Dulcify or delight thy ſervant in good, that is, make him joyfull and comfortable in the purſuit and practice of that which is good.

Obiecta ſervum tuum. Aſcul.

Verſ. 123 Mine eyes fail for thy ſalvation] Not my bodily eyes only, but the eyes of my faith. See verſ. 81. 82.

And for the word of thy Righteouſneſs] That is, for thy faithfull promiſes, which many times bear a long date.

Verſ. 124 Deal with thy ſervant according to thy mercy] i. e. Shew mee ſo much mercy as to teach mee thy Statutes, Cathedram in cœlis habet qui corda docet. Divine learning is of Gods free favour. If common skill, then this much more commeth forth from the Lord of Hoaſts, who is wonderfull in counſel, and excellent in working, Iſa. 28. 29.

Verſ. 125 I am thy ſervant, give mee underſtanding] I have voluntarily hired my ſelf unto thee, choſen the things that pleaſe thee, and taken hold of the Covenant, loving to bee thy ſervant, Iſa. 56. 4, 6. Now this is all the wages I crave of thee, Give mee underſtanding, &c. This David ſpeaketh, ſaith one, in a reall and heavenly complement with his Maker.

That I may know thy Teſtimonies] Work done in the dark muſt bee undone again. David therefore would fully know his Maſters mind that he might acceptably do it.

Verſ. 126 It is time for thee Lord to work] For elſe what will become of thy great name, and of thy poor people? This the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh not, as preſcribing God a time, but as in minding him of his own glory, and of his peoples neceſſity.

For they have made void thy Law] They would if they could, as our Antinomians dogmatically and practically, our lawleſs lawleſs Belialiſts, unrameable, unractable.

Verſ. 127 Therefore I love thy Commandements] I like them the better, becauſe they fleight them, and prize that way the more that they perſecute. I kindle my ſelf from their coldneſs, and whilſt they greedily graſp after gold, and fine gold, I lay hold upon eternall life, 1 Tim. 6. 10, 11, 12.

Verſ. 128 Therefore I eſteem all thy Precepts concerning all things to bee right] Therefore from the ſame ground again as before by an holy Antiperiſtaſis.

I eſteem, &c.] Rectificavi, I have declared them to bee right in every part and point againſt thoſe that wreſtle and wreſt them to a wrong ſenſe. I eſteem every parcell of Truth precious: and am an utter enemy to every falſhood. The Holy Ghoſt in this verſe uſed (not unlike that in Nehemiah) to prevent the integrity and faithfulnes of the obedience, [illegible] extent.

I hate

I hate every falſe way] Whether in point of opinion or practice; all ſinfull deviations and prevarications. Hatred is ever againſt the whole kind of a thing, ſaith Ariſtotle. Rhet. lib. 2.

Verſ. 129 Thy Teſtimonies are wonderfull] As comprehending high and hidden myſteries, ſuch as are far above the reach of humane reaſon; ſuch as the very Angels admire and adore. A man muſt have more than common faith to ſubject his reaſon to them. But all men are Socinians by nature; they will beleeve Gods word no further than they can ſee reaſon: which while men make the rule of their faith (as did the wiſe Grecians, the rationall Romans) they ſtumble at the preaching of the Croſs as fooliſhneſs, and diſ-beleeve the riches of Chriſt, which are unſearchable.

Therefore doth my ſoul keep them] Though I cannot comprehend them, yet I am comprehended by them: and though I cannot do them as I would, yet I am doing at them as I can. I admire what I cannot attain to.

Verſ. 130 The entrance of thy Words giveth light] So ſoon as men are over the threſhold of thy houſe, ſeſe lux quadam inenarrabilis conſpiciendam offert, a marvellous light ſhineth about them. So little cauſe is there that any ſhould accuſe Gods word of darkneſſe and hardneſſe, or give way to negligence and careleſneſs of the Scriptures, becauſe they are wonderfull. Lex, Lux, the Law is a Light, Prov. 6. 23. and the Goſpel a great Light, Mat. 4. 16. See 2 Pet. 1. 19.

It giveth underſtanding to the ſimple] And maketh them ſubtle, Prov. 1. 4. ſo they bee but docible. The very firſt rudiments of religion make wiſe the rude, ſo they bee not refractary.

Verſ. 131 I opened my mouth and panted] Heb. And ſcoped in the air, as one that laboureth for life. Oh the ſighs and the groans that I unceſſantly breathed forth, out of zeal to thy law! Oh the ſtrong affections kindled on the harth of my heart! for As one that runneth himſelf out of breath. Sitio propter legem ſicut dracones propter pluviam. Job. 29.

I longed for thy Commandements] The Septuagint render it by ἐπιπόθει, which ſignifieth a moſt vehement deſire, impatient of delays.

Verſ. 132 Look thou upon mee, &c.] Face about towards mee, and give mee a glimpſe at leaſt of thy grace, for full fruition I expect not in this preſent life. Brevis hora, parva mora.

As thou uſeſt to do unto thoſe, &c.] Common mercies ſatisfie not a Saint; hee muſt have peculiar favours, ſpirituall bleſſings in heavenly things, even the ſure mercies of David. Hee pleads for a childs part.

Verſ. 133 Order my ſteps in thy word] Let mee walk as in a frame, walk by rule exactly, accurately, Epheſ. 5. 15. Here hee prayeth that hee may keep the affirmative Precepts, ſaith Aben-Ezra: as in the next words, the negative.

And let not any iniquity have dominion over mee] Let it not reigne, though it doth rebell: let it bee like thoſe beaſts in Daniel, whoſe dominion was taken away, yet their lives were prolonged for a ſeaſon and a time, chap. 7. 12.

Verſ. 134 Deliver mee from the oppreſſion of man] Homo hominil lupus. David beſides his corruptions within, met with oppreſſions and perſecutions without: ſo ſhall all that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus: let them never dream of a delicacy in religion.

So will I keep thy Precepts] Not ſay as thoſe Miſcreants, Jer. 7. 10. wee are delivered to do all theſe abominations: but as good old Zachary, Luk. 1. 74, 75. ſervati ſumus ut ſerviamus, wee are delivered that wee might ſerve God without fear, &c.

Verſ. 135 Make thy face to ſhine upon thy ſervant] David could not live out of Gods favour, nor without his direction, hee therefore here and elſewhere prayeth heartily for both.

Verſ. 136 Rivers of waters run down mine eyes] My countenance is clouded, and even furrowed with continuall tears ſhed for thy diſhonour: therefore lift up upon mee the light of thy loving countenance. It grieveth mee greatly to ſee thy law violated, and the tranſgreſſours thereof ſo careleſs of their own eternall good. This was Lot's caſe at Sodom, 2 Pet. 2. and is many a good mans ſtill; every prophane wretch being a Hazael to his eyes, an Hadadrimmon to his heart. The Septuagint and Vulgar read, Mine eyes have drawn down riſſues of waters (i. e. they have wept abundantly) becauſe they (that is, thoſe eyes of mine) have not kept thy Law. So Aben-Ezra: Quia ipſi oculi non obſervaverunt legem tuam. David had walked after the light of his eyes, and the luſt of his heart; this is now his grief. Thus they, but not ſo well.

Verſ. 137 Righteous art thou, O Lord] Eſſentially, and efficiently.

And

And verily they are thy Judgements] Which are sometimes secret, but alwayes just, as the Emperour Mauricius also acknowledged, when his wife and children were slain before his eyes by the traitour Phocas.

Vers. 138 Thy Testimonies which thou hast commanded] i.e. the Gospel, as Isa. 8. 20. And the Commandement thereof to hear Christ, Mat. 17. 5. and to beleeve in his name, 1 Joh. 3. 23. this is a faithfull and true saying, 1 Tim. 1. 15. not Revelation, as the Jews blasphemously call it, or fabulas de Christo, as that black mouthed Pope.

Vers. 139 My zeal hath consumed mee] Hath meagred and impaired mee much. In the Hebrew, the last letter is doubled, to increase the signification. Zeal is the extreme heat of all the affections.

Vers. 140 Thy Word is very pure] And calleth for purity. Hence wicked men sleight it: but Saints the rather imbrace it, desirous to bee conformed to the heavenly pattern.

Vers. 141 I am small and despised] Minutus, a worm and no man, an abject and outcast, nullificamen hominis, &c.

Yet do I not forget thy Precepts] My mean condition impaireth not my constancy.

Vers. 142 Thy Righteousness is an everlasting righteousness] When all other laws and sentences, though ingraven in brass or marble, shall decay and determine, thy Law lasteth for ever; and so shall they that observe it.

And thy Law is the Truth] And therefore lasting. μόνιμον ἡ ἀλήθεια, saith Plato. The Eternity of Israel cannot lye, 2 Sam. 15. 29.

Vers. 143 Trouble and anguish have taken hold of mee] Heb. Have found mee. Those (as wee say of foul weather) come before they are sent for; yet are they not without the Lord. It is hee that putteth his under the black-rod.

Yet thy Commandements, &c.] God and his Word are never so sweet to the Saints, as in adversity.

Vers. 144 The Righteousness of thy Testimonies, &c.] This is the same with vers. 142.

Give mee understanding, &c.] An ignorant life is a lifeless life. Fuit non vixit. The life of God is the only life. But from this, men are alienated by the ignorance that is in them, Ephes. 4. 18.

Vers. 145 I cryed with my whole heart] This sheweth that hee had not only a gift of prayer, but a spirit of prayer.

Vers. 146 I cryed unto thee, save mee] Salvation properly denoteth the privative part of mans felicity, but includeth the positive part also; this must bee got by prayer.

Vers. 147 I prevented the dawning of the morning] I was up and at it before day-break. This is check to our sluggishness.

I hoped in thy Word] The Word furnished his hope, and his hope his prayer.

Hier. ad Eusta. Vers. 148 Mine eyes prevent the night-watches] By this verse and the former it appeareth that hee spent whole nights in prayer and meditation of Gods Word. Hierom counselled some godly women thus, Tenenti sodiccum somnus obrepat, & vadentem faciem pagina sacra suscipiat.

Vers. 149 Hear my voice according to thy loving kindness] Shewed heretofore to others of thy servants, and to mee frequently.

Quicken mee according to thy Judgement] i.e. According to thy promise.

Vers. 150 They draw nigh that follow after mischief] Those sceleratum assidui sectatores prompti sunt ac parati.

They are far from thy law] And so have nothing to restrain their rage, sith they have cast thy cordes from them.

Vers. 151 Thou art nigh, O Lord] To countermork and controule the enemy, as also to safeguard and support thy people.

Vers. 152 Concerning thy Testimonies, &c.] The sempiternity of Gods Word, is an excellent prop to faith, and help in prayer, to those especially who are of long experience, and have well laid up their experiments. David had learned this truth of a child little. See 2 Tim. 3. ult.

Vers. 153 Consider mine affliction and deliver mee] Vide communiationes vestis, look upon it, and let thine eye affect thy heart: ſay as once, I have ſeen, I have ſeen the affliction of my people.

Verſ. 154 Plead my cauſe and deliver mee] Litiga litigium meum. Bee both mine Advocate, and my Redeemer.

Verſ. 155 Salvation is far from the wicked] How can it bee otherwiſe? when as God is neither in their heads, Pſal. 10. 4. nor hearts, Pſal. 14. 1. nor words, Pſal. 12. 4. nor wayes, Tit. 1. 16. can theſe have part or portion in his ſalvation?

For they ſeek not] This contempt of Gods Word is a plain proof, that no part or peece of Gods favour belongeth to them.

Verſ. 156 Great are thy tender mercies, &c.] Or, many and Mother-like. This is great comfort to greateſt ſinners.

Verſ. 157 Many are my Perſecutours] Truth never wanted an adverſary; and goes ſeldome without a ſcratcht face.

Yet do I not decline] But ſtill adhere to thy word; when others fall off as faſt, as leaves fall from trees in Autumn.

Verſ. 158 I beheld the Tranſgreſſours and was grieved] Or, I abhorred them, or I contended with them; not ſo much becauſe they were mine, as thine enemies.

Becauſe they kept not thy Word] Which all men are bound not only to obſerve, but to preſerve as much as may bee.

Verſ. 159 Conſider how I love thy Precepts] And love facilitateth duty, helping us over all the hardſhip of holineſſe. It yeeldeth alſo much boldneſs to a man to offer it to God as here, for a proof of his ſincerity.

Verſ. 160 Thy Word is true from the beginning] Heb. The beginning of thy Word is true: Primarium illud eſt in verbo tuo quod eſt firmiſſimum, this is a ſpeciall praiſe of thy Word, that it is very ſure. Theſe words are faithfull and true, Rev. 22. 6. from the one end of the Bible to the other. Some render it thus, Thy moſt excellent Word is Truth. This moſt excellent word Kimchi interpreteth to bee particularly that in the head or preface to the Decalogue. Hear O Iſrael, Jehova thy God, Jehova is One. Theodoret will have it to be that promiſe made to Abraham that in his ſeed all Nations of the earth ſhould bee bleſſed. Some read it, every chapter of thy Word is Truth.

Verſ. 161 Princes have perſecuted mee without a cauſe] And Quæ venit indignè pœna, dolenda venit.

But better without a cauſe, than for evill doing, 1 Pet. 4. David ſuffered by theſe Potentates, becauſe hee was ſmall and deſpiſed. verſ. 141. as a little dog is worried by the bigger, as the leſſer fiſhes are devoured by the greater.

But my heart ſtandeth in awe of thy Word] The fear of God driveth out the fear of the creature, Iſa. 8. 12, 13.

Verſ. 162 I rejoyce at thy Word] Libenter omnibus omnes opes conceſſerim, &c. I would gladly leave all the wealth in the World to others, ſaid Tully, ſo that I might without diſturbance live and dye in the ſtudy of learning. What marvell then that David was ſo taken with heavenly learning? Epiſt. lib. 9.

As one that findeth great ſpoil] Which as it commeth oft unexpectedly (and is therefore the better welcome) ſo the profit is uſually very great (as was at the ſack of Conſtantinople) and the pleaſure (beſides the honour) is no leſſe than the profit, becauſe gotten from an enemy. George Franſperg (a Generall in the Imperiall Army, under the conduct of Charles Burbon, that ſacked Rome in the time of Pope Clement the ſeventh) cauſed an halter to be carried near his colours, ſaying that with that hee would hang the Pope, the better to incourage his ſouldiers who were almoſt all Lutherans, whom hee promiſed to lead to Rome; ſhewing them the great opportunity they had to inrich themſelves with the ſpoils of that City. Hiſt of the Counc. of Trent. p. 431

Verſ. 163 I hate and abhor lying] Mihi ſtrecti verbi, abominatio ſum, I hate it as I hate hell it ſelf; and yet lying was Davids ſin after a ſpeciall manner. See verſ. 29. with the Note.

But thy Law do I love] All hatred comes from love of the contrary. Yee that love the Lord hate evill, Pſal. 97. 10.

Verſ. 164 Seven times a day do I praiſe thee] Septies, id eſt, ſæpiſſimè, very often in the the day: whersoever God ſetteth mee up an Altar, I am ready with my ſacrifice.

The Jews pronounce an hundred benedictions ever day. Leo Modena.

Mahometans pray conſtantly five times a day; thoſe of Morocco ſix times. Papiſts foolifhly and ſuperſtitiouſly allege this text for their ſeven Canonicall houres, as they call them.

Verſ. 165 Great peace have they which love thy Law] The fruit of Righteouſneſs ſhall bee peace, Iſa. 32. 17. even the peace of God, the joy of faith, a heaped-up happineſs.

And nothing ſhall offend them] Heb. They ſhall have no ſtumbling-block: non peccant, quicquid accidat; Though they fall, they ſhall ariſe, for the Lord putteth under his hand, Pſal. 37.

Verſ. 166 Lord, I have hoped for thy ſalvation] This ſaying hee borrowed from good old Jacob, Gen. 49. 18.

And done thy Commandements] Done them as I could; done them to divine acceptation through Chriſt; and hence I have hoped, 1 Joh. 3. 3. Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himſelf, as God is pure.

Verſ. 167 My ſoul hath kept thy Teſtimonies] ſcil. As well as mortality will afford.

And I love them exceedingly] I delight in the Law of God after the inward man, Rom. 7. 22. I truſt I have a good conſcience in all things, willing to live honeſtly, Heb. 13. 18.

Verſ. 168 I have kept thy Precepts] All thy Laws are in my ſight; like as all my wayes are in thy ſight. I deſire to approve my ſelf to thee in the diſcharge of every part and point of my duty; in all my wayes I acknowledge thee. Pro. 3. 6. Here note, that all along this 21 Octonarie, the Pſalmiſt propoundeth himſelf for a Pattern of piety.

Verſ. 169 Let my cry come near before thee, O Lord] That is, as ſome will have it, Let this whole preceding Pſalm, and all the petitions (whereof wee have here a repetition) therein contained, bee highly accepted in Heaven.

Verſ. 170 Let my ſupplication, &c.] The ſame again; neither is this Battologie, but fervency in begging audience.

Semper, & hilariter.

Verſ. 171 My lips ſhall utter praiſe] Eructabunt labia mea hymnum. A Metaphor either from a fountain caſting out waters; vel a ructu qui cibum copioſum ſequitur.

Verſ. 172 My Tongue ſhall ſpeak] True goodneſſe is diffuſive; charity is no churl.

Verſ. 173 Let thy hand help mee] To do what I have promiſed.

For I have choſen thy Precepts] Refuſing Satans cut throat kindneſſe.

Verſ. 174 I have longed for thy Salvation] So do all men; but then David will take a right courſe for it (ſo will not all.)

And thy Law is my delight] This, the moſt men mind not.

Verſ. 175 Let thy Judgements help mee] ſcil. To Heaven: together with Gods Word, there goeth forth a power.

Verſ 176 I have gone aſtray, &c.] And of my ſelf ſhall never return.

Seek thy Servant] Do all the offices of a good Shepheard for mee, Luk. 15.

For I do not forget] The root of the matter is ſtill in mee, I am recallable, and ready to hear thy voice, Joh. 10. 3.

PSAL. CXX.

A Song of degrees] A moſt excellent Song, Tremellius rendreth it; and ſo indeed this and the fourteen following are, both for the matter, and for the form or manner of expreſſion which is wondrous ſhort and ſweet, as the very Epigrammes of the Holy Ghoſt himſelf, wherein each verſe may well ſtand for an oracle. And in this ſenſe, Adam Maamahalah, or a man of degrees is put for an eminent or excellent man, 1 Chron. 17. 17. Others underſtand it otherwiſe, wherein they have good leave to abound in their own ſenſe; ſith hoc periculo hic erratur, an errour here is not dangerous.

Verſ. 1 In my diſtreſſe I cryed unto the Lord] Oratio fuit unica eis, ut vere ſua alia, Diſtreſs addeth wings to our devotion. Our Saviour being in an agony prayed more more excellently, Luke, xviii. 14. So do all hideous sins, wherefully when they lye under the load of a lying tongue, as here verſ. 2. Being delivered wee pray, saith Paul, 2 Cor. 1. 11.

And his speedy aide] The effectuall fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much, James v. 16. Zech. 13. 9. Three times prayeth Asaph, Psal. 77. 1. 2. 15. And the mysticall carrying return of prayer should bee carefully observed, and thankfully improved, Psal. 86. viii.

Verſ. 2 Deliver my ſoul, O Lord, from lying lips] This was Davids diſtreſſe, and it lay heavy upon his ſpirit: ſo it did upon Jobs and Jeremies, chap. 20. 10. the ſcourge of tongues hee felt as ſharp as Scorpions. Of the miſchief of an evil tongue, See James 3. & Pſal. 52. & Pſal. 12. 3. with the Notes.

Verſ. 3. What ſhall bee given unto thee, &c.] That is (as Augustine ſaith well) what remedy is there for thee? q. d. None at all. Contra peſtilentiam non ſunt multa remedia, ſaith Seneca. But others better, what gain getteſt thou? what profit makeſt thou of thy lying and ſlandering? Hurt thou mayeſt another, but not help thy ſelf. Thou art not like the Maid whom Apion ſpeaks of, who burning her ſelf with poyſon, was her ſelf healthy, yet infected others with her venemous breath: But rather like the traitour of whom Augustus ſaid, I like the treaſon, but hate the traitour. The ſlander is oft applauded, when the ſlanderer is abhorred.

Or what ſhall bee done unto thee?] Heb. Vehiph, Whilſt prayer plagues terribly, as verſ. 4.

Thou falſe tongue] This he ſeemeth to ſay to Doeg, who is here called a falſe fellow, and a Lyar, though he ſpake but the truth againſt the Lords Prieſts, becauſe not for any love to the Truth, nor for reſpect to Juſtice, nor for the bewailing either of Saul, or the Prieſts, but only to prejudice theſe, and to incenſe the other.

Verſ. 4 Sharp Arrowes of the mighty] Arrowes ſharp, and ſhot with a force. A falſe tongue is likened to a ſharp razour, Pſal. 52. 4. to a ſharp ſword, Pſal. 57. 5. to ſharp arrowes, Prov. 25. 18. here it hath ſharp for ſharp, as God loveth to retaliate; and he is the Giant, or mighty one here, that ſhooteth theſe ſharpeſt ſhafts, that inflicteth moſt exquiſite puniſhments on ſuch, as once on Dives, whoſe tongue ſmoaked for it, Quia lingua plus peccaverat, as ſaith a Father, becauſe hee had ſo offended with his tongue.

With coals of Juniper] Which being a fat kind of wood, of gummy or ſalty matter, maketh a very ſcorching fire, and quick coals, ſuch as laſt long (ſome ſay a month and more) and ſmell ſweet: for ought theſe coals will God broyl lying lips, and a deceitfull tongue, pleaſing himſelf in ſuch diſhes in their execution. Flamma rédacta deſcit quæ modo nulla fuit. Theophraſt. Plin.

Verſ. 5. Woe is mee, &c.] Woe is mee] that is, in Moſcovia ſay ſome, in Hetruria ſay others, in Cappadocia rather, Hagag, Comarj, Ezek. 38. any where out of the bounds of the true Church (for it is found ſuch) in the Church, but among Iſraelites worſe than any Idolaters or Pagans.

The tents of Kedar] With Ishmaelites or Saracens, as they were afterwards called. Among theſe David was in danger. Ne cum lupis ululando, cum hiſpidis horrendo, & iſtis non ſanis inſanire. Guilt or grief, a good man is ſure to get by being in bad company, which maketh him cry, O that I had the wings of a Dove, &c. or if that Oh will not ſet him at liberty, then he ſtretcheth upon, What is mee, to expreſs his miſery: Vita mea ſic habetur, ut ſi decumbat, lecto non ſurgat, ubi ſtando ſedeat, non ſedendo requieſcat: dolens continuo mutet ſedem, nec ullam ſibi placeat. It is hard and happy to comply with ill company.

Verſ. 6. My ſoul hath long dwelt with him that hateth peace] With Saul, that implacable tyrant, and with other [illegible] The very ſight of a good [illegible] odds and o- [illegible] to a Saint to [illegible] bed, and [illegible] for thou [illegible]

But when I speak, they are for Warre] They cry the alarm, being bellicosi & bellicosi. Salmasius. Like fiery fire to the fire of contention. Sweet pictures, many men always speak forth themselves. These Indians live like Heathens, Jer. 27. 22. remove the South-west, and North-west, two opposite points, neither will stay to others, but the more they are sought to, the worse they are. This is the guise of graceless persons.

PSAL. CXXI.

A Song of degrees] Or, of ascensions, in singing whereof there should be ascensions in our hearts. See Psal. 120. 1.

Verſ. 1. I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills] Not to seek succour from, Psal. 11. 1. human helps, and carnal confidences, Jer. 3. 23. much leſs to thoſe mountains, In quibus genitor Idolo ſua exhibuere & edidit, wherein the Heathens ſet and ſerve their Idols, Deut. 12. 2. but to Sion and Moriah, where Gods Sanctuary is, Pſal. 87. 1. or rather to heaven, Pſal. 11. 4. with 1 Kings. 22. 9. where God himſelf is; and ſo it followeth.

Verſ. 2. My help cometh from the Lord] To whom therefore alone I muſt look for help. Surſum corda, ſurſum oculi, ſurſum etiam capita. Naturaliſts tell us, that of thoſe twenty eight Muſcles whereby the head is moved, twelve lift up the head behind, and two only before let it downward, to teach us to contemplate Heaven more, and Earth leſs. Others adverniſe us, that it is one main end why God hath ſet in mans eye a fifth Muſcle; whereas other Creatures have but four; one to turn downward, another to hold forwards, a third to turn the eye to the right hand, a fourth to the left hand; but no unreaſonable Creature can turn the eye upward, as Man can; that he may look up to God.

Verſ. 3. He will not ſuffer thy foot to be moved] Not grievously moved, Pſal. 62. 2. an utter prolapſum.

He that keepeth thee will not ſlumber] And if King Philip could ſay, that he could ſleep ſecurely becauſe his friend Antipater watched by him; may not we be much more confident, who have God to keep us?

Verſ. 4. Behold, he that keepeth, &c.] He repeateth that ſweeteſt promiſe (that we may roll it as ſugar under our tongues, that we may ſuck and be ſatisfied, Iſa. 66. 11.) and ſeeneth it forth with a Behold, and much &, and Amen thereto, for thy good, Job 5. 27.

Shall neither ſlumber nor ſleep] Shall not fetch one wink of ſleep. Dormitatione ſyncopali, were ſlumber before wee ſleep, but God ſhall no neither. His eyes (Zech. 3. 9.) are not ſeven eyes only, but ſeven times ſeven, and run through the whole earth, Zech. 4. 10. He ſleepeth not, as he ſpeaketh not, as he repenteth not, as he hath not hands, feet, eyes, &c. but after the manner of men, for our capacity. mercy from the hurt, if not from the smart thereof.

He shall preserve thy soul.] What is all unquietness, when the body is in durance. A sick servant of Christ being asked how hee did? answered, my body is sick, my soul is well.

Vers. 8 The Lord shall preserve thy going out, &c.] Thou shalt have his protection for thy defence, in all thy outward comforts at home and abroad, together with good success in all thine affairs and actions. Prov. 3. 6.

PSAL. CXXII.

VErs. 1 I was glad when they said unto me, &c.] The Church of Religion is the chief joy of the good Christian. Hence the Papists (and Puritans among the Protestant party. Gregory Nazianzen writeth that his Father being an Heathen, and often times fought by his wife to become a Christian, had oft times visions presented unto him in a dream, and was much wrought upon thereby. Ambrose relateth of Dauid Martyr in Lombardy, hearing the sentence of his condemnation to the fire, leaped as long with pleasure, &c. Acts & Mon. fol. 807.

Let us go into the house of the Lord.] I will go also, (as Zach. 8. 21.) said holy David, who was much affected at his people forwardness in Gods service, and became their Captain.

Vers. 2 Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem.] Where the Ark (which continued long) was now fixed: this was their great joy. So should it bee ours, that the true religion is now settled amongst us, and likely to continue to a certainty. Time was when good Melancthon groaned out, Quos fortunas, habemus, quas sequemur nescimus. Resp. ad Sophyl. We know whom we should live, (viz. the Papists) but whom to follow we yet know not.

Vers. 3 Jerusalem is builded as a City, &c.] None such for uniformity of buildings, or multitudes of Citizens. There is no such unity in all the World, as amongst true Christians, and this the very Heathens admired, and commended. As the curtains of the Tabernacle were joyned by loops, so were they by love. And as the stones of the Temple were so closely connected together that they seemed to bee all but one stone, so was it among the people of Saints.

Vers. 4 Whither the Tribes go up.] Thrice a year all the Males appeared before the Lord in Sion, the females also (as many as could (as Hannah, the Virgin Mary, &c.) but they were not bound. At which times there was such a generall meeting, as no City could shew the like. A type of that great Assembly, Heb. 12. 22, 23.

Unto the Testimony of Israel.] The Ark was so called in regard of the Tables of the Covenant kept therein, as two lovers of one another, God and man, saith Abenezra. Exod. 25. 16. those two tables are called the testimony.

Vers. 5 For there are set thrones of judgment, &c.] Here was the great Court of Iudicature of any place. 1 For execution of Gods Statute-law. 2 For administration, and execution of publick justice.

Vers. 6 Pray for the peace of Jerusalem.] Peace is a blessing among blessings, and must therefore be prayed for. Herodot lib. 1

Vers. 7 Peace be within thy walls, &c.] Not only for himself, but for all his Countrymen, as being of their body.

Vers. 8 For my brethren and companions sakes, &c.] Not only for their sakes, but for the sake of the Lord our God, whose house it was, and in whose service they were employed.

PSAL. CXXIII.

Verse 1. Unto thee lift I up mine eyes.] Praying by them rather than by words; mine afflictions having swoln my heart too bigge for my mouth. See the Notes on Psal. 121. 1.

Verse 2. Behold as the eyes of servants.] For direction, defence, maintenance, mercy in time of correction, help when the service is over-hard, &c. to do our eyes wait upon the Lord our God, viz. for direction, and benediction.

Verse 3. Have mercy upon us, O Lord, have mercy.] This is preces fundere, calcem tundere, misericordiam exorare, as Tertullian hath it: to wring mercy out of Gods holy hands, by our utmost importunity.

For we are exceedingly filled with contempt.] We are made the very scorn and scum of our proud imperious enemies. This the nature of man is very impatient of, and can hardly brook: for there is none so mean but holdeth himself worthy of some regard; and a reproachful scorn sheweth an utter disrespect, which ariseth from the very superfluity of malice.

Verse 4. Our soul is exceedingly filled with the scorn of those that are at ease.] And there-hence insolent, and unsufferable, for ὑβρις ὕβριν τίκτει, fulness breedeth forgetfulness, yea it maketh men scornful, and wrongful to others.

PSAL. CXXIV.

Verse 1. If it had not been the Lord, &c.] God may have better lay than our Hen. 8. Cui adhæreo, præsto. He whose part I take is sure to prevail. But Christ hath ever been the Churches Champion, and hence she is insuperable. The Captain of the Lords Hosts is Captain of our salvation, Josh. 5. 14. Heb. 2. 10.

Verse 2. When men rose up] Murderers rather: but such as think themselves the only men alive; and us, the only slaves and Thraso.

Verse 3. Then they had swallowed us up quick.] As the great Fish doubt not but ours, as hungry Lions, or Wolves, raven up their prey. Pharaoh Lachnes King of Egypt slew thirty thousand Jews, and compelled the living to feed upon the dead. Adrian the Emperour made a Decree, that he who had slain a Jew, should himself be slain.

Verse 8. [illegible] of infinite might and mercy; and ſay as thoſe good ſouls at Eben-ezra, Hitherto God hath helped us: he hath, and therefore he will, &c.

PSAL. CXXV.

VErſ. 1 They that truſt in the Lord ſhall bee as Mount Zion] Great is the ſtability of a beleevers felicity. Winds and ſtorms move not a Mountain; an Earthquake may, but not eaſily, remove it. That myſticall Mount Sion the Church, immota manet, is unmoveable; ſo is every member thereof, for the main of his happineſs.

Verſ. 2 As the Mountains are round about Jeruſalem] That is, ſay ſome, as the Angels; but wee take it literally; Jeruſalem was ſurrounded with many high Mountains, which were a great ſafeguard to it, yet did not alwayes defend it, as the Lord doth his, by being a wall of fire round about them, Zech. 2. 5.

Verſ. 3 For the rod of the wicked ſhall not reſt] Fall upon the lot of the Righteous it may, notwithſtanding that former promiſe of Gods protection; but hee will take care they bee not tempted above that they are able, 1 Cor. 10. hee ſets the time, and appoints the meaſure, Pſal. 30. 5. Rev. 2. 10.

Leſt the Righteous, &c.] Overcome by impatiency, or drawn aſide by the Worlds either Allurements or Affrightments, ſhould yeeld and comply, or ſeek to help themſelves out of trouble by ſiniſter practice. God (ſaith Chry. ſtom) doth like a Luraniſt, who will not let the ſtrings of his Lute bee too ſlack, leſt it marre the muſick, nor ſuffer them to bee too hard ſtretcht or ſcrued up, leſt they break.

Verſ. 4 Do good, O Lord, unto thoſe that be good] But afflicted by thoſe men of thy hand, Pſal. 17. 14. who are the rod in thine hand, Iſa. 10. 5. Do good in thy good ple ſure (for nothing can bee claimed by the very beſt) to ſuch, according to thy promiſe, verſ. 3. which here I put in ſute for them; Let the Lord bee with the good, 2 Chron. 19 11.

And to them that are upright in their hearts] For ſuch only are good indeed, and approved in Chriſt, as was Appelles, Rom. 16 and Nathaniel, Joh. 1. notwithſtanding their infirmities. Hypocriſy imbaſeth the pureſt metal, turneth gold into ruſty Iron; ſincerity doth the contrary by a divine kind of Alchymy.

Verſ. 5 As for ſuch as turn aſide by their crooked wayes] In lubricitates vel tortuoſitates, ſuch as pretend piety to their wordly and wicked deſignes and dealings; diſſemblers, warpers, verſuti & vafri, who would couzen God of Heaven if they could tell how.

The Lord ſhall lead them forth] Quantumvis reluctantes, as cattel led to the ſlaughter; or malefactors to execution. Tranſfugas arboribus ſuſpendunt, they hang up fugitives, ſaith Tacitus, concerning the Germans; there is martiall law for ſuch, Heb. 10. 38, 39. as there is for ſkellums amongſt us.

With the workers of iniquity] They ſhall to Hell with the reſt of the wicked true, notwithſtanding their profeſſions and pretences of piety, whereunto they are perfect ſtrangers; Hypocrites are the free-holders of Hell, and other evill perſons are, as it were, Tenants to them; ſhall have their part with them, Mat. 24. 51.

But peace ſhall bee upon Iſrael] Peace ſhall bee upon them and mercy, Gal. 6. 16. The remnant of Iſrael ſhall not do iniquity, nor ſpeak lyes, neither ſhall a deceitfull Tongue bee found in their mouth, for they ſhall feed and lye down, and none ſhall make them afraid, Zeph. 3. 12.

PSAL. CXXVI.

VErſ. 1 When the Lord turned again] viz. From Babylon, and therefore that which ſome tranſlations have in the title, A Pſalm of David (which is not in the Hebrew) would bee left out; for it ſeemeth to have been penned by Ezra, or ſome Prophet of his time.

We were like them that dream] Tanta fuit liberationis admirabilitas, ſo admirable was the deliverance, that wee could hardly beleeve it; as fearing the certainty, and yet hoping the truth. Such a paſſion was upon Peter, when enlarged by the Angel, Act. 12. upon the Greeians, when ſet free by Flaminius, the Roman Generall; Meſias gaudium gaudium fuit, saith the Historian, quam quod universum hominum vaporem, &c. their joy was too big for their hearts, they scarce believed their own ears, when the Cryer proclaimed their liberty, but bad him say over that sweet word Liberty again; they also looked upon one another with wonderment, velut somnii vanam speciem, saith Livy. And such an ecstasy is the new convert in, as was Cyprian, Austin, Bernard, witnesse their own writings.

Lib. 33. Cyp. Epist. lib. 1. Aug. Confes. lib. 6. cap. 12. Gosc. in vit. Bernard.

Vers. 2 Then was our mouth filled with laughter] Wee laughed amain, and shrilled or shouted aloud, when wee found that it was vera non ficta, as Plato speaketh, not a dream, but a done thing, which, (before) wee held incredibile potius quam opinabile, incredible altogether.

Then said they among the Heathen] They who were wont to jear us, Psal. 137. 3. God can soon alter the case of his afflicted people. See Esth. 8. 17. with the Note.

The Lord hath done great things for them] Magnifica. So, Vere magnus est Deus Christianorum, the God of the Christians is a great God indeed, said Caloerius an Heathen, observing his works done for his people.

Vers. 3 The Lord hath done great things] q. d. Tis a shame then for us not to say so, much more; and, by an holy avarice, to take the praises out of their mouths, who are no sharers in it, but spectators only. Let the Redeemed of the Lord say so, speaking good of his name.

Vers. 4 Turn again our captivity, O Lord] Perfect what thou hast so happily begun for us.

As the streams in the South] i. e. Miraculously say some; as if thou shouldest cause rivers to run in dry and desert places: Or comfortably, as if thou shouldest refresh such hot parts with plenty of water. Or suddenly. The South is a dry Country where are few springs, but oft land-floods, caused by the showers of Heaven. The Jews at this day pray for a speedy rebuilding of their Temple. They cry altogether, Templum tuum brevi, valde cito, valde cito, in diebus nostris citissime nunc ædifica, Templum tuum brevi, that is, build thy Temple quickly, very quickly, in our dayes, &c. should not wee bee as earnest for the mysticall Temple, &c?

Buxt. de Synag. Jud. cap. 13.

Vers. 5 They that sow in tears] Whether Ministers (as some restrain the sense) who serve the Lord with many tears and temptations, Act. 20. 19. but see little fruit: Or others, who sow in the tears of affliction, and compunction for sin the cause thereof; his fecunda sine dubio messis indulgentiæ oritur, saith Arnobius, these shall certainly reap in joy, pardon of sin, Isa. 1. 16. power against it, (these troubled waters cure the soul, as the tears of Vine-branches cure the leprosie) increase of grace; the Lilly is sown in her own tears, saith Pliny, so is grace; the Olive is most fruitfull when it most distilleth; so here: These April-showres bring on May-flowers, and make the heart to bee like a watered Garden: Besides an accesse of glory; for they that weep with men shall laugh with Angels; their tears shall bee turned into triumphs, their sadnesse into gladnesse, their sighing into singing, their musing into musick, &c. See Mat. 5. 4. This, the Protomartyr foresaw, and therefore Bembus de St. Stephano.

Ibat ovans animis, & spe sua damna levabat.

Vers. 6 He that goeth forth and weepeth, &c.] Heb. He that going goeth, &c. which Luther interpreteth of temptations continued, and mutually succeeding one another; taking their turns upon a poor soul.

And weepeth] Going and weeping, and asking the way to Zion, with their faces thither-ward, Jer. 50. 4, 5. Some faces appear most orientally beautifull, when most instampt with sorrow.

Bearing precious seed] Such as are hope and faith in the truth of Gods promises. Some render it seed of acquisition, such as the poor seeds-man hath got, precio & pretio, by praying and paying dear for it. Some, bearing a Seed-basket, or seedlep.

Cunstrum Leo inde Bucer.

Shall doubtlesse come again with rejoycing] Only hee must have patience, Jam. 5. 7.

Bringing his sheaves with him] Or, after some, their handfulls, even grapes of gleaning, as Philpot the Martyr rendreth it. Then shall Abraham the good Mower, saith Another, bind us up into sheaves as pure corn and fill his bosom full with us, carrying us into the Lords barn, to make a joyfull Harvest in Heaven.

PSALM. CXXVII.

A Song of degrees for Solomon] As Pſal. 72. 1. Penned by David not long before his death; and left his Son Solomon, to teach him, that nothing can be gotten (or kept, no not Children begotten) but by Gods bleſſing. This laſt was a fit leſſon for Solomon, who by ſo many wives and Concubines, left but one only ſon that wee read of, and him none of the wiſeſt. Some render it. A Song of degrees of Solomon, making him the penman of it; yea Origen from this inſcription, entitleth Solomon to all the Songs of degrees; but that's not likely.

Lib. 5. περὶ ἀρχῶν Cap. 1.

Verſ. 1 Except the Lord build the houſe] Not the Fabrick only, but the family and the Government thereof; there is no good to bee done, if God ſet not to his Fiat, and ſay, Let it bee done; if hee blaſt, or not bleſs mens indeavours and policies, they are all but arena ſine calce, ſand without lime, they will not hang together, but like untempered Morter, fall aſunder. There is a curſe upon ſuch as Idolize themſelves, and kiſs their own hands, though they bee induſtrious, Jehoiakim for inſtances, Jer. 22.

οὐκ ἔστιν ἰσχὺς μὴ θεοῦ ἰσχὺν φέρειν· καὶ μηδὲν ἰσχύειν πάντως μηδὲν ἰσχὺν πόνου Naz.

Except the Lord keep the City, the watchman] Whether civill, or military: fruſtrà nititur, qui Deo non innititur. Politicians ſtand on their own heads (like Children) and ſhake their heeles againſt Heaven; but all in vain. Souldiers, ſome of them are ready to ſay with Ajax, I acknowledge no God but my ſword, &c. Such ſhall bee ſurely befooled and confuted; and Gods bleſſing declared to bee all in all.

Verſ. 2 It is vain for you to riſe up early] Diluculantes ſurgere, tandantes ſedere, to toil and moil in the World. It were to bee wiſhed, that this Niſi, niſi, fruſtrà, fruſtrà, were ever ſounding in the ears of worldlings, who will needs act upon their own principles; God is not in all their thoughts.

To eat the bread of ſorrows] i.e. Hardly gotten, or that men can ſcarce beteem themſelves, they are ſo miſerable and parſimonious; or bread eaten with carefulneſſe, as Ezek. 12. 18. certainly men may ſooner by their care adde a furlong to their ſorrow, than a cubit to their comfort.

For ſo hee giveth his beloved ſleep] Dilecto ſuo, to each of his beloved ones; not without an alluſion to Solomons other name, Jedidiah, Gods darling. To theſe hee giveth ſleep, extraordinary quiet, refreſhing ſleep (ſpelt with an Aleph quieſcent, which is not uſuall) that is, hee giveth wealth without labour, as to others labour without wealth, ſaith Kimchi, the world comes tumbling in upon them, as wee ſay, they have it quaſi per ſomnium (as Towns were ſaid to come into Timotheus his toiles whiles he ſlept) without anxiety, they break not their ſleep for the matter, but live by faith, and make a good living of it too.

Plut. Omnia neceſſaria benigniſſime Dominus quaſi per jocum largitur. Beza.

Verſ. 3 Lo children are an heritage of the Lord] This Solomon could not but be ſenſible of. See the title of this Pſalm; eſpecially, if by children are meant good children, as Prov. 18. 22. by a Wife is meant a good wife. And here the poor man that hath no inheritance otherwiſe, hath one from the Lord; for ſuch are oft full of children; neither may hee wiſh, as one graceleſſe man did, that God would keep ſuch his bleſſings to himſelf, for hee had too many of them.

Is his reward] That is, his free gift: and God will be their exceeding great reward, if by their Parents prayer and good education, they prove towardly, as the Lords heritage, and as arrows in the hand, &c.

Verſ. 4 As Arrows are in the hand of a mighty man] Heb. Of a Giant, who ſhooteth them with a courage, and is cunning at it. As clean and well-kept arrows. The ſimilitude importeth, that Children muſt have more in them than nature, for arrows are no arrows by growth, but by art: ſo they muſt bee ſuch Children, the kyndneſs of whoſe nature is refined and reformed, and made ſmooth by grace: and then they are cared for. As, if they prove otherwiſe, they are a ſingular heart-break to their poor Parents, who are ſeen to ſit under Elias his Juniper, wiſhing for death, and ſaying with Moſes, Numb. 11. 14 15. I am not able to bear all this love affliction, becauſe it is too heavy for mee. And if thou deal thus with mee, kill mee I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy ſight, and let mee not ſee my wretchedneſs.

So are children of the youth] Or, young ſons, or kids, ſpringlings, ſtriplings, vigo- tous and vigorous, able to bee a guard to their aged Parents against the children of violence, who seek to press in upon them at the door, as the Sodomites dealt by righteous Lot, (see verse 5.) besides the service they may do to the Commonwealth (as did the Horatii, and Curiatii) by their magnas heroicas valour and vertue.

Vers. 5 Happy is the man that hath his quiver] That is, his house full of them, so they bee good children: for else to bee childless is a mercy, it is ἀτυχὴς εὐτυχία, a blessed misery, saith Euripides; and Aristotle concludeth that πολυγονία is no blessing, unless it bee εὐγονία, that is, to have a numerous issue, unless they bee vertuous.

They shall not bee ashamed] Neither Father nor Children: se enim illi mutuo muniunt ac firmant, they help each other.

But they shall speak with their enemies] Periment, saith Tremellius, they shall foil them, and non-suite them.

PSALM CXXVIII.

Vers. 1 Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord] This Psalm is fitly subjoyned to the former, and it is, λόγος ἐπιθαλάμιος, a kind of wedding-sermon, written for the instruction and comfort of married couples, and shewing that Conjugium humanæ est divinæ Academiæ vitæ. And it is to bee observed, that here all men are spoken to as wedded; because this is the ordinary estate of most people. See 1 Cor. 7. 1, 2. At this day, every Jew is bound to marry about eighteen years of age or before twenty; else hee is accounted as one that liveth in sin; and how the Popish clergy, professing continency, have turned all places into so many Sodoms, who knoweth not?

And walketh in his wayes] The true reverentiall fear of God will easily form the heart to a right obedience: They that fear the Lord will keep his Covenant, Psal. 103. 13. with 18. and therefore was the Law delivered at first in that terrible manner.

Vers. 2 For thou shalt eat the labour of thy hands] That is, thou shalt reap and receive the sweet of thy sweat, whether it bee of the brow, or of the brain, according to the kind of thy calling. And although thou bee forced to live by the labour of thine hands (whence mans life is called the life of his hands) yet that shall bee no hinderance to thy happiness, but a furtherance of thine account.

Ps. 57. 10.

Happy shalt thou bee, and it shall bee well with thee] The Chaldee thus expoundeth it, Happy thou in this World; and good shall it bee unto thee in the World to come.

Vers. 3 Thy wife shall bee as a fruitfull vine] Full of bunches and clusters of rich ripe Grapes; so shee, of Children, and those vertuous, the little-ones hanging on her breasts, as Grapes on the Vine; the Elder as Olive-plants, straight, green, fresh and flourishing, Psal. 52. 9. legitimate also, as the Olive admitteth no other graft. Indeed the Olive set into the Vine yeeldeth both Grapes and Olives; whereby is represented the naturall affection that is betwixt the Mother and her Children. The Vine and the Olive are two of the best fruits, the one for chearing the heart, the other for clearing the face, Psal. 104. 15. the one for sweetness, the other for fatness, Judg. 9. 13. both together implying, that a great part of a mans temporal happiness consisteth in having a good Wife and Children. It is said of Sylla, that hee had been happy had hee never been so married: And Augustus his wish was (but all too late) Vtinam aut cælebs vixissem, aut orbus periissem, Oh that I had either lived single, or dyed childless.

Illum Rebelli-fæcundum.

Sueton.

By the sides of thy house] Where Vines are usually planted, that they may have the benefit of the Sun. The modest wife is domiperax, found at home, as Sarah in the Tent, not so the Harlot, Prov. 7. 12.

Thy Children like Olive-plants] See the Note before on this verse.

Round about thy Table] Making a most delectable inclosure.

Vers. 4 Behold, that thus shall the man be blessed, &c.] Behold, and that thus; i. e. Know it for a truth, and rest assured of the blessedness of married couples, whatsoever the Devill and his Agents (speaking basely of marriage) suggest to the contrary, so bee it they fear the Lord, for that is it that sweeteneth, and sanctifieth all estates of life whatsoever.

Vers. 5 The Lord shall bless thee out of Zion] viz. With spirituall benedictions.

Ephes.

Epheſ. 1. 3. and theſe are far better than all other that Heaven and Earth afford, Pſal. 134. 3.

And thou ſhalt ſee the good of Jeruſalem] i. e. The proſperity of the Church; without which all other comforts are to a good ſoul, but as ſo many Ichabods: A good Chriſtian injoyeth them not, but is even ſick at heart of the afflictions of Joſeph. Amos 6. 6.

Verſ. 6 Yea thou ſhalt ſee thy Childrens Children] A faithfull man ſhall abound with bleſſings. Prov. 28. 20. hee ſhall have all that heart can wiſh, or need require.

And peace upon Iſrael] Procured in part by thy piety and prayers.

PSAL. CXXIX.

VErſ. 1 Many a time] Or, Much, and long.

Have they] i. e. The Perſecutors that deſerve not a name. The rich man is not named (as Lazarus is) becauſe not worthy. They ſhall bee written in the Earth, Jer. 17. 13. Luk. 16.

Afflicted mee] i. e. The whole community of Saints; ſpoken of here in the ſingular, for their 1 Unity, 2 Paucity.

From my youth] The firſt that ever dyed, dyed for religion; ſo early came Martyrdome into the World.

May Iſrael now ſay] Who yet are promiſed peace, Pſal. 128. 6. but ſo was Joſiah, and yet he dyed in battel, 2 Chron. 34. 28. But the very God of peace had ſanctified him throughout, and ſo altered the property of his affliction, that it was ſubſervient to his ſalvation.

Verſ. 2 Many a time, &c.] Anadiplaſis ad exaggerationem, q. d. They have done it and done it again, but could never atchieve their deſign, viz. to ſupplant and eradicate mee, which might not bee. Oppugnarunt (non expugnarunt, however the Vulgar ſo rendreth here.) The Church is invincible. Athens took upon her of old to bee ſo, and Venice alate boaſteth the like: but time hath confuted the one, and may ſoon do the other; when the Church ſhall ſtand firm, becauſe founded on a Rock. More truly may it bee ſaid of it, than twas once of Troy,

Victa tamen vincis, everſaq; Troja reſurgis:
Obruet hoſtiles illa ruina domos. Ovid. de Ibi.

Verſ. 3 The plowers plowed upon my back] Which was never without ſome Croſs upon it, yea ſome plough paſſing over it. The Church is Gods Husbandry; and hee will bee ſure to plow his ſeverall; what ever becommeth of the wild waſte. She is his threſhing-flore, Iſa. 21. 10. and hath but little reſt or reſpite. Enemies are flailes to threſh off our huſks, files to brighten our graces, ploughs and harrows, without which wee ſhould bear but a very thin crop. Gods people do ſow in teares, and ſow the ſeed of prayer in the long furrows which thoſe plowers made on their backs; like as the Jews in their feaſts break their glaſſes, as Jeruſalem was broken.

They made long their furrows] Heb. Furrow; as if there were terminus pro multorum corpus. Here haply the Pſalmiſt alludeth to thoſe exquiſite torments wherewith many of the Martyrs were put, ſulcati fidiculis.

Verſ. 4 The Lord is righteous] That's a ruled caſe, and muſt bee held for a certain truth, whatever wee are, or our Perſecutors.

He hath cut aſunder the cords of the wicked] That is, their harneſs, their plough-traces (unus continuatur tropis Ruſticis) ſo that the plough is looſe, and the horſes at liberty: all their forces and deſigns are broken.

Verſ. 5 Let them all bee confounded, &c.] And if thoſe that hate Zion, how much more thoſe that hurt her with their virulent tongues, or violent hands?

Verſ. 6 Let them bee as the graſs, &c.] They are curſed with a witneſs whom the Holy Ghoſt thus curſeth, in ſuch emphaticall manner, in ſuch exquiſite tearms.

Verſ. 7 Wherewith the Mower filleth not his hand] As holding it not worth gathering in. Wicked men are uſeleſs creatures: as Stratonicus in Athenaeus ſaith, that the Hill Hemus was for eight months in the year very cold, and for the other four it was Winter.

Verſ. 8. Neither do they which go by ſay, &c.] As they uſe to do to harveſt men, Ruth 2. Chriſtianity is no enemy to curteſie; yet in ſome caſes, ſaith not, God ſpeed. 3 Joh.

PSAL. CXXX.

VErſ. 1 Out of the depths have I cryed unto thee] i. e. Ex portis ipſis deſperationis, from the very boſom and bottom of deſpair, cauſed through deepeſt ſenſe of ſin, and fear of wrath. One deep calleth to another, the depth of miſery to the depth of mercy. Baſil and Beza interpret it, Ex intimis cordis penetralibus, from the bottom of my heart, with all earneſtneſs and humility. Hee that is in the low pits and caves of the earth, ſeeth the ſtars in the firmament; ſo hee who is moſt low and lowly, ſeeth moſt of God, and is in beſt caſe to call upon him. As ſpices ſmell beſt, when beaten: and as frankincenſe maximè fragrat cum flagrat, is moſt odoriferous, when caſt into the fire: ſo do Gods afflicted pray beſt, when at the greateſt under, Iſa. 19. 22. & 26. 16. & 27. 6. Luther when hee was buffeted by the Devil at Coburgh, and in great affliction, ſaid to thoſe about him, Venite, in contemptum diaboli Pſalmum, de profundis, quatuor vocibus cantemus, come let us ſing that Pſalm, Out of the depths, &c. in derision of the Devill. And ſurely this Pſalm is a treaſury of great comfort to all in diſtreſs (reckoned therefore of old amongſt the ſeven Penitentiall) and is therefore ſacrilegiouſly by the Papiſts taken away from the living, and applyed only to the dead; for no other reaſon, I think, ſaith Beza, but becauſe it beginneth with Out of the Depths have I cryed, a poor ground for Purgatory, or for praying for the ſouls that are there, as Bellarmine makes it. Joh. Manlius. gen. 43.

Verſ. 2. Lord hear my voice.] Precum exauditio idem ſibi eſt precanda. Audience muſt be begged again and again, and if hee once prepare our heart, tis ſure that hee will cauſe his ear to hear, Pſal. 10. 17. as when wee bid our Children aſk this or that of us, it is becauſe wee mean to give it them.

Verſ. 3. If thou, Lord, ſhouldeſt mark iniquities] This and the next verſe contains, ſaith one, the ſumme of all the Scriptures. Twice hee here nameth the Lord, to deſcribe to take hold of him with both his hands. Extremity of Juſtice hee deprecateth, hee would not bee dealt with in rigour and rage. Extrema, ſi tuos, commoveris tuus ſum, Deus; Quid enim aliud dicerem? It is confeſſed I have deſerved the extremity of thy fury; but yet let mee talk with thee (as Jer. 12. 1.) or reaſon the caſe.

O Lord, who ſhall ſtand?] Stand in Judgement, as Pſal. 1. 5. and not fall under the weight of thy juſt wrath, which burneth as low as Hell it ſelf? How can any one eſcape the damnation of Hell, which is the juſt hire of the leaſt ſin, Rom. 6. 23. and the beſt mans life is fuller of ſins than the Firmament is of ſtars, or the furnace of ſparks? Hence that of an Ancient, Vehementem vitæ, quantumvis laudabilis, ſi, rectè ſcrutatorem judicium judicatur. Woe to the beſt man alive, ſhould hee be ſtrictly deale withall. Surely if his faults were but written in his forehead, it would make him pull his hat over his eyes.

Verſ. 4. But there is forgiveneſs with thee] This holds head above water, that we have to do with a forgiving God, Neh. 9. 31. none like him for that, Mic. 7. 18. For hee doth it naturally, Exod. 34. 6. abundantly, Iſa. 55. 7. conſtantly, as here, there is (ſtill is) forgiveneſs and propitiation with God; ſo Joh. 1. 27. the Lamb of God doth take away the ſins of the World; tis a perpetuall act, and ſhould be as a perpetuall preſence in our hearts.

That thou mayeſt bee feared] i. e. Sought unto, and ſerved. It is a ſpeech like that, Pſal. 65. 2. O thou that heareſt prayer, unto thee ſhall all fleſh come. If there were not forgiveneſs with God, no man would worſhip him from his heart, but flye from him as from a Tyrant. But a promiſe of pardon from a faithfull God maketh men to put themſelves into the hands of juſtice, in hope of mercy. Mr. Perkins expoundeth the words thus, In mercy thou pardoneſt the ſins of ſome, that thou mighteſt have ſome on earth to worſhip thee.

Verſ. 5. I wait for the Lord] I wait, and wait, viz. for deliverance out of miſery, verſ. 1. being aſſured of pardoning mercy. Feri, Domine, feri; à peccatis enim abſolutus ſum, ſaid Luther, ſtrike, Lord, while thou wilt, ſo long as my ſins are forgiven, I can bee of good comfort, I can wait, or want for a need.

In his word do I hope.] Of promiſe, that ground of hope unfailable, Rom. 5. 5. of faith unfeigned, 1 Tim. 1. 5.

Verſ.

Vers. 6 My soul waiteth for the Lord] Or, Watcheth for the Lord, Heb My soul to the Lord, an elipticall concise speech, importing strong affection, as doth also the following reduplication, Præ custodibus ad mane, præ custodibus ad mane.

I say more than they] Or, More than they that watch for the morning, wait for the morning; wherein they may sleep, which by night they might not do.

Vers. 7 Let Israel hope in the Lord] Hope and yet fear, as vers. 4. (with a filiall fear) fear, and yet hope.

Plenteous Redemption] Are our sins great? with God there is mercy, matchlesse mercy. Are our sins many? with God is plenteous redemption, multa redemptio; hee will multiply pardons, as wee multiply sins, Isa. 55. 7.

Vers. 8 And hee shall redeem Israel] By the value and vertue of Christs death, by his merit and spirit, 1 Cor. 6. 11.

PSAL. CXXXI.

VErs. 1 Lord, my heart is not haughty] Though anointed and appointed by thee to the Kingdome; yet I have not ambitiously aspired unto it, by seeking Sauls death, as his pickthanks perswaded him; nor do I now being possessed of it, proudly domineer (as is the manner of most Potentates) and tyrannize over my poor subjects; but with all modesty and humility (not minding high things) I do condescend to them of low estate, Rom. 12. 16. Now, in alto positum non alienum sapere, difficile est, & omnino insitatum; sed quanto insitatius, tanto gloriosius. It is both hard and happy not to bee puffed up with prosperity and preferment. Vespasian is said to have been the only one that was made better by being made Emperour. Buchols.

Nor mine eyes lofty] Pride sitteth and sheweth it self in the eyes as soon as in any part. Ut speculum oculus est artis, ita oculus est naturæ speculum.

Neither do I exercise my self in great matters] Heb. I walk not, non ambulo intra metas, I keep within my circle, within the compass of my calling; not troubling my self and others by my ambitious projects and practices, as Cleon did, Alcibiades, Cæsar Borgia, and others Ambitionists.

Or in things too high for mee] Heb. Wonderfull; high and hidden things, that pass my apprehension and which it behoveth mee, mirari potius quam rimari, to admire rather than to pry into. Arcana Dei sunt Arca Dei. The Bethshemites payed dear for peeping into the Ark. Phaeton is feigned by the Poets to have perished by taking upon him to rule the chariot of the Sun: and Bellerophon, by seeking to flye up to Heaven upon his Pegasus, to see what Jupiter did there.

Horat. lib. 4. Od. 11.

Vers. 2 Surely I have behaved] Heb. If I have not, &c. a deep asseveration, such as hath the force of an oath. Si non composui & sedavi.

And quieted my self] Heb. Stilled or made silent my soul; chiding it when discomposed or noisefull, as the Mother doth her weanling.

As a child that is weaned of his Mother] Who neither thinketh great things of himself, nor seeketh great things for himself, but is lowly and fellowly, Mat. 18. 4. innocent, and ingenuous, taking what his Mother giveth him, and resting in her love.

My soul is even as a weaned child] Who will not bee drawn to seek again, though never so fair and full-strutting a breast: So nor David, the worlds delight.

Vers. 3 Let Israel hope] See Psal. 130. 7.

PSAL. CXXXII.

VErs. 1 Lord, Remember David] Origen holdeth Solomon to have been penman of all these Songs of degrees, as hath been before noted. But as that is not likely, (see the titles of Psal. 122. & 124. & 131.) so diverse interpreters conceive that prayer hee made at the dedication of the Temple, because much of it is the same with that prayer hee made at the dedication of the Temple, 2 Chron. 6. 16, 41, 42. Here then hee prayeth God to remember David, that is (not his merits and ſuffrages, as the Monks would have it, but) the promiſes made unto him (for the which Solomon praiſed God as well as for the performance to himſelf, 2 Chron. 6. 10.) and his ſingular ſollicitude about the houſe and worſhip of God, which was ſo great, as that it affected, yea afflicted his ſpirit; whence it followeth here, and all his afflictions; for which it is, 2 Chron. 6. 42. the mercies or kindneſs of David.

ita ut dormire non potuit. Kimchi.

Verſ. 2. How he ſware unto the Lord] Out of the abundance of his affection, 1 Chron. 29. 3. See Pſal. 119. 106. he ſolemnly took God to witneſs: and this he did, ſay the Rabbines, at that time when he ſaw the puniſhing Angel, and was terrified.

Kimchi. Aben-Ezra.

And vowed to the mighty God of Jacob] Jacob is mentioned, ſay the Hebrews, Quia primò vovit, becauſe he firſt vowed to God, Gen. 28. 20. whence he is called, Pater votorum, the Father of vows.

Verſ. 3. Surely I will not come into the tabernacle of my houſe] i. e. Of my New-built houſe, 1 Chro. 15. 1. 2 Sam. 1. 2. Thoſe in Malachi were not ſo well-minded, chap. 1. 4.

Verſ. 4. I will not give ſleep to mine eyes] viz. With any good content; or, more than needs muſt.

Verſ. 5. Until I finde out a place for the Lord] The Jew-Doctors tell us, that as the earth is in the middle of the world, ſo is Judea in the middle of the earth, Jeruſalem in the middle of Judea, the Temple in the middle of Jeruſalem, and the Ark in the middle of the Temple.

An habitation] Heb. Habitations: haply becauſe the Temple conſiſted of three parts, or partitions.

Dicit eam in plurali. i. e. divinam præſentiam. R. Arama.

Verſ. 6. Lo we heard of it at Ephrata] At Bethlehem Ephrata, Davids Birth-place, there we heard of it long ſince by our Progenitours. Of it, that is, of the Ark, ſaith Chryſoſtom; of Gods reſting-place, ſaith Auſtin; of the place where Chriſt ſhould be born, ſaith Hierom; where the Temple ſhould be ſet, ſaith Aben-Ezra: where the Shechinah, or divine preſence ſhould reſide, ſay other Rabbines.

We found it in the fields of the wood] At Jeruſalem, ſay ſome; or at Kiriath-jearim, as others will have it. The Chaldee interpreteth it of the wood of Libanus, the place, ſaith he, where the Patriarchs worſhipped.

Verſ. 7. We will go into his Tabernacles] We will cheerfully and unanimouſly frequent his publick worſhips, in the place he hath pitched upon (called, his gates, and his Courts, Pſal. 100. 4.) ſaying, as verſ. 8, 9, 10, Επεσθω Θεῳ, follow God, was the old rule among the very Heathens.

We will worſhip at his footſtool] i. e. At his Ark, where hee uttered Oracles, and wrought miracles, &c. which yet was but his footſtool, to lift his people heaven-ward, Chriſt-ward, who was the truth of that type, the Ark, the Mercy-ſeat.

Verſ. 8. Ariſe O Lord into thy reſt] The place of thy reſt: for the Ark was tranſportative, till ſetled in Solomons Temple: ſo, till we come to Heaven, wee are in continual motion.

Thou and the Ark of thy ſtrength] The Ark in the Temple was the chiefeſt evidence of Gods preſence, and the moſt principal type of Chriſt, in whom the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelleth bodily. The word is Aron, which is put for a Coffin, Coffer, or Cheſt; Gen. 50. 20. 2 King. 12. 9. This ſheweth, that all the Counſels of God, all the love and favour of God, all that God accounteth precious, are treaſured up in Chriſt, Col. 2. 3. & 1. 13. Iſa. 42. 1. Heb. 10. 12.

Verſ. 9. Let thy Prieſts be cloathed with righteouſneſs] i. e. With Salvation, as verſ. 16. No ſurer ſign of Gods gracious preſence with a people, than a powerful Miniſtery, cloathed with inward purity and holineſs, repreſented by the holy Garments.

And let thy Saints ſhout for joy] i. e. Thoſe that are converted by ſuch a Miniſtery, and thoſe that are juſtified by faith have peace with God, and joy unſpeakable, full of glory.

Verſ. 10. For thy ſervant Davids ſake] For thy Covenants ſake made with him, and for thy Chriſts ſake, who is oft called David, as Hoſ. 3. ult. ſo for the Lords ſake, Dan. 9. 17.

Turn

Turn not away the face of thine anointed] Of thy Christ : defer not his coming, or deny not my request, as 1 King. 2. 16, 17, 20.

Verſ. 11. The Lord hath ſworn in truth] The Eternity of Iſrael cannot lye, 1 Sam. 15. 29. yet rendring our infirmity, he ſweareth and ſealeth to us.

Of the fruit of thy body] David was excellent at making the utmoſt of a Promiſe, at preſſing, and oppreſſing it, till he had expreſt the ſweetneſs out of it, Iſa. 66. 11. See how hee improveth Gods Promiſe, and worketh upon it, 1 Chron. 17. 23, 24, 25, 26. Solomon had learned to do the like.

Verſ. 12 If thy Children will keep my Covenant] Although Gods Covenant is free, yet is it delivered under certain conditions on our part to bee obſerved, which are as an Oar in a Boat, or Stern in a Ship, turning it this way or that, &c.

For ever more] For a long ſeaſon, and Chriſt, for all eternity.

Verſ. 13 For the Lord hath choſen Zion] Hee choſe it for his love, and loved it for his choice.

Verſ. 14 This is my reſt for ever] It was ſo becauſe God was pleaſed to make it ſo; hee reſted in his love, hee would ſeek no further, Zeph. 3. 17.

For I have deſired it] This alone makes the difference, as it alſo did betwixt Aarons rod, and the reſt that were laid with it.

Verſ. 15 I will abundantly bleſs her proviſion] Her ſtock and her ſtore, ſo that ſhe ſhall not want neceſſaries, which yet ſhee ſhall hunt for (that is, labour for) as the Hebrew word importeth, and know how ſhee comes by: therefore it is added Victico ejus ad ſatim benedicam. Trem.

I will ſatisfie her poor with bread] Dainties I will not promiſe them; a ſufficiency but not a ſuperfluity : poor they may be, but not deſtitute: bread they ſhall have, and of that, Gods plenty, as they ſay; enough to bring them to their Fathers houſe, where is bread enough. Let not therefore the poor Iſraelite fear to bring his offerings, or to diſfurniſh himſelf for Gods worſhip, &c.

Verſ. 16 I will alſo cloath her Prieſts, &c.] So that they ſhall ſave themſelves and thoſe that hear them, 1 Tim. 4. 16 Thus God anſwereth his peoples prayers both for temporalls and ſpiritualls : See verſ. 9. and that with an overplus of comfort; they ſhall ſhout aloud.

Verſ. 17 There will I make the horn of David to bud] A metaphor from thoſe living creatures, quorum ramoſa ſunt cornua, which have ſnags in their heads (as Deer have) which are unto them in ſtead of boughs. For horn, ſome read beam of David, confer Luk. 1. 78.

I have ordained a Lamp) i. e. A ſucceſſor (-- cui lampada tradat) and that a glorious one at length, Chriſt, who is αὐτόφως Light eſſentiall, Joh. 12. 46. Of Aſcanius the ſon of Aneas, and likewiſe of Tullus Hoſtilius, it is ſtoried, that light flames were ſeen about their heads, when they lay in their cradles, and that thereby was foreſignified, that they ſhould bee Kings.

Verſ. 18 His enemies will I cloath with ſhame] Shame ſhall bee the promotion of all ſuch fools as ſet againſt Chriſt and his people : yea they ſhall bee cloathed with it, ſo that it ſhall bee conſpicuous to all men.

But upon himſelf ſhall his Crown flouriſh] His royall Diadem, whereby hee is ſeparated and diſtinguiſhed from other men. Alexander dropt his Diadem once into the water, and becauſe hee who fet it out, put it on his own head whiles hee ſwam out with it, hee cut off his head. Our Edward the fourth hanged one for ſaying hee would make his Son owner of the Crown; though hee only meant his own houſe (having a Crown for the ſign) in Cheapſide. Nezer.

PSAL. CXXXIII.

Verſ. 1 Behold how good and how pleaſant it is] This, David is thought to have ſaid to the people, when after eight years unnaturall war, they came together to Hebron, to anoint him King over all Iſrael, 2 Sam. 5. Behold, bee affected with that happineſs of yours which no tongue can utter. Accipe quod ſentitur ante quam diſcitur, as Cyprian ſaith in another caſe.

How good and how pleaſant] Precious and profitable, ſweet and deleſtable, Ἀγαθὸν καὶ λαμπρόν, dainty and goodly, as Rev. 18. 14. Communion of Saints is the next happineſs upon earth, to communion with God.

For Brethren] Whether by Place, Race, or Grace, which last is the strongest tye; and should cause such an harmony of hearts as might resemble that concord and concent that shall bee in Heaven. The Thebans in their armies had a band of men they called The holy Band; consisting of such only as were joyned together in the bonds of love, as would live and dye together: these they made great account of, and esteemed the strength of their armies.

To dwell together] Heb. Even together, that is, even as God dwelleth with them, Psal. 132. to bee kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, Rom. 12. 10. to bee as those Primitive Christians were, Act. 2. of one heart, and of one soul. The number of two hath by the Heathens been accounted accursed; because it was the first that departed from Unity.

Vers. 2 It is like the precious ointment] This similitude setteth forth the pleasure and amanity of it; as the other (from the dew) the profit and commodity. -- Sic misceat utile dulci. This ointment was most rich (as made up of the chiefest spices, Exod. 30.) and very fragrant, refreshing the senses, not of Aaron only, but of all about him; so doth Christian unity and amity (that fruit of the Spirit) far beyond that common friendship so highly extolled by Cicero, and other Heathens, and is therefore here firly compared to that Non-such odoriferous ointment.

Upon the head, that ran down upon the beard] So the Spirit of grace, that oil of gladnesse, Psal. 45. 7.) poured out abundantly, even to a redundancy, upon Christ the head, runneth down upon all the members of his body mysticall, even to the meanest, so that they have grace for grace.

Vers. 3 As the dew of Hermon] Moisteneth and maketh fertil the Country of Bashan. Hermon is a very high hill ever covered with snow; whence ariseth a perpetuall vapour, the originall and fountain of dew, to all Jury.

And as the dew that descended] The spirituall dew dispensed from God in Sion, where hee is sincerely served.

For there the Lord commanded the blessing] A powerfull expression, highly commending brotherly love as a complexive blessing, and such as accompanieth salvation.

PSAL. CXXXIV.

VErs. 1 Behold, bless yee the Lord] This short Psalm (the last of the fifteen Graduals) is breve Sacerdotum speculum, saith an Expositour; a mirrour for Ministers, who are first excited by a Behold, as by the sounding of a trumpet, or the ringing of a Sermon-bell: And secondly, exhorted to praise God, and to pray unto him; whereunto if wee adde their teaching of Jacob Gods Judgements, whereof Moses mindeth them, Deut. 33. 10. what more can bee required of Archippus, to the fulfilling of his ministery? and if hee bee slack, hee must bee told of it, Col. 4. 17. yet with all due respect and reverence to his office, 1 Tim. 5. 1. And it were far better, if they would rouse up themselves with the wakefull Cock, and not keep sleepy centry in the Sanctuary.

All yee Servants of the Lord] Yee Priests and Levites, who are Gods Servants, but of a more than ordinary alloy, servants of noblest imployment about him. Such are all faithfull Ministers; each of them may say with Paul, Act. 27. 23. whose I am, and whom I serve.

Which by night stand in the house of the Lord] Keeping watch and ward there in your turns, Num. 58. 1, 2, &c. 1 Chron. 9. 33. The Rabbins say, that the High-Priest only sat in the Sanctuary (as did Eli, 1 Sam. 1.) the rest stood; as ready prest to do their office.

Vers. 2 Lift up your hands in the Sanctuary] Or, Lift up holy hands, as 1 Tim. 2. 8. One readeth it, out of the Hebrew, Lift up your hands, Sanctuary, that is, ye Sanctuary-men, sentinens pro consensu Hearts and hands must both up to Heaven, Lam. 3. 41. and God bee glorified both with spirits and bodies, which are the Lords, 1 Cor. 6. 20.

And bless the Lord] Like so many earth'y Angels; and as if yee were in Heaven already, say

Vers. 3 The Lord that made Heaven and Earth]. And therefore hath the blessing of of both lives in his hand to beſtow. See Num. 6. 24.

Bleſs thee out of Zion] They are bleſſings indeed that come out of Zion, choice, peculiar bleſſings, even above any that come out of Heaven and Earth. Compare Pſal. 128. 5. and the promiſe, Exod. 20. 24. In all places where I put the memory of my name, I will come unto thee and bleſs thee.

PSAL. CXXXV.

VErſ. 1 Praiſe yee the Lord, praiſe yee] Praiſe, praiſe, praiſe. When duties are thus inculcated, it noteth the neceſſity and excellency thereof, together with our dulneſs and backwardneſs thereunto.

O yee Servants of the Lord] See Pſal. 134. 1.

Verſ. 2 Yee that ſtand in the houſe] See Pſal. 134. 1.

In the Courts] Where the people alſo had a place, 2 Chron. 4. 9. and are required to bear a part in this heavenly Hallelujah.

Verſ. 3 Praiſe the Lord, for the Lord is good] ſcil. Originally, tranſcendently, effectively, hee is good, and doth good, Pſal. 119. 68. and is therefore to bee praiſed with mind, mouth, and practice.

For it is pleaſant] An angelicall exerciſe, and, to the ſpirituall-minded man, very delicious. To others indeed, who have no true notion of God but as of an enemy, it is but as muſick at funerals, or as the trumpet before a Judge, no comfort to the mourning wife, or guilty priſoner.

Verſ. 4 For the Lord hath choſen] Gods diſtinguiſhing grace ſhould make his elect lift up many an humble, joyfull, and thankfull heart to him.

And Iſrael for his peculiar treaſure] Such as hee maketh more reckoning of, than of all the World beſides. The Hebrew word here rendred peculiar treaſure, ſeemeth to ſignifie a Jewell made up of three precious ſtones, in form of a triangle. The Saints are Gods Jewels, Mal. 3. 17. his ornament, yea the beauty of his ornament, and that ſet in Majeſty, Ezek. 7. 20. his royall Diadem, Iſa. 62. 3.

Segnitiâ. Indè dici Segul, Grammatici vo luêre.

Verſ. 5 For I know that the Lord is great] As well as good, verſ. 3. This I beleeve and know, (Job. 6. 69.) ſaith the Pſalmiſt; and do therefore make it my practice to praiſe him.

And that our Lord is above all Gods] Whether they bee ſo deputed (as Magiſtrates) or reputed, as Idols.

Verſ. 6 Whatſoever the Lord pleaſed] This the Heathens did never ſeriouſly affirm of any their dunghill deities: ſure it is, that none of them could ſay, I know it to bee ſo. De diis utrum ſint, non audeo affirmare, ſaid one of their wiſe men.

Verſ. 7 Hee cauſeth the Vapours] Not Jupiter, but Jehovah (See Jer. 10. 13.) Hee is the right Nub cogæ, Maker of the Meteors, whether fiery, aiery, or watery, Job 26. 8, 9 & 28. 26, 27, & 37. 11, 15, 16. & 38. 9. See the Notes there.

Hee maketh lightenings for the Rain] Or, With the Rain, which is very ſtrange, viz. that fire and water ſhould mingle, and hard ſtones come out of the midſt of thin vapours.

Hee bringeth the winds out of his treaſuries] Or Cellars, Barr-houſes, where hee holdeth them cloſe priſoners, during his pleaſure. This the Philoſopher knew not, and thence it is that they are of ſo diverſe opinions about the winds. See Jer. 10. 13. 28, &c. & Job 37. throughout.

Verſ. 8 who ſmote the firſt-born of Egypt] And thereby rouſed up that ſtiffe rebell Pharaoh, who began now to open his eyes, as they ſay the blind mole doth, when the pangs of death are upon him; and to ſtretch out himſelf, as the crooked Serpent doth, when deadly wounded.

Verſ. 9 Who ſent tokens and wonders] Vocall wonders, Exod. 4. 8. to bee ſeen in many warning-pieces.

Verſ. 10 Who ſmote great Nations] Who, by their great ſins, had grievouſly polluted their land; and filled it with filth from one end to another, Ezra 9. 11.

And ſlew mighty Kings] Heb. Rosy, big, maſſie, lubbers, groſs of ſtature, fat and fat ſas, as the word ſignifieth.

Verſ. 11 Sihon King of Amorites] A Giant like Og.

And Og King of Baſhan] Of whom the Jews fable, that, being one of the antediluvian Giants, hee eſcaped the flood, by riding aſtride upon the Ark.

Vers. 12 And gave their lands for an heritage] Which hee might well do, as being the true Proprietary, and Paramount.

Vers. 13 Thy Name, O Lord, &c.] Else, O nos ingrates!

Vers. 14 For the Lord will judge his people] Judicabit, id est vindicabit, hee will preserve them, and provide for their welfare.

And hee will repent himself] This is, mutatio rei non Dei, effectus non affectus. Some render it, Hee will bee propitious; Others, hee will take comfort in his Servants. See Judges 10. 16.

Vers. 15, 16. The Idols of the Heathen] See Psal. 115. 4, 5, 6, &c.

Vers. 17 Neither is there any breath in their mouths] If they uttered Oracles, it was the Devil in them, and by them. As for those statues of Dædalus which are said to have moved, spoken, and run away if they were not tyed to a place, &c. it is either a fiction, or else to be attributed to causes externall and artificiall, as quicksilver, &c.

Aristot. Diod. Sic. Plato.

Vers. 18 They that make them, &c.] See Psal. 115. 8.

Vers. 19 Bless the Lord] And not an Idoll, Isa. 66. 3. as the Philistines did their Dagon, and as Papists still do their hee-Saints, and shee-Saints.

Vers. 20 Yee that fear the Lord] Yee devout Proselytes.

Vers. 21 Blessed bee the Lord out of Sion] There-hence hee blesseth, Psal. 134. 3. and there hee is to bee blessed.

Which dwelleth at Jerusalem] That was the seat of his royall residence, per inhabitationis gratiam, saith Austin, by the presence of his grace; who by his essence and power, is every where.

Ubicunque præsentiæ Deus hic ac ubique potentiæ.

PSAL. CXXXVI.

Vers. 1 O give thanks unto the Lord] This Psalm is by the Jews called Hallel gadol, the great Gratulatory. See Psal. 106. 1. 107. 1. 118. 1.

For his mercy endureth for ever] His Covenant-mercy, that precious Church-priviledge: this is perpetuall to his people, and should perpetually shine as a picture in our hearts. For which purpose this Psalm was appointed to bee daily sung in the old Church, by the Levites; 1 Chron. 16. 41.

Vers. 2 For his mercy endureth for ever] This is the foot or burthen of the whole song, neither is it any idle repetition, but a notable expression of the Saints unsatisfiableness in praising God for his never-failing mercy. These heavenly birds, having got a note, record it over and over. In the last Psalm, there are but six verses, yet twelve Hallelujahs.

Vers. 3 O give thanks to the Lord of Lords] That is to God the Son, saith Hieron. as by God of Gods, saith hee, in the former verse, is meant God the Father: who because they are no more but one God only, it is added

Vers. 4 To him who alone doth great wonders] Wondrous things the Creature may do, but not wonders; mira fed non miracula. God alone is the great Thaumaturgus, that is, Wonder-worker.

Vers. 5 To him that by wisdome, &c.] Singulari ingenio & summa indefessa, yet without toil, or toil. See Heb. 11. 10. with the Note.

Vers. 6 To him that stretched out the earth, &c.] A perpetuall mercy to all earthly Creatures, as is elsewhere set forth, Gen. 1. 9. Psal. 24. 1.

Vers. 7 To him that made great lights] Without which wee should have no more comfort of the air wee breath on than the Egyptians had in that three-dayes darkness. Now the Sun and Moon are called great Luminaries, not great stars or bodies (for the Sun is less than some stars, and the Moon is least of all) first, for the excellency of light which these two do more abundantly impart to the earth, and secondly, for the effects their work: the Sun by his access making all green and flourishing, and the contrary by his recess: the Moon by its various aspect causing humours and marrows to increase or decrease, &c.

Vers. 8 The Sun to rule by day] Gods providence is to direct the things he doth create, but his mercy is to preserve them.

therefore in no wise to have been worshipped.

Vers. 9 The Moon and stars to rule by night] For by day they all veil to the Sun; from whom also they borrow much of their light. The Moon hath her name in Hebrew from moisture, as refreshing the earth with her cool influences, and thrusting forth precious things therein, Deut. 33. 14.

Vers. 10 To him that smote Egypt] See Psal. 135. 8.

Vers. 11 And brought out Israel] viz. By that last plague; for the former would not do. God will have the better of his enemies, for the good of his people: for it is not fit that hee should lay down the bucklers first.

Vers. 12 And with a stretched-out arm] A metaphor from souldiers exercising their arms, with utmost might and sleight.

Vers. 13 To him which divided the red Sea] Into twelve severall parts, say the Jews, for the twelve Tribes to pass thorow.

Vers. 14 And made Israel to pass, &c.] It is many times hail with the Saints, when ill with the wicked. Abraham from the hill seeth Sodom on fire.

Vers. 15 But overthrew Pharaoh] Præcipitavit, pitcht him in headlong; having before paved a way for him. Subito tollitur qui diu tolerabatur.

Vers. 16 To him which led his people] As an horse that they should not stumble, Isa. 63. 13. as a Shepheard his sheep, providing for them so, as never was any Prince so served in his greatest pomp.

Vers. 17 To him which smote great Kings] Great, as those times accounted them, when every small City almost had her King: Canaan had thirty and more of them. Great also in regard of their stature and strength; for they were of the Giants race, Deut. 3. Amos 2.

Vers. 18 And slew famous Kings] Magnificos, sumptuosos, fastuosos, & arrogantes.

Vers. 19, 20.] See Psal. 135. 11. Sihons Country was afterwards called Decapolis, and the Metropolis of it Scythopolis, Joseph. de bel. l. 3. c. 2.

Vers. 21, 22. And gave] See Psal. 135. 12. & Josh. 12. 7. hee paid them well for their pains, after that hee had made use of their sword and service, against those sinners against their own souls.

Vers. 23. Who remembred us in our low estate] Still God helpeth those who are forsaken of their hopes, & vindicta gladium miserationis ei'te emolit, as Nicephorus saith.

Vers. 24 And hath redeemed us] Or, Broken us off, pulled us away, as by violence; for they would never else have loosed us. This is priori major misericordia, a greater mercy than the former, saith Kimchi; to redeem is more than to preserve.

Vers. 25 Who giveth food to all flesh] Food agreeable to their severall appetites, and temperaments, suitable and seasonable.

Vers. 26 O give thanks unto the God of Heaven] His mercy in providing Heaven for his people, is more than all the rest.

PSAL. CXXXVII.

VErs. 1 By the rivers of Babylon] Tigris & Euphrates; for the land of Shinar (where Babel was founded, and afterwards Babylon built) was, as most Geographers think, a part of the Garden of Eden, fruitfull beyond credulity: but to the poor captives all this was no comfort, when they remembred the desolations of their Country, and the loss of their former liberty. The bird of Paradise, they say, once taken and encaged, groaneth uncessantly, till shee dye.

There we sat down, yea we wept] Hee sitteth alone, and keepeth silence, because hee hath born it upon him, saith Jeremy of the Mourner, Lam. 3. 28. who is much in meditation, so were these bewailing bitterly their sin and misery, with their bowels sounding as an harp, Isa. 16. 2. where if one string bee touched, all the rest sound.

When wee remembred Zion] The former solemnities, the present desolations.

Vers. 2 Wee hanged our harps] Harps wee had, and knew how to handle them (the Jews were famous Artists, noted for their skill specially in Poetry, Musick, and Mathematicks) but wee had little mind to it as now the case stood with us; our Country lying desolate, our selves could not bee but disconsolate. Barbitos hic pariet habebis. Horat. lib. 3. Od. 26.

Verſ. 3 For there -- they required of us a ſong] ſcil. In diſdain and deriſion of our Religion, q. d. Will yee ſing no more holy ſongs in honour of your God? hath hee utterly caſt away all care of your wel-fare, and you the like of his ſervice? Have you never a black Sanctis to ſing us? or cannot you ſing care away, &c? where are your wonted ditties, the words of a ſong? Ebodum, bellos nobis illos veſtro Sionis modulos camillate.

Jezd.

And they that waſted us] Cumulatores noſtri, vel Conacumulatores noſtri, vel homines ejulatuum noſtrorum, they that made us howl ſinging, as Iſa. 52. 5. Or In ſuſpenſionibus noſtris, after that wee had hanged up our harps, as verſ. 2. τὸ ἀκροθίνιον πεντατάχ. λυπηρόν.

Iſocr.

Sing us one of the ſongs of Zion] Wherewith yee were wont to praiſe God. So Baltaſar abuſed the bowls of the Sanctuary. So the bloody-Perſecutors at Orleance, as they murthered the Proteſtants, required them to ſing, Judge and revenge my cauſe, O Lord; and have mercy on us Lord, &c.

Verſ. 4 Shall wee ſing the Lords ſong, &c?] No, for that were to prophane holy things; and as Nazianzen ſpeaketh, κωμῳδεῖν τὰ μυστήρια. And beſides, they had as much mind to bee merry then, and thus, as Sampſon had to play before the Philiſtines. Muſick in mourning is not more unſeaſonable, than unſavoury. When our Edward the third had the King of Scots and the French King both priſoners together here in England, hee held royall juſts, and feaſted them ſumptuouſly. After ſupper, perceiving the French King to bee ſad and penſive, hee deſired him to bee merry as others were. To whom the French King anſwered, as here, How ſhall wee ſing in a ſtrange Land? Quid nobis cum fabulis, cum riſu, ſaith Bernard, in hoc exilio, in hoc ergaſtulo, in hac valle lachrymarum? Let us caſt away carnall mirth, and groan earneſtly to bee cloathed upon with our houſe which is from Heaven, 2 Cor. 5. 2.

Verſ. 5 If I forget thee, O Jeruſalem] As I might ſeem to do, ſhould I herein gratifie theſe Idolaters; or otherwiſe obey them, rather than God. The Jews at this day, when they build an houſe, they are, ſay the Rabbines, to leave one part of it unfiniſhed, and lying rude, in remembrance that Jeruſalem and the Temple are at preſent deſolate. At leaſt they uſe to leave about a yard ſquare of the houſe unplaiſtered, on which they write, in great letters, this of the Pſalmiſt, If I forget Jeruſalem, &c. or elſe theſe words Zecher lechorban, that is, The memory of the deſolation.

Leo Modena of the rites of the Jews.

Let my right hand forget] Fiat abalienata atque emortua, Let it bee paralyticall and uſeleſs, unfit to touch the harp.

Verſ. 6 If I do not remember thee] Hi gemitus Sanctorum ſunt gemitus Spiritus ſancti, theſe are the very ſighs unutterable, that precede joys unſpeakable, and full of glory. Either our beds are ſoft, or our hearts hard, that can reſt when the Church is at unreſt, that feel not our Brethrens hard cords through our ſoft beds.

If I prefer not Jeruſalem above my chief joy] Heb. If I cauſe it not to aſcend above the head of my joy. Chriſt in his Ordinances muſt bee our chiefeſt comfort, overtopping all other; and devouring all diſcontents whatſoever.

Verſ. 7 Remember, O Lord the Children of Edom] Thoſe unbrotherly bitter enemies. The Jews call Romiſts, Edomites.

PSAL. CXXXVIII.

VErſ. 1 I will praiſe thee with my whole heart] Which no Hypocrite can do, though hee may pray in diſtreſs from the bottom of his heart. A grateſull manis a gracious man, viz. if hee come with a true heart, as the Apoſtle hath it, Heb. 10. 22.

Before the Gods will I ſing praiſe unto thee] That is, before Angels, who are preſent in holy aſſemblies, 1 Cor. 11. 10. (as was repreſented by thoſe Cherubines pictured in the Temple) as alſo before Princes and Potentates; ſee verſ. 4. Aben-Ezra. Kimchi.

Verſ. 2 I will worſhip toward thy holy Temple] Whereſoever I am, the face of my ſoul ſhall turn, like the needle of a Diall, by ſacred inſtinct, towards thee in the Ark of thy preſence, in the ſon of thy love. Abbot.

For thy loving kindneſs, and for thy truth] For thy grace and truth which come by Jeſus Chriſt: the Ark and Mercy-ſeat were never ſundred. Gods loving kindneſs in Chriſt moved him to promiſe, his truth binds him to perform, and hence our happineſs.

For thou haſt magnified thy Word above all thy Name] Or, Thou haſt magnified thy name in all thy Words. Or, Thou haſt magnified above all things thy Name by thy Word; that is, Thou haſt got thee a very great name, by fulfilling thy promiſes; and by ſetting on thy Word with power.

Verſ. 3 In the day when I cryed, &c.] This hee worthily celebrateth as a ſingular favour, a badge of grace, Pſal. 66. 18. and pledge of glory, Act. 2. 21.

And ſtrengthenedſt mee with ſtrength in my ſoul] With ſtrength in the inward man, Epheſ. 3. 16, 20. with ſpirituall mettal, with ſupporting grace, keeping head above water: My body is weak, my ſoul is well, ſaid that dying Saint. I am as full of comfort as heart can hold, ſaid a certain Martyr. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the new ſupplies of the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt, Phil. 1. 19. the joy of the Lord is ſtrengthening, Neh. 8. 10. ἐπιχορηγία.

Verſ. 4 All the Kings of the earth ſhall praiſe thee] Such of them as ſhall read theſe Pſalms of my compoſing: or otherwiſe ſhall hear of thy gracious dealing with mee, according to thy promiſe. Such alſo as ſhall hereafter bee converted to the faith; for though Not many mighty, not many noble are called, 1 Cor. 1. 26. yet ſome are, and theſe ſhine in the Church, like ſtars of the firſt magnitude.

Verſ. 5 Yea they ſhall ſing in the wayes of the Lord] As having taſted the excellencie of the comforts of godlineſs (far ſurpaſſing thoſe of the Crown and Scepter) and felt the power of Gods Word ſubduing them to the obedience of faith, whereby they come to rule with God, to bee faithfull with his Saints, and to ſing their ſongs.

Verſ. 6 Though the Lord bee high, &c.] Even the high and lofty one that inhabiteth eternity, Iſa. 57. 15. See on Pſal. 113. 6, 7.

Yet hath hee reſpect unto the lowly] This maketh that Ancient cry out, Videte magnum miraculum, See here a great miracle; God is on high: thou liſteſt thy ſelf up, and he flieth from thee; thou boweſt thy ſelf down, and hee deſcendeth unto thee. Low things hee looketh cloſe upon, that he may raiſe them higher; lofty things he knoweth a far off, that he may cruſh them down lower. The proud Phariſee preſſed as near God as he could; the poor Publican not daring to do ſo, ſtood a loof off; yet was God far from the Phariſee, near to the Publican. The Lord Chriſt is a door to Heaven, but a low door: hee who will enter in thereby, humiliet ſe oportet, ut ſano capite intrare contingat, ſaith Auſtin hee muſt needs ſtoop to ſave his head-peece. Aug. de Temp. Aug. in Johan.

But the proud hee knoweth a far off] As not vouchſafing to come anear ſuch loathſome lepers. For pride is like a great ſwelling in the body, apt to putrifie, break, and run with loathſome and foul matter. Hence God ſtands off from ſuch, as odious and abominable; hee cannot abide the ſight of them; Superbos à cælo longè propellit, as the Chaldee here paraphraſeth, he driveth the proud far enough off from Heaven, yea hee thruſteth them into Hell, to their Father Luciſer, that King of all the children of pride, as Leviathan is called, Job 41. 34.

Verſ. 7 Though I walk in the midſt of trouble] Even in the vale of the ſhadow of death, ſo that I ſeem little different from a dead man.

Thou wilt revive mee] That is, reſtore mee from ſo great a death, as 2 Cor. 1. 10. Thou

Thou shalt stretch forth thine hand] Thou shalt interpose thy help betwixt mee and them, and save mee harmless; as the Poets feign their Gods did those whom they favoured. Thou shalt strike them with thy left hand, and save mee with thy right: so Themistius senseth it.

Vers. 8 The Lord will perfect that which concerneth mee] Hee will not do his business to the halves, leave it in the midst, but carry it on to a consummation, and lay the top-stone of grace: this I am well assured of. See Phil. 1. 6. Only I must pray, and do my part, having an eye still to Gods everlasting mercy in Christ.

Forsake not the works of thine own hands] Look upon the wounds of thine hands, and forsake not the works of thine hands, prayed Queen Elizabeth. And Luthers usuall prayer was, Confirm, O God, in us that thou hast wrought, and perfect the work that thou hast begun in us, to thy glory: So bee it. Though the good work of grace bee begun in us, yet wee can neither persevere in that grace, nor bring it forth to act, without new grace: Even as trees, though they bee fitted to bear fruit, yet without the influence of the heavens, they cannot put forth that fitnesse in fruit, &c.

PSAL. CXXXIX.

A Psalm of David] There is not in all the five books of Psalms, so notable a one as this (saith Aben-Ezra) concerning the wayes of God, and the workings of conscience. It was penned, saith the Syriack Interpreter, upon occasion of Shimei's railing upon him for a bloody man, and a Belialist, 2 Sam. 16. Here therefore hee purgeth himself by an appeal to God; and delivereth up his false-accusers to Gods just judgement, vers. 19.

Vers. 1 O Lord thou hast searched mee and known mee] Even mine heart and reins (Jer. 17. 10.) hast thou searched as with lights, (Zeph. 1. 12.) by an exact scrutiny, by a soul-searching inquisition, whereby thou art come to know mee thorough and thorough: Not only Mee naturall, as vers. 15, 16. but also Mee civil and morall, as verse 2, 3, &c. neither stayeth thy knowledge in the porch or lobbies (my words and wayes) but passeth into the presence, yea privy-Chamber: for Vers. 2 Thou knowest my down-sitting, and mine up-rising] All my postures, gestures, practices, sive sedeam, sive surgam, whether I sit, stand, walk, lye; thou searchest and knowest all. Some search, but know not; thou dost both: thine eyes behold, thine eye-lids try the Children of men, Psal. 11. 4. See the Note there.

Thou understandest my thoughts] Heb. My familiar thoughts, such as I am delighted in, voluntatem meam, sanus vendor it, my wills others. propinquitatem meam, my nearnesse, and that afar off, even from Heaven, being intimus meus mihi intimior, not so far from mee as the bark is from the tree, the skin from the flesh, or the flesh from the bones.

Afar off] Eminus, à longe præcurristi, antequam moveantur, saith Chrisostome; thou knowest my thoughts before I have conceived them, my thoughts in Posse, from all eternity]: so great is thy sagacity and perspicacity. As a man that knoweth what roots hee hath in his Garden, though there bee not a flower appearing, yet hee can say, when the Spring comes, this and this will come up: so here; God knows our whole frame, our Principles, &c.

Vers. 3 Thou compassest my path] Or, Thou winnowest, if there bee any chaff or trash, thou wilt make it flye; thou art at both ends of all my works, and enterprizes, both by day and by night, Perdiurnè & pernox. Neither art thou only at my fingers ends, but at my tongues end too.

Vers. 4 For there is not a word in my tongue] Though not yet uttered, or but whispered only.

Thou knowest it altogether] Every tittle of it; thou understandest the language of mens hearts.

Vers. 5 Thou hast beset mee behind and before] As a beast that is pursued, as an enemy that is begirt and invironed. And lest I should think by some means to make escape, (as David did from Saul and his Host, by a providence, 1 Sam. 23. 27. as Hannibal did from the Romans by a stratagem.)

Thou hast laid thine hand upon mee] As my surety, so that I am thy prisoner, and cannot stir a foot from thee.

Vers.

Verſ. 6 Such knowledge is too wonderfull for mee] I can hardly conceive of this thine omniſcience, and omnipreſence, but am ready to meaſure thee by my ſelf, and according to mine own module. And indeed, for a creature to beleeve the infinite Attributes of God, hee is never able to do it thoroughly, without ſupernaturall grace.

It is high, I cannot attain unto it] Sith it far exceedeth the reach of reaſon, and is much above my capacity and underſtanding. I ſtand at gaze, and am aſtoniſhed, and that is the neareſt that I a poor finite foolish creature can come to ſo infinite a wiſdome. It was therefore a good ſpeech of them who being asked what God was? answered, Si ſcirem, Deus eſſem, If I knew that, I ſhould be a God.

Verſ. 7 Whither ſhall I go from thy Spirit?] Here he argueth Gods omniſcience from his omnipreſence; and this the Heathens alſo had heard of, as appeareth by their Jovis omnia plena; and --quaſcunque accedtis ad aras

Sub Jove ſcimus te eſſe, &c.

Empedocles could ſay, that God is a circle, whoſe center is every where, whoſe circumference is no where. They could tell us that God is the ſoul of the World: and that as the ſoul is tota in toto, & tota in qualibet parte, ſo is hee: that his eye is in every corner, &c. to which purpoſe they ſo pourtraied their goddeſs Minerva, that which way ſoever one caſt his eye, ſhee always beheld him. But theſe divine notions they might have by tradition from the Patriarches: and whether they beleeved themſelves in theſe and the like ſayings, is much to bee doubted.

Or whither ſhall I flee from thy preſence?] Surely no whither: they that attempt it, do but as the fiſh which ſwimmeth to the length of the line, with an hook in the mouth.

Verſ. 8 If I aſcend up into Heaven thou art there] That's thy proper place, and there Ariſtotle in his book of the World ad Alexandrum affirmeth that God is only eſſentialiter & actu. This was to proclaim himſelf an arrant Atheiſt: for God filleth all places, and is comprehended of no place, being totally preſent, wheresoever preſent: for wee muſt not conceive that God is commenſurable by the place, as if hee were partly here, and partly elſewhere, but every where, all-preſent.

Verſ. 9 If I take the wings of the morning] The morning light is diffuſed in an inſtant all the whole walk over. If I could flye never ſo ſwiftly from one end of the Heaven to the other, ſaith David, I ſhould bee never the neare. This is a poetical expreſſion.

And dwell in the uttermoſt parts of the Sea] Or of the Weſt, whither the Sunſetting is ſaid to haſten, and hide himſelf. The Syriack and Arabick have it, If I take the wings of the Eagle and dwell, &c. And of the Eagle they write, that when ſhee would change her feathers, ſhee falleth down into the ſea.

Verſ. 10 Even there ſhall thy hand lead mee] i. e. Thy Power and Providence ſhall diſpoſe of mee. I ſhall flee but from thy hand, to thy hand, as guilty Jonas did.

Verſ. 11 The darkneſs ſhall cover mee] The Hebrew phraſe is taken from Kraits that lyes aſquat, ſaith Diodat, Nolle latere mendax, ſed non Deum. The guilty conſcience ſharketh up and down for comfort, but getteth none.

Verſ. 12 Yea the darkneſs hideth not] Heb. Darkeneth not from thee, becauſe thine eyes are fiery, Rev. 1. 14. ſuch as need no outward light: they are more light and radiant than the Sun in his ſtrength.

The darkneſs and the light, &c.] Deo obſcura lucent, quæ ad præſentem, Hominem ſpectant. ſaith an Ancient: Night will convert it ſelf into noon before God: and ſilence prove a ſpeaking evidence.

Verſ. 13 For thou haſt poſſeſſed my reins] The ſeat of mine affections. Thoughts kindle affections, and theſe cauſe thoughts to boil: they are cauſes one of another, and both well known to God. For who poſſeſſeth lands or houſes, but he that hath the right title and roome thereof, ſaith an Expoſitour?

Thou haſt covered mee in my Mothers womb] Bee not from thine all-ſeeing eye thought ſo dark a place, and ſo private a ſecrecie.

Verſ. 14 I will praiſe thee, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made] Or, I am terribly diſtinguiſhed, ſaith Montanus; neither can I wonder enough at thy workmanship. The greatest miracle in the World is man; in whose very body (how much more in his soul?) are miracles enow (betwixt head and feet) to fill a volume. Austin complaineth that men much wonder at high mountains of the earth, huge waves of the Sea, deep falls of rivers, the vastnes of the Ocean, the motions of the stars, & relinquunt seipsos nec mirantur, but wonder not at all at their wonderfull selves. Galen, a prophane Physician, writing of the excellent parts of mans body, and comming to speak of the double motion of the lungs, could not chuse but sing an hymn to that God, whosoever hee were, that was author of so excellent and admirable a peece of work.

And that my soul knoweth right well] That is, so well, as to draw hearty praises from mee to my Maker. But for any exact insight, hear Solomon; As thou knowest not what is the way of the spirit, nor how the bones do grow in the womb of her that is with child: even so thou knowest not the works of God, who maketh all. Eccles. 11. 5. Some read the words thus, Thy works are wonderfull, and so is my soul which knoweth right well. q. d. my rationall and intelligent soul is an admirable peece indeed. Nothing in the World, saith one, is so well-worthy to bee wondred at as man, nothing in man, as his soul.

Vers. 15 My substance was not hid from mee] Ossatio mea, id est ossium & nervorum compages, the structure of my bones and joynts. But was not hee a wise man (and yet wise enough otherwise) who being asked upon his death-bed what his soul was? seriously answered, that hee knew not well; but hee thought it was a great bone in the middle of his body?

Was not hid from thee] For thou hast both the names and number of every part, to a nerve or an artery; Aquinas saith, that at the Resurrection, the bodies of the Saints shall bee so clear and transparent, that all the veins, humours, nerves, and bowels shall bee seen, as in a glass. Tis sure, that they are so to God, when first formed in the womb.

When I was made in secret] That is, in the womb of my Mother. As curious workmen, when they have some choice peece in hand, they perfect it in private, and then bring it forth to light, for men to gaze at: so here.

And curiously wrought] Variegatus, & quasi acu pictus, Embroidered and wrought as with the needle; whence man is called a Microcosm, or little World. Bodinus observeth, that there are three regions within mans body (besides all that is seen without) answerable to those three regions of the World, Elementary, Etherial, and Celestial. His entrails and whatsoever is under his heart resemble the Elementary region, wherin only there is Generation and Corruption. The heart and vitals that are divided from those entrails by the Diaphragma, resemble the Etherealt Region: as the brain doth the heavenly, which consisteth of intelligible creatures.

In the lowest parts of the earth] That is, in my Mothers womb, as before. See Ephes. 4. 9. The Syriack interpreteth it (but not so well) when I shall dye, and be buried, and my bones turned to ashes, yet thou shalt know them.

Vers. 16 Thine eyes did see my substance] Golmi, id est fœtum conglutinatum ante formationem membrorum, saith Kimchi; when I was but an Embryo, or hardly so much. Dispexit Deus membra calicis, & patinæ, saith Austin, how much more of man? The word signifieth my wound-up or wrought-up mass.

And in thy book all my members are written] A metaphor from curious workmen, that do all by the book, or by a modell set before them, that nothing may bee deficient, or done amiss. Had God left out an eye in his common-place book, saith One, thou hadst wanted it.

Which in Continuance] In process of time, and by degrees.

When as yet there was none of them] But all was a rude lump. This is a great secret of nature, and to bee modestly spoken of.

How precious also are thy thoughts unto mee] i. e. The thoughts of thy wisdome, power, and goodnes, clearly shining in these wondrous works of thine: it does my heart good to think and speak of them.

How great is the summe of them] viz. Of my works, and of thy thoughts thereon. I cannot count them, much less comprehend them. To blame are such as trouble not their heads at all about these matters. Surely when the Lord made man's head with so many closures and outworks to his brain, the fear of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] vended it for some precious treasure. Many locks and keys argue the price of the Jewell they are to keep; and many papers wrapping a token within them, the use of that token.

Vers. 18 If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand] q. d. They are infinite and innumerable. Archimedes that great Mathematician bragged, that hee could number all the sands in the habitable and inhabitable World, but no man ever believed him. See 1 Sam. 13. 5. 2 Sam. 17. 11. Psal. 78. 27.

when I awake, I am still with thee] Still taken up with some holy contemplation of thy works, and wisdome. These thoughts I fall asleep with, and these I awake with. As I rake up my fire ore night, so I finde it in the morning.

Vers. 19 Surely thou wilt slay the wicked] Those that traduce and slander mee for an Hypocrite and a Belialist. Some render it, O that thou wouldest slay them! in as much as they hate mee for my zeal, and forwardness to turn the wheel of Justice over them, and to give them their due and condign punishment; for, for mine own part, I cannot abide them, but bid them Avaunt, with Depart from mee, yee bloody men] Yee that dare to destroy so goodly a peece of Gods handywork as man is above described to bee. See Gen. 9. 6. Oh yee that seek to double undo mee; first by detraction and then by deadly practice. See Ezek. 22. 9. In thee are men that carry tales to shed blood.

Vers. 20 For they speak against thee wickedly] Inasmuch as they speak against mee; Tua causa agitur mea causa, said Charles the fifth Emperour to Johan. Pfingius, who complained hee had been wronged by the Duke of Saxony; so saith God to every David. This Luther knew, and therefore wrot thus to Melanthon, Causa ut sit magna, magnus est actor, & auctor ejus; neque enim nostra est. The cause is Christs, and hee will see to it and us. Moses told the people that their murmurings were not against him, but against the Lord, Exod. 16. 8. As unskilfull hunters, shooting at wild beasts, kill a man sometimes; so whilst men shoot at Christians, they hit Christ.

And thine enemies take thy name in vain] Whilst they would despoil thee of thine omnipresence, omnipotence, &c. casting thee into a dishonourable mould as it were, and having base and bald conceits and speeches of thee and thine. Kimchi interpreteth it of Hereticks, those false friends, but true enemies to God, of whom they make great boasts, as did the Gnosticks, Manichees, Novatians, and lately the Swenkfeldians (who stiled themselves the Confessours of the Glory of Christ) and many of our modern Sectaries.

Vers. 21 Do not I hate them, O Lord] And therefore hate them because they hate thee? This the Hebrews understand of Hereticks and Apostates. See a like zeal in that Angel of Ephesus, Rev. 2. 2.

And am not I grieved] Or, irked, made ready to vomit at (as at some loathsome spectacle) fretted, vext.

Vers. 22 I hate them with a perfect hatred] That is, unfeignedly, and with a sound heart (saith one) for this only cause, that they are workers of iniquity. It was said of Annas, hee hated a Tyrant, not Tyranny, and of Crassus hee hated avaricious man, not covetousness. It may as truly bee said of an Hypocrite, Hee hates sinners, not sin; those hee nourisheth, those hee censureth. Davids was none such, and yet, as something mistrusting his own heart, hee thinks good to adde, Vers. 23 Search me O God, and know my heart] Look into every corner and cranny, and see whether it bee not so as I say, viz. that I hate wicked men mortally for their wickedness: and for no self-respect have I thus cast down the gauntlet of defiance unto them, and bidden them battell. Wee should not rest (saith a Reverend man) in our hearts voice, nor accept its deceitfull applause. But as once Joshuah seeing the Angel examined him, Art thou one of us, or one of our adversaries? so should wee deal in this case, beg of God (who is to be as much feared in his mercies, as his judgements) to search us, and try us throughly, as here: this is a sure sign of sincerity, void of all guile and deceit.

Vers. 24 And see if there be any wicked way in mee] Heb. Any way of pain, or grief, or, of perdition, or destruction, any course of sin that is grievous to God or man. As Saint Austin allowes not of any wicked desire, so he allows not of any wicked thought, that is not disgraded if not extinguished, amongst the grosser sins. Sin (saith one) is to the soul, as the plague or Horror is, it is continually cast out. The good heart admireth not the ornaments of any sin. Sin may cleave to it, as dross to silver, but it entreth not into the frame and constitution it is not wrought into the temper of a good man at once; there is no such story of wickedness to be found in him, no such evill heart of unbelief as to depart away from the living God, Heb. 3. 12. There is no time wherein hee cannot say, as Psal. 27. 8. Pray for us: for we trust we have a good conscience in all things, willing to please God.

And lead me in the way everlasting] Heb. In the way of eternity, id est of antiquity, that good old way, Jer. 6. 16. traced by Adam, Abraham, Moses, &c. and that leadeth to Heaven. Rid my heart of those remnants of Hypocrisie, and help mee to perfect holiness in the fear of God, 2 Cor. 7. 1.

PSAL. CXL.

VErs. 1 Deliver mee, O Lord, from the evill man] Made of malice, in which is steeped the venom of all vices.

Preserve mee from the violent man] Adam of violences, who vulture-like, (Levit. 17. 10.) liveth by rapine. Such were Saul and his Sycophants.

Vers. 2 which imagine mischiefs in their heart] Where the Devil worketh night and day as a mintman, as a Smith in his forge, or an Artificer in his shop. A godly man is said to have right thoughts, Prov. 12. 5. and that his desires are only good, chap. 11. 23. An evill man is called a man of wicked devices, Prov. 12. 2. & 14, 17. being ingeniosi nequam, wittily wicked, as it was once said of C. Curio the Roman Lawyer.

Cæcerunt prælia. q. d. sunt tanquam tubæ belli.

They are gathered together for war] Heb. They gather wars, as Serpents gather poison to vomit out at others.

Vers. 3 They have sharpened their tongues like a Serpent] Which by reason of his sharp tongue, striketh more deeply.

Adders poison] Venenum Psyados. R. Salomon readeth Spiders poison; others, Aspes, Vipers. Malice turneth men into Serpents, saith Chrysostom.

Vers. 4 Keep mee] Who are thus sought and set for; but thou canst rescue mee.

To over-throw my goings] Præcipitare, to hurl mee down head-long.

Vers. 5 The proud have hid a snare, &c.] They are restless to ruine mee, adding all kind of craft to their cruelty.

Vers. 6 I said unto the Lord] Danger drove David home to God; as hug hens do little Children, to their Parents.

Vers. 9 In the day of battel] Heb. Of covering for battel. David never had any with Saul, but declined it.

Vers. 8 Grant not O Lord, &c.] For if they should but overcome compare, Masters of their desires, they would bee intolerably insolent, so as to say, Our high hand, and not the Lord hath done all this, Deut. 32. 27.

Vers. 9 As for the head] The chieftain, the ring-leader, Doeg or Saul himself. Or thus, Let mischief cover the heads of my besiegers. Let it fall upon their pates, as Psal. 7. Similitudo est a sacrificiis, quorum capita averruncantur.

Vers. 10 Let burning coals fall upon them] Grossi grossa accumula. Hot sum cum vota quam vaticinia.

Vers. 11 Let not an evill speaker] Heb. A tongue of evenge, wherewith Perseus proclaimeth up four and twenty leveral sins: a world of wickedness, St. James calleth it, chap. 3.

Evill shall hunt the violent man] This Angel of death shall have him into Hell, saith the Chaldee. Of the black birds excrements a snare is made to catch him. C. Marius was slain with the sword that made others bleed. Tyrannis pereunt quos genuere, &c. Tyrants perish by those vices that raised them. Gods Judgements against sinners are fetched from themselves, as a foul sin with an inward scab from her own body.

Vers. 12 I know] For I have a promise for it, and that infallible.

Vers. 13 Shall give thanks] [illegible]

PSAL. CXLI.

Vers. 1 Lord I cry unto thee] No distress or danger, how great soever, shall stifle my faith, or stop my mouth; but make mee more earnest, and my prayers like strong streams in narrow straits, shall bear down all before them.

Make haste unto mee] Lest help come too late.

Vers. 2 Let my prayer bee set forth before thee as incense] Faithfull prayer is ἀνάβασις τοῦ νοῦ (saith Damascen) the ascension of the heart to God. In this incense how many sweet spices are burned together by the fire of faith, as humility, hope, love, &c? all which come up for a memoriall before God: and the Saints (as Manoahs Angel) ascend up in the flame, and do wonderously, Judg. 13. 19, 20. whilst their pillars of smoak are perfumed with myrrhe and frankincense, with all powders of the spice-Merchant, Cant. 3. 6. that is, with the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ, Heb. 9. 24. those sweet odours poured into the prayers of Saints, Rev. 5. 8. & 8. 4. for want whereof the incense of the wicked is abomination, Isa. 1. 13. as stinking of the hand that offereth it. Dam. de fide. Act. 10. 4.

As the evening Sacrifice] The sacrificium jugε, that was offered every morning and evening, Exod. 29. 39. Numb. 28. 4. in reference to that immaculate Lamb of God, slain from the beginning, for an offering and a sweet smelling savour, Ephes. 5. 2. Chrysostom telleth us, that the Greek Church made use of this Psalm in their evening-Liturgie.

Vers. 3 Set a Watch, O Lord, before my mouth] Orat pro patientiâ; saith One, here hee prayeth for patience; lest by giving himself leave to over-talk, hee make the matter much worse. The best patience long tryed, and hard put to't, may miscarry, to its cost.

Keep the door of my lips] That it move not creaking, and complaining as on rusty hinges, for want of the oil of joy and gladness. David had somewhat to do with his tongue, as wee see, Psal. 39. 1. 3. and when hee had carted the Ark, how untowardly spake hee, as if the fault were more in God than himself, that there was such a breach made in Uzzah, 1 Chron. 15. 2? It was but need therefore thus to pray. Dal pro Deiseth per Apocopen poeticam.

Vers. 4 Incline not my heart] Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. For the better ordering of his words, therefore hee prayeth, not to be delivered up to Satan, and to his own hearts lust (as hee was, 1 Chron 21. 1. with 2 Sam. 24. 1.) for God tempteth no man, but the Devill and his own concupiscence, Jam. 1. 13, 14. but to bee bent the better way by Gods over-powering efficacious grace, and to bee stablished with his free Spirit.

To practise wicked works] The Vulgar rendreth it, ad excusandas excusationes in peccatis, to frame excuse for mine offences: but that, when I have over-talkt, I may confess and forsake, and so find mercy. Gnalal significat operari cum occasione pravitatis, causa.

And let mee not eat of their dainties] Their murthering morsels of iniquity, or their sid-bits and baites, whereby Sauls courtiers sought to insnare him. The Chaldee expoundeth it of their songs at banquets.

Vers. 5 Let the Righteous smite mee, &c.] In case I do offend in word or deed, let mee never want a faithfull reprover, who may smite mee as with a hammer (so the word signifieth) reprove mee sharply, Prov. 23. 35. Zech. 13. 5. Tit. 1. 13. cuttingly, as the Apostles word importeth, yet mildly and lovingly, Gal. 6. 1. Prov. 9. 8. & 19. 25. & 25. 12. with soft words, but hard arguments. ἀποτόμως.

It shall bee a kindnesse] David thought the better of Nathan for so roundly reproving him, 2 Sam. 12. and made him of his Councell, 1 King. 1. Peter thought the better of Paul for dealing so plainly with him at Antioch, Gal. 2. and maketh honourable mention of him, and his writings, 2 Pet. 3. 'Tis said of Gerson (that great Chancellour of Paris, tam valde ex aliis temporis lateribus, quam ex ipsis aliorum fratrum & charitativa redarguerentur, hee rejoyced in nothing so much as in a friendly reprehension: great pity it was that none bestowed a chiding on him for being so active against John Hus and Hierom of Prague, at the councill of Constance. Of Queen Anne Bullen, it is reported, that shee was not only willing to bee admonished, but required her Chaplains freely and plainly to tell her of whatsoever was amiss. Her Daughter Queen Elizabeth was well pleased with Mr. Dierings plain dealing, who told her in a Sermon that before shee was Tongues ends, but now Tongues lengths In vita Joh. Gerson. Mr. Clark's Martyrolog. p. 78.

juvenca, as an untamed Heifer: and speaking of the disorders of the times, These things are so, said hee, and you sit still, and do nothing, &c.

It shall bee an excellent oil] Heb. A head-oil, such as they poured on their friends heads, and that was of the best.

Which shall not break my head] My heart it may. Or, Let him not make it fail my head, let him not cease to do mee this good office daily; I shall count it a courtesie, and requite it with my best prayers for him, in his greatest necessity.

For yet my prayer also shall bee in their calamity] I will not curse them for their good counsell, raile at them for reproving mee, or insult over them in misery as justly met withall; but pray for them, and prize them as my best friends.

Vers. 6 When their Judges are overthrown] As I like just reprehensions, so I suffer unjust Persecutions from the Grandees of the Nation, who shall shortly bee dejected from their dignity, and dashed as it were against the rocks. And then

They shall hear my words] The common people that have been seduced by their evil Rulers to think the worst of mee, shall bee brought to a right understanding of things, and undeceived: so that they shall set by those words of mine that they have vilipended and sleighted.

Vers. 7 Our bones are scattered at the graves mouth] i. e. I and my company are in a dying condition, free among the dead; yea, if taken wee should be put to most cruel deaths, hewn in peeces, or pulled limbmeal, and left unburied; and our dead bodies mangled by a barbarous inhumanity, as wood-cleavers make the shivers flye hither and thither. This is the perillous case of mee, and my partisans.

Non una & simplici morte sententi sunt.

Vers. 8 But mine eyes are unto thee] Afflictions to the Saints are tanquam scala & ala, to mount them to God.

Leave not my soul destitute] Ne exinanias, make not bare my soul viz. of thy protection.

Vers. 9 Keep mee from the snare, &c.] See Psal. 140. 5.

Vers. 10 Let the wicked fall] Metaphora a piscibus, saith Tremellius, as fishes in casting-nets, Isa. 19. 8.

Whilest that I withall escape] The Righteous is delivered out of trouble, and the wicked commeth in his stead; Prov. 11. 8. It appeareth at length that simple honesty is the best policie, and wicked policy the greatest simplicity, and most self-destructive.

PSAL. CXLII.

When hee was in the cave] scil. Of Engedi, 1 Sam. 24. Loquitur in spelunca, sed prophetice in Christo, saith Hilary.

Vers. 1 I cryed unto the Lord with my voice] scil. Of my heart, and more with my mind than mouth: for if hee had been heard, hee had been taken by the enemy. Thus Moses cryed, but uttered nothing, Exod. 14. 15. Erit vocis silentio, ut verbo clamaret. Thus Christ cryed, Heb. 5. 7.

Vers. 2 I powred out my complaint] Heb. My supplication.

I shewed before him] Plainly and plentifully, how my danger increased to a very crisis, as one expresseth it.

Vers. 3 When my spirit was over-whelmed within mee] Or, covered over, with grief, as the Greek expoundeth it.

Then thou knewest my path] scil. That I neither fretted nor fainted. Or, thou knewest how to make a way to escape, 1 Cor. 10. 13. The Lord knoweth how to deliver his, 2 Pet. 2. 9.

Vers. 4 I looked on my right hand] Not a man would appear for mee. Nemo ad opem, ad ultionem, miseris plerumque amicus. Nullis fidus nisi malis.

Vers. 5 I cryed unto thee, O Lord] Trusted unto as my last refuge, in the fail of all outward comforts, Zeph. 3. 12. they are an afflicted poor people, and being so, they trust in the Name of the Lord.

Vers. 6 For I am brought very low] Exhausted and drained, utterly wasted, quite destitute of help, any way.

Vers. 7 Bring my soul out of prison] Viz. Out of this distressed condition, as one expresseth it, or rather, out of this life, which is to mee more troublesome than if in prison.

The

The Righteous ſhall compaſs mee about] Heb. Shall Crown mee: that is, ſhall in circle mee, as wondring at thy goodneſs in my deliverance: or they ſhall ſet the Crown on mine head, as the Saints do likewiſe upon Chriſts head (Cant. 3. 11.) to whom this Pſalm may bee fitly applyed all along, as aboveſaid.

PSAL. CXLIII.

VErſ. 1 Hear my prayer, O Lord] Hee prayeth once and again for audience: and would have God to hear him with both ears. Thus hee prayed (ſaith the Greek title of this Pſalm) when his ſon Abſolom was up in armes againſt him: and it may ſeem ſo, by the next words. De fuga ab Abſolom. R. O. Ind. Chron.

Verſ. 2 And enter not into Judgement with thy Servant] This is ſingulare ſuffragium, ſiquæ uſquam in ſacris literis extat (ſaith Beza) an excellent ſentence as any is in all the Bible, ſaying the ſame that St. Paul doth, Rom. 3. 24. that Juſtification is by faith alone, and not by works. David would not bee dealt with in ſtrictneſs of juſtice. Lord go not to law with mee, ſo ſome render it: Go not into the Judgement-hall, ſo the Chaldee. All St. Pauls care was, that when hee was ſought for by Gods Juſtice, hee might bee found in Chriſt, not having his own righteouſneſs which is of the law, &c. Phil. 3. 9. The beſt Lamb ſhould bee ſlaughtered, except the Ram had been ſacrificed, that Iſaac might bee ſaved. Woe to the life of man, ſaith an Ancient, though never ſo commendable, if it ſhould have Judgement without mercy; if there bee not an ἐπιείκεια to moderate that ἀκριβοδικαιον, the ſeverity of utmoſt right. We read of a certain Dutch Divine, who being to dye was full of fears and doubts. And when ſome ſaid to him, you have been ſo active and faithfull, why ſhould you fear? Oh ſaid he, the Judgement of man and the Judgement of God are different. Sordet in conſpectu Judicis, &c.

Verſ. 3 For the enemy hath perſecuted my ſoul] Quaſi rabiferali percuſſu, hee hath raged unreaſonably. The utmoſt of a danger is to bee related before the Lord in prayer, and to bee acknowledged after wee are delivered out of it, by way of thankfulneſs.

Verſ. 4 Therefore is my ſpirit over-whelmed] Gods deareſt Children have their paſſions: againſt that ſtoicall apathie. A ſheep bitten by a Dog is no leſſe ſenſible of the pain thereof than a Swine is; though hee make not ſuch an outcry.

Verſ. 5 I remember the dayes of old] Wherein I was delivered from the Lion and the beat; yea from the hand of all mine enemies, and from the hand of Saul, Pſal. 18. title. More than this, Sæcula antiquitus prætrita recolo, I run over, and ruminate all the ancient monuments of thy mercy to the Patriarches and others: ſith all that is written was written for our inſtruction, that wee through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope, Rom. 15. 4. See Pſal. 77. 4, 6.

Verſ. 6 I ſtretch forth my hands unto thee] As a poor beggar for an alms. Beggery here is not the eaſieſt and pooreſt trade, but the hardeſt and richeſt of all other.

My ſoul thirſteth after thee] And is therefore a fit ſubject for thy Spirit of Grace and comfort to bee poured upon, Iſa. 44. 3. & 55. 1.

Verſ. 7 Hear mee ſpeedily] A very patheticall prayer uttered in many words to like purpoſe, as the manner is, in extreme danger.

My ſpirit faileth] I am ready to ſink and to ſwoon. Thus David knew God hath a great care that the Spirit fail not before him, and the ſoules which he hath made, Iſa. 57. 16. When Bezoard-ſtone is beaten, wee ſee that none of it bee loſt; not ſo when ordinary ſpices: ſo here, for ordinary ſpirits God cares not much what becometh of them, as hee doth of the choice ſpirits of his people.

Verſ. 8 Cauſe mee to hear — in the morning] Mane, id eſt maturè, ſoon as may be, or (at leaſt) as is meet, make mee to hear of joy and gladneſs, ſpeak comfort to my conſcience, and help to my afflicted condition.

Verſ. 9 Deliver mee, O Lord, from mine enemies] Deliverance from enemies is a fruit of our friendſhip with God.

Verſ. 10 Teach mee to do thy will] Orat nunc pro ſalute animæ, ut ante pro ſalute corporis, ſaith Kimchi. Now hee prayeth for his ſoules health, and would bee as well delivered from his corruptions within, as from his enemies without. Lord ſave mee from that naughty man my self, said an Ancient.

Thy Spirit is good] The fruit of it is in all goodnesse, and righteousnesse, and truth, Ephes. 5. 9. and it is the Spirit only that quickeneth, Joh. 6. 63. by purging out the drosse that is in us, 1 Pet. 1. 22. setting us to work, Ezek. 36. 27. helping our infirmities, Rom. 8. 26. stirring us up to holy duties, partly by immediate motions, and partly by the ministry of the word made effectuall, 1 Pet. 1. 2. & 2 Thes. 2. 13. And lastly sanctifying the offering up both of our selves and of our services to God, as the Altar sanctifieth the gift, Rom. 15. 16. Cyrill gathereth from this Text, that the good Spirit is God, because none is good but God, Lead me the land of uprightnesse] Or, On even ground, as Isa. 26. 7, 10. Psal. 26. 12. Conduct me to the right land, i. e. Heaven.

Per viam planam & æquam.

Vers. 11 Quicken me O Lord] Who am no better than a living carcass, a walking sepulcher of my self.

Bring my soul out of trouble] I can bring it in, but thou only canst bring it out.

Vers. 12 Cut off mine enemies] Because not so much mine as thine, and those also implacable and irrecoverable. Elsewhere hee saith, Slay them not, lest my people forget. See the Note there.

For I am thy Servant] See Psal. 116. 16. with the Note.

PSAL. CXLIV.

A Psalm of David] The Greek addeth, Against Goliah: And the Chaldee for the hurtfull sword, vers. 10. hath Goliahs sword.

Blessed bee the Lord my strength] See Psal. 18. 1. and observe how this Psalm suiteth with that.

Which teacheth my hands] Used to the hook and harp, and not to the sword and spear: but God hath apted and abled them to feats of armes, and war-like exploits. It is God that giveth skill and success, saith Solomon, Prov. 8. wisdome and ability, saith Daniel, chap. 2. And as in the spirituall warfare, so here, our weapons are mighty through God, 2 Cor. 10. 4. who promiseth that no weapon formed against his people shall prosper, Isa. 54. 17.

Genebr.

Vers. 2 My goodnesse and my fortresse] See Psal. 18. 2. with the Notes, His epithetis & elogiis ubiquitus Deum, saith an Interpreter.

ἀεὶ τὸ παρὸν βαρύ. Thucyd.

Who subdueth my people under mee] This is the work of God and not of Kingcraft, to make men good subjects, who are naturally discontented at the present government, bee it never so good, and apt to rebell.

Vers. 3 Lord, what is man?] What am I that thou shouldest do all this for mee? or, what is the strongest man alive, when such a Giant as Goliah so suddenly and easily is slain by mee?

That thou makest account of him?] Tantus tantillus, & tales saith a Father.

Vers. 4 Man is like to vanity] See Psal. 39. 6. & 62. 9. Adam Abelo compar est, Adam is Abels mate.

His dayes are as a shadow] Which is a meer privation, and hath no subsistence at all.

ἐκ τῆς μηχανῆς.

Vers. 5 Bow thy Heavens, O Lord] Come to my help suddainly and seasonably, as it were out of an Engine.

Touch the Mountains] These high and haughty enemies of mine, do thou but lightly touch them, and it shall suffice, they shall soon burn, and bee turned into smoke: as the mountains that are thunder-struck.

Vers. 6 Cast forth lightening and scatter them] All this was done according to Davids desire, Psal. 18. 13, 14. God sometimes answereth his suitors, ad cardinem desiderii: and saith unto them, Bee it unto you even as you will. This is a wonderfull condescension.

Vers. 7 Send thine hand from above] Heb. Hands, both hands, all thy whole power; for I need it.

Vers. 8 Whose mouth speaketh vanity] They keep touch no further than will serve their own turns.

Their right hand is a right hand of falshood] No strength they give their hands upon it that they will keep promise.

Manlius

Multa domi fiunt quæ prodire nolunt,
Nulla fides est in pectore.

Vers. 9 I will sing a new song.] Upon the receipt of any new mercy, like as in a lottery, at every new prize drawn, the trumpet soundeth.

Vers. 10 It is he that giveth salvation (or victory) to kings.] Ferdinand, King of Arragon, sending his son against the Florentines, thus bespake him: Victoria mihi credo, non hominum disciplinæ aut industriæ comparatam, sed Dei O. M. beneficio, qui arbitrio. Deum igitur imprimis cole, in eum confide, a quo tuus victoriæ author tam prosperæ quæq; provenere ambigere nefas est, &c. Believe me, son, victories are not gotten by art or industry, but given of God. Balth. Exter. Val. Max. Christian. p. 516.

Who deliverest David his servant.] All Kings are Gods servants for the common good of mankinde, saith Plutarch; but David by a speciality. Plut. πρὸς ἡγεμόνα ἀπαίδευτον.

From the hurtfull sword.] Of Goliah, saith the Chaldee; and of all his other enemies: for (as it was said of Queen Elizabeth) hee swam to the Crown thorough a Sea of sorrows, and might rather marvell that hee was, than muse that hee should not bee, were it not that Gods holy hand had protected him beyond expectation.

Vers. 11 Rid me and deliver me.] Hee repeateth his former petition, vers. 8. for an utter riddance of those ill members that stood in the way of Israels welfare; and broke off Davids new song or Psalmody, vers. 9.

Vers. 12 That our sons may bee as plants, &c.] As young plants, fair and flourishing.

That our Daughters may bee as corner stones, &c.] Tall and trim, comely of person, and costly-arrayed; resembling the polished-pillars at Palace-gates. Tremellius rendreth the last words of this verse, fiat structura Templi, may bee the building of the Temple, that is, may bee such living stones as may bee used to the building and polishing of Gods Church; that wee may altogether grow up to an holy Temple in the Lord, Ephes. 2. 21. & 4. 12, 13. For indeed what can better preserve Jacob from confusion, or his face from waxing pale, than to see his Children, the work of Gods hands, framed and fitted for Gods building. This maketh religious parents to sanctifie Gods name (as here) even to sanctifie the holy one, and with singular incouragement, from the God of Israel, Isa. 29. 22, 23.

Vers. 13 That our garners] Heb. Our corners: i. e. that every corner of our houses may bee filled with precious and pleasant riches.

That our sheep] Fœta multiplicata, mille cuplantes, myriadificantes.

Vers. 14 Nor going out] viz. To encounter the enemy, or to bee led into captivity.

No complaining] No out-cries but Harvest-homes.

Vers. 15 Happy is the people] That hath such a confluence of outward comforts. In Hezekiahs dayes only it was so, say the Rabbines, peace, plenty, and posterity. The Syriack rendreth it question-wise, Is not the people happy that is in such a case? No: not except they have God to boot: as if they have, they are happy howsoever, Deut. 33. 29. ut vita carnis anima est, ita beatitudo hominis Deus, saith Austin.

PSAL. CXLVI.

DAvids Psalm of praise] Heb. Davids praise or hymn, well worthy, saith learned Beza, to bee made use of by all men for a rule and pattern of praising God. It is one of those Psalms that are artificially made up after the order of the Alphabet: and so highly prized by the Rabbines, that they doubt not to promise heaven to him who shall thrice every day pray over the Psalms, ordine quo sunt. Perfectum illius rationalis cultus exemplum. Beza. Kimchi. R. Arama.

Vers. 1 I will extoll thee, O God my King, &c.] O Christ the King of Kings, whose Vasall I profess my self; as did afterwards also those three great Christian Emperours, Constantine, Valentinian, and Theodosius.

Vers. 2 Every day will I blesse thee.] No day shall pass over my head without a morning and evening sacrifice: besides what is more upon all emergent occasions. The Jews have above an hundred Benedictions which they are used to say over every day: and one among the rest, for the benefit of Evacuation: if I were a Heathen (Quod pace tua dixerim a Heathen) I would do as a Nightingall but once I am sure I shall do. In Eccles.

do? I will praise my Maker, and never cease to do it. I exhort also all men to do the like.

Vers. 3 Great is the Lord] See his greatness set forth by Moses, Deut. 10. 17. & valde gravis ad laudandum] viz. According to his excellent greatnesse, Psal. 150. 2. which yet cannot bee.

And his greatness is unsearchable] Tantum recedit quantum capitur, saith Nazianzen. Hee is above all name, all notion, all parallel in nature: we can see but his back-parts and live; wee need see no more that wee may live.

Vers. 4 One Generation shall praise thy works to another] Gods praises are many, and mans life short, and one Generation succeedeth another: let them relate Gods wonderfull works one to another; and so perpetuate his praises to all posterity.

Vers. 5 I will speak of the glorious honour] Or, I will meditate of the glory of the honour of thy magnificence. I will discourse of those high and honourable conceptions that I have of thee, which yet words (how wide soever) are too weak to utter, such is thy transcendent excellencie, and surpassing glory.

And of thy wondrous works] Wherein thou art in some sort to bee seen, as the beams of the Sun are made visible by reflection; and letters, being refracted and broken, in a pair of spectacles, are made legible to a dim eye.

Vers. 6 And men shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts] Those that will not talk of thy bounty, shall bee made to say, O the severity of God!

Vers. 7 They shall abundantly utter] Eructi abunt, as a fountain casteth out waters plentifully and constantly: so shall those that are like-minded to mee abundantly and artificially (even with songs) set forth thy goodness and faithfulness, saying, and singing, Beza. Vers. 8 The Lord is gracious, &c.] See Psal. 86. 5, 15. & 103. 8.

Slow to anger, and of great mercy] De quo plane possis ambigere sit ne ad irascendum tardior, an ad parcendum promptior.

Vers. 9 The Lord is good to all] And of this hee hath not left himself without witness, Act. 14. 17.

And his tender mercies are over all his works] Holding the whole Creation together, which else (by reason of the curse for mans sin, hurling confusion over the World) would long since have been shattered, and dissipated.

Vers. 10 All thy works shall praise thee] i. e. Minister matter of thy praise.

And thy Saints shall bless thee] viz. Upon that account. If it were not for a few Saints on earth, God should lose his glory here, in great part.

Vers. 11 They shall speak of the glory] That Kingdome of the Saints of the most high, which is far beyond the Grandeur, and splendour of all the four great Monarchies, as is to bee seen, Dan. 7. 27.

Vers. 12 To make known to the sons of men] This is the end why the Church is collected, and the Gospell preached. God aimeth at his own glory in all: as well hee may, sith hee hath none higher than himself, to whom to have respect.

Vers. 13 Thy Kingdome is an everlasting Kingdome] It cannot bee over-turned (that's comfortable to all Christs subjects) as other flourishing Kingdomes are, which have their times and their turns, their rise and their ruine. Alexanders Kingdome continued but twelve years only; and fell with him: so did Tamberlains greatness.

Vers. 14 The Lord upholdeth all that fall] None of his subjects can fall below his holding-hand, his sweet supportance.

And raiseth up all those that are bowed down] Either with the burden of sin, or misery in any kind. Alphonsus King of Arragon is famous for helping with his own hand one of his subjects out of a ditch. Of Queen Elizabeth it is recorded to her eternall praise that shee hated (no lesse than did Mithridates) such as sought to crush vertue forlaken of fortune. Christ breaketh not the broken reed, but upholdeth it; hee quencheth not the smoking wick, but cherisheth it.

Vers. 15 The eyes of all wait upon thee] Heb. Look up with hope to this great houshold-keeper of the World. The Elephant is said to turn up the head (being to-ward heaven) when hee comes to feed. The young Ravens cry to God for food,

And ſatisfieſt the deſire] Or, Of thy good pleaſure thou ſatisfieſt.

Verſ. 17 The Lord is righteous in all his wayes] This wee muſt hold for an undoubted truth; though wee ſee not alwayes the reaſon of his proceedings. Sinfull men dare to reprehend oft-times what they do not comprehend.

Verſ. 18. The Lord is nigh unto all thoſe, &c.] Hee is ever at hand to hear and help his faithfull ſuters and ſuppliants: theſe have the royalty of his ear, free acceſs, ſure ſucceſs.

To all that call upon him in truth] That draw neer with a true heart, in full aſſurance of faith, having their hearts ſprinkled from an evill conſcience, and their bodies waſhed with pure water, Heb. 10. 22.

Verſ. 19 Hee will fulfill the deſire, &c.] Or, The will, the pleaſure. Hence that bold requeſt of Luther, Fiat voluntas mea. Let my will bee done. But then hee addeth, Mea Domine, quia tua, my will becauſe thine, and no otherwiſe. They that do the will of God, ſhall have their own will of God. See 1 Joh. 3. 22. The King can deny you nothing. Beneplacitum.

Verſ. 20 The Lord preſerveth all them that love him] See Pſal. 91. 14, 15, 16. with the Notes.

But all the wicked] That love not God, but their baſe luſts.

Verſ. 21 My mouth ſhall ſpeak, &c.] This he had oft before promiſed; but ingageth again, that hee may not ſtart back.

And let all fleſh] But eſpecially men, good men: for high words beſeem not a fool. But it well becommeth the Saints, to bee thankfull; nec ſervire Deo ſolum ſed & adulari, as an Ancient ſpeaketh. Tertull.

PSAL. CXLVI.

VErſ. 1 Praiſe the Lord, O my ſoul] See Pſal. 103. 1.

Verſ. 2 While I live, I will praiſe the Lord] George Carpenter, the Bavarian Martyr, being deſired by ſome godly brethren, that when hee was burning in the fire hee would give them ſome ſign of his conſtancy, anſwered, Let this bee a ſure ſign unto you of my faith and perſeverance in the truth, quod uſque dum os aperire, aut certe hiſcere licebit, that ſo long as I am able to hold open my mouth, or to whiſper, I will never ceaſe to praiſe God, and to profeſs his truth. Id quod & feci, ſaith mine Author, that which alſo hee did; and ſo did many other Martyrs beſides. Sculter. Annal. dec. 2. p. 116

While I have my being] Either in this world, or in the next: for then alſo, and much more, I ſhall praiſe God.

Verſ. 3 Put not your truſt in Princes] But in God alone; this being a principall peece of his praiſe: it is a kind of ſetting the Crown on his head. See Judg. 9. 15. The word rendred Princes, ſignifieth liberall, bountifull ones, ἐυεργέτας, ſo Princes would bee accounted; but there's no truſting to them without God, or againſt him.

Nor in the ſon of man] The arm of fleſh. See Pſa. 118. 8, 9.

In whom there is no help] For themſelves, ſaith Aben-Ezra; much leſs for others.

Verſ. 4 His breath goeth forth] It is but in his noſtrills at beſt; every moment ready to puff out: ceaſe from him therefore, Iſa. 2. Man, ſay the Rabbines, is but a bladder full of air, which can ſtand on no ground: but prickt with a pin, it ſhriveleth to nothing. Man, ſaith a Father, is nothing elſe but Soul and Soil, breath and body; a puff of wind the one, a pile of duſt the other, no ſolidity in either. Nazianz.

He returneth to his earth] Of which he was made, and to which hee is condemned, Gen 3. and upon which hee hath too much ſet his affections, being totus terrenus, and ſo the ſooner forfeiteth all. It was therefore good counſell that One once gave to a great man, who had ſhewed him his ſtately houſe and pleaſant Gardens. You had need make ſure of Heaven, my Lord, or elſe, when you dye, you will bee a very great loſer. But this, few Princes think of; which made the Spaniſh Prier ſay, there were but few Princes in Hell; for why? there were but few in all.

In that very day his thoughts periſh] His golden thoughts, his whole ſtring of them.

irrita diſſiunt, come to juſt nothing. Princes may haply have in their heads whole Common-wealths, and the affairs of many Kingdomes; as Alexander had, and Tamberlan, who dyed of an ague in the midſt of his great preparations for the conqueſt of the Greek Empire. Or, his thoughts [ad alios benefaciendos, as Aben-Ezra expoundeth it) of doing thee and others good, theſe fall to the ground with him. Great mens words are like dead mens ſhooes, ſaith one; hee may go barefoot that waiteth for them. Wherefore

Verſ. 5 Happy is hee that hath the God of Jacob for his help] Sith hee is the King immortall, all-powerfull, as verſ. 6. and no leſs willing, ſith hee is a God in Covenant.

Whoſe hope is in the Lord his God] This is a well-grounded hope indeed, and ſuch as will not drag after a man. The Leper beleeved Chriſts power, Lord if thou wilt, thou canſt make mee clean. Martha beleeved his will to raiſe her dead Brother, but doubted of his power; ſith hee had now been four dayes in the grave. Hee that is confident of both, is upon ſure ground, and happy indeed.

Verſ. 6 Which made Heaven and Earth, &c.] And therefore can help doubtleſs.

Which keepeth truth for ever] And therefore will: ſith hee will not ſuffer his faithfulneſs to fail, nor alter the thing that is gone out of his mouth, Pſal 89. And this for ever is oppoſed to that mortality and mutability of earthly Princes, Verſ. 4.

Verſ. 7 Which executeth Judgement] Vindicat violatos. This ſhould draw cuſtome and company about him; as all that were in diſtreſs fled to David, and hee became their Captain.

Which giveth food to the hungry] As hee did to Eliah by the Ravens; to Hunniades by his Shepheard, with whom hee ſupt on courſe fare, and found it ſweet; to the Town of Rochel by a ſhole of fiſh extraordinarily caſt up into it by the tide, when they were ſtraitly beſiedged and diſtreſſed.

The Lord looſeth the priſoners] As hee did Peter, Act. 12. and ſtill hee knoweth how to deliver his, ſaith the ſame Peter, who could ſpeak it by good experience, 2 Pet. 2. 9.

Verſ. 8 The Lord openeth the eyes] Both of body and mind, as in the Goſpell. As for thoſe miracles which Tacitus and Suetonius attribute to Veſpaſian (as that he made a blind man ſee with ſpittle, healed another that was lame, and another that had a dry'e hand, by treading upon it) they are the miracles of Chriſt, which thoſe prophane Authors would caſt upon their Emperour. Tacitus writeth that the blind man ſaid to Veſpaſian, that the god Serapis ſent him to him. Now the Paynims did think that the Chriſtians did worſhip Serapis, as appeareth by the Epiſtle of Adrian the Emperour to Severianus the Conſul, that in the Town of Alexandria, they that worſhipped Serapis were Chriſtians, &c.

The Lord raiſeth, &c.] As hee did that Daughter of Abrahams in the Goſpel, whom Satan had bound and bowed down twelve years, Luk. 13. 16. and as hee doth ſtill, Iſa. 61. 1.

The Lord loveth the Righteous] And this is more than all the reſt. God diſpenſeth outward bleſſings, but not alwayes in love.

Verſ. 9 The Lord preſerveth] Theſe all are his clients, becauſe neglected by the World, as yeelding no profit.

But turneth upſide down] As one doth a diſh that is waſhed, and wiped, 2 King. 21. 13.

Verſ. 10 The Lord ſhall reign for ever] Non ſibi, ſed in ſalutem noſtram, for our ſakes hee reigneth, that hee may execute Judgement, give food, looſe priſoners, open eyes, &c.

Supplices idem, timidoſq; terrâ
Erigit vultus, & bonore donat.

Therefore truſt in him, and him alone, and that way praiſe him.

PSAL. CXLVII.

VERſ. 1 It is good to ſing Praiſes] For 1 Hereby wee glorifie God, Pſal. 50. 23. and ſo do him right, for hee is the proper object of praiſe, worthy only to bee praised, Psal. 18. 3. 2. Hereby wee do good to our selves, secure former favours, which else wee forfeit, and procure further blessings, which else wee forestall. Hereby also wee make things good in themselves, to become good to us.

For it is pleasant] A very foretaste of eternall life; hence so many of Davids Psalms are eucharisticall.

And praise is comely] No fairer sight than to see Gods Altar covered with the calves of our lips, and our selves in our Priestly robes, giving thanks to his name, Heb. 13. 15. professing our no-deserts, and whole-dependence upon him. As on the contrary, an unthankfull man is an ugly ill-favoured Spectacle.

Vers. 2 The Lord doth build up Jerusalem] Hee is the only Architect of his Church. Hee layeth the foundation of it in election (saith a good Expositour) and buildeth it progressively by faith and sanctification; and finisheth his work of grace, and his peoples happiness, in glorification.

Hee gathereth together the out-casts of Israel] Hee will surely bring home his banished; yea, because they called thee an out-cast, saying, This is Zion, whom no man seeketh after, therefore I will restore health unto thee, &c. Jer. 30. 17. Qui nil sperare potest, desperet nibil.

Vers. 3 Hee healeth the broken in heart] Pouring the oil of his grace into none but those broken vessels.

And bindeth up their wounds] As a good Shepheard, Zech. 34. 4. that good Samaritan, Luk. 10. 34. and as a good Surgion dealeth by his patient. But let no man ever think that God will lap up his sores before they bee searcht, or search his bones before they bee set.

1322. Alfted Encyclop.

Vers. 4 Hee telleth the number of the stars] Which to man is impossible, as Aristotle maintaineth against those Astronomers, that tell us they are a thousand and some hundreds. But Abraham was a great Astronomer; yet hee could never do it, Gen. 15. 5. and the wiser sort of Astrologers have rightly distinguished the stars into numerable and innumerable, as to men.

Magic. Phys. lib. 2. cap. 5.

Hee calleth them all by their names] As knowing exactly their nature, and authoritatively commanding every of them to do his pleasure. How much more can God call together his out-casts, and cause them to return; especially since hee calleth those things that are not as if they were, Rom. 4?

Vers. 5 His understanding is infinite] Heb. Of his understanding there is no number; for hee knows not only the kinds and sorts of things, but even the particulars, though they exceed all number. Sic spectat universos quasi singulos; sic singulos, quasi solos. That Philosopher did not say nothing, who being in danger of Shipwrack in a light starry night, said, Surely I shall not perish; there are so many eyes of providence over mee.

Vers. 6 The Lord lifteth up the meek] This truth was well known to the very Heathens, who have said the same thing; as Herodotus in Polymnia, Euripides in Hera, and Esop being asked by Chilo (one of the seven wise men of Greece) what God was doing? answered, Hee is humbling the haughty, and exalting the lowly.

τὰ μὲν ὑψ. λὰ πατεινῶ τασλε ταπε νὰ ὑψῶν.

Vers. 7 Sing unto the Lord] Heb. Answer, that is, sing by turnes, as Hos. 2. 15. Deut. 31. 21. Or, answer Gods goodness by thankfullness and obedience.

Vers. 8 Who covereth the Heaven with clouds] as 1 King. 18. 45. and still, as there is need. It is not by nature, or hap-hazard, as men are apt to dream, and are therefore so often told this truth, and admonished, that the second causes do but serve the divine providence, in these common occurrents.

Who prepareth rain for the earth] Rain (which is nothing else but the fluss of a moist cloud, out of the middle Region of the air) as it commeth by a decree of God, Job 28. 26. so it is wholly at his dispose when and where it shall fall even to a drop. Amos 4. 7.

Vers. 8 Hee giveth to the beast his food] See Job 39. 3. Psal. 104. 27, 28. with the Notes.

And to the young Ravens which cry] By sending flyes into their mouths as they cry, say the Rabbines: or by a certain moist air, as Eustathius: or by small worms put into their mouths, magno providentiæ symbolo, though they bee such contemptible creatures, and very carnivorous, by reason of the vehemency of naturall heat in them, so that a little will not satisfie them, yet God feedeth them. See more on

Vers.

Vers. 10 He delighteth not in the strength of the horse] Almarch in Hebrew, saith the skilled, vel sub. equorum, God careth not for horses, or any such helps as wherein carnal people confide, as if they had no need of God. Origen observeth that in the conquest of Canaan, the enemies had horses and chariots, but Israel had none. And it is expresly cautioned that the King of Israel shall not multiply horses to himself, nor cause the people to return to Egypt, to the end he should multiply horses, Deut. 17. 16. least they should occasion him, or his people to trade with that Idolatrous people 1 King. 10. 28. 29. or to trust in the number and strength of that warlike creature, an horse, Prov. 21. 31.

Nec turbidi gaudet pedibus certamine cursus.

Nec delectatur in tibiis viri] How swift soever, as Achilles, roe-like Asahel, as light of foot as a wilde Roe, 2 Sam. 2. 18. None sooner perish in the waters, nor oftner, than those that are most skilfull in swimming and diving; because they do too much trust to their skills (so is here) for there is no out-running of divine vengeance. Nemo sibi fortior in pectore qui noverit deum. Nemesis in tergo; your sin will finde you out. Here the race is not to the swift, nor the battel to the strong, Eccles. 9. 11.

Vers. 11 The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear him] That put themselves into the hands of Justice, in hope of mercy. These are his Hephzibahs, his darlings in whom hee taketh singular delight and complacency.

Memento, habere quia bonum,
Et esse terribili datum est.

Vers. 12 Praise the Lord O Jerusalem] Whatever the World doth, let not the Church defraud God of his due praises: though thou Israel play the harlot, yet let not Judah offend, Hos. 4. 15. Gods blessings go round about graceless and ungratefull people, and they are no more moved than the earth that hath the circumference carried about it, and it self standeth still: But the Saints must bee of another alloy, Col. 3. 15. and there is good reason for it.

Vers. 13 For hee hath strengthened the bars, &c.] So that the gates of Hell shall not prevail against them. God hath promised to break in peeces those gates of brass, and cut in sunder those bars of Iron (as Samson did the gates of Gaza) Isa. 45. 2. to perfect, stablish, strengthen and settle his Saints, 1 Pet. 5. 10. to bee a wall of fire, round about them, &c.

Hee hath blessed thy Children within thee] Making them to bee many, Isa. 54. 1. and all taught of God, vers. 13. children that will not lye, Isa. 63. 8.

Vers. 14 Who maketh peace in thy borders] Peace, Isa. 26. 3. peace of Country and of conscience.

And filleth thee with the finest of the Wheat] Heb. With the fat of wheat called fat of kidneyes of Wheat, Deut. 32. 14. See Psal. 81. 16. Judea was once called and counted Salmon for its rank, not so much for the nature of the Country, as for the blessing of God thereupon, for now it is nothing so fruitfull. But the Saints have still the bread of Angels, a feast of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined, Isa. 25. 6.

Vers. 15 Hee sendeth forth his Commandement, &c.] Hee speaketh the word, and it is done immediately: hee can make a nation to conceive and bring forth all at once, Isa. 66. 7, 8. Ahasuerus had his posts to carry abroad his edict: God needeth none such: all creatures are at his beck and check.

Vers. 16 Hee giveth Snow like Wool] For whiteness, lightness, plenty, softness, warmth: for Snow, though it bee very cold, yet by keeping in the vapours and exhalations of the earth, it causeth an inward warmth to it, and so maketh it very fruitfull, say Philologers. In which respects the Rabbines say that one day of Snow doth more good, than five of Rain.

Nix fecundat humum, humor nocet, ignis adurit.

Hee scattereth the hoare frost like ashes] When blown about by the winds. It beateth also and dryeth (as ashes) the cold and moist earth, nippeth the buds of trees, &c. Ut nix prohibet ne terra pariat, sic frigus Dominum.

Vers. 17 Hee casteth out his Ice like morsels] Or, Shivers of bread. Irina many sayings of One from this text. The fools breath, the Rain is drink, the Snow is wood, the Frost a Fire to the earth, causing it speedily to glow with heat, reaching into the midst for Gods poor.

extreme especially; as in Russia, Engeland, &c.

Vers. 18. He sendeth out his word and melteth them. See vers. 8. Of the force of Gods word of command are given all the former instances. Here can as easily melt the hardest heart, by his word, made effectual to such a purpose by his holy spirit. If that wind do but blow, the waters of penitent tears will soon flow, as in Josiah, 2 Chron. 34. 27. See Zech. 12. 10.

Vers. 19 He sheweth his word unto Jacob.] The Jews were Gods library-keepers; and unto them (as a speciall favour) were committed those lively and living oracles, Rom. 3. 2. there is a chiefly set upon it; like as Luke 12. 48. to know the Masters will is the great talent of all other; there is a (much) in that.

His Statutes and his Judgements unto Israel] Even right Judgements, true lawes, good Statutes and Commandements, Neh. 9. 13. See Rom. 9. 4. 5. Prosper notes it was that Judæi were so called, because they received jus Dei, the Law of God.

Vers. 20 He hath not dealt so with any Nation.] He had not then, but now, blessed be God hee hath dealt so with many Nations, in these last happy days of Reformation, especially, wherein the knowledge of Gods holy Word covereth the earth, as the waters cover the Sea, and of England, it may bee said as once of the Rhodes, Semper in Sole, sive est Rhodos, that it hath the Sun ever shining upon it. This wee should prize as a precious treasure, and praise the Lord for it, corde, ore, opere.

And as for his Judgements; they have not known them.] And therefore lye in deadly darkness; wherein though they wander wofully, yet not so wide as to miss of hell.

PSAL. CXLVIII.

Vers. 1 Praise the Lord.] And again Praise yee the Lord, and so often in this and the rest of the Halelujaticall Psalmes. In praising God the Saints are unlaborious, and would bee infinite (as his perfections are infinite) so that they make a circle (as one phraseth it) the beginning middle and end whereof is Halelujah. V.

From the Heavens; praise him in the heights] Or high places. As God in framing the World began above, and wrought downward: So doth the Psalmist in this his exhortation to all creatures, to praise the Lord.

Vers. 2 Praise him all his Angells] Whose proper office it is to adore and praise God, Job 38. 7. Isa. 6. 3. Heb. 1. 6. which also they do constantly and compleatly, as those that both perfectly know him, and love him. Jacob saw them 1. Ascending, to contemplate and praise the Lord, and minister to him, Luk. 2. 13. Dan. 7. 10. Mat. 18. 10. Psal. 103. 20. 2. Descending, to execute Gods will upon men, for mercy to some, and for judgement to others: which renderth much to his praise. And David, by calling upon these heavenly courtiers, provoketh and pricketh on himself to praise God.

Praise yee him all his Hosts.] i. e. His Creatures (those above especially which are as his cavalry) called his Hosts for their 1. Number. 2 Order. 3 Obedience.

Vers. 3 Praise yee him Sun and Moon.] These do after a sort, declare the glory of God, Psal. 19. 1. 2. Habak. 3. 3. not with mind and affection, as if they were understanding creatures (as Plato held) but by their light influences admirable motions and obedience, whereby quasi mutis vocibus, by a dumb kind of eloquence, saith Nazianzen, they give praise to God, and bid check to us, for our dulness and disorders. In Epimenid.

Praise him all yee Stars of light.] A light then they have of their own (besides what they borrow of the Sun) which they withhold at Gods appointment, Isa. 13. 10. and influences they have which cannot be restrained or resisted, Job 38. 31. 32.

Vers. 4 Praise him yee Heavens of Heavens.] Whereby he meaneth not the lowest Heavens, the air whereon wee breath, and wherein birds flye, clouds swim, &c. as some would have it; but the highest Heaven, called by St. Paul the third Heaven, the habitation of the crowned Saints and glorious Angels, called by Philosophers Cælum Empyreum, and here by the Psalmist the Heaven of Heavens, as King of Kings, Song of Songs, &c. by an excellency. See Deut. 10. 14. Above the air, and that Supernus fu pensus aqui rum fornic doth he mention that lye above the Heavens.] i. e. Above the air, and that distinguish between the Air and the Sky, as the Greek Word doth between Sky, and the highest Heavens.

Vers. 5 For he commanded, and they were created.] His fiat, ego vocat all this this is celebrated by that heavenly quire, Rev. 4. 11.

Vers. 6 He hath also eſtabliſhed them for ever] viz. The courſe and appointed motions of the Heavens which hee hath ſetled by a Covenant, and hath not falſified with them, Jer. 33. 25. much leſs will hee with his faithfull people.

Vers. 7 Praiſe the Lord from the earth] The Pſalmiſt proceedeth to ſublunar for God among the inferiour creatures; beginning with the loweſt in the waters beneath, as the Dragons or great whales; and then comming to Rain and Snow, &c. which are made out of the waters above.

Yee Dragons and all deeps] Of Sea-Dragons. See Ælian. lib. 4. Animal. cap. 12. they live partly in the Sea, and partly on the land, as do Crocodiles. Theſe alſo yeeld matter of Gods praiſe.

Vers. 8 Fire and Hail, Snow and Vapour] This latter is the matter of thoſe former meteors, which hee purpoſely mingleth with thoſe forementioned miracles of land and waters, the more to ſet forth the power of God, becauſe theſe ſeem to have no ſetledneſs of ſubſiſtence, and yet in them hee is made viſible.

Stormy winds fulfilling his word] The winds blow not at randome, but by a divine decree: and God hath ordered that whether North or South blow, they ſhall blow good to his people, Cant. 4. 16. Hee ſaith to all his Creatures, as David did to his Captains concerning Abſolom, Handle them gently for my ſake.

Vers. 9 Mountains and all hills] Theſe praiſe God by their form, hugeneſs, fruits, proſpects, &c.

Fruitfull trees] Theſe, by the variety of their natures and fruits, do notably ſet forth the wiſdome, power, and goodneſs of the Almighty, whilſt they ſpend themſelves, and the principall part of their ſap and moiſture, in bringing forth ſome pleaſant berry, or the like, for the uſe of man, who is thereby ingaged to bleſs God.

Vers. 10. Beaſts] i. e. Wild-beaſts, that are fulleſt of life, and there-hence have their name in the Hebrew tongue.

And all Cattel] Domeſtick and tame beaſts, even to the Elephant, which is ſaid to turn up the firſt ſprig towards Heaven, in token of thankfulneſs, by a naturall inſtinct, when hee comes to feed

Creeping things] Whether in earth, or Sea; all theſe are ſummoned in by the Pſalmiſt, to pay their tribute of praiſe, and to do their homage to the moſt high.

Vers. 11 Kings of the earth] Theſe are doubly-bound to God (as Queen Elizabeth wrot to the French King) firſt, as they are men; and next as they are ſo great men: But this is little conſidered. Tamerlan having overcome Bajazet, asked him whether ever hee had given God thanks for making him ſo great an Emperour? who confeſſed ingenuouſly hee never thought of it. Leuclau. Annal. Turc.

Princes and all Judges of the earth] Theſe are thrice called upon, becauſe hardly perſwaded to pay God his rent, as holding themſelves too high to do him homage.

Vers. 12 Both young men and maids] Souls have no ſexes: let the choice youths, and the compt laſſes quæ tot à componunt in ſeſe ornandâ, ſaith Kimchi, who are much taken up in tricking and trimming themſelves, leave that folly, and give glory to God.

Vers. 13 Let them praiſe the Name of the Lord] Joyn in this harmony of Hallelujah.

His glory is above] Being deeper than Earth, higher than Heaven.

Vers. 14 Hee alſo exalteth the horn] i. e. Hee graceth them ſingularly.

A people near unto him] And in that reſpect happy above all people on the earth, Deut. 4. 7. & 33. 29. becauſe in Covenant with him, and near-allied to him, as the word here importeth.

PSAL. CXLIX.

Vers. 1 Praiſe yee the Lord] See Pſal. 148. 1.

Sing unto the Lord a new ſong] A new-Teſtament-ſong, of a new argument, and for new benefits by the comming of Chriſt, whereof this Pſalm is propheticall. Old things are paſt, all things are become new, 2 Cor. 5. 16. new Commandements, new promiſes, new ſacraments, new grace, new praiſes, new privileges.

In the Congregation of Saints] The Church militant, whoſe joynt praiſes muſt come come before him as the sound of many waters: this is Heaven upon Earth.

Vers. 2 Let Israel rejoyce in him that made him] And new made him, Ephes. 2. 10. and thereby highly advanced him, as 1 Sam. 12. 6. The Hebrew hath it, Fecit eum, to shew the Trinity of persons concurring in the work both of creation and regeneration. So Gen. 1. 26. Job 35. 10. Isa. 54. 5. Eccles. 12. 1. See Psal. 100. 3.

Be joyfull in their King] i. e. In Christ, whose Kingdome is such as should swallow up all discontents, and make us everlastingly merry, Matt. 4. 9. If Satan could say to his friends, Polybius, Furnius est salvo Cæsare, te fortunæ tuæ queri, qui tam incolumis, tui sibi sunt tui, &c. It is not fit for thee to complain of thine hard fortune, so long as Cæsar is alive, and well: how much more may it bee said so to Christians, so long as Christ is alive, and reigneth?

Vers. 3 Let them praise his name in the dannce] Or, with the pipe, tibiis & tympanis & omni musices organica genere, by all lawfull means possible.

Vers. 4 For the Lord taketh pleasure in his people] Psal. 35. 27. when they are under the Cross especially, and thereby meekened. This, the very Heathen saw, and could say, Spectat Deus magnos viros, cum calamitate aliqua colluctantes. Ecce spectaculum, ad quod respicias operi suo intentus Deus, saith Seneca of Cato, and other gallant Roman spirits. How much more may wee say the like of Gods looking with singular delight on Abraham (Jehova Jireh, the Lord seeth, Gen. 22. 14.) Job, Stephen, Laurence, and other faithfull Martyrs, suffering courageously for his truth, and sealing it with their blood? Lib. de provid. 2.

He will beautifie (or glorifie) the meek with salvation] i. e. Not only deliver them, but dignifie them in the eyes of all, Psal. 91. 15. I will deliver him, and glorifie him. Bradford and such, wee shall look upon, likely (saith a grave Author) with thoughts of extraordinary love and sweetness in the next World through all eternity: as Bonner and such, with execrable and everlasting detestation. Mr. Bolton.

Vers. 5 Let the Saints bee joyfull in glory] i. e. In their glorious estate by Christ, notwithstanding their present poverty. Let the Brother of low degree rejoyce (or glory) in that he is exalted, Jam. 1. 9.

Let them sing aloud upon their beds] How hard soever: as Philpot and his fellow-sufferers did, when they rousted in the straw. Jacob had never more sweet intercourse with God, than when his head lay upon the hard stone, at Bethel. Some by beds here understand the Temples and Schools: Confer Isa. 57. Others render it, Gaudium de substratis suis, They shall sing aloud for their beds, that is, for their sweet and solid tranquillity. Act. & Mon.

Vers. 6 Let the high praises (or the exaltations) of God bee in their mouth] Heb. in their throat. So Isa. 58. 1. cry aloud; Heb. cry in the throat, lift up thy note.

— Sic clamet, ut Stentora vincat.

And a two-edged sword in their hand] Such an invincible power shall the Saints have, as whereby they shall subdue all their enemies corporall and spirituall. See Heb. 4. 12. Rev. 1. 16. & 19. 15. there was more than metall and form in Gelmini sword, delivered by the Priest to David, whose arm was not so much strengthened by it as his faith: so is every good Christians by that two-edged sword of the Spirit: he may well write upon it as that renowned Talbot in the reign of Henry the fifth did upon his sword, in blunt and boisterous language, Sum Talbot (this was ingraven upon the one side of the blade, and upon the other) pro victoria nunquam mortis. See 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. Speed.

Vers. 7 To execute vengeance upon the Heathen] viz. Upon a just calling, and not for private revenge, yea that souldier can never answer it to God, that strikes not more as a Justicer than as an enemy, bee his cause never so good. But that's the most noble vengeance that is executed upon mens lusts, whilst they cut off the sword of the Spirit and the throats of them, and let out their life-blood. That's a good sense that some give of these words, viz. that the Saints when they go forth to battel, should go with holy songs in their mouths, as well as with swords in their hands. See Judg. 7. 19, 20, &c. 2 Chron. 20. 21, &c. the valley in Tekoa, &c. got on this manner heroin Bohemia, under the conduct of Germanus, against a mighty army of Papists, Pilsenians and Saxons. This was the course and custome of the [illegible] against their Popish persecutors and [illegible] that I mention not those gallant Spirits [illegible] reboared, Now for the fruit of prayer, together with the sweet Psalms sung by that religious army in their severall stations, whereof I have been an ear-witnesse. Usher. Price. Clerk. Pomeroy.

Vers. 8 To bind their Kings with chains] Restraining their vices, and bringing them to the obedience of faith. See Isa. 45. 14. This is doubtless a delicate allusion, or rather freedome; this is not as chains and fetters, but as girdles and garters to gird up their loins, and to expedite their course the better.

Vers. 9 To execute upon them the judgement written] The Jews thought they might kill any Idolaters, and now to kill a Christian is counted by them a meritorious work. The wicked are apt to exceed their commission, Zech. 1. 15. So may the Saints, Jehu was too cruel to the Aamalekites, 2 Sam. 1. 1. Theodosius to the Thessalonians. Here therefore they are limited to the word written.

This honour have all his Saints] As having obtained like precious faith, 2 Pet. 1. 1.

PSAL. CL.

VErs. 1 Praise ye the Lord] See Psal. 148. 1.

Praise God in his Sanctuary] It is probable, saith Beza, that hic Psalmus mirificè ordoris plenus, by this Psalm which is so full of wonderfull ardour, the holy singers of the Sanctuary did mutually stir up one another to praise the Lord. It hath been noted before, that here wee have in six verses twelve Hallelujahs. Some by Sanctuary understand Heaven; Others, the hearts of beleevers.

Praise him in the firmament of his power] Or, for the firmament wherein appeareth his power, Psal. 19. 1. Or for the Church, and the firmament of faith.

Vers. 2 Praise him for his mighty acts] Those wonderfull effects of his creative, and providentiall omnipotencie.

Praise him according to his excellent greatnesse] Or, Greatnesse of greatnesse, which yet can never be done, but must be indeavoured. Propound the highest pitch and best terms.

Vers. 3 Praise him with the sound of the trumpet] With all your might and members, with utmost joy and jollity in the Lord. Lord I am a musicall instrument, saith Nazianzen, for thee to touch, that I may sound forth thy glory and praises.

Vers. 4 Praise him with the Timbrel and dance] Or, Pipe. But these are mean things (as it is said in another case, 1 Chron. 15. 22.) and now out of date. When the use of these musicall instruments crept into the Christian Churches (which was not till alate neither) great abuses crept in with it: the preaching of the word was changed into songs & Anthems, little understood by those that sang them, and that grave and simple Psalmody or singing of Psalms (so much used of old, and by this blessed Reformation restored to the Church) was justled out, or rather ranted in turpissimum lasciviam (as one justly complaineth) such as Nebuchadnezzar made before his golden image, Dan. 3. When Aristotle was asked what he thought of musick, he answered, Neque ita severum esse, ut sapientiae non conveniat, neque ita dulce, ut non decorum sit liberis hominibus, thinking it an honourable Art to men, that was no more delightfull to God. Plato told the Musicians who pressed into his company, that Philosophers could do well enough without them. There is (no doubt) a lawfull use of musick, and great power in it to move mens minds one way or another, 2 King. 3. 15. 1 Sam. 16. 23. But in Gods publick worship it is dangerous to do any thing without his speciall warrant, though we intend never so well in so doing, as we see in Uzza. Temple-musick was part of the Jewish pedagogie of the levitical worship, and therefore cannot but be taken away now by Christ.

Vers. 5 Praise him upon the loud Cymbals] These were, saith Cicero, instrumenta aeris, cum sonitu, in usum Deorum facta ut serpens: bells, some render it. The Apostle speaketh of a sounding Cymbal, 1 Cor. 13. 1. Divine complaineth, that God cannot please some hearers, unless hee speak sounding and ringing words.

Vers. 6 Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord] Or, Let every breath praise the Lord. Tota Dei mercedula, saith a Father: We have all as much reason to praise God, as we have need (to draw breath, our breath should be like the smoak of the Tabernacle, as the [illegible]
